<sup>10</sup>His father also went down to the woman, and Samson gave a feast there, since it was customary for the young men to do this. <sup>11</sup>Out of their fear of him, they brought thirty men to be his companions. <sup>12</sup>Samson said to them, “Let me propose a riddle to you. If within the seven days of the feast you solve it for me, I will give you thirty linen tunics and thirty sets of garments. <sup>13</sup>But if you cannot answer it for me, you must give me thirty tunics and thirty sets of garments.” “Propose your riddle,” they responded, “and we will listen to it.” <sup>14</sup>So he said to them,

out of the strong came sweetness.”

For three days they were unable to answer the riddle, <sup>15</sup>and on the fourth day they said to Samson's wife,<sup>o</sup> "Trick your husband into solving the riddle for us, or we will burn you and your family.<sup>p</sup> Did you invite us here to reduce us to poverty?" <sup>16*</sup> <sup>q</sup> So Samson's wife wept at his side and said, "You just hate me! You do not love me! You proposed a riddle to my people, but did not tell me the answer." He said to her, "If I did not tell even my father or my mother, must I tell you?" <sup>17</sup>But she wept beside him during the seven days the feast lasted, and on the seventh day, he told her the answer, because she pressed him, and she explained the riddle to her people.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>18</sup>On the seventh day, before the sun set, the men of the city said to him,

"What is sweeter than honey, what is stronger than a lion?"

He replied to them,

"If you had not plowed with my heifer, you would not have solved my riddle."

<sup>19s</sup> The spirit of the LORD rushed upon him, and he went down to Ashkelon, where he killed thirty of their men and stripped them; he gave their garments to those who had answered the riddle. Then he went off to his own family in anger, <sup>20</sup>and Samson's wife was married to the companion who had been his best man.<sup>t</sup>

Samson Defeats the Philistines. <sup>1</sup>After some time, in the season of the wheat harvest, Samson visited his wife, bringing a young goat. But when he said, “Let me go into my wife’s room,” her father would not let him go in. <sup>2</sup>He said, “I thought you hated her, so I gave her to your best man. Her younger sister is better; you may have her instead.” <sup>3</sup>Samson said to him, “This time I am guiltless if I harm the Philistines.” <sup>4</sup>So Samson went and caught three hundred jackals, and turning them tail to tail, he took some torches and tied one between each pair of tails. <sup>5</sup>He then kindled the torches and set the jackals loose in the standing grain of the Philistines, thus burning both the shocks and standing grain, the vineyards and olive groves.

<sup>6u</sup> When the Philistines asked, “Who has done this?” they were told, “Samson, the son-in-law of the Timnite, because his wife was taken and given to his best man.” So the Philistines went up and destroyed her and her family by fire. <sup>v</sup> <sup>7</sup>Samson said to them, “If this is how you act, I will not stop until I have taken revenge on you.” <sup>8</sup>And he struck them hip and thigh—a great slaughter. Then he went down and stayed in a cleft of the crag of Etam.

<sup>9</sup>The Philistines went up and encamped in Judah, deploying themselves against Lehi. <sup>w</sup> <sup>10</sup>When the men of Judah asked, “Why have you come up against us?” they answered, “To take Samson prisoner; to do to him as he has done to us.” <sup>11</sup>Three thousand men of Judah went down to the cleft of the crag of Etam and said to Samson, “Do you not know that the Philistines are our rulers? Why, then, have you done this to us?” He answered them, “As they have done to me, so have I done to them.” <sup>12</sup>They said to him, “We have come down to bind you and deliver you to the Philistines.” Samson said to them, “Swear to me that you will not attack me yourselves.” <sup>13</sup> “No,” they replied, “we will only bind you and hand you over to them. We will certainly not kill you.” So they bound him with two new ropes and brought him up from the crag. <sup>14</sup>When he reached Lehi, and the Philistines came shouting to meet him, <sup>x</sup> the spirit of the LORD rushed upon him: the ropes around his arms became like flax that is consumed by fire, and his bonds melted away from his hands. <sup>15</sup>Coming upon the fresh jawbone of an ass, he reached out, grasped it, and with it killed a thousand men.<sup>y 16</sup> Then Samson said,

Five Cities of the Philistines

“With the jawbone of an ass
I have piled them in a heap;
With the jawbone of an ass
I have slain a thousand men.”

<sup>17</sup>As he finished speaking he threw the jawbone from him; and so that place was named Ramath-lehi.* <sup>18</sup>Being very thirsty, he cried to the LORD and said, “You have put this great victory into the hand of your servant. Must I now die of thirst and fall into the hands of the uncircumcised?” <sup>19</sup>Then God split the cavity in Lehi, and water issued from it, and Samson drank till his spirit returned and he revived. Hence it is called En-hakkore* in Lehi to this day.

<sup>2</sup>The people of Gaza were told, “Samson has come here,” and they surrounded him with an ambush at the city gate all night long. And all the night they waited, saying, “At morning light we will kill him.” <sup>3</sup>Samson lay there until midnight. Then he rose at midnight, seized the doors of the city gate and the two gateposts, and tore them loose, bar and all. He hoisted them on his shoulders and carried them to the top of the ridge opposite Hebron.

Samson and Delilah. <sup>4</sup>After that he fell in love with a woman in the Wadi Sorek whose name was Delilah. <sup>5a</sup> The lords of the Philistines came up to her and said, “Trick him and find out where he gets his great strength, and how we may overcome and bind him so as to make him helpless. Then for our part, we will each give you eleven hundred pieces of silver.”

<sup>6</sup>So Delilah said to Samson, “Tell me where you get your great strength and how you may be bound so as to be made helpless.” <sup>7</sup> “If they bind me with seven fresh bowstrings that have not dried,” Samson answered her, “I shall grow weaker and be like anyone else.” <sup>8</sup>So the lords of the Philistines brought her seven fresh bowstrings that had not dried, and she bound him with them. <sup>9</sup>She had men lying in wait in the room, and she said to him, “The Philistines are upon you, Samson!” But he snapped the bowstrings as a thread of tow is snapped by a whiff of flame; and his strength remained unexplained.

<sup>10</sup>Delilah said to Samson, “You have mocked me and told me lies. Now tell me how you may be bound.” <sup>11</sup> “If they bind me tight with new ropes, with which no work has been done,” he answered her, “I shall grow weaker and be like anyone else.” <sup>12</sup>So Delilah took new ropes and bound him with them. Then she said to him, “The Philistines are upon you, Samson!” For there were men lying in wait in the room. But he snapped the ropes off his arms like thread.

<sup>13</sup>Delilah said to Samson again, “Up to now you have mocked me and told me lies. Tell me how you may be bound.” He said to her, “If you weave the seven locks of my hair into the web and fasten them with the pin, I shall grow weaker and be like anyone else.” <sup>14</sup>So when he went to bed, Delilah took the seven locks of his hair and wove them into the web, and fastened them with the pin. Then she said, “The Philistines are upon you, Samson!” Awakening from his sleep, he pulled out both the loom and the web.

<sup>15b</sup> Then she said to him, “How can you say ‘I love you’ when your heart is not mine? Three times already you have mocked me, and not told me where you get your great strength!” <sup>16c</sup> She pressed him continually and pestered him till he was deathly weary of it. <sup>17</sup>So he told her all that was in his heart and said, “No razor has touched my head, for I have been a nazirite for God from my mother’s womb.” <sup>d</sup> If I am shaved, my strength will leave me, and I shall grow weaker and be like anyone else.” <sup>18</sup>When Delilah realized that he had told her all that was in his heart, she summoned the lords of the Philistines, saying, “Come up this time, for he has told me all that is in his heart.” So the lords of the Philistines came to her and brought the money with them. <sup>e</sup> <sup>19</sup>She put him to sleep on her lap, and called for a man who shaved off the seven locks of his hair. He immediately became helpless, for his strength had left him. * <sup>20</sup>When she said “The Philistines are upon you, Samson!” he woke from his sleep and thought, “I will go out as I have done time and again and shake myself free.” He did not realize that the LORD had left him. <sup>21</sup>But the Philistines seized him and gouged out his eyes. Then they brought him down to Gaza and bound him with bronze fetters, and he was put to grinding grain in the prison. <sup>22</sup>But the hair of his head began to grow as soon as it was shaved.

The Death of Samson. <sup>23f</sup> The lords of the Philistines assembled to offer a great sacrifice to their god Dagon * and to celebrate. They said, “Our god has delivered Samson our enemy into our power.” <sup>24</sup>When the people saw him, they praised their god. For they said,

“Our god has delivered into our power our enemy, the ravager of our land,
the one who has multiplied our slain.”

<sup>25</sup>When their spirits were high, they said, “Call Samson that he may amuse us.” So they called Samson from the prison, and he provided amusement for them. They made him stand between the columns, <sup>26</sup>and Samson said to the attendant who was holding his hand, “Put me where I may touch the columns that support the temple, so that I may lean against them.” <sup>27</sup>The temple was full of men and women: all the lords of the Philistines were there, and from the roof about three thousand men and women looked on as Samson provided amusement. <sup>28</sup>Samson cried out to the LORD and said, “Lord God, remember me! Strengthen me only this once that I may avenge myself on the Philistines at one blow for my two eyes.” <sup>29</sup>Samson grasped the two middle columns on which the temple rested and braced himself against them, one at his right, the other at his left. <sup>30</sup>Then saying, “Let me die with the Philistines!” Samson pushed hard, and the temple fell upon the lords and all the people who were in it. Those he killed by his dying were more than those he had killed during his lifetime.

Micah and the Levite. <sup>1</sup>There was a man from the mountain region of Ephraim whose name was Micah. <sup>2*</sup> He said to his mother, “The eleven hundred pieces of silver that were taken from you, about which you pronounced a curse and even said it in my hearing—I have that silver. I took it. So now I will restore it to you.” Then his mother said, “May my son be blessed by the LORD!” <sup>3</sup>When he restored the eleven hundred pieces of silver to his mother, she said, “I consecrate the silver to the LORD from my own hand on behalf of my son to make an idol overlaid with silver.”<sup>*h</sup> <sup>4</sup>So when he restored the silver to his mother, she took two hundred pieces and gave them to the silversmith, who made of them an idol overlaid with silver. So it remained in the house of Micah. <sup>5</sup>The man Micah had a shrine, and he made an ephod and teraphim,<sup>* i</sup> and installed one of his sons, who became his priest.<sup>j 6 *</sup> In those days there was no king in Israel; everyone did what was right in their own eyes.<sup>k</sup>

Migration of the Danites. <sup>1</sup>In those days there was no king in Israel.<sup>n</sup> In those days the tribe of the Danites were in search of a heritage to dwell in, for up to that time no heritage had been allotted* to them among the tribes of Israel.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>2</sup>So the Danites sent from their clans five powerful men of Zorah and Eshtaol, to reconnoiter the land and scout it. “Go, scout the land,” they were told. They went into the mountain region of Ephraim, and they spent the night there. <sup>3</sup>While they were near the house of Micah,<sup>p</sup> they recognized the voice* of the young Levite,<sup>q</sup> so they turned aside. They asked him, “Who brought you here? What are you doing here? What is your interest here?” <sup>4</sup>“This is what Micah has done for me,” he replied to them. “He has hired me and I have become his priest.”<sup>r</sup> <sup>5</sup>They said to him, “Consult God, that we may know whether the journey we are making will lead to success.”<sup>s</sup> <sup>6</sup>The priest said to them, “Go in peace! The journey you are making is under the eye of the LORD.”

<sup>7</sup>So the five men went on and came to Laish. They saw the people there living securely after the manner of the Sidonians, quiet and trusting, with no lack of any natural resource. They were distant from the Sidonians and had no dealings with the Arameans.* <sup>8</sup>When the five returned to their kin in Zorah and Eshtaol, they were asked, “What do you have to report?” <sup>9</sup>They replied, “Come, let us attack them, for we have seen the land and it is very good. Are you going to hesitate? Do not be slow to go in and take possession of the land! <sup>10</sup>When you go you will come to a trusting people. The land stretches out in both directions, and God has indeed given it into your power—a place where no natural resource is lacking.”<sup>t</sup>

<sup>13</sup>From there they passed on into the mountain region of Ephraim and came to the house of Micah. <sup>14</sup>Then the five men who had gone to reconnoiter the land spoke up and said to their kindred, “Do you know that in these houses there are an ephod, teraphim, and an idol overlaid with silver?<sup>v</sup> Now decide what you must do!”<sup>15</sup> So turning in that direction, they went to the house of the young Levite at the home of Micah and greeted him.<sup>16</sup> The six hundred Danites stationed themselves at the entrance of the gate armed with weapons of war.<sup>17</sup> The five men who had gone to reconnoiter the land went up<sup>18</sup> and entered the house of Micah with the priest standing there. They took the idol, the ephod, the teraphim and the metal image. When the priest said to them, “What are you doing?”<sup>19</sup> they said to him, “Be still! Put your hand over your mouth! Come with us and be our father and priest.”<sup>w</sup> Is it better for you to be priest for the family of one man or to be priest for a tribe and a clan in Israel?”<sup>20</sup> The priest, agreeing, took the ephod, the teraphim, and the idol, and went along with the troops.<sup>21</sup> As they turned to depart, they placed their little ones, their livestock, and their goods at the head of the column.

<sup>22x</sup> When the Danites had gone some distance from the house of Micah, Micah and the men in the houses nearby mustered and overtook them.<sup>23</sup> They called to the Danites, who turned and said to Micah, “What do you want that you have called this muster?”<sup>24</sup> “You have taken my god, which I made for myself, and you have gone off with my priest as well,” he answered. “What is left for me? How, then, can you ask me, ‘What do you want?’ ”<sup>25</sup> The Danites said to him, “Do not let your voice be heard near us, or aggravated men will attack you, and you will have forfeited your life and the lives of your family!”<sup>26</sup> Then the Danites went on their way, and Micah, seeing that they were too strong for him, turned back and went home.

<sup>8</sup>On the fifth morning he rose early to depart, but the young woman's father said, "Fortify yourself!" He coaxed him, and he tarried until the afternoon, and the two of them ate. <sup>9</sup>Then when the husband was ready to go with his concubine and servant, the young woman's father said to him, "See, the day is wearing on toward evening. Stay for the night. See, the day is coming to an end. Spend the night here and enjoy yourself. Early tomorrow you can start your journey home." <sup>10</sup>The man, however, refused to stay another night; he and his concubine set out with a pair of saddled donkeys, and traveled until they came opposite Jebus, which is Jerusalem. <sup>11</sup>Since they were near Jebus with the day far gone, the servant said to his master, "Come, let us turn off to this city of the Jebusites and spend the night in it." <sup>12</sup>But his master said to him, "We will not turn off to a foreigner's city, <sup>d</sup> where there are no Israelites. We will go on to Gibeah. <sup>13</sup>Come," he said to his servant, "let us make for some other place and spend the night in either Gibeah or Ramah." <sup>e</sup> <sup>14</sup>So they continued on their way until the sun set on them when they were opposite Gibeah of Benjamin.

<sup>15*</sup> There they turned off to enter Gibeah for the night.<sup>f</sup> The man went in and sat down in the town square, but no one took them inside to spend the night. <sup>16</sup>In the evening, however, an old man came from his work in the field; he was from the mountain region of Ephraim, though he was living in Gibeah where the local people were Benjaminites. <sup>17g</sup> When he noticed the traveler in the town square, the old man asked, “Where are you going, and where have you come from?” <sup>18</sup>He said to him, “We are traveling from Bethlehem of Judah far up into the mountain region of Ephraim, where I am from. I have been to Bethlehem of Judah, and now I am going home; but no one has taken me into his house. <sup>19</sup>We have straw and fodder for our donkeys, and bread and wine for myself and for your maidservant and the young man who is with your servant; there is nothing else we need.” <sup>20</sup> “Rest assured,” the old man said to him, “I will provide for all your needs, but do not spend the night in the public square.” <sup>21</sup>So he led them to his house and mixed fodder for the donkeys. Then they washed their feet, and ate and drank.<sup>h</sup>

The Outrage at Gibeah. <sup>22*</sup> <sup>i</sup> While they were enjoying themselves, the men of the city, a bunch of scoundrels, surrounded the house and beat on the door. They said to the old man who was the owner of the house, “Bring out the man who has come into your house, so that we may get intimate with him.” <sup>23</sup>The man who was the owner of the house went out to them and said, “No, my brothers; do not be so wicked. This man has come into my house; do not commit this terrible crime. <sup>24</sup>Instead, let me bring out my virgin daughter and this man’s concubine. Humiliate them, or do whatever you want; but against him do not commit such a terrible crime.” <sup>25</sup>But the men would not listen to him. So the man seized his concubine and thrust her outside to them. They raped her and abused her all night until morning, and let her go as the sun was coming up. <sup>26</sup>At the approach of morning the woman came and collapsed at the entrance of the house in which her husband was, and lay there until morning. <sup>27</sup>When her husband rose in the morning and opened the door of the house to start out again on his journey, there was the woman, his concubine, collapsed at the entrance of the house with her hands on the threshold. <sup>28</sup> “Come, let us go,” he said to her, but there was no answer. So the man placed her on a donkey and started out again for home.

<sup>29*</sup> On reaching home, he got a knife and took hold of the body of his concubine. He cut her up limb by limb into twelve pieces and sent them throughout the territory of Israel.<sup>j</sup> <sup>30</sup>He instructed the men whom he sent, “Thus you shall say to all the men of Israel: ‘Has such a thing ever happened from the day the Israelites came up from the land of Egypt to this day?’ <sup>* k</sup> Take note of it; form a plan and give orders.’ ”

CHAPTER 20

Assembly of Israelites. <sup>1</sup>So all the Israelites came out as one, from Dan to Beer-sheba* <sup>l</sup> including the land of Gilead, and the assembly gathered to the LORD at Mizpah. <sup>2</sup>The leaders of all the people, all the staff-bearers of Israel,* presented themselves in the assembly of the people of God—four hundred thousand foot soldiers who carried swords. <sup>3</sup>Meanwhile, the Benjaminites heard that the Israelites had gone up to Mizpah. The Israelites asked, “How did this evil thing happen?” <sup>4</sup>and the Levite, the husband of the murdered woman, testified: “It was at Gibeah of Benjamin, which my concubine and I had entered for the night.”<sup>m 5n</sup> The lords of Gibeah rose up against me and surrounded me in the house at night. I was the one they intended to kill, but they abused my concubine and she died. <sup>6o</sup> So I took my concubine and cut her up and sent her through every part of the territory of Israel, because of the terrible thing they had done in Israel. <sup>7</sup>So now, all you Israelites, give your judgment and counsel in this matter.”<sup>p 8</sup> All the people rose as one to say, “None of us will leave for our tents or return to our homes. <sup>9</sup>Now as for Gibeah, this is what we will do: We will go up against it by lot, <sup>10</sup>taking from all the tribes of Israel ten men for every hundred, a hundred for every thousand, a thousand for every ten thousand, and procuring supplies for the soldiers who will go to exact from Gibeah of Benjamin the full measure of the terrible thing it committed in Israel.”

<sup>11</sup>So all the men of Israel gathered against the city, united as one. <sup>12</sup>The tribes of Israel sent men throughout the tribe of Benjamin to say, “What is this evil that has occurred among you? <sup>13</sup>Now give up the men, the scoundrels who are in Gibeah, that we may put them to death and thus purge the evil from Israel.” But the Benjaminites refused to listen to their kindred, the Israelites. <sup>14</sup>Instead, the Benjaminites assembled from their cities at Gibeah, to march out to battle with the Israelites. <sup>15</sup>On that day the Benjaminites mustered from their cities twenty-six thousand swordsmen, in addition to the inhabitants of Gibeah, who mustered seven hundred picked men <sup>16*</sup> who were left-handed, every one of them able to sling a stone at a hair without missing. <sup>17</sup>The men of Israel, without Benjamin, mustered four hundred thousand swordsmen, all of them warriors. <sup>18</sup>They went up to Bethel and consulted God. When the Israelites asked, “Who shall go up first for us to do battle with the Benjaminites?” the LORD said: Judah first.<sup>*q 19 *</sup> The Israelites rose in the morning and encamped against Gibeah.

War with Benjamin. <sup>20</sup>The men of Israel marched out to do battle with Benjamin and drew up in battle array against them at Gibeah. <sup>21</sup>The Benjaminites marched out of Gibeah that day and felled twenty-two thousand men of Israel. <sup>22 *</sup> But the army of the men of Israel took courage and again drew up for battle in the place where they had drawn up on the previous day. <sup>23</sup>Then the Israelites went up and wept before the LORD until evening. “Shall I again engage my brother Benjamin in battle?” they asked the LORD; and the LORD answered: Attack! <sup>24</sup>When the Israelites drew near to the Benjaminites on the second day, <sup>25</sup>Benjamin marched out of Gibeah against them again and felled eighteen thousand Israelites, all of them swordsmen. <sup>26</sup>So the entire Israelite army went up and entered Bethel, where they sat weeping before the LORD. They fasted that day until evening and presented burnt offerings and communion offerings before the LORD. <sup>27</sup>The Israelites consulted the LORD (for the ark of the covenant of the LORD was there in those days, <sup>28</sup>and Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of Aaron, * was standing in his presence in those days), and asked, “Shall I again go out to battle with my brother Benjamin, or shall I stop?” The LORD said: Attack! For tomorrow I will deliver him into your power. <sup>29 *r</sup> So Israel set men in ambush around Gibeah.

Sites Mentioned in Benjaminite War

<sup>30</sup>When the Israelites went up against the Benjaminites on the third day, they drew up against Gibeah as on other occasions. <sup>31</sup>When the Benjaminites marched out to meet the army, they began, as on other occasions, to strike down some of the troops along the highways, one of which goes up to Bethel and one to Gibeah in the open country; about thirty Israelites were slain. <sup>32</sup>The Benjaminites thought, “They are routed before us as previously.” The Israelites, however, were thinking, “We will flee and draw them out from the city onto the highways.” <sup>33</sup>And then all the men of Israel rose from their places, forming up at Baal-tamar, and the Israelites in ambush rushed from their place west of Gibeah <sup>34</sup>and advanced against Gibeah with ten thousand picked men from all Israel. The fighting was severe, but no one knew that a disaster was closing in. <sup>35</sup>The LORD defeated Benjamin before Israel; and on that day the Israelites killed twenty-five thousand one hundred men of Benjamin, all of them swordsmen.

<sup>36</sup>Then the Benjaminites saw that they were defeated. The men of Israel gave ground to Benjamin, trusting in the ambush they had set at Gibeah. <sup>37</sup>Then the men in ambush, having made a sudden dash against Gibeah, marched in and put the whole city to the sword. <sup>38</sup>The arrangement the men of Israel had with the men in ambush was that they would send up a smoke signal from the city, <sup>39</sup>and the men of Israel would then wheel about in the battle. Benjamin, having begun by killing off some thirty of the men of Israel, thought, “Surely they are completely routed before us, as in the earlier fighting.” <sup>40</sup>But when the signal, the column of smoke, began to rise up from the city, Benjamin looked back and there was the whole city going up in smoke toward heaven. <sup>41</sup>Then when the men of Israel wheeled about, the men of Benjamin were thrown into confusion, for they realized that disaster was closing in on them. <sup>42</sup>They retreated before the men of Israel in the direction of the wilderness, but the fighting kept pace with them, and those who had been in the city were spreading destruction in between. <sup>43</sup>They surrounded the men of Benjamin, pursued them from Nohah and drove them along to a point east of Gibeah. <sup>44</sup>Eighteen thousand from Benjamin fell, all of them warriors. <sup>45</sup>They turned and fled into the wilderness to the crag of Rimmon. The Israelites picked off five thousand men on the highways and kept pace with them as far as Gidom, where they struck down another two thousand of them. <sup>46</sup>The total of those from Benjamin who fell that day was twenty-five thousand swordsmen, all of them warriors. <sup>47</sup>Six hundred men turned and fled into the wilderness to the crag of Rimmon, where they remained for four months.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>48</sup>Then the men of Israel turned back against the Benjaminites, putting them to the sword—the inhabitants of the cities, the livestock, and all they came upon.<sup>t</sup> Moreover they destroyed by fire all the cities they came upon.

CHAPTER 21

Ensuring a Future for Benjamin. <sup>1*</sup>The men of Israel took an oath at Mizpah: “None of us will give his daughter in marriage to anyone from Benjamin.” <sup>2</sup>So the people went to Bethel and remained there before God until evening, raising their voices in bitter weeping.<sup>u</sup> <sup>3</sup>They said, “LORD, God of Israel, why has this happened in Israel that today one tribe of Israel should be lacking?” <sup>4</sup>Early the next day the people built an altar there and offered burnt offerings and communion offerings. <sup>5</sup>Then the Israelites asked, “Are there any among all the tribes of Israel who did not come up to the LORD for the assembly?” For there was a solemn oath that anyone who did not go up to the LORD at Mizpah should be put to death.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>6</sup>The Israelites were disconsolate over their brother Benjamin and said, “Today one tribe has been cut off from Israel. <sup>7</sup>What can we do about wives for the survivors, since we have sworn by the LORD not to give them any of our daughters in marriage?” <sup>8</sup>And when they asked, “Is there one among the tribes of Israel who did not come up to the LORD in Mizpah?” they found that none of the men of Jabesh-gilead had come to the encampment for the assembly. <sup>9</sup>A roll call of the people was taken, and none of the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead<sup>w</sup> was present. <sup>10</sup>So the assembly sent twelve thousand warriors there with orders, “Go put the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead to the sword. <sup>11</sup>This is what you are to do: Every male and every woman who has had relations with a male you shall put under the ban.”<sup>* x</sup> <sup>12</sup>Finding among the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead four hundred young virgin women, who had not had relations with a man, they brought them to the camp at Shiloh, in the land of Canaan.<sup>y</sup> <sup>13</sup>Then the whole assembly sent word to the Benjaminites at the crag of Rimmon,<sup>z</sup> offering them peace. <sup>14</sup> * So Benjamin returned at that time, and they were given as wives the women of Jabesh-gilead who had been spared; but these proved to be not enough for them.

Benjamin, so that a tribe will not be wiped out from Israel. <sup>18</sup>Yet we cannot give them any of our daughters in marriage.” For the Israelites had taken an oath, “Cursed be he who gives a wife to Benjamin!” <sup>19</sup>Then they thought of the yearly feast of the LORD at Shiloh,<sup>c</sup> north of Bethel, east of the highway that goes up from Bethel to Shechem, and south of Lebonah. <sup>20</sup>And they instructed the Benjaminites, “Go and set an ambush in the vineyards. <sup>21</sup>When you see the women of Shiloh come out to join in the dances, come out of the vineyards and catch a wife for each of you from the women of Shiloh; then go on to the land of Benjamin. <sup>22</sup>When their fathers or their brothers come to complain to us, we shall say to them, ‘Release them to us as a kindness, since we did not take a woman for every man in battle. Nor did you yourselves give your daughters to them, thus incurring guilt.’ ”*

1:1–36 The chapter depicts the Israelite settlement of Canaan as a gradual and incomplete process (cf. Ex 23:29–30; Dt 7:22). This picture contrasts sharply with that found in Joshua, where the conquest is rapid and total. Accordingly, some scholars believe that Jgs 1 derives from an early account, which is less idealized and more realistic than that on which Joshua is based. Others, noting that Judah is presented as the only tribe that was completely successful in driving foreigners from its territory, think that the account was written at a late date and reflects suspicion in Judah about foreign elements in the Israelite populations of outlying areas (cf. 2 Kgs 17:24–33).

1:16 Hobab the Kenite, Moses’ father-in-law: as in 4:11. However, in Nm 10:29 Hobab is identified as Moses’ brother-in-law, while Reuel is identified as Moses’ father-in-law (see also Ex 2:18). The more common name of Moses’ father-in-law is Jethro, also a Midianite (e.g., Ex 3:1). It is impossible to sort out the relationships among these three men in the ancient traditions. City of Palms: Jericho (cf. Dt 34:3) or a town in the Negeb.

1:17 The ban ... Hormah: the narrator relates the city-name “Hormah” to “the ban” (Hebrew herem), which commanded the Israelites to devote to the Lord—and thus to destroy—whatever was captured within the land (cf. Dt 20:10–18).

1:18 Gaza ... Ashkelon ... Ekron ... Ashdod: four of the five major cities of the Philistines (see note on 3:3). Since these cities were on the coastal plain, the statement that Judah captured them is contrary to v. 19, which notes Judah’s failure to drive out the inhabitants of the lowlands. In the Septuagint the problem is removed by changing the beginning of this verse to read “Judah did not dispossess ....”

1:21 According to Jos 18:16, Jerusalem was assigned to the tribe of Benjamin. According to the notice in 1:8 above, the city was burned by the Judahites, but elsewhere (2 Sm 5:6–9) we learn that it was not actually taken from the Jebusites until David captured it and made it his capital.

2:3 I also said: the Lord explicitly warned the Israelites of the consequences of disobedience; see Nm 33:55 and especially Jos 23:13.

2:5 Bochim: Hebrew for “weepers.”

2:10–19 This long thematic passage establishes the cyclical pattern for the stories found in the rest of the book. When the Israelites are secure, they forsake the Lord and worship other gods. In punishment the Lord places them in the power of a foreign oppressor. But when they cry out in distress, the Lord takes pity on them and raises up a judge, who delivers them from the oppressor. The Israelites remain faithful to the Lord during the lifetime of the judge, but when the judge dies they again abandon the Lord, and the cycle begins anew.

2:11 The Baals: the title “Baal,” meaning “lord” or “master,” belonged to a large number of Canaanite, Phoenician, and Syrian deities, including especially the great storm god Hadad Baal, widely revered as lord of the earth. The plural form, which occurs here, was used by the biblical writers to refer to foreign gods in general.

2:13 The Astartes: Ashtoreth, or Astarte, was an important Canaanite and Phoenician goddess. The plural form used here probably refers to foreign goddesses in general.

3:3 The Philistines: a people of Aegean origin who settled on the coastal plain of southern Canaan in the twelfth century B.C.; from their name derives the geographic designation Palestine. Israel competed for control of the country against a group of their cities: Gaza, Ashkelon, Ashdod, Gath, and Ekron.

3:7 The Asherahs: Asherah was an important goddess, whose presence in the cult was represented by a wooden pole, also called an “asherah”; see notes on Ex 34:13 and Dt 7:5. Here the plural is used to refer to goddesses in general.

3:8 Cushan-rishathaim: this king is not known from other biblical or extrabiblical sources. His title, “king of Aram Naharaim,” indicates that he was a Mesopotamian ruler.

3:15 Left-handed: this detail is important because it shows why Ehud is able to conceal a weapon on his right thigh (3:16). There is also a wordplay involved, since “Benjaminite” in Hebrew could also mean “right-handed man.”

3:31 Shamgar is the first of the so-called minor judges; cf. Introduction.

4:11 It was characteristic of the Kenites that they encamped alongside or among other nomadic groups, such as the Amalekites (cf. 1:16; 1 Sm 15:6). They are most often mentioned in connection with tribes living in the southern part of Judah, but Heber’s group seems to have moved north and pitched its tents in the lower Galilee. Cain: in this case a collective term for the Kenites. For Hobab, see 1:16

5:2–31 This canticle is an excellent example of early Hebrew poetry, even though some of its verses are now obscure.

5:4–5 The Lord himself marches to war in support of Israel. Storm and earthquake are part of the traditional imagery of theophany; cf. Ex 19:16, 18–20; Dt 33:2–3; Ps 18:7–15; 77:17–20; 144:5–7.

5:7 A mother in Israel: the precise meaning of the term “mother” is unclear, except that it seems to indicate Deborah’s position of leadership, and so may be a title (cf. 2 Sm 20:19).

5:14–22 The poet praises the tribes that participated in the war against Sisera: Ephraim, Benjamin, Machir (later regarded as a clan of Manasseh), Zebulun, Issachar, and Naphtali, the tribe of Barak (cf. 4:6). By contrast, the tribes of Reuben, Gilead (elsewhere a region occupied by Reubenites and Gadites), Dan, and Asher are chided for their lack of participation. The more distant tribes of Judah and Simeon are not mentioned, and some historians believe they were not part of Israel at this time.

5:20–21 Stars: the heavenly host, or angelic army. The roles played by the stars and the flash floods underscore the divine involvement in the battle (cf. 5:4–5).

5:21 Trample down the strong!: the meaning of these words is obscure. If this interpretation is correct, Deborah is the one addressed.

5:23 Meroz: an unknown locality in which Israelites probably resided, since its inhabitants are cursed for their failure to participate in the battle.

5:28–30 The scene shifts to the household of the slain Canaanite general, where the anxious foreboding of Sisera's mother is countered by the assurances of the noblewomen.

6:3 Midian, Amalek, and the Kedemites: three groups of camel nomads, whose raids were a constant threat to settled peoples like the Israelites during the period of the Judges.

6:16 I will be with you: narratives telling how the Lord commissions someone for a task depict the person's reactions of reluctance, confusion, or sense of inadequacy, and the Lord's reassurance ("I will be with you"), sometimes accompanied by a sign (cf. Ex 3:12; Jer 1:8). Lk 1:28–37 is modeled on this pattern.

6:19 Ephah: see note on Is 5:10.

6:22 Ancient Israel thought that seeing God face to face meant mortal danger, as Ex 33:20 indicates and as Gideon's reaction here shows. Compare the reaction of Samson's parents (13:22–23) when they realize they have been conversing with the Lord.

6:24 Yahweh-shalom: a reference to the Lord's words, "You are safe" (v. 23), lit., "Peace be to you!"

6:25 The asherah: see note on Ex 34:13.

6:32 Jerubbaal: similar in sound to the Hebrew words meaning, "Let Baal take action."

6:34 Clothed with the spirit of the Lord: narratives about the selection of leaders in early Israel typically attribute their prowess to "the spirit of the Lord," not to their own qualities (cf. v. 15). The Lord's spirit "comes upon" them (3:10; 11:29; 13:25) or "rushes upon" them (14:6, 19; 15:14; 1 Sm 11:6), and they are transformed into effective leaders. Here, Gideon is "clothed" with the Lord's spirit; cf. the clothing or vesture imagery in Is 59:17; 61:10; Ez 16:10–14; Jb 29:14.

7:2 My own power saved me: Deuteronomic theology constantly warns Israel against attributing success to their own efforts; cf. Dt 6:10–12; 8:17.

7:3 Mount Gilead: since the well-known highlands of Gilead were east of the Jordan River, some other hill of Gilead must be intended here. Perhaps its name is preserved in Ain Jalud (or Galud), the modern Arabic name of the spring of Harod, where Gideon's army is encamped (v. 1). The narrator plays on the Hebrew word "fearful" (hared) and the name of the spring, harod.

7:5 The point of this selection process is clear: the battle against the nomadic raiders is going to be won not because of the numerical superiority of the Israelite troops but because of the power of the Lord.

7:13 The dream seems to foretell the victory of the agricultural Israelites (the barley loaf) over the nomadic Midianites (the tent).

7:19 At the beginning of the middle watch: at the start of the second of the three watches into which the night was divided. The sentinels were changed at the beginning of a watch, thus making the camp momentarily vulnerable.

8:6 Are the hands ... already in your possession ... ?: i.e., can you already boast of victory? The hands of slain enemies were sometimes cut off and counted as trophies.

8:24 Ishmaelites: evidently used here as a general term for nomads, whose wealth was in the form of gold and flocks. The genealogies in Genesis place the Midianites as descendants of Abraham and his wife Keturah (Gn 25:1–2), and the Ishmaelites as the descendants of Ishmael, son of Abraham and Hagar, Sarah’s Egyptian slave (Gn 25:12–16).

8:31 Concubine: a wife of secondary rank.

8:33 Baal-berith: a divine epithet meaning “lord of the covenant.” The same deity is called El-berith, “god of the covenant,” in 9:46.

9:9 Whereby gods and human beings are honored: olive oil had a variety of cultic uses (e.g., Lv 2:1, 6, 15; 24:2), and it was also used in the consecration of priests and kings for office (e.g., Ex 30:25, 30; 1 Sm 10:1; 16:13).

9:13 Cheers gods: wine was part of a number of types of offerings in the Israelite cult (cf. Ex 29:40; Lv 23:13; Nm 15:7, 10), and it was also used widely in the worship of foreign gods (cf. Dt 32:37–38; Is 65:11).

9:45 Sowing it with salt: a severe measure, since it rendered the soil barren and useless.

9:53 The upper part of a millstone: a common hand mill consisted of a large flat stone base and a smaller upper stone (cf. Dt 24:6) shaped so that it could be held in the hands and rolled or ground against the lower stone. It is an upper stone that the woman hurls over the wall to kill Abimelech.

10:1–5 Tola ... Jair: two more of the so-called “minor judges”; see Introduction.

10:4 Donkeys: mounts signifying rank and wealth; cf. 5:10; 12:14.

11:24 Chemosh: the god of the Moabites (1 Kgs 11:7; 2 Kgs 23:13) not the Ammonites, whose god was Milcom (1 Kgs 11:5; 2 Kgs 23:13). Much of the disputed land, which lay between the Jabbok and Arnon Rivers, was actually in Moab, and many of the details of this passage (vv. 12–28) seem more applicable to a quarrel with the king of the Moabites than with the king of the Ammonites.

11:30–40 Jephthah’s rash vow and its tragic consequences reflect a widespread folklore motif, most familiar in the Greek story of Iphigenia and her father, Agamemnon. The sacrifice of children was strictly forbidden by Mosaic law (Lv 18:21; 20:2–5), and when the biblical writers report its occurrence, they usually condemn it in strong terms (2 Kgs 16:3; 21:6; Jer 7:31; 19:5). In this case, however, the narrator simply records the old story, offering no comment on the acceptability of Jephthah’s extreme gesture. The story may have been preserved because it provided an explanation of the custom described in vv. 39–40 according to which Israelite women mourned Jephthah’s daughter annually in a fourday ceremony.

12:6 Shibboleth: Hebrew meaning “ear of grain” or “torrent of water.” Though the Ephraimites probably spoke the same dialect of Hebrew as their Gileadite neighbors, there was enough regional variation in their pronunciation of the initial sound of this word to betray them to their enemies.

12:8–15 Ibzan ... Elon ... Abdon: three more of the so-called “minor judges”; see Introduction.

13:2 The clan of the Danites: before the migration described in chap. 18 the tribe of Dan occupied a small territory west of Benjamin, adjacent to the Philistine plain; see note on 3:3.

13:5 A nazirite for God: according to the rules for nazirites set forth in Nm 6:2–8, Samson’s vows would have obliged him to abstain from wine and other products of the vine and to keep his hair uncut. As the story that follows shows, the last requirement proved especially fateful in Samson’s life.

13:17–19 Manoah asks for a name so that he will know how to acknowledge the help of the visitor, but the angel will say only that his name is “wondrous,” i.e., beyond human comprehension. Manoah’s response is to dedicate his offering to “the Lord, who works wonders.”

13:22 We will certainly die: seeing God face to face was believed to be fatal, as explained in note on 6:22, where Gideon’s reaction is similar to that of Manoah here.

14:4 An opportunity against the Philistines: although the story of Samson’s first love might be taken as an illustration of the danger of foreign marriages, the narrator explains it differently.

Samson's infatuation with the Timnite woman was the Lord's way of creating an opportunity to punish the Philistines for their oppression of Israel.

14:16 The story of Samson and the Timnite woman is very similar in its narrative structure to the better-known story of Samson and Delilah (16:1–22). In both, Samson's success in his conflict with the Philistines depends on keeping a secret. In both stories Samson is betrayed by the Philistine woman he loves when she importunes him to reveal the secret to her and then, when he gives in, divulges it to her people.

15:17 Ramath-lehi: "Jawbone Height"; in Hebrew lehi means "jawbone."

15:19 En-hakkore: understood as "the spring of the crier," an allusion to Samson's cry in v. 18. The story is used to explain the name of a well-known spring in Lehi. The Hebrew also means "Partridge Spring."

16:19 See note on 13:5.

16:23 Dagon: an ancient Syrian grain deity (cf. Hebrew dagan, "grain") whom the Philistines adopted as their national god after their arrival on the coast of Canaan.

17:2 The narrator picks up the story after a number of events, including a theft and a mother's curse, have already taken place.

17:3 An idol overlaid with silver: two nouns in Hebrew, one indicating a wooden image and the other denoting an image cast from metal. The probable interpretation is that the woman intends for her silver to be recast as a covering for an image of a god, possibly the Lord. This was forbidden in Mosaic law (cf. Ex 20:4 and Dt 5:8).

17:5 An ephod and teraphim: cultic paraphernalia. An ephod was a priestly garment, especially that worn by the high priest (cf. Ex 28 and 39), which contained a pocket for objects used for divination. Teraphim were household idols (Gn 31:19, 34–35; 1 Sm 19:13), which may also have had a divinatory function.

17:6 This refrain, which will be repeated fully or in part three more times (18:1; 19:1; 21:25), calls attention to the disorder and lawlessness that prevailed before the establishment of kingship in Israel. In this case the problem is cultic impropriety, seen not only in the making of an idol but in the establishment of a local temple, complete with an ephod and teraphim.

17:12–13 Previously one of Micah's sons served as priest (v. 5). But Micah's family were probably Ephraimites (cf. v. 1) rather than Levites, and the story reflects a sense that only Levites were to be consecrated as priests; cf. Nm 18:7, where descent from Aaron is further specified as a requirement to be a priest. Thus Micah believes it will be to his advantage to retain the itinerant Levite.

18:1 No heritage ... allotted: according to Jos 19:40–48, the Danites received an allotment in the central part of the country (cf. note on 13:2 above). The point here may be that since they were unable to take full possession of that original allotment, as indicated by the notice in Jgs 1:34, they are now seeking territory elsewhere.

18:3 Recognized the voice: this might indicate that the Danite scouts were personally acquainted with the young Levite, but it is more likely to mean that, being originally from Judah, his dialect or accent was noticeably different from others in Micah's household.

18:7 The Sidonians ... the Arameans: the people of Laish were not in regular contact with their neighbors, including the Sidonians or Phoenicians in the coastal district to the west and the Arameans in the regions to the north and east. This isolation is mentioned to underscore the vulnerability of the peaceful and unfortified city.

18:30 Micah's shrine is now reinstalled at Laish-Dan. In the time of the kings of Israel and Judah, Dan was the site of one of the two national sanctuaries of the Northern Kingdom, both of which are strongly condemned by the editors of the Books of Kings, who regarded Jerusalem as the only acceptable place for a temple (1 Kgs 12:26–30). This verse draws a direct connection between Micah's temple and the later royal sanctuary at Dan. Seen in this light the account of the establishment of Micah's shrine, with its idol cast from stolen silver, becomes a highly polemical foundation story for the temple at Dan. Jonathan, son of Gershom, son of Moses: Micah's Levite is now identified as the son or descendant of Gershom, Moses' eldest son (Ex 2:22; 18:3). In the traditional Hebrew text an additional letter has been suspended over the name "Moses" to alter it to "Manasseh," thus protecting Moses from association with idol worship. Captivity: although Samaria fell in 722/721 B.C., much of the northern part of the country, probably including Dan, had been subjugated about a decade earlier by the Assyrian emperor Tilgath-pileser III.

18:31 Shiloh: a major sanctuary which has a role in the final episode of Judges (21:12, 21).

19:1 No king in Israel: see note on 17:6. The violent story that follows is offered as another example of the disorder that prevailed before the inauguration of the monarchy.

19:15–21 The narrative casts a very unfavorable light on Gibeah of Benjamin, the town from which Israel's first king would come (cf. 1 Sm 9:1–2). No Benjaminite offers hospitality to the Levite and his travel party, who are obliged to wait at night in the town square until an Ephraimite residing in Gibeah welcomes them into his home.

19:22–25 This part of the grim story closely parallels that of the assault on Lot's angelic visitors in Gn 19:4–8.

19:29 The Levite's gruesome way of summoning the tribes is a drastic version of that used by Saul in 1 Sm 11:7, where he dismembers a yoke of oxen.

19:30 Has such a thing ever happened ... ?: the outrage became a byword in Israel, so that in the eighth century the prophet Hosea could invoke "the days of Gibeah" (Hos 9:9; cf. 10:9) to signify corruption and wrongdoing.

20:1 From Dan to Beer-sheba: the entire country, from north to south. The land of Gilead: Israelite territory east of the Jordan.

20:2 The staff-bearers of Israel: the tribal leaders.

20:16 The strange notice that the Gibeahite warriors were left-handed was probably added here under the influence of the Ehud story; cf. 3:15 and the note there.

20:18 Judah first: as in 1:2, where the enemy is the Canaanites. This time the attack is against fellow Israelites, an indication of how far things have deteriorated in these days when as yet "there was no king in Israel"; see note on 17:6.

20:19–25 The Israelites are defeated twice by the Benjaminites.

20:22–23 These two verses seem to be transposed. The day of supplication described in v. 23 must have preceded the assembly for battle reported in v. 22.

20:29–46 The Israelites are successful in their third attempt to defeat Benjamin. Leaving an ambush behind, they decoy the enemy troops out of the city by pretending to be routed as on the two previous occasions. The stratagem is strongly reminiscent of that employed in the conquest of Ai (Jos 8). Two accounts of the present battle against Gibeah are preserved, one in 20:29–36a and another in 20:36b–46.

21:1–7 The victorious Israelites now become concerned about the survival of the tribe they have defeated. Despite the large number of Benjaminites killed in the final battle (20:46) and the general carnage that followed (20:48), there does not seem to be a shortage of men. The problem is rather a shortage of wives for the surviving men, the result of a previously unmentioned vow the Israelites took not to permit their daughters to marry Benjaminites.

21:11 Under the ban: see note on 1:17. In this case the sanction is imposed not because of the rules for the conquest of the promised land (cf. Dt 20:10–18) but because of the failure of the men of Jabesh-gilead to honor their oath and report for the assembly.

21:14 Very strong political ties existed between the people of Jabesh-gilead and the Benjaminites, especially those involving Saul, the Benjaminite king of Israel. See 1 Sm 11, where Saul rescues Jabesh from an Ammonite siege, and 1 Sm 31:11–13, where the people of Jabesh exert themselves to ensure that the bodies of Saul and his sons should receive honorable burial.

21:22 Release them ... guilt: this verse is difficult. Evidently the elders intend to make two arguments in support of their request that the men of Shiloh release their claims on the abducted women. The first argument seems to be that an insufficient number of women were taken “in battle”—i.e., the raid on Jabesh-gilead—to provide “a woman for every man”—i.e., a wife for every Benjaminite. The second argument is that since the women have been kidnapped, the men of Shiloh will not be guilty of having violated the oath mentioned above in 21:1, 7, and 18.

21:25 See note on 17:6. This final editorial comment calls attention to the chaos that followed the Benjaminite civil war and the near anarchy that characterized the various efforts to meet the need for wives for the Benjaminites.

The Book of Ruth

1 2 3 4

See RG 195–200

The Book of Ruth is named for the Moabite woman who commits herself to the Israelite people by an oath to her mother-in-law Naomi and becomes the great-grandmother of David by marriage to Boaz of Bethlehem. Thus she is an ancestor in the messianic line that leads to Jesus (Mt 1:5).

The book portrays the love and loyalty of human beings in working their way through tragic circumstances to participation in the community of the faithful people of God. The key is responsible and loving decision-making: Ruth's loyalty (2:11), her generosity (1:15–17; 2:2, 7) and her willingness to take risks for the sake of righteousness set in motion a chain of beneficial events, while behind the scenes God blesses each step in the developing drama. Ruth is so frequently designated “the Moabite” in the book that the audience of the story is constantly reminded of the universality of the embrace of salvation.

In the Greek and Latin canons, Ruth follows Judges, to which it is related by its opening time reference (“Once back in the time of the judges ...”), and precedes Samuel, serving as transition from Israel as tribal union to monarchy. In the present sequence of the Hebrew canon it is placed among the “Writings” immediately after the Book of Proverbs, which ends with a powerful portrayal of “the woman of worth” (Prv 31:10–31; cf. Ru 3:11). Ruth is the primary liturgical text in Judaism for the celebration of the feast of Weeks (Shabuot).

The beauty of the story's construction, its use of dialogue (nearly two thirds of the text), and the sheer drama of its content mark it as one of the classic short stories of world literature. Based on the recollection of an historical figure, a story is developed which grips its audience with profound insight into divine and human relationships. The story is presented from a point some time after the course of events, as is indicated by the explanation of an obscure custom in 4:7. Wherever and whenever it was told, its claim of God's universal concern for humankind and the attractiveness of caring human responsibility shines forth.

The date of composition is disputed. Many authors date it early in the monarchy, and valid arguments can be presented for that position. Others argue for a postexilic date; they see the favorable presentation of a Moabite woman who became David's grandmother as a counter to the stringent measures of Ezra and Nehemiah against marriage with Moabites and other non-Jews (Ezr 9–10; Neh 13:23–29).

CHAPTER 1

Naomi in Moab. <sup>1</sup>Once back in the time of the judges* there was a famine in the land; so a man from Bethlehem of Judah left home with his wife and two sons to reside on the plateau of Moab. <sup>2</sup>The man was named Elimelech, his wife Naomi, and his sons Mahlon and Chilion; they were Ephrathites from Bethlehem of Judah. Some time after their arrival on the plateau of Moab, <sup>3</sup>Elimelech, the husband of Naomi, died, and she was left with her two sons. <sup>4</sup>They married Moabite women, one named Orpah, the other Ruth. When they had lived there about ten years, <sup>5</sup>both Mahlon and Chilion died also, and the woman was left with neither her two boys* nor her husband.

Places in Ruth

<sup>6</sup>She and her daughters-in-law then prepared to go back from the plateau of Moab because word had reached her there that the LORD had seen to his people's needs* and given them food. <sup>7</sup>She and her two daughters-in-law left the place where they had been living. On the road back to the land of Judah, <sup>8</sup>Naomi said to her daughters-in-law, "Go back, each of you to your mother's house.* May the LORD show you the same kindness as you have shown to the deceased and to me. <sup>9a</sup> May the LORD guide each of you to find a husband and a home in which you will be at rest." She kissed them goodbye, but they wept aloud, <sup>10</sup>crying, "No! We will go back with you, to your people." <sup>11</sup>Naomi replied, "Go back, my daughters. Why come with me? Have I other sons in my womb who could become your husbands?*" <sup>12</sup>Go, my daughters, for I am too old to marry again. Even if I had any such hope, or if tonight I had a husband and were to bear sons, <sup>13</sup>would you wait for them and deprive yourselves of husbands until those sons grew up? No, my daughters, my lot is too bitter for you, because the LORD has extended his hand against me." <sup>14</sup>Again they wept aloud; then Orpah kissed her mother-in-law good-bye, but Ruth clung to her.

<sup>15</sup>"See now," she said, "your sister-in-law has gone back to her people and her god. Go back after your sister-in-law!" <sup>16</sup>* But Ruth said, "Do not press me to go back and abandon you!

Wherever you go I will go, wherever you lodge I will lodge.
Your people shall be my people and your God, my God.

<sup>17</sup>Where you die I will die,
and there be buried.

May the LORD do thus to me, and more, if even death separates me from you!" <sup>18</sup>Naomi then ceased to urge her, for she saw she was determined to go with her.

The Return to Bethlehem. <sup>19</sup>So they went on together until they reached Bethlehem. On their arrival there, the whole town was excited about them, and the women asked: "Can this be Naomi?" <sup>20b</sup> But she said to them, "Do not call me Naomi ['Sweet']. Call me Mara ['Bitter'], for the Almighty has made my life very bitter. <sup>21</sup>* <sup>c</sup> I went away full, but the LORD has brought me back empty. Why should you call me ‘Sweet,’ since the LORD has brought me to trial, and the Almighty has pronounced evil sentence on me.”

CHAPTER 2

The Meeting.<sup>1*</sup> Naomi had a powerful relative named Boaz,<sup>d</sup> through the clan of her husband Elimelech. <sup>2*</sup>Ruth the Moabite said to Naomi, “I would like to go and glean grain in the field of anyone who will allow me.” Naomi said to her, “Go ahead, my daughter.” <sup>3</sup>So she went. The field she entered to glean after the harvesters happened to be the section belonging to Boaz, of the clan of Elimelech. <sup>4*</sup>Soon, along came Boaz from Bethlehem and said to the harvesters, “The LORD be with you,” and they replied, “The LORD bless you.” <sup>5</sup>Boaz asked the young man overseeing his harvesters, “Whose young woman is this?” <sup>6</sup>The young man overseeing the harvesters answered, “She is the young Moabite who came back with Naomi from the plateau of Moab.”<sup>e</sup> <sup>7*</sup> She said, ‘I would like to gather the gleanings into sheaves after the harvesters.’ Ever since she came this morning she has remained here until now, with scarcely a moment’s rest.”

<sup>8</sup>Boaz then spoke to Ruth, “Listen, my daughter. Do not go to glean in anyone else’s field; you are not to leave here. Stay here with my young women. <sup>9</sup>Watch to see which field is to be harvested, and follow them. Have I not commanded the young men to do you no harm? When you are thirsty, go and drink from the vessels the young people have filled.” <sup>10</sup>Casting herself prostrate upon the ground, she said to him, “Why should I, a foreigner, be favored with your attention?” <sup>11f</sup> Boaz answered her: “I have had a complete account of what you have done for your mother-in-law after your husband’s death; you have left your father and your mother and the land of your birth, and have come to a people whom previously you did not know. <sup>12g</sup> May the LORD reward what you have done! May you receive a full reward from the LORD, the God of Israel, under whose wings you have come for refuge.” <sup>13</sup>She said, “May I prove worthy of your favor, my lord. You have comforted me. You have spoken to the heart of your servant* — and I am not even one of your servants!” <sup>14</sup>At mealtime Boaz said to her, “Come here and have something to eat; dip your bread in the sauce.” Then as she sat near the harvesters, he handed her some roasted grain and she ate her fill and had some left over. <sup>15</sup>As she rose to glean, Boaz instructed his young people: “Let her glean among the sheaves themselves without scolding her, <sup>16</sup>and even drop some handfuls and leave them for her to glean; do not rebuke her.”

<sup>17</sup>She gleaned in the field until evening, and when she beat out what she had gleaned it came to about an ephah* of barley, <sup>18</sup>which she took into the town and showed to her mother-in-law. Next she brought out what she had left over from the meal and gave it to her. <sup>19</sup>So her mother-in-law said to her, “Where did you glean today? Where did you go to work? May the one who took notice of you be blessed!” Then she told her mother-in-law with whom she had worked. “The man at whose place I worked today is named Boaz,” she said. <sup>20h</sup> “May he be blessed by the LORD, who never fails to show kindness to the living and to the dead,” Naomi exclaimed to her daughter-in-law. She continued, “This man is a near relative of ours, one of our redeemers.”* <sup>21</sup> “He even told me,” added Ruth the Moabite, “Stay with my young people until they complete my entire harvest.” <sup>22</sup> “You would do well, my daughter,” Naomi rejoined, “to work with his young women; in someone else’s field you might be insulted.” <sup>23</sup>So she stayed gleaning with Boaz’s young women until the end of the barley and wheat harvests.

Ruth Again Presents Herself. When Ruth was back with her mother-in-law, <sup>1</sup>Naomi said to her, “My daughter, should I not be seeking a pleasing home for you?<sup>i 2 *</sup> Now! Is not Boaz,<sup>j</sup> whose young women you were working with, a relative of ours? This very night he will be winnowing barley at the threshing floor. <sup>3</sup>Now, go bathe and anoint yourself; then put on your best attire and go down to the threshing floor. Do not make yourself known to the man before he has finished eating and drinking. <sup>4</sup>But when he lies down, take note of the place where he lies; then go uncover a place at his feet* and you lie down. He will then tell you what to do.” <sup>5</sup> “I will do whatever you say,” Ruth replied. <sup>6</sup>She went down to the threshing floor and did just as her mother-in-law had instructed her.

<sup>7</sup>Boaz ate and drank to his heart’s content, and went to lie down at the edge of the pile of grain. She crept up, uncovered a place at his feet, and lay down. <sup>8</sup>Midway through the night, the man gave a start and groped about, only to find a woman lying at his feet. <sup>9</sup> “Who are you?” he asked. She replied, “I am your servant Ruth. Spread the wing of your cloak* over your servant, for you are a redeemer.” <sup>10</sup>He said, “May the LORD bless you, my daughter! You have been even more loyal now than before in not going after the young men, whether poor or rich. <sup>11</sup>Now rest assured, my daughter, I will do for you whatever you say; all my townspeople know you to be a worthy woman.<sup>*12k</sup> Now, I am in fact a redeemer, but there is another redeemer closer than I.* <sup>13</sup>Stay where you are for tonight, and tomorrow, if he will act as redeemer for you, good. But if he will not, as the LORD lives, I will do it myself. Lie there until morning.”<sup>l</sup> <sup>14</sup>So she lay at his feet until morning, but rose before anyone could recognize another, for Boaz had said, “Let it not be known that this woman came to the threshing floor.” <sup>15</sup>Then he said to her, “Take off the shawl you are wearing; hold it firmly.” When she did so, he poured out six measures of barley and helped her lift the bundle; then he himself left for the town.

<sup>16</sup>She, meanwhile, went home to her mother-in-law, who asked, “How did things go, my daughter?” So she told her all the man had done for her, <sup>17</sup>and concluded, “He gave me these six measures of barley and said, ‘Do not go back to your mother-in-law empty.’ ”<sup>m 18</sup>Naomi then said, “Wait here, my daughter, until you learn what happens, for the man will not rest, but will settle the matter today.”

CHAPTER 4

Boaz Marries Ruth. <sup>1</sup>Boaz went to the gate* and took a seat there. Along came the other redeemer<sup>n</sup> of whom he had spoken. Boaz called to him by name, “Come, sit here.” And he did so. <sup>2</sup>Then Boaz picked out ten of the elders* of the town and asked them to sit nearby. When they had done this, <sup>3</sup>he said to the other redeemer: “Naomi, who has come back from the plateau of Moab, is putting up for sale the piece of land that belonged to our kinsman Elimelech. <sup>4</sup>*So I thought I would inform you. Before those here present, including the elders of my people, purchase the field; act as redeemer.<sup>o</sup> But if you do not want to do it, tell me so, that I may know, for no one has a right of redemption prior to yours, and mine is next.” He answered, “I will act as redeemer.”

<sup>13</sup>Boaz took Ruth. When they came together as husband and wife, the LORD enabled her to conceive and she bore a son. <sup>14</sup>Then the women said to Naomi, “Blessed is the LORD who has not failed to provide you today with a redeemer. May he become famous in Israel! <sup>15</sup>He will restore your life and be the support of your old age, for his mother is the daughter-in-law who loves you. She is worth more to you than seven sons!” <sup>16</sup>Naomi took the boy, cradled him* against her breast, and cared for him. <sup>17</sup>The neighbor women joined the celebration: “A son has been born to Naomi!”<sup>s</sup> They named him Obed. He was the father of Jesse, the father of David.

1:1–2 Back in the time of the judges: the story looks back three generations before King David (4:17) into the time of the tribal confederation described in the Book of Judges. David’s Moabite connections are implied in 1 Sm 22:3–4. Bethlehem of Judah: Bethlehem, a town in which part of the Judean clan-division called Ephrathah lived; cf. 1 Chr 2:50–51; 4:4; Mi 5:1. Jos 19:15 mentions a different Bethlehem in the north. The plateau of Moab: on the east side of the Jordan valley rift, where the hills facing west get more rain, and where agricultural conditions differ from those in Judah. Ephrathites: a reminder of David’s origins; cf. Mi 5:1.

1:8 Mother’s house: the women’s part of the home, but also perhaps the proper location for arranging marriage; Sg 3:4; 8:2; Gn 24:28. Kindness: Hebrew hesed. The powerful relationship term used here will recur in 2:20 and 3:10; kindness operates on both the divine-human and human-human level in Ruth.

1:11 Other sons ... husbands: a reference to a customary practice known from Dt 25:5–10, levirate marriage, which assigns responsibility to the brother-in-law to produce heirs in order to perpetuate the name and hold the patrimonial land of a man who died childless. How far the responsibility extended beyond blood brothers is unclear; cf. Gn 38:8 and the upcoming scene in Ru 4:5–6. Naomi imagines the impossible: were she to have more sons they could take Ruth and Orpah as their wives.

1:16–17 Ruth’s adherence to her mother-in-law in 1:14 is now expressed in a profound oath of loyalty, culminating in a formulary found frequently in Samuel and Kings; cf. especially 1 Sm 20:13. Even death: burial in Naomi’s family tomb means that not even death will separate them.

1:21 Naomi’s despair is made clear by her play on the meaning of her name in v. 20 and now by her accusation, like that in many psalms and in Job, that God has acted harshly toward her. The language belongs to the realm of judicial proceedings. By crying out in this way, the faithful Israelite opens the door to change, since the cry assumes that God hears and will do something about such seemingly unjust circumstances.

1:22 Barley and wheat harvests come in succession, from as early as April–May into June–July; Dt 16:9–12 suggests that the grain harvest lasts about seven weeks. The time reference leads effectively to the next episode.

2:1 Kinship ties and responsibilities now become very important. Boaz is introduced as one of a group surrounding Naomi through her husband's kin who are expected to extend care. The particular term used here (moda', “relative”) is picked up in 3:2; otherwise, most of the terminology about this responsibility to care will use the vocabulary of redeeming (go'el, “redeemer”).

2:2 Israelite custom made provision for the poor, the widow, the stranger and the orphan to gather what was left behind by the harvesters, and instructed farmers not to cut to the edges of their fields, for the sake of these marginalized; Lv 19:9–10; 23:22; Dt 24:19–22.

2:4 The story brings Boaz upon the scene quickly, but he moves among his workers with the grace of a man of prominence, greeting them and being received with courtesy. The Hebrew blessing formulas used are frequent in Jewish and Christian liturgies.

2:7 The verse is somewhat garbled, but the points are clear that Ruth has been appropriately deferential in seeking permission to glean, and has worked steadily since arriving. Or perhaps she has waited patiently until Boaz arrives to gain permission.

2:13 Servant: only here is the language of servanthood used. Ruth has spoken with very deferential words to Boaz, but then seems to think that she has assumed too much.

2:17 Ephah: see note on Is 5:10.

2:20 For the first time, the story uses the Hebrew word go'el, “redeemer,” for the responsibilities of the circle of kinship surrounding Naomi and Ruth and their deceased relatives. Involved are the recovery or retention of family land (Lv 25:25; 27:9–33; Jer 32:6–25), release of a relative from voluntary servitude to pay debts (Lv 25:47–55), and “redeeming blood” or vengeance, attested in passages which regulate such vengeance. No explicit connection is made elsewhere in the Bible between marriage responsibilities and redeeming.

3:2 Ruth's determined action to bring relief to Naomi's and her own circumstances now impels Naomi to move, using means available in Israelite custom which no one in the story has up to this point brought into play.

3:4 Uncover a place at his feet: Naomi advocates a course of action that will lead Boaz to act. Israelite custom and moral expectations strongly suggest that there is no loss of virtue involved in the scene.

3:9 Spread the wing of your cloak: Ez 16:8 makes it clear that this is a request for marriage. Ruth connects it to “redeemer” responsibility. A wordplay on “wing” links what Boaz is asked to do to what he has asked God to do for Ruth in 2:12.

3:11 Worthy woman: the language corresponds to the description of Boaz in 2:1 (lit., “strong and worthy”); the two worthy people are linked in character to one another, as they have already proven to be in their generous behavior toward the ones in need of their care. The townspeople, lit., “all the gate of my people,” will ratify this at the gate in the sequel.

3:12 Another redeemer closer than I: Boaz knows of a closer relative who would have a prior right to buy the field and marry Ruth.

4:1 The gate of an Israelite town was the place where commercial and other legal matters were dealt with in publicly witnessed fashion.

4:2 Ten of the elders: to serve as judges in legal matters as well as witnesses of the settlement of business affairs; cf. Dt 25:7–9.

4:4 Although the laws governing inheritance by Israelite widows are not specified in the Bible, Naomi seems to have the right of disposal of a piece of Elimelech's land. The redemption custom in Lv 25:25 would then guide the procedure.

4:5–6 Although redemption and levirate practices are not otherwise linked in the Bible, they belong in the same area of need. Boaz claims that buying Elimelech’s field obligates the other redeemer to produce an heir for Mahlon, who would then inherit the land. That would jeopardize this redeemer’s overall holdings, since he would lose the land he had paid for. He can afford the first step but not the second, and cedes his responsibility to Boaz, who is willing to do both.

4:7 Take off a sandal: the legislation in Dt 25:8–10 provides that if a “redeemer” refuses to carry out the obligation of marrying his brother’s wife, the woman shall strip off his sandal as a gesture of insult. In later years, when the obligation of carrying out this function of the “redeemer” was no longer keenly felt, the removal of the sandal may have become a formalized way of renouncing the rights/obligations of the “redeemer,” as in this text.

4:12 Gn 38 contains a story about Tamar similar to Ruth’s in levirate marriage. Judah, under less laudable circumstances, fulfills the same role as Boaz will, and Perez, son of Judah and Tamar, perpetuates the line. Thus two non-Israelite women, Tamar and Ruth, are important links in David’s genealogy.

4:16 Cradled him: the child belongs to Naomi in the sense that he now becomes the redeemer in the family, as stated in 4:14. This tender act by Naomi is not necessarily adoptive and differs from the relationship in Gn 30:3; cf. Nm 11:12. Naomi now has a “boy” to replace her two lost “boys” in 1:5.

The Books of Samuel

These books describe the rise and development of kingship in Israel. Samuel is a pivotal figure. He bridges the gap between the period of the Judges and the monarchy, and guides Israel's transition to kingship. A Deuteronomistic editor presents both positive and negative traditions about the monarchy, portraying it both as evidence of Israel's rejection of the Lord as their sovereign (1 Sm 8:6–22; 12:1–25) and as part of God's plan to deliver the people (1 Sm 9:16; 10:17–27; 2 Sm 7:8–17). Samuel's misgivings about abuse of royal power foreshadow the failures and misdeeds of Saul and David and the failures of subsequent Israelite kings.

Although the events described in 1 and 2 Samuel move from the last of the judges to the decline of David's reign and the beginning of a legendary "Golden Age" under Solomon's rule, this material does not present either a continuous history or a systematic account of this period. The author/editor developed a narrative timeline around freely composed speeches, delivered by prophets like Samuel (e.g., 1 Sm 15:10–31; 28:15–19) and Nathan (2 Sm 12:1–12), who endorse Deuteronomistic perspectives regarding the establishment of the monarchy, the relationship between worship and obedience, and the divine covenant established with the house of David.

These books include independent blocks (e.g., the Ark Narrative [1 Sm 4:1–7:1], Saul's rise to power [1 Sm 9:1–11:15], David's ascendancy over Saul [1 Sm 16–31], the Succession Narrative [2 Sm 9–20; 1 Kgs 1–2]), which the editor shaped into three narrative cycles, the last two marked by transitional passages in 1 Sm 13:1 and 2 Sm 1:1. Each section focuses on a major figure in the development of the monarchy: Samuel, the reluctant king maker (1 Sm 1–12); Saul, the king whom the Lord rejects (1 Sm 13–31); David, the king after the Lord's own heart (2 Sm 1–24). A common theme unites these narratives: Israel's God acts justly, prospering those who remain faithful and destroying those who reject his ways (1 Sm 2:9). Along with the rest of the Deuteronomistic History, the Books of Samuel become an object lesson for biblical Israel as it tries to re-establish its religious identity after the destruction of Jerusalem and the loss of its homeland (587/586 B.C.).

The contents of the Books of Samuel may be divided as follows:

- I. The Last Judges, Eli and Samuel (1 Sm 1:1–7:17)
- II. Establishment of the Monarchy (1 Sm 8:1–12:25)
- III. Saul and David (1 Sm 13:1–2 Sm 2:7)
- IV. The Reign of David (2 Sm 2:8–20:26)
- V. Appendixes (2 Sm 21:1–24:25)

I. The Last Judges, Eli and Samuel

CHAPTER 1

Elkanah and His Family at Shiloh. <sup>1</sup>There was a certain man from Ramathaim, a Zuphite from the hill country of Ephraim. His name was Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, son of Elihu, son of Tohu, son of Zuph, an Ephraimite.<sup>a</sup> <sup>2</sup>He had two wives, one named Hannah, the other Peninnah; Peninnah had children, but Hannah had no children. <sup>3</sup>Each year this man went up from his city to worship and offer sacrifice to the LORD of hosts at Shiloh, where the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were ministering as priests of the LORD.<sup>b</sup> <sup>4</sup>When the day came for Elkanah to offer sacrifice, he used to give portions to his wife Peninnah and to all her sons and daughters,<sup>5</sup> but he would give a double portion to Hannah because he loved her, though the LORD had closed her womb.<sup>c</sup> <sup>6</sup>Her rival,* to upset her, would torment her constantly, since the LORD had closed her womb.<sup>d</sup> <sup>7</sup>Year after year, when she went up to the house of the LORD, Peninnah would provoke her, and Hannah would weep and refuse to eat.* <sup>8</sup>Elkanah, her husband, would say to her: “Hannah, why are you weeping? Why are you not eating? Why are you so miserable? Am I not better for you than ten sons?”<sup>e</sup>

Hannah’s Prayer. <sup>9</sup>Hannah rose after one such meal at Shiloh, and presented herself before the LORD; at the time Eli the priest was sitting on a chair near the doorpost of the LORD’s temple. <sup>10</sup>In her bitterness she prayed to the LORD, weeping freely,<sup>11</sup> and made this vow: “O LORD of hosts, if you look with pity on the hardship of your servant, if you remember me and do not forget me, if you give your handmaid a male child, I will give him to the LORD all the days of his life. No razor shall ever touch his head.”<sup>* f</sup> <sup>12</sup>As she continued praying before the LORD, Eli watched her mouth,<sup>13</sup> for Hannah was praying silently; though her lips were moving, her voice could not be heard. Eli, thinking she was drunk,<sup>14</sup> said to her, “How long will you make a drunken spectacle of yourself? Sober up from your wine!” <sup>15</sup>“No, my lord!” Hannah answered. “I am an unhappy woman. I have had neither wine nor liquor; I was only pouring out my heart to the LORD. <sup>16</sup>Do not think your servant a worthless woman; my prayer has been prompted by my deep sorrow and misery.” <sup>17</sup>Eli said, “Go in peace, and may the God of Israel grant you what you have requested.” <sup>18</sup>She replied, “Let your servant find favor in your eyes,” and left. She went to her quarters, ate and drank with her husband, and no longer appeared downhearted. <sup>19</sup>Early the next morning they worshiped before the LORD, and then returned to their home in Ramah. When they returned Elkanah had intercourse with his wife Hannah, and the LORD remembered her.

Hannah Bears a Son. <sup>20</sup>She conceived and, at the end of her pregnancy, bore a son whom she named Samuel. * “Because I asked the LORD for him.” <sup>21</sup>The next time her husband Elkanah was going up with the rest of his household to offer the customary sacrifice to the LORD and to fulfill his vows, <sup>22</sup>Hannah did not go, explaining to her husband, “Once the child is weaned, I will take him to appear before the LORD and leave him there forever.” * <sup>23</sup>Her husband Elkanah answered her: “Do what you think best; wait until you have weaned him. Only may the LORD fulfill his word!” And so she remained at home and nursed her son until she had weaned him.<sup>9</sup>

Hannah Presents Samuel to the Lord. <sup>24</sup>Once he was weaned, she brought him up with her, along with a three-year-old bull, an ephah* of flour, and a skin of wine, and presented him at the house of the LORD in Shiloh. <sup>25</sup>After they had slaughtered the bull, they brought the child to Eli. <sup>26</sup>Then Hannah spoke up: “Excuse me, my lord! As you live, my lord, I am the woman who stood here near you, praying to the LORD. <sup>27</sup>I prayed for this child, and the LORD granted my request. <sup>28</sup>Now I, in turn, give him to the LORD; as long as he lives, he shall be dedicated to the LORD.” Then they worshiped there before the LORD.

CHAPTER 2

“My heart exults in the LORD,
my horn is exalted by my God.
I have swallowed up my enemies;
I rejoice in your victory.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>2</sup>There is no Holy One like the LORD;
there is no Rock like our God.<sup>i</sup>

Do not let arrogance issue from your mouths.*

For an all-knowing God is the LORD, a God who weighs actions.<sup>j</sup>

while the tottering gird on strength.<sup>k</sup>

bread,
while the hungry no longer have to toil.

The barren wife bears seven sons, while the mother of many languishes.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>6</sup>“The LORD puts to death and gives life, casts down to Sheol and brings up again.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>7</sup>The LORD makes poor and makes rich, humbles, and also exalts.

<sup>8</sup>He raises the needy from the dust;
from the ash heap lifts up the poor,
To seat them with nobles and make a glorious throne their heritage.

“For the pillars of the earth are the LORD’s, and he has set the world upon them.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>9</sup>He guards the footsteps of his faithful ones, but the wicked shall perish in the darkness;
for not by strength does one prevail.

<sup>10</sup>The LORD's foes shall be shattered;
the Most High in heaven thunders;
the LORD judges the ends of the earth.
May he give strength to his king, and exalt the horn of his anointed!"<sup>o</sup>

Wickedness of Eli's Sons. <sup>12</sup>Now the sons of Eli were wicked; they had respect neither for the LORD <sup>13</sup>nor for the priests' duties toward the people. When someone offered a sacrifice, the priest's servant would come with a three-pronged fork, while the meat was still boiling,<sup>p</sup> <sup>14</sup>and would thrust it into the basin, kettle, caldron, or pot. Whatever the fork brought up, the priest would take for himself. They treated all the Israelites who came to the sanctuary at Shiloh in this way. <sup>15</sup>In fact, even before the fat was burned, the priest's servant would come and say to the one offering the sacrifice, "Give me some meat to roast for the priest. He will not accept boiled meat from you, only raw meat." <sup>16</sup>And if this one protested, "Let the fat be burned first, then take whatever you wish," he would reply, "No, give it to me now, or else I will take it by force."<sup>q</sup> <sup>17</sup>Thus the young men sinned grievously in the presence of the LORD, treating the offerings to the LORD with disdain.

The Lord Rewards Hannah. <sup>18</sup>Meanwhile the boy Samuel, wearing a linen ephod,* was serving in the presence of the LORD. <sup>19</sup>His mother used to make a little garment for him, which she would bring him each time she went up with her husband to offer the customary sacrifice. <sup>20</sup>And Eli would bless Elkanah and his wife, as they were leaving for home. He would say, "May the LORD repay you with children from this woman for the gift she has made to the LORD!" <sup>21</sup>The LORD favored Hannah so that she conceived and gave birth to three more sons and two daughters, while young Samuel grew up in the service of the LORD.<sup>r</sup>

Eli's Futile Rebuke. <sup>22</sup>When Eli was very old, he kept hearing how his sons were treating all Israel, and that they were behaving promiscuously* with the women serving at the entry of the meeting tent. <sup>23</sup>So he said to them: “Why are you doing such things? I hear from everyone that your behavior is depraved. <sup>24</sup>Stop this, my sons! The report that I hear the LORD’s people spreading is not good. <sup>25</sup>If someone sins against another, anyone can intercede for the sinner with the LORD; but if anyone sins against the LORD, who can intercede* for the sinner?” But they disregarded their father’s warning, since the LORD wanted them dead. <sup>26</sup>Meanwhile, young Samuel was growing in stature and in worth in the estimation of the LORD and the people.<sup>s</sup>

The Fate of Eli's House.* <sup>27</sup>A man of God came to Eli and said to him: “Thus says the LORD: I went so far as to reveal myself to your father’s house when they were in Egypt as slaves to the house of Pharaoh. <sup>28</sup>I chose them out of all the tribes of Israel to be my priests, to go up to my altar, to burn incense, and to wear the ephod* in my presence; and I assigned all the fire offerings of the Israelites to your father’s house.<sup>t</sup> <sup>29</sup>Why do you stare greedily at my sacrifices and at the offerings that I have prescribed? Why do you honor your sons more than you honor me, fattening yourselves with the choicest part of every offering of my people Israel? <sup>30u</sup> This, therefore, is the oracle of the LORD, the God of Israel: I said in the past that your family and your father’s house should minister in my presence forever. But now—oracle of the LORD: Far be it from me! I will honor those who honor me, but those who despise me shall be cursed. <sup>31</sup>Yes, the days are coming when I will break your strength and the strength of your father’s house, so that no one in your family lives to old age. <sup>32</sup>You shall witness, like a disappointed rival, all the benefits enjoyed by Israel, but no member of your household shall ever grow old. <sup>33</sup>I will leave you one man at my altar to wear out his eyes and waste his strength, but the rest of your family shall die by the sword. <sup>34</sup>This is a sign for you—what happens to your two sons, Hophni and Phinehas. Both of them will die on the same day.<sup>v</sup> <sup>35</sup>I will choose a faithful priest who shall do what I have in heart and mind. I will establish a lasting house for him and he shall serve in the presence of my anointed forever. <sup>36</sup>Then whoever is left of your family will grovel before him for a piece of silver or a loaf of bread, saying: Please assign me a priestly function, that I may have a crust of bread to eat.”<sup>w</sup>

CHAPTER 3

Revelation to Samuel. <sup>1</sup>During the time young Samuel was minister to the LORD under Eli, the word of the LORD was scarce and vision infrequent. <sup>2*</sup> One day Eli was asleep in his usual place. His eyes had lately grown so weak that he could not see. <sup>3</sup>The lamp of God was not yet extinguished,* and Samuel was sleeping in the temple of the Lord where the ark of God was.<sup>x</sup> <sup>4</sup>The Lord called to Samuel, who answered, “Here I am.” <sup>5</sup>He ran to Eli and said, “Here I am. You called me.” “I did not call you,” Eli answered. “Go back to sleep.” So he went back to sleep. <sup>6</sup>Again the LORD called Samuel, who rose and went to Eli. “Here I am,” he said. “You called me.” But he answered, “I did not call you, my son. Go back to sleep.”

<sup>7</sup>Samuel did not yet recognize the LORD, since the word of the LORD had not yet been revealed to him. <sup>8</sup>The LORD called Samuel again, for the third time. Getting up and going to Eli, he said, “Here I am. You called me.” Then Eli understood that the LORD was calling the youth. <sup>9</sup>So he said to Samuel, “Go to sleep, and if you are called, reply, ‘Speak, LORD, for your servant is listening.’ ” When Samuel went to sleep in his place, <sup>10</sup>the LORD came and stood there, calling out as before: Samuel, Samuel! Samuel answered, “Speak, for your servant is listening.” <sup>11</sup>The LORD said to Samuel: I am about to do something in Israel that will make the ears of everyone who hears it ring.<sup>y</sup> <sup>12</sup>On that day I will carry out against Eli everything I have said about his house, beginning to end. <sup>13</sup>I announce to him that I am condemning his house once and for all, because of this crime: though he knew his sons were blaspheming God, he did not reprove them.<sup>z</sup> <sup>14</sup>Therefore, I swear to Eli’s house: No sacrifice or offering will ever expiate its crime.* <sup>15</sup>Samuel then slept until morning, when he got up early and opened the doors of the temple of the LORD. He was afraid to tell Eli the vision, <sup>16</sup>but Eli called to him, “Samuel, my son!” He replied, “Here I am.” <sup>17</sup>Then Eli asked, “What did he say to you? Hide nothing from me! May God do thus to you, and more,* if you hide from me a single thing he told you.” <sup>18</sup>So Samuel told him everything, and held nothing back. Eli answered, “It is the LORD. What is pleasing in the LORD’s sight, the LORD will do.”

CHAPTER 4

Defeat of the Israelites.<sup>*1</sup>At that time, the Philistines gathered for an attack on Israel. Israel went out to engage them in battle and camped at Ebenezer, while the Philistines camped at Aphek. <sup>2</sup>The Philistines then drew up in battle formation against Israel. After a fierce struggle Israel was defeated by the Philistines, who killed about four thousand men on the battlefield. <sup>3</sup>When the troops retired to the camp, the elders of Israel said, “Why has the LORD permitted us to be defeated today by the Philistines? Let us fetch the ark of the LORD from Shiloh that it may go into battle among us and save us from the grasp of our enemies.”<sup>c</sup>

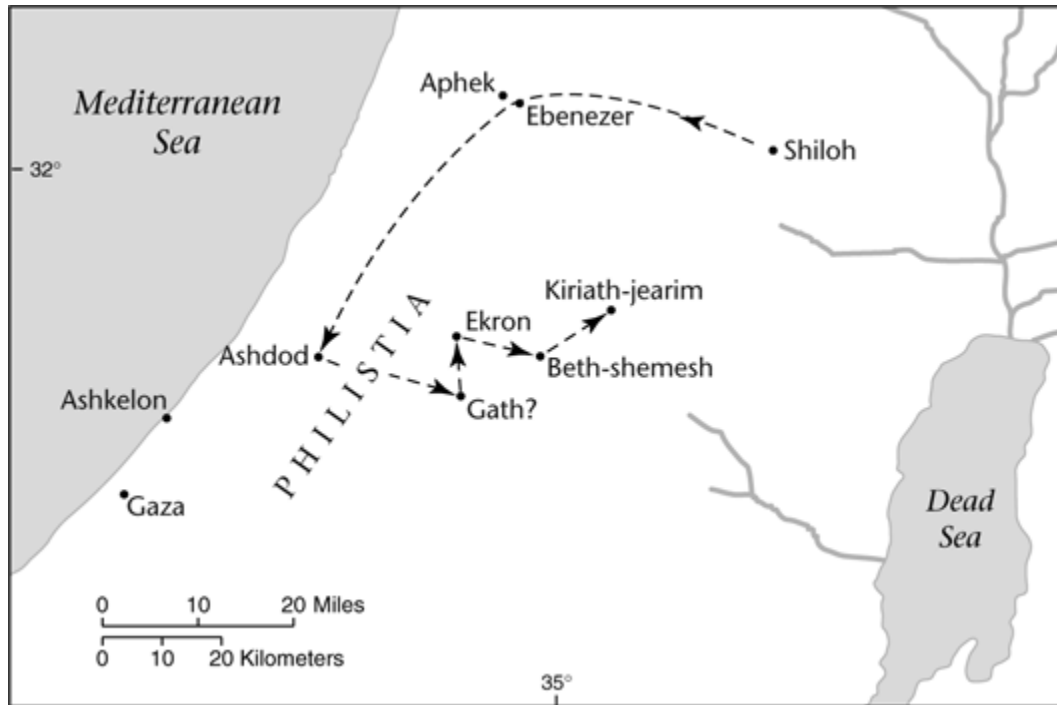

Loss of the Ark. <sup>4</sup>So the people sent to Shiloh and brought from there the ark of the LORD of hosts, who is enthroned upon the cherubim.* The two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, accompanied the ark of God.<sup>d</sup> <sup>5</sup>When the ark of the LORD arrived in the camp, all Israel shouted so loudly that the earth shook. <sup>6</sup>The Philistines, hearing the uproar, asked, “What does this loud shouting in the camp of the Hebrews mean?” On learning that the ark of the LORD had come into the camp, <sup>7</sup>the Philistines were frightened, crying out, “Gods have come to their camp. Woe to us! This has never happened before. <sup>8</sup>Woe to us! Who can deliver us from the power of these mighty gods?”* These are the gods who struck the Egyptians with various plagues in the desert. <sup>9</sup>Take courage and act like soldiers, Philistines; otherwise you will become slaves to the Hebrews, as they were your slaves. Fight like soldiers!” <sup>10</sup>The Philistines fought and Israel was defeated; everyone fled to their own tents.* It was a disastrous defeat; Israel lost thirty thousand foot soldiers. <sup>11</sup>The ark of God was captured, and Eli’s two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, were dead.<sup>e</sup>

The Activity of Samuel

Death of Eli. <sup>12</sup>A Benjaminite fled from the battlefield and reached Shiloh that same day, with his clothes torn and his head covered with dirt.<sup>f</sup> <sup>13</sup>When he arrived, Eli was sitting in his chair beside the gate, watching the road, for he was troubled at heart about the ark of God. The man, however, went into the city to announce his news; then the whole city cried out. <sup>14</sup>When Eli heard the uproar, he wondered why there was such commotion. Just then the man rushed up to inform him. <sup>15</sup>Eli was ninety-eight years old, and his eyes would not focus. So he could not see. <sup>16</sup>The man said to Eli: “I have come from the battlefield; today I fled from there.” He asked, “What happened, my son?” <sup>17</sup>And the messenger answered: “Israel fled from the Philistines; in fact, the troops suffered heavy losses. Your two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead, and the ark of God has been captured.” <sup>18</sup>At this mention of the ark of God, Eli fell backward from his chair into the gateway; he died of a broken neck since he was an old man and heavy. He had judged Israel for forty years.

Wanderings of the Ark

<sup>19</sup>His daughter-in-law, the wife of Phinehas, was pregnant and about to give birth. When she heard the news about the capture of the ark of God and the deaths of her father-in-law and her husband, she crouched down in labor, and gave birth. <sup>20</sup>She was about to die when the women standing around her said to her, “Do not be afraid, you have given birth to a son.” Yet she neither answered nor paid any attention.<sup>g</sup> <sup>21</sup>She named the child Ichabod, saying, “Gone is the glory from Israel,” referring to the capture of the ark of God and to her father-in-law and her husband. <sup>22</sup>She said, “Gone is the glory from Israel,” because the ark of God had been captured.<sup>h</sup>

The Ark in the Temple of Dagon. <sup>1*</sup> <sup>i</sup> The Philistines, having captured the ark of God, transferred it from Ebenezer to Ashdod.<sup>j</sup> <sup>2</sup> They then took the ark of God and brought it into the temple of Dagon, placing it beside Dagon. <sup>3</sup> When the people of Ashdod rose early the next morning, Dagon was lying face down on the ground before the ark of the LORD. So they picked Dagon up and put him back in his place. <sup>4</sup> But early the next morning, when they arose, Dagon lay face down on the ground before the ark of the LORD, his head and hands broken off and lying on the threshold, his trunk alone intact. <sup>5</sup> For this reason, neither the priests of Dagon nor any others who enter the temple of Dagon tread on the threshold of Dagon in Ashdod to this very day.

The Ark Is Carried About. <sup>6</sup> Now the hand of the LORD weighed heavily on the people of Ashdod, ravaging them and afflicting the city and its vicinity with tumors.* <sup>k</sup> <sup>7</sup> On seeing how matters stood, the people of Ashdod decided, “The ark of the God of Israel must not remain with us, for his hand weighs heavily on us and Dagon our god.” <sup>8</sup> So they summoned all the Philistine leaders and inquired of them, “What shall we do with the ark of the God of Israel?” The people of Gath replied, “Let them move the ark of the God of Israel to us.” So they moved the ark of the God of Israel to Gath. <sup>9</sup> But after it had been brought there, the hand of the LORD was against the city, resulting in utter turmoil: the LORD afflicted its inhabitants, young and old, and tumors broke out on them. <sup>10</sup> The ark of God was next sent to Ekron; but as it entered that city, the people there cried out, “Why have they brought the ark of the God of Israel here to kill us and our kindred?” <sup>11</sup> Then they, too, sent a summons to all the Philistine leaders and pleaded: “Send away the ark of the God of Israel. Send it back to its place so it does not kill us and our kindred.” A deadly panic had seized the whole city, since the hand of God lay heavy upon it. <sup>12</sup> Those who escaped death were afflicted with tumors. Thus the outcry from the city went up to the heavens.

CHAPTER 6

The Ark Is Returned. <sup>1</sup>The ark of the LORD had been in the land of the Philistines seven months <sup>2</sup>when they summoned priests and diviners to ask, “What shall we do with the ark of the LORD? Tell us what we should send back with it.” <sup>3</sup>They replied: “If you intend to send back the ark of the God of Israel, you must not send it alone, but must, by all means, make amends to God through a reparation offering.* Then you will be healed, and will learn why God continues to afflict you.” <sup>4</sup>When asked further, “What reparation offering should be our amends to God?” they replied: “Five golden tumors and five golden mice to correspond to the number of Philistine leaders, since the same plague has struck all of you and your leaders. <sup>5</sup>Therefore, make images of the tumors and of the mice that are devastating your land and so give glory to the God of Israel. Perhaps then God will lift his hand from you, your gods, and your land. <sup>6</sup>Why should you become stubborn, the way the Egyptians and Pharaoh were stubborn? Was it not after he had dealt ruthlessly with them that the Israelites were released and departed?<sup>l</sup> <sup>7</sup>So now set to work and make a new cart. Then take two milk cows that have not borne the yoke; hitch them to the cart, but drive their calves indoors away from them.* <sup>m</sup> <sup>8</sup>You shall next take the ark of the LORD and place it on the cart, putting the golden articles that you are offering as reparation for your guilt in a box beside it. Start it on its way, and let it go. <sup>9</sup>Then watch! If it goes up to Beth-shemesh* along the route to the LORD’s territory, then it was the LORD who brought this great calamity upon us; if not, we will know that it was not the LORD’s hand, but a bad turn, that struck us.”

The Ark in Beth-shemesh. <sup>10</sup>They acted upon this advice. Taking two milk cows, they hitched them to the cart but shut up their calves indoors. <sup>11</sup>Then they placed the ark of the LORD on the cart, along with the box containing the golden mice and the images of the tumors. <sup>12</sup>The cows went straight for the route to Beth-shemesh and continued along this road, mooing as they went, turning neither right nor left. The Philistine leaders followed them as far as the border of Beth-shemesh. <sup>13</sup>The people of Beth-shemesh were harvesting the wheat in the valley. They looked up and rejoiced when they saw the ark. <sup>14</sup>The cart came to the field of Joshua the Beth-shemite and stopped there. At a large stone in the field, the wood of the cart was split up and the cows were offered as a burnt offering to the LORD.<sup>n</sup> <sup>15</sup>The Levites, meanwhile, had taken down the ark of God and the box beside it, with the golden articles, and had placed them on the great stone. The people of Beth-shemesh also offered other burnt offerings and sacrifices to the LORD that day.<sup>o</sup> <sup>16</sup>After witnessing this, the five Philistine leaders returned to Ekron the same day.

Penalty for Irreverence. <sup>19</sup>The descendants of Jeconiah did not join in the celebration with the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh when they saw the ark of the LORD, and seventy of them were struck down. The people mourned over this great calamity which the LORD had inflicted upon them. <sup>20</sup>The men of Beth-shemesh asked, “Who can stand in the presence of the LORD, this Holy God? To whom can the ark go so that we are rid of it?” <sup>21</sup>They then sent messengers to the inhabitants of Kiriath-jearim, saying, “The Philistines have returned the ark of the LORD; come down and get it.”

CHAPTER 7

<sup>1</sup>So the inhabitants of Kiriath-jearim came for the ark of the LORD and brought it into the house of Abinadab on the hill, appointing his son Eleazar as guardian of the ark of the LORD.

Samuel the Judge. <sup>2</sup>From the day the ark came to rest in Kiriath-jearim, a long time, twenty years, elapsed, and the whole house of Israel turned to the LORD. <sup>3</sup>Then Samuel addressed the whole house of Israel: “If you would return to the LORD with your whole heart, remove your foreign gods and your Astartes, fix your hearts on the LORD, and serve him alone, then the LORD will deliver you from the hand of the Philistines.”<sup>q</sup> <sup>4</sup>So the Israelites removed their Baals and Astartes,* and served the LORD alone. <sup>5</sup>Samuel then gave orders, “Gather all Israel to Mizpah, that I may pray to the LORD for you.”<sup>r</sup> <sup>6</sup>When they had gathered at Mizpah, they drew water and poured it out* on the ground before the LORD, and they fasted that day, saying, “We have sinned against the LORD.” It was at Mizpah that Samuel began to judge the Israelites.<sup>s</sup>

Rout of the Philistines. <sup>7</sup>When the Philistines heard that the Israelites had gathered at Mizpah, their leaders went up against Israel. Hearing this, the Israelites became afraid of the Philistines<sup>8</sup> and appealed to Samuel, “Do not stop crying out to the LORD our God for us, to save us from the hand of the Philistines.”<sup>t</sup> <sup>9</sup>Samuel therefore took an unweaned lamb and offered it whole as a burnt offering to the LORD.<sup>u</sup> He cried out to the LORD for Israel, and the LORD answered him. <sup>10</sup>While Samuel was sacrificing the burnt offering, the Philistines drew near for battle with Israel. That day, however, the LORD thundered loudly against the Philistines, and threw them into such confusion that they were defeated by Israel.<sup>v</sup> <sup>11</sup>Thereupon the Israelites rushed out from Mizpah and pursued the Philistines, striking them down even beyond Beth-car. <sup>12</sup>Samuel then took a stone and placed it between Mizpah and Jeshanah; he named it Ebenezer,* explaining, “As far as this place the LORD has been our help.” <sup>13</sup>Thus were the Philistines subdued, never again to enter the territory of Israel, for the hand of the LORD was against them as long as Samuel lived.<sup>w</sup> <sup>14</sup>The cities from Ekron to Gath which the Philistines had taken from Israel were restored to them. Israel also freed the territory of these cities from Philistine domination. There was also peace between Israel and the Amorites.*

<sup>15</sup>Samuel judged Israel as long as he lived. <sup>16</sup>He made a yearly circuit, passing through Bethel, Gilgal and Mizpah* and judging Israel at each of these places. <sup>17</sup>Then he used to return to Ramah, for that was his home. There, too, he judged Israel and built an altar to the LORD.<sup>x</sup>

II. Establishment of the Monarchy

CHAPTER 8

<sup>6</sup>Samuel was displeased when they said, “Give us a king to rule us.” But he prayed to the LORD. <sup>7</sup>The LORD said: Listen to whatever the people say. You are not the one they are rejecting. They are rejecting me as their king.<sup>b</sup> <sup>8</sup>They are acting toward you just as they have acted from the day I brought them up from Egypt to this very day, deserting me to serve other gods. <sup>9</sup>Now listen to them; but at the same time, give them a solemn warning and inform them of the rights of the king who will rule them.

The Governance of the King. <sup>10</sup>Samuel delivered the message of the LORD in full to those who were asking him for a king. <sup>11</sup>He told them: “The governance of the king who will rule you will be as follows: He will take your sons and assign them to his chariots and horses, and they will run before his chariot.<sup>c</sup> <sup>12</sup>He will appoint from among them his commanders of thousands and of hundreds. He will make them do his plowing and harvesting and produce his weapons of war and chariotry.<sup>d</sup> <sup>13</sup>He will use your daughters as perfumers, cooks, and bakers. <sup>14</sup>He will take your best fields, vineyards, and olive groves, and give them to his servants.<sup>e</sup> <sup>15</sup>He will tithe your crops and grape harvests to give to his officials* and his servants.<sup>f</sup> <sup>16</sup>He will take your male and female slaves, as well as your best oxen and donkeys, and use them to do his work. <sup>17</sup>He will also tithe your flocks. As for you, you will become his slaves.<sup>g</sup> <sup>18</sup>On that day you will cry out because of the king whom you have chosen, but the LORD will not answer you on that day.”

Persistent Demand. <sup>19</sup>The people, however, refused to listen to Samuel’s warning and said, “No! There must be a king over us.”<sup>h</sup> <sup>20</sup>We too must be like all the nations, with a king to rule us, lead us in warfare, and fight our battles.” <sup>21</sup>Samuel listened to all the concerns of the people and then repeated them to the LORD. <sup>22</sup>The LORD said: Listen to them! Appoint a king to rule over them. Then Samuel said to the people of Israel, “Return, each one of you, to your own city.”*

Saul. <sup>1</sup>There was a powerful man from Benjamin named Kish, who was the son of Abiel, son of Zeror, son of Becorath, son of Aphiah, a Benjaminite.<sup>i</sup> <sup>2</sup>He had a son named Saul, who was a handsome young man. There was no other Israelite more handsome than Saul; he stood head and shoulders above the people.<sup>j</sup>

The Lost Donkeys. <sup>3</sup>Now the donkeys of Saul's father, Kish, had wandered off. Kish said to his son Saul, "Take one of the servants with you and go out and hunt for the donkeys." <sup>4</sup>So they went through the hill country of Ephraim, and through the land of Shalishah. Not finding them there, they continued through the land of Shaalim without success. They also went through the land of Benjamin, but they failed to find the animals. <sup>5</sup>When they came to the land of Zuph, Saul said to the servant who was with him, "Come, let us turn back, lest my father forget about the donkeys and become anxious about us." <sup>6</sup>The servant replied, "Listen! There is a man of God in this city, a man held in high esteem; everything he says comes true. Let us go there now! Perhaps he can advise us about the journey we have undertaken." <sup>7k</sup> But Saul said to his servant, "If we go, what can we offer the man? The food in our bags has run out; we have no present to give the man of God. What else do we have?" <sup>8</sup>Again the servant answered Saul, "I have a quarter shekel of silver.* If I give that to the man of God, he will advise us about the journey." <sup>9l</sup> (In former times in Israel, anyone who went to consult God used to say, "Come, let us go to the seer." For the one who is now called prophet was formerly called seer.) <sup>10</sup>Saul then said to his servant, "You are right! Come on, let us go!" So they headed toward the city where the man of God lived.

Meeting the Young Women. <sup>11m</sup> As they were going up the path to the city, they met some young women coming out to draw water and they asked them, "Is the seer in town?" <sup>12n</sup> The young women answered, "Yes, there—straight ahead. Hurry now; just today he came to the city, because the people have a sacrifice today on the high place."<sup>13</sup> When you enter the city, you may reach him before he goes up to the high place to eat. The people will not eat until he arrives; only after he blesses the sacrifice will the invited guests eat. Go up immediately, for you should find him right now.”

Saul Meets Samuel. <sup>14</sup>So they went up to the city. As they entered it—there was Samuel coming toward them on his way to the high place. <sup>15</sup>The day before Saul’s arrival, the LORD had revealed to Samuel:<sup>o</sup> <sup>16</sup>At this time tomorrow I will send you a man from the land of Benjamin whom you are to anoint as ruler of my people Israel. He shall save my people from the hand of the Philistines. I have looked upon my people; their cry has come to me.<sup>p</sup> <sup>17</sup>When Samuel caught sight of Saul, the LORD assured him: This is the man I told you about; he shall govern my people. <sup>18</sup>Saul met Samuel in the gateway and said, “Please tell me where the seer lives.” <sup>19</sup>Samuel answered Saul: “I am the seer. Go up ahead of me to the high place and eat with me today. In the morning, before letting you go, I will tell you everything on your mind. <sup>20</sup>As for your donkeys that were lost three days ago, do not worry about them, for they have been found. Whom should Israel want if not you and your father’s family?” <sup>21</sup>Saul replied: “Am I not a Benjaminite, from the smallest of the tribes of Israel, * and is not my clan the least among the clans of the tribe of Benjamin? Why say such things to me?”<sup>q</sup>

The Meal. * <sup>22</sup>Samuel then took Saul and his servant and brought them into the room. He seated them at the head of the guests, of whom there were about thirty. <sup>23</sup>He said to the cook, “Bring the portion I gave you and told you to put aside.” <sup>24</sup>So the cook took up the leg and what went with it, and placed it before Saul. Samuel said: “This is a reserved portion that is set before you. Eat, for it was kept for you until this time; I explained that I was inviting some guests.” Thus Saul dined with Samuel that day. <sup>25</sup>When they came down from the high place into the city, a mattress was spread for Saul on the roof, <sup>26</sup>and he slept there.

Saul’s Anointing. At daybreak Samuel called to Saul on the roof, “Get up, and I will send you on your way.” Saul got up, and he and Samuel went outside the city together. <sup>27</sup>As they were approaching the edge of the town, Samuel said to Saul, “Tell the servant to go on ahead of us, but you stay here for a moment, that I may give you a word from God.”

CHAPTER 10

<sup>1</sup>Then, from a flask he had with him, Samuel poured oil on Saul's head and kissed him, saying: "The LORD anoints you ruler over his people Israel. You are the one who will govern the LORD's people and save them from the power of their enemies all around them."<sup>r</sup>

The Signs Foretold. "This will be the sign* for you that the LORD has anointed you ruler over his heritage: <sup>2</sup>When you leave me today, you will meet two men near Rachel's tomb* at Zelzah in the territory of Benjamin. They will say to you, 'The donkeys you went to look for have been found. Now your father is no longer worried about the donkeys, but is anxious about you and says: What shall I do about my son?'"<sup>s</sup> <sup>3</sup>Farther on, when you arrive at the oak of Tabor,* three men will meet you as they go up to God at Bethel; one will be bringing three young goats, another three loaves of bread, and the third a skin of wine. <sup>4</sup>They will greet you and offer you two elevated offerings of bread, which you should accept from them. <sup>5t</sup> After that you will come to Gibeath-elohim, where the Philistine garrison* is located. As you enter that city, you will meet a band of prophets coming down from the high place. They will be preceded by lyres, tambourines, flutes, and harps, and will be in prophetic ecstasy. <sup>6</sup>The spirit of the LORD will rush upon you, and you will join them in their prophetic ecstasy and will become a changed man.<sup>u</sup> <sup>7</sup>When these signs have come to pass, do whatever lies to hand, because God is with you. <sup>8v</sup> Now go down ahead of me to Gilgal, for I shall come down to you, to offer burnt offerings and to sacrifice communion offerings. Wait seven days until I come to you; I shall then tell you what you must do."*

The Signs Come to Pass. <sup>9</sup>As Saul turned to leave Samuel, God changed his heart. That very day all these signs came to pass .... <sup>10</sup> * From there they arrived at Gibeah, where a band of prophets met Saul, and the spirit of God rushed upon him, so that he joined them in their prophetic ecstasy.<sup>w</sup> <sup>11</sup>When all who had known him previously saw him in a prophetic state among the prophets, they said to one another, "What has happened to the son of Kish? Is Saul also among the prophets?"<sup>x</sup> <sup>12</sup>And someone from that district responded, "And who is their father?" Thus the saying arose, "Is Saul also among the prophets?” <sup>13</sup>When he came out of the prophetic ecstasy, he went home.

Silence About the Kingship. <sup>14</sup>Saul’s uncle asked him and his servant, “Where have you been?” Saul replied, “Looking for the donkeys. When we could not find them, we went to Samuel.” <sup>15</sup>Saul’s uncle said, “Tell me, then, what Samuel said to you.” <sup>16</sup>Saul said to his uncle, “He assured us that the donkeys had been found.” But Saul told him nothing about what Samuel had said about the kingship.

Saul Chosen King. <sup>17</sup>Samuel called the people together to the LORD at Mizpah<sup>y</sup> <sup>18</sup>and addressed the Israelites: “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: It was I who brought Israel up from Egypt and delivered you from the power of the Egyptians and from the power of all the kingdoms that oppressed you.<sup>z</sup> <sup>19</sup>But today you have rejected your God, who saves you from all your evils and calamities, by saying, ‘No! You must appoint a king over us.’ Now, therefore, take your stand before the LORD according to your tribes and families.”<sup>a</sup> <sup>20</sup>So Samuel had all the tribes of Israel come forward, and the tribe of Benjamin was chosen.* <sup>21</sup>Next he had the tribe of Benjamin come forward by clans, and the clan of Matri was chosen, and finally Saul, son of Kish, was chosen. But when they went to look for him, he was nowhere to be found. <sup>22b</sup> Again they consulted the LORD, “Is there still someone else to come forward?” The LORD answered: He is hiding among the baggage. <sup>23</sup>They ran to bring him from there; when he took his place among the people, he stood head and shoulders above all the people.<sup>c</sup> <sup>24</sup>Then Samuel addressed all the people, “Do you see the man whom the LORD has chosen? There is no one like him among all the people!” Then all the people shouted out, “Long live the king!”<sup>d</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Samuel next explained to the people the rules of the monarchy,* wrote them in a book, and placed them before the presence of the LORD. Samuel then sent the people back to their own homes.<sup>e</sup> <sup>26</sup>Saul also went home to Gibeah, accompanied by warriors whose hearts the LORD had touched. <sup>27</sup>But some worthless people said, “How can this fellow save us?” They despised him and brought him no tribute.<sup>* f</sup>

CHAPTER 11

Defeat of the Ammonites. <sup>1*</sup> About a month later, Nahash the Ammonite went up and besieged Jabesh-gilead. All the people of Jabesh begged Nahash, “Make a treaty with us, and we will serve you.”<sup>g</sup> <sup>2</sup>But Nahash the Ammonite replied, “This is my condition for making a treaty with you: I will gouge out the right eye of every man,* and thus bring shame on all Israel.” <sup>3</sup>The elders of Jabesh said to him: “Give us seven days to send messengers throughout the territory of Israel. If there is no one to save us, we will surrender to you.” <sup>4</sup>When the messengers arrived at Gibeah of Saul and reported the news in the people’s hearing, they all wept aloud. <sup>5</sup>Just then Saul came in from the field, behind his oxen. “Why are the people weeping?” he asked. They repeated the message of the inhabitants of Jabesh for him. <sup>6</sup>As he listened to this report, the spirit of God rushed upon him and he became very angry.<sup>h</sup> <sup>7</sup>Taking a yoke of oxen, he cut them into pieces and sent them throughout the territory of Israel* by messengers saying, “If anyone does not come out to follow Saul and Samuel, the same thing will be done to his oxen!” The dread of the LORD came upon the people and they went forth as one.<sup>i</sup> <sup>8</sup>When Saul reviewed them in Bezek,* there were three hundred thousand Israelites and seventy thousand Judahites.

<sup>9</sup>To the messengers who had come he said, “Tell the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead that tomorrow, when the sun grows hot, they will be saved.” The messengers went and reported this to the inhabitants of Jabesh, and they rejoiced. <sup>10</sup>The men of Jabesh said to Nahash, “Tomorrow we will surrender to you, and you may do with us whatever you want.” <sup>11</sup>The next day, Saul arranged his troops in three companies and invaded the camp during the dawn watch. They slaughtered Ammonites until the day had gotten hot; by then the survivors were so scattered that no two of them were left together.

Saul Accepted as King. <sup>12*</sup> The people then said to Samuel: “Who questioned whether Saul should rule over us? Hand them over and we will put them to death.”<sup>j</sup> <sup>13</sup>But Saul objected, “No one will be put to death this day, for today the LORD has rescued Israel.”<sup>k</sup> <sup>14</sup>Samuel said to the people, “Come, let us go to Gilgal to renew the kingship there.” <sup>15</sup>So all the people went to Gilgal, and there they made Saul king in the LORD's presence. They also sacrificed communion offerings there before the LORD, and Saul and all the Israelites rejoiced greatly.

CHAPTER 12*

Samuel's Integrity. <sup>1*</sup> Samuel addressed all Israel: "I have granted your request in every respect," he said. "I have set a king over you<sup>l</sup> <sup>2</sup>and now the king will lead you. As for me, I am old and gray, and my sons are among you. I was your leader from my youth to the present day. <sup>3</sup>Here I stand! Answer me in the presence of the LORD and the LORD's anointed. Whose ox have I taken? Whose donkey have I taken? Whom have I cheated? Whom have I wronged? From whom have I accepted a bribe and shut my eyes because of it? I will make restitution to you."<sup>m</sup> <sup>4</sup>They replied, "You have neither cheated us, nor oppressed us, nor accepted anything from anyone."<sup>5</sup> So he said to them, "The LORD is witness against you this day, and the LORD's anointed is witness, that you have found nothing in my possession." "The LORD is witness," they said.

Samuel Admonishes the People. <sup>6</sup>Samuel continued: "The LORD is witness, who appointed Moses and Aaron and brought your ancestors up from the land of Egypt."<sup>n</sup> <sup>7</sup>Now take your stand, that I may judge you in the presence of the LORD according to all the gracious acts that the LORD has done for you and your ancestors. <sup>8</sup>When Jacob and his sons went to Egypt and the Egyptians oppressed them, your ancestors cried out to the LORD. The LORD then sent Moses and Aaron to bring them out of Egypt and settled them in this place.<sup>o</sup> <sup>9</sup>But they forgot the LORD their God; and so the LORD sold them into the power of Sisera, the captain of the army of Hazor, the power of the Philistines, and the power of the king of Moab, who made war against them.<sup>p</sup> <sup>10</sup>They cried out to the LORD and said, 'We have sinned because we abandoned the LORD and served the Baals and Astartes. Now deliver us from the power of our enemies, and we will serve you.'<sup>q</sup> <sup>11</sup>The LORD sent Jerubbaal, Barak, Jephthah, and Samuel; he delivered you from the power of your enemies on every side, so that you could live in security.<sup>r</sup> <sup>12</sup>Yet, when you saw Nahash, king of the Ammonites, advancing against you, you said to me, 'No! A king must rule us,' even though the LORD your God is your king.<sup>s</sup>

you listen to the voice of the LORD and do not rebel against the LORD's command, if both you and the king, who rules over you, follow the LORD your God— well and good. <sup>15</sup>But if you do not listen to the voice of the LORD and if you rebel against the LORD's command, the hand of the LORD will be against you and your king. <sup>16</sup>Now then, stand ready to witness the great marvel the LORD is about to accomplish before your eyes. <sup>17</sup>Are we not in the harvest time for wheat? * Yet I will call upon the LORD, and he will send thunder and rain. Thus you will see and understand how great an evil it is in the eyes of the LORD that you have asked for a king.”<sup>u</sup> <sup>18</sup>Samuel called upon the LORD, and the LORD sent thunder and rain that day.

Assistance Promised. Then all the people feared the LORD and Samuel. <sup>19</sup>They said to Samuel, “Pray to the LORD your God for us, your servants, that we may not die for having added to all our other sins the evil of asking for a king.” <sup>20</sup> “Do not fear,” Samuel answered them. “You have indeed committed all this evil! Yet do not turn from the LORD, but serve him with your whole heart. <sup>21</sup>Do not turn aside to gods who are nothing, * who cannot act and deliver. They are nothing.”<sup>v</sup> <sup>22</sup>For the sake of his own great name * the LORD will not abandon his people, since the LORD has decided to make you his people.”<sup>w</sup> <sup>23</sup>As for me, far be it from me to sin against the LORD by ceasing to pray for you and to teach you the good and right way.”<sup>x</sup> <sup>24</sup>But you must fear the LORD and serve him faithfully with all your heart, for you have seen the great things the LORD has done among you. <sup>25</sup>If instead you continue to do evil, both you and your king shall be swept away.”

III. Saul and David

CHAPTER 13

See RG 204–06

<sup>1</sup>[Saul was ... years old when he became king and he reigned ... -two years over Israel.]*

Saul Offers Sacrifice. <sup>2</sup>Saul chose three thousand of Israel, of whom two thousand remained with him in Michmash and in the hill country of Bethel, and one thousand were with Jonathan in Gibeah of Benjamin. He sent the rest of the army back to their tents. <sup>3</sup>Now Jonathan struck the Philistine garrison* in Gibeah, and the Philistines got word of it. Then Saul sounded the horn throughout the land, saying, “Let the Hebrews hear!”<sup>y</sup> <sup>4</sup>Then all Israel heard the report, “Saul has struck the garrison of the Philistines! Israel has become odious to the Philistines!” Then the army was called up to Saul in Gilgal. <sup>5</sup>The Philistines also assembled for battle against Israel, with thirty thousand chariots,* six thousand horsemen, and foot soldiers as numerous as the sand on the seashore.<sup>z</sup> They came up and encamped in Michmash, east of Beth-aven.<sup>a</sup> <sup>6</sup>When the soldiers saw they were in danger because the army was hardpressed, they hid themselves in caves, thickets, rocks, caverns, and cisterns. <sup>7</sup>Other Hebrews crossed the Jordan into the land of Gad and Gilead. Saul, however, held out in Gilgal, all his army trembling in fear behind him.* <sup>8</sup>He waited seven days, until the appointed time Samuel had set, but Samuel did not come, and the army deserted Saul.<sup>b</sup> <sup>9</sup>He then said, “Bring me the burnt offering and communion offerings!” Then he sacrificed the burnt offering.

King Saul Reproved. <sup>10</sup>As he finished sacrificing the burnt offering, there came Samuel! So Saul went out toward him in order to greet him. <sup>11</sup>Samuel asked him, “What have you done?” Saul explained: “When I saw that the army was deserting me and you did not come on the appointed day, and that the Philistines were assembling at Michmash, <sup>12</sup>I said to myself, ‘Now the Philistines will come down against me at Gilgal, and I have not yet sought the LORD’s blessing.’ So I thought I should sacrifice the burnt offering.” <sup>13</sup>Samuel replied to Saul: “You have acted foolishly! Had you kept the command the LORD your God gave you, the LORD would now establish your kingship in Israel forever; <sup>14</sup>but now your kingship shall not endure. The LORD has sought out a man after his own heart* to appoint as ruler over his people because you did not observe what the LORD commanded you.”<sup>c</sup>

Philistine Invasion. <sup>15</sup>Then Samuel set out from Gilgal and went his own way; but what was left of the army went up after Saul to meet the soldiers, going from Gilgal to Gibeah of Benjamin. Saul then counted the soldiers he had with him, about six hundred.<sup>d</sup> <sup>16</sup>Saul, his son Jonathan, and the soldiers they had with them were now occupying Geba of Benjamin, and the Philistines were encamped at Michmash. <sup>17</sup>Meanwhile, raiders left the camp of the Philistines in three bands.<sup>e</sup> One band took the Ophrah road toward the district of Shual; <sup>18</sup>another turned in the direction of Beth-horon; and the third took the road for Geba that overlooks the Valley of the Hyenas toward the desert.

Jonathan’s Exploit. <sup>23</sup>An outpost of the Philistines had pushed forward to the pass of Michmash.<sup>g</sup>

CHAPTER 14

<sup>1</sup>One day Jonathan, son of Saul, said to his armor-bearer, “Come, let us go over to the Philistine outpost on the other side.” But he did not inform his father—<sup>h</sup> <sup>2</sup>Saul was sitting under the pomegranate tree in Migron on the outskirts of Gibeah; with him were about six hundred men. <sup>3</sup>Ahijah, son of Ahitub, brother of Ichabod, the son of Phinehas, son of Eli, the priest of the LORD at Shiloh, was wearing the ephod—nor did the soldiers know that Jonathan had gone.<sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>Flanking the ravine through which Jonathan intended to cross to the Philistine outpost were rocky crags on each side, one named Bozez and the other Seneh. <sup>5</sup>One crag was to the north, toward Michmash; the other to the south, toward Geba. <sup>6</sup>Jonathan said to his armor-bearer: “Come, let us go over to that outpost of the uncircumcised. Perhaps the LORD will help us, because it is no more difficult for the LORD to grant victory by means of a few than it is by means of many.”<sup>j</sup> <sup>7</sup>His armor-bearer replied, “Do whatever you think best; I am with you in whatever you decide.” <sup>8</sup>Jonathan continued: “When we cross over to those men, we will be visible to them. <sup>9</sup>If they say to us, ‘Stay there until we can come to you,’ we will stop where we are; we will not go up to them. <sup>10</sup>But if they say, ‘Come up to us,’ we will go up, because the LORD has delivered them into our hand. That will be our sign.”<sup>* k</sup> <sup>11</sup>When the two of them came into the view of the Philistine outpost, the Philistines remarked, “Look, some Hebrews* are coming out of the holes where they have been hiding.” <sup>12</sup>The men of the outpost called to Jonathan and his armor-bearer. “Come up here,” they said, “and we will teach you a lesson.” So Jonathan said to his armor-bearer, “Climb up after me, for the LORD has delivered them into the hand of Israel.” <sup>13</sup>Jonathan clambered up with his armor-bearer behind him. As the Philistines fell before Jonathan, his armor-bearer, who followed him, would finish them off. <sup>14</sup>In this first attack Jonathan and his armor-bearer killed about twenty men within half a furlong. <sup>15</sup>Then terror spread through the camp and the countryside; all the soldiers in the outpost and in the raiding parties shuddered in terror. The earth shook with an awesome shuddering.<sup>* l</sup>

Rout of the Philistines. <sup>16</sup>Saul's sentinels in Gibeah of Benjamin saw that the enemy camp had scattered and were running in all directions. <sup>17</sup>Saul said to those around him, "Count the troops and find out if any of us are missing." When they had taken the count, they found Jonathan and his armorbearer missing. <sup>18</sup>Saul then said to Ahijah, "Bring the ephod here." (Ahijah was wearing the ephod before the Israelites at that time.) <sup>19</sup>While Saul was speaking to the priest, the uproar in the Philistine camp kept increasing. So he said to the priest, "Withdraw your hand." <sup>20</sup>And Saul and all his men rallied and rushed into the fight, where the Philistines, wholly confused, were thrusting swords at one another. <sup>m</sup> <sup>21</sup>The Hebrews who had previously sided with the Philistines and had gone up with them to their camp turned to join the Israelites under Saul and Jonathan. <sup>n</sup> <sup>22</sup>Likewise, all the Israelites who were hiding in the hill country of Ephraim, hearing that the Philistines were fleeing, kept after them in the battle. <sup>o</sup> <sup>23*</sup> Thus the LORD saved Israel that day.

Saul's Oath. The battle continued past Beth-aven. <sup>24</sup>Even though the Israelites were exhausted that day, Saul laid an oath on them, saying, "Cursed be the one who takes food before evening, before I am able to avenge myself on my enemies." So none of the people tasted food. <sup>25</sup>Now there was a honeycomb lying on the ground, <sup>26</sup>and when the soldiers came to the comb the honey was flowing; yet no one raised a hand from it to his mouth, because the people feared the oath.

Violation of the Oath. <sup>27</sup>Jonathan, who had not heard that his father had put the people under oath, thrust out the end of the staff he was holding and dipped it into the honeycomb. Then he raised it to his mouth and his eyes brightened. <sup>28</sup>At this, one of the soldiers spoke up: "Your father put the people under a strict oath, saying, 'Cursed be the one who takes food today!' As a result the people are weakened." <sup>29p</sup> Jonathan replied: "My father brings trouble to the land. Look how bright my eyes are because I had this little taste of honey. <sup>30</sup>What is more, if the army had eaten freely of the enemy's plunder when they came across it today, surely the slaughter of the Philistines would have been the greater by now!"

Consuming the Blood. <sup>31</sup>After the Philistines were routed that day from Michmash to Aijalon, the people were completely exhausted. <sup>32</sup>So the army pounced upon the plunder and took sheep, oxen, and calves, slaughtering them on the ground and eating the meat with the blood in it.<sup>q</sup> <sup>33</sup>Informed that the army was sinning against the LORD by eating the meat with blood in it, Saul said: “You have broken faith. Roll a large stone here for me.” <sup>34</sup>He continued: “Mingle with the people and tell each of them, ‘Bring an ox or sheep to me. Slaughter them here and then eat. But you must not sin against the LORD by eating meat with blood in it.’ ” So that night they all brought whatever oxen they had seized, and they slaughtered them there; <sup>35</sup>and Saul built an altar to the LORD— this was the first time he built an altar to the LORD.<sup>r</sup>

Jonathan in Danger of Death. <sup>36</sup>Then Saul said, “Let us go down in pursuit of the Philistines by night, to plunder them until daybreak and leave no one alive.” They replied, “Do what you think best.” But the priest said, “Let us consult God.” <sup>37</sup>So Saul inquired of God: “Shall I go down in pursuit of the Philistines? Will you deliver them into the hand of Israel?” But he received no answer on this occasion.<sup>s</sup> <sup>38</sup>“All officers of the army,” Saul announced, “come forward. Find out how this sin was committed today. <sup>39</sup>As the LORD lives who has given victory to Israel, even if my son Jonathan has committed it, he shall surely die!” But none of the people answered him. <sup>40</sup>So he said to all Israel, “Stand on one side, and my son Jonathan and I will stand on the other.” The people responded, “Do what you think best.”<sup>t</sup> <sup>41</sup>And Saul said to the LORD, the God of Israel: “Why did you not answer your servant this time? If the blame for this resides in me or my son Jonathan, LORD, God of Israel, respond with Urim; but if this guilt is in your people Israel, respond with Thummim.”* Jonathan and Saul were designated, and the people went free.<sup>u</sup> <sup>42</sup>Saul then said, “Cast lots between me and my son Jonathan.” And Jonathan was designated. <sup>43</sup>Saul said to Jonathan, “Tell me what you have done.” Jonathan replied, “I only tasted a little honey from the end of the staff I was holding. Am I to die for this?” <sup>44</sup>Saul declared, “May God do thus to me, and more, if you do not indeed die, Jonathan!”<sup>v</sup>

Rescue of Jonathan. <sup>45</sup>But the soldiers protested to Saul: “Is Jonathan to die, the man who won this great victory for Israel? This must not be! As the LORD lives, not a single hair of his head shall fall to the ground, for God was with him in what he did today!” Thus the soldiers rescued* Jonathan and he did not die.<sup>w</sup> <sup>46</sup>After that Saul gave up the pursuit of the Philistines, who returned to their own territory.

Saul's Victories. <sup>47</sup>After taking possession of the kingship over Israel, Saul waged war on its enemies all around—Moab, the Ammonites, Edom, the kings of Zobah, and the Philistines. Wherever he turned, he was successful<sup>x</sup> <sup>48</sup>and fought bravely. He defeated Amalek and delivered Israel from the hand of those who were plundering them.<sup>y</sup>

Saul's Family. <sup>49</sup>The sons of Saul were Jonathan, Ishvi, and Malchishua; the name of his firstborn daughter was Merob; the name of the younger was Michal.<sup>z</sup> <sup>50</sup>The name of Saul's wife was Ahinoam, daughter of Ahimaaz. The name of his general was Abner, son of Ner, Saul's uncle; <sup>51</sup>Kish, Saul's father, and Ner, Abner's father, were sons of Abiel.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>52</sup>There was heavy fighting with the Philistines during Saul's lifetime. Whenever Saul saw any strong or brave man, he took him into his service.

CHAPTER 15*

See RG 204–06

Disobedience of Saul.<sup>1</sup>Samuel said to Saul: “It was I the LORD sent to anoint you king over his people Israel. Now, therefore, listen to the message of the LORD.”<sup>b</sup> <sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts: I will punish what Amalek did to the Israelites when he barred their way as they came up from Egypt.<sup>c</sup> <sup>3</sup>Go, now, attack Amalek, and put under the ban* everything he has. Do not spare him; kill men and women, children and infants, oxen and sheep, camels and donkeys.”<sup>d</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Saul alerted the army, and at Telaim reviewed two hundred thousand foot soldiers and ten thousand men of Judah.* <sup>5</sup>Saul went to the city of Amalek and set up an ambush in the wadi. <sup>6e</sup> He warned the Kenites: “Leave Amalek, turn aside and come down so I will not have to destroy you with them, for you were loyal to the Israelites when they came up from Egypt.”* After the Kenites left, <sup>7</sup>Saul routed Amalek from Havilah to the approaches of Shur, on the frontier of Egypt.<sup>f</sup> <sup>8</sup>He took Agag, king of Amalek, alive, but the rest of the people he destroyed by the sword, putting them under the ban. <sup>9</sup>He and his troops spared Agag and the best of the fat sheep and oxen, and the lambs. They refused to put under the ban anything that was worthwhile, destroying only what was worthless and of no account.

Samuel Rebukes Saul. <sup>10</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to Samuel: <sup>11</sup>I regret having made Saul king, for he has turned from me and has not kept my command. At this Samuel grew angry and cried out to the LORD all night.<sup>g</sup> <sup>12</sup>Early in the morning he went to meet Saul, but was informed that Saul had gone to Carmel, where he set up a monument in his own honor, and that on his return he had gone down to Gilgal. <sup>13</sup>When Samuel came to him, Saul greeted him: “The LORD bless you! I have kept the command of the LORD.” <sup>14</sup>But Samuel asked, “What, then, is this bleating of sheep that comes to my ears, the lowing of oxen that I hear?” <sup>15</sup>Saul replied: “They were brought from Amalek. The people spared the best sheep and oxen to sacrifice to the LORD, your God; but the rest we destroyed, putting them under the ban.” <sup>16</sup>Samuel said to Saul: “Stop! Let me tell you what the LORD said to me last night.” “Speak!” he replied. <sup>17</sup>Samuel then said: “Though little in your own eyes, are you not chief of the tribes of Israel? The LORD anointed you king of Israel<sup>h 18</sup> and sent you on a mission, saying: Go and put the sinful Amalekites under a ban of destruction. Fight against them until you have exterminated them.<sup>i 19</sup> Why then have you disobeyed the LORD? You have pounced on the spoil, thus doing what was evil in the LORD's sight."<sup>j 20</sup> Saul explained to Samuel: "I did indeed obey the LORD and fulfill the mission on which the LORD sent me. I have brought back Agag, the king of Amalek, and, carrying out the ban, I have destroyed the Amalekites.<sup>21</sup> But from the spoil the army took sheep and oxen, the best of what had been banned, to sacrifice to the LORD your God in Gilgal."<sup>k 22l</sup> But Samuel said:

"Does the LORD delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices as much as in obedience to the LORD's command?

Obedience is better than sacrifice, to listen, better than the fat of rams.*

and arrogance, the crime of idolatry.
Because you have rejected the word of the LORD,
the LORD in turn has rejected you as king."<sup>m</sup>

Rejection of Saul. <sup>24</sup>Saul admitted to Samuel: "I have sinned, for I have transgressed the command of the LORD and your instructions. I feared the people and obeyed them."<sup>n 25</sup> Now forgive my sin, and return with me, that I may worship the LORD."<sup>26</sup> But Samuel said to Saul, "I will not return with you, because you rejected the word of the LORD and the LORD has rejected you as king of Israel."<sup>o 27</sup> As Samuel turned to go, Saul seized a loose end of his garment, and it tore off.<sup>p 28</sup> So Samuel said to him: "The LORD has torn the kingdom of Israel from you this day, and has given it to a neighbor of yours, who is better than you."<sup>q 29</sup> The Glory of Israel neither deceives nor repents,* for he is not a mortal who repents."<sup>r 30</sup> But Saul answered: "I have sinned, yet honor me now before the elders of my people and before Israel. Return with me that I may worship the LORD your God."<sup>31</sup> And so Samuel returned with him, and Saul worshiped the LORD.

Samuel Executes Agag. <sup>32</sup>Afterward Samuel commanded, “Bring Agag, king of Amalek, to me.” Agag came to him struggling and saying, “So it is bitter death!” <sup>33</sup>And Samuel said,

“As your sword has made women childless,
so shall your mother be childless
among women.”

Then he cut Agag to pieces before the LORD in Gilgal.<sup>s</sup> <sup>34</sup>Samuel departed for Ramah, while Saul went up to his home in Gibeah of Saul. <sup>35</sup>Never again, as long as he lived, did Samuel see Saul. Yet he grieved over Saul, because the LORD repented that he had made him king of Israel.<sup>t</sup>

CHAPTER 16

Samuel Is Sent to Bethlehem. <sup>1u</sup> The LORD said to Samuel: How long will you grieve for Saul, whom I have rejected as king of Israel? Fill your horn with oil, and be on your way. I am sending you to Jesse of Bethlehem, for from among his sons I have decided on a king.* <sup>2</sup>But Samuel replied: “How can I go? Saul will hear of it and kill me.” To this the LORD answered: Take a heifer along and say, “I have come to sacrifice to the LORD.” <sup>3</sup>Invite Jesse to the sacrifice, and I myself will tell you what to do; you are to anoint for me the one I point out to you.<sup>v</sup>

Samuel Anoints David. <sup>4</sup>Samuel did as the LORD had commanded him. When he entered Bethlehem, the elders of the city came trembling to meet him and asked, “Is your visit peaceful, O seer?” <sup>5</sup>He replied: “Yes! I have come to sacrifice to the LORD. So purify yourselves and celebrate with me today.” He also had Jesse and his sons purify themselves and invited them to the sacrifice.<sup>w</sup> <sup>6</sup>As they came, he looked at Eliab and thought, “Surely the anointed is here before the LORD.” <sup>7</sup>But the LORD said to Samuel: Do not judge from his appearance or from his lofty stature, because I have rejected him. God does not see as a mortal, who sees the appearance. The LORD looks into the heart.<sup>x</sup> <sup>8y</sup> Then Jesse called Abinadab and presented him before Samuel, who said, “The LORD has not chosen him.” <sup>9</sup>Next Jesse presented Shammah, but Samuel said, “The LORD has not chosen this one either.” <sup>10</sup>In the same way Jesse presented seven sons before Samuel, but Samuel said to Jesse, “The LORD has not chosen any one of these.” <sup>11</sup>Then Samuel asked Jesse, “Are these all the sons you have?” Jesse replied, “There is still the youngest, but he is tending the sheep.” Samuel said to Jesse, “Send for him; we will not sit down to eat until he arrives here.”<sup>z</sup> <sup>12</sup>Jesse had the young man brought to them. He was ruddy, a youth with beautiful eyes, and good looking. The LORD said: There—anoint him, for this is the one!<sup>a</sup> <sup>13</sup>Then Samuel, with the horn of oil in hand, anointed him in the midst of his brothers, and from that day on, the spirit of the LORD rushed upon David. Then Samuel set out for Ramah.<sup>b</sup> servants of Saul said to him: “Look! An evil spirit from God is tormenting you. <sup>16</sup>If your lordship will order it, we, your servants here attending to you, will look for a man skilled in playing the harp. When the evil spirit from God comes upon you, he will play and you will feel better.” <sup>17</sup>Saul then told his servants, “Find me a good harpist and bring him to me.” <sup>18d</sup> One of the servants spoke up: “I have observed that a son of Jesse of Bethlehem is a skillful harpist. He is also a brave warrior, an able speaker, and a handsome young man. The LORD is certainly with him.”

David Made Armor-Bearer. <sup>19</sup>Accordingly, Saul dispatched messengers to ask Jesse to send him his son David, who was with the flock. <sup>20</sup>Then Jesse took five loaves of bread, a skin of wine, and a young goat, and sent them to Saul with his son David.<sup>e</sup> <sup>21</sup>Thus David came to Saul and entered his service. Saul became very fond of him and made him his armor-bearer.<sup>f</sup> <sup>22</sup>Saul sent Jesse the message, “Let David stay in my service, for he meets with my approval.” <sup>23</sup>Whenever the spirit from God came upon Saul, David would take the harp and play, and Saul would be relieved and feel better, for the evil spirit would leave him.

CHAPTER 17

The Challenge of Goliath. <sup>1</sup>The Philistines rallied their forces for battle at Socoh in Judah and camped between Socoh and Azekah at Ephesdammim. <sup>2</sup>Saul and the Israelites rallied and camped in the valley of the Elah, drawing up their battle line to meet the Philistines. <sup>3</sup>The Philistines were stationed on one hill and the Israelites on an opposite hill, with a valley between them.

<sup>4</sup>A champion named Goliath of Gath came out from the Philistine camp; he was six cubits and a span* tall. <sup>5</sup>He had a bronze helmet on his head and wore a bronze breastplate of scale armor weighing five thousand shekels, <sup>6</sup>bronze greaves, and had a bronze scimitar slung from his shoulders. <sup>7</sup>The shaft of his javelin was like a weaver's beam, and its iron head weighed six hundred shekels.* His shield-bearer went ahead of him.<sup>g</sup> <sup>8</sup>He stood and shouted to the ranks of Israel: "Why come out in battle formation? I am a Philistine, and you are Saul's servants. Choose one of your men, and have him come down to me. <sup>9</sup>If he beats me in combat and kills me, we will be your vassals; but if I beat him and kill him, you shall be our vassals and serve us." <sup>10</sup>The Philistine continued: "I defy the ranks of Israel today. Give me a man and let us fight together." <sup>11</sup>When Saul and all Israel heard this challenge of the Philistine, they were stunned and terrified.

David Comes to the Camp.* <sup>12</sup>David was the son of an Ephrathite named Jesse from Bethlehem in Judah who had eight sons. In the days of Saul Jesse was old and well on in years.<sup>h</sup> <sup>13</sup>The three oldest sons of Jesse had followed Saul to war; the names of these three sons who had gone off to war were Eliab the firstborn; Abinadab the second; and Shammah the third. <sup>14</sup>David was the youngest. While the three oldest had joined Saul, <sup>15</sup>David would come and go from Saul's presence to tend his father's sheep at Bethlehem.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Now Jesse said to his son David: "Take this ephah of roasted grain and these ten loaves for your brothers, and bring them quickly to your brothers in the camp. <sup>18</sup>Also take these ten cheeses for the field officer. Greet your brothers and bring home some token from them. <sup>19</sup>Saul and your brothers, together with all Israel, are at war with the Philistines in the valley of the Elah.” <sup>20</sup>Early the next morning, having left the flock with a shepherd, David packed up and set out, as Jesse had commanded him. He reached the barricade of the camp just as the army, on their way to the battleground, were shouting their battle cry.<sup>j</sup> <sup>21</sup>The Israelites and the Philistines drew up opposite each other in battle array. <sup>22</sup>David entrusted what he had brought to the keeper of the baggage and hastened to the battle line, where he greeted his brothers.<sup>k</sup> <sup>23</sup>While he was talking with them, the Philistine champion, by name Goliath of Gath, came up from the ranks of the Philistines and spoke as before, and David listened. <sup>24</sup>When the Israelites saw the man, they all retreated before him, terrified. <sup>25</sup>The Israelites had been saying: “Do you see this man coming up? He comes up to insult Israel. The king will make whoever kills him a very wealthy man. He will give his daughter to him and declare his father’s family exempt from taxes in Israel.”<sup>l</sup> <sup>26</sup>David now said to the men standing near him: “How will the man who kills this Philistine and frees Israel from disgrace be rewarded? Who is this uncircumcised Philistine that he should insult the armies of the living God?”<sup>m</sup> <sup>27</sup>They repeated the same words to him and said, “That is how the man who kills him will be rewarded.” <sup>28</sup>When Eliab, his oldest brother, heard him speaking with the men, he grew angry with David and said: “Why did you come down? With whom have you left those sheep in the wilderness? I know your arrogance and dishonest heart. You came down to enjoy the battle!”<sup>n</sup> <sup>29</sup>David protested, “What have I done now? I was only talking.” <sup>30</sup>He turned from him to another and asked the same question; and everyone gave him the same answer as before. <sup>31</sup>The words that David had spoken were overheard and reported to Saul, who sent for him.

David Challenges Goliath. <sup>32</sup>Then David spoke to Saul: “My lord should not lose heart. Let your servant go and fight this Philistine.” <sup>33</sup>But Saul answered David, “You cannot go up against this Philistine and fight with him, for you are only a youth, while he has been a warrior from his youth.” <sup>34o</sup> Then David told Saul: “Your servant used to tend his father’s sheep, and whenever a lion or bear came to carry off a sheep from the flock, <sup>35</sup>I would chase after it, attack it, and snatch the prey from its mouth. If it attacked me, I would seize it by the throat, strike it, and kill it. <sup>36</sup>Your servant has killed both a lion and a bear. This uncircumcised Philistine will be as one of them, because he has insulted the armies of the living God.”

Preparation for the Encounter. <sup>38</sup>Then Saul dressed David in his own tunic, putting a bronze helmet on his head and arming him with a coat of mail. <sup>39</sup>David also fastened Saul’s sword over the tunic. He walked with difficulty, however, since he had never worn armor before. He said to Saul, “I cannot go in these, because I am not used to them.” So he took them off. <sup>40</sup>Then, staff in hand, David selected five smooth stones from the wadi and put them in the pocket of his shepherd’s bag. With his sling in hand, he approached the Philistine.

David’s Victory. <sup>41*</sup> With his shield-bearer marching before him, the Philistine advanced closer and closer to David. <sup>42</sup>When he sized David up and saw that he was youthful, ruddy, and handsome in appearance, he began to deride him. <sup>43</sup>He said to David, “Am I a dog that you come against me with a staff?” Then the Philistine cursed David by his gods <sup>44</sup>and said to him, “Come here to me, and I will feed your flesh to the birds of the air and the beasts of the field.”<sup>q</sup> <sup>45</sup>David answered him: “You come against me with sword and spear and scimitar, but I come against you in the name of the LORD of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel whom you have insulted. <sup>46</sup>Today the LORD shall deliver you into my hand; I will strike you down and cut off your head. This very day I will feed your dead body and the dead bodies of the Philistine army to the birds of the air and the beasts of the field; thus the whole land shall learn that Israel has a God. <sup>47</sup>All this multitude, too, shall learn that it is not by sword or spear that the LORD saves. For the battle belongs to the LORD, who shall deliver you into our hands.”<sup>r</sup>

without a sword in his hand.<sup>s</sup> <sup>51</sup>Then David ran and stood over him; with the Philistine's own sword which he drew from its sheath he killed him, and cut off his head.<sup>t</sup>

Flight of the Philistines. When the Philistines saw that their hero was dead, they fled. <sup>52</sup>Then the men of Israel and Judah sprang up with a battle cry and pursued them to the approaches of Gath and to the gates of Ekron, and Philistines fell wounded along the road from Shaaraim as far as Gath and Ekron. <sup>53</sup>When they returned from their pursuit of the Philistines, the Israelites looted their camp. <sup>54u</sup> David took the head of the Philistine and brought it to Jerusalem; but he kept Goliath's armor in his own tent.*

David Presented to Saul. <sup>55</sup>As Saul watched David go out to meet the Philistine, he asked his general Abner, "Abner, whose son is that young man?" Abner replied, "On your life, O king, I have no idea."<sup>v</sup> <sup>56</sup>And the king said, "Find out whose son the lad is." <sup>57</sup>So when David returned from slaying the Philistine, Abner escorted him into Saul's presence. David was still holding the Philistine's head. <sup>58</sup>Saul then asked him, "Whose son are you, young man?" David replied, "I am the son of your servant Jesse of Bethlehem."

CHAPTER 18

David and Jonathan. <sup>1</sup>By the time David finished speaking with Saul, Jonathan's life became bound up with David's life; he loved him as his very self.<sup>w</sup> <sup>2</sup>Saul retained David on that day and did not allow him to return to his father's house.<sup>x</sup> <sup>3</sup>Jonathan and David made a covenant, because Jonathan loved him as his very self. <sup>4</sup>Jonathan took off* the cloak he was wearing and handed it over to David, along with his military dress, even his sword, bow, and belt.<sup>y</sup> <sup>5</sup>David then carried out successfully every mission on which Saul sent him. So Saul put him in charge of his soldiers; this met with the approval of the whole army, even Saul's officers.

Saul's Jealousy. <sup>6</sup>At the approach of Saul and David, on David's return after striking down the Philistine, women came out from all the cities of Israel to meet Saul the king, singing and dancing, with tambourines, joyful songs, and stringed instruments.<sup>*z</sup> <sup>7</sup>The women played and sang:

David his tens of thousands.”<sup>a</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Saul was very angry and resentful of the song, for he thought: “They give David tens of thousands, but only thousands to me. All that remains for him is the kingship.” <sup>9</sup>From that day on, Saul kept a jealous eye on David.

<sup>10b</sup> The next day an evil spirit from God rushed upon Saul, and he raged in his house. David was in attendance, playing the harp as at other times, while Saul was holding his spear. <sup>11</sup>Saul poised the spear, thinking, “I will nail David to the wall!” But twice David escaped him. <sup>12</sup>Saul then began to fear David because the LORD was with him but had turned away from Saul. <sup>13</sup>Saul sent him out of his presence and appointed him a field officer. So David led the people on their military expeditions <sup>14</sup>and prospered in all his ways, for the LORD was with him. <sup>15</sup>Seeing how he prospered, Saul feared David. <sup>16</sup>But all Israel and Judah loved David, since he led them on their expeditions.<sup>* c</sup>

Saul Plots Against David. <sup>17</sup>Saul said to David, “Look, I will give you my older daughter, Merob, in marriage if you become my warrior and fight

the battles of the LORD.” Saul thought, “I will not lay a hand on him. Let the hand of the Philistines strike him.”<sup>d</sup> <sup>18</sup>But David answered Saul: “Who am I? And who are my kindred or my father’s clan in Israel that I should become the king’s son-in-law?” <sup>19</sup>But when the time came for Saul’s daughter Merob to be given to David, she was given as wife to Adriel the Meholathite instead.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Now Saul’s daughter Michal loved David. When this was reported to Saul, he was pleased.<sup>f</sup> <sup>21</sup>He thought, “I will offer her to him as a trap, so that the hand of the Philistines may strike him.” So for the second time Saul said to David, “You shall become my son-in-law today.” <sup>22</sup>Saul then ordered his servants, “Speak to David privately and say: The king favors you, and all his officers love you. You should become son-in-law to the king.” <sup>23</sup>But when Saul’s servants mentioned this to David, he said: “Is becoming the king’s son-in-law a trivial matter in your eyes? I am poor and insignificant.” <sup>24</sup>When his servants reported David’s answer to him, <sup>25</sup>Saul commanded them, “Say this to David: The king desires no other price for the bride than the foreskins of one hundred Philistines, that he may thus take vengeance on his enemies.” Saul intended to have David fall into the hands of the Philistines.<sup>g</sup> <sup>26</sup>When the servants reported this offer to David, he was pleased with the prospect of becoming the king’s son-in-law. Before the year was up, <sup>27</sup>David arose and went with his men and slew two hundred Philistines. He brought back their foreskins and counted them out before the king that he might become the king’s son-in-law. So Saul gave him his daughter Michal as wife. <sup>28</sup>Then Saul realized that the LORD was with David and that his own daughter Michal loved David. <sup>29</sup>So Saul feared David all the more and was his enemy ever after.

<sup>30</sup>The Philistine chiefs continued to make forays, but each time they took the field, David was more successful against them than any of Saul’s other officers, and his name was held in great esteem.

CHAPTER 19

Persecution of David. <sup>1</sup>Saul discussed his intention to kill David with his son Jonathan and with all his servants. But Saul's son Jonathan, who was very fond of David,<sup>h</sup> <sup>2</sup>told him: "My father Saul is trying to kill you. Therefore, please be on your guard tomorrow morning; stay out of sight and remain in hiding. <sup>3</sup>I, however, will go out and stand beside my father in the countryside where you are, and will speak to him about you. If I learn anything, I will let you know."

David Escapes from Saul. <sup>8</sup>When war broke out again, David went out to fight against the Philistines and inflicted such a great defeat upon them that they fled from him. <sup>9j</sup> Then an evil spirit from the LORD came upon Saul as he was sitting in his house with spear in hand while David was playing the harp nearby. <sup>10</sup>Saul tried to pin David to the wall with the spear, but David eluded Saul, and the spear struck only the wall, while David got away safely.

<sup>11</sup>The same night, Saul sent messengers to David's house to guard it, planning to kill him in the morning. David's wife Michal informed him, "Unless you run for your life tonight, tomorrow you will be killed."<sup>*12</sup> Then Michal let David down through a window, and he made his escape in safety.<sup>k</sup> <sup>13</sup>Michal took the teraphim* and laid it in the bed, putting a tangle of goat's hair at its head and covering it with a blanket.<sup>l</sup> <sup>14</sup>When Saul sent officers to arrest David, she said, "He is sick." <sup>15</sup>Saul, however, sent the officers back to see David and commanded them, "Bring him up to me in his bed, that I may kill him." <sup>16</sup>But when the messengers entered, they found the teraphim in the bed, with the tangle of goat's hair at its head.

<sup>17</sup>Saul asked Michal: "Why did you lie to me like this? You have helped my enemy to get away!" Michal explained to Saul: "He threatened me, saying 'Let me go or I will kill you.' "

David and Saul in Ramah. <sup>18</sup>When David got safely away, he went to Samuel in Ramah, informing him of all that Saul had done to him. Then he and Samuel went to stay in Naioth.* <sup>19</sup>When Saul was told that David was at Naioth in Ramah, <sup>20</sup>he sent officers to arrest David. But when they saw the band of prophets presided over by Samuel in a prophetic state, the spirit of God came upon them and they too fell into the prophetic ecstasy.<sup>m</sup> <sup>21</sup>Informed of this, Saul sent other messengers, who also fell into the prophetic ecstasy. For the third time Saul sent messengers, but they too fell into a prophetic ecstasy.

Saul Among the Prophets. <sup>22</sup>Finally Saul went to Ramah himself. Arriving at the large cistern in Secu, he asked, "Where are Samuel and David?" Someone answered, "At Naioth in Ramah." <sup>23</sup>As he walked from there to Naioth in Ramah, the spirit of God came upon him also, and he continued on, acting like a prophet until he reached Naioth in Ramah. <sup>24</sup>Then he, too, stripped himself of his garments and remained in a prophetic state in the presence of Samuel;* all that day and night he lay naked. That is why they say, "Is Saul also among the prophets?"<sup>n</sup>

David Consults with Jonathan. <sup>1</sup>David fled from Naioth in Ramah, and went to Jonathan. “What have I done?” he asked him. “What crime or what offense does your father hold against me that he seeks my life?”<sup>o</sup> <sup>2</sup>Jonathan answered him: “Heaven forbid that you should die! My father does nothing, great or small, without telling me. Why, then, should my father conceal this from me? It cannot be true!” <sup>3</sup>But David replied: “Your father is well aware that I am favored with your friendship, so he has decided, ‘Jonathan must not know about this or he will be grieved.’ Nevertheless, as the LORD lives and as you live, there is only a step between me and death.” <sup>4</sup>Jonathan then said to David, “I will do whatever you say.” <sup>5</sup>David answered: “Tomorrow is the new moon, when I should in fact dine with the king. Let me go and hide in the open country until evening.<sup>p</sup> <sup>6</sup>If it turns out that your father misses me, say, ‘David urged me to let him go on short notice to his city Bethlehem, because his whole clan is holding its seasonal sacrifice there.’<sup>q</sup> <sup>7</sup>If he says, ‘Very well,’ your servant is safe. But if he becomes quite angry, you can be sure he has planned some harm. <sup>8r</sup> Do this kindness for your servant because of the LORD’s covenant into which you brought us: if I am guilty, kill me yourself! Why should you give me up to your father?” <sup>9</sup>But Jonathan answered: “Not I! If ever I find out that my father is determined to harm you, I will certainly let you know.” <sup>10</sup>David then asked Jonathan, “Who will tell me if your father gives you a harsh answer?”

Mutual Agreement. <sup>11</sup>Jonathan replied to David, “Come, let us go out into the field.” When they were out in the open country together, <sup>12</sup>Jonathan said to David: “As the LORD, the God of Israel, lives, I will sound out my father about this time tomorrow. Whether he is well disposed toward David or not, I will inform you. <sup>13s</sup> Should it please my father to bring any harm upon you, may the LORD do thus to Jonathan and more,* if I do not inform you of it and send you on your way in peace. May the LORD be with you even as he was with my father. <sup>14</sup>Only this: if I am still alive, may you show me the kindness of the LORD. But if I die, <sup>15</sup>never cut off your kindness from my house. And when the LORD cuts off all the enemies of David from the face of the land, <sup>16</sup>the name of Jonathan must never be cut off from the family of David, or the LORD will make you answer for it.” <sup>17</sup>And in his love for David, Jonathan renewed his oath to him, because he loved him as he loved himself.

<sup>18</sup>Jonathan then said to him: “Tomorrow is the new moon; you will be missed, since your place will be vacant. <sup>19</sup>On the third day you will be missed all the more. Go to the spot where you hid on the other occasion and wait near the mound there. <sup>t</sup> <sup>20</sup>On the third day of the month I will shoot arrows to the side of it, as though aiming at a target. <sup>21</sup>I will then send my attendant to recover the arrows. If in fact I say to him, ‘Look, the arrow is this side of you; pick it up,’ come, for you are safe. As the LORD lives, there will be nothing to fear. <sup>22</sup>But if I say to the boy, ‘Look, the arrow is beyond you,’ go, for the LORD sends you away. <sup>23</sup>However, in the matter which you and I have discussed, the LORD shall be between you and me forever.” <sup>24</sup>So David hid in the open country.

David’s Absence. On the day of the new moon, when the king sat down at the feast to dine, <sup>25</sup>he took his usual place against the wall. Jonathan sat facing him, while Abner sat at the king’s side. David’s place was vacant. <sup>26u</sup> Saul, however, said nothing that day, for he thought, “He must have become unclean by accident.” * <sup>27</sup>On the next day, the second day of the month, David’s place was still vacant. So Saul asked his son Jonathan, “Why has the son of Jesse not come to table yesterday or today?” <sup>28</sup>Jonathan explained to Saul: “David pleaded with me to let him go to Bethlehem. <sup>29</sup>‘Please let me go,’ he begged, ‘for we are having a clan sacrifice in our city, and my brothers insist on my presence. Now then, if you think well of me, give me leave to visit my brothers.’ That is why he has not come to the king’s table.” <sup>30</sup>But Saul grew angry with Jonathan and said to him: “Son of a rebellious woman, do I not know that, to your own disgrace and to the disgrace of your mother’s nakedness, you are the companion of Jesse’s son? <sup>31</sup>For as long as the son of Jesse lives upon the earth, you cannot make good your claim to the kingship! * Now send for him, and bring him to me, for he must die.” <sup>v</sup> <sup>32</sup>But Jonathan argued with his father Saul: “Why should he die? What has he done?” <sup>33</sup>At this Saul brandished his spear to strike him, and thus Jonathan learned that his father was determined to kill David. <sup>w</sup> <sup>34</sup>Jonathan sprang up from the table in a rage and ate nothing that second day of the month, because he was grieved on David's account, and because his father had humiliated him.

Jonathan's Farewell. <sup>35</sup>The next morning Jonathan, accompanied by a young boy, went out into the field for his appointment with David. <sup>36</sup>There he said to the boy, "Run and find the arrows." And as the boy ran, he shot an arrow past him. <sup>37</sup>When the boy made for the spot where Jonathan had shot the arrow, Jonathan called after him, "The arrow is farther on!" <sup>38</sup>Again he called to the boy, "Hurry, be quick, don't delay!" Jonathan's boy picked up the arrow and brought it to his master. <sup>39</sup>The boy suspected nothing; only Jonathan and David knew what was meant. <sup>40</sup>Then Jonathan gave his weapons to his boy and said to him, "Go, take them to the city." <sup>41</sup>When the boy had gone, David rose from beside the mound and fell on his face to the ground three times in homage. They kissed each other and wept aloud together. <sup>42x</sup> At length Jonathan said to David, "Go in peace, in keeping with what the two of us have sworn by the name of the LORD: 'The LORD shall be between you and me, and between your offspring and mine forever.' "

CHAPTER 21

The Holy Bread. <sup>2</sup>David went to Ahimelech, the priest of Nob, who came trembling to meet him. He asked, “Why are you alone? Is there no one with you?”<sup>* y</sup> <sup>3</sup>David answered the priest: “The king gave me a commission and told me, ‘Do not let anyone know anything about the business on which I have sent you or the commission I have given you.’ For that reason I have arranged a particular meeting place with my men.”<sup>4z</sup> Now what do you have on hand? Give me five loaves, or whatever you can find.”<sup>5*</sup> But the priest replied to David, “I have no ordinary bread on hand, only holy bread; if the men have abstained from women, you may eat some of that.” <sup>6</sup>David answered the priest: “We have indeed stayed away from women. In the past whenever I went out on a campaign, all the young men were consecrated—even for an ordinary campaign. All the more so are they consecrated with their weapons today!” <sup>7</sup>So the priest gave him holy bread, for no other bread was on hand except the showbread which had been removed from before the LORD and replaced by fresh bread when it was taken away.<sup>a</sup> <sup>8</sup>One of Saul’s servants was there that day, detained before the LORD;* his name was Doeg the Edomite, the chief of Saul’s shepherds.<sup>b</sup>

The Sword of Goliath. <sup>9</sup>David then asked Ahimelech: “Do you have a spear or a sword on hand? I brought along neither my sword nor my weapons, because the king’s business was urgent.” <sup>10</sup>The priest replied: “The sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom you killed in the Valley of Elah, is here wrapped in a garment behind an ephod.”* If you wish to take it, do so; there is no sword here except that one.” “There is none like it,” David cried, “give it to me!”<sup>c</sup>

David a Fugitive. <sup>11</sup>That same day David fled from Saul, going to Achish, king of Gath.<sup>d</sup> <sup>12</sup>But the servants of Achish said to him, “Is this not David, the king of the land? Is it not for him that during their dances they sing out,

David his tens of thousands?’”<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 22

<sup>3</sup>From there David went to Mizpeh of Moab and said to the king of Moab, “Let my father and mother stay with you, until I learn what God will do for me.” <sup>4</sup>He left them with the king of Moab; they stayed with him as long as David remained in the stronghold.*

Doeg Betrays Ahimelech. <sup>6</sup>Now Saul heard that David and his men had been located. At the time he was sitting in Gibeah under a tamarisk tree on the high place, holding his spear, while all his servants stood by him.<sup>h</sup> <sup>7</sup>So he said to them: “Listen, men of Benjamin! Will the son of Jesse give all of you fields and vineyards? Will he appoint any of you an officer over a thousand or a hundred men?<sup>i</sup> <sup>8</sup>Is that why you have all conspired against me? Why no one told me that my son had made a pact with the son of Jesse? None of you has shown compassion for me by revealing to me that my son has incited my servant to ambush me, as is the case today.”<sup>j</sup> <sup>9k</sup> Then Doeg the Edomite, who was standing with Saul’s officers, spoke up: “I saw the son of Jesse come to Ahimelech, son of Ahitub, in Nob. <sup>10</sup>He consulted the LORD for him, furnished him with provisions, and gave him the sword of Goliath the Philistine.”

Slaughter of the Priests. <sup>11</sup>So the king summoned Ahimelech the priest, son of Ahitub, and all his family, the priests in Nob. They all came to the king. <sup>12</sup> “Listen, son of Ahitub!” Saul declared. “Yes, my lord,” he replied. <sup>13</sup>Saul questioned him, “Why have you conspired against me with the son of Jesse by giving him food and a sword and by consulting God for him, that he might rise up against me in ambush, as is the case today?” <sup>14</sup>Ahimelech answered the king: “Who among all your servants is as loyal as David, the king’s son-in-law, captain of your bodyguard, and honored in your own house? <sup>15</sup>Is this the first time I have consulted God for him? No indeed! Let not the king accuse his servant or anyone in my family of such a thing. Your servant knows nothing at all, great or small, about the whole matter.” <sup>16</sup>But the king said, “You shall certainly die, Ahimelech, with all your family.” <sup>17</sup>The king then commanded his guards standing by him: “Turn and kill the priests of the LORD, for they gave David a hand. They knew he was a fugitive and yet failed to inform me.” But the king’s servants refused to raise a hand to strike the priests of the LORD.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>18</sup>The king therefore commanded Doeg, “You, turn and kill the priests!” So Doeg the Edomite himself turned and killed the priests that day—eighty-five who wore the linen ephod. <sup>19</sup>Saul also put the priestly city of Nob to the sword, including men and women, children and infants, and oxen, donkeys and sheep.

Abiathar Escapes. <sup>20</sup>One son of Ahimelech, son of Ahitub, named Abiathar,* escaped and fled to David.<sup>m</sup> <sup>21</sup>When Abiathar told David that Saul had slain the priests of the LORD, <sup>22</sup>David said to him: “I knew that day, when Doeg the Edomite was there, that he would certainly tell Saul. I am responsible for the slaughter of all your family. <sup>23</sup>Stay with me. Do not be afraid; whoever seeks your life must seek my life also. You are under my protection.”*

CHAPTER 23

See RG 206–09

Keilah Liberated. <sup>1</sup>David was informed that the Philistines were attacking Keilah and plundering the threshing floors.<sup>n</sup> <sup>2</sup>So he consulted the LORD, asking, “Shall I go and attack these Philistines?” The LORD answered, Go, attack them, and free Keilah.<sup>o</sup> <sup>3</sup>But David’s men said to him: “Even in Judah we have reason to fear. How much more so if we go to Keilah against the forces of the Philistines!” <sup>4</sup>Again David consulted the LORD, who answered: Go down to Keilah, for I will deliver the Philistines into your power.<sup>p</sup> <sup>5</sup>So David went with his men to Keilah and fought against the Philistines. He drove off their cattle and inflicted a severe defeat on them, and freed the inhabitants of Keilah.

Flight from Keilah. <sup>7</sup>When Saul was told that David had entered Keilah, he thought: “God has put him in my hand, for he has boxed himself in by entering a city with gates and bars.” <sup>8</sup>Saul then called all the army to war, in order to go down to Keilah and besiege David and his men. <sup>9</sup>When David found out that Saul was planning to harm him, he said to the priest Abiathar, “Bring the ephod here.”<sup>r</sup> <sup>10</sup>“LORD God of Israel,” David prayed, “your servant has heard that Saul plans to come to Keilah, to destroy the city on my account. <sup>11</sup>Will they hand me over? Will Saul come down as your servant has heard? LORD God of Israel, tell your servant.” The LORD answered: He will come down. <sup>12</sup>David then asked, “Will the citizens of Keilah deliver me and my men into the hand of Saul?” The LORD answered: They will deliver you. <sup>13</sup>So David and his men, about six hundred in number, left Keilah and wandered from place to place. When Saul was informed that David had fled from Keilah, he did not go forth.

David and Jonathan in Horesh. <sup>14</sup>David now lived in the strongholds in the wilderness, or in the barren hill country near Ziph. Though Saul sought him continually, the LORD did not deliver David into his hand. <sup>15</sup>While David was in the wilderness of Ziph at Horesh he was afraid that Saul had come out to seek his life. <sup>16</sup>Then Saul’s son, Jonathan, came down to David at Horesh and encouraged him in the LORD.<sup>s</sup> <sup>17</sup>He said to him: “Have no fear, my father Saul shall not lay a hand to you. You shall be king of Israel* and I shall be second to you. Even my father Saul knows this.”<sup>t</sup> <sup>18</sup>The two of them made a covenant before the LORD in Horesh, where David remained, while Jonathan returned to his home.<sup>u</sup>

Treachery of the Ziphites. <sup>19</sup>Some of the Ziphites went up to Saul in Gibeah and said, “David is hiding among us in the strongholds at Horesh on the hill of Hachilah, south of Jeshimon.”<sup>v</sup> <sup>20</sup>Therefore, whenever the king wishes to come down, let him do so. It will be our task to deliver him into the king’s hand.” <sup>21</sup>Saul replied: “The LORD bless you for your compassion toward me.”<sup>w</sup> <sup>22</sup>Go now and make sure once more! Take note of the place where he sets foot for I am told that he is very cunning. <sup>23</sup>Look around and learn in which of all the various hiding places he is holding out. Then come back to me with reliable information, and I will go with you. If he is in the region, I will track him down out of all the families of Judah.” <sup>24</sup>So they went off to Ziph ahead of Saul. At this time David and his men were in the wilderness below Maon, in the Arabah south of the wasteland.<sup>x</sup>

Escape from Saul. <sup>25</sup>When Saul and his men came looking for him, David got word of it and went down to the gorge in the wilderness below Maon. Saul heard of this and pursued David into the wilderness below Maon. <sup>26</sup>As Saul moved along one side of the gorge, David and his men took to the other. David was anxious to escape Saul, while Saul and his men were trying to outflank David and his men in order to capture them. <sup>27</sup>Then a messenger came to Saul, saying, “Come quickly, because the Philistines have invaded the land.” <sup>28</sup>Saul interrupted his pursuit of David and went to meet the Philistines. This is how that place came to be called the Rock of Divisions.

CHAPTER 24

David Spares Saul.* <sup>1</sup>David then went up from there and stayed in the strongholds of Engedi. <sup>2</sup>When Saul returned from the pursuit of the Philistines, he was told that David was in the desert near Engedi. <sup>3</sup>So Saul took three thousand of the best men from all Israel and went in search of David and his men in the direction of the wild goat crags. <sup>4</sup>When he came to the sheepfolds along the way, he found a cave, which he entered to relieve himself. David and his men were occupying the inmost recesses of the cave.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>5</sup>David's servants said to him, "This is the day about which the LORD said to you: I will deliver your enemy into your hand; do with him as you see fit." So David moved up and stealthily cut off an end of Saul's robe. <sup>6</sup>Afterward, however, David regretted that he had cut off an end of Saul's robe.<sup>z</sup> <sup>7</sup>He said to his men, "The LORD forbid that I should do such a thing to my master, the LORD's anointed, to lay a hand on him, for he is the LORD's anointed."<sup>a</sup> <sup>8</sup>With these words David restrained his men and would not permit them to attack Saul. Saul then left the cave and went on his way. <sup>9</sup>David also stepped out of the cave, calling to Saul, "My lord the king!" When Saul looked back, David bowed, his face to the ground in homage, <sup>10</sup>and asked Saul: "Why do you listen to those who say, 'David is trying to harm you'?" <sup>11</sup>You see for yourself today that the LORD just now delivered you into my hand in the cave. I was told to kill you, but I took pity on you instead. I decided, 'I will not raise a hand against my master, for he is the LORD's anointed.' <sup>12</sup>Look here, my father. See the end of your robe which I hold. I cut off an end of your robe and did not kill you. Now see and be convinced that I plan no harm and no rebellion. I have done you no wrong, though you are hunting me down to take my life.<sup>b</sup> <sup>13</sup>May the LORD judge between me and you. May the LORD exact justice from you in my case. I shall not lay a hand on you. <sup>14</sup>As the old proverb says, 'From the wicked comes wickedness.' Thus I will not lay a hand on you. <sup>15</sup>What is the king of Israel attacking? What are you pursuing? A dead dog! A single flea!<sup>c</sup> <sup>16</sup>The LORD will be the judge to decide between us. May the LORD see this, defend my cause, and give me justice against you!"<sup>d</sup>

Saul's Remorse. <sup>17</sup>When David finished saying these things to Saul, Saul answered, "Is that your voice, my son David?" And he wept freely. <sup>18</sup>Saul then admitted to David: "You are more in the right than I am. You have treated me graciously, while I have treated you badly. <sup>19</sup>You have declared this day how you treated me graciously: the LORD delivered me into your hand and you did not kill me. <sup>20</sup>For if someone comes upon an enemy, do they send them graciously on their way? So may the LORD reward you graciously for what you have done this day. <sup>21</sup>And now, since I know that you will certainly become king and that the kingship over Israel shall come into your possession,<sup>e</sup> <sup>22</sup>swear to me by the LORD that you will not cut off my descendants and that you will not blot out my name from my father's house."<sup>f</sup> <sup>23</sup>David gave Saul his oath and Saul returned home, while David and his men went up to the stronghold.

CHAPTER 25

See RG 206–09

Death of Samuel. <sup>1</sup>Samuel died, and all Israel gathered to mourn him; they buried him at his home in Ramah.<sup>9</sup> Then David went down to the wilderness of Paran.

Nabal and Abigail. <sup>2</sup>There was a man of Maon who had property in Carmel; he was very wealthy, owning three thousand sheep and a thousand goats. At the time, he was present for the shearing of his flock in Carmel.<sup>h</sup> <sup>3</sup>The man's name was Nabal and his wife was Abigail. The woman was intelligent and attractive, but Nabal, a Calebite, was harsh and bad-mannered.<sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>While in the wilderness, David heard that Nabal was shearing his flock, <sup>5</sup>so he sent ten young men, instructing them: "Go up to Carmel. Pay Nabal a visit and greet him in my name. <sup>6</sup>Say to him, 'Peace be with you, my brother, and with your family, and with all who belong to you. <sup>7</sup>I have just heard that shearers are with you. Now, when your shepherds were with us, we did them no injury, neither did they miss anything while they were in Carmel. <sup>8</sup>Ask your servants and they will tell you. Look kindly on these young men, since we come at a festival time. Please give your servants and your son David* whatever you can.' "

<sup>14</sup>Abigail, Nabal's wife, was informed of this by one of the servants, who said: "From the wilderness David sent messengers to greet our master, but he screamed at them. <sup>15</sup>Yet these men were very good to us. We were not harmed, neither did we miss anything all the while we were living among them during our stay in the open country. <sup>16</sup>Day and night they were a wall of protection for us, the whole time we were pasturing the sheep near them. <sup>17</sup>Now, see what you can do, for you must realize that otherwise disaster is in store for our master and for his whole house. He is such a scoundrel that no one can talk to him.” <sup>18</sup>Abigail quickly got together two hundred loaves, two skins of wine, five dressed sheep, five seahs of roasted grain, a hundred cakes of pressed raisins, and two hundred cakes of pressed figs, and loaded them on donkeys. <sup>19</sup>She then said to her servants, “Go on ahead; I will follow you.” But to her husband Nabal she said nothing.

you, and appoints you as ruler over Israel,<sup>o</sup> <sup>31</sup>you shall not have any regrets or burdens on your conscience, my lord, for having shed innocent blood or for having rescued yourself. When the LORD bestows good on my lord, remember your maidservant.” <sup>32</sup>David said to Abigail: “Blessed is the LORD, the God of Israel, who sent you to meet me today. <sup>33</sup>Blessed is your good judgment and blessed are you yourself. Today you have prevented me from shedding blood and rescuing myself with my own hand. <sup>34</sup>Otherwise, as the LORD, the God of Israel, lives, who has kept me from harming you, if you had not come so promptly to meet me, by dawn Nabal would not have had so much as one male left alive.” <sup>35</sup>David then took from her what she had brought him and said to her: “Go to your home in peace! See, I have listened to your appeal and have granted your request.”

Nabal's Death. <sup>36</sup>When Abigail came to Nabal, he was hosting a banquet in his house like that of a king, and Nabal was in a festive mood and very drunk. So she said not a word to him until daybreak the next morning. <sup>37</sup>But then, when Nabal was sober, his wife told him what had happened. At this his heart died within him, and he became like a stone. <sup>38</sup>About ten days later the LORD struck Nabal and he died. <sup>39</sup>Hearing that Nabal was dead, David said: “Blessed be the LORD, who has defended my cause against the insult from Nabal, and who restrained his servant from doing evil, but has repaid Nabal for his evil deeds.”

David Marries Abigail and Ahinoam. David then sent a proposal of marriage to Abigail.<sup>p</sup> <sup>40</sup>When David's servants came to Abigail in Carmel, they said to her, “David has sent us to make his proposal of marriage to you.” <sup>41</sup>Rising and bowing to the ground, she answered, “Let your maidservant be the slave who washes the feet of my lord's servants.” <sup>42</sup>She got up immediately, mounted a donkey, and followed David's messengers, with her five maids attending her. She became his wife. <sup>43q</sup> David also married Ahinoam of Jezreel. Thus both of them were his wives. <sup>44</sup>But Saul gave David's wife Michal, Saul's own daughter, to Palti, son of Laish, who was from Gallim.<sup>r</sup>

David Spares Saul Again.<sup>* 1s</sup> Men from Ziph came to Saul in Gibeah, reporting that David was hiding on the hill of Hachilah at the edge of Jeshimon.<sup>2</sup> So Saul went down to the wilderness of Ziph with three thousand of the best warriors of Israel, to search for David in the wilderness of Ziph.<sup>3</sup> Saul camped beside the road on the hill of Hachilah, at the edge of Jeshimon. David, who was living in the wilderness, saw that Saul had come into the wilderness after him<sup>4</sup> and sent out scouts, who confirmed Saul's arrival.<sup>5</sup> David then went to the place where Saul was encamped and saw the spot where Saul and his general, Abner, son of Ner, had their sleeping quarters. Saul was lying within the camp, and all his soldiers were bivouacked around him.<sup>t 6</sup> David asked Ahimelech the Hittite, and Abishai, son of Zeruiah and brother of Joab, "Who will go down into the camp with me to Saul?" Abishai replied, "I will."<sup>u 7</sup> So David and Abishai reached Saul's soldiers by night, and there was Saul lying asleep within the camp, his spear thrust into the ground at his head and Abner and his troops sleeping around him.

<sup>8</sup> Abishai whispered to David: "God has delivered your enemy into your hand today. Let me nail him to the ground with one thrust of the spear; I will not need to strike him twice!"<sup>v 9</sup> But David said to Abishai, "Do not harm him, for who can lay a hand on the LORD's anointed and remain innocent?"<sup>10</sup> As the LORD lives," David declared, "only the LORD can strike him: either when the time comes for him to die, or when he goes out and perishes in battle."<sup>* w 11</sup> But the LORD forbid that I lay a hand on the LORD's anointed! Now take the spear at his head and the water jug, and let us be on our way."<sup>12</sup> So David took the spear and the water jug from their place at Saul's head, and they withdrew without anyone seeing or knowing or awakening. All remained asleep, because a deep slumber* from the LORD had fallen upon them.<sup>x</sup>

David Taunts Abner.<sup>13</sup> Crossing over to an opposite slope, David stood on a distant hilltop. With a great distance between them<sup>14</sup> David called to the army and to Abner, son of Ner, "Will you not answer, Abner?" Then Abner shouted back, "Who is it that calls me?"<sup>15</sup> David said to Abner: "Are you not a man? Who in Israel is your equal? Why were you not guarding your lord the king when one of his subjects came to assassinate the king, your lord? <sup>16</sup>What you have done is not right. As the LORD lives, you people deserve death because you have not guarded your lord, the anointed of the LORD. Go, look: where are the king's spear and the water jug that was at his head?"

Saul Admits His Guilt. <sup>17</sup>Saul recognized David's voice and asked, "Is that your voice, David my son?"* David answered, "Yes, my lord the king." <sup>18</sup>He continued: "Why does my lord pursue his servant? What have I done? What evil am I planning? <sup>19</sup>Please, now, let my lord the king listen to the words of his servant. If the LORD has incited you against me, may an offering please the LORD. But if it is the people who have done so, may they be cursed before the LORD. They have driven me away so that today I have no share in the LORD's heritage,* but am told: 'Go serve other gods!'<sup>y</sup> <sup>20</sup>Do not let my blood spill on the ground far from the presence of the LORD. For the king of Israel has come out to seek a single flea as if he were hunting partridge* in the mountains." <sup>21</sup>Then Saul said: "I have done wrong. Come back, David, my son! I will not harm you again, because you considered my life precious today even though I have been a fool and have made a serious mistake." <sup>22</sup>But David answered: "Here is the king's spear. Let an attendant come over to get it. <sup>23</sup>The LORD repays everyone's righteousness and faithfulness. Although the LORD delivered you into my hands today, I could not lay a hand on the LORD's anointed.<sup>z</sup> <sup>24</sup>Just as I regarded your life as precious today, so may the LORD regard my life as precious and deliver me from all dangers." <sup>25</sup>Then Saul said to David: "Blessed are you, my son David! You shall certainly succeed in whatever you undertake." David went his way, and Saul returned to his place.<sup>a</sup>

David Flees to the Philistines. <sup>1</sup>David said to himself: “I shall perish some day at the hand of Saul. I have no choice but to escape to the land of the Philistines; then Saul will give up his continual search for me throughout the land of Israel, and I will be out of his reach.” <sup>2</sup>Accordingly, David departed with his six hundred soldiers and went over to Achish, son of Maach, king of Gath.<sup>b</sup> <sup>3</sup>David and his men lived in Gath with Achish; each one had his family, and David had his two wives, Ahinoam from Jezreel and Abigail, the widow of Nabal from Carmel.<sup>c</sup> <sup>4</sup>When Saul learned that David had fled to Gath, he no longer searched for him.

<sup>5</sup>David said to Achish: “If I meet with your approval, let me have a place to live in one of the country towns. Why should your servant live with you in the royal city?” <sup>6</sup>That same day Achish gave him Ziklag, which has, therefore, belonged to the kings of Judah* up to the present time.<sup>d</sup> <sup>7</sup>In all, David lived a year and four months in Philistine territory.<sup>e</sup>

David Raids Israel’s Foes. <sup>8</sup>David and his men went out on raids against the Geshurites, Girzites, and Amalekites—peoples living in the land between Telam, on the approach to Shur, and the land of Egypt.<sup>f</sup> <sup>9</sup>In attacking the land David would not leave a man or woman alive, but would carry off sheep, oxen, donkeys, camels, and clothes. Then he would return to Achish, <sup>10</sup>who would ask, “Against whom did you raid this time?” David would reply, “Against the Negeb of Judah,”* or “Against the Negeb of Jerahmeel,” or “Against the Negeb of the Kenites.”<sup>g</sup> <sup>11</sup>David never left a man or woman alive to be brought to Gath. He thought, “They will betray us and say, ‘This is what David did.’ ” This was his custom as long as he lived in Philistine territory. <sup>12</sup>Achish trusted David, thinking, “His people Israel must certainly detest him. I shall have him as my vassal forever.”

CHAPTER 28

See RG 206–09

<sup>1</sup>In those days the Philistines mustered their military forces to fight against Israel. So Achish said to David, “You realize, of course, that you and your warriors* must march out for battle with me.” <sup>2</sup>David answered Achish, “Good! Now you shall learn what your servant can do.” Then Achish said to David, “I shall appoint you as my permanent bodyguard.”

Saul in Despair. <sup>4</sup>The Philistines rallied and, coming to Shunem, they encamped. Saul, too, mustered all Israel; they camped on Gilboa. <sup>5</sup>When Saul saw the Philistine camp, he grew afraid and lost heart completely. <sup>6</sup>He consulted the LORD; but the LORD gave no answer, neither in dreams nor by Urim nor through prophets.<sup>i</sup> <sup>7</sup>Then Saul said to his servants, “Find me a medium* through whom I can seek counsel.” His servants answered him, “There is a woman in Endor who is a medium.”<sup>j</sup>

The Medium at Endor. <sup>8</sup>So he disguised himself, putting on other clothes, and set out with two companions. They came to the woman at night, and Saul said to her, “Divine for me; conjure up the spirit I tell you.”<sup>k</sup> <sup>9</sup>But the woman answered him, “You know what Saul has done, how he expelled the mediums and diviners from the land. Then why are you trying to entrap me and get me killed?” <sup>10</sup>But Saul swore to her by the LORD, “As the LORD lives, you shall incur no blame for this.” <sup>11</sup>“Whom do you want me to conjure up?” the woman asked him. “Conjure up Samuel for me,” he replied.

Samuel Appears. <sup>12</sup>When the woman saw Samuel, she shrieked at the top of her voice and said to Saul, “Why have you deceived me? You are Saul!” <sup>13</sup>But the king said to her, “Do not be afraid. What do you see?” “I see a god rising from the earth,” she replied. <sup>14</sup>“What does he look like?” asked Saul. “An old man is coming up wrapped in a robe,” she replied. Saul knew that it was Samuel, and so he bowed his face to the ground in homage.

Saul's Doom. <sup>15*</sup> Samuel then said to Saul, "Why do you disturb me by conjuring me up?" Saul replied: "I am in great distress, for the Philistines are waging war against me and God has turned away from me. Since God no longer answers me through prophets or in dreams, I have called upon you to tell me what I should do."<sup>l</sup> <sup>16</sup>To this Samuel said: "But why do you ask me, if the LORD has abandoned you for your neighbor?"<sup>m</sup> <sup>17</sup>The LORD has done to you what he declared through me: he has torn the kingdom from your hand and has given it to your neighbor David.

<sup>18</sup>"Because you disobeyed the LORD's directive and would not carry out his fierce anger against Amalek, the LORD has done this to you today."<sup>n</sup> <sup>19</sup>Moreover, the LORD will deliver Israel, and you as well, into the hands of the Philistines. By tomorrow you and your sons will be with me, and the LORD will have delivered the army of Israel into the hands of the Philistines."<sup>o</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Immediately Saul fell full length on the ground, in great fear because of Samuel's message. He had no strength left, since he had eaten nothing all that day and night. <sup>21</sup>Then the woman came to Saul and, seeing that he was quite terror-stricken, said to him: "Remember, your maidservant obeyed you: I took my life in my hands and carried out the request you made of me. <sup>22</sup>Now you, in turn, please listen to your maidservant. Let me set out a bit of food for you to eat, so that you are strong enough to go on your way." <sup>23</sup>But he refused, saying, "I will not eat." However, when his servants joined the woman in urging him, he listened to their entreaties, got up from the ground, and sat on a couch. <sup>24</sup>The woman had a stall-fed calf in the house, which she now quickly slaughtered. Then taking flour, she kneaded it and baked unleavened bread. <sup>25</sup>She set the meal before Saul and his servants, and they ate. Then they got up and left the same night.

CHAPTER 29

David's Aid Rejected. <sup>1</sup>Now the Philistines had mustered all their forces in Aphek, and the Israelites were encamped at the spring in Jezreel.<sup>p</sup> <sup>2</sup>As the Philistine lords were marching their units of a hundred and a thousand, David and his warriors were marching in the rear guard with Achish. <sup>3</sup>The Philistine commanders asked, "What are those Hebrews doing here?" Achish answered them: "Why, that is David, the officer of Saul, king of Israel. He has been with me for a year or two, and from the day he came over to me until now I have never found fault in him."<sup>q</sup> <sup>4</sup>But the Philistine commanders were angered at this and said to him: "Send that man back! Let him return to the place you picked out for him. He must not go down into battle with us; during the battle he might become our enemy. For how else can he win back his master's favor, if not at the expense of our soldiers?"<sup>r</sup> <sup>5</sup>Is this not the David for whom they sing during their dances,

'Saul has slain his thousands,

<sup>6</sup>So Achish summoned David and said to him: "As the LORD lives, you are honest, and I would want you with me in all my battles. To this day I have found nothing wrong with you since you came to me. But in the view of the chiefs you are not welcome. <sup>7</sup>Leave peacefully, now, and do nothing that might displease the Philistine chiefs." <sup>8</sup>But David said to Achish: "What have I done? What fault have you found in your servant from the day I entered your service until today, that I cannot go to fight against the enemies of my lord the king?" <sup>9</sup> "I recognize," Achish answered David, "that you are trustworthy, like an angel of God. But the Philistine commanders are saying, 'He must not go with us into battle.' <sup>10</sup>So the first thing tomorrow, you and your lord's servants who came with you, go to the place I picked out for you. Do not take to heart their worthless remarks; for you have been valuable in my service. But make an early morning start, as soon as it grows light, and be on your way." <sup>11</sup>So David and his warriors left early in the morning to return to the land of the Philistines, and the Philistines went on up to Jezreel.

CHAPTER 30

Ziklag in Ruins. <sup>1</sup>Before David and his men reached Ziklag on the third day, the Amalekites had raided the Negeb and Ziklag. They stormed Ziklag, and set it on fire.<sup>t</sup> <sup>2</sup>They took captive the women and all who were in the city, young and old, killing no one, and they herded them off when they left. <sup>3</sup>David and his men arrived at the city to find it burned to the ground and their wives, sons, and daughters taken captive. <sup>4</sup>Then David and those who were with him wept aloud until they could weep no more. <sup>5</sup>David's two wives, Ahinoam of Jezreel and Abigail, the widow of Nabal from Carmel, had also been carried off.<sup>u</sup> <sup>6</sup>Now David found himself in great danger, for the soldiers spoke of stoning him, so bitter were they over the fate of their sons and daughters. David took courage in the LORD his God <sup>7v</sup> and said to Abiathar, the priest, son of Ahimelech, "Bring me the ephod!" When Abiathar brought him the ephod, <sup>8</sup>David inquired of the LORD, "Shall I pursue these raiders? Can I overtake them?" The LORD answered him: Go in pursuit, for you will certainly overtake them and bring about a rescue.

Raid on the Amalekites. <sup>9</sup>So David went off with his six hundred as far as the Wadi Besor, where those who were to remain behind halted. <sup>10</sup>David continued the pursuit with four hundred, but two hundred were too exhausted to cross the Wadi Besor and remained behind. <sup>11</sup>An Egyptian was found in the open country and brought to David. They gave him food to eat and water to drink; <sup>12</sup>they also offered a cake of pressed figs and two cakes of pressed raisins. When he had eaten, he revived, for he had not taken food nor drunk water for three days and three nights. <sup>13</sup>Then David asked him, "To whom do you belong? Where did you come from?" "I am an Egyptian, the slave of an Amalekite," he replied. "My master abandoned me three days ago because I fell sick. <sup>14</sup>We raided the Negeb of the Cherethites, the territory of Judah, and the Negeb of Caleb; and we set Ziklag on fire."<sup>w</sup> <sup>15</sup>David then asked him, "Will you lead me down to these raiders?" He answered, "Swear to me by God that you will not kill me or hand me over to my master, and I will lead you down to the raiders." <sup>16</sup>So he led them down, and there were the Amalekites lounging all over the ground, eating, drinking, and celebrating because of all the rich plunder they had taken from the land of the Philistines and from the land of Judah.

Division of the Plunder. <sup>21</sup>When David came to the two hundred men who had been too exhausted to follow him, whom he had left behind at the Wadi Besor, they came out to meet David and the men with him. As David approached, he greeted them. <sup>22</sup>But all the greedy and worthless among those who had accompanied David said, “Since they did not accompany us, we will not give them anything from the plunder, except for each man’s wife and children.” <sup>23</sup>But David said: “You must not do this, my brothers, after what the LORD has given us. The LORD has protected us and delivered into our hands the raiders that came against us.”<sup>y</sup> <sup>24</sup>Who could agree with this proposal of yours? Rather, the share of the one who goes down to battle shall be the same as that of the one who remains with the baggage—they share alike.”<sup>z</sup> <sup>25</sup>And from that day forward he made this a law and a custom in Israel, as it still is today.<sup>a</sup>

CHAPTER 31

Death of Saul and His Sons. <sup>1d</sup> Now the Philistines went to war against Israel, and the Israelites fled before them, and fell, slain on Mount Gilboa. <sup>2</sup>The Philistines pressed hard after Saul and his sons. When the Philistines had struck down Jonathan, Abinadab, and Malchishua, sons of Saul,<sup>e</sup> <sup>3</sup>the fury of the battle converged on Saul. Then the archers hit him, and he was severely wounded. <sup>4</sup>Saul said to his armorbearer, “Draw your sword and run me through; otherwise these uncircumcised will come and abuse me.” But the armor-bearer, badly frightened, refused, so Saul took his own sword and fell upon it.<sup>f</sup> <sup>5g</sup> When the armor-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he too fell upon his sword and died with him. <sup>6</sup>Thus Saul, his three sons, and his armor-bearer died together on that same day. <sup>7</sup>When the Israelites on the slope of the valley and those along the Jordan saw that the men of Israel had fled and that Saul and his sons were dead, they abandoned their cities and fled. Then the Philistines came and lived in those cities.

Burial of Saul. <sup>11i</sup> When the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead heard what the Philistines had done to Saul, <sup>12</sup>all their warriors set out and traveled through the night; they removed the bodies of Saul and his sons from the wall of Beth-shan, and, returning to Jabesh, burned them.* <sup>13</sup>Then they took their bones and buried them under the tamarisk tree in Jabesh, and fasted for seven days.

1:6 Her rival: Hebrew sara, “rival wife, co-wife”; in the Talmud, a technical term for a second or co-wife.

1:7 In biblical narrative, the social status gained by producing children, especially males, often set woman against woman; cf. e.g., Gn 16, 21, 30. Peninnah’s provocations may be the arrogant boasting mentioned in 2:3.

1:11 No razor ...: the Septuagint adds “he shall drink neither wine nor liquor.” This addition is a further suggestion that Samuel is dedicated to God under a nazirite vow (Nm 6:4–5); see note on v. 22.

1:20 Samuel: Hannah’s explanation associates her son’s name with the narrative’s wordplay on the Hebrew verbs s’l (“ask,” vv. 17, 27), his’il (“hand over, dedicate,” v. 28), sa’ul (“dedicated,” v. 28), and the noun se’elah (“request,” vv. 17, 27). The name, however, is related to the Hebrew root s’l only through assonance. It means “his name is El/God,” not “the one requested of or dedicated (sa’ul) to God” (v. 28), which is the meaning of the name Saul. The author may have lifted the s’l wordplay from a narrative about Saul to portray Samuel as God’s gracious answer to Hannah’s request.

1:22 Leave him there forever: a Qumran manuscript adds “I will give him as a nazirite forever”; it interprets v. 11 to mean that Hannah dedicates Samuel under a nazirite vow (cf. Nm 6:4–5).

1:24 Ephah: see note on Is 5:10.

2:1–10 Hannah appeals to a God who maintains order by keeping human affairs in balance, reversing the fortunes of the arrogant, who, like Peninnah, boast of their good fortune (vv. 1, 3, 9) at the expense of those like Hannah who receive less from the Lord. Hannah’s admission places her among the faithful who trust that God will execute justice on their behalf. The reference “his king ... his anointed” (v. 10) recalls the final sentence of the Book of Judges and introduces the kingship theme that dominates the Books of Samuel.

2:3 Speak ... mouths: addressed to the enemies mentioned in v. 1.

2:18 Linen ephod: not the same as the high priest’s ephod (Ex 28:6–14) or the ephod used in divination (v. 28). Samuel wore the same kind of a ceremonial garment as the priests did (1 Sm 22:18). David also wore an ephod when he danced before the ark (2 Sm 6:14).

2:22 Behaving promiscuously: this part of the verse, which recalls Ex 38:8, is a gloss; it is lacking in the oldest Greek translation, and in 4QSam<sup>a</sup>.

2:25 Who can intercede: Eli’s sons fail to understand that their crime is directly against God and that God will punish them for it. Their behavior is set in sharp contrast to Samuel’s, which meets with God’s approval.

2:27–36 These verses describe the punishment of Eli from a point of view contemporary with the reform of Josiah (2 Kgs 23:9; cf. v. 36); they hint at the events recorded in 1 Sm 22:18–23 and 1 Kgs 2:27. The older story of this divine warning occurs in 1 Sm 3:11–14. A man of God: often an anonymous figure whose speech foreshadows events in the near future. Cf. 1 Sm 9:6; 1 Kgs 13:1; 2 Kgs 23:16–17.

2:28 Ephod: a portable container, presumably of cloth, for the lots used in ritual consultation of God during the days of the Judges (Jgs 17:5; 18:14–15) and into the time of David (1 Sm 14:3; 23:6–9; 30:7–8). Attached to the ephod of the high priest described in Ex 28:6–8 is a “breastpiece of decision” which symbolized, but did not facilitate, such consultation. The Exodus text codifies a later form of the tradition.

3:2–18 The call of Samuel: This section may be divided as follows: 1. the triple summons (vv. 2–9); 2. God’s revelation (vv. 10–14); 3. Samuel informs Eli (vv. 15–18).

3:3 Not yet extinguished: referring to the nighttime setting of this narrative (cf. Ex 27:20–21) and foreshadowing a permanently extinguished lamp when the ark is captured and Shiloh destroyed.

3:14 Lv 4:3–12 presents another view: the offering of a bull can expiate priestly sin.

3:17 May God do thus to you, and more: an oath formula which strengthens Eli’s demand by threatening divine punishment if Samuel does not obey. Cf. 14:44; 20:13; 25:22; 2 Sm 3:9, 35; 19:14.

4:1–7:1 The Ark Narrative: A striking indication that this is an independent narrative is the absence of any mention of Samuel. The Philistines: one of the Sea Peoples, of Aegean origin, who occupied the coastal plain of Palestine and threatened the Israelites who settled the inland hills.

4:4 Enthroned upon the cherubim: this divine title first occurs in the Old Testament at the sanctuary at Shiloh (cf. 2 Sm 6:2); God is represented seated upon a throne borne through the heavens by cherubim, creatures partly human being, partly beast (cf. Ez 1 and 10).

4:8 These mighty gods: the Philistines, who were polytheists, presume that the Israelites also honored several gods.

4:10 To their own tents: the defeat is so catastrophic that the soldiers abandon the army for home; cf. 2 Sm 18:17.

5:1–12 The Philistines take the ark to Dagon's temple in Ashdod to confirm their victory. Their action, however, underscores Dagon's impotence and the Lord's power. The narrator relates the transfer of the ark from Ashdod to Gath and then Ekron as the progress of a conquering warrior king through the Philistine cities along the central plain. The Philistines' humiliation recalls the climax of the Samson story (Jgs 16:13–21).

5:6 Tumors: the Septuagint adds that mice, suggestive of bubonic plague, infested their fields, thus anticipating the golden mice in 6:4–5. One symptom of bubonic plague is swollen lymph nodes ("tumors").

6:3 A reparation offering: an offering to make amends for unwitting transgressions against holy things or property rights; cf. Lv 6:1–3.

6:9 Beth-shemesh: a border city (about twenty-four miles west of Jerusalem) between Philistine and Israelite territory.

6:18 Open villages: the plague devastated both fortified cities and villages, an indication of the Lord's power over the Philistines.

7:4 Baals and Astartes: a Deuteronomistic phrase; cf. Jgs 2:13; 10:6; 1 Sm 12:10. Baal and Astarte were Canaanite divinities.

7:6 Drew water and poured it out: this ritual act does not appear elsewhere in the Old Testament. Linked with fasting and admission of sin, it seems to function as a purification ritual that washes away the guilt incurred by worshiping the Canaanite Baal and his consort Astarte. Its effectiveness is immediately evident when the Lord thunders a response to Samuel's offering.

7:12 Ebenezer: "stone of the helper," i.e., the Lord.

7:14 The Amorites: enemies in Transjordan. Israel is now secure, safe from external and internal threat.

7:16 Bethel, Gilgal and Mizpah: Bethel and Mizpah are located about five and eight miles north of Jerusalem respectively, in the district around Ramah, Samuel's home. Perhaps Gilgal, which has not been definitively located, was also in this area.

8:1–22 From this chapter on, the editors of 1 Samuel provide two and sometimes three perspectives on the same event: e.g., the selection of Saul as king is recounted in chap. 8; 10:17–24; chap. 12.

8:15 Officials: lit., eunuchs. These high-ranking administrators were not necessarily emasculated.

8:22 To your own city: Samuel will later reassemble the people at Mizpah (10:17) to acclaim Saul as their king.

9:8 A quarter shekel of silver: about a tenth of an ounce of silver.

9:12 On the high place: the local sanctuary on the top of a hill, where the sacrifice was offered and the sacrificial meal eaten.

9:21 Smallest of the tribes of Israel: Saul's objection is a common element in call narrative, e.g., Ex 3:11; 4:10; Jgs 6:15.

9:22–24 At this ritual meal, Samuel treats the youthful Saul as if he were already king. Saul receives the part of the sacrificed animal reserved for the priest and his family, perhaps the sheep's fat tail. Legal texts (Ex 29:22; Lv 3:9; 7:3–4) require the priest to burn this portion of the sheep on the altar.

10:1 The sign: the role of the new ruler is confirmed by specific signs; cf. Ex 7:9.

10:2 Here, as in Jer 31:15, Rachel's tomb is placed at Ramah, north of Jerusalem. Later tradition understood Ephrath (Gn 35:19–20) as Bethlehem and placed the tomb farther south (Mt 2:16–18).

10:3 Oak of Tabor: or terebinth. Such a tree often indicates a shrine.

10:5 The Philistine garrison: the Hebrew word for "garrison" has been explained alternatively to mean a stele established to mark the Philistine occupation, or an inspector or officer for the collection of taxes. Prophetic ecstasy: a condition of religious enthusiasm often induced by communal rituals of music and dancing.

10:8 By inserting this verse, with its seven days, an editor has named in the very context of Saul's anointing the condition which in a later narrative will be the grounds for the rejection of the dynastic character of Saul's kingship (13:8–15).

10:10 An editor has abridged a longer version of this story by omitting mention of the first two signs Samuel has given (vv. 2–4).

10:20 Was chosen: probably by casting lots; cf. 14:40–42; Jos 7:14, 17.

10:25 Rules of the monarchy: a charter describing the relationship between the king and the people.

10:27 Tribute: a gift to honor a new ruler as a pledge of one's loyalty; see Gn 32:14; Jgs 3:15; 2 Sm 8:2.

11:1 A text from Qumran (1QSam<sup>a</sup>) introduces this chapter with the report that Nahash, king of the Ammonites, had attacked the Gadites and the Reubenites, gouging out their right eyes. Seven thousand of them had fled to Jabesh-gilead. This additional information would explain why Nahash besieged Jabeshgilead. There is no consensus among scholars whether the Qumran text represents an original reading or a secondary expansion.

11:2 Right eye of every man: thus rendering them incapable of military action.

11:7 Throughout the territory of Israel: Saul's gesture summons the Israelite confederacy to a coordinated response against Nahash; cf. Jgs 19:29 for a similar action. Dread of the LORD: often a panic that immobilizes Israel's enemies; here, however, it has the opposite effect and incites the Israelites to battle.

11:8 Bezek: probably modern Khirbet Ibziq, northeast of Shechem, on the west slope of the Jordan valley, opposite Jabesh-gilead.

11:12–14 With the defeat of the Ammonites, Saul demonstrates his ability to command Israel's army and defend the land. At Gilgal, Saul's kingship is ratified; ironically, he loses his kingship at the same place (13:7).

12:1–25 This chapter narrates the transition from the leadership of the judges to the rule of the king. The Deuteronomistic redactor has Samuel contrast the wickedness of Israel's ancestors with the Lord's gracious deliverance (vv. 6–12). The people realize that their demand for a king has compounded that wickedness. Now that the Lord has given them a king, Samuel urges the people and their king to serve the Lord wholeheartedly (vv. 13–25).

12:1–5 Samuel's upright leadership is set in sharp contrast to the despotic powers of the king described in chap. 8. By their testimony, the people witness to Samuel's righteousness.

12:17 Harvest time for wheat: in May-June. Since this is a period of little or no rainfall in Israel, the people will not mistake the sign for a natural phenomenon.

12:21 Gods who are nothing: Hebrew tohu, lit., "emptiness," cf. Gn 1:2 ( ... webohu); here, idols without power or substance, as in Is 41:29.

12:22 His own great name: were the Lord to abandon his people, even if they abandon him, he would diminish his stature or reputation in the divine council or among the nations (e.g., Ez 20:9). Throughout the Old Testament the Lord is encouraged to deliver Israel, despite its evil, “for the sake of his name.”

13:1 A formula like that of 2 Sm 5:4 was introduced here at some time; but the age of Saul when he became king remains a blank, and the two years assigned for his reign in the Masoretic text cannot be correct. Acts 13:21 offers the round number of forty years.

13:3–4 The Philistine garrison: see note on 10:5. Let the Hebrews hear: a different reading of these verses, based on the Greek, would yield: “And the Philistines heard that the Hebrews (or: the slaves) had revolted. Saul in the meantime sounded the trumpet throughout all the land (v. 4), and all Israel heard that Saul ....”

13:7–15 These verses, like 10:8, anticipate the rejection of Saul; a different occasion and motivation for this are given in chap. 15 and 28:17–18.

13:14 After his own heart: i.e., of his choosing, for his purpose. While the verse undoubtedly refers to David, it concerns the Lord’s decision to continue the kingship, even though he has rejected Saul, by selecting the heir to Saul’s throne.

13:19–22 These details emphasize the Philistines’ military power and superior technology, a reminder that an Israelite victory depends on God.

14:10 That will be our sign: Jonathan acknowledges that the battle is in God’s hands.

14:11 Hebrews: while this term is often used by foreigners of Israelites, in this verse it seems to be a derogatory epithet for soldiers who deserted Saul’s army while he was waiting for Samuel to arrive in Gilgal.

14:15 Awesome shuddering: lit., “shuddering caused by God”; the panic in the Philistine camp is the work of Israel’s warrior God.

14:23 The victory apparently cleared the Philistines off the main ridge of mountains in the territories of Benjamin and Ephraim.

14:41 Urim ... Thummim: objects, one representing a positive response and the other a negative response, kept in the front pocket of the priest’s ephod, a garment worn as a breastplate, and used to ascertain God’s will in certain instances, e.g., whether Saul should help rout the Philistines. Saul consults the priest but is too impatient to finish the consultation and hurries impulsively into battle.

15:1–35 The rejection of Saul sets the stage for the remainder of 1 Samuel. The audience knows that, in the ensuing struggle between David and Saul, David will triumph as king.

15:3 Put under the ban: this terminology mandates that all traces of the Amalekites (people, cities, animals, etc.) be exterminated. No plunder could be seized for personal use. In the light of Dt 20:16–18, this injunction would eliminate any tendency toward syncretism. The focus of this chapter is that Saul fails to execute this order.

15:4 The numbers here are not realistic; compare 14:2.

15:6 The Kenites honored the terms of an alliance with Israel.

15:22 Samuel’s reprimand echoes that of the prophets. Cultic practice is meaningless, even hypocritical, unless accompanied by an attentiveness to God’s will.

15:29 Nor repents: the apparent contradiction between this verse and vv. 11, 35 leads some scholars to consider it a gloss (cf. Nm 23:19). However, this phrase can be understood to underscore the definitive character of Samuel’s declaration that Saul has lost the kingship.

16:1 David is anointed two more times after Saul’s death (2 Sm 2:4; 5:3). In 17:28, his brother Eliab is not aware of David’s selection. These repetitions and inconsistencies reflect the final editor’s use of multiple sources.

16:14–23 These verses explain Saul's loss of divine favor and David's rise to power. By approving the young man, Saul identifies David as his legitimate successor. Of the two traditions in the Hebrew text about David's entry into Saul's service, the Greek translation retains only the one found in vv. 14–23; 17:1–11, 32–54. An evil spirit from the Lord: Saul's erratic behavior is attributed to a change in the Lord's relationship with him. Cf. Jgs 9:23, where the Lord puts an evil spirit between Abimelech and the citizens of Shechem.

17:4 Six cubits and a span: about nine feet nine inches (a cubit equals about eighteen inches; a span equals about eight inches). The Greek text and 4QSama read: "four cubits and a span" (six feet nine inches). The description of the Philistine's might and his powerful weapons contrasts with the picture of the youthful David who trusts in God.

17:7 Six hundred shekels: over fifteen pounds.

17:12–31 Here the final editor begins an alternative account of David's encounter with the Philistine hero, which continues in vv. 50–51 and concludes in 17:55–18:5.

17:41–47 The two combatants trade theological taunts. God uses the most unlikely opponent to destroy Goliath.

17:54 Jerusalem was a Jebusite city; it came under Israelite control only at the beginning of David's rule. As a young shepherd, David would not have had a military tent. In 21:10, Goliath's sword is in the Nob temple.

18:4 Jonathan took off: with the details in this verse, the narrator identifies David as Jonathan's replacement and Saul's heir to the throne. Cf. 23:17 and Gn 41:39–43.

18:6 Stringed instruments: perhaps a lute-like instrument with three strings; the Hebrew word, shalshim, perhaps related to the root shlsh ("three"), occurs only here in the Old Testament.

18:16 Led them on their expeditions: lit., "go out and come in," i.e., through the city gates; an idiom for military victory.

19:4 Jonathan reminds Saul that David has served him loyally and done nothing to earn a traitor's death. Cf. 24:18–20.

19:11 This story may have originally followed 18:29, placing the episode of David's escape on the night of his marriage with Michal.

19:13 Teraphim: a life-sized image of a household god in human form; cf. also note on Gn 31:19. Elsewhere in the Deuteronomistic History, use of teraphim is condemned (15:23; 2 Kgs 23:24).

19:18 Naioth: meaning "the pastures." This place appears only in chaps. 19–20 and is associated with Ramah.

19:24 In the presence of Samuel: this verse, which disagrees with 15:35, is further evidence of the diverse origins of these accounts. "Is Saul also among the prophets?": although similar to the story of Saul's prophetic ecstasy in 10:10–13, this account offers a more disparaging portrait of Saul.

20:26 The meal on the first day of the month would have had religious overtones, and a ritual impurity (Lv 15:16; Dt 23:10–12) would have barred David from sharing in it.

20:31 Your claim to the kingship: Saul admits his intention that Jonathan should succeed him and that David is a threat to his lineage (cf. 23:17). However Jonathan has already acknowledged David's kingship (18:3–4) and his own subservient role (20:13–16).

21:2 Ahimelech realizes that he risks incurring Saul's anger if David has come to Nob as a fugitive.

21:5–6 According to Lv 24:5–9, the showbread consisted of twelve loaves that were replaced each sabbath. Since the old bread was to be consumed by the priests, Ahimelech questions David regarding the ritual purity of his men (see 2 Sm 11:11). David's answer supposes the discipline of a military campaign under the conditions of "holy war" (Dt 23:10–15).

21:8 Detained before the LORD: perhaps to fulfill a ritual obligation. David's arrival at Nob seems to coincide with a festival day, since the showbread has recently been replaced with fresh bread. Shepherds: i.e., Saul's palace guard. Cf. 22:9–10, where Doeg has easy access to Saul.

21:10 Ephod: here an object or image large enough to conceal Goliath's sword. Cf. Gideon's ephod in Jgs 8:27.

21:13 Gath: a Philistine city (see note on 5:1–12), the home of Goliath.

22:2 Embittered: Hebrew mar-nephesh, "bitter of spirit," used of Hannah, deprived of a child, in 1:10, and of David's soldiers, whose women and children the Amalekites had seized (30:6). Cf. also 2 Sm 17:8. David becomes a hero for those who have endured loss or deprivation.

22:4–5 Stronghold: seemingly connected with the cave complex in v. 1.

22:20 Abiathar: the sole survivor of Eli's household (2:27–36). David now has in his service the only priest of the Lord left in the land and exclusive access to the ephod for consulting the Lord (cf. 23:9–13). David later appoints Abiathar co-high priest with Zadok in Jerusalem (2 Sm 20:25), but Solomon exiles Abiathar to Anathoth when the priest does not support his bid for the throne. Cf. 1 Kgs 2:26–27.

22:23 You are under my protection: once again a sharp contrast is drawn between Saul, who kills the Lord's priests, and David, who protects the lone survivor.

23:17 King of Israel: to emphasize the inevitability of the Lord's plan, the narrator frames Jonathan's statement with two accounts of David's mercy toward Saul.

24:1 The first of two accounts (see chap. 26) in which David spares Saul's life. The two accounts, which do not make reference to each other, are probably alternative versions of the same story.

25:8 Your son David: this kinship language may reflect a political or social relationship between Nabal and David. Nabal, however, does not acknowledge it.

25:25 Hebrew nabal means "fool" (cf. Is 32:5–7). Abigail, on the other hand, acts wisely to save herself and her household by offering prudent counsel to the future king of Israel.

25:26 Abigail, encouraging David to trust in God's promise, anticipates that some misfortune will shortly overtake Nabal, as in fact it does (vv. 37–38).

25:29 The bundle of the living: the figure is perhaps taken from the practice of tying up valuables in a kerchief or bag for safekeeping. Abigail desires that David enjoy permanent peace and security, but that his enemies be subject to constant agitation and humiliation like a stone whirled about, cast out of the sling, and thereafter disregarded.

26:1 The second account of David sparing Saul's life; cf. note on 24:1.

26:10 Perishes in battle: David's words foreshadow how Saul will die (31:3–4). They also emphasize that David, unlike Saul, knows his proper place before God. David comes to the kingship innocent of Saul's blood, although the king pursues him like an enemy and David has had two opportunities to kill him.

26:12 Deep slumber: as in Gn 2:21; 15:12; Is 29:10. The Lord aids David's foray into Saul's camp and allows David to come and go undetected.

26:17 David my son: Saul's reference to David as his son, which appears three times in this chapter (vv. 17, 21, 25), alludes to David's role as his successor.

26:19 The Lord's heritage: the land and people of Israel (Dt 32:8–9; Ps 33:12). If driven from the land, David could not take part in worship of Israel's God; nonetheless, God has blessed David (cf. v. 25).

26:20 Partridge: lit., "the caller." The metaphor is built on clever wordplay: in v. 14, David calls out to the army and Abner asks the caller's identity. David calls out the answer: "the caller" is the object of the king's pursuit.

27:6 Ziklag was a royal city and not part of Israel's tribal land holdings. Jerusalem later enjoyed a similar status (2 Sm 5:7–9).

27:10 The Negeb of Judah: David deceives Achish by assuring him that he has attacked Israelite territory.

28:1 You and your warriors: David is faced with a potentially dangerous dilemma: either to reveal his continuing loyalty to his own people or to obey Achish and fight against his own people.

28:7 A medium: Saul's own prohibition of necromancy and divination (v. 3) was in keeping with the consistent teaching of the Old Testament (cf. Lv 19:31; 20:6, 27; Dt 18:10).

28:15–19 The consultation with the medium serves to remind the reader that the Lord's plan for David marches onward; no sorcery can thwart it.

30:26 Elders of Judah: David consolidates his power in southern Judah in preparation for his anointing at Hebron (2 Sm 5:3).

Report of Saul's Death. <sup>1</sup>After the death of Saul, David returned from his victory over the Amalekites and stayed in Ziklag two days.<sup>a</sup> <sup>2</sup>On the third day a man came from the field of battle, one of Saul's people, with his garments torn and his head covered with dirt. Going to David, he fell to the ground in homage. <sup>3</sup>David asked him, "Where have you come from?" He replied, "From the Israelite camp: I have escaped." <sup>4</sup> "What happened?" David said. "Tell me." He answered that the soldiers had fled the battle and many of them had fallen and were dead; and that Saul and his son Jonathan were dead. <sup>5</sup>Then David said to the youth who was reporting to him, "How do you know that Saul and his son Jonathan are dead?" <sup>6b</sup> The youth reporting to him replied: "I happened to find myself on Mount Gilboa and saw Saul leaning on his spear, with chariots and horsemen closing in on him. <sup>7</sup>He turned around and saw me, and called me to him. When I said, 'Here I am,' <sup>8</sup>he asked me, 'Who are you?' and I replied, 'An Amalekite.' <sup>9</sup>Then he said to me, 'Stand over me, please, and put me to death, for I am in great suffering, but still alive.' <sup>10</sup>So I stood over him and put him to death, for I knew that he could not survive his wound. I removed the crown from his head and the armlet from his arm and brought them here to my lord."

<sup>11</sup>David seized his garments and tore them, and so did all the men who were with him.<sup>c</sup> <sup>12</sup>They mourned and wept and fasted until evening for Saul and his son Jonathan, and for the people of the LORD and the house of Israel, because they had fallen by the sword.<sup>d</sup> <sup>13</sup>David said to the youth who had reported to him, "Where are you from?" He replied, "I am the son of a resident alien, an Amalekite." <sup>14</sup>David said to him, "How is it that you were not afraid to put forth your hand to desecrate the LORD's anointed?"<sup>e</sup> <sup>15</sup>David then called one of the attendants and said to him, "Come, strike him down"; so he struck him and he died. <sup>16</sup>David said to him, "Your blood is on your head, for you testified against yourself when you said, 'I put the LORD's anointed to death.' "

Judahites; it is recorded in the Book of Jashar):<sup>f</sup>

slain upon your heights!
How can the warriors have fallen!

<sup>20</sup>Do not report it in Gath,
as good news in Ashkelon's streets,
Lest Philistine women rejoice, lest the women of the uncircumcised
exult!<sup>g</sup>

upon you be neither dew nor rain,
nor surging from the deeps!* Defiled there the warriors' shields, the shield of Saul—no longer anointed with oil!<sup>h</sup>

from the bodies of the warriors,
The bow of Jonathan did not turn back, nor the sword of Saul return unstained.<sup>*i</sup>

<sup>23</sup>Saul and Jonathan, beloved and dear, separated neither in life nor death, swifter than eagles, stronger than lions!

who clothed you in scarlet and in finery, covered your clothing with ornaments of gold.

in the thick of battle!
Jonathan—slain upon your heights!

<sup>26</sup>I grieve for you, Jonathan my brother!
Most dear have you been to me;
More wondrous your love to me than the love of women.<sup>j</sup>

the weapons of war have perished!

David Is Anointed King. <sup>1</sup>After this, David inquired of the LORD, “Shall I go up into one of the cities of Judah?” The LORD replied to him: Go up. Then David asked, “Where shall I go?” He replied: To Hebron. <sup>2</sup>So David went up there, with his two wives, Ahinoam of Jezreel and Abigail, the wife of Nabal of Carmel.<sup>k</sup> <sup>3</sup>David also brought up his men with their families, and they dwelt in the towns of Hebron. <sup>4</sup>Then the men of Judah came there and anointed David king over the house of Judah.

A report reached David that the people of Jabesh-gilead had buried Saul.<sup>l</sup> <sup>5</sup>So David sent messengers to the people of Jabesh-gilead and said to them: “May you be blessed by the LORD for having done this kindness to your lord Saul in burying him. <sup>6</sup>And now may the LORD show you kindness and fidelity. For my part, I will show generosity to you for having done this. <sup>7</sup>So take courage and prove yourselves valiant, for though your lord Saul is dead, the house of Judah has anointed me king over them.”

IV. The Reign of David

Ishbaal King of Israel. <sup>8</sup>Abner, son of Ner, captain of Saul’s army, took Ishbaal,* son of Saul, and brought him over to Mahanaim,<sup>m</sup> <sup>9</sup>where he made him king over Gilead, the Asherites, Jezreel, Ephraim, Benjamin, and the rest of Israel. <sup>10</sup>Ishbaal, son of Saul, was forty years old when he became king over Israel, and he reigned two years; but the house of Judah followed David. <sup>11</sup>In all, David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah seven years and six months.<sup>n</sup>

Combat near Gibeon. <sup>12</sup>Now Abner, son of Ner, and the servants of Ishbaal, Saul’s son, set out from Mahanaim for Gibeon. <sup>13</sup>Joab, son of Zeruiah, and the servants of David also set out and encountered them at the pool of Gibeon. And they sat down, one group on one side of the pool and the other on the opposite side. <sup>14</sup>Then Abner said to Joab, “Let the young men rise and perform for us.”* Joab replied, “All right.” <sup>15</sup>So they rose and were counted off: twelve of the Benjaminites of Ishbaal, son of Saul, and twelve of David's servants. <sup>16</sup>Then each one grasped his opponent's head and thrust his sword into his opponent's side, and they all fell down together.* And so that place was named the Field of the Sides; it is in Gibeon.

Death of Asahel. <sup>17</sup>The battle that day was very fierce, and Abner and the men of Israel were defeated by David's servants. <sup>18</sup>The three sons of Zeruiah were there—Joab, Abishai, and Asahel.<sup>o</sup> Asahel, who was as fleet of foot as a gazelle in the open field, <sup>19</sup>set out after Abner, turning neither right nor left in his pursuit. <sup>20</sup>Abner turned around and said, "Is that you, Asahel?" He replied, "Yes." <sup>21</sup>Abner said to him, "Turn right or left; seize one of the young men and take what you can strip from him." But Asahel would not stop pursuing him. <sup>22</sup>Once more Abner said to Asahel: "Stop pursuing me! Why must I strike you to the ground? How could I show my face to your brother Joab?"<sup>p</sup> <sup>23</sup>Still he refused to stop. So Abner struck him in the abdomen with the heel of his spear, and the weapon protruded from his back. He fell there and died on the spot. All who came to the place where Asahel had fallen and died, halted. <sup>24</sup>But Joab and Abishai continued the pursuit of Abner. The sun had gone down when they came to the hill of Ammah which lies east of the valley toward the wilderness near Geba.

Truce Between Joab and Abner. <sup>25</sup>Here the Benjaminites rallied around Abner, forming a single group, and made a stand on a hilltop. <sup>26</sup>Then Abner called to Joab and said: "Must the sword devour forever? Do you not know that afterward there will be bitterness? How long before you tell the people to stop pursuing their brothers?" <sup>27</sup>Joab replied, "As God lives, if you had not spoken, it would be morning before the people would be stopped from pursuing their brothers." <sup>28</sup>Joab then sounded the horn, and all the people came to a halt, pursuing Israel no farther and fighting no more. <sup>29</sup>Abner and his men marched all night long through the Arabah, crossed the Jordan, marched all through the morning, and came to Mahanaim. <sup>30</sup>Joab, coming from the pursuit of Abner, assembled all the men. Nineteen other servants of David were missing, besides Asahel. <sup>31</sup>But David's servants had struck down and killed three hundred and sixty men of Benjamin, followers of Abner. <sup>32</sup>They took up Asahel and buried him in his father's tomb in Bethlehem. Joab and his men made an all-night march, and dawn found them in Hebron.

CHAPTER 3

<sup>1</sup>There followed a long war between the house of Saul and the house of David, in which David grew ever stronger, but the house of Saul ever weaker.

Sons Born in Hebron. <sup>2q</sup> Sons were born to David in Hebron: his firstborn, Amnon, of Ahinoam from Jezreel; <sup>3</sup>the second, Chileab, of Abigail the wife of Nabal of Carmel; the third, Absalom, son of Maacah, who was the daughter of Talmai, king of Geshur;<sup>r</sup> <sup>4</sup>the fourth, Adonijah, son of Haggith; the fifth, Shephatiah, son of Abital;<sup>s</sup> <sup>5</sup>and the sixth, Ithream, by David's wife Eglah. These were born to David in Hebron.

Ishbaal and Abner Quarrel. <sup>6</sup>During the war between the house of Saul and the house of David, Abner was gaining power in the house of Saul. <sup>7</sup>Now Saul had had a concubine, Rizpah, the daughter of Aiah. And Ishbaal, son of Saul, said to Abner, "Why have you slept with my father's concubine?"<sup>* t</sup> <sup>8</sup>Enraged at the words of Ishbaal, Abner said, "Am I a dog's head from Judah? As of today, I have been loyal to the house of Saul your father, to his brothers and his friends, and I have kept you out of David's clutches; and today you charge me with a crime involving a woman! <sup>9</sup>May God do thus to Abner, and more, if I do not carry out for David what the LORD swore to him—<sup>u</sup> <sup>10</sup>that is, take away the kingdom from the house of Saul and establish the throne of David over Israel as well as Judah, from Dan to Beersheba."<sup>v</sup> <sup>11</sup>Ishbaal was no longer able to say a word to Abner, he feared him so.

Abner and David Reconciled. <sup>12</sup>Then Abner sent messengers to David in Telam, where he was at the moment, to say, "Make a covenant with me, and you have me on your side, to bring all Israel over to you." <sup>13</sup>He replied, "Good, I will make a covenant with you. But one thing I require of you. You must not appear before me unless you bring back Michal, Saul's daughter, when you come to present yourself to me."<sup>w</sup> <sup>14</sup>At the same time David sent messengers to Ishbaal, son of Saul, to say, "Give me my wife Michal, whom I betrothed by paying a hundred Philistine foreskins." <sup>15</sup>Ishbaal sent for her and took her away from her husband Paltiel, son of Laish,<sup>x</sup> <sup>16</sup>who followed her weeping as far as Bahurim. But Abner said to him, “Go back!” So he turned back.

<sup>17</sup>Abner then had a word with the elders of Israel: “For some time you have been wanting David as your king. <sup>18</sup>Now take action, for the LORD has said of David: By David my servant I will save my people Israel from the power of the Philistines and from the power of all their enemies.” <sup>19</sup>Abner also spoke with Benjamin, and then went to speak with David in Hebron concerning all that would be agreeable to Israel and to the whole house of Benjamin. <sup>20</sup>When Abner, accompanied by twenty men, came to David in Hebron, David prepared a feast for Abner and for the men who were with him. <sup>21</sup>Then Abner said to David, “I will now go to assemble all Israel for my lord the king, that they may make a covenant with you; you will then be king over all whom you wish to rule.” So David let Abner go on his way in peace.

Death of Abner. <sup>22</sup>Just then David’s servants and Joab were coming in from an expedition, bringing much plunder with them. Abner, having been dismissed by David, was no longer with him in Hebron but had gone on his way in peace. <sup>23</sup>When Joab and the whole force he had with him arrived, he was informed, “Abner, son of Ner, came to David, and he let him go on his way in peace.” <sup>24</sup>So Joab went to the king and said: “What have you done? Abner came to you! Why did you let him get away? <sup>25</sup>Don’t you know Abner? He came to trick you, to learn your comings and goings, to learn everything you do.” <sup>26</sup>Joab then left David and sent messengers after Abner to bring him back from the cistern of Sirah; but David did not know. <sup>27</sup>When Abner returned to Hebron, Joab took him aside within the city gate to speak with him privately. There he stabbed him in the abdomen, and he died for the blood of Asahel, Joab’s brother.<sup>y</sup> <sup>28</sup>Later David heard of it and said: “Before the LORD, I and my kingdom are forever innocent.<sup>z</sup> <sup>29</sup>May the blood of Abner, son of Ner, be on the head of Joab and all his family. May Joab’s family never be without one suffering from a discharge, or one with a skin disease, or a man who holds the distaff, or one falling by the sword, or one in need of food!”* <sup>30</sup>Joab and Abishai his brother had been lying in wait for Abner because he killed Asahel their brother in battle at Gibeon.

David Mourns Abner. <sup>31</sup>Then David said to Joab and to all the people who were with him, “Tear your garments, put on sackcloth, and mourn over Abner.” King David himself followed the bier. <sup>a</sup> <sup>32</sup>When they had buried Abner in Hebron, the king wept aloud at the grave of Abner, and all the people wept. <sup>33</sup>And the king sang this lament over Abner:

Should Abner have died like a fool?

<sup>34</sup>Your hands were not bound with chains,
nor your feet placed in fetters;
As one falls before the wicked, you fell.

And all the people continued to weep for him. <sup>35</sup>Then they went to console David with food while it was still day. But David swore, “May God do thus to me, and more, if before the sun goes down I eat bread or anything else.”<sup>b</sup>
<sup>36</sup>All the people noted this with approval, just as everything the king did met with their approval. <sup>37</sup>So on that day all the people and all Israel came to know that it was not the king’s doing that Abner, son of Ner, was put to death. <sup>38</sup>The king then said to his servants: “Do you not know that a prince, a great man, has fallen today in Israel. <sup>39</sup>Although I am the anointed king, I am weak this day, and these men, the sons of Zeruiah, are too ruthless for me. May the LORD repay the evildoer in accordance with his evil deed.”<sup>c</sup>

Death of Ishbaal. <sup>1</sup>When Ishbaal, son of Saul, heard that Abner was dead in Hebron, he lost his resolve and all Israel was alarmed. <sup>2</sup>Ishbaal, son of Saul, had two company leaders named Baanah and Rechab, sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, of the tribe of Benjamin—Beeroth, too, was ascribed to Benjamin:<sup>d</sup> <sup>3</sup>the Beerothites fled to Gittaim, where they have been resident aliens to this day.<sup>e</sup> <sup>4</sup>(Jonathan, son of Saul, had a son with crippled feet. He was five years old when the news about Saul and Jonathan came from Jezreel; his nurse took him and fled, but in their hasty flight, he fell and became lame. His name was Meribbaal.)* <sup>f</sup> <sup>5</sup>The sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, Rechab and Baanah, came into the house of Ishbaal during the heat of the day, while he was lying on his bed in the afternoon. <sup>6</sup>The gatekeeper of the house had dozed off while sifting wheat, and was asleep. So Rechab and his brother Baanah slipped past her <sup>7</sup>and entered the house while Ishbaal was lying asleep in his bedroom. They struck and killed him, and cut off his head. Then, taking the head, they traveled on the Arabah road all night long.

The Murder Avenged. <sup>8</sup>They brought the head of Ishbaal to David in Hebron and said to the king: “This is the head of Ishbaal, son of your enemy Saul, who sought your life. Thus has the LORD this day avenged my lord the king on Saul and his posterity.” <sup>9</sup>But David replied to Rechab and his brother Baanah, sons of Rimmon the Beerothite: “As the LORD lives, who rescued me from every distress: <sup>10</sup>the man who reported to me, ‘Saul is dead,’ and thought he was bringing good news, that man I seized and killed in Ziglag: that was the reward I gave him.<sup>g</sup> <sup>11</sup>How much more now, when wicked men have slain an innocent man in bed at home, must I require his blood from you and purge you from the land!” <sup>12</sup>So at David’s command, the young men killed them and cut off their hands and feet, hanging them up near the pool in Hebron. But he took the head of Ishbaal and buried it in Abner’s grave in Hebron.<sup>h</sup>

David King of Israel. <sup>1i</sup> All the tribes of Israel came to David in Hebron, and they said: “Look! We are your bone and your flesh. <sup>2</sup>In days past, when Saul was still our king, you were the one who led Israel out in all its battles and brought it back. And the LORD said to you: You shall shepherd my people Israel; you shall be ruler over Israel.”<sup>j</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then all the elders of Israel came to the king in Hebron, and at Hebron King David made a covenant with them in the presence of the LORD; and they anointed David king over Israel. <sup>4</sup>David was thirty years old when he became king, and he reigned forty years: <sup>5</sup>in Hebron he was king over Judah seven years and six months, and in Jerusalem he was king thirty-three years over all Israel and Judah.<sup>k</sup>

Capture of Zion. <sup>* 6l</sup> Then the king and his men went to Jerusalem against the Jebusites who inhabited the land. They told David, “You shall not enter here: the blind and the lame will drive you away!” which was their way of saying, “David shall not enter here.”<sup>m</sup> <sup>7</sup>David nevertheless captured the fortress of Zion, which is the City of David. <sup>8</sup>On that day David said: “All who wish to strike at the Jebusites must attack through the water shaft. The lame and the blind shall be the personal enemies of David.” That is why it is said, “The blind and the lame shall not enter the palace.”<sup>n</sup> <sup>9</sup>David took up residence in the fortress which he called the City of David. David built up the city on all sides, from the Millo toward the center.<sup>o</sup> <sup>10</sup>David became ever more powerful, for the LORD of hosts was with him.<sup>p</sup> <sup>11q</sup> Hiram, king of Tyre, sent envoys to David along with cedar wood, and carpenters and masons, who built a house for David.<sup>r</sup> <sup>12</sup>David now knew* that the LORD had truly established him as king over Israel and had exalted his kingdom for the sake of his people Israel.

David's Family in Jerusalem. <sup>13s</sup> David took more concubines and wives in Jerusalem after he had come from Hebron, and more sons and daughters were born to him. <sup>14</sup>These are the names of those who were born to him in Jerusalem: Shammua, Shobab, Nathan, Solomon, <sup>15</sup>Ibhar, Elishua, Nepheg, Japhia, <sup>16</sup>Elishama, Beeliada, and Eliphelet.

Rout of the Philistines. <sup>17</sup>When the Philistines had heard that David was anointed king over Israel, they marched out in force to come after him. When David heard this, he went down to the refuge.* <sup>18</sup>Meanwhile the Philistines had come and deployed themselves in the valley of Rephaim.* <sup>19</sup>David inquired of the LORD, “Shall I attack the Philistines, and will you deliver them into my power?” The LORD answered David: Attack, for I will surely deliver the Philistines into your power. <sup>20</sup>So David went to Baal-perazim,* and he defeated them there. He said, “The LORD has broken through my enemies before me just as water breaks through a dam.” Therefore that place was called Baal-perazim. <sup>21</sup>The Philistines abandoned their gods there, and David and his men carried them away. <sup>22</sup>Once again the Philistines came up and deployed themselves in the valley of Rephaim, <sup>23</sup>and again David inquired of the LORD, who replied: Do not attack the front—circle behind them and come against them near the balsam trees. <sup>24</sup>When you hear the sound of marching* in the tops of the balsam trees, act decisively, for then the LORD has already gone before you to strike the army of the Philistines. <sup>25</sup>David did as the LORD commanded him, and routed the Philistines from Gibeon as far as Gezer.

The Ark Brought to Jerusalem. <sup>1t</sup> David again assembled all the picked men of Israel, thirty thousand in number. <sup>2</sup>Then David and all the people who were with him set out for Baala of Judah to bring up from there the ark of God, which bears the name “the LORD of hosts enthroned above the cherubim.”<sup>u</sup> <sup>3</sup>They transported the ark of God on a new cart and took it away from the house of Abinadab on the hill. Uzzah and Ahio, sons of Abinadab, were guiding the cart,<sup>v</sup> <sup>4</sup>with Ahio walking before it, <sup>5</sup>while David and all the house of Israel danced before the LORD with all their might, with singing, and with lyres, harps, tambourines, sistrums, and cymbals.<sup>w</sup> <sup>6</sup>As they reached the threshing floor of Nodan, Uzzah stretched out his hand to the ark of God and steadied it, for the oxen were tipping it. <sup>7</sup>Then the LORD became angry with Uzzah; God struck him on that spot, and he died there in God’s presence. <sup>8</sup>David was angry because the LORD’s wrath had broken out against Uzzah. Therefore that place has been called Perez-uzzah* even to this day. <sup>9</sup>David became frightened of the LORD that day, and he said, “How can the ark of the LORD come to me?” <sup>10</sup>So David was unwilling to take the ark of the LORD with him into the City of David. David deposited it instead at the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.

<sup>11</sup>The ark of the LORD remained in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite for three months, and the LORD blessed Obed-edom and all his household.<sup>x</sup> <sup>12y</sup> When it was reported to King David that the LORD had blessed the household of Obed-edom and all that he possessed because of the ark of God, David went to bring up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom into the City of David with joy.<sup>z</sup> <sup>13</sup>As soon as the bearers of the ark of the LORD had advanced six steps, he sacrificed an ox and a fatling. <sup>14</sup>Then David came dancing before the LORD with abandon, girt with a linen ephod.* <sup>a</sup> <sup>15</sup>David and all the house of Israel were bringing up the ark of the LORD with shouts of joy and sound of horn. <sup>16</sup>As the ark of the LORD was entering the City of David, Michal, daughter of Saul, looked down from her window, and when she saw King David jumping and dancing before the LORD, she despised him in her heart. <sup>17b</sup> They brought in the ark of the LORD and set it in its place within the tent which David had pitched for it. Then

<sup>18</sup>When David had finished sacrificing burnt offerings and communion offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the LORD of hosts, <sup>19</sup>and distributed among all the people, the entire multitude of Israel, to every man and every woman, one loaf of bread, one piece of meat, and one raisin cake. Then all the people returned to their homes.

<sup>20*</sup> When David went home to bless his own house,<sup>c</sup> Michal, the daughter of Saul, came out to meet him and said, “How well the king of Israel has honored himself today, exposing himself to the view of the slave girls of his followers, as a commoner might expose himself!” <sup>21</sup>But David replied to Michal: “I was dancing before the LORD. As the LORD lives, who chose me over your father and all his house when he appointed me ruler over the LORD’s people, Israel, not only will I make merry before the LORD,<sup>d</sup> <sup>22</sup>but I will demean myself even more. I will be lowly in your eyes, but in the eyes of the slave girls you spoke of I will be somebody.” <sup>23</sup>Saul’s daughter Michal was childless to the day she died.

The Oracle of Nathan. <sup>1e</sup> After the king had taken up residence in his house, and the LORD had given him rest from his enemies on every side,<sup>f</sup> <sup>2</sup>the king said to Nathan the prophet, “Here I am living in a house of cedar, but the ark of God dwells in a tent!”<sup>g</sup> <sup>3</sup>Nathan answered the king, “Whatever is in your heart, go and do, for the LORD is with you.”<sup>h</sup> <sup>4</sup>But that same night the word of the LORD came to Nathan: <sup>5</sup>Go and tell David my servant, Thus says the LORD: Is it you who would build me a house to dwell in?<sup>i</sup> <sup>6</sup>I have never dwelt in a house from the day I brought Israel up from Egypt to this day, but I have been going about in a tent or a tabernacle. <sup>7</sup>As long as I have wandered about among the Israelites, did I ever say a word to any of the judges whom I commanded to shepherd my people Israel: Why have you not built me a house of cedar?

<sup>8</sup>Now then, speak thus to my servant David, Thus says the LORD of hosts:* I took you from the pasture, from following the flock, to become ruler over my people Israel.<sup>j</sup> <sup>9</sup>I was with you wherever you went, and I cut down all your enemies before you. And I will make your name like that of the greatest on earth.<sup>k</sup> <sup>10</sup>I will assign a place for my people Israel and I will plant them in it to dwell there; they will never again be disturbed, nor shall the wicked ever again oppress them, as they did at the beginning, <sup>11</sup>and from the day when I appointed judges over my people Israel. I will give you rest from all your enemies. Moreover, the LORD also declares to you that the LORD will make a house for you:<sup>l</sup> <sup>12m</sup> when your days have been completed and you rest with your ancestors, I will raise up your offspring after you, sprung from your loins, and I will establish his kingdom. <sup>13</sup>He it is* who shall build a house for my name, and I will establish his royal throne forever. <sup>14</sup>I will be a father to him, and he shall be a son to me. If he does wrong, I will reprove him with a human rod and with human punishments;<sup>n</sup> <sup>15</sup>but I will not withdraw my favor from him as I withdrew it from Saul who was before you.<sup>o</sup> <sup>16</sup>Your house and your kingdom are firm forever before me; your throne shall be firmly established forever.* <sup>p</sup> <sup>17</sup>In accordance with all these words and this whole vision Nathan spoke to David.

David's Thanksgiving. <sup>18</sup>Then King David went in and sat in the LORD's presence and said, "Who am I, Lord GOD, and what is my house, that you should have brought me so far?"<sup>q</sup> <sup>19</sup>And yet even this is too little in your sight, Lord GOD! For you have made a promise regarding your servant's house reaching into the future, and giving guidance to the people, Lord GOD! <sup>20</sup>What more can David say to you? You know* your servant, Lord GOD! <sup>21</sup>For your servant's sake and as you have had at heart, you have brought about this whole magnificent disclosure to your servant. <sup>22</sup>Therefore, great are you, Lord GOD! There is no one like you, no God but you, as we have always heard.<sup>r</sup> <sup>23</sup>What other nation on earth is there like your people Israel? What god has ever led a nation, redeeming it as his people and making a name by great and awesome deeds, as you drove out the nations and their gods before your people, whom you redeemed for yourself from Egypt?<sup>s</sup> <sup>24t</sup> You have established for yourself your people Israel as your people forever, and you, LORD, have become their God. <sup>25</sup>Now, LORD God, confirm the promise that you have spoken concerning your servant and his house forever. Bring about what you have promised <sup>26</sup>so that your name may be forever great. People will say: 'The LORD of hosts is God over Israel,' when the house of your servant David is established in your presence. <sup>27</sup>Because you, LORD of hosts, God of Israel, have revealed to your servant, 'I will build you a house,' your servant now finds the courage to make this prayer before you. <sup>28</sup>Since you, Lord GOD, are truly God and your words are truth and you have made this generous promise to your servant,<sup>u</sup> <sup>29</sup>do, then, bless the house of your servant, that it may be in your presence forever—since you, Lord GOD, have promised, and by your blessing the house of your servant shall be blessed forever."

David's Officials. <sup>15a</sup> David was king over all Israel; he dispensed justice and right to all his people. <sup>16</sup>Joab, son of Zeruiah, was in command of the army. Jehoshaphat, son of Ahilud, was chancellor. <sup>17</sup>Zadok, son of Ahitub, and Ahimelech, son of Abiathar, were priests. * Shavsha was scribe. <sup>18</sup>Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, was in command of the Cherethites and the Pelethites; and David's sons were priests. <sup>b</sup>

David and Meribbaal. <sup>1</sup>David asked, “Is there any survivor of Saul’s house to whom I may show kindness for the sake of Jonathan?”<sup>c</sup> <sup>2</sup>Now there was an official of the house of Saul named Ziba. He was summoned to David, and the king asked him, “Are you Ziba?” He replied, “Your servant.”<sup>d</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then the king asked, “Is there any survivor of Saul’s house to whom I may show God’s kindness?” Ziba answered the king, “There is still Jonathan’s son, the one whose feet are crippled.”<sup>e</sup> <sup>4</sup>The king asked him, “Where is he?” and Ziba answered the king, “He is in the house of Machir, son of Ammiel, in Lodebar.”<sup>f</sup> <sup>5</sup>So King David sent for him and had him brought from the house of Machir, son of Ammiel, from Lodebar. <sup>6</sup>When Meribbaal, son of Jonathan, son of Saul, came to David, he fell face down in homage. David said, “Meribbaal,” and he answered, “Your servant.” <sup>7</sup>“Do not be afraid,” David said to him, “I will surely be kind to you for the sake of Jonathan your father. I will restore to you all the lands of Saul your grandfather, and you shall eat at my table always.” <sup>8</sup>Bowing low, he answered, “What am I, your servant, that you should pay attention to a dead dog like me?”<sup>g</sup> <sup>9</sup>The king then called Ziba, Saul’s attendant, and said to him: “All that belonged to Saul and to his entire house, I am giving to your lord’s son. <sup>10</sup>You and your sons and servants must till the land for him. You shall bring in the produce, which shall be food for your lord’s household to eat. But Meribbaal, your lord’s son, shall always eat at my table.” Now Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty servants. <sup>11</sup>Ziba answered the king, “Whatever my lord the king commands his servant, so shall your servant do.” And so Meribbaal ate at David’s table like one of the king’s sons.<sup>h</sup> <sup>12</sup>Meribbaal had a young son whose name was Mica; and all the tenants of Ziba’s household worked for Meribbaal.<sup>i</sup> <sup>13</sup>But Meribbaal lived in Jerusalem, because he always ate at the king’s table. He was lame in both feet.<sup>j</sup>

CHAPTER 10

Campaigns Against Ammon. <sup>1k</sup> After this, * the king of the Ammonites died, and Hanun his son succeeded him as king. <sup>2</sup>David said, “I will show kindness to Hanun, the son of Nahash, as his father showed kindness to me.” Therefore David sent his servants to Hanun to console him concerning his father. But when David’s servants had entered the land of the Ammonites, <sup>3</sup>the Ammonite princes said to their lord Hanun, “Do you think David is doing this—sending you these consolers—to honor your father? Is it not rather to explore the city, to spy on it, and to overthrow it, that David has sent his servants to you?” <sup>4</sup>So Hanun seized David’s servants, shaved off half their beards, cut away the lower halves of their garments at the buttocks, and sent them away. <sup>l</sup> <sup>5</sup>David was told of it and he sent word for them to be intercepted, for the men had been greatly disgraced. “Remain at Jericho,” the king told them, “until your beards have grown again; then come back here.”

<sup>6*</sup> When the Ammonites realized that they were in bad odor with David, they sent for and hired twenty thousand Aramean foot soldiers from Beth-rehob and Zobah, as well as the king of Maacah with one thousand men, and twelve thousand men from Tob. <sup>m</sup>

Abishai, and reentered their city. Joab then ceased his attack on the Ammonites and came to Jerusalem. <sup>15</sup><sup>o</sup> Seeing themselves vanquished by Israel, the Arameans held a full muster of troops. <sup>16</sup>Hadadezer sent for and brought Arameans from beyond the River. They came to Helam, with Shobach, the captain of Hadadezer's army, at their head. <sup>17</sup>When this was reported to David, he gathered all Israel together, crossed the Jordan, and went to Helam. The Arameans drew up in formation against David and gave battle. <sup>18</sup>But the Arameans fled before Israel, and David killed seven hundred of their chariot fighters and forty thousand of their foot soldiers. He struck down Shobach, commander of the army, and he died on the field. <sup>19</sup>When Hadadezer's vassal kings saw themselves vanquished by Israel, they made peace with the Israelites and became their subjects. After this, the Arameans were afraid to give further aid to the Ammonites.

CHAPTER 11

David's Sin. <sup>1</sup>At the turn of the year,* the time when kings go to war, David sent out Joab along with his officers and all Israel, and they laid waste the Ammonites and besieged Rabbah. David himself remained in Jerusalem.<sup>p</sup> <sup>2</sup>One evening David rose from his bed and strolled about on the roof of the king's house. From the roof he saw a woman bathing; she was very beautiful. <sup>3</sup>David sent people to inquire about the woman and was told, "She is Bathsheba, daughter of Eliam, and wife of Uriah the Hittite, Joab's armor-bearer."<sup>q</sup> <sup>4</sup>Then David sent messengers and took her. When she came to him, he took her to bed, at a time when she was just purified after her period; and she returned to her house.<sup>r</sup> <sup>5</sup>But the woman had become pregnant; she sent a message to inform David, "I am pregnant."

<sup>6</sup>So David sent a message to Joab, "Send me Uriah the Hittite." Joab sent Uriah to David. <sup>7</sup>And when he came, David asked him how Joab was, how the army was, and how the war was going, and Uriah answered that all was well. <sup>8</sup>David then said to Uriah, "Go down to your house and bathe your feet." Uriah left the king's house, and a portion from the king's table was sent after him. <sup>9</sup>But Uriah slept at the entrance of the king's house with the other officers of his lord, and did not go down to his own house. <sup>10</sup>David was told, "Uriah has not gone down to his house." So he said to Uriah, "Have you not come from a journey? Why, then, did you not go down to your house?" <sup>11</sup>Uriah answered David, "The ark and Israel and Judah are staying in tents, and my lord Joab and my lord's servants are encamped in the open field. Can I go home to eat and to drink and to sleep with my wife? As the LORD lives and as you live, I will do no such thing."<sup>s</sup> <sup>12</sup>Then David said to Uriah, "Stay here today also, and tomorrow I will send you back." So Uriah stayed in Jerusalem that day. On the following day, <sup>13</sup>David summoned him, and he ate and drank with David, who got him drunk. But in the evening he went out to sleep on his bed among his lord's servants, and did not go down to his house. <sup>14</sup>The next morning David wrote a letter to Joab which he sent by Uriah. <sup>15</sup>This is what he wrote in the letter: "Place Uriah up front, where the fighting is fierce. Then pull back and leave him to be struck down dead." <sup>16</sup>So while Joab was besieging the city, he assigned Uriah to a place where he knew the defenders were strong. <sup>17</sup>When the men of the city made a sortie against Joab, some officers of David's army fell, and Uriah the Hittite also died.

<sup>18</sup>Then Joab sent David a report of all the details of the battle, <sup>19</sup>instructing the messenger, "When you have finished giving the king all the details of the battle, <sup>20</sup>the king may become angry and say to you: 'Why did you go near the city to fight? Did you not know that they would shoot from the wall above?' <sup>21</sup>Who killed Abimelech, son of Jerubbaal? Was it not a woman who threw a millstone down on him from the wall above, so that he died in Thebez? Why did you go near the wall?' Then you in turn are to say, 'Your servant Uriah the Hittite is also dead.' " <sup>22</sup>The messenger set out, and on his arrival he reported to David everything Joab had sent him to tell. <sup>23</sup>He told David: "The men had the advantage over us and came out into the open against us, but we pushed them back to the entrance of the city gate. <sup>24</sup>Then the archers shot at your servants from the wall above, and some of the king's servants died; and your servant Uriah the Hittite is also dead." <sup>25</sup>David said to the messenger: "This is what you shall say to Joab: 'Do not let this be a great evil in your sight, for the sword devours now here and now there. Strengthen your attack on the city and destroy it.' Encourage him."

<sup>26</sup>When the wife of Uriah heard that her husband had died, she mourned her lord. <sup>27</sup>But once the mourning was over, David sent for her and brought her into his house. She became his wife and bore him a son. But in the sight of the LORD what David had done was evil.

Nathan's Parable. * <sup>1</sup>The LORD sent Nathan to David, and when he came to him, he said: "Tell me how you judge this case: In a certain town there were two men, one rich, the other poor."<sup>u</sup> <sup>2</sup>The rich man had flocks and herds in great numbers. <sup>3</sup>But the poor man had nothing at all except one little ewe lamb that he had bought. He nourished her, and she grew up with him and his children. Of what little he had she ate; from his own cup she drank; in his bosom she slept; she was like a daughter to him. <sup>4</sup>Now, a visitor came to the rich man, but he spared his own flocks and herds to prepare a meal for the traveler who had come to him: he took the poor man's ewe lamb and prepared it for the one who had come to him." <sup>5</sup>David grew very angry with that man and said to Nathan: "As the LORD lives, the man who has done this deserves death! <sup>6</sup>He shall make fourfold restitution* for the lamb because he has done this and was unsparing."<sup>v</sup> <sup>7</sup>Then Nathan said to David: "You are that man!

Nathan's Indictment. "Thus says the LORD God of Israel: I anointed you king over Israel. I delivered you from the hand of Saul."<sup>w</sup> <sup>8</sup>I gave you your lord's house and your lord's wives for your own. I gave you the house of Israel and of Judah. And if this were not enough, I could count up for you still more. <sup>9</sup>Why have you despised the LORD and done what is evil in his sight? You have cut down Uriah the Hittite with the sword; his wife you took as your own, and him you killed with the sword of the Ammonites. <sup>10</sup>Now, therefore, the sword shall never depart from your house, because you have despised me and have taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be your wife."<sup>x</sup> <sup>11</sup>Thus says the LORD: I will bring evil upon you out of your own house. I will take your wives before your very eyes, and will give them to your neighbor: he shall lie with your wives in broad daylight.* <sup>y</sup> <sup>12</sup>You have acted in secret, but I will do this in the presence of all Israel, in the presence of the sun itself."

David's Repentance. <sup>13</sup>Then David said to Nathan, "I have sinned against the LORD." Nathan answered David: "For his part, the LORD has removed your sin. You shall not die,<sup>z</sup> <sup>14</sup>but since you have utterly spurned the LORD by this deed, the child born to you will surely die.” <sup>15</sup>Then Nathan returned to his house.

The LORD struck the child that the wife of Uriah had borne to David, and it became desperately ill. <sup>16</sup>David pleaded with God on behalf of the child. He kept a total fast, and spent the night lying on the ground clothed in sackcloth. <sup>17</sup>The elders of his house stood beside him to get him to rise from the ground; but he would not, nor would he take food with them. <sup>18</sup>On the seventh day, the child died. David’s servants were afraid to tell him that the child was dead, for they said: “When the child was alive, we spoke to him, but he would not listen to what we said. How can we tell him the child is dead? He may do some harm!” <sup>19</sup>But David noticed his servants whispering among themselves and realized that the child was dead. He asked his servants, “Is the child dead?” They said, “Yes.” <sup>20</sup>Rising from the ground, David washed and anointed himself, and changed his clothes. Then he went to the house of the LORD and worshiped. He returned to his own house and asked for food; they set it before him, and he ate. <sup>21</sup>His servants said to him: “What is this you are doing? While the child was living, you fasted and wept and kept vigil; now that the child is dead, you rise and take food.” <sup>22</sup>He replied: “While the child was living, I fasted and wept, thinking, ‘Who knows? The LORD may grant me the child’s life.’ <sup>23</sup>But now he is dead. Why should I fast? Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he will not return to me.”<sup>a</sup> <sup>24</sup>Then David consoled Bathsheba his wife. He went and slept with her; and she conceived and bore him a son, who was named Solomon. The LORD loved him <sup>25</sup>and sent the prophet Nathan to name him Jedidiah,* on behalf of the LORD.

End of the Ammonite War. <sup>26b</sup> Joab fought against Rabbah of the Ammonites and captured that royal city. <sup>27</sup>He sent messengers to David to say: “I have fought against Rabbah and have taken the water-city. <sup>28</sup>Therefore, assemble the rest of the soldiers, join the siege against the city, and capture it, lest I be the one to capture the city and mine be the name people mention, not yours.” <sup>29</sup>So David assembled the rest of the soldiers, went to Rabbah, fought against it, and captured it. <sup>30</sup>He took the crown of Milcom from the idol’s head, a talent* of gold in weight, with precious stones; this crown David wore on his own head. He also brought out a great amount of spoil from the city. <sup>31</sup>He deported the people of the city and set them to work with saws, iron picks, and iron axes, or put them to work at the brickmold. He dealt thus with all the cities of the Ammonites. Then David and his whole army returned to Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 13

Amnon's Rape of Tamar. <sup>1</sup>After this, the following occurred. David's son Absalom had a beautiful sister named Tamar, and David's son Amnon loved her.<sup>c</sup> <sup>2</sup>He was in such anguish over his sister Tamar that he became sick; she was a virgin, and Amnon thought it impossible to do anything to her. <sup>3</sup>Now Amnon had a friend named Jonadab, son of David's brother Shimeah, who was very clever.* <sup>d</sup> <sup>4</sup>He asked him, "Prince, why are you so dejected morning after morning? Why not tell me?" So Amnon said to him, "I am in love with Tamar, my brother Absalom's sister." <sup>5</sup>Then Jonadab replied, "Lie down on your bed and pretend to be sick. When your father comes to visit you, say to him, 'Please let my sister Tamar come and encourage me to take food. If she prepares something in my presence, for me to see, I will eat it from her hand.' " <sup>6</sup>So Amnon lay down and pretended to be sick. When the king came to visit him, Amnon said to the king, "Please let my sister Tamar come and prepare some fried cakes before my eyes, that I may take food from her hand."

<sup>7</sup>David then sent home a message to Tamar, "Please go to the house of your brother Amnon and prepare some food for him." <sup>8</sup>Tamar went to the house of her brother Amnon, who was in bed. Taking dough and kneading it, she twisted it into cakes before his eyes and fried the cakes. <sup>9</sup>Then she took the pan and set out the cakes before him. But Amnon would not eat; he said, "Have everyone leave me." When they had all left him, <sup>10</sup>Amnon said to Tamar, "Bring the food into the bedroom, that I may have it from your hand." So Tamar picked up the cakes she had prepared and brought them to her brother Amnon in the bedroom. <sup>11</sup>But when she brought them close to him so he could eat, he seized her and said to her, "Come! Lie with me, my sister!" <sup>12</sup>But she answered him, "No, my brother! Do not force me! This is not done in Israel. Do not commit this terrible crime."<sup>e</sup> <sup>13</sup>Where would I take my shame? And you would be labeled a fool in Israel.* So please, speak to the king; he will not keep me from you."<sup>f</sup> <sup>14</sup>But he would not listen to her; he was too strong for her: he forced her down and raped her. <sup>15</sup>Then Amnon felt intense hatred for her; the hatred he felt for her far surpassed the love he had had for her. Amnon said to her, "Get up, leave." <sup>16</sup>She replied, "No, brother, because sending me away would be far worse than this evil thing you have done to me.” He would not listen to her, <sup>17</sup>but called the youth who was his attendant and said, “Send this girl outside, away from me, and bar the door after her.” <sup>18</sup>Now she had on a long tunic, for that is how virgin princesses dressed in olden days. When his attendant put her out and barred the door after her, <sup>19</sup>Tamar put ashes on her head and tore the long tunic in which she was clothed. Then, putting her hands to her head, she went away crying loudly. <sup>20</sup>Her brother Absalom said to her: “Has your brother Amnon been with you? Keep still now, my sister; he is your brother. Do not take this so to heart.” So Tamar remained, devastated, in the house of her brother Absalom. <sup>21</sup>King David, when he heard of the whole affair, became very angry. He would not, however, antagonize Amnon, his high-spirited son; he loved him, because he was his firstborn. <sup>22</sup>And Absalom said nothing, good or bad, to Amnon; but Absalom hated Amnon for having humiliated his sister Tamar.

Absalom’s Plot. <sup>23</sup>Two years went by. It was sheep-shearing time for Absalom in Baal-hazor near Ephraim, and Absalom invited all the king’s sons. <sup>24</sup>Absalom went to the king and said: “Your servant has hired the shearers. Please, may the king come with all his servants to your servant.” <sup>25</sup>But the king said to Absalom, “No, my son, all of us should not go lest we be a burden to you.” And though Absalom urged him, he would not go but began to bid him good-bye. <sup>26</sup>Absalom then said, “If not you, then please let my brother Amnon come with us.” The king asked him, “Why should he go with you?” <sup>27</sup>But at Absalom’s urging, the king sent Amnon and with him all his other sons. Absalom prepared a banquet fit for a king. <sup>28g</sup> But Absalom had instructed his attendants: “Now watch! When Amnon is merry with wine and I say to you, ‘Kill Amnon,’ put him to death. Do not be afraid, for it is I who order you to do it. Be strong and act like warriors.”

Death of Amnon. <sup>29</sup>When the attendants did to Amnon as Absalom had commanded, all the king’s other sons rose up, mounted their mules, and fled. <sup>30</sup>While they were still on the road, a report reached David: “Absalom has killed all the king’s sons and not one of them is left.” <sup>31</sup>The king stood up, tore his garments, and lay on the ground. All his servants standing by him also tore their garments.<sup>h</sup> <sup>32</sup>But Jonadab, son of David’s brother Shimeah, spoke up: “Let not my lord think that all the young men, the king’s sons, have been killed! Amnon alone is dead, for Absalom was set on this ever since Amnon humiliated his sister Tamar. <sup>33</sup>Now let my lord the king not take so to heart that report, ‘All the king’s sons are dead.’ Amnon alone is dead.” <sup>34</sup>Meanwhile, Absalom had taken flight. Then the servant on watch looked out and saw a large group coming down the slope from the direction of Bahurim. He came in and reported this to the king: “I saw some men coming down the mountainside from the direction of Bahurim.” <sup>35</sup>So Jonadab said to the king: “There! The king’s sons have come. It is as your servant said.” <sup>36</sup>No sooner had he finished speaking than the king’s sons came in, weeping aloud. The king, too, and all his servants wept very bitterly. <sup>37</sup>But Absalom, who had taken flight, went to Talmai, son of Ammihud, king of Geshur,<sup>i</sup> <sup>38</sup>and stayed in Geshur for three years. <sup>39</sup>All that time the king continued to mourn his son; but his intention of going out against Absalom abated as he was consoled over the death of Amnon.

CHAPTER 14

The Wise Woman of Tekoa. <sup>1</sup>Now Joab, son of Zeruiah, knew how the king felt toward Absalom. <sup>2</sup>Joab sent to Tekoa and brought from there a wise woman, to whom he said: “Pretend to be in mourning. Put on mourning apparel and do not anoint yourself with oil, that you may appear to be a woman who has long been mourning someone dead. <sup>3</sup>Then go to the king and speak to him in this manner.” And Joab told her what to say.

<sup>4</sup>So the woman of Tekoa went to the king and fell to the ground in homage, saying, “Help, O king!” <sup>5j</sup> The king said to her, “What do you want?” She replied: “Alas, I am a widow; my husband is dead. <sup>6</sup>Your servant had two sons, who quarreled in the field, with no one to part them, and one of them struck his brother and killed him. <sup>7</sup>Then the whole clan confronted your servant and demanded: ‘Give up the one who struck down his brother. We must put him to death for the life of his brother whom he has killed; we must do away with the heir also.’ Thus they will quench my remaining hope* and leave my husband neither name nor posterity upon the earth.”<sup>k</sup> <sup>8</sup>The king then said to the woman: “Go home. I will issue a command on your behalf.” <sup>9</sup>The woman of Tekoa answered him, “Upon me and my family be the blame, my lord king; the king and his throne are innocent.” <sup>10</sup>Then the king said, “If anyone says a word to you, have him brought to me, and he shall not touch you again.” <sup>11</sup>But she said, “Please, let the king remember the LORD your God, that the avenger of blood may not go too far in destruction and that my son may not be done away with.” He replied, “As the LORD lives, not a hair of your son shall fall to the ground.”

matter, it is because the people have given me cause to fear. And so your servant thought: ‘Let me speak to the king. Perhaps he will grant the petition of his servant. <sup>16</sup>For the king must surely listen and rescue his servant from the grasp of one who would destroy both me and my son from the heritage of God.’ <sup>17</sup>And your servant says, ‘Let the word of my lord the king lead to rest; * indeed, my lord the king is like an angel of God, discerning good and evil. The LORD your God be with you.’ ”<sup>m</sup>

<sup>18</sup>The king answered the woman, “Now do not conceal from me anything I may ask you!” The woman said, “Let my lord the king speak.” <sup>19</sup>So the king asked, “Is the hand of Joab with you in all this?” And the woman answered: “As you live, my lord the king, it is just as my lord has said, and not otherwise. It was your servant Joab who instructed me and told your servant all these things she was to say. <sup>20</sup>Your servant Joab did this in order to approach the matter in a roundabout way. But my lord is wise with the wisdom of an angel of God, knowing all things on earth.”

Absalom’s Return. <sup>21</sup>Then the king said to Joab: “I am granting this request. Go and bring back young Absalom.” <sup>22</sup>Falling to the ground in homage and blessing the king, Joab said, “This day your servant knows that I am in good favor with you, my lord king, since the king has granted the request of your servant.” <sup>23</sup>Joab then went off to Geshur and brought Absalom to Jerusalem. <sup>24</sup>But the king said, “Let him go off to his own house; he shall not appear before * me.” So Absalom went off to his house and did not appear before the king.

Absalom Is Pardoned. <sup>28</sup>Absalom lived in Jerusalem for two years without appearing before the king. <sup>29</sup>Then he sent a message asking Joab to send him to the king, but Joab would not come to him. Although he asked him a second time, Joab would not come. <sup>30</sup>He therefore instructed his servants: “You see Joab’s field that borders mine, where he has barley. Go, set it on fire.” And so Absalom’s servants set the field on fire.<sup>o</sup> Joab’s farmhands came to him with torn garments and told him, “Absalom’s servants set your field on fire.” <sup>31</sup>Joab went to Absalom in his house and asked him, “Why have your servants set my field on fire?” <sup>32</sup>Absalom answered Joab: “I sent you a message: Come here, that I may send you to the king to say: ‘Why did I come back from Geshur? I would be better off if I were still there!’ Now, let me appear before the king. If I am guilty, let him put me to death.” <sup>33</sup>Joab went to the king and reported this. The king then called Absalom; he came to him and in homage fell on his face to the ground before the king. Then the king kissed Absalom.

CHAPTER 15

Absalom's Ambition. <sup>1</sup>After this, Absalom provided himself with chariots, horses, and a retinue of fifty.<sup>p</sup> <sup>2</sup>Moreover, Absalom used to rise early and stand alongside the road leading to the gate. If someone had a lawsuit to be decided by the king, Absalom would call to him and say, "From what city are you?" And when he replied, "Your servant is of such and such a tribe of Israel," <sup>3</sup>Absalom would say to him, "Your case is good and just, but there is no one to hear you in the king's name." <sup>4</sup>And he would continue: "If only I could be appointed judge in the land! Then everyone who has a lawsuit to be decided might come to me and I would render him justice." <sup>5</sup>Whenever a man approached him to show homage, he would extend his hand, hold him, and kiss him. <sup>6</sup>By behaving in this way toward all the Israelites who came to the king for judgment, Absalom was stealing the heart of Israel.

Conspiracy in Hebron. <sup>7</sup>After a period of four years, Absalom said to the king: "Please let me go to Hebron and fulfill a vow I made to the LORD. <sup>8</sup>For while living in Geshur in Aram, your servant made this vow: 'If the LORD ever brings me back to Jerusalem, I will worship him in Hebron.' "<sup>q</sup> <sup>9</sup>The king said to him, "Go in peace," and he went off to Hebron. <sup>10</sup>Then Absalom sent agents throughout the tribes of Israel to say, "When you hear the sound of the horn, say, 'Absalom is king in Hebron!'" <sup>11</sup>Two hundred men had accompanied Absalom from Jerusalem. They had been invited and went in all innocence, knowing nothing. <sup>12</sup>Absalom also sent to Ahithophel the Gilonite, David's counselor, an invitation to come from his town, Giloh, for the sacrifices he was about to offer. So the conspiracy gained strength, and the people with Absalom increased in numbers.<sup>r</sup>

David Flees Jerusalem. <sup>13</sup>An informant came to David with the report, "The Israelites have given their hearts to Absalom,<sup>s</sup> and they are following him." <sup>14</sup>At this, David said to all his servants who were with him in Jerusalem: "Get up, let us flee, or none of us will escape from Absalom. Leave at once, or he will quickly overtake us, and then bring disaster upon us, and put the city to the sword." <sup>15</sup>The king's servants answered him, "Whatever our lord the king chooses to do, we are your servants." <sup>16</sup>Then the king set out, accompanied by his entire household, except for ten concubines whom he left behind to care for the palace.<sup>t</sup> <sup>17</sup>As the king left the city, with all his officers accompanying him, they halted opposite the ascent of the Mount of Olives, at a distance, <sup>18</sup>while the whole army marched past him.

David and Ittai. As all the Cherethites and Pelethites, and the six hundred Gittites who had entered his service from that city, were passing in review before the king,<sup>u</sup> <sup>19</sup>the king said to Ittai the Gittite: “Why should you also go with us? Go back and stay with the king, for you are a foreigner and you, too, are an exile from your own country. <sup>20</sup>You came only yesterday, and today shall I have you wander off with us wherever I have to go? Return and take your brothers with you, and may the LORD show you kindness and fidelity.” <sup>21</sup>But Ittai answered the king, “As the LORD lives, and as my lord the king lives, your servant shall be wherever my lord the king is, whether for death or for life.”<sup>v</sup> <sup>22</sup>So the king said to Ittai, “Go, then, march on.” And Ittai the Gittite, with all his men and all the dependents that were with him, marched on. <sup>23</sup>The whole land wept aloud as the last of the soldiers went by, and the king crossed the Wadi Kidron with all the soldiers moving on ahead of him by way of the ascent of the Mount of Olives, toward the wilderness.

David and the Priests. <sup>24</sup>Zadok, too, and all the Levites bearing the ark of the covenant of God set down the ark of God until the whole army had finished marching out of the city; and Abiathar came up. <sup>25</sup>Then the king said to Zadok: “Take the ark of God back to the city. If I find favor with the LORD, he will bring me back and permit me to see it and its lodging place. <sup>26</sup>But if he should say, ‘I am not pleased with you,’ I am ready; let him do to me as he sees fit.”<sup>w</sup> <sup>27</sup>The king also said to Zadok the priest: “Look, you and Abiathar return to the city in peace, and both your sons with you, your own son Ahimaaz, and Abiathar’s son Jonathan. <sup>28</sup>Remember, I shall be waiting at the fords near the wilderness until a report from you comes to me.” <sup>29</sup>So Zadok and Abiathar took the ark of God back to Jerusalem and remained there.

<sup>30</sup>As David went up the ascent of the Mount of Olives, he wept without ceasing. His head was covered, and he was walking barefoot. All those who were with him also had their heads covered and were weeping as they went.<sup>x</sup> <sup>31</sup>When David was told, “Ahithophel is among the conspirators with Absalom,” he said, “O LORD, turn the counsel of Ahithophel to folly!”<sup>y</sup>

David and Hushai. <sup>32</sup>When David reached the top, where God was worshiped, Hushai the Archite was there to meet him, with garments torn and dirt upon his head.<sup>z</sup> <sup>33</sup>David said to him: “If you come with me, you will be a burden to me; <sup>34</sup>but if you return to the city and say to Absalom, ‘Let me be your servant, O king; I was formerly your father’s servant, but now I will be yours,’ you will thwart for me the counsel of Ahithophel.”<sup>a</sup> <sup>35</sup>You will have the priests Zadok and Abiathar there with you. If you hear anything from the king’s house, you shall report it to the priests Zadok and Abiathar, <sup>36</sup>who have there with them their two sons, Zadok’s son Ahimaaz and Abiathar’s son Jonathan. Through them you shall send on to me whatever you hear.” <sup>37</sup>So David’s friend Hushai went into the city, Jerusalem, as Absalom was about to enter it.

CHAPTER 16

David and Ziba. <sup>1</sup>David went a little beyond the top and Ziba, the servant of Meribbaal, was there to meet him with saddled donkeys laden with two hundred loaves of bread, an ephah of cakes of pressed raisins, an ephah of summer fruits, and a skin of wine.<sup>b</sup> <sup>2</sup>The king said to Ziba, “What are you doing with all this?” Ziba replied: “The donkeys are for the king’s household to ride on. The bread and summer fruits are for your servants to eat, and the wine to drink when they grow weary in the wilderness.” <sup>3</sup>Then the king said, “And where is your lord’s son?” Ziba answered the king, “He is staying in Jerusalem, for he said, ‘Today the house of Israel will restore to me my father’s kingdom.’”<sup>c</sup> <sup>4</sup>The king therefore said to Ziba, “So! Everything Meribbaal had is yours.” Then Ziba said: “I pay you homage, my lord the king. May I find favor with you!”<sup>d</sup>

David and Shimei. <sup>5</sup>As King David was approaching Bahurim, there was a man coming out; he was of the same clan as the house of Saul, and his name was Shimei, son of Gera. He kept cursing as he came out,<sup>e</sup> <sup>6</sup>and throwing stones at David and at all King David’s officers, even though all the soldiers, including the royal guard, were on David’s right and on his left. <sup>7</sup>Shimei was saying as he cursed: “Get out! Get out! You man of blood, you scoundrel! <sup>8</sup>The LORD has paid you back for all the blood shed from the family of Saul,* whom you replaced as king, and the LORD has handed over the kingdom to your son Absalom. And now look at you: you suffer ruin because you are a man of blood.” <sup>9</sup>Abishai, son of Zeruiah, said to the king: “Why should this dead dog curse my lord the king? Let me go over and take off his head.”<sup>f</sup> <sup>10</sup>But the king replied: “What business is it of mine or of yours, sons of Zeruiah, that he curses? Suppose the LORD has told him to curse David; who then will dare to say, ‘Why are you doing this?’”<sup>g</sup> <sup>11</sup>Then David said to Abishai and to all his servants: “If my own son, who came forth from my loins, is seeking my life, how much more might this Benjaminite do so! Let him alone and let him curse, for the LORD has told him to.”<sup>h</sup> <sup>12</sup>Perhaps the LORD will look upon my affliction and repay me with good for the curses he is uttering this day.” <sup>13</sup>David and his men continued on the road, while Shimei kept up with them on the hillside, all the while cursing and throwing stones and dirt as he went.<sup>i</sup> <sup>14</sup>The king and all the soldiers with him arrived at the Jordan tired out, and stopped there to rest.

Absalom's Counselors. <sup>15</sup>In the meantime Absalom, with all the Israelites, entered Jerusalem, and Ahithophel was with him. <sup>16</sup>When David's friend Hushai the Archite came to Absalom, he said to him: "Long live the king! Long live the king!"<sup>j</sup> <sup>17</sup>But Absalom asked Hushai: "Is this your devotion to your friend? Why did you not go with your friend?" <sup>18</sup>Hushai replied to Absalom: "On the contrary, I am his whom the LORD and all this people and all Israel have chosen, and with him I will stay. <sup>19</sup>Furthermore, as I was in attendance upon your father, so will I be before you. Whom should I serve, if not his son?"<sup>k</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Then Absalom said to Ahithophel, "Offer your counsel on what we should do." <sup>21</sup>Ahithophel replied to Absalom: "Go to your father's concubines, whom he left behind to take care of the palace. When all Israel hears how odious you have made yourself to your father, all those on your side will take courage."<sup>l</sup> <sup>22</sup>So a tent was pitched on the roof for Absalom, and Absalom went to his father's concubines in view of all Israel.<sup>m</sup>

Counsel of Ahithophel. <sup>23</sup>Now the counsel given by Ahithophel at that time was as though one sought the word of God. Such was all the counsel of Ahithophel both to David and to Absalom.<sup>n</sup>

CHAPTER 17

See RG 211–12

<sup>1</sup>Ahithophel went on to say to Absalom: “Let me choose twelve thousand men and be off in pursuit of David tonight. <sup>2</sup>If I come upon him when he is weary and discouraged, I shall cause him panic, and all the people with him will flee, and I shall strike down the king alone. <sup>3</sup>Then I can bring back the rest of the people to you, as a bride returns to her husband. It is the death of only one man you are seeking; then all the people will be at peace.” <sup>4</sup>This plan sounded good to Absalom and to all the elders of Israel.

Counsel of Hushai. <sup>5</sup>Then Absalom said, “Now call Hushai the Archite also; let us hear what he too has to say.” <sup>6</sup>When Hushai came to Absalom, Absalom said to him: “This is Ahithophel’s plan. Shall we follow his plan? If not, give your own.” <sup>7</sup>Hushai replied to Absalom, “This time Ahithophel has not given good counsel.” <sup>8</sup>And he went on to say: “You know that your father and his men are warriors, and that they are as fierce as a bear in the wild robbed of her cubs. Moreover, since your father is a skilled fighter, he will not spend the night with the army.<sup>o</sup> <sup>9</sup>Even now he lies hidden in one of the caves or in one of his other places. And if some of our soldiers should fall at the first attack, whoever hears of it will say, ‘Absalom’s followers have been slaughtered.’ <sup>10</sup>Then even the brave man with the heart of a lion—his heart will melt. For all Israel knows that your father is a fighter and those who are with him are brave. <sup>11</sup>This is what I counsel: Let all Israel be assembled, from Dan to Beer-sheba, as numerous as the sands by the sea, and you yourself go with them. <sup>12</sup>We can then attack him wherever we find him, settling down upon him as dew alights on the ground. None shall survive—neither he nor any of his followers. <sup>13</sup>And if he retires into a city, all Israel shall bring ropes to that city and we can drag it into the gorge, so that not even a pebble of it can be found.” <sup>14</sup>Then Absalom and all the Israelites said, “The counsel of Hushai the Archite is better than the counsel of Ahithophel.” For the LORD had commanded that Ahithophel’s good counsel should be thwarted, so that he might bring Absalom to ruin.<sup>p</sup>

David Told of the Plan. <sup>15</sup>Then Hushai said to the priests Zadok and Abiathar: “This is the counsel Ahithophel gave Absalom and the elders of Israel, and this is what I counseled. <sup>16</sup>So send a warning to David immediately: ‘Do not spend the night at the fords near the wilderness, but cross over without fail. Otherwise the king and all the people with him will be destroyed.’ ” <sup>17</sup>Now Jonathan and Ahimaaz were staying at En-rogel. A maidservant was to come with information for them, and they in turn were to go and report to King David. They could not risk being seen entering the city, <sup>18</sup>but an attendant did see them and informed Absalom. They hurried on their way and reached the house of a man in Bahurim who had a cistern in his courtyard. They let themselves down into it, <sup>19</sup>and the woman took the cover and spread it over the mouth of the cistern, strewing crushed grain on the cover so that nothing could be noticed. <sup>20</sup>When Absalom’s servants came to the woman at the house, they asked, “Where are Ahimaaz and Jonathan?” The woman replied, “They went by a short while ago toward the water.” They searched, but found no one, and so returned to Jerusalem. <sup>21</sup>As soon as they left, Ahimaaz and Jonathan came up out of the cistern and went on to report to King David. They said to him: “Leave! Cross the water at once, for Ahithophel has given such and such counsel in regard to you.” <sup>22</sup>So David and all his people moved on and crossed the Jordan. By daybreak, there was no one left who had not crossed.

CHAPTER 18

Preparation for Battle. <sup>1</sup>After mustering the troops he had with him, David placed officers in command of units of a thousand and units of a hundred. <sup>2</sup>David then divided the troops three ways, a third under Joab, a third under Abishai, son of Zeruiah and brother of Joab, and a third under Ittai the Gittite. The king said to the troops, “I intend to go out with you myself.” <sup>3</sup>But they replied: “You must not come out with us. For if we flee, no one will care; even if half of us die, no one will care. But you are worth ten thousand of us. Therefore it is better that we have you to help us from the city.” <sup>4</sup>The king said to them, “I will do what you think best.” So the king stood by the gate as all the soldiers marched out in units of a hundred and a thousand. <sup>5</sup>But the king gave this command to Joab, Abishai, and Ittai: “Be gentle with young Absalom for my sake.” All the soldiers heard as the king gave commands to the various leaders with regard to Absalom.

Defeat of Absalom’s Forces. <sup>6</sup>David’s army then took the field against Israel, and a battle was fought in the forest near Mahanaim. <sup>7</sup>The forces of Israel were defeated by David’s servants, and the casualties there that day were heavy—twenty thousand men. <sup>8</sup>The battle spread out over that entire region, and the forest consumed more combatants that day than did the sword.

Death of Absalom. <sup>9</sup>Absalom unexpectedly came up against David’s servants. He was mounted on a mule, and, as the mule passed under the branches of a large oak tree, his hair caught fast in the tree. He hung between heaven and earth while the mule under him kept going. <sup>10</sup>Someone saw this and reported to Joab, “I saw Absalom hanging from an oak tree.” <sup>11</sup>Joab said to the man who told him this: “If you saw him, why did you not strike him to the ground on the spot? Then it would have been my duty to give you fifty pieces of silver and a belt.” <sup>12</sup>But the man replied to Joab: “Even if I already held a thousand pieces of silver in my two hands, I would not lay a hand on the king’s son, for in our hearing the king gave you and Abishai and Ittai a command: ‘Protect the youth Absalom for my sake.’” <sup>13</sup>Had I been disloyal and killed him, it would all have come out before the king, and you would stand aloof.” <sup>14</sup>Joab replied, “I will not waste time with you in this way.” And taking three pikes in hand, he thrust for the heart of Absalom. He was still alive in the tree.<sup>t</sup> <sup>15</sup>When ten of Joab’s young armor-bearers closed in on Absalom, and killed him with further blows, <sup>16</sup>Joab then sounded the horn, and the soldiers turned back from the pursuit of the Israelites, because Joab called them to halt. <sup>17</sup>They took Absalom and cast him into a deep pit in the forest, and built up a very large mound of stones over him. And all the Israelites fled to their own tents.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>18</sup>During his lifetime Absalom had taken a pillar and set it up for himself in the King’s Valley, for he said, “I have no son to perpetuate my name.” The pillar which he named for himself is called Absalom’s Monument to the present day.<sup>v</sup>

David Told of Absalom’s Death. <sup>19</sup>Then Ahimaaz, son of Zadok, said, “Let me run to take the good news to the king that the LORD has set him free from the power of his enemies.” <sup>20</sup>But Joab said to him: “You are not the man to bring the news today. On some other day you may take the good news, but today you would not be bringing good news, for in fact the king’s son is dead.” <sup>21</sup>Then Joab said to a Cushite, “Go, tell the king what you have seen.” The Cushite bowed to Joab and ran off. <sup>22</sup>But Ahimaaz, son of Zadok, said to Joab again, “Come what may, permit me also to run after the Cushite.” Joab replied: “Why do you want to run, my son? You will receive no reward.” <sup>23</sup>But he insisted, “Come what may, I want to run.” Joab said to him, “Run.” Ahimaaz took the way of the Jordan plain and outran the Cushite.

<sup>24</sup>Now David was sitting between the two gates, and a lookout mounted to the roof of the gate above the city wall, where he looked out and saw a man running all alone. <sup>25</sup>The lookout shouted to inform the king, who said, “If he is alone, he has good news to report.” As he kept coming nearer, <sup>26</sup>the lookout spied another runner. From his place atop the gate he cried out, “There is another man running by himself.” And the king responded, “He, too, is bringing good news.” <sup>27</sup>Then the lookout said, “I notice that the first one runs like Ahimaaz, son of Zadok.” The king replied, “He is a good man; he comes with good news.”<sup>w</sup> <sup>28</sup>Then Ahimaaz called out and greeted the king. With face to the ground he paid homage to the king and said, “Blessed be the LORD your God, who has delivered up the men who rebelled against my lord the king.” <sup>29</sup>But the king asked, “Is young Absalom safe?”

And Ahimaaz replied, “I saw a great disturbance when the king’s servant Joab sent your servant on, but I do not know what it was.” <sup>30</sup>The king said, “Step aside and remain in attendance here.” So he stepped aside and remained there. <sup>31</sup>When the Cushite came in, he said, “Let my lord the king receive the good news that this day the LORD has freed you from the power of all who rose up against you.” <sup>32</sup>But the king asked the Cushite, “Is young Absalom all right?” The Cushite replied, “May the enemies of my lord the king and all who rebel against you with evil intent be as that young man!”

CHAPTER 19

See RG 211–12

<sup>1</sup>The king was shaken, and went up to the room over the city gate and wept. He said as he wept, “My son Absalom! My son, my son Absalom! If only I had died instead of you, Absalom, my son, my son!”

Joab Reproves David. <sup>2</sup>Joab was told, “The king is weeping and mourning for Absalom,” <sup>3</sup>and that day’s victory was turned into mourning for the whole army when they heard, “The king is grieving for his son.” <sup>4</sup>The soldiers stole into the city that day like men shamed by flight in battle. <sup>5</sup>Meanwhile the king covered his face and cried out in a loud voice, “My son Absalom! Absalom! My son, my son!”<sup>x</sup> <sup>6</sup>So Joab went to the king’s residence and said: “Though they saved your life and your sons’ and daughters’ lives, and the lives of your wives and your concubines, you have put all your servants to shame today <sup>7</sup>by loving those who hate you and hating those who love you. For you have announced today that officers and servants are nothing to you. Indeed I am now certain that if Absalom were alive today and all of us dead, that would be fine with you. <sup>8</sup>Now then, get up! Go out and speak kindly to your servants. I swear by the LORD that if you do not go out, not a single man will remain with you overnight, and this will be a far greater disaster for you than any that has come upon you from your youth until now.” <sup>9</sup>So the king got up and sat at the gate. When all the people were told, “The king is sitting at the gate,” they came into his presence.

The Reconciliation. Now the Israelites had fled to their separate tents, <sup>10</sup>but throughout the tribes of Israel all the people were arguing among themselves, saying to one another: “The king delivered us from the grasp of our enemies, and it was he who rescued us from the grasp of the Philistines. Now, he has fled the country before Absalom, <sup>11</sup>but Absalom, whom we anointed over us, has died in battle. Why, then, should you remain silent about restoring the king to his palace?” When the talk of all Israel reached the king, <sup>12</sup>David sent word to the priests Zadok and Abiathar: “Say to the elders of Judah: ‘Why should you be last to restore the king to his palace?’ <sup>13</sup>You are my brothers, you are my bone and flesh. Why should you be last to restore the king?’ <sup>14</sup>Also say to Amasa: ‘Are you not my bone and flesh?’

May God do thus to me, and more, if you do not become commander of my army permanently in place of Joab.’ ”<sup>y 15</sup>He won the hearts of the Judahites all together, and so they sent a message to the king: “Return, with all your servants.”

David and Shimei. <sup>16</sup>So the king returned, and when he reached the Jordan, Judah had come to Gilgal to meet him and to bring him across the Jordan. <sup>17</sup>Shimei, son of Gera, the Benjaminite from Bahurim, hurried down with the Judahites to meet King David,<sup>z 18</sup>accompanied by a thousand men from Benjamin. Ziba, too, the servant of the house of Saul, accompanied by his fifteen sons and twenty servants, hastened to the Jordan before the king.<sup>a 19b</sup> They crossed over the ford to bring the king’s household over and to do whatever he wished. When Shimei, son of Gera, crossed the Jordan, he fell down before the king <sup>20</sup>and said to him: “May my lord not hold me guilty; do not remember or take to heart the wrong that your servant did the day my lord the king left Jerusalem. <sup>21</sup>For your servant knows that I have done wrong. But I now am the first of the whole house of Joseph to come down today to meet my lord the king.” <sup>22</sup>But Abishai, son of Zeruiah, countered: “Shimei must be put to death for this. He cursed the anointed of the LORD.” <sup>23</sup>David replied: “What has come between you and me, sons of Zeruiah, that you would become my adversaries this day? Should anyone die today in Israel? Am I not aware that today I am king over Israel?”<sup>c 24</sup>Then the king said to Shimei, “You shall not die.” And the king gave him his oath.

David and Meribbaal. <sup>25</sup>Meribbaal, son of Saul, also went down to meet the king. He had not cared for his feet nor trimmed his mustache nor washed his clothes from the day the king left until he returned safely. <sup>26</sup>When he came from Jerusalem to meet the king, the king asked him, “Why did you not go with me, Meribbaal?”<sup>d 27</sup>He replied: “My lord king, my servant deceived me. For your servant said to him, ‘Saddle the donkey for me, that I may ride on it and go with the king’; your servant is lame.”<sup>e 28</sup>But he slandered your servant before my lord the king. But my lord the king is like an angel of God. Do whatever seems good to you. <sup>29</sup>For though my father’s entire house deserved only death from my lord the king, yet you placed your servant among those who eat at your table. What right do I still have to make further appeal to the king?”<sup>f 30</sup>But the king said to him: “Why do you go on talking? I say, 'You and Ziba shall divide the property.' ”<sup>9</sup>

David and Barzillai. <sup>32</sup>Barzillai the Gileadite also came down from Rogelim and escorted the king to the Jordan for his crossing, taking leave of him at the Jordan.<sup>h</sup> <sup>33</sup>It was Barzillai, a very old man of eighty, who had provided for the king during his stay in Mahanaim; he was a very great man. <sup>34</sup>The king said to Barzillai, “Cross over with me, and I will provide for your old age as my guest in Jerusalem.” <sup>35</sup>But Barzillai answered the king: “How much longer have I to live, that I should go up to Jerusalem with the king? <sup>36</sup>I am now eighty years old. Can I distinguish between good and evil? Can your servant taste what he eats and drinks, or still hear the voices of men and women singers? Why should your servant be any further burden to my lord the king? <sup>37</sup>In escorting the king across the Jordan, your servant is doing little enough! Why should the king give me this reward? <sup>38</sup>Please let your servant go back to die in my own city by the tomb of my father and mother. Here is your servant Chimham. Let him cross over with my lord the king. Do for him whatever seems good to you.” <sup>39</sup>Then the king said to him, “Chimham shall cross over with me, and for him I will do whatever seems good to you. And anything else you would like me to do for you, I will do.” <sup>40</sup>Then all the people crossed over the Jordan but the king remained; he kissed Barzillai and bade him farewell as he returned to his own place. <sup>41</sup>Finally the king crossed over to Gilgal, accompanied by Chimham.

Israel and Judah Quarrel. All of the people of Judah and half of the people of Israel had escorted the king across. <sup>42</sup>But then all these Israelites began coming to the king and saying, “Why did our brothers the Judahites steal you away and bring the king and his household across the Jordan, along with all David’s men?” <sup>43</sup>All the Judahites replied to the men of Israel: “Because the king is our relative. Why are you angry over this? Have we had anything to eat at the king’s expense? Or have portions from his table been given to us?” <sup>44</sup>The Israelites answered the Judahites: “We have ten shares in the king. Also, we are the firstborn* rather than you. Why do you slight us? Were we not first to speak of restoring our king?” Then the Judahites in turn spoke even more fiercely than the Israelites.<sup>i</sup>

CHAPTER 20

Sheba's Rebellion. <sup>1</sup>Now a scoundrel named Sheba, the son of Bichri, a Benjaminite, happened to be there. He sounded the horn and cried out,

“We have no share in David,
nor any heritage in the son of Jesse.
Everyone to your tents, O Israel!”<sup>j</sup>

Amasa's Death. <sup>4</sup>Then the king said to Amasa: “Summon the Judahites for me within three days. Then present yourself here.”<sup>l</sup> <sup>5</sup>Accordingly Amasa set out to summon Judah, but delayed beyond the time set for him. <sup>6</sup>Then David said to Abishai: “Sheba, son of Bichri, may now do us more harm than Absalom did. Take your lord's servants and pursue him, lest he find fortified cities and take shelter while we look on.” <sup>7</sup>So Joab and the Cherethites and Pelethites and all the warriors marched out behind Abishai from Jerusalem to campaign in pursuit of Sheba, son of Bichri.<sup>m</sup> <sup>8</sup> * They were at the great stone in Gibeon when Amasa met them. Now Joab had a belt over his tunic, from which was slung a sword in its sheath at his thigh; the sword would slide out downwards.<sup>n</sup> <sup>9</sup>Joab asked Amasa, “Is everything all right, my brother?” and with his right hand held Amasa's beard as if to kiss him. <sup>10</sup>And since Amasa was not on his guard against the sword in Joab's other hand, Joab stabbed him in the abdomen with it, so that his entrails burst forth to the ground, and he died; there was no second thrust. Then Joab and Abishai his brother pursued Sheba, son of Bichri.<sup>o</sup> <sup>11</sup>One of Joab's attendants stood by Amasa and said, “Let him who favors Joab and is for David follow Joab.” <sup>12</sup>Amasa lay covered with blood in the middle of the highroad, and the man noticed that all the soldiers were stopping. So he rolled Amasa away from the road to the field and spread a garment over him, because he saw how all who came upon him were stopping. <sup>13</sup>When he had been removed from the road, everyone went on after Joab in pursuit of Sheba, son of Bichri.

Joab Pursues Sheba. <sup>14</sup>Sheba had passed through all the tribes of Israel to Abel Bethmaacah. Then all the Bichrites assembled and they too entered the city after him. <sup>15</sup>So all Joab's troops came and besieged him in Abel Beth-maacah. They built up a mound against the city, so that it stood against the rampart, and were battering the wall to knock it down. <sup>16</sup>Then a wise woman from the city called out, "Listen, listen! Tell Joab, 'Come here, so I can speak with you.' " <sup>17</sup>When Joab had come near her, the woman said, "Are you Joab?" And he replied, "Yes." She said to him, "Listen to what your servant has to say." He replied, "I am listening." <sup>18</sup>Then she went on to say: "There is a saying from long ago, * 'Let them ask if they will in Abel or in Dan whether loyalty is finished <sup>19</sup>or ended in Israel.' You are seeking to batter down a city that is a mother in Israel. Why do you wish to swallow up the heritage of the LORD?" <sup>p</sup> <sup>20</sup>Joab answered, "Not at all, not at all! I do not wish to swallow or batter anything. <sup>21</sup>That is not the case at all. A man from the hill country of Ephraim, whose name is Sheba, son of Bichri, has rebelled against King David. Give him up, just him, and I will withdraw from the city." Then the woman said to Joab, "His head shall be thrown to you across the wall." <sup>22</sup>In her wisdom, the woman went to all the people, and they cut off the head of Sheba, son of Bichri, and threw it out to Joab. He then sounded the horn, and they scattered from the city to their own tents, while Joab returned to Jerusalem to the king.

David's Officials. <sup>23</sup>Joab was in command of the whole army of Israel. Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, was in command of the Cherethites and Pelethites. <sup>q</sup> <sup>24</sup>Adoram was in charge of the forced labor. Jehoshaphat, son of Ahilud, was the chancellor. <sup>25</sup>Shawsha was the scribe. Zadok and Abiathar were priests. <sup>r</sup> <sup>26</sup>Ira the Jairite was also David's priest.

Gibeonite Vengeance. <sup>1</sup>In David's time there was a famine for three years, year after year. David sought the presence of the LORD, who said: There is bloodguilt on Saul and his family because he put the Gibeonites to death.<sup>s</sup> <sup>2</sup>So the king called the Gibeonites and spoke to them. (Now the Gibeonites were not Israelites, but survivors of the Amorites; and although the Israelites had given them their oath, Saul had sought to kill them off in his zeal for the Israelites and for Judah.)<sup>t</sup> <sup>3</sup>David said to the Gibeonites, "What must I do for you and how must I make atonement, that you may bless the heritage of the LORD?" <sup>4</sup>The Gibeonites answered him, "We have no claim against Saul and his house for silver or gold, nor is it our place to put anyone to death in Israel." Then he said, "I will do for you whatever you propose." <sup>5</sup>They said to the king, "As for the man who was exterminating us and who intended to destroy us that we might have no place in all the territory of Israel, <sup>6</sup>let seven men from among his descendants be given to us, that we may execute them before the LORD in Gibeon, on the LORD's mountain." The king replied, "I will give them up." <sup>7</sup>The king, however, spared Meribbaal, son of Jonathan, son of Saul, because of the LORD's oath that formed a bond between David and Saul's son Jonathan.<sup>u</sup> <sup>8</sup>But the king took Armoni and Meribbaal, the two sons that Aiah's daughter Rizpah had borne to Saul, and the five sons of Saul's daughter Merob that she had borne to Adriel, son of Barzillai the Meholathite,<sup>v</sup> <sup>9</sup>and delivered them into the power of the Gibeonites, who then executed them on the mountain before the LORD. The seven fell at the one time; they were put to death during the first days of the harvest—that is, at the beginning of the barley harvest.

time they defeated Saul on Gilboa.<sup>x 13</sup> When he had brought up from there the bones of Saul and of his son Jonathan, the bones of those who had been executed were also gathered up. <sup>14</sup> Then the bones of Saul and of his son Jonathan were buried in the land of Benjamin, at Zela, in the tomb of his father Kish. After all that the king commanded had been carried out, God granted relief to the land.<sup>y</sup>

Exploits in Philistine Wars. <sup>15</sup> There was another battle between the Philistines and Israel. David went down with his servants and fought the Philistines, but David grew tired. <sup>16</sup> Dadu, a descendant of the Rephaim, whose bronze spear weighed three hundred shekels, was about to take him captive. Dadu was girt with a new sword and thought he would kill David, <sup>17</sup> but Abishai, son of Zeruiah, came to help him, and struck and killed the Philistine. Then David's men swore to him, "You must not go out to battle with us again, lest you quench the lamp of Israel."<sup>z</sup>

<sup>18a</sup> After this, there was another battle with the Philistines, in Gob. On that occasion Sibbecai the Hushathite struck down Saph, a descendant of the Rephaim.<sup>b 19c</sup> There was another battle with the Philistines, in Gob, and Elhanan, son of Jair from Bethlehem, killed Goliath of Gath, whose spear shaft was like a weaver's beam. <sup>20</sup> There was another battle, at Gath, and there was a giant, who had six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot—twenty-four in all. He too was descended from the Rephaim. <sup>21</sup> And when he insulted Israel, Jonathan, son of David's brother Shimei, struck him down.<sup>d 22</sup> These four were descended from the Rephaim in Gath, and they fell at the hands of David and his servants.

Song of Thanksgiving. * <sup>1</sup>David proclaimed the words of this song to the LORD when the LORD had rescued him from the grasp of all his enemies and from the grasp of Saul. <sup>e</sup> <sup>2</sup>He said: <sup>f</sup>

O LORD, my rock, my fortress, my
deliverer,

<sup>3</sup>my God, my rock of refuge!

My shield, my saving horn, *
my stronghold, my refuge, my savior, from violence you keep me safe. <sup>g</sup>

I have been delivered from my enemies.

about me,
the menacing floods * terrified me;

the snares of death lay in wait for me.

<sup>7</sup>In my distress I called out: LORD!
I cried out to my God;
From his temple * he heard my voice,
my cry reached his ears.

<sup>8</sup>The earth rocked and shook; *
the foundations of the heavens
trembled;
they shook as his wrath flared up.

<sup>9</sup>Smoke rose in his nostrils,
a devouring fire from his mouth;
it kindled coals into flame.

a dark cloud under his feet. <sup>h</sup>

borne along on the wings of the wind. <sup>i</sup>

<sup>12</sup>He made darkness the cover about him,

a mass of water, heavy thunderheads.
13 From the brightness of his presence coals were kindled to flame.
14 The LORD thundered from heaven;
the Most High made his voice resound.
15 He let fly arrows and scattered them;
lightning, and dispersed them.<sup>j</sup> 16 Then the bed of the sea appeared;
the world's foundations lay bare,
At the roar of the LORD,
at the storming breath of his nostrils.<sup>k</sup> 17 He reached down from on high and
seized me,
drew me out of the deep waters.<sup>l</sup> 18 He rescued me from my mighty enemy,
from foes too powerful for me.
19 They attacked me on a day of distress,
but the LORD came to my support.
20 He set me free in the open;
he rescued me because he loves me.
21 The LORD acknowledged my righteousness;
rewarded my clean hands.
22 For I kept the ways of the LORD;
I was not disloyal to my God.
23 His laws were all before me,
his decrees I did not cast aside.
24 I was honest toward him;
I was on guard against sin.
25 So the LORD rewarded my righteousness,
the cleanness of my hands in his sight.
26<sup>m</sup> Toward the faithful you are faithful;* to the honest you are honest; 27 Toward the sincere you are sincere;
but to the perverse you are devious.
28 Humble people you save, though on the haughty your eyes look down.

29 You are my lamp, O LORD!
My God brightens the darkness about
me.

30 With you I can rush an armed band,
with my God to help I can leap a wall.

31 God's way is unerring;
the LORD's promise is tried and true;
he is a shield for all who trust in him.<sup>n</sup>

32 Truly, who is God except the LORD?
Who but our God is the rock?

33 This God who girded me with might,
kept my way unerring,

34 Who made my feet swift as a deer's, set me safe on the heights,<sup>o</sup>

35 Who trained my hands for war, my arms to bend even a bow of bronze.

36 You have given me your protecting shield,
and your help has made me great.

37 You gave me room to stride;
my feet never stumbled.

38 I pursued my enemies and overtook
them;
I did not turn back till I destroyed
them.

39 I struck them down, and they did not rise;
they fell dead at my feet.

40 You girded me with strength for war;
subdued adversaries at my feet.

41 My foes you put to flight before me;
those who hated me I destroyed.

42 They cried for help, but no one saved
them,
cried to the LORD but got no answer.

43 I ground them fine as the dust of the earth;
like mud in the streets I trod them

down.

<sup>44</sup>You rescued me from the strife of my people;

you made me head over nations.

A people I had not known became my slaves;

<sup>45</sup>Foreigners cringed before me;
as soon as they heard of me they obeyed.

they came trembling from their fortresses.

<sup>47</sup>The LORD lives! Blessed be my rock!
Exalted be God, the rock of my salvation.

<sup>48</sup>O God who granted me vindication, subdued peoples under me,

<sup>49</sup>and helped me escape from my enemies,

Truly you have exalted me above my adversaries,
from the violent you have rescued me.

<sup>50</sup>Thus I will proclaim you, LORD, among the nations;

I will sing the praises of your name.<sup>P</sup>

<sup>51</sup>You have given great victories to your
king,
and shown kindness to your anointed,
to David and his posterity forever.

The Last Words of David. * <sup>1</sup>These are the last words of David:

The oracle of David, son of Jesse;
the oracle of the man God raised up, Anointed of the God of Jacob, favorite of the Mighty One of Israel.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>2</sup>The spirit of the LORD spoke through me; his word was on my tongue.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>3</sup>The God of Israel spoke;
of me the Rock of Israel said,
“One who rules over humankind with justice,
who rules in the fear of God,<sup>s</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Is like the light at sunrise on a cloudless morning, making the land’s vegetation glisten
after rain.”<sup>t</sup>

He has made an eternal covenant
with me,
set forth in detail and secured.<sup>u</sup>

Will he not bring to fruition
all my salvation and my every desire?

<sup>6</sup>But the wicked are all like thorns to be cast away;
they cannot be taken up by hand.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>One wishing to touch them must be armed with iron or the shaft of a spear.
They must be utterly consumed by fire.

David’s Warriors. <sup>8</sup>These are the names of David’s warriors.* Ishbaal, the son of Hachamoni, chief of the Three. He brandished his spear over eight hundred whom he had slain in a single encounter.<sup>w</sup> <sup>9</sup>Next to him was Eleazar, the son of Dodo the Ahohite, one of the Three warriors with David at Ephes-dammim, when they insulted the Philistines who had massed there for battle. The Israelites had retreated,<sup>x</sup> <sup>10</sup>but he stood there and struck down the Philistines until his hand grew tired from clutching the sword. The LORD brought about a great victory on that day; the army turned back to rejoin Eleazar, but only to strip the slain. <sup>11</sup>Next to him was Shammah, son of Agee the Hararite. The Philistines had assembled at Lehi, where there was a plot of land full of lentils. The people were fleeing before the Philistines,<sup>y</sup> <sup>12</sup>but he took his stand in the middle of the plot, kept it safe, and cut down the Philistines. Thus the LORD brought about a great victory. Such deeds as these the Three warriors performed.

<sup>18</sup>Abishai, the brother of Joab, son of Zeruiah, was the chief of the Thirty; he brandished his spear over three hundred whom he had slain. He made a name among the Thirty, <sup>19</sup>but was more famous than any of the Thirty, becoming their leader. However, he did not attain to the Three.

CHAPTER 24

David's Census; the Plague. <sup>1</sup>The LORD's anger against Israel flared again,<sup>f</sup> and he incited David against them: "Go, take a census of Israel and Judah." <sup>2</sup>The king therefore said to Joab and the leaders of the army who were with him, "Tour all the tribes of Israel from Dan to Beer-sheba and register the people, that I may know their number." <sup>3</sup>But Joab replied to the king: "May the LORD your God increase the number of people a hundredfold for my lord the king to see it with his own eyes. But why does it please my lord to do a thing of this kind?" <sup>4</sup>However, the king's command prevailed over Joab and the leaders of the army, so they left the king's presence in order to register the people of Israel. <sup>5</sup>Crossing the Jordan, they began near Aroer, south of the city in the wadi, and turned in the direction of Gad toward Jazer. <sup>6</sup>They continued on to Gilead and to the district below Mount Hermon. Then they proceeded to Dan; from there they turned toward Sidon, <sup>7</sup>going to the fortress of Tyre and to all the cities of the Hivites and Canaanites, and ending up in the Negeb of Judah, at Beer-sheba. <sup>8</sup>Thus they toured the whole land, reaching Jerusalem again after nine months and twenty days. <sup>9</sup>Joab then reported the census figures to the king: of men capable of wielding a sword, there were in Israel eight hundred thousand, and in Judah five hundred thousand.

<sup>10</sup>Afterward, however, David regretted having numbered the people. David said to the LORD: "I have sinned grievously in what I have done.<sup>g</sup> Take away, LORD, your servant's guilt, for I have acted very foolishly."*

<sup>13</sup>Gad then went to David to inform him. He asked: "Should three years of famine come upon your land; or three months of fleeing from your enemy while he pursues you; or is it to be three days of plague in your land? Now consider well: what answer am I to give to him who sent me?"<sup>h</sup> <sup>14</sup>David answered Gad: "I am greatly distressed. But let us fall into the hand of God, whose mercy is great, rather than into human hands." <sup>15</sup>Thus David chose the plague. At the time of the wheat harvest it broke out among the people.

The LORD sent plague over Israel from morning until the time appointed, and from Dan to Beer-sheba seventy thousand of the people died. <sup>16</sup>But when the angel stretched forth his hand toward Jerusalem to destroy it, the LORD changed his mind about the calamity, and said to the angel causing the destruction among the people: Enough now! Stay your hand.<sup>i</sup> The angel of the LORD was then standing at the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite.<sup>j</sup> <sup>17</sup>When David saw the angel who was striking the people, he said to the LORD: “It is I who have sinned; it is I, the shepherd, who have done wrong. But these sheep, what have they done? Strike me and my father’s family!”

David Offers Sacrifices. <sup>18</sup>On the same day Gad went to David and said to him, “Go and set up an altar to the LORD on the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite.” <sup>19</sup>According to Gad’s word, David went up as the LORD had commanded. <sup>20</sup>Now Araunah looked down and saw the king and his servants coming toward him while he was threshing wheat. So he went out and bowed down before the king, his face to the ground. <sup>21</sup>Then Araunah asked, “Why does my lord the king come to his servant?” David replied, “To buy the threshing floor from you, to build an altar to the LORD, that the plague may be withdrawn from the people.” <sup>22k</sup> But Araunah said to David: “Let my lord the king take it and offer up what is good in his sight. See, here are the oxen for burnt offerings, and the threshing sledges and the yokes of oxen for wood. <sup>23</sup>All this does Araunah give to the king.” Araunah then said to the king, “May the LORD your God accept your offering.” <sup>24</sup>The king, however, replied to Araunah, “No, I will buy it from you at the proper price, for I cannot sacrifice to the LORD my God burnt offerings that cost me nothing.” So David bought the threshing floor and the oxen for fifty silver shekels. <sup>25</sup>Then David built an altar to the LORD there, and sacrificed burnt offerings and communion offerings. The LORD granted relief to the land, and the plague was withdrawn from Israel.

1:21 Surging from the deeps: this conjectural reading of the Hebrew yields a parallelism with dew and rain: the mountains where the warriors have fallen in battle are to be desiccated, deprived of water from above (rain, dew) and below (the primordial deeps).

1:22 Unstained: lit., “empty.” The sword was conceived as a devouring mouth; see, e.g., 2:26.

2:8 Ishbaal: here and elsewhere in the Hebrew text, his name appears as “Ishbosheth”; the second part of Ishbaal, - baal, refers to the Canaanite god Baal, and is therefore suppressed, replaced by bosheth, “shame.”

2:14 Perform: lit., “play.”

2:16 The nature of this gruesome game is not clear, and the place name is variously given in the older texts.

3:7 Asserting a right to the late king's harem was tantamount to claiming his kingship; cf. 16:21–22; 1 Kgs 2:21–22.

3:29 An assortment of imprecations, consisting of physical ailments, weakness, violent death, and poverty.

4:4 Meribbaal: Hebrew has mephiboseth; see note on 2:8. His name, in fact, is Meribbaal; cf. 1 Chr 8:34; 9:40. He is the subject of chap. 9 below. The text of this verse may owe its present place to the fact that ancient copies of the Books of Samuel tended to confuse his name with that of his uncle Ishbaal, Saul's son and successor, a principal figure in chaps. 2–4.

5:6–12 David's most important military exploit, the taking of Jerusalem, is here presented before his battles with the Philistines, vv. 17–25, which took place earlier. The sense of vv. 6 and 8 is in doubt. Perhaps the Jebusites boasted that Jerusalem was impregnable, using a metaphorical or proverbial expression that claimed the city was defensible even by people not suited for military action. The saying then received a different sense (v. 8), to the effect that “the blind and the lame” were David's enemies. Mt 21:14 and Lk 14:13 seem to play off, and transform, this saying.

5:12 David now knew: Hiram's carpenters and masons built David a house of cedar, the very model of a Canaanite king's palace. This house then represented the consolidation of David's royal power, in the Canaanite mode, with Jerusalem as David's personal fiefdom and capital city.

5:17 Refuge: probably near Adullam (1 Sm 22:1–5).

5:18–25 The successive defeats of the Philistines in the valley of Rephaim southwest of Jerusalem had the effect of blocking their access to the mountain ridge near Gibeon, and confining them to their holdings on the coast and in the foothills beyond Gezer to the west and south.

5:20 Baal-perazim: here the title ba'al, “master, lord,” refers to the Lord; perazim is the plural of perez, which means “breaking” or “bursting,” as in 6:8.

5:24 Sound of marching: the wind in the treetops suggestive of the footsteps of the Lord and the heavenly host.

6:8 Perez-uzzah: this Hebrew phrase means “the breaking out against Uzzah”; see note on 5:20.

6:14 Girt with a linen ephod: the ephod was some sort of priestly vestment (probably like an apron); cf. Ex 28:4; Jgs 17:5; 1 Sm 2:18, 28; 14:3; 22:18; 23:6. The cultic procession that accompanies the ark to the holy mountain, Zion, is led by King David, dancing ecstatically and wearing a priestly vestment.

6:20–23 Michal's reaction to David's dancing comes from her conception of how a king should comport himself. David rejects this understanding, saying he needs no instruction from the house of the failed king, Saul.

7:8–16 The message Nathan delivers to David, called the Dynastic Oracle, is prompted by David's intention to build a house (i.e., a temple) for the Lord, like David's own house (i.e., palace) of cedar. David is told, in effect, not to bother building a house for the Lord; rather, the Lord will make a house for him—a dynasty, the House of David. Not only will he have descendants (v. 12) who will sit upon the throne of Israel (v. 13), their rule will last forever (vv. 13, 16); and even if they transgress the Lord's commands, the line of David will never be removed from kingship as Saul was (cf. 1 Sm 13; 15). The oracle establishes the Davidic king as standing in relationship to the Lord as a son to a father (v. 14; cf. Ps 2:7; 89:27). The Dynastic Oracle, with cognate texts in the Scriptures, is the basis for Jewish expectations of an anointed king (1 Sm 12:3, 5), son of David (Mt 21:9); cf. Acts 2:30; Heb 1:5.

7:13 He it is: Solomon, in the event.

7:16 The unconditional promise made here, and reflected in Ps 89:34–35, stands in contrast to the tradition in Ps 132:12, where the continuation of the line of David depends on their fidelity to the Lord; cf. also 1 Kgs 2:4; 6:12; 8:25.

7:20 Know: give recognition, choose, single out: cf. Gn 18:19; Ex 33:12; Am 3:2.

8:1 David took ...: the original Hebrew seems irretrievable. The transmitted text gives “the bridle of the cubit”; 1 Chr 18:1 understood “Gath and its towns”; others implausibly read “dominion of the capital city.”

8:2 Two lengths ... a full length for life: usually taken to mean that two-thirds of them were executed; but it could mean that two-thirds were spared, if the line was used full length in their case but doubled on itself to make “two lines” for those to be put to death. Note the contrasting good relations in 1 Sm 22:3–4.

8:13 On his return: possibly to Jerusalem, after the revolt of Absalom (chaps. 15–18), which this catalogue of victories would avoid mentioning. 1 Chr 18:12 attributes the defeat of the Edomites to Abishai, while the superscription of Ps 60 attributes it to Joab.

8:17 Zadok ... Ahimelech, son of Abiathar, were priests: the names of Abiathar and Ahimelech are frequently associated with David (1 Sm 22:20; 23:6; 30:7; 2 Sm 15:24, 29, 35; 17:15; 19:12; 20:25), but they show Abiathar acting as priest, not Ahimelech: Abiathar shared the priestly office with Zadok in David’s reign and even during Solomon’s early years (1 Kgs 2:26; 4:4). Ahimelech was the name of Abiathar’s father. This verse and 1 Chr 18:16 may indicate that Abiathar had a son named Ahimelech who also acted as a priest, like his father and his namesake grandfather, in the last years of David.

10:1 After this: early in the reign of David, since Hanun’s father Nahash (1 Chr 19:1) had been ruling in Ammon at the beginning of Saul’s reign (1 Sm 11) and Solomon was not yet born (2 Sm 11:1; 12:24).

10:6–9 A Hebrew text from Qumran (4QSama) comes closer in these verses to what is given in 1 Chr 19:6–9. The scene of the conflict is more likely the Ammonite capital, Rabbath-Ammon (v. 8; cf. Josephus Ant., vii, 123), than Medeba (1 Chr 19:7).

11:1 At the turn of the year: in the spring.

11:22–24 In these verses the Greek text has David, angry with Joab, repeat exactly the questions Joab had foreseen in vv. 20–21. In v. 24 of our oldest Greek text, the messenger specifies that about eighteen men were killed. The Greek is considerably longer than the transmitted Hebrew text, suggesting that the Hebrew may have lost some sentences.

12:6 Fourfold restitution: David’s judgment foreshadows the deaths of four of his own sons: the child born of his adulterous union with Bathsheba (v. 18); Amnon (13:28–29); Absalom (18:15; 19:1); and Adonijah (1 Kgs 2:24–25).

12:11 In broad daylight: lit., “before the eyes of the sun”; the phrase echoes “before your very eyes” and anticipates “in the presence of the sun itself” (v. 12). The reference is to Absalom’s action in appropriating his father’s harem (16:22).

12:25 Jedidiah: the name means “beloved of Yhwh.”

12:30 A talent: since this would normally be more than seventy-five pounds, the report may have been embellished.

13:3 Clever: lit., “wise.” Jonadab’s “wisdom” extends only to sly cleverness in getting things done; he devises the plan that will enable Amnon to pursue his infatuation. In the categories of the Old Testament wisdom tradition, Jonadab is a fool.

13:13 A fool in Israel: a play on nebala (v. 12), “terrible crime,” lit., “folly.”

14:7 Hope: lit., “glowing coal.” The image is similar to that of a lighted lamp, e.g., Ps 132:17, or small hearth fire, to keep alive the ancestral name.

14:14 Not to banish: a possible allusion to the religious institution of cities of refuge for involuntary murderers; see Nm 35:9–15.

14:17 Rest: cf. Ru 1:9; Ps 95:11; Mi 2:10. The reference here is to a return home for Absalom.

14:24 Appear before: lit., “see the face of,” a term from court etiquette; so also in vv. 28, 32.

16:8 Blood shed ... Saul: probably refers to the episode recounted in 21:1–14.

19:44 The firstborn had special rights over the other siblings.

20:8 The text of this verse is quite uncertain.

20:18–19 This proverbial expression is obscure but seems to reflect a tradition that this Danite town was associated with oracles or other sorts of revelation. Cf. Mt 16:13–17; and the intertestamental Testament of Levi 2:3.

22:1–51 This psalm of thanksgiving also appears in the Psalter, with a few small variants, as Ps 18. In both places it is attributed to David. Two main sections can be distinguished. In the first part, after an introductory stanza of praise to God (vv.2–4), the writer describes the peril he was in (vv. 5–7), and then poetically depicts, under the form of a theophany, God’s intervention in his behalf (vv. 8–20), concluding with an acknowledgment of God’s justice (vv. 21–31). In the second part, God is praised for having prepared the psalmist for war (vv. 32–35), given him victory over his enemies (vv. 36–39), whom he put to flight (vv. 40–43), and bestowed on him dominion over many peoples (vv. 44–46). The entire song ends with an expression of grateful praise (vv. 47–51).

22:3 My saving horn: my strong savior. The horn, such as that of an enraged bull, was a symbol of strength; cf. Lk 1:69.

22:5–6 Breakers ... floods: traditional Old Testament imagery for lethal danger, from which the Lord is uniquely able to rescue; cf. Ps 69:2, 15–16; 89:10–11; Jon 2:3–6.

22:7 His temple: his heavenly abode.

22:8–10 The Lord’s coming is depicted by means of a storm theophany, including earthquake (vv. 8, 16) and thunderstorm (vv. 9–15); cf. Jgs 5:4–5; Ps 29; 97:2–6; Hb 3.

22:11 Mounted on a cherub: in the traditional storm theophany, as here, the Lord appears with thunder, lightning, earthquake, rain, darkness, cloud, and wind. Sometimes these are represented as his retinue; sometimes he is said to ride upon the clouds or “the wings of the wind” (Ps 104:3). The parallelism in v. 11 suggests that the winged creatures called cherubim are imagined as bearing the Lord aloft. In the iconography of the ark of the covenant, the Lord was “enthroned upon the cherubim”; cf. Ex 37:7–9; 1 Sm 4:4; 2 Sm 6:2; 2 Kgs 19:15; Ps 80:2; 99:1.

22:26–27 People are treated by God in the same way they treat him and other people.

23:1–7 The last words of David: the text of this short composition is difficult in places; it views David’s career in retrospect.

23:8–39 There are thirty-seven warriors in all named in this list. First there are the Three warriors most noted for singlehanded exploits (vv. 8–12). Then comes the story of a daring adventure by three unnamed members of the larger group of the Thirty (vv. 13–17). Next come the commanders of the king’s bodyguard, Abishai (vv. 18–19) and Benaiah (vv. 20–23), with whom must be counted Asahel (v. 24) and Joab (vv. 18, 24, 37), and finally the group of the Thirty (vv. 24–39).

23:16 Poured it out: as a libation.

24:10 The narrative supposes that since the people belonged to the Lord rather than to the king, only the Lord should know their exact number. Further, since such an exact numbering of the people would make it possible for the king to exercise centralized power, imposing taxation, conscription, and expropriation upon Israel, the story shares the view of monarchy found in 1 Sm 8:4–18. See also Nm 3:44–51, where census taking requires an apotropaic offering.

The Books of Kings

The two Books of Kings are regarded by many as the last part of a work commonly known as the Deuteronomistic History. The latter tells the story of Israel from its settlement in the land (Joshua and Judges) through the transition from judgeship to monarchy under Samuel, Saul, and David (1 and 2 Samuel) to the reign of Solomon, the disintegration of the united kingdom into the kingdoms of Israel and Judah and the eventual downfall of both kingdoms (1 and 2 Kings). The Deuteronomistic History along with the Pentateuch forms a single historical narrative stretching from creation to exile.

The Books of Kings can be approached in several ways. They contain history and are an important source of information about the Israelite kingdoms. They are also narrative that calls for careful reading; historical accuracy is sometimes sacrificed to the demands of compelling characterization and dramatic tension. Most importantly, both historical presentation and narrative creativity are shaped by a particular religious worldview.

The multifaceted character of the work means that it has a variety of focal points. The historical events themselves, of course, are important, but the patterns according to which the author organizes those events give a unity to the author's historical reconstruction. The northern kings are condemned without exception, and the royal line degenerates from the divine election of Jeroboam I through a succession of short-lived dynasties to the bloodbath of Jehu's coup d'état, and finally dies out in a series of assassinations. (It must be admitted that the author at times skews the story to preserve the pattern: the relatively prosperous forty-one-year reign of Jeroboam II is dismissed in seven verses!) Judah's kings, on the other hand, follow a cyclic pattern of infidelity followed by reform, with each reformer king (Asa, Joash, Hezekiah, Josiah) greater than the last. Unfortunately the apostate kings also progress in wickedness, until the evil of Manasseh is so great that even Josiah's fidelity cannot turn away the Lord's wrath (2 Kgs 23:26).

As a literary work, the Books of Kings are admirable. Some of the brilliance is accessible only in Hebrew: wordplays, the sounds and rhythms of poetic passages, verbal allusions to other passages of the Hebrew Bible. Scenes are drawn with a vibrancy and immediacy that English cannot reproduce without sounding overdone. But other literary techniques survive translation: symmetrical structures for narrative units (and the disruptions of symmetry at significant points), rich ambiguities (see 1 Kgs 3:26), foreshadowings (such as the way the prophet of Bethel and the man of God of Judah in 1 Kgs 13 portend the destinies of their respective kingdoms). Characterization is rich and complex (Solomon, Jeroboam, Elijah, Ahab, Elisha, Jehu, etc.), revealing deep insight into human nature.

In offering a theological interpretation of history, 1–2 Kings upholds a double principle: the justification of the political disintegration of the Davidic empire, and the necessity of the religious unity of the Lord's people. This double principle is, practically speaking, unrealistic; see Jeroboam I's reasonable assessment in 1 Kgs 12:26–27. But for the Deuteronomistic historian, that is irrelevant. Just as the separation of the kingdoms is the Lord's will (1 Kgs 12:22–24), so too is the centralization of worship at the Temple in Jerusalem (1 Kgs 9:3; see Dt 12). 1–2 Kings reflects that double principle in its organization. The story of each king is told integrally, whether the king is of Israel or Judah: both lines of kings are legitimate. But the stories of the two lines are recounted in the order in which each king came to the throne, irrespective of which kingdom he ruled: there is only one people of God, though they are under two different royal jurisdictions. Moreover, each king is evaluated on theological grounds, with no allowance made for political or economic successes or failures. All Israelite kings are condemned because they did not reverse Jeroboam I's sin of setting up sanctuaries outside Jerusalem. Judahite kings are condemned for apostasy or praised for reform, as the case may be; but a continuing source of irritation to the Deuteronomistic historian is the failure of even the praiseworthy kings to do anything about local shrines outside Jerusalem (the "high places").

Into the stories of the kings, almost as a counterpoint, are woven numerous stories of prophets, named and great (Elijah, Elisha, Isaiah), and less known or anonymous (1 Kgs 13; 22). Many of the stories are anecdotal, reflecting the everyday life of prophets and prophetic guilds (1 Kgs 17; 2 Kgs 4). But the volatile dynamics of prophetic involvement in the political realm are prominent: prophets in opposition to kings (1 Kgs 14; 21; 2 Kgs 9), prophets in support of kings (1 Kgs 20:1–34; 2 Kgs 19–20; 22:14–20). This too is part of the theological worldview of the Deuteronomistic historian. The destiny of Israel is in God’s hand. Through prophets, the divine will is made known on earth to kings and people and the future consequences of their response to God’s will are spelled out. It is perhaps indicative of the importance prophets have in 1 and 2 Kings that the structural center of the two books is the story of Elisha’s succession to Elijah’s prophetic ministry (2 Kgs 2), and that this is one of the few passages in Kings that occurs outside the account of any king’s reign. Behind the temporal realm of kings and reigns lies the continuing realm of the divine word and its servants, the prophets.

1–2 Kings draws on older sources (perhaps on archival records, certainly on works called “The Book of the Chronicles of the Kings”; see, for example, 1 Kgs 14:19, 29), which it uses for its own theological purpose. The so-called Deuteronomistic History itself underwent a complex process of editorial revision whose stages are disputed by scholars. There may have been an edition sometime late in the reign of Josiah (640–609 B.C.), but in the form we have it the work comes from the time of the exile (see 2 Kgs 25:27–30). In its turn the Deuteronomistic History was one of the sources used by the Chronicler in postexilic times to compile the history presented in 1 and 2 Chronicles. Though Chronicles has little interest in the Northern Kingdom, much of the material in Kings about the kingdom of Judah reappears, sometimes in altered form, in Chronicles.

The Books of Kings may be divided as follows:

- I. The Reign of Solomon (1 Kgs 1:1–11:43)
- II. The Reign of Jeroboam (1 Kgs 12:1–14:20)
- III. Kings of Judah and Israel (1 Kgs 14:21–16:34)
- IV. The Story of Elijah (1 Kgs 17:1–19:21)
- V. The Story of Ahab (1 Kgs 20:1–2 Kgs 1:18)
- VI. Elisha Succeeds Elijah (2 Kgs 2:1–25)
- VII. Stories of Elisha and Joram (2 Kgs 3:1–9:13)
- VIII. The End of the Omrid Dynasty (2 Kgs 9:14–11:20)

IX. Kings of Judah and Israel (2 Kgs 12:1–17:5)

X. The End of Israel (2 Kgs 17:6–41)

XI. The End of Judah (2 Kgs 18:1–25:30)

I. The Reign of Solomon*

CHAPTER 1

David's Old Age. <sup>1*</sup> When King David was old and advanced in years, though they covered him with blankets he could not get warm. <sup>2</sup>His servants therefore said to him, “Let a young virgin be sought to attend my lord the king,* and to nurse him. If she sleeps with you, my lord the king will be warm.” <sup>3</sup>So they sought for a beautiful girl throughout the territory of Israel, and found Abishag the Shunamite. So they brought her to the king. <sup>4</sup>The girl was very beautiful indeed, and she nursed the king and took care of him. But the king did not have relations with her.

Adonijah's Ambition. <sup>5</sup>Adonijah, son of Haggith, boasted, “I shall be king!” and he provided himself with chariots, horses, and a retinue of fifty to go before him.<sup>a</sup> <sup>6</sup>Yet his father would never antagonize him by asking, “Why are you doing this?” Adonijah was also very handsome, and next in age to Absalom by the same mother. <sup>7</sup>He consulted with Joab, son of Zeruiah, and with Abiathar the priest, and they became Adonijah's supporters. <sup>8</sup>However, Zadok the priest, Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, Nathan the prophet, Shimei and Rei, and David's warriors did not support Adonijah.

Solomon Proclaimed King. <sup>11</sup>Then Nathan said to Bathsheba, Solomon's mother: “Have you not heard that Adonijah, son of Haggith, has become king, and our lord David does not know? <sup>12</sup>Come now, let me advise you so that you may save your life and the life of your son Solomon. <sup>13</sup>Go, visit King David, and say to him, ‘Did you not, my lord king, swear to your handmaid: Your son Solomon shall be king after me; it is he who shall sit upon my throne? Why, then, has Adonijah become king?’ <sup>14</sup>And while you are still there speaking to the king, I will come in after you and confirm your words.”

answered him: “My lord, you swore to your servant by the LORD, your God, ‘Solomon your son will be king after me; it is he who shall sit upon my throne.’ <sup>18</sup>But now Adonijah has become king, and you, my lord king, do not know it.” <sup>19</sup>He has sacrificed bulls, fatlings, and sheep in great numbers; he has invited all the king’s sons, Abiathar the priest, and Joab, the commander of the army, but not your servant Solomon. <sup>20</sup> * Now, my lord king, all Israel is looking to you to declare to them who is to sit upon the throne of my lord the king after him. <sup>21</sup>If this is not done, when my lord the king rests with his ancestors, I and my son Solomon will be considered criminals.”

<sup>22</sup>While she was still speaking to the king, Nathan the prophet came in. <sup>23</sup>They told the king, “Nathan the prophet is here.” He entered the king’s presence and did him homage, bowing to the floor. <sup>24</sup>Then Nathan said: “My lord king, did you say, ‘Adonijah shall be king after me and shall sit upon my throne’? <sup>25</sup>For today he went down and sacrificed bulls, fatlings, and sheep in great numbers; he invited all the king’s sons, the commanders of the army, and Abiathar the priest, and even now they are eating and drinking in his company and saying, ‘Long live King Adonijah!’ <sup>26</sup>But me, your servant, he did not invite; nor Zadok the priest, nor Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, nor your servant Solomon. <sup>27</sup>If this was done by order of my lord the king, you did not tell me, your servant, who is to sit upon the throne of my lord the king after him.”

<sup>32</sup>Then King David said, “Call Zadok the priest, Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah, son of Jehoiada.” When they had entered the king’s presence, <sup>33</sup>he said to them: “Take with you the royal officials. Mount my son Solomon upon my own mule and escort him down to Gihon. <sup>34</sup>There Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet shall anoint him king over Israel, and you shall blow the ram’s horn and cry, ‘Long live King Solomon!’ <sup>35</sup>When you come back up with him, he is to go in and sit upon my throne. It is he that shall be king in my place: him I designate ruler of Israel and of Judah.” <sup>36</sup>Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, answered the king: “So be it! May the LORD, the God of my lord the king, so decree! <sup>37</sup>As the LORD has been with my lord the king, so may he be with Solomon, and make his throne even greater than that of my lord, King David!”

Adonijah Submits to Solomon. <sup>41</sup>Adonijah and all the guests who were with him heard it, just as they ended their banquet. When Joab heard the sound of the ram’s horn, he asked, “Why this uproar in the city?” <sup>42</sup>As he was speaking, Jonathan, son of Abiathar the priest, arrived. Adonijah said, “Come, you are a man of worth and must bring good news.” <sup>43</sup>Jonathan answered Adonijah, “Hardly!”* Our lord, King David, has made Solomon king. <sup>44</sup>The king sent with him Zadok the priest, Nathan the prophet, Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites and Pelethites, and they mounted him upon the king’s own mule. <sup>45</sup>Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet anointed him king at Gihon, and they went up from there rejoicing, so that the city is in an uproar. That is the noise you hear. <sup>46</sup>Moreover, Solomon has taken his seat on the royal throne, <sup>47</sup>and moreover the king’s servants have come to pay their respects to our lord, King David, saying, ‘May your God make Solomon’s name more famous than your name, his throne greater than your throne!’ And the king in his bed did homage. <sup>48</sup>This is what the king said: ‘Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, who has this day provided one to sit upon my throne, so that I see it with my own eyes.’ ” <sup>49</sup>All the guests of Adonijah got up trembling, and went each their way, <sup>50</sup>but Adonijah, in fear of Solomon, got up and went to grasp the horns of the altar.* from the altar, and he came and paid homage to King Solomon. Solomon then said to him, “Go to your house.”

David's Last Instructions and Death. <sup>1</sup>When the time of David's death drew near, he gave these instructions to Solomon his son: <sup>2</sup> "I am going the way of all the earth. Be strong and be a man! <sup>3b</sup> Keep the mandate of the LORD, your God, walking in his ways and keeping his statutes, commands, ordinances, and decrees as they are written in the law of Moses, that you may succeed in whatever you do, and wherever you turn, <sup>4c</sup> and that the LORD may fulfill the word he spoke concerning me: If your sons so conduct themselves that they walk before me in faithfulness with their whole heart and soul, there shall never be wanting someone of your line on the throne of Israel.

<sup>5* d</sup> "You yourself know what Joab, son of Zeruiah, did to me—what he did to the two commanders of Israel's armies, Abner, son of Ner, and Amasa, son of Jether: he killed them and brought the blood of war into a time of peace, and put the blood of war on the belt about his waist and the sandal on his foot. <sup>6</sup>Act with all the wisdom you possess; do not let his gray head go down to Sheol in peace. <sup>7e</sup> But be true to the sons of Barzillai the Gileadite, and have them among those who eat at your table. For they were loyal to me when I was fleeing from your brother Absalom. <sup>8f</sup> You also have with you Shimei, son of Gera, the Benjaminite of Bahurim, who cursed me bitterly the day I was going to Mahanaim. When he came down to meet me at the Jordan, I swore to him by the LORD: 'I will not kill you by the sword.' <sup>9</sup>But you must not let him go unpunished. You are wise; you will know what to do to send his gray head down to Sheol in blood."

<sup>13</sup>Adonijah, son of Haggith, came to Bathsheba, the mother of Solomon. "Do you come in peace?" she asked. "In peace," he answered, <sup>14</sup>and he added, "I have something to say to you." She replied, "Speak." <sup>15</sup>So he said: "You know that the kingship was mine, and all Israel expected me to be king. But the kingship passed me by and went to my brother; by the LORD's will it went to him. <sup>16</sup>But now there is one favor I would ask of you. Do not refuse me.” And she said, “Speak on.” <sup>17*</sup> He said, “Please ask King Solomon, who will not refuse you, to give me Abishag the Shunamite to be my wife.” <sup>18</sup>Bathsheba replied, “Very well, I will speak to the king for you.”

<sup>19</sup>Then Bathsheba went to King Solomon to speak to him for Adonijah, and the king stood up to meet her and paid her homage. Then he sat down upon his throne, and a throne was provided for the king’s mother, who sat at his right. <sup>20</sup>She said, “There is one small favor I would ask of you. Do not refuse me.” The king said to her, “Ask it, my mother, for I will not refuse you.” <sup>21</sup>So she said, “Let Abishag the Shunamite be given to your brother Adonijah to be his wife.” <sup>22</sup>King Solomon answered his mother, “And why do you ask that Abishag the Shunamite be given to Adonijah? Ask the kingship for him as well, for he is my older brother! Ask for him, for Abiathar the priest, for Joab, son of Zeruiah!” <sup>23</sup>And King Solomon swore by the LORD: “May God do thus to me and more, if Adonijah has not spoken this word at the cost of his life. <sup>24i</sup> And now, as the LORD lives, who has established me and set me on the throne of David my father and made for me a house as he promised, this day shall Adonijah be put to death.” <sup>25</sup>Then King Solomon sent Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, who struck him dead.

<sup>26j</sup> The king said to Abiathar the priest: “Go to your estate in Anathoth. Though you deserve to die, I will not put you to death at this time, because you carried the ark of the Lord GOD before David my father and shared in all the hardships my father endured.” <sup>27k</sup> So Solomon dismissed Abiathar from the office of priest of the LORD, thus fulfilling the word the LORD had spoken in Shiloh against the house of Eli.

<sup>28</sup>When the news came to Joab, since he had sided with Adonijah, though not with Absalom, he fled to the tent of the LORD and clung to the horns of the altar. <sup>29</sup>King Solomon was told, “Joab has fled to the tent of the LORD and is by the altar.” He sent Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, with the order, “Go, strike him down.” <sup>30</sup>Benaiah went to the tent of the LORD and said to him, “The king says, ‘Come out.’ ” But he answered, “No! I will die here.” Benaiah reported to the king, “This is what Joab said to me in reply.” <sup>31</sup>The king answered him: “Do as he has said. Strike him down and bury him, and remove from me and from my father’s house the blood which Joab shed without provocation. <sup>32l</sup> The LORD will bring blood upon his own head, because he struck down two men better and more just than himself, and slew them with the sword without my father David's knowledge: Abner, son of Ner, commander of Israel's army, and Amasa, son of Jether, commander of Judah's army. <sup>33</sup>Their blood will be upon the head of Joab and his descendants. But upon David and his descendants, upon his house and his throne, there shall be peace forever from the LORD." <sup>34</sup>Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, went back, struck him down and killed him; he was buried in his house in the wilderness. <sup>35</sup>The king appointed Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, over the army in his place; Zadok the priest the king put in place of Abiathar.

<sup>36</sup>Then the king summoned Shimei and said to him: "Build yourself a house in Jerusalem and stay there. Do not go anywhere else. <sup>37</sup>For the day you leave, and cross the Wadi Kidron, be certain you shall surely die. Your blood shall be upon your own head." <sup>38</sup>Shimei answered the king: "I accept. Your servant will do just as my lord the king has said." So Shimei stayed in Jerusalem for a long time. <sup>39</sup>But three years later, two of Shimei's servants ran away to Achish, son of Maacah, king of Gath, and Shimei was told, "Your servants are in Gath." <sup>40</sup>So Shimei rose, saddled his donkey, and went to Achish in Gath in search of his servants; and Shimei returned from Gath with his servants. <sup>41</sup>When Solomon was told that Shimei had gone from Jerusalem to Gath, and had returned, <sup>42</sup>the king summoned Shimei and said to him: "Did I not have you swear by the LORD and warn you clearly, 'The day you leave and go anywhere else, be certain you shall surely die'? And you answered, 'I accept and obey.' <sup>43</sup>Why, then, have you not kept the oath of the LORD and the command that I gave you?" <sup>44m</sup> And the king said to Shimei: "In your heart you know very well the evil that you did to David my father. Now the LORD is bringing your own evil upon your head. <sup>45</sup>But King Solomon shall be blessed, and David's throne shall be established before the LORD forever." <sup>46</sup>The king then gave the order to Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, who went out and struck him dead.

And the royal power was established in Solomon's hand.

Early Promise of Solomon's Reign.* <sup>1n</sup> Solomon allied himself by marriage with Pharaoh, king of Egypt. He married the daughter of Pharaoh and brought her to the City of David, until he should finish building his own house, and the house of the LORD, and the wall around Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>The people were sacrificing on the high places, however, for up to that time no house had been built for the name of the LORD. <sup>3</sup>Although Solomon loved the LORD, walking in the statutes of David his father, he offered sacrifice and burned incense on the high places.

<sup>4</sup>The king went to Gibeon to sacrifice there, because that was the great high place. Upon its altar Solomon sacrificed a thousand burnt offerings. <sup>5</sup>In Gibeon the LORD appeared to Solomon in a dream at night. God said: Whatever you ask I shall give you. <sup>6</sup>Solomon answered: “You have shown great kindness to your servant, David my father, because he walked before you with fidelity, justice, and an upright heart; and you have continued this great kindness toward him today, giving him a son to sit upon his throne. <sup>7</sup>Now, LORD, my God, you have made me, your servant, king to succeed David my father; but I am a mere youth, not knowing at all how to act— <sup>8</sup>I, your servant, among the people you have chosen, a people so vast that it cannot be numbered or counted. <sup>9</sup>Give your servant, therefore, a listening heart to judge your people and to distinguish between good and evil. For who is able to give judgment for this vast people of yours?”

<sup>10</sup>The Lord was pleased by Solomon's request. <sup>11</sup>So God said to him: Because you asked for this—you did not ask for a long life for yourself, nor for riches, nor for the life of your enemies—but you asked for discernment to know what is right— <sup>12</sup>I now do as you request. I give you a heart so wise and discerning that there has never been anyone like you until now, nor after you will there be anyone to equal you. <sup>13o</sup> In addition, I give you what you have not asked for: I give you such riches and glory that among kings there will be no one like you all your days. <sup>14</sup>And if you walk in my ways, keeping my statutes and commandments, as David your father did, I will give you a long life. <sup>15</sup>Solomon awoke; it was a dream! He went to Jerusalem, stood before the ark of the covenant of the Lord, sacrificed burnt offerings and communion offerings, and gave a feast for all his servants.

Solomon's Listening Heart.* <sup>16</sup>Later, two prostitutes came to the king and stood before him. <sup>17</sup>One woman said: "By your leave, my lord, this woman and I live in the same house, and I gave birth in the house while she was present. <sup>18</sup>On the third day after I gave birth, this woman also gave birth. We were alone; no one else was in the house with us; only the two of us were in the house. <sup>19</sup>This woman's son died during the night when she lay on top of him. <sup>20</sup>So in the middle of the night she got up and took my son from my side, as your servant was sleeping. Then she laid him in her bosom and laid her dead son in my bosom. <sup>21</sup>I rose in the morning to nurse my son, and he was dead! But when I examined him in the morning light, I saw it was not the son I had borne." <sup>22</sup>The other woman answered, "No! The living one is my son, the dead one is yours." But the first kept saying, "No! the dead one is your son, the living one is mine!" Thus they argued before the king. <sup>23</sup>Then the king said: "One woman claims, 'This, the living one, is my son, the dead one is yours.' The other answers, 'No! The dead one is your son, the living one is mine.' " <sup>24</sup>The king continued, "Get me a sword." When they brought the sword before the king, <sup>25</sup>he said, "Cut the living child in two, and give half to one woman and half to the other." <sup>26*</sup> The woman whose son was alive, because she was stirred with compassion for her son, said to the king, "Please, my lord, give her the living baby—do not kill it!" But the other said, "It shall be neither mine nor yours. Cut it in two!" <sup>27</sup>The king then answered, "Give her the living baby! Do not kill it! She is the mother." <sup>28</sup>When all Israel heard the judgment the king had given, they were in awe of him, because they saw that the king had in him the wisdom of God for giving right judgment.

Azariah, son of Zadok, the priest;
scribes;
Jehoshaphat, son of Ahilud, the chancellor;
<sup>4</sup>Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, in charge of the army;
Zadok and Abiathar, priests; <sup>5</sup>Azariah, son of Nathan, in charge of the governors;
Zabud, son of Nathan, priest and companion to the king;
<sup>6</sup>Ahishar, master of the palace; and Adoniram, son of Abda, in charge of the forced labor.

<sup>7</sup>* Solomon had twelve governors over all Israel who supplied food for the king and his household, each having to provide for one month in the year.
<sup>8</sup>Their names were: *

the son of Hur in the hill country of Ephraim;
<sup>9</sup>the son of Deker in Makaz, Shaalbim, Beth-shemesh, and Elon Beth-hanan;
<sup>10</sup>the son of Hesed in Arubboth, as well as in Socoh and the whole region of Hepher;
<sup>11</sup>the son of Abinadab, in all Naphath-dor;
he was married to Taphath, Solomon's daughter;
<sup>12</sup>Baana, son of Ahilud, in Taanach and Megiddo and all Beth-shean near Zarethan below Jezreel, from Bethshean to Abel-meholah to beyond Jokmeam;

- <sup>13</sup>the son of Geber in Ramoth-gilead, having charge of the villages of Jair, son of Manasseh, in Gilead; and of the district of Argob in Bashan—sixty large walled cities with gates barred with bronze;
- <sup>14</sup>Ahinadab, son of Iddo, in Mahanaim;
- <sup>15</sup>Ahimaaz, in Naphtali; he was married to Basemath, another daughter of Solomon;
- <sup>16</sup>Baana, son of Hushai, in Asher and Aloth;
- <sup>17</sup>Jehoshaphat, son of Paruah, in Issachar;
- <sup>18</sup>Shimei, son of Ela, in Benjamin;
- <sup>19</sup>Geber, son of Uri, in the land of Gilead, the land of Sihon, king of the Amorites, and of Og, king of Bashan.

Solomon's Twelve Administrative Districts

There was one governor besides, in the land of Judah.*<sup>20</sup>p Judah and Israel were as numerous as the sands by the sea; they ate and drank and rejoiced.

CHAPTER 5

Solomon's Riches: International Affairs. <sup>1*</sup> Solomon ruled over all the kingdoms from the River* to the land of the Philistines, down to the border of Egypt; they paid Solomon tribute and served him as long as he lived. <sup>2*</sup> Solomon's provisions for each day were thirty kors of fine flour, sixty kors of meal, <sup>3</sup>ten fatted oxen, twenty pasture-fed oxen, and a hundred sheep, not counting harts, gazelles, roebucks, and fatted fowl. <sup>4</sup>He had dominion over all the land west of the River, from Tiphseh to Gaza, and all its kings, and he had peace on all his borders round about. <sup>5q</sup> Thus Judah and Israel lived in security, everyone under their own vine and fig tree from Dan to Beer-sheba, as long as Solomon lived.

Solomon's Renown. <sup>9s</sup> Moreover, God gave Solomon wisdom, exceptional understanding, and knowledge, as vast as the sand on the seashore. <sup>10</sup>Solomon's wisdom surpassed that of all the peoples of the East and all the wisdom of Egypt. <sup>11</sup>He was wiser than anyone else—wiser than Ethan the Ezrahite, or Heman, Chalcol, and Darda, the musicians—and his fame spread throughout the neighboring peoples. <sup>12</sup>Solomon also uttered three thousand proverbs, and his songs numbered a thousand and five. <sup>13</sup>He spoke of plants, from the cedar on Lebanon to the hyssop growing out of the wall, and he spoke about beasts, birds, reptiles, and fishes. <sup>14t</sup> People from all nations came to hear Solomon's wisdom, sent by all the kings of the earth who had heard of his wisdom.

<sup>18</sup>But now the LORD, my God, has given me rest on all sides, without adversary or misfortune. <sup>19v</sup> So I intend to build a house for the name of the LORD, my God, as the LORD said to David my father: Your son whom I will put upon your throne in your place shall build the house for my name. <sup>20</sup>Give orders, then, to have cedars from the Lebanon cut down for me. My servants shall accompany yours, and I will pay you whatever you say for your servants' wages. For you know that there is no one among us who is skilled in cutting timber like the Sidonians." <sup>21</sup>When Hiram had heard the words of Solomon, he was overjoyed, and said, "Blessed be the LORD this day, who has given David a wise son over this numerous people." <sup>22</sup> * Hiram then sent word to Solomon, "I have heard the proposal you sent me, and I will provide all the cedars and fir trees you desire. <sup>23</sup>My servants shall bring them down from the Lebanon to the sea, and I will arrange them into rafts in the sea and bring them wherever you say. There I will break up the rafts, and you shall take the lumber. You, for your part, shall furnish the provisions I desire for my household." <sup>24</sup>So Hiram continued to provide Solomon with all the cedars and fir trees he desired, <sup>25</sup>while Solomon gave Hiram twenty thousand kors of wheat to provide for his household, and twenty kors * of hand-pressed oil. Solomon gave Hiram all this every year. <sup>26</sup>The LORD gave Solomon wisdom as he promised him. So there was peace between Hiram and Solomon, and the two of them made * a covenant.

<sup>28</sup>He sent them to the Lebanon for a month in relays of ten thousand, so that they spent one month in the Lebanon and two months at home. Adoniram was in charge of the forced labor. <sup>29</sup>Solomon had seventy thousand carriers and eighty thousand stonecutters in the mountain, <sup>30</sup>in addition to three thousand three hundred overseers answerable to Solomon, who were in charge of the work and directed the people engaged in the work. <sup>31</sup>By order of the king, fine, large blocks of stone were quarried to give the house a foundation of hewn stone. <sup>32</sup>Solomon's and Hiram's builders, along with others from Gebal,* shaped them, and prepared the wood and stones for building the house.

CHAPTER 6

Building of the Temple.* <sup>1</sup>In the four hundred and eightieth year after the Israelites went forth from the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in the month of Ziv (the second month), he began to build the house of the LORD.*

<sup>11</sup>The word of the LORD came to Solomon: <sup>12w</sup> As to this house you are building—if you walk in my statutes, carry out my ordinances, and observe all my commands, walking in them, I will fulfill toward you my word which I spoke to David your father. <sup>13</sup>I will dwell in the midst of the Israelites and will not forsake my people Israel.

<sup>29</sup>The walls of the house on all sides of both the inner and the outer rooms had carved figures of cherubim, palm trees, and open flowers. <sup>30</sup>The floor of the house of both the inner and the outer rooms was overlaid with gold. <sup>31</sup>At the entrance of the inner sanctuary, doors of pine were made; the doorframes had five-sided posts. <sup>32</sup>The two doors were of pine, with carved figures of cherubim, palm trees, and open flowers. The doors were overlaid with gold, and the cherubim and the palm trees were also covered with beaten gold. <sup>33</sup>He did the same at the entrance to the nave, where the doorposts were of pine and were four-sided. <sup>34</sup>The two doors were of fir wood, each door consisting of two panels hinged together; <sup>35</sup>and he carved cherubim, palm trees, and open flowers, and plated them with gold. <sup>36</sup>He walled off the inner court with three courses of hewn stones and one course of cedar beams.

<sup>37</sup>The foundations of the LORD's house were laid in the month of Ziv in the fourth year, <sup>38</sup>and it was finished, in all particulars, exactly according to plan, in the month of Bul, the eighth month, in the eleventh year. Thus Solomon built it in seven years.

CHAPTER 7

<sup>13</sup>King Solomon brought Hiram* from Tyre. <sup>14</sup>He was a bronze worker, the son of a widow from the tribe of Naphtali; his father had been from Tyre. He was endowed with wisdom, understanding, and knowledge for doing any work in bronze. He came to King Solomon and did all his metal work.

the bulge where it crossed out of the netting, had two hundred pomegranates in rows around each capital. <sup>21</sup>He set up the columns at the temple porch; one he set up to the south, and called it Jachin, and the other to the north, and called it Boaz. <sup>22</sup>The top of the columns was made like a lily. Thus the work on the columns was completed.

<sup>27</sup>He also made ten stands of bronze, each four cubits long, four wide, and three high. <sup>28</sup>When these stands were constructed, panels were set within the framework. <sup>29</sup>On the panels within the frames there were lions, oxen, and cherubim; and on the frames likewise, above and below the lions and oxen, there were wreaths in hammered relief. <sup>30</sup>Each stand had four bronze wheels and bronze axles. The four legs of each stand had cast braces, which were under the basin; they had wreaths on each side. <sup>31</sup>The mouth of the basin was inside, and a cubit above, the crown, whose opening was round, made like a receptacle, a cubit and a half in depth. There was carved work at the opening, on panels that were square, not circular. <sup>32</sup>The four wheels were below the paneling, and the axletrees of the wheels and the stand were of one piece. Each wheel was a cubit and a half high. <sup>33</sup>The wheels were constructed like chariot wheels; their axletrees, rims, spokes, and hubs were all cast. <sup>34</sup>The four braces reached the four corners of each stand, and formed part of the stand. <sup>35</sup>At the top of the stand there was a raised collar half a cubit high, and the handles and panels on top of the stand formed part of it. <sup>36</sup>On the flat ends of the handles and on the panels, wherever there was a bare space, cherubim, lions, and palm trees were carved, as well as wreaths all around. <sup>37</sup>This was how he made the ten stands, all of the same casting, the same size, the same shape. <sup>38</sup>He made ten bronze basins, each four cubits in diameter with a capacity of forty baths, one basin atop each of the ten stands.

Dedication of the Temple. * <sup>1</sup>Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel and all the heads of the tribes, the princes in the ancestral houses of the Israelites. They came to King Solomon in Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the LORD's covenant from the city of David (which is Zion). <sup>2</sup>All the people of Israel assembled before King Solomon during the festival in the month of Ethanim (the seventh month). * <sup>3</sup>When all the elders of Israel had arrived, the priests took up the ark; <sup>4</sup>and they brought up the ark of the LORD and the tent of meeting with all the sacred vessels that were in the tent. The priests and Levites brought them up. <sup>5</sup>King Solomon and the entire community of Israel, gathered for the occasion before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen too many to number or count. <sup>6</sup>* The priests brought the ark of the covenant of the LORD to its place, the inner sanctuary of the house, the holy of holies, beneath the wings of the cherubim. <sup>7</sup>The cherubim had their wings spread out over the place of the ark, sheltering the ark and its poles from above. <sup>8b</sup> The poles were so long that their ends could be seen from the holy place in front of the inner sanctuary. They cannot be seen from outside, but they remain there to this day. <sup>9c</sup> There was nothing in the ark but the two stone tablets which Moses had put there at Horeb, when the LORD made a covenant with the Israelites after they went forth from the land of Egypt. <sup>10d</sup> When the priests left the holy place, the cloud filled the house of the LORD <sup>11</sup>so that the priests could no longer minister because of the cloud, since the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD. <sup>12</sup> * <sup>e</sup> Then Solomon said,

cloud;

<sup>13</sup>I have indeed built you a princely house, the base for your enthronement
forever.”

<sup>14</sup>The king turned and blessed the whole assembly of Israel, while the whole assembly of Israel stood. <sup>15</sup>He said: “Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, who with his own mouth spoke a promise to David my father and by his hand fulfilled it, saying: <sup>16f</sup> Since the day I brought my people Israel out of Egypt, I have not chosen a city out of any tribe of Israel for the building of a house, that my name might be there; but I have chosen David to rule my people Israel. <sup>17</sup>When David my father wished to build a house for the name of the LORD, the God of Israel, <sup>18</sup>the LORD said to him: In wishing to build a house for my name, you did well. <sup>19</sup>But it is not you who will build the house, but your son, who comes from your loins; he shall build the house for my name. <sup>20</sup>Now the LORD has fulfilled the word he spoke: I have succeeded David my father, and I sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD has spoken, and I have built this house for the name of the LORD, the God of Israel. <sup>21</sup>I have provided there a place for the ark in which is the covenant of the LORD that he made with our ancestors when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.”

Solomon’s Prayer. <sup>22</sup>Solomon stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel, and stretching forth his hands toward heaven, <sup>23</sup>he said, “LORD, God of Israel, there is no God like you in heaven above or on earth below; you keep covenant and love toward your servants who walk before you with their whole heart, <sup>24</sup>the covenant that you kept toward your servant, David my father, what you promised him; your mouth has spoken and your hand has fulfilled this very day. <sup>25g</sup> And now, LORD, God of Israel, keep toward your servant, David my father, what you promised: There shall never be wanting someone from your line to sit before me on the throne of Israel, provided that your descendants keep to their way, walking before me as you have. <sup>26</sup>Now, God of Israel, may the words you spoke to your servant, David my father, be confirmed.

<sup>27</sup>“Is God indeed to dwell on earth? If the heavens and the highest heavens cannot contain you, how much less this house which I have built! <sup>28</sup>Regard kindly the prayer and petition of your servant, LORD, my God, and listen to the cry of supplication which I, your servant, utter before you this day. <sup>29</sup>May your eyes be open night and day toward this house, the place of which you said, My name shall be there; listen to the prayer your servant makes toward this place. <sup>30</sup>Listen to the petition of your servant and of your people Israel which they offer toward this place. Listen, from the place of your enthronement, heaven, listen and forgive.

<sup>33</sup>“When your people Israel are defeated by an enemy because they sinned against you, and then they return to you, praise your name, pray to you, and entreat you in this house, <sup>34</sup>listen in heaven and forgive the sin of your people Israel, and bring them back to the land you gave their ancestors.

<sup>35</sup>“When the heavens are closed, so that there is no rain, because they have sinned against you, but they pray toward this place and praise your name, and turn from their sin because you have afflicted them, <sup>36</sup>listen in heaven and forgive the sin of your servants, your people Israel (for you teach them the good way in which they should walk). Give rain to this land of yours which you have given to your people as their heritage.

<sup>37</sup>“If there is famine in the land or pestilence; or if blight comes, or mildew, or locusts, or caterpillars; if an enemy of your people presses upon them in the land and at their gates; whatever plague or sickness there may be; <sup>38</sup>whatever prayer or petition any may make, any of your people Israel, who know heartfelt remorse and stretch out their hands toward this house, <sup>39</sup>listen in heaven, the place of your enthronement; forgive and take action. Render to each and all according to their ways, you who know every heart; for it is you alone who know the heart of every human being. <sup>40</sup>So may they revere you as long as they live on the land you gave our ancestors.

<sup>46i</sup> “When they sin against you (for there is no one who does not sin), and in your anger against them you deliver them to an enemy, so that their captors carry them off to the land of the enemy, far or near, <sup>47</sup>and they have a change of heart in the land of their captivity and they turn and entreat you in the land of their captors and say, ‘We have sinned and done wrong; we have been wicked’; <sup>48</sup>if with their whole heart and soul they turn back to you in the land of their enemies who took them captive, and pray to you toward the land you gave their ancestors, the city you have chosen, and the house I have built for your name, <sup>49</sup>listen in heaven, your dwelling place, to their prayer and petition, and uphold their cause. <sup>50</sup>Forgive your people who have sinned against you and all the offenses they have committed against you, and grant them mercy in the sight of their captors, so that these will be merciful to them. <sup>51</sup>For they are your people and your heritage, whom you brought out of Egypt, from the midst of the iron furnace.

<sup>52</sup>“Thus may your eyes be open to the petition of your servant and to the petition of your people Israel; thus may you listen to them whenever they call upon you. <sup>53</sup>For you have set them apart from all the peoples of the earth to be your heritage, as you declared through Moses your servant when you brought our ancestors out of Egypt, Lord my God.”

<sup>54</sup>After Solomon finished offering this entire prayer and petition to the LORD, he rose from before the altar of the LORD, where he had been kneeling, hands outstretched toward heaven. <sup>55</sup>He stood and blessed the whole assembly of Israel, saying in a loud voice: <sup>56</sup> “Blessed be the LORD who has given rest to his people Israel, just as he promised. Not a single word has gone unfulfilled of the entire gracious promise he made through Moses his servant. <sup>57</sup>May the LORD, our God, be with us as he was with our ancestors and may he not forsake us nor cast us off. <sup>58</sup>May he draw our hearts to himself, that we may walk in his ways and keep the commands, statutes, and ordinances that he enjoined on our ancestors. <sup>59</sup>May these words of mine, the petition I have offered before the LORD, our God, be present to the LORD our God day and night, that he may uphold the cause of his servant and the cause of his people Israel as each day requires, <sup>60</sup>so that all the peoples of the earth may know that the LORD is God and there is no other. <sup>61</sup> * Your heart must be wholly devoted to the LORD, our God, observing his statutes and keeping his commandments, as on this day.”

offering, the grain offering, and the fat of the communion offering. <sup>65</sup>On this occasion Solomon and all Israel with him, a great assembly from Lebohamath to the Wadi of Egypt, celebrated the festival before the LORD, our God, for seven days. <sup>66</sup>On the eighth day he dismissed the people, who blessed the king and went to their tents, rejoicing and glad of heart because of all the blessings the LORD had given to David his servant and to his people Israel.

Promise and Warning to Solomon. <sup>1</sup>After Solomon finished building the house of the LORD, the house of the king, and everything else that he wanted to do, <sup>2j</sup> the LORD appeared to Solomon a second time, as he had appeared to him in Gibeon. <sup>3</sup>The LORD said to him: I have heard the prayer of petition which you offered in my presence. I have consecrated this house which you have built and I set my name there forever; my eyes and my heart shall be there always. <sup>4</sup>As for you, if you walk before me as David your father did, wholeheartedly and uprightly, doing all that I have commanded you, keeping my statutes and ordinances, <sup>5k</sup> I will establish your royal throne over Israel forever, as I promised David your father: There shall never be wanting someone from your line on the throne of Israel. <sup>6</sup>But if ever you and your descendants turn from following me, fail to keep my commandments and statutes which I set before you, and proceed to serve other gods and bow down to them, <sup>7</sup>I will cut off Israel from the land I gave them and repudiate the house I have consecrated for my name. Israel shall become a proverb and a byword among all nations, <sup>8l</sup> and this house shall become a heap of ruins. Every passerby shall gasp in horror and ask, “Why has the LORD done such things to this land and to this house?” <sup>9</sup>And the answer will come: “Because they abandoned the LORD, their God, who brought their ancestors out of the land of Egypt, and they embraced other gods, bowing down to them and serving them. That is why the LORD has brought upon them all this evil.”

After Building the Temple. <sup>* 10m</sup> After the twenty years during which Solomon built the two houses, the house of the LORD and the house of the king— <sup>11</sup>Hiram, king of Tyre, supplying Solomon with all the cedar wood, fir wood, and gold he wished, and King Solomon giving Hiram in return twenty cities in the land of Galilee— <sup>12</sup>Hiram left Tyre to see the cities Solomon had given him, but he was not satisfied with them. <sup>13</sup>So he said, “What are these cities you have given me, my brother?” * And he called them the land of Cabul, as they are called to this day. <sup>14</sup>Hiram, however, had sent King Solomon one hundred and twenty talents of gold. *

and taken Gezer and, after destroying it by fire and slaying all the Canaanites living in the city, had given it as a farewell gift to his daughter, Solomon's wife; <sup>17</sup>Solomon then rebuilt Gezer), Lower Beth-horon, <sup>18</sup>Baalath, Tamar in the desert of Judah, <sup>19</sup>all his cities for supplies, cities for chariots and cities for cavalry, and whatever Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, in Lebanon, and in the entire land under his dominion. <sup>20</sup>All the people who were left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, who were not Israelites— <sup>21</sup>those of their descendants who were left in the land and whom the Israelites had not been able to destroy under the ban—these Solomon conscripted as forced laborers, as they are to this day. <sup>22</sup>But Solomon made none of the Israelites forced laborers, for they were his fighting force, his ministers, commanders, adjutants, chariot officers, and cavalry. <sup>23</sup>There were five hundred fifty overseers answerable to Solomon's governors for the work, directing the people engaged in the work.

<sup>24n</sup> As soon as Pharaoh's daughter went up from the City of David to her house, which he had built for her, Solomon built Millo. <sup>25</sup>Three times a year Solomon used to offer burnt offerings and communion offerings on the altar which he had built to the LORD, and to burn incense before the LORD.

Thus he completed the temple.*

Solomon's Gifts.* <sup>26</sup>King Solomon also built a fleet at Ezion-geber, which is near Elath on the shore of the Red Sea in the land of Edom.* <sup>27</sup>To this fleet Hiram sent his own servants, expert sailors, with the servants of Solomon. <sup>28</sup>They went to Ophir, and obtained four hundred and twenty talents of gold and brought it to King Solomon.

CHAPTER 10

Solomon's Listening Heart: The Queen of Sheba.* <sup>1o</sup> The queen of Sheba,* having heard a report of Solomon's fame, came to test him with subtle questions. <sup>2</sup>She arrived in Jerusalem with a very numerous retinue, and with camels bearing spices, a large amount of gold, and precious stones. She came to Solomon and spoke to him about everything that she had on her mind. <sup>3</sup>King Solomon explained everything she asked about, and there was nothing so obscure that the king could not explain it to her. <sup>4</sup>When the queen of Sheba witnessed Solomon's great wisdom, the house he had built, <sup>5</sup>the food at his table, the seating of his ministers, the attendance and dress of his waiters, his servers, and the burnt offerings he offered in the house of the LORD, it took her breath away. <sup>6</sup> "The report I heard in my country about your deeds and your wisdom is true," she told the king. <sup>7</sup> "I did not believe the report until I came and saw with my own eyes that not even the half had been told me. Your wisdom and prosperity surpass the report I heard. <sup>8</sup>Happy are your servants, happy these ministers of yours, who stand before you always and listen to your wisdom. <sup>9</sup>Blessed be the LORD, your God, who has been pleased to place you on the throne of Israel. In his enduring love for Israel, the LORD has made you king to carry out judgment and justice." <sup>10</sup>Then she gave the king one hundred and twenty gold talents, a very large quantity of spices, and precious stones. Never again did anyone bring such an abundance of spices as the queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon.

<sup>11</sup>Hiram's fleet, which used to bring gold from Ophir, also brought from there a very large quantity of almug* wood and precious stones. <sup>12</sup>With this wood the king made supports for the house of the LORD and for the house of the king, and harps and lyres for the singers. Never again was any such almug wood brought or seen to the present day.

Solomon's Riches: Domestic Affairs.* <sup>14p</sup> The gold that came to Solomon in one year weighed six hundred and sixty-six gold talents, <sup>15</sup>in addition to what came from the tolls on travelers, from the traffic of merchants, and from all the kings of Arabia and the governors of the country. <sup>16q</sup> King Solomon made two hundred shields of beaten gold (six hundred shekels of gold went into each shield) <sup>17</sup>and three hundred bucklers of beaten gold (three minas of gold went into each buckler); and the king put them in the house of the Forest of Lebanon. <sup>18</sup>The king made a large ivory throne, and overlaid it with refined gold. <sup>19</sup>The throne had six steps, a back with a round top, and an arm on each side of the seat, with two lions standing next to the arms, <sup>20</sup>and twelve other lions standing there on the steps, two to a step, one on either side of each step. Nothing like this was made in any other kingdom. <sup>21</sup>All King Solomon's drinking vessels were gold, and all the utensils in the house of the Forest of Lebanon were pure gold. There was no silver, for in Solomon's time silver was reckoned as nothing. <sup>22</sup>For the king had a fleet of Tarshish ships* at sea with Hiram's fleet. Once every three years the fleet of Tarshish ships would come with a cargo of gold, silver, ivory, apes, and peacocks.

Solomon's Riches: Chariots and Horses. <sup>26r</sup>Solomon amassed chariots and horses; he had one thousand four hundred chariots and twelve thousand horses; these he allocated among the chariot cities and to the king's service in Jerusalem. <sup>27s</sup> The king made silver as common in Jerusalem as stones, and cedars as numerous as the sycamores of the Shephelah. <sup>28</sup>Solomon's horses were imported from Egypt and from Cilicia, where the king's merchants purchased them. <sup>29</sup>A chariot imported from Egypt cost six hundred shekels of silver, a horse one hundred and fifty shekels; they were exported at these rates to all the Hittite and Aramean kings.

CHAPTER 11

The End of Solomon's Reign.* <sup>1t</sup> King Solomon loved many foreign women besides the daughter of Pharaoh—Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Sidonians, Hittites—<sup>2u</sup> from nations of which the LORD had said to the Israelites: You shall not join with them and they shall not join with you, lest they turn your hearts to their gods. But Solomon held them* close in love. <sup>3</sup>He had as wives seven hundred princesses and three hundred concubines, and they turned his heart.

off every male in Edom. <sup>17</sup>But Hadad, with some Edomite servants of his father, fled toward Egypt. Hadad was then a young boy. <sup>18</sup>They left Midian and came to Paran; they gathered men from Paran and came to Egypt, to Pharaoh, king of Egypt; he gave Hadad a house, appointed him rations, and assigned him land. <sup>19</sup>Hadad won great favor with Pharaoh, so that he gave him in marriage his sister-in-law, the sister of Queen Tahpenes, his own wife. <sup>20</sup>Tahpenes' sister bore Hadad a son, Genubath. Tahpenes weaned him in Pharaoh's palace. And Genubath lived in Pharaoh's house, with Pharaoh's own sons. <sup>21</sup>When Hadad in Egypt heard that David rested with his ancestors and that Joab, the commander of the army, was dead, he said to Pharaoh, "Give me leave to return to my own land." <sup>22</sup>Pharaoh said to him, "What do you lack with me, that you are seeking to return to your own land?" He answered, "Nothing, but please let me go!"

Sidonians, Chemosh, god of Moab, and Milcom, god of the Ammonites. They have not walked in my ways or done what is right in my eyes, according to my statutes and my ordinances, as David his father did. <sup>34</sup>Yet I will not take any of the kingdom from Solomon himself, but will keep him a prince as long as he lives, for the sake of David my servant, whom I have chosen, who kept my commandments and statutes.

<sup>35</sup>But I will take the kingdom from his son's hand and give it to you—that is, the ten tribes. <sup>36</sup>I will give his son one tribe, that David my servant may always have a holding before me in Jerusalem, the city I have chosen, to set my name there. <sup>37</sup>You I will take and you shall reign over all that you desire and shall become king of Israel. <sup>38</sup>If, then, you heed all that I command you, walking in my ways, and do what is right in my eyes by keeping my statutes and my commandments like David my servant, I will be with you. I will build a lasting house for you, just as I did for David; I will give Israel to you. <sup>39</sup>I will humble David's line for this, but not forever.”

II. The Reign of Jeroboam*

CHAPTER 12

See RG 219–26

Political Disunity. * <sup>1</sup>Rehoboam went to Shechem, * where all Israel had come to make him king. <sup>2</sup>When Jeroboam, son of Nebat, heard about it, he was still in Egypt. He had fled from King Solomon and remained in Egypt, <sup>3</sup>and they sent for him.

Then Jeroboam and the whole assembly of Israel came and they said to Rehoboam, <sup>4</sup> “Your father put a heavy yoke on us. If you now lighten the harsh servitude and the heavy yoke your father imposed on us, we will be your servants.” <sup>5</sup>He answered them, “Come back to me in three days,” and the people went away.

<sup>6</sup>King Rehoboam asked advice of the elders who had been in his father Solomon’s service while he was alive, and asked, “How do you advise me to answer this people?” <sup>7</sup>They replied, “If today you become the servant of this people and serve them, and give them a favorable answer, they will be your servants forever.” <sup>8</sup>But he ignored the advice the elders had given him, and asked advice of the young men who had grown up with him and were in his service. <sup>9</sup>He said to them, “What answer do you advise that we should give this people, who have told me, ‘Lighten the yoke your father imposed on us’?” <sup>10</sup>The young men who had grown up with him replied, “This is what you must say to this people who have told you, ‘Your father made our yoke heavy; you lighten it for us.’ You must say, ‘My little finger is thicker than my father’s loins. <sup>11</sup>My father put a heavy yoke on you, but I will make it heavier. My father beat you with whips, but I will beat you with scorpions.’ ” <sup>12</sup>Jeroboam and the whole people came back to King Rehoboam on the third day, as the king had instructed them: “Come back to me in three days.” <sup>13</sup>Ignoring the advice the elders had given him, the king gave the people a harsh answer. <sup>14</sup>He spoke to them as the young men had advised: “My father made your yoke heavy, but I will make it heavier. My father beat you with whips, but I will beat you with scorpions.” <sup>15b</sup> The king did not listen to the people, for this turn of events was from the LORD: he fulfilled the word the LORD had spoken through Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam, son of Nebat.

We have no heritage in the son of Jesse.

To your tents, Israel!

Now look to your own house, David.”

So Israel went off to their tents. <sup>17</sup>But Rehoboam continued to reign over the Israelites who lived in the cities of Judah.

<sup>18</sup>King Rehoboam then sent out Adoram,* who was in charge of the forced labor, but all Israel stoned him to death. King Rehoboam then managed to mount his chariot and flee to Jerusalem. <sup>19</sup>And so Israel has been in rebellion against the house of David to this day. <sup>20</sup>When all Israel heard that Jeroboam had returned, they summoned him to an assembly and made him king over all Israel. None remained loyal to the house of David except the tribe of Judah alone.

Divine Approval.* <sup>21</sup>On his arrival in Jerusalem, Rehoboam assembled all the house of Judah and the tribe of Benjamin— one hundred and eighty thousand elite warriors—to wage war against the house of Israel, to restore the kingdom to Rehoboam, son of Solomon. <sup>22</sup>However, the word of God came to Shemaiah, a man of God: <sup>23</sup>Say to Rehoboam, son of Solomon, king of Judah, and to all the house of Judah and to Benjamin, and to the rest of the people: <sup>24</sup>Thus says the LORD: You must not go out to war against your fellow Israelites. Return home, each of you, for it is I who have brought this about. They obeyed the word of the LORD and turned back, according to the word of the LORD.

Jeroboam's Cultic Innovations.* <sup>26</sup>Jeroboam thought to himself: “Now the kingdom will return to the house of David. <sup>27</sup>If this people go up to offer sacrifices in the house of the LORD in Jerusalem, the hearts of this people will return to their master, Rehoboam, king of Judah, and they will kill me and return to Rehoboam, king of Judah.” <sup>28d</sup> The king took counsel, made two calves of gold, and said to the people: “You have been going up to Jerusalem long enough. Here are your gods, O Israel, who brought you up from the land of Egypt.” <sup>29e</sup> And he put one in Bethel, the other in Dan. <sup>30</sup>This led to sin, because the people frequented these calves in Bethel and in Dan. <sup>31</sup>He also built temples on the high places and made priests from among the common people who were not Levites.

Divine Disapproval.* <sup>32</sup>Jeroboam established a feast in the eighth month on the fifteenth day of the month like the pilgrimage feast in Judah, and he went up to the altar. He did this in Bethel, sacrificing to the calves he had made. He stationed in Bethel the priests of the high places he had built. <sup>33</sup>Jeroboam went up to the altar he built in Bethel on the fifteenth day of the eighth month, the month he arbitrarily chose. He established a feast for the Israelites, and he went up to the altar to burn incense.

CHAPTER 13

See RG 219–26

<sup>1</sup>A man of God came from Judah to Bethel by the word of the LORD, while Jeroboam was standing at the altar to burn incense. <sup>2f</sup> He cried out against the altar by the word of the LORD: “Altar, altar, thus says the LORD: A child shall be born to the house of David, Josiah by name, who shall slaughter upon you the priests of the high places who burn incense upon you, and they shall burn human bones upon you.” <sup>3g</sup> He also gave a sign that same day and said: “This is the sign that the LORD has spoken: The altar shall be torn apart and the ashes on it shall be scattered.” <sup>4</sup>When the king heard the word of the man of God which he was crying out against the altar in Bethel, Jeroboam stretched forth his hand from the altar and said, “Seize him!” But the hand he stretched forth against him withered, so that he could not draw it back. <sup>5</sup> (The altar was torn apart and the ashes from the altar were scattered, in accordance with the sign the man of God gave by the word of the LORD.)

Chronology of the Two Kingdoms

DIFFICULTIES ARISE IN comparing the chronology of the two kingdoms, Israel and Judah. Before the modern system of numbering years was adopted in the fifth century A.D., events were usually dated by the reigns of kings, beginning a new series with each new king. In some instances the remaining months of the year of a king's death were counted as the first year of his successor; in others the new series of numbers did not begin until the next full year. Frequently a king associated his son with him on the throne, so that the year could be designated by either king; in such cases one writer might begin the new king's reign when this occurred, whereas another writer might not begin the enumeration until after the father's death. Interest in precise chronology is comparatively recent. Until modern times the year was commenced at different dates in various countries. When these facts are recognized, most of the chronological discrepancies in the narratives of the two kingdoms can be resolved.

The total length of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah can be learned from events mentioned in the history of other countries. A much larger sum is reached by adding together the number of years of each king's reign, because fractions of a year would appear as full years in each reign.

From 1050–931 B.C. the united kingdom was ruled by Saul, David, and Solomon. The approximate dates of the reigns of the kings of Israel and Judah are shown in the table below:

Israel	Reign	Co-Regency	Judah	Reign	Co-Regency

<sup>6</sup>Then the king said to the man of God, “Entreat the LORD, your God, and intercede for me that my hand may be restored.” So the man of God entreated the LORD, and the king’s hand was restored as it was before. <sup>7</sup>The king told the man of God, “Come with me to the house for some refreshment so that I may give you a present.” <sup>8</sup>The man of God said to the king, “If you gave me half your palace, I would not go with you, nor eat bread or drink water in this place. <sup>9</sup>For I was instructed by the word of the LORD: Do not eat bread or drink water, and do not return by the way you came.” <sup>10</sup>So he departed by another road and did not go back the way he had come to Bethel.

Prophetic Disunity.* <sup>11</sup>There was an old prophet living in Bethel, whose son came and told him all that the man of God had done that day in Bethel. When his sons repeated to their father the words the man of God had spoken to the king, <sup>12</sup>the father asked them, “Which way did he go?” So his sons pointed out to him the road taken by the man of God who had come from Judah. <sup>13</sup>Then he said to his sons, “Saddle the donkey for me.” When they had saddled it, he mounted <sup>14</sup>and followed the man of God, whom he found seated under a terebinth. When he asked him, “Are you the man of God who came from Judah?” he answered, “Yes.” <sup>15</sup>Then he said, “Come home with me and have some bread.” <sup>16</sup>“I cannot return with you or go with you, and I cannot eat bread or drink water with you in this place,” he answered, <sup>17</sup>“for I was told by the word of the LORD: You shall not eat bread or drink water there, and do not go back the way you came.” <sup>18</sup>But he said to him, “I, too, am a prophet like you, and an angel told me by the word of the LORD: Bring him back with you to your house to eat bread and drink water.” But he was lying to him. <sup>19</sup>So he went back with him, and ate bread and drank water in his house. <sup>20</sup>But while they were sitting at table, the word of the LORD came to the prophet who had brought him back, <sup>21</sup>and he cried out to the man of God who had come from Judah: “Thus says the LORD: Because you rebelled against the charge of the LORD and did not keep the command which the LORD, your God, gave you, <sup>22</sup>but returned and ate bread and drank water in the place where he told you, Do not eat bread or drink water, your corpse shall not be brought to the grave of your ancestors.” <sup>23</sup>After he had eaten bread and drunk, they saddled for him the donkey that belonged to the prophet who had brought him back, <sup>24</sup>and he set out. But a lion met him on the road, and killed him. His body lay sprawled on the road, and the donkey remained standing by it, and so did the lion.

sprawled on the road with the donkey and the lion standing beside it. The lion had not eaten the body nor had it harmed the donkey. <sup>29</sup>The prophet lifted up the body of the man of God and put it on the donkey, and brought him back to the city to mourn and to bury him. <sup>30</sup>He laid the man's body in his own grave, and they mourned over it: "Alas, my brother!" <sup>31</sup> <sup>h</sup> After he had buried him, he said to his sons, "When I die, bury me in the grave where the man of God is buried. Lay my bones beside his. <sup>32</sup> <sup>i</sup> For the word which he proclaimed by the word of the LORD against the altar in Bethel and against all the temples on the high places in the cities of Samaria shall certainly come to pass."

<sup>33</sup>Even after this, Jeroboam did not turn from his evil way, but again made priests for the high places from among the common people. Whoever desired it was installed as a priest of the high places. <sup>34</sup>This is the account of the sin of the house of Jeroboam for which it was to be cut off and destroyed from the face of the earth.

CHAPTER 14

Ahijah Announces Jeroboam's Downfall.* <sup>1</sup>At that time Abijah, son of Jeroboam, took sick. <sup>2j</sup> So Jeroboam said to his wife, “Go and disguise yourself so that no one will recognize you as Jeroboam’s wife. Then go to Shiloh, where you will find Ahijah the prophet. It was he who spoke the word that made me king over this people. <sup>3</sup>Take along ten loaves, some cakes, and a jar of honey, and go to him. He will tell you what will happen to the child.” <sup>4</sup>The wife of Jeroboam did so. She left and went to Shiloh and came to the house of Ahijah.

Now Ahijah could not see because age had dimmed his sight. <sup>5</sup>But the LORD said to Ahijah: Jeroboam’s wife is coming to consult you about her son, for he is sick. Thus and so you must tell her. When she comes, she will be in disguise. <sup>6</sup>So Ahijah, hearing the sound of her footsteps as she entered the door, said, “Come in, wife of Jeroboam. Why are you in disguise? For my part, I have been commissioned to give you bitter news. <sup>7</sup>Go, tell Jeroboam, ‘Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: I exalted you from among the people and made you ruler of my people Israel. <sup>8</sup>I tore the kingdom away from the house of David and gave it to you. Yet you have not been like my servant David, who kept my commandments and followed me with his whole heart, doing only what is right in my sight. <sup>9</sup>You have done more evil than all who were before you: you have gone and made for yourself other gods and molten images to provoke me; but me you have cast behind your back. <sup>10k</sup> Therefore, I am bringing evil upon the house of Jeroboam:

I will cut off from Jeroboam’s line every male

—bond or free—in Israel;

I will burn up what is left of the house of Jeroboam

as dung is burned, completely.

<sup>11l</sup> Anyone of Jeroboam’s line who dies in the city,
dogs will devour;
anyone who dies in the field,
the birds of the sky will devour.

For the LORD has spoken!’ <sup>12</sup>As for you, leave, and go home! As you step inside the city, the child will die, <sup>13</sup>and all Israel will mourn him and bury him, for he alone of Jeroboam’s line will be laid in the grave, since in him alone of Jeroboam’s house has something pleasing to the LORD, the God of Israel, been found. <sup>14</sup>The LORD will raise up for himself a king over Israel who will cut off the house of Jeroboam—today, at this very moment! <sup>15</sup>The LORD will strike Israel like a reed tossed about in the water and will pluck out Israel from this good land which he gave their ancestors, and will scatter them beyond the River,* because they made asherahs for themselves, provoking the LORD. <sup>16</sup>He will give up Israel because of the sins Jeroboam has committed and caused Israel to commit.” <sup>17</sup>So Jeroboam’s wife left and went back; when she came to Tirzah and crossed the threshold of her house, the child died. <sup>18</sup>He was buried and all Israel mourned him, according to the word of the LORD spoken through his servant Ahijah the prophet.

<sup>19</sup>The rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he fought and how he reigned, these are recorded in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel. <sup>20</sup>The length of Jeroboam’s reign was twenty-two years. He rested with his ancestors, and Nadab his son succeeded him as king.

III. Kings of Judah and Israel*

Reign of Rehoboam. <sup>21*</sup> Rehoboam, son of Solomon, became king in Judah. Rehoboam was forty-one years old when he became king, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city in which, out of all the tribes of Israel, the LORD chose to set his name. His mother’s name was Naamah the Ammonite.

<sup>22</sup>Judah did evil in the LORD’s sight and they angered him even more than their ancestors had done. <sup>23</sup>They, too, built for themselves high places, sacred pillars, and asherahs,* upon every high hill and under every green tree. <sup>24</sup>There were also pagan priests in the land. Judah imitated all the abominable practices of the nations whom the LORD had driven out of the Israelites’ way. <sup>25*</sup> In the fifth year of King Rehoboam, Shishak, king of Egypt, attacked Jerusalem. <sup>26m</sup> He took everything, including the treasures of the house of the LORD and the treasures of the house of the king, even the gold shields Solomon had made. <sup>27</sup>To replace them, King Rehoboam made bronze shields, which he entrusted to the officers of the guard on duty at the entrance of the royal house. <sup>28</sup>Whenever the king visited the house of the LORD, those on duty would carry the shields, and then return them to the guardroom.

CHAPTER 15

See RG 219–26

Reign of Abijam. <sup>1</sup>In the eighteenth year of King Jeroboam, son of Nebat, Abijam became king of Judah; <sup>2</sup>he reigned three years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Maacah, daughter of Abishalom.

Reign of Asa. <sup>9</sup>In the twentieth year of Jeroboam, king of Israel, Asa, king of Judah, became king; <sup>10</sup>he reigned forty-one years in Jerusalem. His mother's* name was Maacah, daughter of Abishalom. <sup>11</sup>Asa did what was right in the sight of the LORD like David his father, <sup>12</sup>banishing the pagan priests from the land and removing all the idols his ancestors had made. <sup>13</sup>He also deposed his grandmother Maacah from her position as queen mother, because she had made an outrageous object for Asherah. Asa cut down this object and burned it in the Wadi Kidron. <sup>14</sup>The high places did not disappear; yet Asa's heart was entirely with the LORD as long as he lived. <sup>15</sup>He brought into the house of the LORD his father's and his own votive offerings of silver and gold and various vessels. <sup>16</sup>There was war between Asa and Baasha, king of Israel, all their days. <sup>17</sup>Baasha, king of Israel, attacked Judah and fortified Ramah to blockade Asa, king of Judah. <sup>18</sup>Asa then took all the silver and gold remaining in the treasuries of the house of the LORD and the house of the king. Entrusting them to his ministers, King Asa sent them to Ben-hadad, son of Tabrimmon, son of Hezion, king of Aram,* who ruled in Damascus. He said: <sup>19</sup> "There is a treaty between you and me, as there was between your father and my father. I am sending you a present of silver and gold. Go, break your treaty with Baasha, king of Israel, that he may withdraw from me.” <sup>20</sup>Ben-hadad agreed with King Asa and sent the leaders of his troops against the cities of Israel. They attacked Ijon, Dan, Abel-beth-maacah, and all Chinnereth, besides all the land of Naphtali. <sup>21</sup>When Baasha heard of it, he left off fortifying Ramah, and stayed in Tirzah. <sup>22</sup>Then King Asa summoned all Judah without exception, and they carried away the stones and beams with which Baasha was fortifying Ramah. With them King Asa built Geba of Benjamin and Mizpah. <sup>23</sup>All the rest of the acts of Asa, with all his valor and all that he did, and the cities he built, are recorded in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah. But in his old age, Asa had an infirmity in his feet. <sup>24</sup>Asa rested with his ancestors; he was buried with his ancestors in the City of David his father, and his son Jehoshaphat succeeded him as king.

Reign of Nadab. <sup>25</sup>Nadab, son of Jeroboam, became king of Israel in the second year of Asa, king of Judah. For two years he reigned over Israel.

<sup>26</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD’s sight, walking in the way of his father and the sin he had caused Israel to commit. <sup>27</sup>Baasha, son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, plotted against him and struck him down at Gibbethon of the Philistines, which Nadab and all Israel were besieging. <sup>28</sup>Baasha killed him in the third year of Asa, king of Judah, and succeeded him as king. <sup>29</sup>Once he was king, he killed the entire house of Jeroboam, not leaving a single soul but destroying Jeroboam utterly, according to the word of the LORD spoken through his servant, Ahijah the Shilonite, <sup>30</sup>because of the sins Jeroboam committed and caused Israel to commit, by which he provoked the LORD, the God of Israel, to anger.

Reign of Baasha. <sup>33</sup>In the third year of Asa, king of Judah, Baasha, son of Ahijah, became king of all Israel in Tirzah for twenty-four years.

<sup>34</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD’s sight, walking in the way of Jeroboam and the sin he had caused Israel to commit.

CHAPTER 16

<sup>2</sup>Inasmuch as I exalted you from the dust and made you ruler of my people Israel, but you have walked in the way of Jeroboam and have caused my people Israel to sin, provoking me to anger by their sins, <sup>3p</sup> I will burn up what is left of Baasha and his house; I will make your house like that of Jeroboam, son of Nebat:

city,
dogs will devour;
One who dies in the field,
the birds of the sky will devour.

Reign of Elah. <sup>8</sup>In the twenty-sixth year of Asa, king of Judah, Elah, son of Baasha, became king of Israel in Tirzah for two years.

The army was encamped at Gibbethon of the Philistines <sup>16</sup>when they heard, “Zimri has formed a conspiracy and has killed the king.” So that day in the camp all Israel made Omri, commander of the army, king of Israel. <sup>17</sup>Omri and all Israel with him marched up from Gibbethon and besieged Tirzah. <sup>18</sup>When Zimri saw that the city was captured, he entered the citadel of the king’s house and burned it down over him. He died <sup>19</sup>because of the sins he had committed, doing what was evil in the LORD’s sight by walking in the way of Jeroboam and the sin he had caused Israel to commit.

Civil War. <sup>21</sup>At that time the people of Israel were divided in two, half following Tibni, son of Ginath, to make him king, and half for Omri. <sup>22</sup>The partisans of Omri prevailed over those of Tibni, son of Ginath. Tibni died and Omri became king.

Reign of Omri. <sup>23</sup>In the thirty-first year of Asa, king of Judah, Omri became king of Israel for twelve years; the first six of them he reigned in Tirzah.

Reign of Ahab. <sup>29</sup>Ahab, son of Omri, became king of Israel in the thirty-eighth year of Asa, king of Judah. Ahab, son of Omri, reigned over Israel in Samaria for twentytwo years.

<sup>30</sup>Ahab, son of Omri, did what was evil in the LORD’s sight more than any of his predecessors. <sup>31</sup>It was not enough for him to follow the sins of Jeroboam, son of Nebat. He even married Jezebel, daughter of Ethbaal, king of the Sidonians, and began to serve Baal, and worship him. <sup>32</sup>Ahab set up an altar to Baal in the house of Baal which he built in Samaria, <sup>33</sup>and also made an asherah. Ahab did more to provoke the LORD, the God of Israel, to anger than any of the kings of Israel before him. <sup>34</sup><sup>t</sup> During his reign, Hiel from Bethel rebuilt Jericho. At the cost of Abiram, his firstborn son, he laid the foundation, and at the cost of Segub, his youngest son, he set up the gates, according to the word of the LORD spoken through Joshua, son of Nun.*

IV. The Story of Elijah*

CHAPTER 17

Elijah Proclaims a Drought.* <sup>1</sup>Elijah the Tishbite,<sup>*u</sup> from Tishbe in Gilead, said to Ahab: “As the LORD, the God of Israel, lives, whom I serve, during these years there shall be no dew or rain except at my word.” <sup>2</sup>The word of the LORD came to Elijah: <sup>3</sup>Leave here, go east and hide in the Wadi Cherith, east of the Jordan. <sup>4</sup>You shall drink of the wadi, and I have commanded ravens to feed you there. <sup>5</sup>So he left and did as the LORD had commanded. He left and remained by the Wadi Cherith, east of the Jordan. <sup>6v</sup> Ravens brought him bread and meat in the morning, and bread and meat in the evening, and he drank from the wadi.

<sup>7</sup>After some time, however, the wadi ran dry, because no rain had fallen in the land. <sup>8w</sup> So the word of the LORD came to him: <sup>9</sup>Arise, go to Zarephath of Sidon and stay there. I have commanded a widow there to feed you. <sup>10</sup>He arose and went to Zarephath. When he arrived at the entrance of the city, a widow was there gathering sticks; he called out to her, “Please bring me a small cupful of water to drink.” <sup>11</sup>She left to get it, and he called out after her, “Please bring along a crust of bread.” <sup>12</sup>She said, “As the LORD, your God, lives, I have nothing baked; there is only a handful of flour in my jar and a little oil in my jug. Just now I was collecting a few sticks, to go in and prepare something for myself and my son; when we have eaten it, we shall die.” <sup>13</sup>Elijah said to her, “Do not be afraid. Go and do as you have said. But first make me a little cake and bring it to me. Afterwards you can prepare something for yourself and your son. <sup>14</sup>For the LORD, the God of Israel, says: The jar of flour shall not go empty, nor the jug of oil run dry, until the day when the LORD sends rain upon the earth.” <sup>15</sup>She left and did as Elijah had said. She had enough to eat for a long time—he and she and her household. <sup>16</sup>The jar of flour did not go empty, nor the jug of oil run dry, according to the word of the LORD spoken through Elijah.

<sup>17x</sup> Some time later the son of the woman, the owner of the house, fell sick, and his sickness grew more severe until he stopped breathing. <sup>18</sup>So she said to Elijah, “Why have you done this to me, man of God? Have you come to me to call attention to my guilt and to kill my son?” <sup>19</sup>Elijah said to her, “Give me your son.” Taking him from her lap, he carried him to the upper room where he was staying, and laid him on his own bed. <sup>20</sup>He called out to the LORD: “LORD, my God, will you afflict even the widow with whom I am staying by killing her son?” <sup>21</sup>Then he stretched himself out upon the child three times and he called out to the LORD: “LORD, my God, let the life breath return to the body of this child.” <sup>22</sup>The LORD heard the prayer of Elijah; the life breath returned to the child’s body and he lived. <sup>23</sup>Taking the child, Elijah carried him down into the house from the upper room and gave him to his mother. Elijah said, “See! Your son is alive.” <sup>24</sup>The woman said to Elijah, “Now indeed I know that you are a man of God, and it is truly the word of the LORD that you speak.”

Elijah Ends the Drought.* <sup>1</sup>Long afterward, in the third year, the word of the LORD came to Elijah: Go, present yourself to Ahab, that I may send rain upon the earth. <sup>2</sup>So Elijah went to present himself to Ahab.

Now the famine in Samaria was severe, <sup>3</sup>and Ahab had summoned Obadiah, master of his palace, who greatly revered the LORD. <sup>4</sup>When Jezebel was slaughtering the prophets of the LORD, Obadiah took a hundred prophets, hid them away by fifties in caves, and supplied them with food and water. <sup>5</sup>Ahab said to Obadiah, “Go through the land to all sources of water and to all the wadies. We may find grass and keep the horses and mules alive, so that we shall not have to slaughter any of the beasts.” <sup>6</sup>Dividing the land to explore between them, Ahab went one way by himself, Obadiah another way by himself. <sup>7</sup>As Obadiah was on his way, Elijah met him. Recognizing him, Obadiah fell prostrate and asked, “Is it you, my lord Elijah?” <sup>8</sup>He said to him, “Yes. Go tell your lord, ‘Elijah is here!’ ”*<sup>9</sup>But Obadiah said, “What sin has your servant committed, that you are handing me over to Ahab to be killed? <sup>10</sup>As the LORD, your God, lives, there is no nation or kingdom where my lord has not sent in search of you. When they replied, ‘He is not here,’ he made each kingdom and nation swear they could not find you. <sup>11</sup>And now you say, ‘Go tell your lord: Elijah is here!’ <sup>12</sup>After I leave you, the spirit of the LORD will carry you to some place I do not know, and when I go to inform Ahab and he does not find you, he will kill me—though your servant has revered the LORD from his youth! <sup>13</sup>Have you not been told, my lord, what I did when Jezebel was murdering the prophets of the LORD—that I hid a hundred of the prophets of the LORD, fifty each in caves, and supplied them with food and water? <sup>14</sup>And now you say, ‘Go tell your lord: Elijah is here!’ He will kill me!” <sup>15</sup>Elijah answered, “As the LORD of hosts lives, whom I serve, I will present myself to him today.”

<sup>16</sup>So Obadiah went to meet Ahab and informed him, and Ahab came to meet Elijah. <sup>17</sup>When Ahab saw Elijah, he said to him, “Is it you, you disturber of Israel?” <sup>18</sup>He answered, “It is not I who disturb Israel, but you and your father’s house, by forsaking the commands of the LORD and you by following the Baals. <sup>19</sup>Now summon all Israel to me on Mount Carmel, as well as the four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal and the four hundred

<sup>21</sup>Elijah approached all the people and said, "How long will you straddle the issue? If the LORD is God, follow him; if Baal, follow him." But the people did not answer him. <sup>22</sup>So Elijah said to the people, "I am the only remaining prophet of the LORD, and there are four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal. <sup>23</sup>Give us two young bulls. Let them choose one, cut it into pieces, and place it on the wood, but start no fire. I shall prepare the other and place it on the wood, but shall start no fire. <sup>24</sup>You shall call upon the name of your gods, and I will call upon the name of the LORD. The God who answers with fire is God." All the people answered, "We agree!"

<sup>25</sup>Elijah then said to the prophets of Baal, "Choose one young bull and prepare it first, for there are more of you. Call upon your gods, but do not start the fire." <sup>26</sup>Taking the young bull that was turned over to them, they prepared it and called upon Baal from morning to noon, saying, "Baal, answer us!" But there was no sound, and no one answering. And they hopped around the altar they had prepared. <sup>27</sup>When it was noon, Elijah taunted them: "Call louder, for he is a god; he may be busy doing his business, or may be on a journey. Perhaps he is asleep and must be awakened." <sup>28</sup>They called out louder and slashed themselves with swords and spears according to their ritual until blood gushed over them. <sup>29</sup>Noon passed and they remained in a prophetic state until the time for offering sacrifice. But there was no sound, no one answering, no one listening.

<sup>30</sup>Then Elijah said to all the people, "Come here to me." When they drew near to him, he repaired the altar of the LORD which had been destroyed. <sup>31</sup>He took twelve stones, for the number of tribes of the sons of Jacob, to whom the LORD had said: Israel shall be your name. <sup>32</sup>He built the stones into an altar to the name of the LORD, and made a trench around the altar large enough for two measures of grain. <sup>33</sup>When he had arranged the wood, he cut up the young bull and laid it on the wood. <sup>34</sup>He said, "Fill four jars with water and pour it over the burnt offering and over the wood." "Do it again," he said, and they did it again. "Do it a third time," he said, and they did it a third time. <sup>35</sup>The water flowed around the altar; even the trench was filled with the water. <sup>36</sup>At the time for offering sacrifice, Elijah the prophet came forward and said, "LORD, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, let it be known this day that you are God in Israel and that I am your servant and have done all these things at your command. <sup>37y</sup> Answer me, LORD! Answer me, that this people may know that you, LORD, are God and that you have turned their hearts back to you.” <sup>38</sup>The LORD’s fire came down and devoured the burnt offering, wood, stones, and dust, and lapped up the water in the trench. <sup>39</sup>Seeing this, all the people fell prostrate and said, “The LORD is God! The LORD is God!” <sup>40z</sup> Then Elijah said to them, “Seize the prophets of Baal. Let none of them escape!” They seized them, and Elijah brought them down to the Wadi Kishon and there he slaughtered them. <sup>41</sup>Elijah then said to Ahab, “Go up, eat and drink, for there is the sound of a heavy rain.” <sup>42</sup>So Ahab went up to eat and drink, while Elijah went up to the top of Carmel, crouched down to the earth, and put his head between his knees. <sup>43</sup>He said to his servant, “Go up and look out to sea.” He went up and looked, but reported, “There is nothing.” Seven times he said, “Go look again!” <sup>44</sup>And the seventh time the youth reported, “There is a cloud as small as a man’s hand rising from the sea.” Elijah said, “Go and say to Ahab, ‘Harness up and go down the mountain before the rain stops you.’ ” <sup>45</sup>All at once the sky grew dark with clouds and wind, and a heavy rain fell. Ahab mounted his chariot and headed for Jezreel. <sup>46</sup>But the hand of the LORD was on Elijah. He girded up his clothing and ran before Ahab as far as the approaches to Jezreel.

Flight to Horeb.* <sup>1</sup>Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done—that he had murdered all the prophets by the sword. <sup>2</sup>Jezebel then sent a messenger to Elijah and said, “May the gods do thus to me and more, if by this time tomorrow I have not done with your life what was done to each of them.” <sup>3</sup>Elijah was afraid and fled for his life, going to Beer-sheba of Judah. He left his servant there <sup>4a</sup> and went a day’s journey into the wilderness, until he came to a solitary broom tree and sat beneath it. He prayed for death: “Enough, LORD! Take my life, for I am no better than my ancestors.” <sup>5</sup>He lay down and fell asleep under the solitary broom tree, but suddenly a messenger* touched him and said, “Get up and eat!” <sup>6</sup>He looked and there at his head was a hearth cake and a jug of water. After he ate and drank, he lay down again, <sup>7</sup>but the angel of the LORD came back a second time, touched him, and said, “Get up and eat or the journey will be too much for you!” <sup>8b</sup> He got up, ate, and drank; then strengthened by that food, he walked forty days and forty nights to the mountain of God, Horeb.

<sup>9</sup>There he came to a cave, where he took shelter. But the word of the LORD came to him: Why are you here, Elijah? <sup>10</sup>He answered: “I have been most zealous for the LORD, the God of hosts, but the Israelites have forsaken your covenant. They have destroyed your altars and murdered your prophets by the sword. I alone remain, and they seek to take my life.” <sup>11c</sup> Then the LORD said: Go out and stand on the mountain before the LORD;* the LORD will pass by. There was a strong and violent wind rending the mountains and crushing rocks before the LORD—but the LORD was not in the wind; after the wind, an earthquake—but the LORD was not in the earthquake; <sup>12</sup>after the earthquake, fire—but the LORD was not in the fire; after the fire, a light silent sound.*

<sup>13</sup>When he heard this, Elijah hid his face in his cloak and went out and stood at the entrance of the cave. A voice said to him, Why are you here, Elijah? <sup>14d</sup> He replied, “I have been most zealous for the LORD, the God of hosts, but the Israelites have forsaken your covenant. They have destroyed your altars and murdered your prophets by the sword. I alone remain, and they seek to take my life.” <sup>15</sup>* <sup>e</sup> The LORD said to him: Go back! Take the desert road to Damascus. When you arrive, you shall anoint Hazael as king of Aram. <sup>16f</sup> You shall also anoint Jehu, son of Nimshi, as king of Israel, and Elisha, son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah, as prophet to succeed you.

<sup>17</sup>Anyone who escapes the sword of Hazael, Jehu will kill. Anyone who escapes the sword of Jehu, Elisha will kill. <sup>18g</sup> But I will spare seven thousand in Israel—every knee that has not bent to Baal, every mouth that has not kissed him.

V. The Story of Ahab*

CHAPTER 20

Ahab's Victories over Aram.* <sup>1</sup>Benhadad, king of Aram, gathered all his forces and, accompanied by thirty-two kings with horses and chariotry, set out to besiege and attack Samaria. <sup>2</sup>He sent messengers to Ahab, king of Israel, within the city, <sup>3</sup>and said to him, “This is Ben-hadad’s message: ‘Your silver and gold are mine, and your wives and your fine children are mine.’ ” <sup>4</sup>The king of Israel answered, “Just as you say, my lord king, I and all I have are yours.” <sup>5</sup>But the messengers came again and said, “This is Ben-hadad’s message: ‘I sent you word: Give me your silver and gold, your wives and your children. <sup>6</sup>But now I say: At this time tomorrow I will send my servants to you, and they shall ransack your house and the houses of your servants. They shall seize and take away whatever you consider valuable.’ ” <sup>7</sup>The king of Israel then summoned all the elders of the land and said: “Understand clearly that this man is intent on evil. When he sent to me for my wives and children, my silver and my gold, I did not refuse him.” <sup>8</sup>All the elders and all the people said to him, “Do not listen. Do not give in.” <sup>9</sup>Accordingly he directed the messengers of Ben-hadad, “Say this: ‘To my lord the king: I will do all that you demanded of your servant the first time. But this I cannot do.’ ” The messengers left and reported this. <sup>10</sup>Ben-hadad then responded, “May the gods do thus to me and more, if there will remain enough dust in Samaria to make handfuls for all my followers.” <sup>11</sup>The king of Israel replied, “Tell him, ‘Let not one who puts on armor boast like one who takes it off.’ ” <sup>12</sup>Ben-hadad was drinking in the pavilions with the kings when he heard this reply. He commanded his servants, “Get ready!”; and they got ready to storm the city.

<sup>13</sup>Then a prophet came up to Ahab, king of Israel, and said: “The LORD says, Do you see all this vast army? Today I am giving it into your power, that you may know that I am the LORD.” <sup>14</sup>But Ahab asked, “Through whom will it be given over?” He answered, “The LORD says, Through the aides of the provincial governors.” Then Ahab asked, “Who is to attack?” He replied, “You are.”

hadad was drinking heavily in the pavilions with the thirty-two kings who were his allies. <sup>17</sup>When the aides of the provincial governors marched out first, Benhadad received word, “Some men have marched out of Samaria.” <sup>18</sup>He answered, “Whether they have come out for peace or for war, take them alive.” <sup>19</sup>But when these had come out of the city—the aides of the provincial governors with the army following them— <sup>20</sup>each of them struck down his man. The Arameans fled with Israel pursuing them, while Benhadad, king of Aram, escaped on a chariot horse. <sup>21</sup>Then the king of Israel went out and destroyed the horses and chariots. Thus he inflicted a severe defeat on Aram.

<sup>22</sup>Then the prophet approached the king of Israel and said to him: “Go, regroup your forces. Understand clearly what you must do, for at the turning of the year* the king of Aram will attack you.” <sup>23</sup>Meanwhile the servants of the king of Aram said to him: “Their gods are mountain gods. That is why they defeated us. But if we fight them on level ground, we shall be sure to defeat them.” <sup>24</sup>This is what you must do: Take the kings from their posts and put prefects in their places. <sup>25</sup>Raise an army as large as the army you have lost, horse for horse, chariot for chariot. Let us fight them on level ground, and we shall surely defeat them.” He took their advice and did this. <sup>26</sup>At the turning of the year, Ben-hadad mustered Aram and went up to Aphek to fight against Israel. <sup>27</sup>The Israelites, too, were mustered and supplied with provisions; then they went out to meet the enemy. The Israelites, encamped opposite, looked like little flocks of goats, while Aram covered the land. <sup>28</sup>A man of God approached and said to the king of Israel: “The LORD says, Because Aram has said the LORD is a god of mountains, not a god of plains, I will give all this vast army into your power that you may know I am the LORD.” <sup>29</sup>They were encamped opposite each other for seven days. On the seventh day battle was joined, and the Israelites struck down one hundred thousand foot soldiers of Aram in one day. <sup>30</sup>The survivors fled into the city of Aphek, where the wall collapsed on twenty-seven thousand of them. Benhadad, too, fled, and took refuge within the city, in an inner room.

Ben-hadad says, ‘Spare my life!’ ” He asked, “Is he still alive? He is my brother.”* <sup>33</sup>Hearing this as a good omen, the men quickly took him at his word and said, “Ben-hadad is your brother.” He answered, “Go and get him.” When Ben-hadad came out to him, the king had him mount his chariot. <sup>34</sup>Ben-hadad said to him, “The cities my father took from your father I will restore, and you may set up bazaars for yourself in Damascus, as my father did in Samaria.” Ahab replied, “For my part, I will set you free on those terms.” So he made a covenant with him and then set him free.

Prophetic Condemnation. <sup>35</sup>Acting on the word of the LORD, one of the guild prophets said to his companion, “Strike me.” But he refused to strike him. <sup>36</sup>Then he said to him, “Since you did not obey the voice of the LORD, a lion will attack you when you leave me.” When he left him, a lion came upon him and attacked him.<sup>i</sup> <sup>37</sup>Then the prophet met another man and said, “Strike me.” The man struck him a blow and wounded him. <sup>38</sup>The prophet went on and waited for the king on the road, disguising himself with a bandage over his eyes. <sup>39</sup>As the king was passing, he called out to the king and said: “Your servant went into the thick of the battle, and suddenly someone turned and brought me a man and said, ‘Guard this man. If he is missing, you shall have to pay for his life with your life or pay out a talent of silver.’”* <sup>40</sup>But while your servant was occupied here and there, the man disappeared.” The king of Israel said to him, “That is your sentence. You have decided it yourself.” <sup>41</sup>He quickly removed the bandage from his eyes, and the king of Israel recognized him as one of the prophets. <sup>42j</sup> He said to him: “The LORD says, Because you have set free the man I put under the ban,* your life shall pay for his life, your people for his people.” <sup>43k</sup> Disturbed and angry, the king of Israel set off for home and entered Samaria.

CHAPTER 21

See RG 219–26

Seizure of Naboth's Vineyard.* <sup>1</sup>Na-both the Jezreelite had a vineyard in Jezreel next to the palace of Ahab, king of Samaria. Some time later, <sup>2</sup>Ahab said to Naboth, "Give me your vineyard to be my vegetable garden, since it is close by, next to my house. I will give you a better vineyard in exchange, or, if you prefer, I will give you its value in money." <sup>3</sup>Naboth said to Ahab, "The LORD forbid that I should give you my ancestral heritage."*<sup>4</sup>Ahab went home disturbed and angry at the answer Naboth the Jezreelite had given him: "I will not give you my ancestral heritage." Lying down on his bed, he turned away and would not eat. <sup>5</sup>His wife Jezebel came to him and said to him, "Why are you so sullen that you will not eat?" <sup>6</sup>He answered her, "Because I spoke to Naboth the Jezreelite and said to him, 'Sell me your vineyard, or, if you prefer, I will give you a vineyard in exchange.' But he said, 'I will not give you my vineyard.' " <sup>7</sup>Jezebel his wife said to him, "What a king of Israel you are! Get up! Eat and be cheerful. I will give you the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite."

<sup>15</sup>When Jezebel learned that Naboth had been stoned to death, she said to Ahab, "Go, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite which he refused to sell you, because Naboth is not alive, but dead." <sup>16</sup>When Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, he started on his way down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

Prophetic Condemnation. <sup>17</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite: <sup>18</sup>Go down to meet Ahab, king of Israel, who is in Samaria. He will be in the vineyard of Naboth, where he has gone to take possession. <sup>19</sup>Tell him: “Thus says the LORD: After murdering, do you also take possession?” And tell him, “Thus says the LORD: In the place where the dogs licked up the blood of Naboth, the dogs shall lick up your blood, too.”

<sup>20*</sup> Ahab said to Elijah, “Have you found me out, my enemy?” He said, “I have found you. Because you have given yourself up to doing evil in the LORD’s sight, <sup>21m</sup> I am bringing evil upon you: I will consume you and will cut off every male belonging to Ahab, whether bond or free, in Israel. <sup>22</sup>I will make your house like that of Jeroboam, son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha, son of Ahijah, because you have provoked me by leading Israel into sin.”

city,
dogs will devour;
Anyone who dies in the field,
the birds of the sky will devour.

<sup>25</sup>Indeed, no one gave himself up to the doing of evil in the sight of the LORD as did Ahab, urged on by his wife Jezebel. <sup>26</sup>He became completely abominable by going after idols, just as the Amorites had done, whom the LORD drove out of the Israelites’ way.

<sup>27</sup>When Ahab heard these words, he tore his garments and put on sackcloth over his bare flesh. He fasted, slept in the sackcloth, and went about subdued. <sup>28</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, <sup>29n</sup> Have you seen how Ahab has humbled himself before me? Since he has humbled himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his time. I will bring the evil upon his house in his son’s time.

CHAPTER 22

Ahab's Defeat by Aram. <sup>*1</sup>Three years passed without war between Aram and Israel. <sup>2</sup>In the third year, however, King Jehoshaphat of Judah came down to the king of Israel. <sup>3</sup>The king of Israel said to his servants, "Do you not know that Ramoth-gilead is ours and we are doing nothing to take it from the king of Aram?" <sup>4</sup>He asked Jehoshaphat, "Will you come with me to fight against Ramoth-gilead?" Jehoshaphat answered the king of Israel, "You and I are as one, and your people and my people, your horses and my horses as well."

Prophetic Condemnation. <sup>5</sup>Jehoshaphat also said to the king of Israel, "Seek the word of the LORD at once." <sup>6</sup>The king of Israel assembled the prophets, about four hundred of them, and asked, "Shall I go to fight against Ramoth-gilead or shall I refrain?" They said, "Attack. The Lord will give it into the power of the king."<sup>*7</sup> But Jehoshaphat said, "Is there no other prophet of the LORD here we might consult?" <sup>8</sup>The king of Israel answered, "There is one other man through whom we might consult the LORD; but I hate him because he prophesies not good but evil about me. He is Micaiah, son of Imlah." Jehoshaphat said, "Let not the king say that." <sup>9</sup>So the king of Israel called an official and said to him, "Get Micaiah, son of Imlah, at once."

<sup>13</sup>Meanwhile, the messenger who had gone to call Micaiah said to him, "Look now, the prophets are unanimously predicting good for the king. Let your word be the same as any of theirs; speak a good word." <sup>14</sup>Micaiah said, "As the LORD lives, I shall speak whatever the LORD tells me."

<sup>15</sup>When he came to the king, the king said to him, "Micaiah, shall we go to fight at Ramoth-gilead, or shall we refrain?" He said, "Attack and conquer! The LORD will give it into the power of the king." <sup>16</sup>But the king answered him, “How many times must I adjure you to tell me nothing but the truth in the name of the LORD?” <sup>17</sup> * So Micaiah said:

“I see all Israel
scattered on the mountains,
like sheep without a shepherd,
And the LORD saying,
These have no master!
Let each of them go back home in peace.”

<sup>24</sup>Thereupon Zedekiah, son of Chenaanah, came up and struck Micaiah on the cheek, saying, “Has the spirit of the LORD, then, left me to speak with you?” <sup>25</sup>Micaiah said, “You shall find out on the day you go into an inner room to hide.” <sup>26</sup>The king of Israel then said, “Seize Micaiah and take him back to Amon, prefect of the city, and to Joash, the king’s son, <sup>27</sup>and say, ‘This is the king’s order: Put this man in prison and feed him scanty rations of bread and water until I come back in safety.’ ” <sup>28p</sup> But Micaiah said, “If you return in safety, the LORD has not spoken through me.” (He also said, “Hear, O peoples, all of you.”) *

Ahab at Ramoth-gilead. <sup>29</sup>The king of Israel and Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead, <sup>30</sup>and the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, “I will disguise myself and go into battle, but you put on your own robes.” So the king of Israel disguised himself and entered the battle. <sup>31</sup>In the meantime the king of Aram had given his thirty-two chariot commanders the order, “Do not fight with anyone, great or small, except the king of Israel alone.”

Reign of Jehoshaphat. <sup>41</sup>Jehoshaphat, son of Asa, became king of Judah in the fourth year of Ahab, king of Israel. <sup>42</sup>Jehoshaphat was thirty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother’s name was Azubah, daughter of Shilhi.

<sup>43</sup>He walked in the way of Asa his father unceasingly, doing what was right in the LORD’s sight. <sup>44</sup>Nevertheless, the high places did not disappear, and the people still sacrificed on the high places and burned incense there. <sup>45</sup>Jehoshaphat also made peace with the king of Israel.

ancestors in the City of David his father, and his son Jehoram succeeded him as king.

Reign of Ahaziah.* <sup>52</sup>Ahaziah, son of Ahab, became king over Israel in Samaria in the seventeenth year* of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah; he reigned two years over Israel.

<sup>53</sup>He did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, walking in the way of his father, his mother, and Jeroboam, son of Nebat, who caused Israel to sin. <sup>54</sup>He served Baal and worshiped him, thus provoking the LORD, the God of Israel, just as his father had done.

1:1–11:43 The story of the reign of Solomon comprises twelve major units, organized concentrically. That is, the first unit (1:1–2:12a) balances the last (11:26–43), the second (2:12b–46) balances the second last (11:14–25), and so forth. (See the structural notes at the beginning of each major unit.) The center of the whole story is a diptych that narrates the construction of the Temple (6:1–7:51) and its dedication (8:1–9:10).

1:1–2:12a The first major unit of the Solomon story concludes the so-called Succession Narrative (2 Sm 9–20; 1 Kgs 1–2). This unit tells how Solomon, a younger son, came to succeed David on the throne of Israel through the intervention of the prophet Nathan. Compare the last unit of the Solomon story, 11:26–43, where the prophet Ahijah begins the process whereby Jeroboam becomes king of the northern tribes after Solomon's death. The story of Solomon's accession is itself concentrically arranged: David's decline, Adonijah's rise, Solomon's supporters, David's decision, Solomon's inauguration, Adonijah's fall, David's death. Chronicles has no developed parallel to this story (see 1 Chr 23:1).

1:2 The fulsome use of royal titles and the elaborate etiquette in the Succession Narrative suggest the raw ambition of the contending parties and the oppressive atmosphere of the court.

1:9 En-rogel: the modern Job's Well just southeast of Jerusalem. It marked the ancient boundary between the tribes of Benjamin and Judah (Jos 15:7; 18:16).

1:15 Entering the king's chambers, Bathsheba confronts two realities: he is very old; and she herself, the woman for whom David once committed adultery and murder, has been replaced at the king's side and in his bed.

1:16 Throughout 1 Kgs 1 the key question is "Who shall be king (malak)?" David's feeble, two-syllable question to Bathsheba is an ironic echo of that key word: "What do you wish?" renders the Heb. mahlak?

1:18 Bathsheba uses a clever wordplay to conceal the rivalry between Solomon and Adonijah and imply that the real rivalry is between David and Adonijah. She repeatedly addresses David as "my lord king" ('adoni hammelek), but claims that "Adonijah has become king" ('adoniya malak). Know: the term means both "be aware of" and "recognize, acknowledge, ratify."

1:20 There was no precedent for determining succession to the throne of Israel. Adonijah and his supporters assumed that primogeniture would assure the succession as it did in the monarchies of the surrounding nations. But Bathsheba persuades David that he is free to name anyone he chooses.

1:38 Cherethites and Pelethites: mercenaries in David's bodyguard. They became part of his retinue after he defeated the Philistines and established himself in Jerusalem; cf. 2 Sm 8:18; 15:18; 20:23.

1:43 Hardly: Jonathan's first word, 'abal, whose meaning (such as "indeed," "on the contrary") must be discerned from the context, may be ironic. This irony is deepened by an untranslatable wordplay in Hebrew: a very similar word means “to mourn,” which is an appropriate comment about the death of Adonijah’s hopes for the throne.

1:50 Horns of the altar: the protuberances on each of the four corners of the altar (Ex 27:2; 29:12). By grasping the horns of the altar Adonijah is claiming asylum (Ex 21:13–14; 1 Kgs 2:28).

2:5–9 David urges Solomon to purge Joab and Shimei and supplies him with justification for doing so. Joab had killed Abner (2 Sm 3:22–30) and Amasa (2 Sm 20:4–12), thereby bringing blood guilt upon himself and perhaps upon his master David. Shimei had cursed David (2 Sm 16:5–8), though David pledged that Shimei would not be killed for it (2 Sm 19:16–24). David’s motives, however, may have been more personal. Joab also killed David’s son Absalom and chided David for his untimely public display of grief (2 Sm 18:9–19:8), and David may have felt himself free of the promise he made to Shimei because that promise was coerced by the presence of Shimei’s thousand partisans backing him at the time.

2:12–46 The second major unit of the Solomon story shows how Solomon eliminated people he considered threats to the security of his throne. It is marked by a device called “inclusion,” where the text repeats a word, phrase, or idea at the beginning and end of a literary unit (see vv. 12b, 46b). Compare 11:14–25, where Solomon is unable to eliminate other threats to his security.

2:17–25 Abishag had belonged to David’s harem (1:3–4), which Solomon inherited. Adonijah’s request could imply a challenge to Solomon’s accession and so exposes Adonijah to the suspicion of insurrection that will cost him his life; cf. 2 Sm 3:6–11; 16:21–22.

2:26 The narrator indulges in a subtle wordplay: Abiathar’s exile to Anathoth (‘anatot) continues the series of hardships he has endured (hit’annita).

2:42–44 In his charge against Shimei, Solomon misrepresents the truth in two ways. He did not make Shimei take an oath. And he imposed capital punishment only on crossing the Wadi Kidron, to the east of Jerusalem. This was presumably to prevent Shimei from returning to his home, Bahurim, which lay in that direction; Gath, however, is southwest of Jerusalem. Solomon’s next words to Shimei reveal that he is really being punished for cursing David, not for violating Solomon’s command.

3:1–15 The third major unit of the Solomon story depicts the bright beginning of his reign. It includes the narrator’s remarks about Solomon’s marriage and his building projects, and a divine appearance to Solomon. Compare 11:1–13, where the same themes recur, but in negative fashion. The story of the divine appearance is told also in 2 Chr 1:1–13.

3:16–5:14 The fourth major unit of the Solomon story shows how Solomon used the three gifts that the Lord gave him in 3:12–13: a listening heart (3:16–28), riches (4:1–5:8), universal renown (5:9–14). In each case his gifts benefited the populace, from the lowest classes (3:16–28) to his whole people (4:20; 5:5) to the whole world (5:9–14). Compare 9:26–10:29, where the same three gifts all redound to the benefit of Solomon himself.

3:26–27 The true mother reveals herself by an uncommon and tender word for the child, “baby.” With this, and the woman’s willingness to give up her child, Solomon realizes that she is the true mother, and quotes her words exactly in rendering his judgment.

4:1–5:8 The sub-unit on Solomon’s riches is organized around domestic affairs (4:1–20) and international affairs (5:1–5), with a short appendix on Solomon’s horses and chariots (5:6–8). Compare 9:26–10:29, where comparable elements reappear.

4:7–19 The administration of the kingdom thus initiated by Solomon continued in its main features for the duration of the monarchy in Israel and Judah. Note the use of “all Israel” to mean only the northern tribes (see also 5:27). Solomon’s exactions did not fall evenly on the whole people, but favored his own southern tribe of Judah. Eventually this inequity would lead to the dissolution of the union of Israel and Judah (12:1–19).

4:8–19 Several of the governors are identified only by their fathers’ names.

4:19 One governor ... land of Judah: the royal territory of Judah had its own peculiar administration different from that of the twelve northern districts, each of which had to supply the king and his household with a month’s provisions of food each year (v. 7).

5:1–32 This translation follows the numeration of the Hebrew Bible, rather than the Vulgate; in many English translations, 5:1–14 is 4:21–34, and 5:15 is 5:1.

5:1 The River: that is, the Euphrates. This claim may be exaggerated, but “from the Euphrates to the border of Egypt” was the traditional description of the extent of the Davidic holdings.

5:2 The list of Solomon’s supplies may have originally belonged with the list of governors in 4:7–19, but the author has placed it here to imply that Solomon’s vassal kingdoms, not his own citizenry, supplied his vast daily needs. The daily provisions listed could have supported several thousand people. Kors: see note on Ez 45:14.

5:7 This verse suggests that the governors also saw to the provender for Solomon’s animals (v. 8).

5:15–32 The fifth major unit of the Solomon story explains the preparations Solomon made for the construction of the Temple. He negotiates with Hiram of Tyre for materiel (5:15–26), and conscripts a labor force for personnel (5:27–32). Compare 9:11–23, which returns to the same two themes after the Temple has been built and dedicated. 2 Chr 2:1–17 presents another version of the same material.

5:15 David’s friend: the term “to be a friend,” lit., “to love,” is political, and means that David and Hiram had been allies. The purpose of Hiram’s embassy is to determine whether Solomon is willing to continue the alliance. This unspoken agenda lies behind the negotiations about materials for the Temple, as the concluding v. 26 makes clear.

5:22–23 Although his reply is couched in polite, diplomatic language, Hiram renegotiates Solomon’s terms in his own favor. No Israelites are to enter Tyrian territory, and Solomon is not to pay the salary of Hiram’s laborers but rather to furnish “provisions” for his household—the same language used of the tribute Solomon received from his own vassals in v. 2.

5:25 Twenty kors: this means about two thousand gallons of the finest olive oil available, hand-pressed rather than produced in large olive presses, so that no debris (such as crushed olive pits, powder from the grinding stones) would contaminate the oil. Also see note on 2 Chr 2:9.

5:26 Made: lit., “cut.” The story of Solomon’s arrangements with Hiram is framed by references to political alliance between Israel and Tyre (vv. 15, 26). Since, in Hebrew idiom, Hiram and Solomon “cut” a covenant, this suggests that the agreement they reach for “cutting” wood (which clearly favors Hiram) reflects the terms of the larger treaty.

5:27 All Israel: see note on 4:7–19.

5:32 Gebal: Byblos.

6:1–7:51 The central units of the Solomon story describe the building of the Temple (6:1–7:51) and its dedication ceremony (8:1–9:10). The account of the construction of the Temple (“the house”) is organized to give the reader a guided tour. Approaching from a distance, we see ground plans (6:2–3) and structural work in stone (6:4–8) and wood (6:9–10). After a brief interruption that recounts a divine word to Solomon (6:11–13), we enter the Temple to view the paneling and ornamentation of the nave (6:14–18), the gilded walls and golden entrance of the inner sanctuary or holy of holies (6:19–22), with its priceless interior decoration and furnishings (6:23–28). As we leave, we admire the interior carvings and gilded floor of the inner sanctuary (6:29–30), return to the nave through carved and gilded doors (6:31–32), and exit from the nave through another set of carved and gilded doors (6:33–35) to the courtyard (6:36). Our guide briefly points out the nearby palace complex (7:1–12); then we walk around the courtyard to marvel at Hiram’s heroic works in bronze: the two columns (7:15–22), the “sea” (7:23–26), and the ten stands and basins set along either side of the Temple buildings (7:27–39). The account ends with the smaller bronze vessels Hiram made for the Temple services (7:40–47) and the gold vessels that Solomon made (7:48–50). Unfortunately, several factors make it impossible to use the account to produce a satisfactory model of Solomon’s Temple. Throughout the account there are numerous technical architectural terms whose meaning is lost to us; and it is moreover likely that the author is describing the Temple as it stood in his own time, centuries after Solomon’s day. The Chronicler also describes the construction of the Temple in 2 Chr 3:1–4:22 and its dedication in 2 Chr 5:1–7:22.

6:1 Construction of the Temple is here dated in relation to the traditional date of the exodus from Egypt, rounded off to a conventional twelve generations of forty years each. This chronology means that the Temple was built approximately midway between Israel's two foundational deliverances, the exodus and the return from the Babylonian exile. The schematization of history implied in these figures recommends caution in using them for historical reconstruction.

6:19 The innermost part of the house: the inner sanctuary or holy of holies reserved exclusively for the Lord, enthroned upon the cherubim over the ark of the covenant (2 Chr 3:10–13). See note on Ex 25:18–20.

7:1–12 The account of Solomon's building of the Temple (the Lord's "house") is interrupted by an account of his building of the palace (Solomon's "house"), which contained also the main buildings of public administration. The passage is anachronistic, since 6:38–7:1 and 9:10 imply that the palace was not begun until the Temple was completed. By placing the account here, the narrator highlights the fact that Solomon spent almost twice as long on his own "house" as on the Lord's.

7:8 Solomon did not build the house for Pharaoh's daughter until Temple and palace were finished (3:1). By mentioning this marriage, the narrator keeps before the reader a developing theme in the Solomon story: the king's building activities for his foreign wives, which eventually implicate him in idolatry (3:1; 7:8; 9:24; 11:1–8).

7:13 Hiram: a craftsman, not the king of Tyre (5:15–26).

7:15 The two bronze columns were called Jachin and Boaz (v. 21; also 2 Chr 3:17); the significance of the names is unclear. The columns stood to the right and left of the Temple porch, and may have been intended to mark the entrance to the building as the entrance to God's private dwelling. Their extraordinary size and elaborate decoration would have made them the most impressive parts of the Temple visible to the ordinary viewer, who was not permitted into the nave, let alone into the innermost sanctuary. According to Jer 52:21, the columns were hollow, the bronze exterior being "four fingers thick."

7:18–20 The Hebrew text is corrupt in many places here, and alternative readings attested in the ancient versions are secondary attempts to make sense of the text. A clearer description of the columns and their decoration is found in vv. 41–42.

7:21 Jachin ... Boaz: see note on 7:15.

7:23–26 The molten sea: this was a large circular tank containing about twelve thousand gallons of water.

7:26 Baths: see note on Is 5:10.

7:51 The account of the Temple's construction has been punctuated by references to "building" (banah) or "finishing" (killah) it (6:1b, 9a, 14, 38; 7:40). Here, at the end of the account, the narrator uses a different verb for its "completion," shillem, which allows him to play on the name of Solomon (shelomo).

8:1–66 The account of the Temple's dedication ceremony is organized concentrically: Solomon gathers the assembly (vv. 1–13), blesses it (vv. 14–21), utters a long dedicatory prayer (vv. 22–53), blesses the assembly again (vv. 54–61), and dismisses it (vv. 62–66). To this account is appended an appearance of the Lord to Solomon (9:2–9) that balances the divine word to Solomon in the account of the Temple's construction (6:11–13).

8:2 "The seventh month" ("Ethanin" in the Canaanite calendar) corresponded to late September/early October. The great festival at that time of year is the feast of Booths, or Succoth/Sukkoth (see Lv 23:33–43; Dt 16:13–15). The feast was important enough to warrant holding the dedication ceremony either a month before or eleven months after the Temple was completed in the eighth month (6:38).

8:6–9 The transfer of the ark of the covenant into the newly constructed Temple building, God's act of possession (8:10–13), and Solomon's dedicatory prayer and sacrifices constituted the Temple's solemn dedication and made of it the place of God's presence in the midst of Israel for which David had hoped (2 Sm 6:12–15; 7:1–3). Later God expresses approval of the Temple with an oracle (1 Kgs 9:3–9).

8:12–13 This brief poem is rich in layered meanings. The “dark cloud” in which the Lord intends to dwell refers not only to the cloud that filled the Temple (v. 10) but to the darkness of the windowless holy of holies and to the mystery of the God enthroned invisibly upon the cherubim as well. Solomon calls the Temple he offers God a firm base, using terminology similar to that used for God’s firm establishment of Solomon’s own kingdom (2:12, 46). Finally, Solomon intends this as a place for God to yashab, but the Hebrew word yashab can mean “to dwell” or “to sit.” In other words, the Temple can be understood both as a place where God resides and as the earthly foundation of God’s heavenly throne. The double meaning allows an understanding of the divine presence as both transcendent and graciously immanent. See Solomon’s sentiments in 8:27, and the frequent reference in 8:30–52 to God’s hearing in heaven prayers that were offered in or toward the Temple.

8:61 In urging the people to be “wholly devoted” (shalem), Solomon plays on his own name (shelomo), as if to imply that he himself exemplifies perfect fidelity to God.

8:63 “Communion offerings” (shelamim) is another wordplay on the name of Solomon.

9:10–25 This unit of the Solomon story corresponds to 5:15–32. It comprises the same two themes, negotiations with Hiram of Tyre (vv. 10–14) and use of conscripted labor (vv. 15–23); the last two verses mark the end of the account of Solomon’s building projects (vv. 24–25). Chronicles has an incomplete parallel in 2 Chr 8:1–13.

9:14 The talent was a measure of weight that varied in the course of ancient Israel’s history from forty-five to one hundred thirty pounds. This would mean that, at the least, Hiram sent five thousand pounds of gold to Solomon, and the figure may be as much as three times that amount.

9:15 Millo: probably means ground fill, and may refer to an artificial earthwork or platform of stamped ground south of the Temple area. It was begun by David (2 Sm 5:9); cf. 1 Kgs 9:24; 11:27.

9:25 With these words the account of the construction and dedication of the Temple, which began in 6:1, comes to a close. The verb “complete” (shillem) is a play on Solomon’s name (shelomo); see also the note on 7:51.

9:26–10:29 The next major unit of the Solomon story returns to the theme of the three gifts the Lord gave Solomon in 3:12–13: a listening heart (10:1–13), riches (9:26–27; 10:14–22, 26–29), universal renown (10:23–25). In 3:16–5:14, where the same three themes structure the passage, the emphasis was on the benefits these gifts brought to the whole nation; here it is on the luxury they afford to Solomon’s own court. The material in 9:26–28; 10:11–12, 22 dealing with Solomon’s commercial fleet corresponds to the material on Solomon’s international affairs in 5:1–5. Chronicles has a partial parallel to this material in 2 Chr 9:17–28; see also 2 Chr 1:14–17.

9:26 Ezion-geber ... Edom: the first mention of maritime commerce in the Israelite kingdom; Edom was subject after David conquered it; cf. 2 Sm 8:13–14.

10:1–13 The sub-unit on Solomon’s wisdom contrasts with 3:16–28. There Solomon’s gifts led him to listen to the humblest of his subjects; he accomplished justice and was revered by all his people. Here the emphasis is on his clever speech to a foreign monarch. She is duly impressed by the glory of his court, but it is she, not Solomon, who recalls the monarch’s duty of establishing justice (v. 9). The unit is interrupted briefly by a remark about Solomon’s maritime commerce (10:11–12).

10:1 Queen of Sheba: women rulers among the Arabs are recorded in eighth-century B.C. Assyrian inscriptions. Sheba was for centuries the leading principality in what is now Yemen.

10:11–12 Almug: the identification of this wood is unknown.

10:14–29 The material on Solomon’s riches, like that in 4:1–5:8, is organized around domestic affairs, international affairs, and chariots and horses (see note on 4:1–5:8), but contrasts with that earlier passage. There, Solomon’s domestic administration produced prosperity for all Judah and Israel

(4:20); here the focus is on the wealth and luxury of Solomon's own palace (10:14–21). There his international hegemony assured peace for all Judah and Israel (5:5); here his maritime ventures simply bring him more and more wealth (9:26–28; 10:11–12, 22). There even his livestock benefited from his prudent administration; here chariotry and horses are just another commodity to be traded (10:26–29).

10:22 Tarshish ships: large, strong vessels for long voyages. Tarshish was probably the ancient Tartessus, a Phoenician colony in southern Spain. Ivory, apes, and peacocks: the Hebrew words are obscure and the translations conjectural; however, the reference is certainly to exotic luxury items.

11:1–13 The next major unit of the Solomon story corresponds to 3:1–15. Like the earlier passage it includes the narrator's remarks about Solomon's foreign wives and his building projects, and a divine word commenting on Solomon's conduct. However, where 3:1–15 is generally positive toward Solomon, the present passage is unrelievedly negative. Chronicles has no parallel to this material.

11:2 Them: both the nations and their gods.

11:14–25 This unit of the Solomon story corresponds to 2:12b–46, where Solomon secured his kingdom by eliminating three men he perceived as threats. In this passage, we learn of two foreigners the Lord raised up as "adversaries" to Solomon as early as the beginning of his reign (despite Solomon's complacent claim to Hiram in 5:18 that he had no adversary). In the next section we will learn of a third opponent, Israelite rather than foreign, who turns out to be the "servant of Solomon" announced by the Lord in 11:11. Chronicles has no parallel to this material.

11:14 Adversary: Hebrew Satan, one who stands in opposition; in this context a political opponent.

11:26–43 The last major unit of the Solomon story tells how the prophet Ahijah announces the divine intention to take the larger part of Solomon's kingdom from his control and give it to Jeroboam, Solomon's servant. This counterbalances the first unit of the story, 1:1–2:12a, where another prophet, Nathan, managed to influence the royal succession and obtain the throne for Solomon. The unit is also the first part of the story of Jeroboam (11:26–14:20). It thus acts as a literary hinge connecting the two stories. Chronicles contains a death notice for Solomon in 2 Chr 9:29–31.

11:29 The narrator uses a powerful wordplay here. In the Hebrew consonantal text, Ahijah's cloak (slmh) is indistinguishable from Solomon's name (slmh). Since a prophetic gesture such as Ahijah's was understood as effecting the event it announced, Ahijah's tearing of his cloak embodies the divine action that will tear Solomon's kingdom apart (cf. vv. 11–13).

12:1–14:20 Like the story of the reign of Solomon, the story of the reign of Jeroboam is concentrically organized. Ahijah's oracle of promise to Jeroboam (11:26–43) belongs to both stories, ending that of Solomon (see note on 1:1–11:43) and beginning that of Jeroboam; it corresponds to Ahijah's oracle of condemnation in 14:1–20. Within those literary boundaries are accounts of political (12:1–20) and religious (13:11–34) disunity between Israel and Judah. The center of the story is the account of Jeroboam's heterodox cultic innovations (12:26–31).

12:1–20 The first major unit of the Jeroboam story was Ahijah's oracle (11:26–40), followed by the notice of Solomon's death (11:41–43). This is the second major unit. It tells how Jeroboam came to the throne of Israel after the intransigence of Solomon's son Rehoboam provoked the northern tribes to secede from Jerusalem. The political disunity of the two kingdoms fulfills the word spoken by Ahijah. Compare 13:11–32, where Jeroboam's improper cultic innovations produce religious disunity as well. The scene is concentrically arranged: narrative introduction, first interview, first consultation, second consultation, second interview, narrative conclusion. Chronicles has a parallel version of this story in 2 Chr 10:1–19.

12:1 Shechem: chief city of the northern tribes, where a covenant had previously been made between the Lord and his people and a stone of witness had been erected in memory of the event (Jos 24:25–27). All Israel: see note on 4:7–19.

12:16 What share have we in David?: even in David's time the northern tribes seemed ready to withdraw from the union with Judah (2 Sm 20:1). The unreasonable attitude of Rehoboam toward them intensified the discontent caused by the oppression of Solomon (v. 4) and thus precipitated the political separation of the two kingdoms. In the view of the Deuteronomistic historian (1 Kgs 11:35–36; 12:24), this was by the Lord’s decree.

12:18 Adoram: the name is a shortened form of “Adoniram” (see 4:6; 5:28). If this is the same Adoram who held the position in David’s day (2 Sm 20:24), he would have been a very old man.

12:21–25 The center of this unit is a divine oracle delivered by a man of God of the Southern Kingdom in which the Lord affirms his approval of the secession of the northern tribes. Compare 13:1–10, where another man of God from Judah proclaims the Lord’s condemnation of Jeroboam’s religious separatism. Chronicles has a very similar version of Shemaiah’s oracle in 2 Chr 11:1–4.

12:26–31 At the center of the story of Jeroboam the narrator describes how the king went beyond the political separation of Israel from Judah to create a separatist religious system as well. Jeroboam feared that continued worship in the single Temple in Jerusalem would threaten the political independence of his kingdom. To prevent this he established sanctuaries with non-levitical clergy in his own territory. At two of the sanctuaries he set up golden calves, which the narrator depicts as idols. Thus begins what will later be called “the sin of Jeroboam” (13:34), a theme that will be echoed throughout 1–2 Kings in the condemnations of almost every king of the Northern Kingdom. Historically, Jeroboam’s innovations were not as heterodox as our narrative portrays them. Bethel was an ancient and traditional site for worship of the Lord; and the calves were probably intended to be aids for the deity invisibly enthroned upon them, rather like the cherubim atop the ark of the covenant.

12:29 Bethel ... Dan: at the southern and northern boundaries of the separate kingdom of Israel, where sanctuaries had existed in the past (Gn 12:8; 13:3–4; 28:10–22; 35:1–15; Jgs 18:1–31).

12:32–13:10 This unit of the Jeroboam story corresponds to 12:21–25. Before Jeroboam’s cultic innovations, a man of God from Judah proclaimed the Lord’s approval of the political separation of the kingdoms. After Jeroboam’s cultic innovations, a man of God from Judah proclaims the Lord’s disapproval of Israel’s religious separatism. The unit begins with a long, detailed introduction about the dedication festival Jeroboam holds at Bethel (12:32–33); then follows the scene of the ceremony disrupted by the oracle of the man of God (13:1–10).

13:11–34 The next major unit illustrates how Jeroboam’s cultic innovations begin to alienate prophetic figures of the two kingdoms. Nevertheless, the Lord’s word is stronger than any human attempt to thwart it. The two prophets also foreshadow the destinies of their respective kingdoms. Israel’s experiment with idolatry can tempt Judah to abandon its faithfulness to the Lord. If Judah succumbs, and no longer speaks the word that can call Israel back to the true God, then the only hope for reuniting the two kingdoms will be when they have both died the death of exile.

14:1–20 The last major unit of the Jeroboam story recounts the story of Ahijah of Shiloh’s oracle condemning the entire house of Jeroboam; this is followed by a formulaic notice of Jeroboam’s death and the succession of his son. Compare the first unit of the Jeroboam story, 11:26–43, which recounted Ahijah’s oracle proclaiming Jeroboam’s kingship, followed by the formulaic notice of the death of Solomon.

14:15 The River: the Euphrates; see note on 5:1.

14:21–16:34 The treatment of the events of Jeroboam’s reign shows that the author believes that the political division of the kingdoms embodies the Lord’s will, but that their religious separation is undesirable. The Israelites are, in effect, one people of God under two royal administrations. This complex arrangement is reflected in the way 1–2 Kings organizes the history of the divided kingdoms. Each reign is treated as a unity: the kings, whether of Israel or Judah, are legitimate rulers. But the accounts of northern and southern kings are interwoven in the order in which each came to the throne, without regard to which kingdom they ruled: the people of God is one.

14:21 The account of each king’s reign follows the same basic pattern: a formulaic introduction, a theological evaluation based on religious fidelity, a brief account of an event from the king’s reign, and a formulaic conclusion.

14:23 Ashterahs: see note on Ex 34:13.

14:25–28, 30 The narrator recounts Shishak’s campaign here to imply that it was punishment for Judah’s evil, and perhaps to cast him as supporting Jeroboam in his constant warfare with Rehoboam. (Shishak was named as Jeroboam’s protector and patron in 11:40.) Egyptian records of the campaign list one hundred fifty cities conquered in Israel as well as Judah, but Jerusalem is not one of them. Chronicles has a parallel version of this account in 2 Chr 12:9–11.

15:10 Maacah was in fact Asa’s grandmother (see v. 2), but “king’s mother” was perhaps a title for the gebira, the “Great Lady” or “queen mother” (see, for instance, 2:19). This influential position was usually held by the king’s biological mother, but Maacah may have retained it after the early death of her son Abijam.

15:18 Ben-hadad ... king of Aram: Ben-hadad I, third successor of Rezon, who had thrown off the yoke of the Israelites during the reign of Solomon and become king of Aram (11:23–24). Chronicles has a parallel version of this account in 2 Chr 16:1–6. Who ruled: lit., “sitting,” i.e., enthroned, possibly also meaning “resident” or “residing.”

16:34 See note on Jos 6:26.

17:1–19:21 The central section of 1–2 Kings tells the story of the dynasty of Omri. That dynasty begins and ends in civil war (1 Kgs 16:21–22; 2 Kgs 9–11). Most of the story is set during the reigns of Ahab of Israel (1 Kgs 16:29–22:40) and his son Joram (2 Kgs 3:1–9:26) and focuses particularly on the interaction of the king with various prophets, especially Ahab with Elijah and Joram with Elisha. The story of Ahab itself contains two large complexes, a series of narratives about Elijah (1 Kgs 17:1–19:21) and a series about hostility between Ahab and the prophets (1 Kgs 20:1–22:38).

17:1–24 The story of Elijah is in three parts. The first (chap. 17) describes how Elijah proclaimed a drought on God’s authority and how he survived during the drought. The second (chap. 18) describes how he ends the drought by bringing the populace back to exclusive worship of the Lord. The third (chap. 19) describes Elijah’s despair at the failure of his prophetic mission and his consequent attempt to resign from the prophetic office.

17:1 This verse introduces the enigmatic figure of Elijah the Tishbite. (The name “Elijah” means “the Lord is my God.” The meaning of “Tishbite” is unknown; it may refer to a place or to a social class.) His appearance before Ahab is abrupt and involves several matters that will unify the whole Elijah story. His claim to “serve the Lord” (lit., to “stand before the Lord”) points forward to 19:13, where he refuses to do so; the center of narrative tension on this level is the question of the prophet’s autonomy in God’s service. His proclamation of a drought points forward to 18:41–45 where he announces the drought’s end; the center of narrative tension on this level is the struggle between the Lord and the Canaanite fertility god Baal for the loyalties of Israel. His claim that the drought is due to his own word of power (“except at my word”) points forward to 17:24 where the widow acknowledges the divine source of the word Elijah speaks; the center of narrative tension on this level is the gradual characterization of the prophet as one who receives a divine word (vv. 2, 8), obeys it (v. 5), conveys an effective divine word of threat (v. 1) or promise (vv. 14, 16), and even speaks an effective human word of entreaty to God (vv. 20, 22).

18:1–45 The story of the conflict with the prophets of Baal (vv. 21–40) is embedded in the story of the drought and its ending (vv. 1–20, 41–45). The connection between the two stories is found in Canaanite theology, in whose pantheon Baal, “the Cloud Rider,” the god of rain and storm, was recognized as the one who brings fertility. Worship of many gods was virtually universal in the ancient world; the Israelite requirement of exclusive worship of the Lord (Ex 20:3) was unique. The people of Israel had apparently become comfortable worshiping both Baal and the Lord, perhaps assigning mutually exclusive spheres of influence to each. By claiming authority over the rain (17:1; 18:1), the Lord was challenging Baal’s power in Baal’s own domain. The entire drought story in chaps. 17–18 implies what becomes explicit in 18:21–40: this is a struggle between the Lord and Baal for the loyalties of the people of Israel.

18:8 Elijah is here: the Hebrew hinneh ‘elijahu involves a pun. The sentence means both “Elijah is here,” informing Ahab that the prophet has been found, and “Behold, Yhwh is my God” (the meaning of the name “Elijah”).

19:1–21 The story of Elijah’s journey to Mount Horeb begins as a flight from danger, but takes a surprising turn. The prophet makes his solitary way to the mountain where the Lord had appeared to Moses and the Israelites (“Horeb” is an alternate name for “Sinai”). Like Moses on the holy mountain, Elijah experiences a theophany and receives a commission.

19:11–13 To “stand before the Lord” is a literal translation of a Hebrew idiom meaning “to serve the Lord”; Elijah has used this idiom twice before to describe himself as the Lord’s servant (17:1; 18:15). The Lord’s command, then, means that Elijah is to take up once again the prophetic service to which he has been appointed. The Lord’s question, “Why are you here?” (v. 9, repeated in v. 13), could imply an accusation that he is abandoning his prophetic office. In v. 15, the Lord tells him to go back.

19:12 Compare these divine manifestations to Elijah with those to Moses on the same mountain (Ex 19:16–19; 33:18–23; 34:5–6; Dt 4:10–15). Though various phenomena, such as wind, storms, earthquakes, fire, accompany the divine presence, they do not constitute the presence itself which, like the “silent sound,” is mysterious and ultimately ungraspable. Moses and Elijah, the two figures who experienced God’s theophany on this mountain, reappear with Jesus on another mountain at his transfiguration (Mt 17:1–9; Mk 9:2–9; Lk 9:28–36).

19:15–17 Elijah himself carried out only the last of the three commissions entrusted to him (vv. 19–21); Elisha performed the first himself (2 Kgs 8:7–19), and the second, the anointing of Jehu, through one of his followers (2 Kgs 9:1–10).

19:19–21 Elijah’s act of throwing his mantle over the shoulders of Elisha associates him with Elijah as a servant (v.21). Elisha will later succeed to Elijah’s position and prophetic power (2 Kgs 2:1–15). Elisha’s prompt response, destroying his plow and oxen, signifies a radical change from his former manner of living.

20:1–22:54 Although coverage of Ahab’s reign began in 16:29, he was only a secondary character in the chapters about Elijah. Now attention focuses on Ahab. Each of these chapters tells a story of the king (20:1–34; 21:1–16; 22:1–4, 29–38), to which is attached a scene of prophetic condemnation (20:30–42; 21:17–29; 22:5–28). As relations between Ahab and the prophets of the Lord deteriorate, the scenes of prophetic condemnation get longer and the condemnations themselves become more pointed. Some historians doubt that the stories of hostility between Israel and Aram (chaps. 20 and 22) originally pertained to the reign of Ahab. If this is correct, their original setting may have been several decades later.

20:1–34 This story recounts two battles through which Ahab won freedom for Israel from vassalage to Ben-hadad of Syria. The story is chiastically arranged: negotiations (vv. 1–12), battle (vv. 13–21), battle (vv. 22–30), negotiations (vv. 31–34). The ensuing prophetic condemnation is surprising, since the portrait of Ahab in vv. 1–34 is apparently quite positive.

20:16–19 The narrator uses a sort of verbal split-screen technique to show us two separate and simultaneous scenes. At the gates of Samaria, the Israelite forces are coming out to battle (v. 16a): first the aides (lit., “young men”; v. 17a), then the whole army (v. 19). Meanwhile in the Aramean camp Ben-hadad is getting drunk (v. 16b), receiving reports (v. 17b) and issuing commands (v. 18).

20:32 He is my brother: cf. note on 9:13.

20:39 The “man” is ostensibly a prisoner of war, to be kept or sold as a slave. In the event he escapes, the one charged with guarding him would be obliged either to pay a fine or to take his place as a slave. The fine, however, is exorbitant: a talent of silver is roughly one hundred times the price of an ordinary slave (see Ex 21:32). This is the only clue Ahab will get that he is being set up and that the story is really about himself in his dealings with Ben-hadad. In 2 Sm 14:1–20, the wise woman of Tekoa uses the same technique with King David: she tells a story that elicits a reaction from the king;

David is tricked into pronouncing judgment on himself, as the story parallels his own situation. The prophet Nathan (2 Sm 12:1–7) likewise uses a story that leads David to see his sin for what it is.

20:42 Under the ban: cf. note on Dt 2:34.

21:1–16 The story tells how Jezebel manipulates important structures of Israelite social order, law, and religious observance to eliminate a faithful Israelite landowner who frustrates Ahab's will.

21:3 Heritage: Hebrew naḥalah. Naboth is unwilling to sell or exchange his vineyard. According to the Israelite system of land tenure and distribution, land was held in common within a social unit. The ancestral naḥalah was not private property, to be alienated at will.

21:20–26 In these verses the narrator uses against the third Israelite dynasty the same condemnation formula that was uttered against the first two dynasties, those of Jeroboam (14:9–11) and Baasha (16:2–4). Part of the formula is put in Elijah's mouth, in an oracle against Ahab and his descendants (vv. 21–22), and part of it in an aside to the reader that extends the condemnation to Ahab's wife, Jezebel, and his whole household (vv. 23–24). The oracle against Jezebel will be fulfilled in 2 Kgs 9:36; the obliteration of the dynasty will be recounted in the bloody stories of 2 Kgs 9–11.

22:1–40 This chapter presents a contrasting parallel to chap. 20, where Ahab enjoyed victories over Aram's aggression. Here Ahab is the aggressor, but falls in battle against Aram. Like the preceding chapters, it contains a story of Ahab plus an episode of prophetic condemnation. The story ends with the formulaic conclusion to Ahab's reign (vv. 39–40). Chronicles has a parallel version of this account in 2 Chr 18:1–34. After the story of Ahab's death come accounts of the reign of Jehoshaphat (paralleled in 2 Chr 20:31–37) and of the beginning of the reign of Ahaziah.

22:6 Though Ahab is clearly intended to understand the oracle as prophesying his success, the prophets' words are ambiguous. "The lord" (not "the LORD," i.e., the proper name of Israel's God) who will give victory is unidentified, as is the king to whom it will be given.

22:11 The "two" horns probably symbolize the coalition of two kings, Ahab and Jehoshaphat.

22:17 Micaiah's oracle uses the common ancient metaphor of "shepherd" for the king. It means that the Israelite forces will be left leaderless because the king (or perhaps both kings: the word "master" could be singular or plural in Hebrew) will die in battle.

22:19–23 Since Ahab's intention to attack Ramoth-gilead is unshaken, Micaiah reveals God's plan to trick Ahab to his death, and thus virtually dares Ahab to walk into the trap with his eyes open. The work of the "lying spirit" explains the ambiguities of the prophets' original oracle in v. 6. Prophets "stand in the council of the Lord" and are privy to its deliberations; cf. Jer 23:22.

22:20 Fall on Ramoth-gilead: lit., "heights of Gilead"; even the Lord's words are double-meaning. God wants Ahab to "fall on" (that is, attack) Ramoth-gilead so that he will "fall on" (that is, die on) Ramoth-gilead.

22:28 The last words of the verse are a scribal gloss attributing to Micaiah, son of Imlah, the opening words of the book of a different Micaiah (Micah), the prophet of Moresheth, the sixth of the twelve minor prophets of the Old Testament canon.

22:52–54 The account of Ahaziah's reign continues in 2 Kings.

22:52 Seventeenth year: so the present Hebrew text. This is consistent with the figures in 2 Kgs 3:1, but together those figures conflict with information in 1 Kgs 22:42 and 2 Kgs 1:17. The problem of the chronology of the kings of Israel and Judah has never been convincingly resolved; it is complicated by the fact that the ancient Greek translation sometimes has different lengths of reign and different accession dates. Reign of Ahaziah, Continued. <sup>1</sup>After Ahab's death, Moab rebelled against Israel.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Meanwhile, the messenger of the LORD said to Elijah the Tishbite: Go and meet the messengers of Samaria's king, and tell them: "Is it because there is no God in Israel that you are going to inquire of Baalzebub, the god of Ekron?" <sup>4</sup>For this, the LORD says: You shall not leave the bed upon which you lie; instead, you shall die. And Elijah departed. <sup>5</sup>The messengers then returned to Ahaziah, who asked them, "Why have you returned?" <sup>6</sup>They answered, "A man met us and said to us, 'Go back to the king who sent you and tell him: The LORD says: Is it because there is no God in Israel that you are sending to inquire of Baalzebub, the god of Ekron? For this you shall not leave the bed upon which you lie; instead, you shall die.' " <sup>7</sup>The king asked them, "What was the man like who met you and said these things to you?" <sup>8</sup>They replied, "He wore a hairy garment* with a leather belt around his waist." "It is Elijah the Tishbite!" he exclaimed.

<sup>9</sup>Then the king sent a captain with his company of fifty men after Elijah. The prophet was seated on a hilltop when he found him. He said, "Man of God, the king commands you, 'Come down.' " <sup>10</sup>Elijah answered the captain, "Well, if I am a man of God, may fire come down from heaven and consume you and your fifty men." And fire came down from heaven and consumed him and his fifty men.<sup>b</sup> <sup>11</sup>The king sent another captain with his company of fifty men after Elijah. He shouted up and said, "Man of God, the king says, 'Come down immediately!' " <sup>12</sup>Elijah answered them, "If I am a man of God, may fire come down from heaven and consume you and your fifty men." And divine fire* came down from heaven and consumed him and his fifty men. <sup>13</sup>The king sent a third captain with his company of fifty men. When the third captain had climbed the hill, he fell to his knees before Elijah, pleading with him. He said, "Man of God, let my life and the lives of these fifty men, your servants, count for something in your sight!

<sup>17</sup>Ahaziah died according to the word of the LORD spoken by Elijah. Since he had no son, Joram* succeeded him as king, in the second year of Joram, son of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah.

<sup>18</sup>The rest of the acts of Ahaziah, which he did, are recorded in the book of chronicles of the kings of Israel.

Elijah's Journey. <sup>1</sup>When the LORD was about to take Elijah up to heaven in a whirlwind, he and Elisha were on their way from Gilgal.*

<sup>2</sup>Elijah said to Elisha, “Stay here, please. The LORD has sent me on to Bethel.” Elisha replied, “As the LORD lives, and as you yourself live, I will not leave you.” So they went down to Bethel. <sup>3</sup>The guild prophets who were in Bethel went out to Elisha and asked him, “Do you know that today the LORD will take your master from you?” He replied, “Yes, I know that. Be still.”

<sup>4</sup>Elijah said to him, “Elisha, stay here, please. The LORD has sent me on to Jericho.” Elisha replied, “As the LORD lives, and as you yourself live, I will not leave you.” So they came to Jericho. <sup>5</sup>The guild prophets who were in Jericho approached Elisha and asked him, “Do you know that today the LORD will take your master from you?” He replied, “Yes, I know that. Be still.”

<sup>6</sup>Elijah said to him, “Stay here, please. The LORD has sent me on to the Jordan.” Elisha replied, “As the LORD lives, and as you yourself live, I will not leave you.” So the two went on together. <sup>7</sup>Fifty of the guild prophets followed and stood facing them at a distance, while the two of them stood next to the Jordan.

Elisha Succeeds Elijah. <sup>8</sup>Elijah took his mantle, rolled it up and struck the water: it divided, and the two of them crossed over on dry ground.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>9e</sup> When they had crossed over, Elijah said to Elisha, “Request whatever I might do for you, before I am taken from you.” Elisha answered, “May I receive a double portion of your spirit.”*<sup>10</sup> He replied, “You have asked something that is not easy. Still, if you see me taken up from you, your wish will be granted; otherwise not.” <sup>11</sup>As they walked on still conversing, a fiery chariot and fiery horses came between the two of them, and Elijah went up to heaven in a whirlwind,<sup>f</sup> <sup>12</sup>and Elisha saw it happen. He cried out, “My father! my father!”* Israel’s chariot and steeds!” Then he saw him no longer.

Places Associated with Elisha

He gripped his own garment, tore it into two pieces, <sup>13</sup>and picked up the mantle which had fallen from Elijah. Then he went back and stood at the bank of the Jordan. <sup>14</sup>Wielding the mantle which had fallen from Elijah, he struck the water and said, “The LORD, the God of Elijah—where is he now?”* He struck the water: it divided, and he crossed over.

Elisha’s Journey. <sup>15</sup>The guild prophets in Jericho, who were on the other side, saw him and said, “The spirit of Elijah rests on Elisha.” They went to meet him, bowing to the ground before him.<sup>9</sup> <sup>16</sup>They said, “Among your servants are fifty brave men. Let them go in search of your master.

Perhaps the spirit of the LORD has lifted him up and left him on some mountain or in some valley.” He answered, “Do not send them.”<sup>h 17</sup> But they kept urging him, until he was embarrassed and said, “Send them.” So they sent the fifty men, who searched for three days without finding him.<sup>i 18</sup> When they returned to Elisha in Jericho, where he was staying, he said to them, “Did I not tell you not to go?”

<sup>23*</sup> From there Elisha went up to Bethel. While he was on the way, some little boys came out of the city and jeered at him: “Go away, baldy; go away, baldy!” <sup>24</sup>The prophet turned and saw them, and he cursed them in the name of the LORD. Then two she-bears came out of the woods and tore forty-two of the children to pieces.

CHAPTER 3

See RG 219–26

Reign of Joram of Israel.<sup>1</sup>Joram, son of Ahab, became king over Israel in Samaria in the eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, and he reigned twelve years.*

<sup>2k</sup> He did what was evil in the LORD's sight, though not like his father and mother. He did away with the pillar of Baal that his father had made,<sup>3</sup>but he still held fast unceasingly to the sins which Jeroboam, son of Nebat, caused Israel to commit.

<sup>9</sup>So the king of Israel set out, accompanied by the king of Judah and the king of Edom. After a roundabout journey of seven days the water gave out for the army and for the animals with them.<sup>10</sup>The king of Israel exclaimed, "Alas! The LORD has called three kings together only to deliver us into the power of Moab."<sup>11</sup>But Jehoshaphat asked, "Is there no prophet of the LORD here through whom we may inquire of the LORD?" One of the servants of the king of Israel replied, "Elisha, son of Shaphat, who poured water on the hands of Elijah,* is here."<sup>12</sup>Jehoshaphat agreed, "He has the word of the LORD." So the king of Israel, along with Jehoshaphat and the king of Edom, went down to Elisha.<sup>13</sup>Elisha asked the king of Israel, "What do you want with me? Go to the prophets of your father and to the prophets of your mother." The king of Israel replied, "No, the LORD has called these three kings together only to deliver us into the power of Moab."<sup>14</sup>Then Elisha said, "As the LORD of hosts lives, whom I serve, were it not that I respect Jehoshaphat, the king of Judah, I should neither look at you nor notice you at all. <sup>15</sup>Now get me a minstrel.” When the minstrel played, the hand of the LORD came upon Elisha, <sup>16</sup>and he announced: “Thus says the LORD: Provide many catch basins in this wadi. <sup>17</sup>For the LORD says: Though you will see neither wind nor rain, yet this wadi will be filled with water for you to drink, and for your livestock and pack animals. <sup>18</sup>And since the LORD does not consider this enough, he will also deliver Moab into your power. <sup>19</sup>You shall destroy every fortified city and every choice city, fell every fruit tree, stop up all the springs, and ruin every fertile field with stones.”<sup>m</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Meanwhile, all Moab had heard that the kings had come to war against them; troops from the youngest on up were mobilized and stationed at the border. <sup>22</sup>When they rose early that morning, the sun was shining across the water. The Moabites saw the water as red as blood, <sup>23</sup>and said, “This is blood! The kings have fought among themselves and killed one another. Quick! To the spoils, Moab!” <sup>24</sup>But when they reached the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and attacked the Moabites, who fled from them. They ranged through the countryside destroying Moab— <sup>25</sup>leveling the cities, each one casting the stones onto every fertile field and filling it, stopping up every spring, felling every fruit tree, until only the stones of Kir-hareseth* remained. Then the slingers surrounded and attacked it. <sup>26</sup>When he saw that the battle was going against him, the king of Moab took seven hundred swordsmen to break through to the king of Edom, but he failed. <sup>27</sup>So he took his firstborn, who was to succeed him as king, and offered him as a burnt offering upon the wall. The wrath against Israel* was so great that they gave up the siege and returned to their own land.<sup>n</sup>

The Widow's Oil.<sup>10</sup> A certain woman, the widow of one of the guild prophets, cried out to Elisha: “My husband, your servant, is dead. You know that he revered the LORD, yet now his creditor has come to take my two children into servitude.”* <sup>2</sup>Elisha answered her, “What am I to do for you? Tell me what you have in the house.” She replied, “This servant of yours has nothing in the house but a jug of oil.” <sup>3</sup>He said, “Go out, borrow vessels from all your neighbors—as many empty vessels as you can. <sup>4</sup>Then come back and close the door on yourself and your children; pour the oil into all the vessels, and as each is filled, set it aside.” <sup>5</sup>So she went out. She closed the door on herself and her children and, as they handed her the vessels, she would pour in oil. <sup>6</sup>When all the vessels were filled, she said to her son, “Bring me another vessel.” He answered, “There is none left.” And then the oil stopped. <sup>7</sup>She went and told the man of God, who said, “Go sell the oil to pay off your creditor; with what remains, you and your children can live.”

Elisha Raises the Shunammite's Son. <sup>8</sup>One day Elisha came to Shunem, where there was a woman of influence, who pressed him to dine with her. Afterward, whenever he passed by, he would stop there to dine. <sup>9</sup>So she said to her husband, “I know that he is a holy man of God. Since he visits us often, <sup>10</sup>let us arrange a little room on the roof and furnish it for him with a bed, table, chair, and lamp, so that when he comes to us he can stay there.”<sup>p</sup>

<sup>11</sup>One day Elisha arrived and stayed in the room overnight. <sup>12</sup>Then he said to his servant Gehazi, “Call this Shunammite woman.” He did so, and when she stood before Elisha, <sup>13</sup>he told Gehazi, “Say to her, ‘You have troubled yourself greatly for us; what can we do for you? Can we say a good word for you to the king or to the commander of the army?’ ” She replied, “I am living among my own people.”* <sup>14</sup>Later Elisha asked, “What can we do for her?” Gehazi answered, “She has no son, and her husband is old.” <sup>15</sup>Elisha said, “Call her.” He did so, and when she stood at the door, <sup>16</sup>Elisha promised, “This time next year you will be cradling a baby son.” She said, “My lord, you are a man of God; do not deceive your servant.”<sup>q</sup>

One day the boy went out to his father among the reapers. <sup>19</sup>He said to his father, “My head! My head!” And his father said to the servant, “Carry him to his mother.” <sup>20</sup>The servant picked him up and carried him to his mother; he sat in her lap until noon, and then died. <sup>21</sup>She went upstairs and laid him on the bed of the man of God. Closing the door on him, she went out <sup>22</sup>and called to her husband, “Let me have one of the servants and a donkey. I must go quickly to the man of God, and I will be back.” <sup>23</sup>He asked, “Why are you going to him today? It is neither the new moon nor the sabbath.” But she said, “It is all right.” <sup>24</sup>When the donkey was saddled, she said to her servant, “Lead on! Do not stop my donkey unless I tell you.” <sup>25</sup>She kept going till she reached the man of God on Mount Carmel. When he saw her at a distance, the man of God said to his servant Gehazi: “There is the Shunammite! <sup>26</sup>Hurry to meet her, and ask if everything is all right with her, with her husband, and with the boy.” “Everything is all right,” she replied. <sup>27</sup>But when she reached the man of God on the mountain, she clasped his feet. Gehazi came near to push her away, but the man of God said: “Let her alone, she is in bitter anguish; the LORD hid it from me and did not let me know.” <sup>28</sup>She said, “Did I ask my lord for a son? Did I not say, ‘Do not mislead me’?” <sup>29</sup>He said to Gehazi, “Get ready for a journey. Take my staff with you and be off; if you meet anyone, give no greeting, *and if anyone greets you, do not answer. Lay my staff upon the boy.” <sup>30</sup>But the boy’s mother cried out: “As the LORD lives and as you yourself live, I will not release you.” So he started back with her.

<sup>31</sup>Meanwhile, Gehazi had gone on ahead and had laid the staff upon the boy, but there was no sound, no response. He returned to meet Elisha and told him, “The boy has not awakened.” <sup>32</sup>When Elisha reached the house, he found the boy dead, lying on the bed. <sup>33</sup>He went in, closed the door on them both, and prayed to the LORD. <sup>34</sup>Then he lay upon the child on the bed, placing his mouth upon the child’s mouth, his eyes upon the eyes, and his hands upon the hands. As Elisha stretched himself over the child, the boy’s flesh became warm. <sup>s</sup> <sup>35</sup>He arose, paced up and down the room, and then once more stretched himself over him, and the boy sneezed seven times and opened his eyes.<sup>t</sup> <sup>36</sup>Elisha summoned Gehazi and said, “Call the Shunammite.” He called her, and she came to him, and Elisha said to her, “Take your son.” <sup>37</sup>She came in and fell at his feet in homage; then she took her son and left.

The Poisoned Stew. <sup>38u</sup> When Elisha returned to Gilgal, there was a famine in the land. Once, when the guild prophets were seated before him, he said to his servant, “Put the large pot on, and make some vegetable stew for the guild prophets.” <sup>39</sup>Someone went out into the field to gather herbs and found a wild vine, from which he picked a sackful of poisonous wild gourds. On his return he cut them up into the pot of vegetable stew without anybody’s knowing it. <sup>40</sup>The stew was served, but when they began to eat it, they cried, “Man of God, there is death in the pot!” And they could not eat it. <sup>41</sup>He said, “Bring some meal.” He threw it into the pot and said, “Serve it to the people to eat.” And there was no longer anything harmful in the pot.

The Barley Loaves. <sup>42v</sup> A man came from Baal-shalishah bringing the man of God twenty barley loaves made from the first fruits, and fresh grain in the ear. Elisha said, “Give it to the people to eat.” <sup>43</sup>But his servant objected, “How can I set this before a hundred?” Elisha again said, “Give it to the people to eat, for thus says the LORD: You will eat and have some left over.” <sup>44</sup>He set it before them, and when they had eaten, they had some left over, according to the word of the LORD.

CHAPTER 5

Elisha Cures Naaman's Leprosy. <sup>1</sup>Naaman, the army commander of the king of Aram, was highly esteemed and respected by his master, for through him the LORD had brought victory to Aram. But valiant as he was, the man was a leper.* <sup>2</sup>Now the Arameans had captured from the land of Israel in a raid a little girl, who became the servant of Naaman's wife. <sup>3</sup>She said to her mistress, "If only my master would present himself to the prophet in Samaria! He would cure him of his leprosy."

<sup>4</sup>Naaman went and told his master, "This is what the girl from the land of Israel said." <sup>5</sup>The king of Aram said, "Go. I will send along a letter to the king of Israel." So Naaman set out, taking along ten silver talents, six thousand gold pieces, and ten festal garments.

<sup>6</sup>He brought the king of Israel the letter, which read: "With this letter I am sending my servant Naaman to you, that you may cure him of his leprosy." <sup>7</sup>When he read the letter, the king of Israel tore his garments and exclaimed: "Am I a god with power over life and death, that this man should send someone for me to cure him of leprosy? Take note! You can see he is only looking for a quarrel with me!"<sup>w</sup> <sup>8</sup>When Elisha, the man of God, heard that the king of Israel had torn his garments, he sent word to the king: "Why have you torn your garments? Let him come to me and find out that there is a prophet in Israel."

<sup>13</sup>But his servants came up and reasoned with him: "My father, if the prophet told you to do something extraordinary, would you not do it? All the more since he told you, 'Wash, and be clean'?" <sup>14</sup>So Naaman went down and plunged into the Jordan seven times, according to the word of the man of God. His flesh became again like the flesh of a little child, and he was clean.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>15</sup>He returned with his whole retinue to the man of God. On his arrival he stood before him and said, "Now I know that there is no God in all the earth, except in Israel. Please accept a gift from your servant."<sup>z</sup> <sup>16</sup>Elisha replied, "As the LORD lives whom I serve, I will not take it." And despite Naaman's urging, he still refused. <sup>17</sup>Naaman said: "If you will not accept, please let me, your servant, have two mule-loads of earth,* for your servant will no longer make burnt offerings or sacrifices to any other god except the LORD. <sup>18</sup>But may the LORD forgive your servant this: when my master enters the temple of Rimmon to bow down there, as he leans upon my arm, I too must bow down in the temple of Rimmon. When I bow down in the temple of Rimmon, may the LORD please forgive your servant this." <sup>19</sup>Elisha said to him, "Go in peace."*

Naaman had gone some distance <sup>20</sup>when Gehazi, the servant of Elisha, the man of God, thought to himself: "My master was too easy on this Aramean Naaman, not accepting what he brought. As the LORD lives, I will run after him and get something out of him." <sup>21</sup>So Gehazi hurried after Naaman. Seeing that someone was running after him, Naaman alighted from his chariot to wait for him. He asked, "Is everything all right?" <sup>22</sup>Gehazi replied, "Yes, but my master sent me to say, 'Two young men have just come to me, guild prophets from the hill country of Ephraim. Please give them a talent of silver and two festal garments.' " <sup>23</sup>Naaman said, "I insist! Take two talents," and he pressed him. He tied up two silver talents in bags and gave them, with two festal garments, to two of his servants, who carried them before Gehazi. <sup>24</sup>When he reached the hill, Gehazi received these things, appropriated them for his house, and sent the men on their way.

<sup>25</sup>He went in and stood by Elisha his master, who asked him, "Where have you been, Gehazi?" He answered, "Your servant has not gone anywhere." <sup>26</sup>But Elisha said to him: "Was I not present in spirit when someone got down from his chariot to wait for you? Is this a time to take money or to take garments, olive orchards or vineyards, sheep or cattle, male or female servants? <sup>27</sup>The leprosy of Naaman shall cling to you and your descendants forever.” And Gehazi went out, a leper with skin like snow.*

CHAPTER 6

See RG 219–26

The Lost Ax. <sup>1</sup>The guild prophets once said to Elisha: “This place where we live with you is too cramped for us. <sup>2</sup>Let us go to the Jordan, where by getting one beam apiece we can build ourselves a place to live.” Elisha said, “Go.” <sup>3</sup>One of them requested, “Please agree to accompany your servants.” He replied, “Yes, I will come.”

The Aramean Ambush. <sup>8</sup>When the king of Aram was waging war on Israel, he would make plans with his servants: “I will bivouac at such and such a place.” <sup>9</sup>But the man of God would send word to the king of Israel, “Be careful! Do not pass by this place, for Aram will attack there.” <sup>10</sup>So the king of Israel would send word to the place which the man of God had indicated, and alert it; then they would be on guard. This happened several times.

Informed that Elisha was in Dothan, <sup>14</sup>he sent there a strong force with horses and chariots. They arrived by night and encircled the city. <sup>15</sup>Early the next morning, when the servant of the man of God arose and went out, he saw the force with its horses and chariots surrounding the city. “Alas!” he said to Elisha. “What shall we do, my lord?” <sup>16</sup>Elisha answered, “Do not be afraid. Our side outnumbers theirs.” <sup>17</sup>Then he prayed, “O LORD, open his eyes, that he may see.” And the LORD opened the eyes of the servant, and he saw that the mountainside was filled with fiery chariots and horses around Elisha.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>18</sup>When the Arameans came down to get him, Elisha prayed to the LORD, “Strike this people blind, I pray you.” And the LORD struck them blind, according to Elisha’s word. <sup>19</sup>Then Elisha said to them: “This is the wrong road, and this is the wrong city. Follow me! I will take you to the man you want.” And he led them to Samaria. <sup>20</sup>When they entered Samaria, Elisha prayed, “O LORD, open their eyes that they may see.” The LORD opened their eyes, and they saw that they were inside Samaria. <sup>21</sup>When the king of Israel saw them, he asked, “Shall I kill them, my father? Shall I kill them?” <sup>22</sup>Elisha replied, “You must not kill them. Do you slay those whom you have taken captive with your sword or bow? * Serve them a meal. Let them eat and drink, and then go back to their master.” <sup>23</sup>The king spread a great feast for them. When they had eaten and drunk he sent them away, and they went back to their master. No more Aramean raiders came into the land of Israel.

War Against Aram: Famine. <sup>24</sup>After this, Ben-hadad, king of Aram, mustered his whole army and laid siege to Samaria. <sup>25</sup>Because of the siege the famine in Samaria was so severe that a donkey’s head sold for eighty pieces of silver, and a fourth of a kab of “dove droppings” * for five pieces of silver.

<sup>26b</sup> One day, as the king of Israel was walking on the city wall, a woman cried out to him, “Save us, my lord king!” <sup>27</sup>He replied, “If the LORD does not save you, where could I find means to save you? On the threshing floor? In the wine press?” <sup>28</sup>Then the king asked her, “What is your trouble?” She replied: “This woman said to me, ‘Give up your son that we may eat him today; then tomorrow we will eat my son.’” <sup>29</sup>So we boiled my son and ate him. The next day I said to her, ‘Now give up your son that we may eat him.’ But she hid her son.” <sup>30</sup>When the king heard the woman’s words, he tore his garments. And as he was walking on the wall, the people saw that he was wearing sackcloth underneath, next to his skin.

reached him, Elisha said to the elders: “Do you know that this murderer is sending someone to cut off my head? When the messenger comes, see that you close the door and hold it fast against him. His master’s footsteps are echoing behind him.” <sup>33</sup>While Elisha was still speaking, the messenger came down to him and said, “This evil is from the LORD. Why should I trust in the LORD any longer?”*

CHAPTER 7

<sup>8</sup>After the lepers reached the edge of the camp, they went first into one tent, ate and drank, and took silver, gold, and clothing from it, and went out and hid them. Back they came into another tent, took things from it, and again went out and hid them. <sup>9</sup>Then they said to one another: “We are not doing right. This is a day of good news, and we are keeping silent. If we wait until morning breaks, we will be blamed. So come, let us go and inform the palace.” <sup>10</sup>They came and summoned the city gatekeepers. They said, “We went to the camp of the Arameans, but no one was there—not a human voice, only the horses and donkeys tethered, and the tents just as they were left.” <sup>11</sup>The gatekeepers announced this and it was reported within the palace.

<sup>12</sup>Though it was night, the king got up; he said to his servants, “Let me tell you what the Arameans have done to us. Knowing that we are starving, they have left their camp to hide in the field. They are thinking, ‘The Israelites will leave the city and we will take them alive and enter it.’ ” <sup>13</sup> *

One of his servants, however, suggested: “Let some of us take five of the horses remaining in the city—they are just like the whole throng of Israel that has reached its limit—and let us send scouts to investigate.” <sup>14</sup>They took two chariots, and horses, and the king sent them to reconnoiter the Aramean army with the order, “Go and find out.” <sup>15</sup>They followed the Arameans as far as the Jordan, and the whole route was strewn with garments and other objects that the Arameans had thrown away in their haste. The messengers returned and told the king. <sup>16</sup>The people went out and plundered the camp of the Arameans.

Then a seah of fine flour sold for a shekel and two seahs of barley for a shekel, according to the word of the LORD. <sup>17</sup>The king had put in charge of the gate the officer upon whose arm he leaned; but the people trampled him to death at the gate, just as the man of God had predicted when the messenger came down to him. <sup>18</sup>This was in accordance with the word the man of God spoke to the king: “Two seahs of barley will sell for a shekel, and a seah of fine flour for a shekel at this time tomorrow in the market of Samaria.” <sup>19</sup>The adjutant had answered the man of God, “Even if the LORD were to make windows in heaven, how could this happen?” And Elisha had replied, “You shall see it with your own eyes, but you shall not eat of it.” <sup>20</sup>And that is what happened to him, for the people trampled him to death at the gate.

CHAPTER 8

The Shunammite's Return. <sup>1</sup>Elisha once said to the woman whose son he had restored to life: “Get ready! Leave with your household and live wherever you can, because the LORD has decreed a seven-year famine which is coming upon the land.”<sup>e</sup> <sup>2</sup>The woman got ready and did as the man of God said, setting out with her household, and living in the land of the Philistines for seven years.

Elisha and Hazael of Aram. * <sup>7f</sup>Elisha came to Damascus at a time when Ben-hadad, king of Aram, lay sick. When he was told, “The man of God has come here,” <sup>8</sup>the king said to Hazael, “Take a gift with you and go call on the man of God. Consult the LORD through him, ‘Will I recover from this sickness?’ ” <sup>9g</sup> <sup>9</sup>Hazael went to visit him, carrying a present, and with forty camel loads of the best goods of Damascus. On his arrival, he stood before Elisha and said, “Your son Benhadad, king of Aram, has sent me to you to ask, ‘Will I recover from my sickness?’ ” <sup>10</sup>Elisha answered, “Go and tell him, ‘You will surely recover.’ But the LORD has showed me that he will surely die.” <sup>11</sup>Then he stared him down until he became ill at ease. The man of God wept, <sup>12</sup>and Hazael asked, “Why are you weeping, my lord?” Elisha replied, “Because I know the evil that you will inflict upon the Israelites. You will burn their fortresses, you will slay their youth with the sword, you will dash their little children to pieces, you will rip open their pregnant women.” <sup>h</sup> <sup>13</sup>Hazael exclaimed, “How can your servant, a dog* like me, do anything so important?” Elisha replied, “The LORD has showed you to me as king over Aram.”

<sup>14</sup>Hazael left Elisha and returned to his master, who asked, “What did Elisha tell you?” Hazael replied, “He said, ‘You will surely recover.’ ”

<sup>15</sup>The next day, however, Hazael took a cloth, dipped it in water, and spread it over the king’s face, so that he died. And Hazael succeeded him as king.

Reign of Joram of Judah. <sup>16*</sup>In the fifth year of Joram, son of Ahab, king of Israel, Joram, son of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, became king. <sup>17</sup>He was thirty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

<sup>18</sup>He walked in the way of the kings of Israel as the house of Ahab had done, since the daughter of Ahab was his wife; and he did what was evil in the LORD’s sight. <sup>19</sup>Even so, the LORD was unwilling to destroy Judah, for the sake of his servant David. For he had promised David that he would leave him a holding in the LORD’s presence for all time.<sup>i</sup> <sup>20</sup>During Joram’s reign, Edom revolted against the rule of Judah and installed a king of its own. <sup>21</sup>Thereupon Joram with all his chariots crossed over to Zair. He arose by night and broke through the Edomites when they had surrounded him and the commanders of his chariots. Then his army fled homeward. <sup>22</sup>To this day Edom has been in revolt against the rule of Judah. Libnah also revolted at that time.<sup>j</sup>

Reign of Ahaziah of Judah. * <sup>25</sup>In the twelfth year of Joram, son of Ahab, king of Israel, Ahaziah, son of Joram, king of Judah, became king. <sup>26</sup>Ahaziah was twenty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother’s name was Athaliah, daughter of Omri, king of Israel.* had inflicted on him at Ramah in his battle against Hazael, king of Aram. Then Ahaziah, son of Joram, king of Judah, went down to Jezreel to visit Joram, son of Ahab, for he was sick.

Take this flask of oil with you, and go to Ramoth-gilead. <sup>2</sup>When you get there, look for Jehu, son of Jehoshaphat, son of Nimshi. Enter and take him away from his companions and bring him into an inner chamber. <sup>3</sup>From the flask you have, pour oil on his head, and say, ‘Thus says the LORD: I anoint you king over Israel.’ Then open the door and flee without delay.”

<sup>4</sup>The aide (the prophet’s aide) went to Ramoth-gilead. <sup>5</sup>When he arrived, the commanders of the army were in session. He said, “I have a message for you, commander.” Jehu asked, “For which one of us?” “For you, commander,” he answered. <sup>6</sup>Jehu got up and went into the house. Then the prophet’s aide poured the oil on his head and said, “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: I anoint you king over the people of the LORD, over Israel. <sup>7</sup>* You shall destroy the house of Ahab your master; thus will I avenge the blood of my servants the prophets, and the blood of all the other servants of the LORD shed by Jezebel. <sup>8</sup><sup>m</sup> The whole house of Ahab shall perish:

I will cut off from Ahab’s line every male, whether bond or free in Israel.

<sup>9</sup>I will make the house of Ahab like that of Jeroboam, son of Nebat, and like that of Baasha, son of Ahijah. <sup>10</sup>In the confines of Jezreel, the dogs shall devour Jezebel so that no one can bury her.” Then he opened the door and fled.

<sup>11</sup>When Jehu rejoined his master’s servants, they asked him, “Is all well? Why did that madman come to you?” He replied, “You know that kind of man and his talk.” <sup>12</sup>But they said, “Tell us another lie!” So he told them, “This is what the prophet’s aide said to me, ‘Thus says the LORD: I anoint you king over Israel.’ ” <sup>13</sup>At once each took his garment, spread it under Jehu on the bare steps, blew the horn, and cried out, “Jehu is king!”

VIII. The End of the Omrid Dynasty*

Death of Joram of Israel. <sup>14n</sup> Jehu, son of Jehoshaphat, son of Nimshi, formed a conspiracy against Joram. (Joram, with all Israel, had been besieging Ramoth-gilead against Hazael, king of Aram, <sup>15</sup>but had returned to Jezreel to be healed of the wounds the Arameans had inflicted on him in the battle against Hazael, king of Aram.)

Jehu said to them, “If this is what you really want, see that no one escapes from the city to report in Jezreel.”

<sup>16</sup>Then Jehu mounted his chariot and drove to Jezreel, where Joram lay ill and Ahaziah, king of Judah, had come to visit him. <sup>17</sup>The watchman standing on the tower in Jezreel saw the troop of Jehu coming and reported, “I see chariots.” Joram said, “Get a driver and send him to meet them and to ask whether all is well.” <sup>18</sup>So a horseman went out to meet him and said, “The king asks, ‘Is everything all right?’ ” Jehu said, “What does it matter to you how things are? Get behind me.” The watchman reported to the king, “The messenger has reached them, but is not returning.” <sup>19</sup>Joram sent a second horseman, who went to them and said, “The king asks, ‘Is everything all right?’ ” “What does it matter to you how things are?” Jehu replied. “Get behind me.” <sup>20</sup>The watchman reported, “He has reached them, but is not returning. The driving is like that of Jehu, son of Nimshi; he drives like a madman.” <sup>21o</sup> “Hitch up my chariot,” said Joram, and they hitched up his chariot. Then Joram, king of Israel, and Ahaziah, king of Judah, set out, each in his own chariot, to meet Jehu. They reached him near the plot of ground of Naboth the Jezreelite.

sons—oracle of the LORD—I will repay you for it in that very plot of ground—oracle of the LORD. So now take him and throw him into this plot of ground, in keeping with the word of the LORD.”

Death of Ahaziah of Judah. <sup>27</sup><sup>p</sup> Seeing what was happening, Ahaziah, king of Judah, fled toward Beth-haggan. Jehu pursued him, shouting, “Him too!” They struck him as he rode through the pass of Gur near Ibleam, but he continued his flight as far as Megiddo and died there. <sup>28</sup>His servants brought him in a chariot to Jerusalem and they buried him in his grave with his ancestors in the City of David. <sup>29</sup>In the eleventh year of Joram, son of Ahab, Ahaziah became king over Judah.

Death of Jezebel. <sup>30</sup>Jehu came to Jezreel, and when Jezebel heard of it, she shadowed her eyes, adorned her hair, and looked down from her window. <sup>31</sup>As Jehu came through the gate, she cried out, “Is all well, you Zimri, murderer of your master?”<sup>q</sup> <sup>32</sup>Jehu looked up to the window and shouted, “Who is on my side? Who?” At this, two or three eunuchs looked down toward him. <sup>33</sup>“Throw her down,” he ordered. They threw her down, and some of her blood spurted against the wall and against the horses. Jehu trod over her body <sup>34</sup>and, after eating and drinking, he said: “Attend to that accursed woman and bury her; for she was the daughter of a king.” <sup>35</sup>But when they went to bury her, they found nothing of her but the skull, the feet, and the hands. <sup>36</sup>They returned to Jehu, and when they told him, he said, “This is the word the LORD spoke through his servant Elijah the Tishbite: In the confines of Jezreel the dogs shall devour the flesh of Jezebel.”<sup>r</sup> <sup>37</sup>The corpse of Jezebel shall be like dung in the field in the confines of Jezreel, so that no one can say: This was Jezebel.”

CHAPTER 10

Death of the Sons of Ahab of Israel. <sup>1s</sup> Ahab had seventy sons in Samaria. Jehu wrote letters and sent them to Samaria, to the elders who were rulers of Jezreel and to Ahab's guardians. Jehu wrote: <sup>2</sup>"Since your master's sons are with you, as well as his chariots, horses, fortified city, and weaponry, when this letter reaches you <sup>3</sup>decide which is the best and the fittest of your master's sons, place him on his father's throne, and fight for your master's house." <sup>4</sup>They were overcome with fright and said, "If the two kings could not withstand him, how can we?" <sup>5</sup>So the master of the palace and the chief of the city, along with the elders and the guardians, sent this message to Jehu: "We are your servants, and we will do everything you tell us. We will proclaim no one king; do whatever you think best." <sup>6</sup>So Jehu wrote them a second letter: "If you are on my side and will obey me, bring along the heads of your master's sons* and come to me in Jezreel at this time tomorrow." (The seventy princes were in the care of prominent men of the city, who were rearing them.)

<sup>7</sup>When the letter arrived, they took the princes and slew all seventy of them, put their heads in baskets, and sent them to Jehu in Jezreel. <sup>8</sup>A messenger came in and told him, "They have brought the heads of the princes." He said, "Pile them in two heaps at the gate of the city until morning."

<sup>9</sup>In the morning he came outside, stood there, and said to all the people: "You are guiltless, for it was I who conspired against my lord and slew him. But who killed all these? <sup>10</sup>Know that not a single word which the LORD has spoken against the house of Ahab shall fail. The LORD has accomplished what he decreed through his servant Elijah." <sup>t 11</sup> (And so Jehu slew all who were left of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, as well as all his powerful supporters, intimates, and priests, leaving him no survivor.) <sup>u 12</sup>Then he went back inside.

Death of the Relatives of Ahaziah of Judah. He set out for Samaria and, at Bethked-haroim on the way, <sup>13</sup>Jehu came across relatives of Ahaziah, king of Judah. "Who are you?" he asked, and they said, "We are relatives of Ahaziah. We are going down to visit the princes and the family of the queen mother.”* <sup>14</sup>“Take them alive,” Jehu ordered. They were taken alive, forty-two in number, then slain at the pit of Beth-eked. Not one of them survived.

<sup>15</sup>When he set out from there, Jehu met Jehonadab, son of Rechab, on the road. He greeted him and asked, “Are you with me wholeheartedly, as I am with you?” “Yes,” he replied. “If you are, give me your hand.” He gave him his hand, and he had him mount his chariot, <sup>v</sup> <sup>16</sup>and said, “Come with me and see my zeal for the LORD.” And they took him along in his chariot.

Slaughter of the Worshipers of Baal. <sup>17</sup>When he arrived in Samaria, Jehu slew all who were left of Ahab’s line in Samaria, doing away with them completely, according to the word the LORD spoke to Elijah.

<sup>20</sup>Jehu said further, “Proclaim a solemn assembly in honor of Baal.” They did so, <sup>21</sup>and Jehu sent word of it throughout all Israel. All the servants of Baal came; there was no one who did not come; they came to the temple of Baal, and it was filled from wall to wall. <sup>22</sup>Then Jehu said to the custodian of the wardrobe, “Bring out garments for all the servants of Baal.” When he had brought out the garments for them, <sup>23</sup>Jehu, with Jehonadab, son of Rechab, entered the temple of Baal and said to the servants of Baal, “Search and be sure that there is no one who serves the LORD here with you, but only servants of Baal.” <sup>24</sup>Then they proceeded to offer sacrifices and burnt offerings. Now Jehu had stationed eighty troops outside with this warning, “Any of you who lets someone escape of those whom I shall deliver into your hands shall pay life for life.”

<sup>25</sup>As soon as he finished offering the burnt offering, Jehu said to the guards and aides, “Go in and slay them. Let no one escape.” So the guards and aides put them to the sword and cast them out. Afterward they went into the inner shrine of the temple of Baal, <sup>26</sup>and took out the pillars of the temple of Baal. They burned the shrine, <sup>27</sup>tore down the pillar of Baal, tore down the temple of Baal, and turned it into a latrine, as it remains today.

Death of Jehu of Israel. <sup>29</sup>However, Jehu did not desist from the sins which Jeroboam, son of Nebat, had caused Israel to commit, the golden calves at Bethel and at Dan.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>30</sup>The LORD said to Jehu: Because you have done well what is right in my eyes, and have done to the house of Ahab all that was in my heart, your sons to the fourth generation shall sit upon the throne of Israel.<sup>z</sup> <sup>31</sup>But Jehu was not careful to walk in the law of the LORD, the God of Israel, with all his heart, since he did not desist from the sins which Jeroboam had caused Israel to commit. <sup>32a</sup> At that time the LORD began to dismember Israel. Hazael defeated the Israelites throughout their territory <sup>33</sup>east of the Jordan (all the land of Gilead, of the Gadites, Reubenites, and Manassites), from Aroer on the wadi Arnon up through Gilead and Bashan.

CHAPTER 11

Death of the Heirs of Ahaziah of Judah. <sup>1b</sup> When Athaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she began to kill off the whole royal family. <sup>2</sup>But Jehosheba,* daughter of King Joram and sister of Ahaziah, took Joash, Ahaziah's son, and spirited him away, along with his nurse, from the bedroom where the princes were about to be slain. He was concealed from Athaliah, and so he did not die. <sup>3</sup>For six years he remained hidden with her in the house of the LORD, while Athaliah ruled as queen over the land.

Death of Athaliah. <sup>4</sup>But in the seventh year, Jehoiada summoned the captains of the Carians* and of the guards. He had them come to him in the house of the LORD, made a covenant with them, exacted an oath from them in the house of the LORD, and then showed them the king's son. <sup>5</sup>He gave them these orders: "This is what you must do: one third of you who come on duty on the sabbath shall guard the king's house; <sup>6</sup>another third shall be at the gate Sur; and the last third shall be at the gate behind the guards. You shall guard the palace on all sides, <sup>7</sup>while the two of your divisions who are going off duty that week shall keep guard over the house of the LORD for the king. <sup>8</sup>You shall surround the king, each with drawn weapons, and anyone who tries to approach the guard detail is to be killed; stay with the king, wherever he goes."

<sup>9</sup>The captains did just as Jehoiada the priest commanded. Each took his troops, both those going on duty for the week and those going off duty that week, and came to Jehoiada the priest. <sup>10c</sup> He gave the captains King David's spear and quivers, which were in the house of the LORD. <sup>11</sup>And the guards, with drawn weapons, lined up from the southern to the northern limit of the enclosure, surrounding the altar and the temple on the king's behalf. <sup>12</sup>Then Jehoiada brought out the king's son and put the crown and the testimony* upon him. They proclaimed him king and anointed him, clapping their hands and shouting, "Long live the king!"

and all the people of the land rejoicing and blowing trumpets, Athaliah tore her garments and cried out, “Treason, treason!” <sup>15</sup>Then Jehoiada the priest instructed the captains in command of the force: “Escort her with a guard detail. If anyone follows her, let him die by the sword.” For the priest had said, “She must not die in the house of the LORD.” <sup>16</sup>So they seized her, and when she reached the Horse Gate of the king’s house, she was put to death.

<sup>17d</sup> Then Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, * by which they would be the LORD’s people; and another between the king and the people. <sup>18</sup>Thereupon all the people of the land went to the temple of Baal and demolished it. They shattered its altars and images completely, and slew Mattan, the priest of Baal, before the altars. Jehoiada the priest appointed a detachment for the house of the LORD, <sup>19</sup>and took the captains, the Carians, the guards, and all the people of the land, and they led the king down from the house of the LORD; they came through the guards’ gate to the king’s house, and Joash took his seat on the royal throne. <sup>20</sup>All the people of the land rejoiced and the city was quiet, now that Athaliah had been slain with the sword at the king’s house.

IX. Kings of Judah and Israel*

CHAPTER 12

See RG 219–26

Reign of Joash of Judah. <sup>1</sup>Joash was seven years old when he became king. <sup>2</sup>In the seventh year of Jehu, Joash became king, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zibiah, from Beersheba.

<sup>5</sup>Joash said to the priests: "All the funds for sacred purposes that are brought to the house of the LORD—the census tax, personal redemption money—and all funds that are freely brought to the house of the LORD, <sup>6</sup>the priests may take for themselves, each from his own vendor. However, they must make whatever repairs on the temple may prove necessary." <sup>7</sup>Nevertheless, as late as the twenty-third year of the reign of King Joash, the priests had not made needed repairs on the temple. <sup>8</sup>Accordingly, King Joash summoned the priest Jehoiada and the other priests. He asked, "Why do you not repair the temple? You must no longer take funds from your vendors, but you shall turn them over for the repairs." <sup>9</sup>So the priests agreed that they would neither take funds from the people nor make the repairs on the temple.

<sup>10</sup>Jehoiada the priest then took a chest, bored a hole in its lid, and set it beside the altar, on the right as one entered the house of the LORD. The priests who kept the doors would put into it all the silver that was brought to the house of the LORD. <sup>11e</sup> When they noticed that there was a large amount of silver in the chest, the royal scribe would come up with the high priest, and they would gather up and weigh all the silver that was in the house of the LORD. <sup>12</sup>The amount thus realized they turned over to the workers assigned to the house of the LORD. They in turn would pay it to the carpenters and builders working in the house of the LORD, <sup>13</sup>and to the masons and stone cutters, and for the purchase of the wood and hewn stone used in repairing the breaches, and for any other expenses that were necessary to repair the house of the LORD. <sup>14</sup>None of the valuables brought to the house of the LORD were used there to make silver basins, snuffers, bowls, trumpets, or any gold or silver article. <sup>15</sup>Instead, they were given to the workers, and with them they repaired the house of the LORD. <sup>16</sup>Moreover, no reckoning was asked of those who were provided with the funds to give to the workers, because they held positions of trust. <sup>17</sup>The funds from reparation offerings and from purification offerings, however, were not brought to the house of the LORD; they belonged to the priests.

CHAPTER 13

See RG 219–26

Reign of Jehoahaz of Israel. <sup>1</sup>In the twenty-third year of Joash, son of Ahaziah, king of Judah, Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, became king over Israel in Samaria for seventeen years.

<sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight: he did not depart from following the sins that Jeroboam, son of Nebat, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>3</sup>The LORD was angry with Israel and for a long time gave them into the power of Hazael, king of Aram, and of Ben-hadad, son of Hazael. <sup>4</sup>Then Jehoahaz entreated the LORD, who heard him, since he saw the oppression to which the king of Aram had subjected Israel.<sup>f</sup> <sup>5</sup>So the LORD gave Israel a savior,* and the Israelites, freed from the power of Aram, dwelt in their own tents as formerly. <sup>6</sup>Nevertheless, they did not desist from the sins the house of Jeroboam had caused Israel to commit, but persisted in them. The Asherah* remained even in Samaria.<sup>g</sup> <sup>7</sup>No army was left to Jehoahaz, except fifty horses with ten chariots and ten thousand foot soldiers, since the king of Aram had destroyed them and trampled them like dust.

Reign of Joash of Israel. <sup>10</sup>In the thirtyseventh year of Joash, king of Judah, Joash, son of Jehoahaz, became king over Israel in Samaria sixteen years.

<sup>11</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight; he did not desist from any of the sins Jeroboam, son of Nebat, had caused Israel to commit, but persisted in them.

Elisha's Deathbed Prophecy. <sup>14</sup>When Elisha was suffering from the sickness of which he was to die, Joash, king of Israel, went down to weep over him. "My father, my father!"* he exclaimed, "Israel's chariot and steeds!"<sup>h</sup> <sup>15</sup>Elisha said to him, "Take bow and arrows," and he took bow and arrows. <sup>16*</sup> Elisha said to the king of Israel, "Rest your hand on the bow," and he rested his hand on it. Elisha placed his hands over the king's hands <sup>17</sup>and said, "Open the window toward the east." He opened it. Elisha said, "Shoot," and he shot. He said,

"An arrow of victory for the LORD!
An arrow of victory over Aram!
You will beat Aram at Aphek and finish
him!"

<sup>18</sup>Then he said to the king of Israel, "Take the arrows," which he did. Elisha said to the king of Israel, "Beat the ground!" He beat the ground three times and stopped. <sup>19</sup>The man of God became angry with him and said, "You should have beat five or six times. You would have beaten Aram and finished him. Now you will beat Aram only three times."

At that time of year, bands of Moabites used to raid the land. <sup>21</sup>Once some people were burying a man, when suddenly they saw such a raiding band. So they cast the man into the grave of Elisha, and everyone went off. But when the man came in contact with the bones of Elisha, he came back to life and got to his feet.<sup>i</sup>

CHAPTER 14

See RG 219–26

Reign of Amaziah of Judah. <sup>1</sup>In the second year* of Joash, son of Jehoahaz, king of Israel, Amaziah, son of Joash, king of Judah, became king. <sup>2</sup>He was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jehoaddin, from Jerusalem.

<sup>3</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's eyes, though not like David his father. He did just as his father Joash had done, <sup>4</sup>though the high places did not disappear, and the people continued to sacrifice and to burn incense on the high places.

<sup>5</sup>When Amaziah had the kingdom firmly in hand, he struck down the officials who had struck down the king, his father. <sup>6</sup>But their children he did not put to death, according to what is written in the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD commanded: "Parents shall not be put to death for their children, nor shall children be put to death for their parents; only for one's own crimes shall a person be put to death."<sup>j</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Amaziah struck down ten thousand Edomites in the Salt Valley. He took Sela in battle and renamed it Joktheel, the name it has to this day.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Then Amaziah sent messengers to Joash, son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, king of Israel, with this message: "Come, let us meet face to face." <sup>9</sup>Joash, king of Israel, sent this reply to Amaziah, king of Judah: "A thistle of Lebanon sent word to a cedar of Lebanon, 'Give your daughter to my son in marriage,' but an animal of Lebanon passed by and trampled the thistle underfoot."<sup>l</sup> <sup>10</sup>You have indeed struck down Edom, and your heart is lifted up; enjoy your glory, but stay home! Why bring misfortune and failure on yourself and on Judah with you?" <sup>11</sup>But Amaziah did not listen. So Joash, king of Israel, advanced, and he and Amaziah, king of Judah, met face to face at Beth-shemesh of Judah, <sup>12</sup>and Judah was defeated by Israel, and all fled to their tents. <sup>13</sup>But Amaziah, king of Judah, son of Joash, son of Ahaziah, was captured by Joash, king of Israel, at Beth-shemesh. When they came to Jerusalem Joash tore down the wall of Jerusalem, from the Gate of Ephraim to the Corner Gate, four hundred cubits. <sup>14</sup>He took all the gold and silver and all the vessels found in the house of the LORD and in the treasuries of the king's house, and hostages as well. Then he returned to Samaria.

Reign of Jeroboam II of Israel. <sup>23</sup>In the fifteenth year of Amaziah, son of Joash, king of Judah, Jeroboam, son of Joash, king of Israel, became king in Samaria for forty-one years.

<sup>24</sup>He did evil in the LORD's sight; he did not desist from any of the sins that Jeroboam, son of Nebat, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>25</sup>He restored the boundaries of Israel from Lebo-hamath to the sea of the Arabah,* as the LORD, the God of Israel, had foretold through his servant, the prophet Jonah, son of Amittai, from Gath-hepher. <sup>26</sup>For the LORD saw the very bitter affliction of Israel, where there was neither bond nor free, no one at all to help Israel. <sup>27</sup>Since the LORD had not resolved to wipe out the name of Israel from under the heavens, he saved them through Jeroboam, son of Joash.

<sup>28</sup>The rest of the acts of Jeroboam, with all that he did and his valor, how he fought, and how he regained Damascus and Hamath for Israel, are recorded in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel. <sup>29</sup>Jeroboam rested with his ancestors, the kings of Israel, and his son Zechariah succeeded him as king.

CHAPTER 15

Reign of Azariah of Judah. <sup>1</sup>In the twenty-seventh year* of Jeroboam, king of Israel, Azariah, son of Amaziah, king of Judah, became king. <sup>2</sup>He was sixteen years old when he became king, and he reigned fiftytwo years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jecholiah, from Jerusalem.

Reign of Zechariah of Israel. <sup>8</sup>In the thirty-eighth year of Azariah, king of Judah, Zechariah, son of Jeroboam, became king over Israel in Samaria for six months.

<sup>9</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight, as his ancestors had done, and did not desist from the sins that Jeroboam, son of Nebat, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>10</sup>Shallum, son of Jabesh, plotted against him and struck him down at Ibleam. He killed him and reigned in his place.

<sup>11</sup>As for the rest of the acts of Zechariah, these are recorded in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel. <sup>12</sup>This was the word the LORD had spoken to Jehu: Sons of your line to the fourth generation shall sit upon the throne of Israel; and so it was.<sup>m</sup>

Reign of Shallum of Israel. <sup>13</sup>Shallum, son of Jabesh, became king in the thirty-ninth year of Uzziah, king of Judah; he reigned one month in Samaria.

<sup>14</sup>Menahem, son of Gadi, came up from Tirzah to Samaria, and struck down Shallum, son of Jabesh, in Samaria. He killed him and reigned in his place.

<sup>16</sup>At that time, Menahem attacked Tappuah, all its inhabitants, and its whole district as far as Tirzah, because they did not let him in. He attacked them; he even ripped open all their pregnant women.

Reign of Menahem of Israel. <sup>17</sup>In the thirty-ninth year of Azariah, king of Judah, Menahem, son of Gadi, became king over Israel for ten years in Samaria. <sup>18</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight as long as he lived, not desisting from the sins that Jeroboam, son of Nebat, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>19</sup>Pul, * king of Assyria, came against the land. But Menahem gave Pul a thousand talents of silver to have his help in holding onto his kingdom. <sup>20</sup>Menahem paid out silver on behalf of Israel, that is, for all the people of substance, by giving the king of Assyria fifty shekels of silver for each one. So the king of Assyria went home and did not stay in the land.

Reign of Pekahiah of Israel. <sup>23</sup>In the fiftieth year of Azariah, king of Judah, Pekahiah, son of Menahem, became king over Israel in Samaria for two years.

<sup>24</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight, not desisting from the sins that Jeroboam, son of Nebat, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>25</sup>His adjutant Pekah, son of Remaliah, conspired against him, and struck him down at Samaria within the palace stronghold; he had with him fifty men from Gilead. He killed him and reigned in his place. <sup>26</sup>As for the rest of the acts of Pekahiah, with all that he did, these are recorded in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

Reign of Pekah of Israel. <sup>27*</sup>In the fiftysecond year of Azariah, king of Judah, Pekah, son of Remaliah, became king over Israel in Samaria for twenty years.

<sup>28</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight, not desisting from the sins that Jeroboam, son of Nebat, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>29</sup>In the days of Pekah, king of Israel, Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, came and took Ijon, Abel-beth-maacah, Janoah, Kedesh, Hazor, Gilead, and Galilee—all the land of Naphtali—deporting the inhabitants to Assyria.<sup>30*</sup> Hoshea, son of Elah, carried out a conspiracy against Pekah, son of Remaliah; he struck and killed him, and succeeded him as king in the twentieth year of Jotham, son of Uzziah.

Reign of Jotham of Judah. <sup>32</sup>In the second year of Pekah, son of Remaliah, king of Israel, Jotham, son of Uzziah, king of Judah, became king. <sup>33</sup>He was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jerusha, daughter of Zadok.

CHAPTER 16

Reign of Ahaz of Judah.<sup>*1</sup>In the seventeenth year of Pekah, son of Remaliah, Ahaz, son of Jotham, king of Judah, became king. <sup>2</sup>Ahaz was twenty years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

He did not do what was right in the sight of the LORD his God, as David his father had done. <sup>3</sup>He walked in the way of the kings of Israel; he even immolated his child by fire, in accordance with the abominable practices of the nations whom the LORD had dispossessed before the Israelites.<sup>o</sup> <sup>4</sup>Further, he sacrificed and burned incense on the high places, on hills, and under every green tree.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Then Rezin, king of Aram, and Pekah, son of Remaliah, king of Israel, came up to Jerusalem to attack it. Although they besieged Ahaz, they were unable to do battle. <sup>6</sup> (In those days Rezin, king of Aram, recovered Elath for Aram, and drove the Judahites out of it. The Edomites then entered Elath, which they have occupied until the present.)

<sup>7</sup>Meanwhile, Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, with the plea: “I am your servant and your son. Come up and rescue me from the power of the king of Aram and the king of Israel, who are attacking me.” <sup>8</sup>Ahaz took the silver and gold that were in the house of the LORD and in the treasuries of the king’s house and sent them as a present to the king of Assyria. <sup>9</sup>The king of Assyria listened to him and moved against Damascus, captured it, deported its inhabitants to Kir, and put Rezin to death.

<sup>10</sup>King Ahaz went to Damascus to meet Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria. When he saw the altar in Damascus, King Ahaz sent to Uriah the priest a model of the altar and a detailed design of its construction. <sup>11</sup>Uriah the priest built an altar according to the plans which King Ahaz sent him from Damascus, and had it completed by the time King Ahaz returned from Damascus. <sup>12</sup>On his arrival from Damascus, the king inspected the altar; the king approached the altar, went up <sup>13</sup>and sacrificed his burnt offering and grain offering, pouring out his libation, and sprinkling the blood of his communion offerings on the altar. <sup>14</sup>The bronze altar that stood before the LORD he brought from the front of the temple—that is, from the space between the new altar and the house of the LORD—and set it on the north side of his altar. <sup>15q</sup> King Ahaz commanded Uriah the priest, “Upon the large altar sacrifice the morning burnt offering and the evening grain offering, the king’s burnt offering and grain offering, and the burnt offering and grain offering of the people of the land.* Their libations you must sprinkle on it along with all the blood of burnt offerings and sacrifices. But the old bronze altar shall be mine for consultation.” <sup>16</sup>Uriah the priest did just as King Ahaz had commanded. <sup>17</sup>King Ahaz detached the panels from the stands and removed the basins from them; he also took down the bronze sea from the bronze oxen that supported it, and set it on a stone pavement. <sup>18</sup>In deference to the king of Assyria he removed the sabbath canopy that had been set up in the house of the LORD and the king’s outside entrance* to the temple.

CHAPTER 17

See RG 219–26

Reign of Hoshea of Israel. <sup>1</sup>In the twelfth year of Ahaz, king of Judah, Hoshea, son of Elah, became king in Samaria over Israel for nine years.

X. The End of Israel*

Israelites Deported. <sup>6</sup>In Hoshea's ninth year, the king of Assyria took Samaria, deported the Israelites to Assyria, and settled them in Halah, and at the Habor, a river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.<sup>s</sup> <sup>7</sup>This came about because the Israelites sinned against the LORD, their God, who had brought them up from the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh, king of Egypt. They venerated other gods,<sup>8t</sup> they followed the rites of the nations whom the LORD had dispossessed before the Israelites and those that the kings of Israel had practiced. <sup>9</sup>They adopted unlawful practices toward the LORD, their God. They built high places in all their cities, from guard post to garrisoned town. <sup>10</sup>They set up pillars and asherahs* for themselves on every high hill and under every green tree. <sup>11</sup>They burned incense there, on all the high places, like the nations whom the LORD had sent into exile at their coming. They did evil things that provoked the LORD, <sup>12</sup>and served idols, although the LORD had told them: You must not do this.

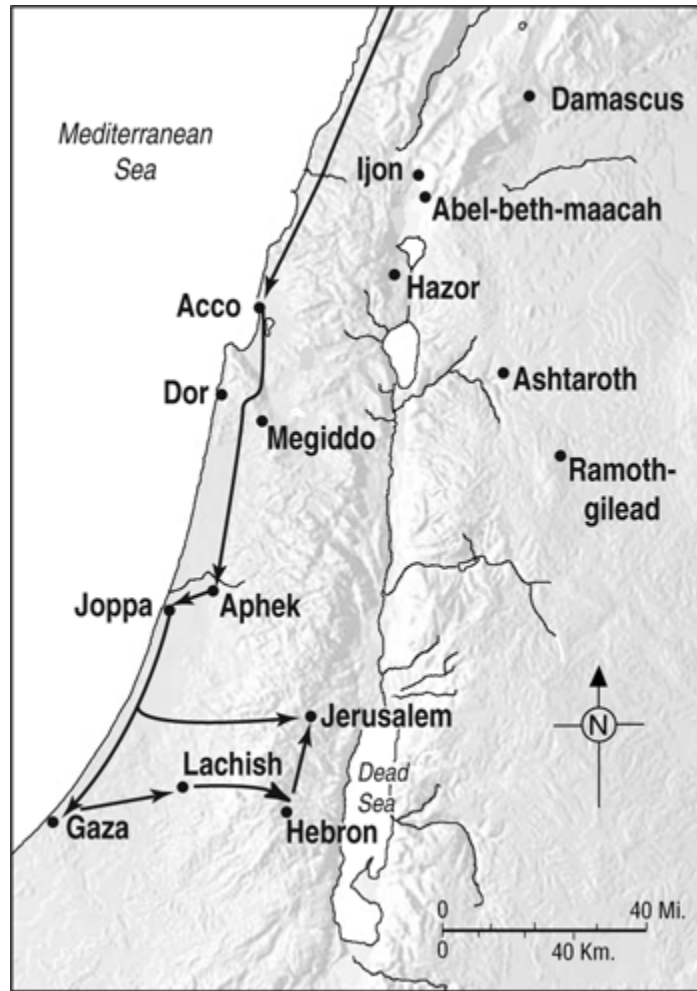

<sup>13u</sup> The LORD warned Israel and Judah by every prophet and seer: Give up your evil ways and keep my commandments and statutes, in accordance with the entire law which I enjoined on your ancestors and which I sent you by my servants the prophets. <sup>14</sup>But they did not listen. They grew as stiff-necked as their ancestors, who had not believed in the LORD, their God.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>15</sup>They rejected his statutes, the covenant he had made with their ancestors, and the warnings he had given them. They followed emptiness and became empty; they followed the surrounding nations whom the LORD had commanded them not to imitate.<sup>w</sup> <sup>16</sup>They abandoned all the commandments of the LORD, their God: they made for themselves two molten calves; they made an asherah; they bowed down to all the host of heaven; they served Baal.<sup>x</sup> <sup>17y</sup> They immolated their sons and daughters by fire. They practiced augury and divination. They surrendered themselves to doing what was evil in the LORD's sight, and provoked him.

<sup>23</sup>Finally, the LORD removed Israel from his presence, just as he had declared through all his servants, the prophets. Thus Israel went into exile from their native soil to Assyria until this very day.

Foreigners Deported to Israel. <sup>24</sup>The king of Assyria brought people from Babylon, Cuthah, Avva, Hamath, and Sepharvaim, and settled them in the cities of Samaria in place of the Israelites. They took possession of Samaria and dwelt in its cities. <sup>25</sup>When they first settled there, they did not venerate the LORD, so he sent lions among them that killed some of them. <sup>26</sup>A report reached the king of Assyria: "The nations you deported and settled in the cities of Samaria do not know the proper worship of the god of the land, so he has sent lions among them that are killing them, since they do not know the law of the god of the land." <sup>27</sup>The king of Assyria gave the order, "Send back some of the priests you deported, to go there and settle, to teach them the proper worship of the god of the land." <sup>28</sup>So one of the priests who had been deported from Samaria returned and settled in Bethel, and began to teach them how to venerate the LORD.

Campaign of Tiglath-pileser III

the law and commandment, that the LORD enjoined on the descendants of Jacob, whom he had named Israel.<sup>c</sup> <sup>35</sup>When the LORD made a covenant with them, he commanded them: You must not venerate other gods, nor bow down to them, nor serve them, nor offer sacrifice to them,<sup>d</sup> <sup>36</sup>but only to the LORD, who brought you up from the land of Egypt with great power and outstretched arm. Him shall you venerate, to him shall you bow down, and to him shall you offer sacrifice. <sup>37</sup>You must be careful always to observe the statutes and ordinances, the law and commandment, which he wrote for you; you must not venerate other gods. <sup>38</sup>The covenant I made with you, you must not forget; you must not venerate other gods. <sup>39</sup>You must venerate only the LORD, your God; it is he who will deliver you from the power of all your enemies. <sup>40</sup>But they did not listen; they continued to act according to their former customs.

XI. The End of Judah*

CHAPTER 18

Reign of Hezekiah. <sup>1</sup>In the third year of Hoshea, son of Elah, king of Israel, Hezekiah, son of Ahaz, king of Judah, became king. <sup>2</sup>He was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Abi, daughter of Zechariah.

<sup>3</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's sight, just as David his father had done. <sup>4</sup>It was he who removed the high places, shattered the pillars, cut down the asherah,* and smashed the bronze serpent Moses had made, because up to that time the Israelites were burning incense to it. (It was called Nehushtan.)<sup>e</sup> <sup>5</sup>He put his trust in the LORD, the God of Israel; and neither before nor after him was there anyone like him among all the kings of Judah. <sup>6</sup>Hezekiah held fast to the LORD and never turned away from following him, but observed the commandments the LORD had given Moses. <sup>7</sup>The LORD was with him, and he succeeded in all he set out to do. He rebelled against the king of Assyria and did not serve him. <sup>8</sup>It was he who struck the Philistines as far as Gaza, and all its territory from guard post to garrisoned town.

Sennacherib and Hezekiah. <sup>13*</sup>In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, Sennacherib, king of Assyria,* attacked all the fortified cities of Judah and captured them.<sup>h</sup> <sup>14</sup>Hezekiah, king of Judah, sent this message to the king of Assyria at Lachish: "I have done wrong. Leave me, and whatever you impose on me I will bear." The king of Assyria exacted three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold from Hezekiah, king of Judah. <sup>15</sup>Hezekiah gave him all the funds there were in the house of the LORD and in the treasuries of the king's house. <sup>16</sup>At the same time, Hezekiah removed the nave doors and the uprights of the house of the LORD, which the king of Judah had ordered to be overlaid with gold, and gave them to the king of Assyria.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>19</sup>The commander said to them, "Tell Hezekiah, 'Thus says the great king, the king of Assyria: On what do you base this trust of yours? <sup>20</sup>Do you think mere words substitute for strategy and might in war? In whom, then, do you place your trust, that you rebel against me? <sup>21</sup>Do you trust in Egypt, that broken reed of a staff, which pierces the hand of anyone who leans on it? That is what Pharaoh, king of Egypt, is to all who trust in him.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Or do you people say to me, "It is in the LORD our God we trust!"? Is it not he whose high places and altars Hezekiah has removed, commanding Judah and Jerusalem, "Worship before this altar in Jerusalem"?"

<sup>23</sup>"Now, make a wager with my lord, the king of Assyria: I will give you two thousand horses if you are able to put riders on them. <sup>24</sup>How then can you turn back even a captain, one of the least servants of my lord, trusting, as you do, in Egypt for chariots and horses? <sup>25</sup>Did I come up to destroy this place without the LORD? The LORD himself said to me: Go up and destroy that land!"

<sup>26</sup>Then Eliakim, son of Hilkiah, and Shebna and Joah said to the commander: "Please speak to your servants in Aramaic; we understand it. Do not speak to us in the language of Judah within earshot of the people who are on the wall." <sup>27</sup>But the commander replied: "Was it to your lord and to you that my lord sent me to speak these words? Was it not rather to those sitting on the wall, who, with you, will have to eat their own excrement and drink their urine?"*

<sup>28</sup>Then the commander stepped forward and cried out in a loud voice in the language of Judah, "Listen to the words of the great king, the king of Assyria. <sup>29</sup>Thus says the king: Do not let Hezekiah deceive you, for he cannot rescue you from my hand. <sup>30</sup>And do not let Hezekiah induce you to trust in the LORD, saying, 'The LORD will surely rescue us, and this city will not be handed over to the king of Assyria.' <sup>31</sup>Do not listen to Hezekiah, for thus says the king of Assyria: Make peace with me, and surrender to me! Eat, each of you, from your vine, each from your own fig tree. Drink water, each from your own well, <sup>32</sup>until I arrive and take you to a land like your own, a land of grain and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of rich olives and honey. Live, and do not die! And do not listen to Hezekiah when he would incite you by saying, 'The LORD will rescue us.' <sup>33</sup>Has any of the gods of the nations ever rescued his land from the power of the king of Assyria? <sup>34</sup>Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivvah? Did they indeed rescue Samaria from my power? <sup>35</sup>Which of the gods for all these lands ever rescued his land from my power? Will the LORD then rescue Jerusalem from my power?" <sup>36</sup>But the people remained silent and did not answer at all, for the king's command was, "Do not answer him."

<sup>37</sup>Then the master of the palace, Eliakim, son of Hilkiah, Shebna the scribe, and the chancellor Joah, son of Asaph, came to Hezekiah with their garments torn, and reported to him the words of the commander.

CHAPTER 19

Hezekiah and Isaiah. <sup>1</sup>When King Hezekiah heard this, he tore his garments, covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD. <sup>2</sup>He sent Eliakim, the master of the palace, Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to tell the prophet Isaiah, son of Amoz, <sup>3</sup>“Thus says Hezekiah:

A day of distress and rebuke,
a day of disgrace is this day!
Children are due to come forth,
but the strength to give birth is lacking.*

<sup>4</sup>Perhaps the LORD, your God, will hear all the words of the commander, whom his lord, the king of Assyria, sent to taunt the living God, and will rebuke him for the words which the LORD, your God, has heard. So lift up a prayer for the remnant that is here.” <sup>5</sup>When the servants of King Hezekiah had come to Isaiah, <sup>6</sup>he said to them, “Tell this to your lord: Thus says the LORD: Do not be frightened by the words you have heard, by which the deputies of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.<sup>1</sup> <sup>7</sup>I am putting in him such a spirit that when he hears a report he will return to his land. I will make him fall by the sword in his land.”

Sennacherib, Hezekiah, and Isaiah. <sup>9</sup>The king of Assyria heard a report: “Tirhakah, king of Ethiopia, has come out to fight against you.” Again he sent messengers to Hezekiah to say: <sup>10</sup>“Thus shall you say to Hezekiah, king of Judah: Do not let your God in whom you trust deceive you by saying, ‘Jerusalem will not be handed over to the king of Assyria.’ <sup>11</sup>You, certainly, have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all the lands: they put them under the ban! And are you to be rescued? <sup>12m</sup> Did the gods of the nations whom my fathers destroyed deliver them—Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, or the Edenites in Telassar? <sup>13</sup>Where are the king of Hamath, the king of Arpad, or the kings of the cities Sepharvaim, Hena and Ivvah?”

<sup>14</sup>Hezekiah took the letter from the hand of the messengers and read it; then he went up to the house of the LORD, and spreading it out before the LORD, <sup>15</sup>Hezekiah prayed in the LORD's presence: "LORD, God of Israel, enthroned on the cherubim! You alone are God over all the kingdoms of the earth. It is you who made the heavens and the earth."<sup>n</sup> <sup>16</sup>Incline your ear, LORD, and listen! Open your eyes, LORD, and see! Hear the words Sennacherib has sent to taunt the living God. <sup>17</sup>Truly, O LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste the nations and their lands. <sup>18</sup>They gave their gods to the fire—they were not gods at all, but the work of human hands—wood and stone, they destroyed them. <sup>19</sup>Therefore, LORD, our God, save us from this man's power, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that you alone, LORD, are God."<sup>o</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Then Isaiah, son of Amoz, sent this message to Hezekiah: "Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, to whom you have prayed concerning Sennacherib, king of Assyria: I have listened! <sup>21*</sup> This is the word the LORD has spoken concerning him:

Campaign of Sennacherib

She despises you, laughs you to scorn,
     the virgin daughter Zion!
 Behind you she wags her head, daughter Jerusalem.

<sup>22</sup>Whom have you insulted and blasphemed,
     at whom have you raised your voice
 And lifted up your eyes on high?
     At the Holy One of Israel!

<sup>23</sup>Through the mouths of your messengers
     you insulted the Lord when you said, ‘With my many chariots I went up to the tops of the peaks,
     to the recesses of Lebanon,

To cut down its lofty cedars,
its choice cypresses;
I reached to the farthest shelter,
the forest ranges.

<sup>24</sup>I myself dug wells
and drank foreign waters, Drying up all the rivers of Egypt beneath the soles of my feet.’

<sup>25</sup>“Have you not heard?
A long time ago I prepared it,
from days of old I planned it.
Now I have brought it about:
You are here to reduce fortified cities to heaps of ruins,

<sup>26</sup>Their people powerless,
dismayed and distraught.
They are plants of the field,
green growth,
thatch on the rooftops,
Grain scorched by the east wind.

<sup>27</sup>I know when you stand or sit, when you come or go<sup>p</sup>
and how you rage against me.

<sup>28</sup>Because you rage against me, and your smugness has reached my ears,
I will put my hook in your nose
and my bit in your mouth,
And make you leave by the way you came.

<sup>29</sup>“This shall be a sign for you:
This year you shall eat the aftergrowth,
next year, what grows of itself;
But in the third year, sow and reap,
plant vineyards and eat their fruit!

<sup>30</sup>The remaining survivors of the house of Judah shall again strike root below and bear fruit above.

<sup>31</sup>For out of Jerusalem shall come a remnant,
and from Mount Zion, survivors.
The zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do

this.

<sup>32</sup>“Therefore, thus says the LORD about the king:

He shall not come as far as this city,

nor shoot there an arrow,

nor confront it with a shield,

Nor cast up a siege-work against it.

<sup>33</sup>By the way he came he shall leave, never coming as far as this city, oracle of the LORD.

<sup>34</sup>I will shield and save this city for my own sake and the sake of David

my servant.”<sup>q</sup>

<sup>35</sup>That night the angel of the LORD went forth and struck down one hundred and eighty-five thousand men in the Assyrian camp. Early the next morning, there they were, dead, all those corpses!<sup>r</sup> <sup>36</sup>So Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, broke camp, departed, returned home, and stayed in Nineveh.

<sup>37</sup>When he was worshiping in the temple of his god Nisroch, his sons Adrammelech and Sharezer struck him down with the sword and fled into the land of Ararat. His son Esarhaddon reigned in his place.

End of Hezekiah's Reign. <sup>1s</sup> In those days, when Hezekiah was mortally ill, the prophet Isaiah, son of Amoz, came and said to him: “Thus says the LORD: Put your house in order, for you are about to die; you shall not recover.” <sup>2</sup>He turned his face to the wall and prayed to the LORD: <sup>3</sup>“Ah, LORD, remember how faithfully and wholeheartedly I conducted myself in your presence, doing what was good in your sight!” And Hezekiah wept bitterly. <sup>4</sup>Before Isaiah had left the central courtyard, the word of the LORD came to him: <sup>5</sup>Go back and tell Hezekiah, the leader of my people: “Thus says the LORD, the God of David your father:

I have heard your prayer;
I have seen your tears.
Now I am healing you.
On the third day you shall go up to the house of the LORD.
<sup>6</sup>I will add to your life fifteen years.
I will rescue you and this city from the hand of the king of Assyria;
I will be a shield to this city
for my own sake and the sake of David my servant.”

<sup>7</sup>Then Isaiah said, “Bring a poultice of figs and apply it to the boil for his recovery.” <sup>8</sup>Hezekiah asked Isaiah, “What is the sign that the LORD will heal me and that I shall go up to the house of the LORD on the third day?” <sup>9</sup>Isaiah replied, “This will be the sign for you from the LORD that he will carry out the word he has spoken: Shall the shadow go forward or back ten steps?” <sup>10</sup>“It is easy for the shadow to advance ten steps,” Hezekiah answered. “Rather, let it go back ten steps.” <sup>11</sup>So Isaiah the prophet invoked the LORD. He made the shadow go back the ten steps it had descended on the staircase to the terrace of Ahaz.

storerooms; there was nothing in his house or in all his realm that Hezekiah did not show them. <sup>14</sup>Then Isaiah the prophet came to King Hezekiah and asked him: “What did these men say to you? Where did they come from?” Hezekiah replied, “They came from a distant land, from Babylon.” <sup>15</sup>He asked, “What did they see in your house?” Hezekiah answered, “They saw everything in my house. There is nothing in my storerooms that I did not show them.” <sup>16</sup>Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah: “Hear the word of the LORD: <sup>17</sup>The time is coming when all that is in your house, everything that your ancestors have stored up until this day, shall be carried off to Babylon; nothing shall be left, says the LORD. <sup>18</sup>Some of your own descendants, your offspring, your progeny, shall be taken and made attendants in the palace of the king of Babylon.” <sup>19</sup>Hezekiah replied to Isaiah, “The word of the LORD which you have spoken is good.” For he thought, “There will be peace and stability in my lifetime.”

CHAPTER 21

Reign of Manasseh. <sup>1</sup>Manasseh was twelve years old when he became king, and he reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hephzibah.

<sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight, following the abominable practices of the nations whom the LORD had dispossessed before the Israelites. <sup>3</sup>He rebuilt the high places which Hezekiah his father had destroyed. He set up altars to Baal and also made an asherah, as Ahab, king of Israel, had done. He bowed down to the whole host of heaven and served them.<sup>u</sup> <sup>4</sup>He built altars in the house of the LORD, of which the LORD had said: In Jerusalem I will set my name. <sup>5</sup>And he built altars for the whole host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD. <sup>6</sup>He immolated his child by fire. He practiced soothsaying and divination, and reintroduced the consulting of ghosts and spirits.

He did much evil in the LORD's sight and provoked him to anger.<sup>v</sup> <sup>7</sup>The Asherah idol he had made, he placed in the LORD's house, of which the LORD had said to David and to his son Solomon: In this house and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, I shall set my name forever.<sup>w</sup> <sup>8</sup>I will no longer make Israel step out of the land I gave their ancestors, provided that they are careful to observe all I have commanded them and the entire law which Moses my servant enjoined upon them. <sup>9</sup>But they did not listen.

Manasseh misled them into doing even greater evil than the nations the LORD had destroyed at the coming of the Israelites. <sup>10</sup>Then the LORD spoke through his servants the prophets: <sup>11</sup>“Because Manasseh, king of Judah, has practiced these abominations, and has done greater evil than all that was done by the Amorites before him, and has led Judah into sin by his idols,<sup>x</sup> <sup>12</sup>therefore, thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: I am about to bring such evil on Jerusalem and Judah that, when any hear of it, their ears shall ring: <sup>13</sup>I will measure Jerusalem with the same cord as I did Samaria, and with the plummet I used for the house of Ahab. I will wipe Jerusalem clean as one wipes a dish, wiping it inside and out.<sup>y</sup> <sup>14</sup>I will cast off the survivors of my inheritance. I will deliver them into enemy hands, to become prey and booty for all their enemies, <sup>15</sup>because they have done what is evil in my sight and provoked me from the day their ancestors came forth from Egypt until this very day.” <sup>16</sup>Manasseh shed so much innocent blood that it filled the length and breadth of Jerusalem, in addition to the sin he caused Judah to commit by doing what was evil in the LORD’s sight.

<sup>17</sup>The rest of the acts of Manasseh, with all that he did and the sin he committed, are recorded in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah. <sup>18</sup>Manasseh rested with his ancestors; he was buried in his palace garden, the garden of Uzza, and his son Amon succeeded him as king.

Reign of Amon. <sup>19</sup>Amon was twenty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. His mother’s name was Meshullemeth, daughter of Haruz, from Jotbah.

<sup>20</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD’s sight, as his father Manasseh had done. <sup>21</sup>He walked in all the ways of his father; he served the idols his father had served, and bowed down to them. <sup>22</sup>He abandoned the LORD, the God of his ancestors, and did not walk in the way of the LORD.

<sup>23</sup>Officials of Amon plotted against him and killed the king in his palace, <sup>24</sup>but the people of the land* then slew all who had plotted against King Amon, and the people of the land made his son Josiah king in his stead. <sup>25</sup>The rest of the acts of Amon, which he did, are recorded in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah. <sup>26</sup>He was buried in his own grave in the garden of Uzza, and his son Josiah succeeded him as king.

CHAPTER 22

See RG 226–28

Reign of Josiah. <sup>1</sup>Josiah was eight years old when he became king, and he reigned thirty-one years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jedidah, daughter of Adaiah, from Bozkath.

The Book of the Law. <sup>3z</sup> In his eighteenth year, King Josiah sent the scribe Shaphan,* son of Azaliah, son of Meshullam, to the house of the LORD with these orders: <sup>4</sup>“Go to the high priest Hilkiah and have him calculate the valuables that have been brought to the house of the LORD, which the doorkeepers have collected from the people. <sup>5</sup>Then have him turn them over to the master workers in the house of the LORD, and have them give them to the ordinary workers who are in the house of the LORD to repair its breaches: <sup>6</sup>to the carpenters, the builders, and the masons, and to purchase wood and hewn stone. <sup>7</sup>No reckoning shall be asked of them regarding the funds provided to them, because they hold positions of trust.”

<sup>8</sup>The high priest Hilkiah informed the scribe Shaphan, “I have found the book of the law* in the temple of the LORD.” Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, who read it. <sup>9</sup>Then the scribe Shaphan went to the king and reported, “Your servants have smelted down the silver deposited in the temple and have turned it over to the master workers in the house of the LORD.” <sup>10</sup>The scribe Shaphan also informed the king, “Hilkiah the priest has given me a book,” and then Shaphan read it in the presence of the king. <sup>11</sup>When the king heard the words of the book of the law, he tore his garments.

<sup>12</sup>The king then issued this command to Hilkiah the priest, Ahikam, son of Shaphan, Achbor, son of Micaiah, Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah the king's servant: <sup>13</sup>“Go, consult the LORD for me, for the people, and for all Judah, about the words of this book that has been found, for the rage of the LORD has been set furiously ablaze against us, because our ancestors did not obey the words of this book, nor do what is written for us.” <sup>14</sup>So Hilkiah the priest, Ahikam, Achbor, Shaphan, and Asaiah went to Huldah the prophet, wife of Shallum, son of Tikvah, son of Harhas, keeper of the wardrobe; she lived in Jerusalem, in the Second Quarter. When they had spoken to her, <sup>15</sup>she said to them, “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Say to the man who sent you to me, <sup>16</sup>Thus says the LORD: I am about to bring evil upon this place and upon its inhabitants—all the words of the book which the king of Judah has read. <sup>17</sup>Because they have abandoned me and have burned incense to other gods, provoking me by all the works of their hands, my rage is ablaze against this place and it cannot be extinguished.

<sup>18</sup>“But to the king of Judah who sent you to consult the LORD, give this response: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: As for the words you have heard, <sup>19</sup>because you were heartsick and have humbled yourself before the LORD when you heard what I have spoken concerning this place and its inhabitants, that they would become a desolation and a curse; and because you tore your garments and wept before me, I in turn have heard, oracle of the LORD. <sup>20</sup>I will therefore gather you to your ancestors; you shall go to your grave in peace, and your eyes shall not see all the evil I am about to bring upon this place.” This they reported to the king.

CHAPTER 23

Josiah's Religious Reform. <sup>4</sup>Then the king commanded the high priest Hilkiah, his assistant priests, and the doorkeepers to remove from the temple of the LORD all the objects that had been made for Baal, Asherah, and the whole host of heaven. These he burned outside Jerusalem on the slopes of the Kidron; their ashes were carried to Bethel.<sup>b</sup> <sup>5</sup>He also put an end to the idolatrous priests whom the kings of Judah had appointed to burn incense on the high places in the cities of Judah and in the vicinity of Jerusalem, as well as those who burned incense to Baal, to the sun, moon, and signs of the zodiac, and to the whole host of heaven.<sup>c</sup> <sup>6</sup>From the house of the LORD he also removed the Asherah to the Wadi Kidron, outside Jerusalem; he burned it and beat it to dust, in the Wadi Kidron, and scattered its dust over the graveyard of the people of the land.<sup>*d</sup> <sup>7</sup>He tore down the apartments of the cult prostitutes in the house of the LORD, where the women wove garments for the Asherah.<sup>e</sup> <sup>8</sup>He brought in all the priests from the cities of Judah, and then defiled, from Geba to Beer-sheba, the high places where they had offered incense. He also tore down the high places of the gates, which were at the entrance of the Gate of Joshua, governor of the city, north of the city gate. <sup>9</sup> (The priests of the high places could not function at the altar of the LORD in Jerusalem; but they, along with their relatives, ate the unleavened bread.)

LORD, near the chamber of Nathan-melech the official, which was in the large building. The chariots of the sun he destroyed by fire. <sup>12</sup>He also demolished the altars made by the kings of Judah on the roof (the roof terrace of Ahaz), and the altars made by Manasseh in the two courts of the LORD's house. He pulverized them and threw the dust into the Wadi Kidron.<sup>g</sup> <sup>13</sup>The king defiled the high places east of Jerusalem, south of the Mount of the Destroyer,* which Solomon, king of Israel, had built in honor of Astarte, the Sidonian horror, of Chemosh, the Moabite horror, and of Milcom, the Ammonites' abomination.<sup>h</sup> <sup>14</sup>He broke to pieces the pillars, cut down the asherahs, and filled the places where they had been with human bones.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Likewise the altar which was at Bethel, the high place built by Jeroboam, son of Nebat, who caused Israel to sin—this same altar and high place he tore down and burned, grinding the high place to powder and burning the asherah.<sup>j</sup> <sup>16</sup>When Josiah turned and saw the graves there on the mountainside, he ordered the bones taken from the graves and burned on the altar, and thus defiled it, according to the LORD's word proclaimed by the man of God as Jeroboam stood by the altar on the feast day. When the king looked up and saw the grave of the man of God who had proclaimed these words, <sup>17</sup>he asked, "What is that marker I see?" The people of the city replied, "The grave of the man of God who came from Judah and proclaimed the very things you have done to the altar in Bethel." <sup>18</sup>"Let him be," he said, "let no one move his bones." So they left his bones undisturbed together with the bones of the prophet who had come from Samaria.* <sup>19</sup>Josiah also removed all the temples on the high places in the cities of Samaria which the kings of Israel had built, provoking the LORD; he did the very same to them as he had done in Bethel. <sup>20</sup>He slaughtered upon the altars all the priests of the high places that were there, and burned human bones upon them. Then he returned to Jerusalem.

<sup>24</sup>Further, Josiah purged the consultation of ghosts and spirits, with the household gods, idols,* and all the other horrors to be seen in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem, so that he might carry out the words of the law that were written in the book that Hilkiah the priest had found in the house of the LORD.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Before him there had been no king who turned to the LORD as he did, with his whole heart, his whole being, and his whole strength, in accord with the entire law of Moses; nor did any king like him arise after him.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>26</sup>Yet the LORD did not turn from his fiercely burning anger against Judah, because of all the provocations that Manasseh had given. <sup>27</sup>The LORD said: Even Judah will I put out of my sight as I did Israel. I will reject this city, Jerusalem, which I chose, and the house of which I said: There shall my name be.

Reign of Jehoahaz. <sup>31</sup>Jehoahaz was twenty-three years old when he became king, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal, daughter of Jeremiah, from Libnah.<sup>n</sup>

Reign of Jehoiakim. <sup>36</sup>Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zebidah, daughter of Pedaiah, from Rumah.

<sup>37</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight, just as his ancestors had done.

CHAPTER 24

Reign of Jehoiachin. <sup>8</sup>Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he became king, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Nehushta, daughter of Elnathan, from Jerusalem.

Babylon.<sup>r</sup> <sup>16</sup>All seven thousand soldiers of the army, and a thousand artisans and smiths, all of them trained warriors, these too the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon. <sup>17</sup>In place of Jehoiachin the king of Babylon made Mattaniah, Jehoiachin's uncle, king; he changed his name to Zedekiah.<sup>s</sup>

Reign of Zedekiah. <sup>18*</sup>Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal, daughter of Jeremiah, from Libnah.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>19</sup>He did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, just as Jehoiakim had done. <sup>20</sup>This befell Jerusalem and Judah because the LORD was so angry that he cast them out of his sight.

Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

CHAPTER 25

<sup>8</sup>On the seventh day of the fifth month (this was in the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon), Nebuzaradan, captain of the bodyguard, came to Jerusalem as the agent of the king of Babylon. <sup>9</sup>He burned the house of the LORD, the house of the king, and all the houses of Jerusalem (every noble house); he destroyed them by fire.<sup>u</sup> <sup>10</sup>The Chaldean troops who were with the captain of the guard tore down the walls that surrounded Jerusalem, <sup>11</sup>and Nebuzaradan, captain of the guard, led into exile the last of the army remaining in the city, and those who had deserted* to the king of Babylon, and the last of the commoners. <sup>12</sup>But some of the country's poor the captain of the guard left behind as vinedressers and farmers.

the columns was eighteen cubits high; a bronze capital three cubits high surmounted each column, and a netting with pomegranates encircled the capital, all of bronze; and they were duplicated on the other column, on the netting.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>18</sup>The captain of the guard also took Seraiah, the chief priest, Zephaniah, an assistant priest, and the three doorkeepers. <sup>19</sup>And from the city he took one officer who was a commander of soldiers, five courtiers in the personal service of the king who were still in the city, the scribe in charge of the army who mustered the people of the land,* and sixty of the people of the land still remaining in the city. <sup>20</sup>The captain of the guard, Nebuzaradan, arrested these and brought them to the king of Babylon at Riblah, and <sup>21</sup>the king of Babylon struck them down and put them to death in Riblah, in the land of Hamath. And thus Judah went into exile from their native soil.

Nebuchadnezzar's Campaign

Governorship of Gedaliah. <sup>22a</sup> As for the people whom he had allowed to remain in the land of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, appointed Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, over them. <sup>23</sup>Hearing that the king of Babylon had appointed Gedaliah over them, all the army commanders and the troops came to him at Mizpah: Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, Johanan, son of Kareah, Seraiah, son of Tanhumeth the Netophathite, and Jaazaniah, son of the Maakite, each with his troops. <sup>24</sup>Gedaliah gave the commanders and their troops his oath. He said to them, “Do not be afraid of the Chaldean officials. Remain in the country and serve the king of Babylon, so that all will be well with you.”

Release of Jehoiachin. <sup>27</sup>In the thirty-seventh year of the exile of Jehoiachin, king of Judah, on the twenty-seventh day of the twelfth month, Evil-merodach, king of Babylon, in the inaugural year of his own reign, raised up Jehoiachin, king of Judah, from prison. <sup>28</sup>He spoke kindly to him and gave him a throne higher than that of the other kings who were with him in Babylon. <sup>29</sup>Jehoiachin took off his prison garb; he ate regularly in the king’s presence as long as he lived; <sup>30</sup>and for his allowance the king granted him a regular allowance, in fixed daily amounts, for as long as he lived.

1:2 Baalzebub: in this form, “Baal of flies.” The name in the Hebrew text is a derisive alteration of Baalzebul, “Prince Baal.” The best New Testament evidence supports the latter form in Mt 10:25; Lk 11:15.

1:12 Divine fire: lit., “fire of God,” which in Hebrew sounds quite like “man of God.” The play on words is the basis for Elijah’s retort. This story was told among the people to enhance the dignity of the prophet and to reflect the power of God whom he served. A similar phrase, “the Lord’s fire,” described the miraculous divine fire that fell from a cloudless sky to consume Elijah’s offering in 1 Kgs 18:38.

1:17 Joram: in 2 Kings the name “Joram” (yoram) and its variant “Jehoram” (yehoram) are used interchangeably. To avoid the impression that they are different names and designate different people, both forms are rendered “Joram” in this translation. Confusion arises, however, because the king of Israel whose reign is recounted beginning in 3:1 and the contemporary king of Judah whose reign is recounted beginning in 8:16 share this name. On the relationship of Joram of Israel to Joram of Judah, see note on 3:1.

2:1–25 The story of Elisha's succession to Elijah's prophetic office is oddly set between the death of Ahaziah (1:17) and the accession of his successor (3:1). The effect is to place this scene, which is the central scene in the whole of 1–2 Kings, outside of time. It thereby becomes almost mythic in its import and reminds us that, behind the transitory flow of kings and kingdoms, stand the eternal word of God and the prophets who give it voice. Just as 1–2 Kings pivots on this chapter, so this scene too is concentrically constructed. Together Elijah and Elisha journey to Bethel, thence to Jericho, and thence across the Jordan. There Elijah is taken up in the whirlwind and Elijah's mantle of power comes to Elisha. Now alone, Elisha crosses the Jordan again, returns to Jericho and thence back to Bethel.

2:1 Gilgal: there are several places in the Hebrew Bible named Gilgal; the word probably means "circle," viz. of stones. Here the route of the prophets' journey rules out the most famous Gilgal (Jos 4–5), the one near Jericho. This Gilgal may have been located in the area of modern Jiljulieh, approximately seven miles north of Bethel, which seems to preserve the ancient name.

2:9 Double portion of your spirit: as the firstborn son inherited a double portion of his father's property (Dt 21:17), so Elisha asks to inherit from Elijah his spirit of prophecy in the degree befitting his principal disciple. In Nm 11:17–25, God bestows some of the spirit of Moses on others.

2:12 My father: a religious title accorded prophetic leaders; cf. 6:21; 8:9; and 13:14, where King Joash of Israel reacts to Elisha's own impending death with the same words Elisha uses here.

2:14 The Lord, the God of Elijah—where is he now?: the words in Hebrew have an incantatory quality, as if Elisha is invoking both the divine name and the name of his departed master in an attempt to duplicate Elijah's miracle.

3:1–9:13 After the formulaic introduction to the reign of Joram of Israel, this section falls into two parts. The first contains several stories about the prophet Elisha, both in private and in public life. There are four longer stories, arranged in an ABBA pattern: drought during war with Moab (vv. 4–27), restoration of the Shunammite's son (4:8–37), healing of Naaman (5:1–27), famine during war with Aram (6:24–7:20). The last three of these stories are each preceded and followed by short anecdotal tales about Elisha. The second part of this section turns to the political realm. Elisha carries out the Lord's commissions to Elijah (1 Kgs 19:15–17) to anoint Hazael king of Aram (2 Kgs 8:7–15) and Jehu king of Israel (9:1–13). To prepare for the story of Jehu's insurrection (9:14–11:20), the narrator places between those two narratives notices about the royal succession in Judah (8:16–24, 25–29). The formulaic conclusions to the reigns of Joram of Israel and Ahaziah of Judah (8:25–29) are missing, since the deaths of both will be recounted in the story of Jehu's insurrection.

3:1 The contradiction between 1:17 and v. 1 regarding the year when Joram succeeded Ahaziah of Israel makes any reconstruction of the chronology of Israel's and Judah's kings uncertain. Some scholars think that one or the other notice is simply incorrect. Others propose to explain the discrepancy by a co-regency: Jehoshaphat of Judah would have shared the throne with his son Joram from Jehoshaphat's seventeenth year until he died in the twenty-fifth year of his reign (1 Kgs 22:42; see also 2 Kgs 8:16). The issue is further complicated by the speculation of some historians that "Joram of Israel" ("son" of Ahab of Israel: v. 1) and "Joram of Judah" ("son-in-law" of Ahab of Israel: 8:18) were in fact the same person, in whom the royal houses and separate realms of Israel and Judah were briefly reunited.

3:4 In the period of oral tradition, it seems that stories of kings were often told without identifying the kings by name. (Vestiges of this anonymity are still visible in 1 Kgs 3:16–28; 20:4–43; 22:1–38; 2 Kgs 6:8–7:20.) Names (such as "Ahab" in 1 Kgs 20:13–14; 22:20) were added later. As a consequence, the historical attachment of such stories to the kings about whom they are told is open to question. (See note on 1 Kgs 20:1–22:54.) The present story about a campaign against Moab by Joram and Jehoshaphat has several striking similarities to the campaign against Ramoth-gilead by Ahab and Jehoshaphat in 1 Kgs 22:1–38. There exists a Moabite inscription that contains Mesha's self-aggrandizing account of his successful rebellion against Israel, but the times and places it mentions are different from those implied in vv. 4–27.

3:11 Poured water on the hands of Elijah: possibly a metaphor for “was Elijah's servant.” But the phrase occurs nowhere else in the Old Testament and its meaning is not certain.

3:25 Kir-hareseth: a major city of Moab, identified with modern Kerak, east of the Dead Sea; cf. Is 16:7, 11; Jer 48:31, 36.

3:27 The wrath against Israel: probably the wrath of Chemosh, the Moabite god to whom the child was offered. The Israelites, intimidated by this wrath, retreat.

4:1 His creditor ... into servitude: Israelite law permitted the selling of wife and children into slavery for debt; cf. Ex 21:7; Am 2:6; 8:6; Is 50:1.

4:13 I am living among my own people: the Shunammite woman declines Elisha's offer. Surrounded by the support of her family and her clan, she is secure. Ironically, at some point in the future Elisha's advice will send her to live among foreigners (see 8:1–2).

4:29 Give no greeting: a profuse exchange of greetings and compliments would normally surround the chance encounter of acquaintances on the road. This would, however, take time, and Gehazi's mission was urgent. Compare Lk 10:4.

5:1 Leper: the terms traditionally translated “leper” and “leprosy” covered a wide variety of skin disorders like psoriasis, eczema, and seborrhea, but probably not Hansen's disease (modern “leprosy”); there is no clear evidence of its existence in biblical times.

5:12 Wash in them and be cleansed: typical of the ambiguity in ritual healing or cleanliness. The muddy waters of the Jordan are no match hygienically for the mountain spring waters of Damascus; ritually, it is the other way around.

5:17 Two mule-loads of earth: worship of the Lord is associated with the soil of the Holy Land, where he is present.

5:19 Go in peace: Elisha understands and approves the situation of Naaman who, though now a worshiper of the God of Israel, is required by his courtly office to assist his master, the king (“leans upon my arm,” v. 18), worshiping in the temple of the Canaanite god Baal-Rimmon.

5:27 With skin like snow: “snow” is often used to describe the skin conditions covered by the term “leprosy” (Ex 4:6; Nm 12:10; see note on 5:1). It is unclear whether the comparison is with the white color, dry flakes, or moist shine, any of which can occur in the relevant skin diseases.

6:22 With your sword or bow: since the king would not slay prisoners who had surrendered to his power, much less should he slay prisoners captured by God's power. This wartime practice stands in contrast to that of holy war, where prisoners were placed under the ban and so devoted to destruction (see 1 Kgs 20:35–43).

6:25 “Dove droppings”: it is unclear whether this phrase is to be read literally (e.g., dung used as fuel) or as the nickname of a type of edible plant, as attested in Arabic. A kab was probably around a quart.

6:33 The messenger speaks in the king's name. Similarly, Elisha's response in the next verse can be spoken of as delivered to the king (7:18).

7:1 Market: lit., “gate,” the principal place of trading in ancient walled cities in time of peace.

7:13 The Hebrew of this verse is difficult and its meaning is uncertain.

8:6 An official: lit., “eunuch,” and perhaps actually so in this instance.

8:7–15 Elisha carries out the commission the Lord gave Elijah in 1 Kgs 19:15. See note on 2 Kgs 3:1–9:13.

8:13 To call oneself a “dog” is to admit one's insignificance (1 Sm 24:15; 2 Sm 9:8); it is not necessarily a term of contempt, as in English. Hazael focuses on the question of his power, making no comment on the atrocities Elisha predicts he will commit.

8:16 On the apparent contradictions among 1:17, 3:1, and this verse, see note on 3:1.

8:25–29 The narrative of Ahaziah's reign, like that of Joram of Israel, lacks the standard formulaic conclusion. The deaths of both kings, and indeed the obliteration of the whole house of Omri, will be recounted in the story of Jehu's insurrection.

8:26 It is unclear whether Athaliah was Omri's daughter (v. 26) or his granddaughter (v. 18). Perhaps "daughter" here is being used loosely for "female descendant."

9:1–13 Elisha carries out the commission the Lord gave Elijah in 1 Kgs 19:16. See note on 2 Kgs 3:1–9:13.

9:7–10 The author has Elisha's emissary expand considerably the speech Elisha told him to deliver by adding the same type of prophetic indictments and sanctions as were invoked on previous occasions against the dynasties of Jeroboam (1 Kgs 14:10–11), of Baasha (1 Kgs 16:3–4), and of Ahab himself (1 Kgs 21:21–24).

9:14–11:20 Death pervades this section. The dynasty founded by Omri (1 Kgs 16:23) drowns in a bloodbath, taking numberless others along with it. The scenes are in three parallel sets of three: death comes (1) to Joram of Israel, Ahab's son; to Ahaziah of Judah, his son-in-law; and to Jezebel, the Baalist queen mother of Israel; (2) then to seventy descendants of Ahab; to forty-two relatives of Ahaziah of Judah; and to numerous Baal worshipers; (3) finally to Jehu of Israel; to the blood royal of Judah; and to Athaliah, the Baalist queen mother of Judah and last of the Omrids.

9:22 Harlotry and sorcery: both terms are metaphors referring to Jezebel's worship of the foreign god Baal.

10:6 Heads of your master's sons: Jehu's command is cleverly ambiguous. He allows the Samarian leaders to understand "heads" either literally or metaphorically as "most important individuals." Then, when the leaders decapitate Ahab's potential successors, Jehu can claim to be innocent of their blood (v. 9).

10:13 Since Athaliah, the queen mother in Judah, was of the Israelite royal house (8:18, 26), both the "princes" (lit., the "king's sons") and the queen mother's "family" (lit., her "sons") would belong to the royal houses of both kingdoms.

They may thus be numbered among the seventy "sons of Ahab" killed in vv. 1–7. Because "sons" can refer to more remote offspring, the queen mother's "sons" may include Ahaziah's brothers, sons, nephews, as well as the "relatives" (lit., the "brothers") of Ahaziah who are speaking in this scene.

11:2 According to 2 Chr 22:11, Jehosheba was the wife of Jehoiada, the high priest. If this is historical, it would explain her access to the Temple's residential precincts.

11:4 Carians: foreign mercenaries serving as the royal bodyguard. Compare "Cherethites and Pelethites" in 1 Kgs 1:38.

11:12 Testimony: that is, the two tablets of the law preserved in the ark in the Temple. Presumably they were placed upon the king during his installation ceremony as a reminder of the law he was to uphold.

11:14 By the column: the king's special place in the Temple court; cf. 23:3; 2 Chr 23:13. People of the land: in this period, the phrase referred to the important citizenry, whose influence sometimes extended to the selection of royal successors (cf. 2 Kgs 11:14–20; 15:5; 16:15; 21:24; 23:6, 30–35; 24:14; 25:3, 19). In postexilic times, by contrast, the phrase was used of the poor.

11:17 There are two covenants. One is between the Lord as one party and the people, headed by the king, as the other. The second covenant, between king and people, is comparable to that made between David and the elders of Israel at Hebron (2 Sm 5:3).

12:1–17:5 This section recounts briefly the reigns of the last several kings of Israel and the kings of Judah contemporary with them. As always, the accounts of the kings are given in the order in which each came to the throne, without regard to which kingdom they ruled. See note on the similar section that begins in 1 Kgs 14:21.

12:19 Joash: in 2 Kings the name “Joash” and its variant “Jehoash” are interchangeable (see note on “Joram” and “Jehoram” at 1:17), whether in reference to the king of Judah (vv. 1–22) or his slightly later contemporary, Joash of Israel (13:10–25). Both forms are rendered “Joash” in this translation.

12:21 Officials: lit., “servants.” The Hebrew ebed (“servant”) has a wide range of meanings, always including service to another.

13:5 A savior: i.e., a military leader (cf. Jgs 3:9, 15). Here the identity of the savior is unclear, but the reappearance of a militant Elisha in this chapter after an absence of several chapters and nearly thirty years suggests the narrator may have had him in mind. Two generations later Joash’s grandson, Jeroboam II, will also “save” Israel (14:27).

13:6 Asherah: see note on Ex 34:13.

13:12–13 The conclusion to the reign of Joash is given again in 14:15–16. In both places it disrupts the standard pattern followed in the Books of Kings. The account of Joash’s reign ends in vv. 12–13; this leaves the story of Elisha’s last illness (in which Joash figures prominently) suspended between regnal accounts, much as the story of Elisha’s succession to Elijah’s prophetic office (chap. 2) was suspended between the accounts of Ahaziah and Joram. In 14:15–16 the concluding formula for Joash’s reign interrupts the account of the reign of Amaziah of Judah (14:1–22), much as Joash himself invaded Amaziah’s kingdom (14:11–14).

13:14 My father, my father: the way the king addresses the dying Elisha echoes Elisha’s address to Elijah in 2:12.

13:16–19 Symbolic acts, like prophetic oracles, were understood to unleash the power they expressed. Similar symbolic acts are seen in Ex 17:8–13; Jos 8:18–20; Ez 4:1–3.

14:1–2 In the second year ... twenty-nine years in Jerusalem: as they stand, the chronological data in the introductions to the reigns of the kings of Judah and Israel are incompatible with one another. The kings of Judah between Athaliah and Ahaz are assigned too many years in all to correspond to the reigns in Israel from Jehu to the fall of Samaria. Various theories have been proposed in an attempt to explain the discrepancy, such as co-regencies, or textual corruption in the process of transmission.

14:17 See note on vv. 1–2.

14:21 All the people of Judah: this phrase may refer to the army (compare, for example, “all Israel” in 1 Kgs 16:16–17). If this is its meaning here, then Amaziah’s assassination and Azariah’s succession are owing to a military coup. Azariah: also called Uzziah in many texts.

14:25 Sea of the Arabah: the Dead Sea. Jonah, son of Amittai: see note on Jon 1:1.

15:1 Twenty-seventh year: see note on 14:1–2.

15:5 People of the land: see note on 11:14.

15:19 Pul: the Babylonian throne name of the Assyrian Tiglath-pileser III; cf. v. 29.

15:27 The twenty years here ascribed to Pekah are difficult to reconcile with other chronological notices about the kings. One theory would see Pekah and Menahem as rival kings over parts of a divided Israelite territory; this could explain Menahem’s concern for Assyrian support (vv. 19–20) and Assyria’s attack on Pekah (v. 29). See 16:1 and note on 14:1–2.

15:30 The twenty years here reckoned to Jotham of Judah may include his co-regency with Azariah (v. 5); otherwise they are impossible to reconcile with v. 33, which ascribes him only sixteen years. The verse also appears to contradict 16:1, which has Jotham’s son and successor, Ahaz, coming to the throne while Pekah still reigns in Israel, and 17:1, which dates Hoshea's accession to the throne to the twelfth year of Ahaz.

15:35 The Upper Gate: also called the Gate of Benjamin; cf. Jer 20:2; Ez 9:2.

16:1–20 Firmly dated events bearing on chaps. 16–20 are: the fall of Damascus (16:9) in 732 B.C., the fall of Samaria (18:9–11) in 722/721 B.C., and Sennacherib's invasion of Judah (18:13) in 701 B.C., which both in Kings and in Is 36:1 occurs in the fourteenth year of Hezekiah. These data make it possible to connect the chronology of Israel and Judah to the larger chronology of ancient Near Eastern history, but they also complicate further the already vexed problem of inconsistencies in the biblical data about accession years and lengths of reign.

16:15 People of the land: see note on 11:14. For consultation: perhaps the introduction into Judah of the Babylonian practice of reading omens from animal sacrifices; cf. Ez 21:26.

16:18 Sabbath canopy ... outside entrance: the Hebrew is obscure, but as a vassal Ahaz must have had to divest himself of signs of sovereignty.

17:3 Shalmaneser: son and successor of the Assyrian king Tiglath-pileser III. Vassal: lit., "servant"; cf. 16:7; so also in 24:1.

17:5 The king of Assyria: Shalmaneser was succeeded by Sargon II, who usurped the Assyrian throne in 722/721 B.C. In his inscriptions, Sargon claims to have captured Samaria during the first year of his reign.

17:6–41 This brief section is the Deuteronomistic historian's theological reflection on the causes and aftermath of Assyria's conquest of the Northern Kingdom. The text contrasts the Israelites, who were deported (v. 6) because they abandoned the worship of the Lord (vv. 7–23), with the foreigners who were brought into the land (v. 24) and undertook, however imperfectly, to worship the Lord alongside their own traditional deities (vv. 25–34a). The last verses recapitulate the apostasy of the Israelites (vv. 34b–40) and the syncretism of the foreigners (v. 41). This is a deliberately disparaging, and not wholly accurate, account of the origin of the Samaritans; it reflects the hostility the Judahites continued to hold toward the inhabitants of the northern territories.

17:10 Asherahs: see note on Ex 34:13.

17:30 Sukkot-Benot: several of the divine names in vv. 30–31 are problematic or conjectural. Sukkot-Benot is unknown, but the name may have been corrupted from that of Sarpanitu, the consort of the Babylonian god Marduk.

18:1–25:30 The Books of Kings end, as they began, with the people of the Lord in a single kingdom, Judah, centered on the capital, Jerusalem, and the Solomonic Temple. The reigns of two reformer kings, both praised, are recounted at length: Hezekiah (chaps. 18–20) and Josiah (22:1–23:30). Each is followed by shorter accounts of two kings who are condemned: Manasseh and Amon (chap. 21) and Jehoahaz and Jehoiakim (23:31–24:7). The book ends with the last days of Judah under Jehoiachin and Zedekiah and the beginning of the Babylonian exile.

18:4 Asherah: see note on Ex 34:13. Nehushtan: the name nehushtan contains several wordplays in Hebrew. It recalls the word "serpent" (nahash), the word "bronze" (nehoshet), and the word "to read omens" (nihesh). The sentence is also unclear about who named the bronze serpent "Nehushtan"—whether Moses when he made it, or the people when they venerated it, or Hezekiah when he destroyed it.

18:9 The correlations between the reigns of Hezekiah and Hoshea in vv. 9–10 conflict with other biblical data and with the date for the fall of Samaria, 722/721 b.c. (see note on 16:1–20). Since Sennacherib's invasion in the fourteenth year of Hezekiah (v. 13) took place in 701, Hezekiah cannot have been on the throne twenty years earlier. Various solutions have been proposed: scribal errors in writing the numbers; a Hezekian co-regency with his father Ahaz beginning in 729; etc. None of the solutions has won a consensus among historians.

18:13–20:19 This material is found also in Is 36–39, with one long addition (Is 38:9–20) and only a few other changes.

18:13 Sennacherib succeeded Sargon II as king of Assyria. His Judean campaign was waged in 701 b.c. See notes on 16:1–20 and 18:9.

18:27 Excrement ... urine: the reference is to the famine that results from a prolonged siege (compare 6:24–25; Dt 28:53–57). For public reading, ancient tradition (e.g., the Qere reading of the Masoretic text) softened the terms to “eat their own waste and drink their own bodies’ water.”

18:34 Did they indeed ... power?: some time after the fall of Samaria in 722/721 B.C., Hamath, Arpad, and other small states in the region formed an anti-Assyrian coalition. If the coalition had succeeded, it could have broken Assyrian control over the whole region, including Samaria, and allowed the kingdom of Israel to free itself. When Assyria crushed the coalition, it also crushed Israel’s hopes for liberation.

19:3 See note on Is 37:3.

19:21–31 Verses 21–28 are addressed to Sennacherib, vv. 29–31 to Judah.

20:12 Berodach-baladan: this famous king’s name is more correctly recorded in Is 39:1 as “Merodach-baladan.” The Babylonian form, Marduk-apal-idinna, means “Marduk has granted a son.” Historically, any embassy from him to Hezekiah must have been aimed at establishing an anti-Assyrian strategy of cooperation.

20:20 Pool and conduit: Hezekiah’s tunnel is described in more detail in 2 Chr 32:30.

21:24 People of the land: see note on 11:14.

22:3 Shaphan: head of a prominent family in the reign of Josiah, secretary to the king, bearer and reader of the newly found book of the law (vv. 3–13; 25:22). He and his sons favored the reform of King Josiah and supported the prophet Jeremiah; cf. Jer 26:24; 29:1–3; 36:10–12; 39:14.

22:8 Book of the law: probably an early edition of material now found in the Book of Deuteronomy.

23:6 People of the land: see note on 11:14.

23:10 Topheth ... by fire: Topheth was a cultic site probably in the Hinnom Valley just west of Jerusalem where, apparently, children were immolated to the deity Molech (Hebrew melek, “king,” deformed in the biblical tradition to “Molech”). The practice was condemned by Deuteronomic law and denounced by Jeremiah (Dt 12:31; Jer 7:29–31). In Jer 19 the deity is identified as the Canaanite god Baal.

23:13 Mount of the Destroyer: the name of the mountain in Hebrew is a wordplay. “The Mount of the mashchit” means “the Mount of the Destroyer” or perhaps “the Mount of Destruction.” The word plays on mishchah, “anointment,” and on mashiach, “anointed one,” both of which are references to the ceremony that consecrated the king. The mountain in question was the Mount of Olives, whose trees produced oil for the royal anointing. In the present context, both sides of the wordplay allude to Solomon, the anointed king (mashiach), whose building of non-Yahwistic shrines on this very mountain resulted in the destruction (mashchit) of the Davidic realm (see 1 Kgs 11:4–13). Horror ... abomination: all three idols are described with pejorative terms.

23:18 From Samaria: an anachronistic use of the name of the later capital city for the whole region. The prophet was from Bethel; cf. 1 Kgs 13:11.

23:24 Household gods, idols: teraphim. See note on Gn 31:19.

23:29 Against the king of Assyria: the narrator depicts Neco’s advance as an attack on Assyrian forces. The Babylonian record of the event, however, implies that Neco intended to support the remnant of Assyrian forces against a Babylonian onslaught in order to prop up a buffer state between Egypt and Babylon and assure Egyptian control of the Syro-Palestinian region.

23:33 A talent of gold: unless the fine imposed was a mere token, this figure seems too low; cf. 18:14. A number may have dropped from the Hebrew text; various ancient translations read “ten” or “one hundred” here.

24:12 The eighth year of his reign: that is, of Nebuchadnezzar’s reign, not Jehoiachin’s. The year was 597 B.C.

24:14 People of the land: see note on 11:14.

24:18–25:30 Much of this material closely parallels Jer 52; some of the events are also recounted in Jer 39.

25:3 Ninth day of the month: the text does not say which month, but Jer 39:2 and 52:6 set the breaching of the city walls in the fourth month; in later times that was the date of a fast commemorating the event (cf. Zec 8:19). People of the land: the influential citizens (see note on 11:14); even they, whose resources went beyond those of the ordinary people, were starving.

25:4 The Hebrew text of this verse is missing some words. The present translation is based on a likely reconstruction.

25:11 Those who had deserted: perhaps on the advice of Jeremiah; cf. Jer 38:2–3.

The Greek title, paraleipomena, means “things omitted,” or “passed over” (i.e., in the accounts found in Samuel and Kings). The Books of Chronicles, however, are much more than a supplement to Samuel and Kings; a comparison of the two histories discloses striking differences of scope and purpose. The Books of Chronicles record in some detail the lengthy span (some five hundred fifty years) from the death of King Saul to the return from the exile. Unlike today’s history writing, wherein factual accuracy and impartiality of judgment are the norm, biblical history, with rare exceptions, was less concerned with reporting in precise detail all the facts of a situation than with drawing out the meaning of those facts. Biblical history was thus primarily interpretative, and its purpose was to disclose the action of the living God in human affairs. For this reason we speak of it as “sacred history.”

These characteristics are apparent when we examine the primary objective of the Chronicler (the conventional designation for the anonymous author) in compiling his work. Given the situation which confronted the Jewish people at this time (the end of the fifth century B.C.), the Chronicler realized that Israel’s political greatness was a thing of the past. Yet, for the Chronicler, Israel’s past held the key to the people’s future. In particular, the Chronicler aimed to establish and defend the legitimate claims of the Davidic monarchy in Israel’s history, and to underscore the status of Jerusalem and its divinely established Temple worship as the center of religious life for the Jewish people. If Judaism was to survive and prosper, it would have to heed the lessons of the past and devoutly serve its

God in the place where he had chosen to dwell, the Temple in Jerusalem. From the Chronicler's point of view, the reigns of David and Solomon were the ideal to which all subsequent rule in Judah must aspire. The Chronicler was much more interested in David's religious and cultic influence than in his political power, however. He saw David's (and Solomon's) primary importance as deriving rather from their roles in the establishment of Jerusalem and its Temple as the center of the true worship of the Lord. Furthermore, he presents David as the one who prescribed the Temple's elaborate ritual (which, in point of fact, only gradually evolved in the Second Temple period) and who appointed the Levites to supervise the liturgical services there.

The Chronicler used a variety of sources in writing his history. Besides the canonical Books of Genesis, Exodus, Numbers, Joshua, and Ruth, and especially the Books of Samuel and Kings (specifically 1 Sm 31–2 Kings 25), he cites the titles of many other works which have not come down to us, e.g., "The Books of the Kings of Israel," or "The Books of the Kings of Israel and Judah," and "The History of Gad the Seer." In addition, the Chronicler's work contains early preexilic material not found in the Books of Kings.

The principal divisions of 1 Chronicles are as follows:

- I. Genealogical Tables (1:1–9:34)
  - II. The History of David (9:35–29:30)

(These are events of old.) <sup>23</sup>They were potters and inhabitants of Netaim and Gederah, where they lived in the king's service.

Simeon. <sup>24</sup>The sons of Simeon were Nemuel, Jamin, Jachin, Zerah, and Shaul,<sup>p</sup> <sup>25</sup>whose son was Shallum, whose son was Mibsam, whose son was Mishma. <sup>26</sup>The sons of Mishma were his son Hammuel, whose son was Zaccur, whose son was Shimei. <sup>27</sup>Shimei had sixteen sons and six daughters. His brothers, however, did not have many sons, and as a result all their clans did not equal the number of the Judahites.

attacked the surviving Amalekites who had escaped, and have lived there to the present day.<sup>t</sup>

Reuben. <sup>1*</sup> The sons of Reuben, the firstborn of Israel. (He was indeed the firstborn, but because he defiled the couch of his father his birthright was given to the sons of Joseph, son of Israel, so that he is not listed in the family records according to his birthright.<sup>u</sup> <sup>2</sup> Judah, in fact, became powerful among his brothers, so that the ruler came from him, though the birthright had been Joseph's.)<sup>v</sup> <sup>3</sup> The sons of Reuben, the firstborn of Israel, were Hanoch, Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi.<sup>w</sup> <sup>4</sup> His son was Joel, whose son was Shemaiah, whose son was Gog, whose son was Shimei, <sup>5</sup> whose son was Micah, whose son was Reaiah, whose son was Baal, <sup>6</sup> whose son was Beerah, whom Tilgath-pileser, the king of Assyria, took into exile; he was a prince of the Reubenites.<sup>x</sup> <sup>7</sup> His brothers who belonged to his clans, when they were listed in the family records according to their descendants, were: Jeiel, the chief, and Zechariah, <sup>8</sup> and Bela, son of Azaz, son of Shema, son of Joel. The Reubenites lived in Aroer and as far as Nebo and Baal-meon;<sup>y</sup> <sup>9</sup> toward the east they dwelt as far as the wilderness which extends from the Euphrates River, for they had much livestock in the land of Gilead.<sup>z</sup> <sup>10</sup> In Saul's time they waged war with the Hagrites, and when they had defeated them they dwelt in their tents throughout the region east of Gilead.<sup>a</sup>

Gad. <sup>11</sup> The Gadites lived alongside them in the land of Bashan as far as Salecah.<sup>b</sup> <sup>12</sup> Joel was chief, Shapham was second in command, and Janai was judge in Bashan.<sup>c</sup> <sup>13</sup> Their brothers, according to their ancestral houses, were: Michael, Meshullam, Sheba, Jorai, Jacan, Zia, and Eber—seven. <sup>14</sup> These were the sons of Abihail, son of Huri, son of Jaroah, son of Gilead, son of Michael, son of Jeshishai, son of Jahdo, son of Buz. <sup>15</sup> Ahi, son of Abdiel, son of Guni, was the head of their ancestral houses. <sup>16</sup> They dwelt in Gilead, in Bashan and its towns, and in all the pasture lands of Sirion to the borders. <sup>17</sup> All were listed in the family records in the time of Jotham, king of Judah, and of Jeroboam, king of Israel.

<sup>18</sup> The Reubenites, Gadites, and the halftribe of Manasseh were warriors, men who bore shield and sword and who drew the bow, trained in warfare—forty-four thousand seven hundred and sixty men fit for military service. <sup>19</sup> When they waged war against the Hagrites and against Jetur, Naphish, and Nodab,<sup>d 20</sup> they received help so that the Hagrites and all who were with them were delivered into their power. For during the battle they cried out to God, and he heard them because they had put their trust in him.<sup>e 21</sup> Along with one hundred thousand persons they also captured their livestock: fifty thousand camels, two hundred fifty thousand sheep, and two thousand donkeys. <sup>22</sup> Many were slain and fell; for “From God the victory.” They dwelt in their place until the time of the exile.<sup>f</sup>

The Half-tribe of Manasseh. <sup>23</sup> The halftribe of Manasseh lived in the land of Bashan as far as Baal-hermon, Senir, and Mount Hermon; they were numerous. <sup>24</sup> The following were the heads of their ancestral houses: Ephraim, Ishi, Eliel, Azriel, Jeremiah, Hodaviah, and Jahdiel—men who were warriors, famous men, and heads over their ancestral houses.

Levi.* <sup>27</sup> The sons of Levi were Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.<sup>i 28</sup> The sons of Kohath were Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel.<sup>j 29</sup> The children of Amram were Aaron, Moses, and Miriam. The sons of Aaron were Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.<sup>k 30*</sup> Eleazar became the father of Phinehas. Phinehas became the father of Abishua. <sup>31</sup> Abishua became the father of Bukki. Bukki became the father of Uzzi. <sup>32</sup> Uzzi became the father of Zerariah. Zerariah became the father of Meraioth. <sup>33</sup> Meraioth became the father of Amariah. Amariah became the father of Ahitub. <sup>34</sup> Ahitub became the father of Zadok. Zadok became the father of Ahimaaz. <sup>35</sup> Ahimaaz became the father of Azariah. Azariah became the father of Johanan. <sup>36</sup> Johanan became the father of Azariah, who served as priest in the temple Solomon built in Jerusalem. <sup>37</sup> Azariah became the father of Amariah. Amariah became the father of Ahitub. <sup>38</sup> Ahitub became the father of Zadok. Zadok became the father of Shallum. <sup>39</sup> Shallum became the father of Hilkiah. Hilkiah became the father of Azariah. <sup>40</sup> Azariah became the father of Seraiah. Seraiah became the father of Jehozadak. <sup>41</sup> Jehozadak was one of those who went into the exile which the LORD inflicted on Judah and Jerusalem through Nebuchadnezzar.

Among the Kohathites: Heman, the chanter, son of Joel, son of Samuel, <sup>19</sup>son of Elkanah, son of Jeroham, son of Eliel, son of Toah, <sup>20</sup>son of Zuph, son of Elkanah, son of Mahath, son of Amasi, <sup>21</sup>son of Elkanah, son of Joel, son of Azariah, son of Zephaniah, <sup>22</sup>son of Tahath, son of Assir, son of Ebiasaph, son of Korah,<sup>q</sup> <sup>23</sup>son of Izhar, son of Kohath, son of Levi, son of Israel.

Asaph was the son of Berechiah, son of Shimea, <sup>25</sup>son of Michael, son of Baaseiah, son of Malchijah, <sup>26</sup>son of Ethni, son of Zerah, son of Adaiah, <sup>27</sup>son of Ethan, son of Zimmah, <sup>r</sup>son of Shimei, <sup>28</sup>son of Jahath, son of Gershon, son of Levi.

Manasseh. <sup>47</sup>The clans of the Gershonites obtained thirteen cities from the tribes of Issachar, Asher, and Naphtali, and from the half-tribe of Manasseh in Bashan. <sup>48</sup>The clans of the Merarites obtained twelve cities by lot from the tribes of Reuben, Gad, and Zebulun.

Now Judah had been exiled to Babylon because of its treachery.<sup>2</sup> <sup>*u</sup> The first to settle again in their cities and dwell there were certain Israelites, the priests, the Levites, and the temple servants.<sup>v</sup>

Jerusalemites. <sup>3</sup>In Jerusalem lived Judahites and Benjaminites; also Ephraimites and Manassites. <sup>4</sup>Among the Judahites was Uthai, son of Ammihud, son of Omri, son of Imri, son of Bani, one of the sons of Perez, son of Judah. <sup>5</sup>Among the Shelanites were Asaiah, the firstborn, and his sons. <sup>6</sup>Among the Zerahites were Jeuel and six hundred and ninety of their relatives. <sup>7</sup>Among the Benjaminites were Sallu, son of Meshullam, son of Hodaviah, son of Hassenuah, <sup>8</sup>as well as Ibneiah, son of Jeroham; Elah, son of Uzzi, son of Michri; Meshullam, son of Shephatiah, son of Reuel, son of Ibnijah. <sup>9</sup>Their kindred of various families were nine hundred and fifty-six. All those named were heads of their ancestral houses.

<sup>10</sup>Among the priests were Jedaiah; Jehoiarib; Jachin; <sup>11</sup>Azariah, son of Hilkiah, son of Meshullam, son of Zadok, son of Meraioth, son of Ahitub, the ruler of the house of God; <sup>12</sup>Adaiah, son of Jeroham, son of Pashhur, son of Malchijah; Maasai, son of Adiel, son of Jahzerah, son of Meshullam, son of Meshillemith, son of Immer. <sup>13</sup>Their brothers, heads of their ancestral houses, were one thousand seven hundred and sixty, valiant in the work of the service of the house of God.

descendant of Korah, and his brothers of the same ancestral house of the Korahites had as their assigned task the guarding of the threshold of the tent, just as their fathers had guarded the entrance to the encampment of the LORD. <sup>20</sup>Phinehas, son of Eleazar, had been their chief in times past; the LORD was with him. <sup>w</sup> <sup>21</sup>Zechariah, son of Meshelemiah, guarded the gate of the tent of meeting. <sup>x</sup> <sup>22</sup>In all, those who were chosen for gatekeepers at the threshold were two hundred and twelve. They were inscribed in the family records of their villages. David and Samuel the seer had established them in their position of trust. <sup>23</sup>Thus they and their sons kept guard over the gates of the house of the LORD, the house which was then a tent. <sup>24</sup>The gatekeepers were stationed at the four sides, to the east, the west, the north, and the south. <sup>y</sup> <sup>25</sup>Their brothers who lived in their own villages took turns in assisting them for seven-day periods, <sup>z</sup> <sup>26</sup>while the four chief gatekeepers were on permanent duty. These were the Levites who also had charge of the chambers and treasures of the house of God. <sup>27</sup>They would spend the night near the house of God, for it was in their charge and they had the duty of opening it each morning.

<sup>28</sup>Some of them had charge of the vessels used there, tallying them as they were brought in and taken out. <sup>29</sup>Others were appointed to take care of the utensils and all the sacred vessels, as well as the fine flour, the wine, the oil, the frankincense, and the spices. <sup>30</sup>It was the sons of priests, however, who mixed the spiced ointments. <sup>a</sup> <sup>31b</sup> Mattithiah, one of the Levites, the firstborn of Shallum the Korahite, was entrusted with preparing the cakes. <sup>32</sup>Benaiah the Kohathite, one of their brothers, was in charge of setting out the showbread each sabbath. <sup>c</sup>

<sup>33</sup>These were the singers and the gatekeepers, family heads over the Levites. They stayed in the chambers when free of duty, for day and night they had to be ready for service. <sup>34</sup>These were the levitical family heads by their generations, chiefs who dwelt in Jerusalem.

II. The History of David

Genealogy of Saul. <sup>35d</sup> Jeiel, the founder of Gibeon, dwelt in Gibeon; his wife's name was Maacah. <sup>36</sup>His firstborn son was Abdon; then came Zur, Kish, Baal, Ner, Nadab, <sup>37</sup>Gedor, Ahio, Zechariah, and Mikloth. <sup>38</sup>Mikloth became the father of Shimeam. These, too, with their relatives, dwelt opposite their relatives in Jerusalem. <sup>39</sup>Ner became the father of Kish, and Kish became the father of Saul. Saul became the father of Jonathan, Malchishua, Abinadab, and Eshbaal. <sup>40</sup>The son of Jonathan was Meribbaal, and Meribbaal became the father of Micah. <sup>41</sup>The sons of Micah were Pithon, Melech, Tahrea, and Ahaz. <sup>42</sup>Ahaz became the father of Jehoaddah, and Jehoaddah became the father of Alemeth, Azmaveth, and Zimri. Zimri became the father of Moza. <sup>43</sup>Moza became the father of Binea, whose son was Rephaiah, whose son was Eleasah, whose son was Azel. <sup>44</sup>Azel had six sons, whose names were Azrikam, his firstborn, Ishmael, Sheariah, Azariah, Obadiah, and Hanan; these were the sons of Azel.

CHAPTER 10

Death of Saul and His Sons. <sup>1e</sup> Now the Philistines went to war against Israel, and Israel fled before them, and they fell, slain on Mount Gilboa. <sup>2</sup>The Philistines pressed hard after Saul and his sons. When the Philistines had struck down Jonathan, Abinadab, and Malchishua, sons of Saul, <sup>3</sup>the fury of the battle converged on Saul. Then the archers hit him, and he was severely wounded.

<sup>4</sup>Saul said to his armor-bearer, “Draw your sword and run me through; otherwise these uncircumcised will come and abuse me.” But the armor-bearer, badly frightened, refused, so Saul took his own sword and fell upon it. <sup>5</sup>When the armor-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he too fell upon his sword and died. <sup>6</sup>Thus Saul, and his three sons, his whole house, died together. <sup>7</sup>When all the Israelites in the valley saw that Saul and his sons had fled and that they had died, they abandoned their cities and fled. Then the Philistines came and lived in those cities.

Burial of Saul. <sup>11</sup>When all the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul, <sup>12</sup>all their warriors set out, recovered the corpses of Saul and his sons, and brought them to Jabesh. They buried their bones under the oak of Jabesh, and fasted for seven days.<sup>f</sup>

CHAPTER 11

David Is Made King. <sup>1i</sup> Then all Israel gathered around David in Hebron, and they said: “Look! We are your bone and your flesh. <sup>2</sup>In days past, when Saul was still the king, it was you who led Israel in all its battles. And now the LORD, your God, has said to you: You shall shepherd my people Israel; you shall be ruler over my people Israel.”<sup>j</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then all the elders of Israel came to the king at Hebron, and at Hebron David made a covenant with them in the presence of the LORD; and they anointed David king over Israel, in accordance with the word of the LORD given through Samuel.<sup>k</sup>

Jerusalem Captured. <sup>4</sup>Then David and all Israel went to Jerusalem, that is, Jebus, where the inhabitants of the land were called Jebusites.<sup>l</sup> <sup>5</sup>The inhabitants of Jebus said to David, “You shall not enter here.” David nevertheless captured the fortress of Zion, which is the City of David. <sup>6</sup>David said, “Whoever strikes the Jebusites first shall be made chief and captain.” Joab, the son of Zeruiah, was the first to attack; and so he became chief.<sup>m</sup> <sup>7</sup>David took up residence in the fortress, which therefore was called the City of David. <sup>8</sup>He built up the city on all sides, from the Millo all the way around, while Joab restored the rest of the city.<sup>n</sup> <sup>9</sup>David became ever more powerful, for the LORD of hosts was with him.

David’s Warriors. <sup>10o</sup> These were David’s chief warriors who, together with all Israel, supported him in his reign in order to make him king, according to the LORD’s word concerning Israel.

Ishbaal, the son of Hachamoni, chief of the Three.* He brandished his spear over three hundred, whom he had slain in a single encounter.

Rephaim.<sup>r</sup> <sup>16</sup>David was then in the stronghold, and a Philistine garrison was at Bethlehem. <sup>17</sup>David had a strong craving, and said, "If only someone would give me a drink of water from the cistern by the gate of Bethlehem!" <sup>18</sup>Thereupon the Three broke through the encampment of the Philistines, drew water from the cistern by the gate of Bethlehem, and carried it back to David. But David refused to drink it. Instead, he poured it out* to the LORD, <sup>19</sup>saying, "God forbid that I should do such a thing! Could I drink the blood of these men who risked their lives? For at the risk of their lives they brought it." So he refused to drink it. Such deeds as these the Three warriors performed.

CHAPTER 12

David's Early Followers. <sup>1</sup>The following men came to David in Ziklag while he was still under banishment from Saul, son of Kish; they, too, were among the warriors who helped him in his battles.<sup>z</sup> <sup>2</sup>They were archers who could use either the right or the left hand, both in slinging stones and in shooting arrows with the bow. They were some of Saul's kinsmen, from Benjamin. <sup>3</sup>Ahiezer was their chief, along with Joash, both sons of Shemaah of Gibeah; also Jeziel and Pelet, sons of Azmaveth; Beracah; Jehu, from Anathoth;<sup>a</sup> <sup>4</sup>Ishmaiah the Gibeonite, a warrior among the Thirty, and over the Thirty; <sup>5</sup>Jeremiah; Jahaziel; Johanan; Jozabad from Gederah; <sup>6</sup>Eluzai; Jerimoth; Bealiah; Shemariah; Shephatiah the Haruphite; <sup>7</sup>Elkanah, Isshiah, Azarel, Joezer, and Jashobeam, who were Korahites; <sup>8</sup>Joelah and Zebadiah, sons of Jeroham, from Gedor.

The Kingdom of David according to 1 Chronicles

<sup>17</sup>Some Benjaminites and Judahites also came to David at the stronghold. <sup>18</sup>David went out to meet them and addressed them in these words: “If you come peacefully, to help me, I am of a mind to have you join me. But if you have come to betray me to my enemies though my hands have done no wrong, may the God of our ancestors see and punish you.”

“We are yours, O David,
we are with you, son of Jesse.
Peace, peace to you,
and peace to him who helps you;
may your God be your helper!”

So David received them and placed them among the leaders of his troops.

<sup>20</sup>Men from Manasseh also deserted to David when he came with the Philistines to battle against Saul. However, he did not help the Philistines, for their lords took counsel and sent him home, saying, “At the cost of our heads he will desert to his master Saul.” <sup>21</sup>As he was returning to Ziklag, therefore, these deserted to him from Manasseh: Adnah, Jozabad, Jediahel, Michael, Jozabad, Elihu, and Zillethai, chiefs of thousands of Manasseh. <sup>22</sup>They helped David by taking charge of his troops, for they were all warriors and became commanders of his army. <sup>23</sup>And from day to day men kept coming to David’s help until there was a vast encampment, like God’s own encampment.

The Assembly at Hebron. <sup>24</sup>This is the muster of the detachments of armed troops that came to David at Hebron to bring Saul’s kingdom over to him, as the LORD had ordained. <sup>25*</sup> Judahites bearing shields and spears: six thousand eight hundred armed troops. <sup>26</sup>Of the Simeonites, warriors fit for battle: seven thousand one hundred. <sup>27</sup>Of the Levites: four thousand six hundred, <sup>28</sup>along with Jehoiada, leader of the line of Aaron, with another three thousand seven hundred, <sup>29</sup>and Zadok, a young warrior, with twentytwo princes of his father’s house. <sup>30</sup>Of the Benjaminites, the kinsmen of Saul: three thousand—until this time, most of them had kept their allegiance to the house of Saul. <sup>31</sup>Of the Ephraimites: twenty thousand eight hundred warriors, men renowned in their ancestral houses. <sup>32</sup>Of the half-tribe of Manasseh: eighteen thousand, designated by name to come and make David king. <sup>33</sup>Of the Issacharites, their chiefs who were endowed with an understanding of the times and who knew what Israel had to do: two hundred chiefs, together with all their kinsmen under their command. <sup>34</sup>From Zebulun, men fit for military service, set in battle array with every kind of weapon for war: fifty thousand men rallying with a single purpose. <sup>35</sup>From Naphtali: one thousand captains, and with them, armed with shield and lance, thirty-seven thousand men. <sup>36</sup>Of the Danites, set in battle array: twenty-eight thousand six hundred. <sup>37</sup>From Asher, fit for military service and set in battle array: forty thousand. <sup>38</sup>From the other side of the Jordan, of the Reubenites, Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, men equipped with every kind of weapon of war: one hundred and twenty thousand.

<sup>39</sup>All these soldiers, drawn up in battle order, came to Hebron with the resolute intention of making David king over all Israel. The rest of Israel was likewise of one mind to make David king. <sup>40</sup>They remained with David for three days, eating and drinking, for their relatives had prepared for them. <sup>41</sup>Moreover, their neighbors from as far as Issachar, Zebulun, and Naphtali came bringing food on donkeys, camels, mules, and oxen—provisions in great quantity of meal, pressed figs, raisins, wine, oil, oxen, and sheep. For there was rejoicing in Israel.

CHAPTER 13

Transfer of the Ark. <sup>1c</sup> After David had taken counsel with his commanders of thousands and of hundreds, that is, with every leader, <sup>2</sup>he said to the whole assembly of Israel: “If it seems good to you, and is so decreed by the LORD our God, let us send to the rest of our kindred from all the districts of Israel, and also the priests and the Levites from their cities with pasture lands, that they may join us;<sup>d</sup> <sup>3</sup>and let us bring the ark of our God here among us, for in the days of Saul we did not consult it.” <sup>4</sup>And the whole assembly agreed to do it, for it seemed right in the eyes of all the people.

<sup>5</sup>Then David assembled all Israel, from Shihor of Egypt* to Lebo-hamath, to bring the ark of God from Kiriath-jearim.<sup>e</sup> <sup>6</sup>David and all Israel went up to Baalah, that is, to Kiriath-jearim, of Judah, to bring up from there the ark of God, which was known by the name “LORD enthroned upon the cherubim.”<sup>f</sup> <sup>7</sup>They transported the ark of God on a new cart from the house of Abinadab; Uzzah and Ahio were guiding the cart, <sup>8</sup>while David and all Israel danced before God with all their might, with singing, and with lyres, harps, tambourines, cymbals, and trumpets.

<sup>9</sup>As they reached the threshing floor of Chidon,* Uzzah stretched out his hand to steady the ark, for the oxen were tipping it. <sup>10</sup>Then the LORD became angry with Uzzah and struck him, because he had laid his hand on the ark; he died there in God’s presence. <sup>11</sup>David was angry because the LORD’s anger had broken out against Uzzah. Therefore that place has been called Perez-uzzah* even to this day.

<sup>12</sup>David was afraid of God that day, and he said, “How can I bring in the ark of God to me?” <sup>13</sup>Therefore he did not take the ark with him into the City of David, but deposited it instead at the house of Obed-edom the Gittite. <sup>14</sup>The ark of God remained in the house of Obed-edom with his family for three months, and the LORD blessed Obededom’s household and all that he possessed.<sup>g</sup>

CHAPTER 14

David in Jerusalem. <sup>1h</sup> Hiram, king of Tyre, sent envoys to David along with cedar wood, and masons and carpenters to build him a house. <sup>* i</sup> <sup>2</sup> David now knew * that the LORD had truly established him as king over Israel, for his kingdom was greatly exalted for the sake of his people Israel. <sup>3</sup> David took other wives in Jerusalem and became the father of more sons and daughters. <sup>4</sup> These are the names of those who were born to him in Jerusalem: Shammua, Shobab, Nathan, Solomon, <sup>5</sup> Ibhar, Elishua, Elpelet, <sup>6</sup> Nogah, Nepheg, Japhia, <sup>7</sup> Elishama, Beeliada, and Eliphele. <sup>j</sup>

The Philistine Wars. <sup>8</sup> When the Philistines had heard that David was anointed king over all Israel, they marched out in force looking for him. But when David heard of this, he went out against them. <sup>9</sup> Meanwhile the Philistines had come and raided the valley of Rephaim. <sup>k</sup> <sup>10</sup> David inquired of God, “Shall I attack the Philistines, and will you deliver them into my power?” The LORD answered him, “Attack, for I have delivered them into your power.” <sup>11</sup> So they attacked, at Baal-perazim, and David defeated them there. Then David said, “By my hand God has broken through my enemies just as water breaks through a dam.” Therefore that place was called Baal-perazim. <sup>* 12</sup> The Philistines abandoned their gods there, and David ordered them to be burnt. <sup>l</sup>

<sup>17</sup> Thus David’s fame was spread abroad through every land, and the LORD put the fear of him on all the nations.

CHAPTER 15

Preparations for Moving the Ark. <sup>1</sup>David built houses for himself in the City of David and prepared a place for the ark of God, pitching a tent for it there. <sup>2</sup>At that time he said, “No one may carry the ark of God except the Levites, for the LORD chose them to carry the ark of the LORD and to minister to him forever.”<sup>m</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then David assembled all Israel to Jerusalem to bring up the ark of the LORD to its place, which he had prepared for it.<sup>n</sup> <sup>4</sup>David also convened the sons of Aaron and the Levites: <sup>5</sup>of the sons of Kohath, Uriel, their chief, and one hundred and twenty of his brothers; <sup>6</sup>of the sons of Merari, Asaiah, their chief, and two hundred and twenty of his brothers; <sup>7</sup>of the sons of Gershon, Joel, their chief, and one hundred and thirty of his brothers; <sup>8</sup>of the sons of Elizaphan, Shemaiah, their chief, and two hundred of his brothers; <sup>9</sup>of the sons of Hebron, Eliel, their chief, and eighty of his brothers; <sup>10</sup>of the sons of Uzziel, Amminadab, their chief, and one hundred and twelve of his brothers.

singers, Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, sounded brass cymbals. <sup>20</sup>Zechariah, Uzziel, Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Unni, Eliab, Maaseiah, and Benaiah played on harps set to “Alamoth.”* <sup>21</sup>But Mattithiah, Eliphelehu, Mikneiah, Obedom, and Jeiel led the song on lyres set to “sheminith.” <sup>22</sup>Chenaniah was the chief of the Levites in the singing; he directed the singing, for he was skillful.<sup>u</sup> <sup>23</sup>Berechiah and Elkanah were gatekeepers before the ark. <sup>24</sup>The priests, Shebaniah, Joshaphat, Nethanel, Amasai, Zechariah, Benaiah, and Eliezer, sounded the trumpets before the ark of God.<sup>v</sup> Obed-edom and Jeiel were also gatekeepers before the ark.

The Ark Comes to Jerusalem. <sup>25w</sup> Thus David, the elders of Israel, and the commanders of thousands went to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD with joy from the house of Obed-edom. <sup>26</sup>While God helped the Levites to carry the ark of the covenant of the LORD, they sacrificed seven bulls and seven rams.<sup>x</sup> <sup>27</sup>David was vested in a robe of fine linen, as were all the Levites who carried the ark, the singers, and Chenaniah, the leader of song; David was also wearing a linen ephod.<sup>y</sup> <sup>28</sup>Thus all Israel brought up the ark of the covenant of the LORD with joyful shouting, to the sound of horns, trumpets, and cymbals, and the music of harps and lyres. <sup>29</sup>But as the ark of the covenant of the LORD was entering the City of David, Michal, daughter of Saul, looked down from her window, and when she saw King David leaping and dancing, she despised him in her heart.<sup>z</sup>

CHAPTER 16

<sup>1a</sup> They brought in the ark of God and set it within the tent which David had pitched for it.<sup>b</sup> Then they sacrificed burnt offerings and communion offerings to God. <sup>2</sup>When David had finished sacrificing the burnt offerings and communion offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the LORD, <sup>3</sup>and distributed to every Israelite, to every man and every woman, a loaf of bread, a piece of meat, and a raisin cake.

David's Directives for the Levites. <sup>4</sup>He then appointed certain Levites to minister before the ark of the LORD, to celebrate, thank, and praise the LORD, the God of Israel.<sup>c</sup> <sup>5</sup>Asaph was their chief, and second to him were Zechariah, Uzziel, Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Mattithiah, Eliab, Benaiah, Obededom, and Jeiel. These were to play on harps and lyres, while Asaph was to sound the cymbals, <sup>6</sup>and the priests Benaiah and Jahaziel were to be the regular trumpeters before the ark of the covenant of God.

name;<sup>d</sup> make known among the peoples his deeds.

<sup>9</sup>Sing praise, play music;
proclaim all his wondrous deeds.

<sup>10</sup>Glory in his holy name;
rejoice, O hearts that seek the LORD!

<sup>11</sup>Rely on the mighty LORD;
constantly seek his face.

<sup>12</sup>Recall the wondrous deeds he has done,
his signs, and his words of judgment,

<sup>13</sup>You sons of Israel, his servants,
offspring of Jacob, the chosen ones!

<sup>14</sup>The LORD is our God;
who rules the whole earth.

<sup>15</sup>He remembers forever his covenant
the pact imposed for a thousand generations—

<sup>16</sup>Which was made with Abraham, confirmed by oath to Isaac,

<sup>17</sup>And ratified as binding for Jacob,
an everlasting covenant for Israel:

<sup>18</sup>“To you will I give the land of Canaan, your own allotted heritage.”

<sup>19</sup>When they were few in number,
a handful, and strangers there,

from one kingdom to another,

for their sake he rebuked kings:

to my prophets do no harm.”

<sup>23</sup><sup>e</sup> Sing to the LORD, all the earth, announce his salvation, day after day.

<sup>24</sup>Tell his glory among the nations;
among all peoples, his wondrous
deeds.

<sup>25</sup>For great is the LORD and highly to be praised;
to be feared above all gods.

<sup>26</sup>For the gods of the nations all do nothing,
but the LORD made the heavens.

<sup>27</sup>Splendor and majesty go before him; power and rejoicing are in his holy place.

<sup>28</sup>Give to the LORD, you families of nations,

give to the LORD glory and might;

<sup>29</sup>Give to the LORD the glory due his name!
Bring gifts, and come before him;
bow down to the LORD, splendid in holiness.

<sup>30</sup>Tremble before him, all the earth;
the world will surely stand fast, never to be moved.

<sup>31</sup>Let the heavens be glad and the earth
rejoice;
let them say among the nations: The LORD is king.

<sup>32</sup>Let the sea and what fills it resound; let the plains be joyful and all that is in
them!

<sup>33</sup>Then let all the trees of the forest exult before the LORD, who comes,
who comes to rule the earth.

<sup>34</sup><sup>f</sup> Give thanks to the LORD, who is good,
whose love endures forever;

<sup>35</sup>And say, "Save us, O God, our savior, gather us and deliver us from among
the nations,
That we may give thanks to your holy name
and glory in praising you."

<sup>36</sup>Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting!
Let all the people say, Amen! Hallelujah.

CHAPTER 17

The Oracle of Nathan. <sup>1m</sup> After David had taken up residence in his house, he said to Nathan the prophet, “See, I am living in a house of cedar, but the ark of the covenant of the LORD is under tentcloth.”<sup>n</sup> <sup>2</sup>Nathan replied to David, “Whatever is in your heart, go and do, for God is with you.”

<sup>3</sup>But that same night the word of God came to Nathan: <sup>4</sup>Go and tell David my servant, Thus says the LORD: It is not you who are to build the house for me to dwell in.<sup>o</sup> <sup>5</sup>For I have never dwelt in a house, from the day I brought Israel up, even to this day, but I have been lodging in tent or tabernacle. <sup>6</sup>As long as I have wandered about with all Israel, did I ever say a word to any of the judges of Israel whom I commanded to shepherd my people, Why have you not built me a house of cedar? <sup>7</sup>Now then, speak thus to my servant David, Thus says the LORD of hosts: I took you from the pasture, from following the flock, to become ruler over my people Israel.<sup>p</sup> <sup>8</sup>I was with you wherever you went, and I cut down all your enemies before you. I will make your name like that of the greatest on the earth. <sup>9</sup>I will assign a place for my people Israel and I will plant them in it to dwell there; they will never again be disturbed, nor shall the wicked ever again oppress them, as they did at the beginning, <sup>10</sup>and during all the time when I appointed judges over my people Israel. And I will subdue all your enemies. Moreover, I declare to you that the LORD will build you a house: <sup>11</sup>when your days have been completed and you must join your ancestors, I will raise up your offspring after you who will be one of your own sons, and I will establish his king-dom.<sup>q</sup> <sup>12</sup>He it is who shall build me a house, and I will establish his throne forever.<sup>r</sup> <sup>13</sup>I will be a father to him, and he shall be a son to me, and I will not withdraw my favor from him as I withdrew it from the one who was before you;<sup>s</sup> <sup>14</sup>but I will maintain him in my house and in my kingdom forever, and his throne shall be firmly established forever.

David's Thanksgiving. <sup>16</sup>Then King David came in and sat in the LORD's presence, and said: “Who am I, LORD God, and what is my house, that you should have brought me so far? <sup>17</sup>And yet, even this is too little in your sight, O God! For you have made a promise regarding your servant's house reaching into the future, and you have looked on me as henceforth the most notable of men, LORD God. <sup>t</sup> <sup>18</sup>What more can David say to you? You have known * your servant. <sup>19</sup> LORD, for your servant's sake and in keeping with your purpose, you have done this great thing. <sup>20</sup> LORD, there is no one like you, no God but you, just as we have always heard. <sup>u</sup>

<sup>25</sup>“Because you, my God, have revealed to your servant that you will build him a house, your servant dares to pray before you. <sup>w</sup> <sup>26</sup>Since you, LORD, are truly God and have made this generous promise to your servant, <sup>27</sup>do, then, bless the house of your servant, that it may be in your presence forever—since it is you, LORD, who blessed it, it is blessed forever.”<sup>x</sup>

David's Victories. <sup>1y</sup> After this, David defeated the Philistines and subdued them; and he took Gath and its towns away from the Philistines. <sup>2</sup>He also defeated Moab, and the Moabites became David's subjects, paying tribute.

<sup>9</sup>When Tou, king of Hamath, heard that David had defeated the entire army of Hadadezer, king of Zobah, <sup>10</sup>he sent his son Hadoram to wish King David well and to congratulate him on having waged a victorious war against Hadadezer; for Hadadezer had been at war with Tou. He also brought gold, silver and bronze articles of every sort. <sup>b</sup> <sup>11</sup>These also King David consecrated to the LORD along with all the silver and gold that he had taken from the nations: from Edom, Moab, the Ammonites, the Philistines, and Amalek.

David's Officials. <sup>14d</sup> David was king over all Israel; he dispensed justice and right to all his people. <sup>15</sup>Joab, son of Zeruiah, was in command of the army; Jehoshaphat, son of Ahilud, was chancellor;<sup>e</sup> <sup>16</sup>Zadok, son of Ahitub, and Ahimelech, son of Abiathar, were priests; * Shavsha was scribe;<sup>f</sup> <sup>17</sup>Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, was in command of the Cherethites and the Pelethites; and David's sons were the chief assistants to the king.<sup>*g</sup>

CHAPTER 19

Campaigns Against Ammon. <sup>1h</sup> Afterward Nahash, king of the Ammonites, died and his son succeeded him as king. <sup>2</sup>David said, “I will show kindness to Hanun, the son of Nahash, for his father showed kindness to me.” Therefore he sent envoys to console him over his father. But when David’s servants had entered the land of the Ammonites to console Hanun, <sup>3</sup>the Ammonite princes said to Hanun, “Do you think David is doing this—sending you these consolers—to honor your father? Have not his servants rather come to you to explore the land, spying it out for its overthrow?” <sup>4</sup>So Hanun seized David’s servants and had them shaved and their garments cut off halfway at the hips. Then he sent them away. <sup>5</sup>David was told about the men, and he sent word for them to be intercepted, for the men had been greatly disgraced. “Remain at Jericho,” the king told them, “until your beards have grown again; then come back here.”

Ammonites saw that the Arameans had fled, they too fled before his brother Abishai, and entered their city. Joab then came to Jerusalem.

<sup>16</sup>Seeing themselves vanquished by Israel, the Arameans sent messengers to bring out the Arameans from beyond the Euphrates, with Shophach, the commander of Hadadezer's army, at their head. <sup>17</sup>When this was reported to David, he gathered all Israel together, crossed the Jordan, and met them. With the army of David drawn up to fight the Arameans, they gave battle. <sup>18</sup>But the Arameans fled before Israel, and David killed seven thousand of their chariot fighters and forty thousand of their foot soldiers; he also put to death Shophach, the commander of the army. <sup>19</sup>When the vassals of Hadadezer saw themselves vanquished by Israel, they made peace with David and became his subjects. After this, the Arameans refused to come to the aid of the Ammonites.

CHAPTER 20

Victories over the Philistines. <sup>4j</sup>Afterward there was another battle with the Philistines, at Gezer. At that time, Sibbecai the Hushathite struck down Sippai, one of the descendants of the Rephaim, and the Philistines were subdued.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>6</sup>There was another battle, at Gath, and there was a giant, who had six fingers to each hand and six toes to each foot; twentyfour in all. He too was descended from the Rephaim. <sup>7</sup>He defied Israel, and Jonathan, the son of Shimea, David's brother, slew him. <sup>8</sup>These were the descendants of the Rephaim of Gath who died at the hands of David and his servants.

CHAPTER 21

David's Census; the Plague. <sup>1m</sup> A satan* rose up against Israel, and he incited David to take a census of Israel.<sup>n</sup> <sup>2</sup>David therefore said to Joab and to the other generals of the army, “Go, number the Israelites from Beer-sheba to Dan, and report back to me that I may know their number.” <sup>3</sup>But Joab replied: “May the LORD increase his people a hundredfold! My lord king, are not all of them my lord’s subjects? Why does my lord seek to do this thing? Why should he bring guilt upon Israel?” <sup>4</sup>However, the king’s command prevailed over Joab, who departed and traversed all of Israel, and then returned to Jerusalem. <sup>5</sup>Joab reported the census figures to David: of men capable of wielding a sword, there were in all Israel one million one hundred thousand, and in Judah four hundred and seventy thousand. <sup>6</sup>Levi and Benjamin, however, he did not include in the census, for the king’s command was repugnant to Joab.<sup>o</sup> <sup>7</sup>This command was evil in the sight of God, and he struck Israel. <sup>8</sup>Then David said to God, “I have sinned greatly in doing this thing. Take away your servant’s guilt, for I have acted very foolishly.”

<sup>14</sup>Therefore the LORD sent a plague upon Israel, and seventy thousand Israelites died. <sup>15</sup>God also sent an angel to Jerusalem to destroy it; but as the angel was on the point of destroying it, the LORD saw and changed his mind about the calamity, and said to the destroying angel, “Enough now! Stay your hand!”<sup>q</sup>

Ornan's Threshing Floor. The angel of the LORD was then standing by the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. <sup>16</sup>When David raised his eyes, he saw the angel of the LORD standing between earth and heaven, drawn sword in hand stretched out against Jerusalem.<sup>r</sup> David and the elders, clothed in sackcloth, fell face down, <sup>17</sup>and David prayed to God: "Was it not I who ordered the census of the people? I am the one who sinned, I did this wicked thing. But these sheep, what have they done? O LORD, my God, strike me and my father's family, but do not afflict your people with this plague!"

Altar for Burnt Offerings. <sup>26</sup>David then built an altar there to the LORD, and sacrificed burnt offerings and communion offerings. He called upon the LORD, who answered him by sending down fire from heaven upon the altar for burnt offerings.<sup>t</sup> <sup>27</sup>Then the LORD gave orders to the angel to return his sword to its sheath.

<sup>30</sup>But David could not go into his presence to inquire of God, for he was fearful of the sword of the angel of the LORD.

CHAPTER 22

See RG 231–33

<sup>1</sup>Thus David said, “This is the house of the LORD God, and this is the altar for burnt offerings for Israel.”<sup>v 2 *</sup> David then ordered that the resident aliens in the land of Israel should be brought together, and he appointed them stonecutters to hew out stone blocks for building the house of God.<sup>w</sup>

Charge to Solomon. <sup>6</sup>Then he summoned his son Solomon and commanded him to build a house for the LORD, the God of Israel. <sup>7a</sup> David said to Solomon: “My son, it was my purpose to build a house myself for the name of the LORD, my God. <sup>8</sup>But this word of the LORD came to me: You have shed much blood, and you have waged great wars. You may not build a house for my name, because you have shed too much blood upon the earth in my sight. <sup>9</sup>However, a son will be born to you. He will be a peaceful man, and I will give him rest from all his enemies on every side. For Solomon shall be his name, and in his time I will bestow peace* and tranquility on Israel.<sup>b 10</sup> It is he who shall build a house for my name; he shall be a son to me, and I will be a father to him,<sup>c</sup> and I will establish the throne of his kingship over Israel forever.

<sup>11</sup>“Now, my son, the LORD be with you, and may you succeed in building the house of the LORD your God, as he has said you shall. <sup>12</sup>But may the LORD give you prudence and discernment when he gives you command over Israel, so that you keep the law of the LORD, your God. <sup>13</sup>Only then shall you succeed, if you are careful to observe the statutes and ordinances which the LORD commanded Moses for Israel. Be strong and steadfast; do not fear or be dismayed.<sup>d 14</sup> See, with great effort I have laid up for the house of the LORD a hundred thousand talents of gold,* a million talents of silver, and bronze and iron in such great quantities that they cannot be weighed. I have also laid up wood and stones, to which you must add.<sup>e</sup> <sup>15</sup>Moreover, you have available workers, stonecutters, masons, carpenters, and experts in every craft, <sup>16</sup>without number, skilled with gold, silver, bronze, and iron. Set to work, therefore, and the LORD be with you!”

Charge to the Officials. <sup>17</sup>David also commanded all of the officials of Israel to help his son Solomon: <sup>18</sup>“Is not the LORD your God with you? Has he not given you rest on every side? Indeed, he has delivered the inhabitants of the land into my power, and the land is subdued before the LORD and his people.<sup>f</sup> <sup>19</sup>Therefore, devote your hearts and souls to seeking the LORD your God. Proceed to build the sanctuary of the LORD God, that the ark of the covenant of the LORD and God’s sacred vessels may be brought into the house built for the name of the LORD.”<sup>g</sup>

The Levitical Divisions. <sup>1</sup>When David had grown old and was near the end of his days, he made his son Solomon king over Israel.<sup>h</sup> <sup>2</sup>He then gathered together all the officials of Israel, along with the priests and the Levites.

<sup>12</sup>The sons of Kohath: Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel; four in all.<sup>m</sup> <sup>13</sup>The sons of Amram were Aaron and Moses. Aaron was set apart to be consecrated as most holy, he and his sons forever, to offer sacrifice before the LORD, to minister to him, and to bless in his name forever.<sup>n</sup> <sup>14</sup>As for Moses, however, the man of God, his sons were counted as part of the tribe of Levi. <sup>15</sup>The sons of Moses were Gershom and Eliezer.<sup>o</sup> <sup>16</sup>The sons of Gershom: Shubael the chief.<sup>p</sup> <sup>17</sup>The sons of Eliezer were Rehabiah the chief—Eliezer had no other sons, but the sons of Rehabiah were very numerous. <sup>18</sup>The sons of Izhar: Shelomith the chief. <sup>19</sup>The sons of Hebron: Jeriah, the chief, Amariah, the second, Jahaziel, the third, and Jekameam, the fourth.<sup>q</sup> <sup>20</sup>The sons of Uzziel: Micah, the chief, and Isshiah, the second.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>24</sup>These were the sons of Levi according to their ancestral houses, the family heads as they were enrolled one by one according to their names. They performed the work of the service of the house of the LORD beginning at twenty years of age.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>25</sup>David said: "The LORD, the God of Israel, has given rest to his people, and has taken up his dwelling in Jerusalem forever."<sup>w</sup> <sup>26</sup>Henceforth the Levites need not carry the tabernacle or any of the equipment for its service."<sup>x</sup> <sup>27</sup>For by David's last words the Levites were enlisted from the time they were twenty years old. <sup>28</sup>Their duty is to assist the sons of Aaron in the service of the house of the LORD, having charge of the courts, the chambers, and the preservation of everything holy: they take part in the service of the house of God. <sup>29</sup>They also have charge of the showbread, of the fine flour for the grain offering, of the wafers of unleavened bread, and of the baking and mixing, and of all measures of quantity and size.<sup>y</sup> <sup>30</sup>They are to be present every morning to offer thanks and to praise the LORD, and likewise in the evening;<sup>z</sup> <sup>31</sup>and at every sacrifice of burnt offerings to the LORD on sabbaths, new moons, and feast days, in such numbers as are prescribed, they must always be present before the LORD<sup>a</sup> <sup>32</sup>and observe what is prescribed for them concerning the tent of meeting, the sanctuary, and the sons of Aaron, their kinsmen, in the service of the house of the LORD.<sup>b</sup>

CHAPTER 24

Micah; Shamir, of the sons of Micah; <sup>25</sup>Isshiah, the brother of Micah; and Zechariah, a descendant of Isshiah. <sup>26</sup>The sons of Merari were Mahli, Mushi, and the sons of his son Uziah. <sup>27</sup>The sons of Merari through his son Uziah: Shoham, Zaccur, and Ibri. <sup>28</sup>The sons of Mahli were Eleazar, who had no sons, <sup>29</sup>and Jerahmeel, of the sons of Kish. <sup>30</sup>The sons of Mushi were Mahli, Eder, and Jerimoth.

These were the sons of the Levites according to their ancestral houses. <sup>31</sup>They too, in the same manner as their kinsmen, the sons of Aaron, cast lots in the presence of King David, Zadok, Ahimelech, and the heads of the priestly and levitical families; the more important family did so in the same way as the less important one.<sup>k</sup>

The Singers. <sup>1</sup>David and the leaders of the liturgy set apart for the service the sons of Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, who prophesied* to the accompaniment of lyres and harps and cymbals.<sup>l</sup>

This is the list of those who performed this service: <sup>2</sup>Of the sons of Asaph: Zaccur, Joseph, Nethaniah, and Asharelah, sons of Asaph, under the direction of Asaph, who prophesied under the guidance of the king. <sup>3</sup>Of Jeduthun, these sons of Jeduthun: Gedaliah, Zeri, Jeshaiiah, Shimei, Hashabiah, and Mattithiah; six, under the direction of their father Jeduthun, who prophesied to the accompaniment of a lyre, to give thanks and praise to the LORD. <sup>4</sup>Of Heman, these sons of Heman: Bukkiah, Mattaniah, Uzziel, Shubael, and Jerimoth; Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, Romamti-ezer, Joshbekashah, Mallothi, Hothir, and Mahazioth. <sup>5</sup>All these were the sons of Heman, the king's seer for divine matters; to exalt him God gave Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.<sup>m</sup> <sup>6</sup>All these, whether of Asaph, Jeduthun, or Heman, were under their fathers' direction in the singing in the house of the LORD to the accompaniment of cymbals, harps and lyres, serving in the house of God, under the guidance of the king.<sup>n</sup> <sup>7</sup>Their number, together with that of their kinsmen who were trained in singing to the LORD, all of them skilled men, was two hundred and eighty-eight. <sup>8</sup>They cast lots for their functions equally, young and old, master and pupil alike.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>9</sup>The first lot fell to Asaph, to the family of Joseph; he and his sons and his kinsmen were twelve. Gedaliah was the second; he and his kinsmen and his sons were twelve. <sup>10</sup>The third was Zaccur, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>11</sup>The fourth fell to Izri, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>12</sup>The fifth was Nethaniah, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>13</sup>The sixth was Bukkiah, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>14</sup>The seventh was Jesarelah, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>15</sup>The eighth was Jeshaiiah, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>16</sup>The ninth was Mattaniah, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>17</sup>The tenth was Shimei, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>18</sup>The eleventh was Uzziel, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>19</sup>The twelfth fell to Hashabiah, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>20</sup>The thirteenth was Shubael, his sons, and his kinsmen: twelve. <sup>21</sup>The fourteenth was Mattithiah, his

Treasurers. <sup>20</sup>Their brother Levites had oversight of the treasuries of the house of God and the treasuries of votive offerings.<sup>s</sup> <sup>21</sup>Among the sons of Ladan the Gershonite, the family heads were sons of Jehiel:<sup>t</sup> <sup>22u</sup> the sons of Jehiel, Zetham and his brother Joel, who oversaw the treasures of the house of the LORD. <sup>23</sup>Of the Amramites, Izharites, Hebronites, and Uzzielites, <sup>24</sup>Shubael, son of Gershom, son of Moses, was principal overseer of the treasures. <sup>25v</sup> His associate was of the line of Eliezer, whose son was Rehabiah, whose son was Jeshaiah, whose son was Joram, whose son was Zichri, whose son was Shelomith. <sup>26</sup>This Shelomith and his kinsmen oversaw all the treasures of the votive offerings dedicated by King David, the heads of the families, the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, and the commanders of the army;<sup>w</sup> <sup>27</sup>what came from wars and from spoils, they dedicated for the support of the house of the LORD. <sup>28</sup>Also, whatever Samuel the seer, Saul, son of Kish, Abner, son of Ner, Joab, son of Zeruiah, and all others had consecrated, was under the charge of Shelomith and his kinsmen.

Army Commanders. * <sup>1</sup>This is the list of the Israelite family heads, commanders of thousands and of hundreds, and other officers who served the king in all that pertained to the divisions, of twenty-four thousand men each, that came and went month by month throughout the year.

Tribal Leaders. <sup>16</sup>Over the tribes of Israel, for the Reubenites the leader was Eliezer, son of Zichri; for the Simeonites, Shephatiah, son of Maacah; <sup>17</sup>for Levi, Hashabiah, son of Kemuel; for Aaron, Zadok; <sup>18</sup>for Judah, Eliab,<sup>e</sup> one of David's brothers; for Issachar, Omri, son of Michael; <sup>19</sup>for Zebulun, Ishmaiah, son of Obadiah; for Naphtali, Jeremoth, son of Azriel; <sup>20</sup>for the Ephraimites, Hoshea, son of Azaziah; for the half-tribe of Manasseh, Joel, son of Pedaiah; <sup>21</sup>for the half-tribe of Manasseh in Gilead, Iddo, son of Zechariah; for Benjamin, Jaasiel, son of Abner; <sup>22</sup>for Dan, Azarel, son of Jeroham. These were the commanders of the tribes of Israel.

<sup>23</sup>David did not count those who were twenty years of age or younger, for the LORD had promised to multiply Israel like the stars of the heavens.<sup>f</sup> <sup>24</sup>Joab, son of Zeruiah, began to take the census, but he did not complete it, for because of it wrath fell upon Israel. Therefore the number was not recorded in the book of chronicles of King David.<sup>g</sup>

Overseers. <sup>25</sup>Over the treasuries of the king was Azmaveth,<sup>h</sup> the son of Adiel. Over the treasuries in the country, the cities, the villages, and the towers was Jonathan, son of Uzziah. <sup>26</sup>Over the farm workers who tilled the soil was Ezri, son of Chelub. <sup>27</sup>Over the vineyards was Shimei from Ramah, and over their produce for the wine cellars was Zabdi the Shiphmite. <sup>28</sup>Over the olive trees and sycamores of the Shephelah was Baalhanan the Gederite, and over the stores of oil was Joash. <sup>29</sup>Over the cattle that grazed in Sharon was Shitrai the Sharonite, and over the cattle in the valleys was Shaphat, the son of Adlai; <sup>30</sup>over the camels was Obil the Ishmaelite; over the donkeys was Jehdeiah the Meronothite; <sup>31</sup>and over the flocks was Jaziz the Hagrite. All these were the overseers of King David's possessions.

David's Court. <sup>32</sup>Jonathan, David's uncle and a man of intelligence, was counselor and scribe; he and Jehiel, the son of Hachmoni, attended the king's sons. <sup>33</sup>Ahithophel was also the king's counselor, and Hushai the Archite was the king's friend.<sup>i</sup> <sup>34</sup>After Ahithophel* came Jehoiada, the son of Benaiah, and Abiathar. The commander of the king's army was Joab.

CHAPTER 28

The Assembly at Jerusalem. <sup>1</sup>David assembled at Jerusalem all the commanders of Israel, the tribal commanders, the commanders of the divisions who were in the service of the king, the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, those in command of all the king's estates and possessions, and his sons, together with the courtiers, the warriors, and every person of substance.<sup>j 2k</sup> King David rose to his feet and said: "Hear me, my kinsmen and my people. It was my purpose to build a house of repose myself for the ark of the covenant of the LORD, the footstool for the feet of our God;* and I was preparing to build it. <sup>3</sup>But God said to me, You may not build a house for my name, for you are a man who waged wars and shed blood. <sup>4</sup>However, the LORD, the God of Israel, chose me from all my father's family to be king over Israel forever. For he chose Judah as leader, then one family of Judah, that of my father; and finally, among all the sons of my father, it pleased him to make me king over all Israel.<sup>l 5</sup> And of all my sons—for the LORD has given me many sons—he has chosen my son Solomon to sit on the throne of the LORD's kingship over Israel.<sup>m 6</sup> For he said to me: It is your son Solomon who shall build my house and my courts, for I have chosen him for my son, and I will be a father to him.<sup>n 7</sup> I will establish his kingdom forever, if he perseveres in carrying out my commandments and ordinances as he does now. <sup>8</sup>Therefore, in the sight of all Israel, the assembly of the LORD, and in the hearing of our God: keep and carry out all the commandments of the LORD, your God, that you may continue to possess this good land and afterward leave it as an inheritance to your children forever.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>9</sup>"As for you, Solomon, my son, know the God of your father and serve him with a whole heart and a willing soul, for the LORD searches all hearts and understands all the mind's thoughts. If you search for him, he will be found; but if you abandon him, he will cast you off forever.<sup>p 10</sup> See, then! The LORD has chosen you to build a house as his sanctuary. Be strong and set to work."

Temple Plans Given to Solomon. <sup>11</sup>Then David gave to his son Solomon the design of the portico and of the house itself, with its storerooms, its upper rooms and inner chambers, and the shrine containing the cover of the ark.<sup>q</sup> <sup>12</sup>He provided also the design for all else that he had in mind by way of courts for the house of the LORD, with the surrounding compartments for the treasuries of the house of God and the treasuries for the votive offerings, <sup>13</sup>as well as for the divisions of the priests and Levites, for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the liturgical vessels of the house of the LORD. <sup>14</sup>He specified the weight of gold to be used in the golden vessels for the various services and the weight of silver to be used in the silver vessels for the various services; <sup>15</sup>likewise for the golden menorahs and their lamps he specified the weight of gold for each menorah and its lamps, and for the silver menorahs he specified the weight of silver for each menorah and its lamps, depending on the use to which each menorah was to be put.<sup>r</sup> <sup>16</sup>He specified the weight of gold for each table that was to hold the showbread, and the silver for the silver tables; <sup>17</sup>the pure gold for the forks, basins, and pitchers; the weight of gold for each golden bowl and the weight of silver for each silver bowl; <sup>18</sup>the refined gold, and its weight, to be used for the altar of incense; and, finally, gold to fashion the chariot: * the cherubim spreading their wings and covering the ark of the covenant of the LORD.<sup>s</sup> <sup>19</sup>All this he wrote down, by the hand of the LORD, to make him understand it—the working out of the whole design.

<sup>20</sup>Then David said to his son Solomon: “Be strong and steadfast, and go to work; do not fear or be dismayed, for the LORD God, my God, is with you. He will not fail you or abandon you before you have completed all the work for the service of the house of the LORD.<sup>t</sup> <sup>21</sup>The divisions of the priests and Levites are ready for all the service of the house of God; they will be with you in all the work with all those who are eager to show their skill in every kind of craftsmanship. Also the commanders and all the people will do everything that you command.”<sup>u</sup>

Offerings for the Temple. <sup>1</sup>King David then said to the whole assembly: “My son Solomon, whom alone God has chosen, is still young and inexperienced; the work, however, is great, for this palace is not meant for human beings, but for the LORD God.<sup>v</sup> <sup>2</sup>For this reason I have stored up for the house of my God, as far as I was able, gold for what will be made of gold, silver for what will be made of silver, bronze for what will be made of bronze, iron for what will be made of iron, wood for what will be made of wood, onyx stones and settings for them, carnelian and mosaic stones, every other kind of precious stone, and great quantities of marble.<sup>w</sup> <sup>3</sup>But now, because of the delight I take in the house of my God, in addition to all that I stored up for the holy house, I give to the house of my God my personal fortune in gold and silver: <sup>4</sup>three thousand talents of Ophir gold, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, for overlaying the walls of the rooms,<sup>x</sup> <sup>5</sup>for the various utensils to be made of gold and silver, and for every work that is to be done by artisans. Now, who else will contribute generously and consecrate themselves this day to the LORD?”<sup>y</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Then the heads of the families, the tribal commanders of Israel, the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, and those who had command of the king’s affairs came forward willingly<sup>z</sup> <sup>7</sup>and contributed for the service of the house of God five thousand talents and ten thousand darics of gold, ten thousand talents of silver, eighteen thousand talents of bronze, and one hundred thousand talents of iron.<sup>a</sup> <sup>8</sup>Those who had precious stones gave them into the keeping of Jehiel the Gershonite for the treasury of the house of the LoRD.<sup>b</sup> <sup>9</sup>The people rejoiced over these free-will offerings, for they had been contributed to the LORD wholeheartedly. King David also rejoiced greatly.<sup>c</sup>

David’s Prayer. <sup>10</sup>Then David blessed the LORD in the sight of the whole assembly. David said:

“Blessed are you, LORD, God of Israel our father,
from eternity to eternity.

<sup>11</sup>Yours, LORD, are greatness and might, majesty, victory, and splendor.

For all in heaven and on earth is yours;
yours, LORD, is kingship;
you are exalted as head over all.

<sup>12</sup>Riches and glory are from you,
and you have dominion over all.
In your hand are power and might;
it is yours to give greatness and strength to all.<sup>d</sup>

and we praise the majesty of your name.

<sup>14</sup>“But who am I, and who are my people, that we should have the means to contribute so freely? For everything is from you, and what we give is what we have from you. <sup>15</sup>For before you we are strangers and travelers, like all our ancestors. Our days on earth are like a shadow, without a future.<sup>e</sup> <sup>16</sup>LORD our God, all this wealth that we have brought together to build you a house for your holy name comes from you and is entirely yours. <sup>17</sup>I know, my God, that you put hearts to the test and that you take pleasure in integrity. With a whole heart I have willingly given all these things, and now with joy I have seen your people here present also giving to you generously. <sup>18</sup>LORD, God of our ancestors Abraham, Isaac, and Israel,<sup>f</sup> keep such thoughts in the hearts and minds of your people forever, and direct their hearts toward you. <sup>19</sup>Give to my son Solomon a wholehearted desire to keep your commandments, precepts, and statutes, that he may carry out all these plans and build the palace for which I have made preparation.”

<sup>20</sup>Then David told the whole assembly, “Now bless the LORD your God!” And the whole assembly blessed the LORD, the God of their ancestors, bowing down in homage before the LORD and before the king. <sup>21</sup>On the following day they brought sacrifices and burnt offerings to the LORD, a thousand bulls, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, together with their libations and many other sacrifices for all Israel; <sup>22</sup>and on that day they ate and drank in the LORD’s presence with great rejoicing.

Solomon Anointed. Then for a second time* they proclaimed David’s son Solomon king, and they anointed him for the LORD as ruler, and Zadok as priest. <sup>23</sup>Thereafter Solomon sat on the throne of the LORD as king succeeding his father David; he prospered, and all Israel obeyed him.<sup>g</sup> <sup>24</sup>All the commanders and warriors, and also all the other sons of King David, swore allegiance to King Solomon. <sup>25</sup>And the LORD exalted Solomon greatly in the eyes of all Israel, giving him a glorious reign such as had not been enjoyed by any king over Israel before him.<sup>h</sup>

David's Death. <sup>26</sup>Thus David, the son of Jesse, had reigned over all Israel. <sup>27</sup>He was king over Israel for forty years: he was king seven years in Hebron and thirty-three years in Jerusalem.<sup>i</sup> <sup>28</sup>He died at a ripe old age, rich in years and wealth and glory, and his son Solomon succeeded him as king.<sup>j</sup>

1:1–9:34 The Chronicler's intention seems to have been to retell, from his particular viewpoint, the story of God's people from creation down to his own day. Since his primary interest was the history of David and the Davidic dynasty of Judah, he hurries through everything that preceded the death of Saul, David's predecessor as king, by the use of genealogical lists. The sources for these genealogies are mostly the books, already largely in their present form in the Chronicler's time, that eventually formed the Hebrew canon. For any given portion of these chapters, see the cross-references to their scriptural sources.

1:19 Divided: see note on Gn 10:25.

1:38 Seir: another name for Esau (v. 35) or Edom (v. 43).

2:3–4:23 The Chronicler had two reasons for placing his genealogy of the tribe of Judah before those of the other tribes, and for making it longer than all the others: his interest in David, who was of the tribe of Judah; and the prominence of descendants of that tribe among the Jews of the Chronicler's time.

2:9 Chelubai: a variant form of the name Caleb (vv. 18, 42), a different person from the Chelub mentioned in 4:11.

2:10–17 These verses list the immediate ancestors of David. A similar list appears in Ru 4:18–22.

2:18–24 These verses record the descendants of Caleb. In 4:15 as well as frequently in the Pentateuch (see Nm 13:6; 14:6, 30; 26:65; etc.), Caleb is called the son of Jephunneh. Here his father is called Hezron, perhaps because the Calebites were reckoned as part of the clan of the Hezronites.

2:25–41 The Jerahmeelites were a clan living in the Negeb of Judah.

2:42–49 Another list (see vv. 18–24) of the Calebites, a clan inhabiting the south of Judah.

2:50–55 The Hurites were a clan dwelling to the south and west of Jerusalem and related to the Calebites.

3:1–9 A list of David's sons.

3:1 Daniel: he is called Chileab in 2 Sm 3:3.

3:5 Shimea: he bears the name Shammua in 2 Sm 5:14.

AMMIEL:

Bathsheba's father is called Eliam in 2 Sm 11:3.

3:10–16 The kings of Judah from Solomon down to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians.

3:15 Shallum: another name for Jehoahaz, Josiah's immediate successor; cf. Jer 22:11.

3:17–24 The descendants of King Jeconiah down to the time of the Chronicler. If twenty-five years are allowed for each generation, the ten generations between Jeconiah and Anani (the last name on the list) would put the birth of the latter at about 405 B.C.—an important item in establishing the approximate date of the Chronicler's work in its final form.

3:18 Shenazzar: presumably he is the same as Sheshbazzar (Ezr 1:8, 11; 5:14–16), the prince of Judah who was the first Jewish governor of Judah after the exile. Both forms of the name probably go back to the Babylonian name Sin-abussar, meaning "O [god] Sin, protect [our] father!"

3:19 Zerubbabel: here called the son of Pedaiah, though elsewhere (Hg 1:12, 14; 2:2, 23; Ezr 3:2, 8; 5:2; Neh 12:1) his father's name is given as Shealtiel. The latter indication may merely point to the fact that Zerubbabel succeeded Shealtiel as head of the house of David.

4:1–43 Genealogies of the southern tribes, Judah and Simeon.

4:39 Gedor: the Greek reads Gerar, probably correctly.

5:1–26 Genealogies of the Transjordanian tribes, Reuben, Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh.

5:26 Pul: the Chronicler seems to speak of two different kings here, but Pul was the name which the Assyrian king Tilgath-pileser III (745–727 b.c.) adopted as king of Babylon.

5:27–6:66 The tribe of Levi. The Chronicler's list gives special prominence to Levi's son Kohath, from whom were descended both the Aaronite priests (vv. 28–41) and the leading group of Temple singers (6:18–23).

5:30–41 The line of preexilic high priests. The list seems to become confused in vv. 36–38, which repeat the same names, mostly in inverse order, that occur in vv. 34–36. A similar but shorter list occurs, with variations, in Ezr 7:1–5.

6:16–32 The cultic functions performed by the levitical families in the postexilic Temple at the time of the Chronicler are here traced back to David, in a way analogous to that in which all the laws in the Pentateuch are attributed to Moses.

6:39–66 For the rights of the Levites in the cities assigned to them, see note on Jos 21:1.

7:1–40 The seven northern tribes.

7:11 The Hebrew text appears to be defective.

7:23 Beriah ... evil: the name sounds like the Hebrew word for "evil," with the preposition be.

8:1–40 A second, variant list (cf. 7:6–11) of the Benjaminites, highlighting the family of Saul (vv. 33–40).

9:2–34 The inhabitants of Jerusalem after the exile. A similar list, though with many variants in the names, occurs in Neh 11:3–24.

10:13–14 The Chronicler explains why Saul met his tragic end: he had disobeyed the Lord's command given through the prophet Samuel (1 Sm 15:3–9), and had consulted a necromancer (1 Sm 28:6–19), contrary to the Mosaic law (Dt 18:10–11).

11:11 The Three: the Chronicler actually names only two of these figures, Ishbaal and Eleazar. According to 2 Sm 23:11, the third member of the Three was Shammah.

11:18 Poured it out: as a libation.

11:20 The Thirty: they are listed by name in vv. 26–47. The parallel list in 2 Sm 23:8–39 often differs in names and spellings; for the numbers, see note on 2 Sm 23:8–39.

12:21 See note on 27:1–15.

12:25–38 The Chronicler here takes the brief account of David's installation as king in 2 Sm 5:1–3 (= 1 Chr 11:1–3) and expands it in line with his exaltation of David and his dynasty.

13:5 Shihor of Egypt: the eastern branch of the Nile delta. Lebo-hamath: in southern Syria.

13:9 Chidon: in 2 Sm 6:6 the name is Nodan (variant: Nacon).

13:11 Perez-uzzah: this Hebrew phrase means “the breaking out against Uzza.”

14:1 The Chronicler’s account of David’s establishment as king and his victories over the Philistines follows 2 Sm 5:11–25, but makes David’s rule even more prominent.

14:2 David now knew: see note on 2 Sm 5:12.

14:11 See note on 2 Sm 5:20.

15:20–21 Alamoṯh ... sheminith: musical terms of uncertain meaning. Alamoṯh, lit., “young women,” occurs in the superscription to Ps 46. The term sheminith, in v. 21, might mean “bass” or “octave”; cf. Ps 6:1; 12:1.

16:8–36 A hymn composed of parts of several psalms: vv. 8–22 = Ps 105:1–15; vv. 23–33 = Ps 96:1–13; vv. 34–36 = Ps 106:1, 47–48. There are minor textual variants between this hymn and the psalms it is drawn from.

17:18 Known: given David recognition, chosen him, singled him out; cf. Gn 18:19; Ex 33:12; Am 3:2.

18:16 Zadok ... and Ahimelech, son of Abiathar, were priests: emendation—the Masoretic text here reads “Abimelech,” not “Ahimelech”; but 2 Sm 8:17, the Chronicler’s source, has “Ahimelech.” See note there.

18:17 Chief assistants to the king: according to 2 Sm 8:18, the Chronicler’s source here, David’s sons were priests. The Chronicler’s modification reflects his conviction that only Aaron’s descendants could be priests.

20:1 At the turn of the year: thus in 2 Sm 11 begins the story of David’s adultery with Bathsheba and his murder of her husband Uriah, but the Chronicler omits it.

21:1 A satan: in the parallel passage (2 Sm 24:1) David is led astray because of the Lord’s anger. The Chronicler’s modification reflects the changed theological outlook of postexilic Israel, when evil was no longer attributed directly to God. At an earlier period the Hebrew word satan (“adversary,” or, especially in a court of law, “accuser”) designated both human beings (1 Kgs 11:14) and a “son of God” who accused people before God (Jb 1:6–12; 2:1–7; Zec 3:1–2). In later Judaism (cf. Wis 2:24) and in the New Testament, satan, or the “devil” (from diablos, the Greek translation of the Hebrew word), designates an evil spirit who tempts people to do wrong.

22:2–4 According to 1 Kgs 5:15–32, Solomon himself made the material preparations for building the Temple, even though David had wished to do so (1 Kgs 5:17–19). The Chronicler, however, seeks to enhance David’s role in the building of the Temple.

22:9 The Hebrew word for peace, shalom, is reflected in the name Solomon, in Hebrew, Shelomo. The Chronicler draws a contrast here between Solomon, the “peaceful man,” and David, who “waged great wars” (v. 8). David was prevented from building the Temple, not only because his time was taken up in waging war (1 Kgs 5:17), but also because he shed much blood (1 Chr 22:8), thereby making himself, in the Chronicler’s view, ritually unfit for the task.

22:14 A hundred thousand talents of gold: about 3,775 tons of gold. A million talents of silver: about 37,750 tons of silver. These highly exaggerated figures are intended to stress the inestimable value of the Temple as the center of Israelite worship. More modest figures are given in 1 Kgs 9:14, 28; 10:10, 14.

24:6 Ahimelech, son of Abiathar: see note on 18:16.

25:1 This list of twenty-four classes of Temple singers balances the list of the twenty-four classes of priests (24:4–19). The last nine names in v. 4, which seem to form a special group, were perhaps originally fragments or incipits (the opening words) of hymns. With some slight changes in the vocalization, these names would mean: “Have mercy on me, O Lord,” “Have mercy on me,” “You are my God,” “I magnify,” “I extol the help of ...,” “Sitting in adversity,” “I have fulfilled,” “He made abundant,” and “Visions.”

26:18 The large building: parbar, mentioned also in 2 Kgs 23:11; the meaning of the word is unclear.

26:29 Civil affairs: lit., “external work,” i.e., conduct of affairs external to the Temple.

27:1–15 This list of army commanders is similar to, but distinct from, the list of David’s warriors given in 11:10–47. The schematic enumeration of the soldiers presented here appears artificial and exaggerated ( $12 \times 24,000 = 288,000$  men!). However, the Hebrew word (‘eleph) translated “thousand” might also designate a military unit of much smaller size.

27:34 After Ahithophel: after Ahithophel’s suicide (2 Sm 17:23), Jehoiada succeeded him as the king’s counselor. Abiathar: David’s priest, along with Zadok. See note on 18:16.

28:2 The ark ... the footstool ... of our God: the Lord, who was invisibly enthroned upon the cherubim associated with the ark of the covenant at Shiloh and later in the Jerusalem Temple, had the ark as his footstool; cf. Ps 99:5; 132:7. There was no ark in the postexilic Temple. Cf. note on 2 Chr 5:9.

28:18 Chariot: this reference is probably inspired by the vision account in Ez 1:4–24; 10:1–22.

29:22 For a second time: the first time is in 23:1 where David appoints Solomon his successor. Now there is a solemn public ratification of that appointment.

The Second Book of Chronicles takes up the history of the monarchy where the First Book leaves off. It begins with the account of the reign of Solomon (chaps. 1–9) from the special viewpoint of the Chronicler. The portrait of Solomon is an idealized one; he appears as second only to David. Solomon’s building of the Temple and the magnificence of his court are described in detail while the serious defects of his reign as cited in 1 Kings are simply not mentioned. This procedure is in keeping with the Chronicler’s purpose of stressing the supreme importance of the Temple and its worship. He wishes to impress on his readers the splendor of God’s dwelling and the magnificence of the liturgy of sacrifice, prayer, and praise offered there. Judah’s kings are judged by their attitude toward the Temple and its cult. To this ideal of one people, united in the worship of the one true God at the Temple of Jerusalem founded by David and Solomon, the restored community is to conform.

In treating the period of divided monarchy (chaps. 10–36), the Chronicler gives practically all his attention to the kingdom of Judah. His virtual omission of the northern Israelite kings is significant. In his view, the northern tribes of Israel were guilty of religious schism as long as they worshiped the Lord in a place other than the Temple of Jerusalem. The Chronicler makes no mention of the important sanctuaries of Yhwh at Dan and Bethel—as though they had never existed. Nevertheless, he retains the ancient ideal of “all Israel” (a phrase occurring forty-one times in Chronicles) as the people of God. This unity, however, can exist only if the worship of “the whole congregation of Israel” takes place exclusively in the Jerusalem Temple. This requirement explains the Chronicler's praise of Kings Hezekiah and Josiah for striving, after the fall of Samaria, to unite the remnants of the northern tribes of Israel with the kingdom of Judah. Nevertheless, after Josiah's death, Judah quickly careens toward its demise at the hands of the Babylonians. That catastrophe is reversed by the edict of Cyrus allowing a return to Jerusalem and rebuilding of the Temple. Thus 2 Chronicles ends.

The Second Book of Chronicles can be divided into two major segments as follows:

- I. The Reign of Solomon (1:1–9:31)
- II. The Post-Solomonic Monarchy of Judah (10:1–36:23)

CHAPTER 1

Solomon at Gibeon. <sup>1</sup>Solomon, son of David, strengthened his hold on the kingdom, for the LORD, his God, was with him, making him ever greater. <sup>2</sup>Solomon summoned all Israel, the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, the judges, the princes of all Israel, and the family heads; <sup>3a</sup> and, accompanied by the whole assembly, Solomon went to the high place at Gibeon, because the tent of meeting of God, made in the wilderness by Moses, the LORD's servant, was there. <sup>4</sup>David had, however, brought up the ark of God from Kiriath-jearim to Jerusalem, where he had provided a place and pitched a tent for it; <sup>5</sup>the bronze altar made by Bezalel, son of Uri, son of Hur, he put in front of the tabernacle of the LORD.* There Solomon and the assembly sought out the LORD,<sup>b</sup> <sup>6</sup>and Solomon offered sacrifice in the LORD's presence on the bronze altar at the tent of meeting; he sacrificed a thousand burnt offerings upon it.

<sup>7</sup>That night God appeared to Solomon and said to him: Whatever you ask, I will give you. <sup>8</sup>Solomon answered God: "You have shown great favor to David my father, and you have made me king to succeed him. <sup>9</sup>Now, LORD God, may your word to David my father be confirmed, for you have made me king over a people as numerous as the dust of the earth."<sup>c</sup> <sup>10</sup>Give me, therefore, wisdom and knowledge to govern this people, for otherwise who could rule this vast people of yours?" <sup>11</sup>God then replied to Solomon: Because this has been your wish—you did not ask for riches, treasures, and glory, or the life of those who hate you, or even for a long life for yourself, but you have asked for wisdom and knowledge in order to rule my people over whom I have made you king— <sup>12</sup>wisdom and knowledge are given you. I will also give you riches, treasures, and glory, such as kings before you never had, nor will those who come after you.

Solomon's Wealth. <sup>13</sup>Solomon returned to Jerusalem from the high place at Gibeon, from before the tent of meeting, and became king over Israel. <sup>14</sup>Solomon amassed chariots and horses: he had one thousand four hundred chariots and twelve thousand horses; these he allocated among the chariot cities and to the king's service in Jerusalem.<sup>d</sup> <sup>15</sup>The king made silver and gold as common in Jerusalem as stones, and cedars as numerous as the sycamores of the Shephelah.<sup>e</sup> <sup>16</sup>Solomon's horses were imported from Egypt and Cilicia,* where the king's agents purchased them at the prevailing price.<sup>f</sup><sup>17</sup> A chariot imported from Egypt cost six hundred shekels of silver, a horse one hundred and fifty shekels; so they were exported to all the Hittite and Aramean kings.<sup>g</sup>

Preparations for the Temple. <sup>18</sup>Solomon gave orders for the building of a house for the name of the LORD and also a king's house for himself.

CHAPTER 2

See RG 234–37

<sup>1</sup>Solomon conscripted seventy thousand men to carry stones and eighty thousand to cut the stones in the mountains, and over these he placed three thousand six hundred overseers.<sup>h 2i</sup> Moreover, Solomon sent this message to Hiram, king of Tyre: “As you dealt with David my father, and sent him cedars to build a house for his dwelling—<sup>3</sup>now I am going to build a house for the name of the LORD, my God, and to consecrate it to him, for the burning of fragrant incense in his presence, for the perpetual display of the showbread, for burnt offerings morning and evening, and for the sabbaths, new moons, and festivals of the LORD, our God: such is Israel’s perpetual obligation.<sup>j</sup> <sup>4</sup>And the house I am going to build must be great, for our God is greater than all other gods. <sup>5</sup>Yet who is really able to build him a house, since the heavens and even the highest heavens cannot contain him? And who am I that I should build him a house,<sup>k</sup> unless it be to offer incense in his presence? <sup>6</sup>Now, send me men skilled at work in gold, silver, bronze, and iron, in purple, crimson, and violet fabrics, and who know how to do engraved work, to join the skilled craftsmen who are with me in Judah and Jerusalem, whom David my father appointed. <sup>7</sup>Also send me boards of cedar, cypress and cabinet wood from Lebanon, for I realize that your servants know how to cut the wood of Lebanon. My servants will work with yours <sup>8</sup>in order to prepare for me a great quantity of wood, since the house I intend to build must be great and wonderful. <sup>9</sup>I will furnish as food for your servants, the woodcutters, twenty thousand kors of wheat, twenty thousand kors of barley, twenty thousand baths of wine, and twenty thousand baths of oil.”* <sup>l</sup>

<sup>11</sup>He added: “Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, who made heaven and earth, for having given King David a wise son of intelligence and understanding, who will build a house for the LORD and also his own royal house.<sup>m 12n</sup> I am now sending you a craftsman of great skill, Hiram-abi, <sup>13</sup>son of a Danite woman* and of a father from Tyre; he knows how to work with gold, silver, bronze, and iron, with stone and wood, with purple, violet, fine linen, and crimson, and also how to do all kinds of engraved work and to devise every type of design that may be given him and your craftsmen and the craftsmen of my lord David your father. <sup>14o</sup> And now, let my lord send to his servants the wheat, barley, oil, and wine which he has promised. <sup>15</sup>For our part, we will cut trees on Lebanon, as many as you need, and send them down to you in rafts to the port of Joppa, whence you may take them up to Jerusalem.”<sup>p</sup>

Building of the Temple. <sup>1s</sup> Then Solomon began to build the house of the LORD in Jerusalem on Mount Moriah, * which had been shown to David his father, in the place David had prepared, the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. <sup>2</sup>He began to build in the second month of the fourth year of his reign. <sup>3</sup>These were the specifications laid down by Solomon for building the house of God: the length was sixty cubits according to the old measure, and the width was twenty cubits; <sup>t</sup> <sup>4</sup>the front porch along the width of the house was also twenty cubits, and it was twenty cubits high. * He covered its interior with pure gold. <sup>u</sup> <sup>5</sup>The nave he overlaid with cypress wood and overlaid that with fine gold, embossing on it palms and chains. <sup>v</sup> <sup>6</sup>He also covered the house with precious stones for splendor; the gold was from Parvaim. <sup>7</sup>The house, its beams and thresholds, as well as its walls and its doors, he overlaid with gold, and he engraved cherubim upon the walls. <sup>8</sup>He also made the room of the holy of holies. Its length corresponded to the width of the house, twenty cubits, and its width was also twenty cubits. He overlaid it with fine gold to the amount of six hundred talents. <sup>w</sup> <sup>9</sup>The weight of the nails was fifty gold shekels. The upper chambers he likewise overlaid with gold.

<sup>10x</sup> For the room of the holy of holies he made two cherubim of carved workmanship, which were then covered with gold. <sup>11</sup>The wings of the cherubim spanned twenty cubits: one wing of each cherub, five cubits in length, extended to a wall of the house, while the other wing, also five cubits in length, touched the corresponding wing of the other cherub. <sup>12</sup>The wing of the cherub, five cubits, touched the wall of the house, and the other wing, five cubits, was joined to the wing of the other cherub. <sup>13</sup>The combined wingspread of the two cherubim was thus twenty cubits. They stood upon their own feet, facing toward the nave. <sup>14</sup>He made the veil * of violet, purple, crimson, and fine linen, and had cherubim embroidered upon it. <sup>y</sup>

pomegranates which he set on the chains. <sup>17</sup>He set up the columns to correspond with the nave, one for the right side and the other for the left, and he called the one to the right Jachin and the one to the left Boaz.

CHAPTER 4

See RG 234–37

<sup>6</sup>Then he made ten basins for washing, placing five of them to the right and five to the left. In these the victims for the burnt offerings were washed; but the sea was for the priests to wash in.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>11h</sup> When Hiram had made the pots, shovels, and bowls, he finished all his work for King Solomon in the house of God: <sup>12</sup>two columns; two nodes for the capitals on top of the columns; and two pieces of netting covering the two nodes for the capitals on top of the columns; <sup>13</sup>four hundred pomegranates in double rows on both pieces of netting that covered the two nodes of the capitals on top of the columns. <sup>14</sup>He made the stands, and the basins on the stands; <sup>15</sup>one sea, and the twelve oxen under it; <sup>16</sup>pots, shovels, forks, and all the articles Hiram-abi made for King Solomon for the house of the LORD; they were of burnished bronze. <sup>17</sup>The king had them cast in the neighborhood of the Jordan, between Succoth and Zeredah, in thick clay molds. <sup>18</sup>Solomon made all these vessels, so many in number that the weight of the bronze could not be determined.

The Temple of Solomon according to 2 Chronicles

<sup>19</sup>Solomon made all the articles that were for the house of God: the golden altar, the tables on which the showbread lay, <sup>20</sup>the menorahs and their lamps of pure gold which were to burn as prescribed before the inner sanctuary, <sup>21</sup>flowers, lamps, and gold tongs (this was of purest gold), <sup>22</sup>snuffers, bowls, cups, and firepans of pure gold. As for the entrance to the house, its inner doors to the holy of holies, as well as the doors to the nave of the temple, were of gold.

CHAPTER 5

Dedication of the Temple. <sup>1i</sup> When all the work undertaken by Solomon for the house of the LORD was completed, he brought in the votive offerings of David his father, putting the silver, the gold, and other articles in the treasuries of the house of God. <sup>2</sup> Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel and all the heads of the tribes, the princes in the ancestral houses of the Israelites, to Jerusalem to bring up the ark of the LORD's covenant from the City of David, which is Zion. <sup>3</sup> All the people of Israel assembled before the king during the festival of the seventh month. <sup>*4j</sup> When all the elders of Israel had arrived, the Levites * took up the ark; <sup>5</sup> and they brought up the ark and the tent of meeting with all the sacred vessels that were in the tent. The levitical priests brought them up.

<sup>6</sup> King Solomon and the entire community of Israel, gathered for the occasion before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen too many to number or count. <sup>7</sup> The priests brought the ark of the covenant of the LORD to its place: the inner sanctuary of the house, the holy of holies, beneath the wings of the cherubim. <sup>8</sup> The cherubim had their wings spread out over the place of the ark, covering the ark and its poles from above. <sup>9</sup> The poles were so long that their ends could be seen from the holy place in front of the inner sanctuary. (They cannot be seen from outside, but they remain there to this day.) *
<sup>10</sup> There was nothing in the ark but the two tablets which Moses had put there at Horeb when the LORD made a covenant with the Israelites after they went forth from Egypt.

<sup>13</sup> When the trumpeters and singers were heard as a single voice praising and giving thanks to the LORD, and when they raised the sound of the trumpets, cymbals, and other musical instruments to "Praise the LORD, who is so good, whose love endures forever," the cloud filled the house of the LORD.<sup>k</sup> <sup>14</sup>The priests could no longer minister because of the cloud, since the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God.<sup>l</sup>

CHAPTER 6

See RG 234–37

<sup>1m</sup> Then Solomon said:

“The LORD intends to dwell in the dark
cloud;

the base for your enthronement forever.”

<sup>3n</sup> The king turned and blessed the whole assembly of Israel, while the whole assembly of Israel stood. <sup>4</sup>He said: “Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, who with his own mouth spoke a promise to David my father and by his hand fulfilled it, saying: <sup>5</sup>Since the day I brought my people out of the land of Egypt, I have not chosen a city out of any tribe of Israel for the building of a house, that my name might be there; nor have I chosen any man to be ruler of my people Israel; <sup>6</sup>but now I have chosen Jerusalem, that my name may be there, and I have chosen David* to rule my people Israel. <sup>7</sup>When David my father wished to build a house for the name of the LORD, the God of Israel, <sup>8</sup>the LORD said to him: In wishing to build a house for my name, you did well. <sup>9</sup>But it is not you who will build the house, but your son, who comes from your loins: he shall build the house for my name.

<sup>10</sup>“Now the LORD has fulfilled the word he spoke. I have succeeded David my father, and I sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD has said, and I have built this house for the name of the LORD, the God of Israel. <sup>11</sup>I have placed there the ark, in which is the covenant of the LORD that he made with the Israelites.”

Solomon’s Prayer. <sup>12o</sup> Then he stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel and stretched forth his hands. <sup>13*</sup> Solomon had made a bronze platform five cubits long, five cubits wide, and three cubits high, which he had placed in the middle of the courtyard. Having ascended it, Solomon knelt in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel and stretched forth his hands toward heaven. <sup>14</sup>He said: “LORD, God of Israel, there is no God like you in heaven or on earth; you keep the covenant and love toward your servants who walk before you with their whole heart, <sup>15</sup>the covenant that you kept toward your servant, David my father. That which you promised him, your mouth has spoken and your hand has fulfilled this very day. <sup>16</sup>And now, LORD, God of Israel, keep toward your servant, David my father, what you promised: There shall never be wanting someone from your line to sit before me on the throne of Israel, provided that your descendants keep to their way, walking by my law, as you have. <sup>17</sup>Now, LORD, God of Israel, may the words which you spoke to David your servant be confirmed.

<sup>28</sup>“If there is famine in the land or pestilence; or if blight comes, or mildew, or locusts swarm, or caterpillars; when their enemies besiege them at any of their gates; whatever plague or sickness there may be; <sup>29</sup>whatever prayer of petition any may make, any of your people Israel, who know affliction and pain and stretch out their hands toward this house, <sup>30</sup>listen from heaven, the place of your enthronement, and forgive. Render to each and all according to their ways, you who know every heart; for it is you alone who know the heart of every human being. <sup>31</sup>So may they revere you and walk in your ways as long as they live on the land you gave our ancestors.

<sup>32</sup>“To the foreigners, likewise, who are not of your people Israel, but who come from a distant land for the sake of your great name, your mighty hand and outstretched arm, and come in prayer to this house, <sup>33</sup>listen from heaven, the place of your enthronement. Do all that the foreigner asks of you, that all the peoples of the earth may know your name, may revere you as do your people Israel, and may know that your name has been invoked upon this house that I have built.

<sup>34</sup>“When your people go out to war against their enemies, by whatever way you send them, and they pray to you toward the city you have chosen and the house I have built for your name, <sup>35</sup>listen from heaven to their prayer and petition, and uphold their cause. <sup>36</sup>When they sin against you (for there is no one who does not sin), and in your anger against them you deliver them to an enemy, so that their captors carry them off to another land, far or near, <sup>37</sup>and they have a change of heart in the land of their captivity and they turn and entreat you in the land of their captors and say, ‘We have sinned and done wrong; we have been wicked,’<sup>38</sup>if with all their heart and soul they turn back to you in the land of those who took them captive, and pray toward their land which you gave their ancestors, the city you have chosen, and the house which I have built for your name, <sup>39</sup>listen from heaven, the place of your enthronement, to their prayer and petitions, and uphold their cause. Forgive your people who have sinned against you. <sup>40</sup>Now, my God, may your eyes be open and your ears be attentive to the prayer of this place. <sup>41</sup>And now:

“Arise, LORD God, come to your resting
place,
you and your majestic ark.
Your priests, LORD God, will be clothed with salvation, your faithful ones rejoice in good things.

<sup>42</sup>LORD God, do not reject the plea of your anointed, remember the devotion of David, your servant.”<sup>p</sup>

CHAPTER 7

See RG 234–37

<sup>1q</sup> When Solomon had ended his prayer, fire came down from heaven and consumed the burnt offerings and the sacrifices, and the glory of the LORD filled the house. <sup>2</sup>But the priests could not enter the house of the LORD, for the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD.<sup>r</sup> <sup>3</sup>All the Israelites looked on while the fire came down and the glory of the LORD was upon the house, and they fell down upon the pavement with their faces to the earth and worshiped, praising the LORD, “who is so good, whose love endures forever.” <sup>4</sup>The king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD.<sup>s</sup> <sup>5</sup>King Solomon offered as sacrifice twentytwo thousand oxen, and one hundred twenty thousand sheep.<sup>t</sup>

End of the Dedication. Thus the king and all the people dedicated the house of God. <sup>6</sup>The priests were standing at their stations, as were the Levites, with the musical instruments of the LORD which King David had made to give thanks to the LORD, “whose love endures forever,” when David offered praise through them. The priests opposite them blew the trumpets and all Israel stood.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Then Solomon consecrated the middle of the court facing the house of the LORD; he offered there the burnt offerings and the fat of the communion offerings, since the bronze altar which Solomon had made could not hold the burnt offering, the grain offering, and the fat.<sup>v</sup>

for my house of sacrifice. <sup>13</sup>If I close heaven so that there is no rain, if I command the locust to devour the land, if I send pestilence among my people, <sup>14</sup>if then my people, upon whom my name has been pronounced, humble themselves and pray, and seek my face and turn from their evil ways, I will hear them from heaven and pardon their sins and heal their land. <sup>15</sup>Now, therefore, my eyes shall be open and my ears attentive to the prayer of this place; <sup>16</sup>now I have chosen and consecrated this house that my name may be there forever; my eyes and my heart shall be there always.

<sup>17</sup>As for you, if you walk before me as David your father did, doing all that I have commanded you and keeping my statutes and ordinances, <sup>18</sup>I will establish the throne of your kingship as I covenanted with David your father when I said, There shall never be wanting someone from your line as ruler in Israel. <sup>19</sup>But if ever you turn away and forsake my commandments and statutes which I set before you, and proceed to serve other gods, and bow down to them, <sup>20</sup>I will uproot the people from the land I gave and repudiate the house I have consecrated for my name. I will make it a proverb and a byword among all nations. <sup>21</sup>And this house which is so exalted—every passerby shall be horrified and ask: “Why has the LORD done such things to this land and to this house?” <sup>22</sup>And the answer will come: “Because they abandoned the LORD, the God of their ancestors, who brought them out of the land of Egypt, and they embraced other gods, bowing down to them and serving them. That is why he has brought upon them all this evil.”

Public Works. <sup>1z</sup> After the twenty years during which Solomon built the house of the LORD and his own house, <sup>2</sup>he built up the cities which Hiram had given him, * and settled Israelites there. <sup>3</sup>Then Solomon went to Hamath of Zoba and conquered it. <sup>4</sup>He built Tadmor* in the wilderness and all the supply cities, which he built in Hamath. <sup>5a</sup> He built Upper Beth-horon and Lower Beth-horon, fortified cities with walls, gates, and bars; <sup>6</sup>also Baalath, all the supply cities belonging to Solomon, and all the cities for the chariots, the cities for horses, and whatever else Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, in Lebanon, and in the entire land under his dominion. <sup>7</sup>All the people who were left of the Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites who were not Israelites— <sup>8</sup>those of their descendants who were left in the land and whom the Israelites had not destroyed—Solomon conscripted as forced laborers, as they are to this day. <sup>9</sup>But Solomon made none of the Israelites forced laborers for his works, for they were his fighting force, commanders, adjutants, chariot officers, and cavalry. <sup>10</sup>They were also King Solomon's two hundred and fifty overseers who directed the people.

Solomon's Piety. <sup>11</sup>Solomon brought the daughter of Pharaoh up from the City of David to the house which he had built for her, for he said, "No wife of mine shall dwell in the house of David, king of Israel, for the places where the ark of the LORD has come are holy."

deviation from the king's command in whatever related to the priests and Levites or the treasuries. <sup>16</sup>All of Solomon's work was carried out successfully from the day the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid until its completion. The house of the LORD was finished.

Glories of the Court. <sup>17</sup>In those times Solomon went to Ezion-geber and to Elath on the seashore of the land of Edom.<sup>d</sup> <sup>18</sup>Huram had his servants send him ships and his own servants, expert seamen; they went with Solomon's servants to Ophir, and obtained there four hundred and fifty talents of gold and brought it to King Solomon.<sup>e</sup>

See RG 234–37

The Queen of Sheba. <sup>1f</sup> The queen of Sheba, having heard a report of Solomon's fame, came to Jerusalem to test him with subtle questions, accompanied by a very numerous retinue and by camels bearing spices, a large amount of gold, and precious stones. She came to Solomon and spoke to him about everything that she had on her mind. <sup>2</sup>Solomon explained to her everything she asked about, and there was nothing so obscure that Solomon could not explain it to her.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>13k</sup> The gold that came to Solomon in one year weighed six hundred and sixty-six gold talents, <sup>14</sup>in addition to what came from the tolls on travelers and what the merchants brought. All the kings of Arabia also, and the governors of the country, brought gold and silver to Solomon.

The Death of Solomon. <sup>29l</sup> The remainder of the acts of Solomon, first and last, are recorded in the acts of Nathan the prophet, in the prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the visions of Iddo the seer concerning Jeroboam, son of Nebat. <sup>30</sup>Solomon was king in Jerusalem over all Israel for forty years. <sup>31</sup>Solomon rested with his ancestors and was buried in the City of David, his father, and Rehoboam his son succeeded him as king.

Division of the Kingdom. <sup>1m</sup> Rehoboam went to Shechem, where all Israel* had come to make him king. <sup>2</sup>When Jeroboam, son of Nebat, heard about it, he was in Egypt where he had fled from King Solomon; and he returned from Egypt. <sup>3</sup>They sent for him; Jeroboam and all Israel came and said to Rehoboam: <sup>4</sup>“Your father put on us a heavy yoke. If you now lighten the harsh servitude and the heavy yoke your father imposed on us, we will be your servants.” <sup>5</sup>He answered them, “Come back to me in three days,” and the people went away.

<sup>6</sup>King Rehoboam asked advice of the elders who had been in his father Solomon’s service while he was still alive, and asked, “How do you advise me to answer this people?” <sup>7</sup>They replied, “If you will deal kindly with this people and please them, giving them a favorable reply, they will be your servants forever.” <sup>8</sup>But he ignored the advice the elders had given him and asked advice of the young men who had grown up with him and were in his service. <sup>9</sup>He said to them, “What answer do you advise us to give this people, who have told me, ‘Lighten the yoke your father imposed on us’?” <sup>10</sup>The young men who had grown up with him replied: “This is what you must say to this people who have told you, ‘Your father laid a heavy yoke on us; lighten it for us.’ You must say, ‘My little finger is thicker than my father’s loins. <sup>11</sup>My father put a heavy yoke on you; I will make it heavier. My father beat you with whips; I will use scorpions!’ ”

<sup>12</sup>On the third day, Jeroboam and the whole people came back to King Rehoboam as the king had instructed them: “Come back to me in three days.” <sup>13</sup>Ignoring the advice the elders had given him, King Rehoboam gave the people a harsh answer. <sup>14</sup>He spoke to them as the young men had advised: “My father laid a heavy yoke on you; I will make it heavier. My father beat you with whips; I will use scorpions.” <sup>15</sup>The king did not listen to the people, for this turn of events was from God: the LORD fulfilled the word he had spoken through Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam, the son of Nebat.<sup>n</sup>

“What share have we in David?

We have no heritage in the son of Jesse.

Everyone to your tents, Israel!

Now look to your own house, David!”

So all Israel went off to their tents, <sup>17</sup>but the Israelites who lived in the cities of Judah had Rehoboam as their king. <sup>18</sup>King Rehoboam then sent out Hadoram, who was in charge of the forced labor, but the Israelites stoned him to death. King Rehoboam, however, managed to mount his chariot and flee to Jerusalem. <sup>19</sup>And so Israel has been in rebellion against the house of David to this day.

CHAPTER 11

than all his other wives and concubines; he had taken eighteen wives and sixty concubines, and he fathered twenty-eight sons and sixty daughters. <sup>22</sup>Rehoboam put Abijah, son of Maacah, first among his brothers, as leader, for he intended to make him king. <sup>23</sup>He acted prudently, distributing his various sons throughout all the districts of Judah and Benjamin, in all the fortified cities; and he gave them generous provisions and sought an abundance of wives for them.

CHAPTER 12

Rehoboam's Apostasy. <sup>1</sup>Once Rehoboam had established himself as king and was firmly in charge, he abandoned the law of the LORD, and so did all Israel with him.<sup>t</sup> <sup>2</sup>So in the fifth year of King Rehoboam, Shishak, king of Egypt, attacked Jerusalem, for they had acted treacherously toward the LORD.<sup>u</sup> <sup>3</sup>He had twelve hundred chariots and sixty thousand horsemen, and there was no counting the army that came with him from Egypt—Libyans, Sukkites,* and Ethiopians. <sup>4</sup>They captured the fortified cities of Judah and came as far as Jerusalem. <sup>5</sup>Then Shemaiah<sup>v</sup> the prophet came to Rehoboam and the commanders of Judah who had gathered at Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said to them: “Thus says the LORD: You have abandoned me, and so I have abandoned you to the power of Shishak.”

<sup>6</sup>Then the commanders of Israel and the king humbled themselves saying, “The LORD is in the right.” <sup>7</sup>When the LORD saw that they had humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah: Because they have humbled themselves, I will not destroy them; I will give them some deliverance, and my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem through Shishak. <sup>8</sup>But they shall be his servants. Then they will know what it is to serve me and what it is to serve the kingdoms of the earth. <sup>9w</sup> Thereupon Shishak, king of Egypt, attacked Jerusalem and took away the treasures of the house of the LORD and the treasures of the house of the king. He took everything, including the gold shields that Solomon had made. <sup>10</sup>To replace them, King Rehoboam made bronze shields, which he entrusted to the officers of the attendants on duty at the entrance of the king's house. <sup>11</sup>Whenever the king visited the house of the LORD, the attendants would carry them, and then return them to the guardroom. <sup>12</sup>Because he had humbled himself, the anger of the LORD turned from him so as not to destroy him completely; in Judah, moreover, there was some good.

<sup>15</sup><sup>y</sup> The acts of Rehoboam, first and last, are recorded in the history of Shemaiah the prophet and of Iddo the seer (his family record). There were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days. <sup>16</sup>Rehoboam rested with his ancestors; he was buried in the City of David. His son Abijah* succeeded him as king.

CHAPTER 13

War Between Abijah and Jeroboam. <sup>1z</sup> In the eighteenth year of King Jeroboam, Abijah became king of Judah; <sup>2</sup>he reigned three years in Jerusalem. His mother was named Micaiah, daughter of Uriel of Gibeah. There was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

<sup>3*</sup> Abijah joined battle with a force of four hundred thousand picked warriors, while Jeroboam lined up against him in battle with eight hundred thousand picked and valiant warriors. <sup>4</sup>Abijah stood on Mount Zemaraim, which is in the highlands of Ephraim, and said: “Listen to me, Jeroboam and all Israel! <sup>5</sup>Do you not know that the LORD, the God of Israel, has given David kingship over Israel forever, to him and to his sons, by a covenant of salt? <sup>6*</sup>Yet Jeroboam, son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon, son of David, arose and rebelled against his lord!<sup>a</sup> <sup>7</sup>Worthless men, scoundrels, joined him and overcame Rehoboam, son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was young and inexperienced, and no match for them. <sup>8</sup>But now, do you think you are a match for the kingdom of the LORD led by the descendants of David, simply because you are a huge multitude and have with you the golden calves which Jeroboam made you for gods? <sup>9</sup>Have you not expelled the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and made for yourselves priests like the peoples of other lands? Everyone who comes to consecrate himself with a young bull and seven rams becomes a priest of no-gods. <sup>10</sup>But as for us, the LORD is our God, and we have not abandoned him. The priests ministering to the LORD are sons of Aaron, and the Levites also have their offices. <sup>11</sup>They sacrifice burnt offerings to the LORD and fragrant incense morning after morning and evening after evening; they set out the showbread on the pure table, and the lamps of the golden menorah burn evening after evening; for we observe our duties to the LORD, our God, but you have abandoned him. <sup>12</sup>See, God is with us, at our head, and his priests are here with trumpets to sound the attack against you. Israelites, do not fight against the LORD, the God of your ancestors, for you will not succeed!”

<sup>14</sup>When Judah turned and saw that they had to battle on both fronts, they cried out to the LORD and the priests sounded the trumpets. <sup>15</sup>Then the Judahites shouted; and when they shouted, God struck down Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah. <sup>16</sup>The Israelites fled before Judah, and God delivered them into their power. <sup>17</sup>Abijah and his people inflicted a severe defeat upon them; five hundred thousand picked men of Israel fell slain. <sup>18</sup>The Israelites were humbled on that occasion, while the Judahites were victorious because they relied on the LORD, the God of their ancestors. <sup>19</sup>Abijah pursued Jeroboam and seized cities from him: Bethel and its dependencies, Jeshanah and its dependencies, and Ephron and its dependencies. <sup>20</sup>Jeroboam did not regain power during Abijah's time; the LORD struck him down and he died, <sup>21</sup>while Abijah continued to grow stronger. He married fourteen wives and fathered twenty-two sons and sixteen daughters.

The Divided Monarchy according to 2 Chronicles

Death of Abijah. <sup>22b</sup> The rest of the acts of Abijah, his deeds and his words, are recorded in the midrash of the prophet Iddo. <sup>23</sup>Abijah rested with his ancestors; they buried him in the City of David and his son Asa succeeded him as king. During his time, the land had ten years of peace.

CHAPTER 14

Asa's Initial Reforms. <sup>1c</sup> Asa did what was good and right in the sight of the LORD, his God. <sup>2</sup>He removed the illicit altars and the high places, smashed the sacred pillars, and cut down the asherahs. <sup>3</sup>He told Judah to seek the LORD, the God of their ancestors, and to observe the law and the commandment. <sup>4</sup>He removed the high places and incense stands from all the cities of Judah, and under him the kingdom had peace. <sup>5</sup>He built fortified cities in Judah, for the land had peace and no war was waged against him during these years, because the LORD had given him rest. <sup>6</sup>He said to Judah: "Let us build these cities and surround them with walls, towers, gates and bars. The land is still ours, for we have sought the LORD, our God; we sought him, and he has given us rest on every side." So they built and prospered.

The Ethiopian Invasion. <sup>* 7</sup>Asa had an army of three hundred thousand shield- and lance-bearers from Judah, and from Benjamin two hundred and eighty thousand who carried bucklers and were archers, all of them valiant warriors. <sup>8</sup>Zerah the Ethiopian advanced against them with a force of one million men and three hundred chariots, and he came as far as Mareshah.<sup>d</sup> <sup>9</sup>Asa went out to meet him and they drew up for battle in the valley of Zephathah, near Mareshah. <sup>10</sup>Asa called upon the LORD, his God: "LORD, there is none like you to help the powerless against the strong. Help us, LORD, our God, for we rely on you, and in your name we have come against this multitude. You are the LORD, our God; do not let men prevail against you."<sup>e</sup> <sup>11</sup>And so the LORD defeated the Ethiopians before Asa and Judah, and the Ethiopians fled. <sup>12</sup>Asa and those with him pursued them as far as Gerar, and the Ethiopians fell until there were no survivors, for they were crushed before the LORD and his army, which carried away enormous spoils. <sup>13</sup>Then the Judahites conquered all the cities around Gerar, for the fear of the LORD was upon them; they plundered all the cities, for there was much plunder in them. <sup>14</sup>They also attacked the tents of the cattle-herders and carried off a great number of sheep and camels. Then they returned to Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 15

Further Reforms. <sup>1</sup>The spirit of God came upon Azariah, son of Oded. <sup>2</sup>He went forth to meet Asa and said to him: “Hear me, Asa and all Judah and Benjamin! The LORD is with you when you are with him, and if you seek him he will be found; but if you abandon him, he will abandon you.<sup>f</sup> <sup>3</sup>For a long time Israel was without a true God, without a priest-teacher, without instruction, <sup>4</sup>but when in their distress they turned to the LORD, the God of Israel, and sought him, he was found by them.<sup>g</sup> <sup>5</sup>At that time there was no peace for anyone to go or come; rather, there were many terrors upon the inhabitants of the lands. <sup>6</sup>Nation crushed nation and city crushed city,<sup>h</sup> for God overwhelmed them with every kind of distress. <sup>7</sup>But as for you, be strong and do not slack off, for there shall be a reward for what you do.”<sup>i</sup>

<sup>8</sup>When Asa heard these words and the prophecy (Oded the prophet), he was encouraged to remove the detestable idols from the whole land of Judah and Benjamin and from the cities he had taken in the highlands of Ephraim, and to restore the altar of the LORD which was before the vestibule of the LORD. <sup>9</sup>Then he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, together with those of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon who were resident with them; for many had defected to him from Israel when they saw that the LORD, his God, was with him. <sup>10</sup>They gathered at Jerusalem in the third month* of the fifteenth year of Asa’s reign, <sup>11</sup>and sacrificed to the LORD on that day seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep from the spoils they had brought. <sup>12j</sup> They entered into a covenant to seek the LORD, the God of their ancestors, with all their heart and soul; <sup>13</sup>and everyone who would not seek the LORD, the God of Israel, was to be put to death, from least to greatest, man or woman. <sup>14</sup>They swore an oath to the LORD with a loud voice, with shouting and with trumpets and horns. <sup>15</sup>All Judah rejoiced over the oath, for they had sworn it with their whole heart and sought him with complete desire. The LORD was found by them,<sup>k</sup> and gave them rest on every side.

high places did not disappear from Israel, yet Asa's heart was undivided as long as he lived. <sup>18</sup>He brought into the house of God his father's and his own votive offerings: silver, gold, and vessels. <sup>19</sup>There was no war until the thirty-fifth year of Asa's reign.

CHAPTER 16

Asa's Infidelity. <sup>1m</sup> In the thirty-sixth year of Asa's reign, Baasha, king of Israel, attacked Judah and fortified Ramah to block all movement for Asa, king of Judah. <sup>2</sup>Asa then brought out silver and gold from the treasuries of the house of the LORD and the house of the king and sent them to Ben-hadad, king of Aram, who ruled in Damascus. He said: <sup>3</sup>"There is a treaty between you and me, as there was between your father and my father. I am sending you silver and gold. Go, break your treaty with Baasha, king of Israel, that he may withdraw from me." <sup>4</sup>Benhadad agreed with King Asa and sent the leaders of his troops against the cities of Israel. They attacked Ijon, Dan, Abel-maim, besides all the store cities of Naphtali. <sup>5</sup>When Baasha heard of it, he left off fortifying Ramah, putting an end to his work. <sup>6</sup>Then King Asa commandeered all Judah and they carried away the stones and beams with which Baasha was fortifying Ramah. With them he fortified Geba and Mizpah.

<sup>7</sup>At that time Hanani the seer came to Asa, king of Judah, and said to him: "Because you relied on the king of Aram and did not rely on the LORD, your God, the army of the king of Aram has escaped* your power. <sup>8n</sup> Were not the Ethiopians and Libyans a vast army, with great numbers of chariots and horses? And yet, because you relied on the LORD, he delivered them into your power. <sup>9</sup>The eyes of the LORD roam over the whole earth,<sup>o</sup> to encourage those who are devoted to him wholeheartedly. You have acted foolishly in this matter, for from now on you will have wars." <sup>10</sup>But Asa became angry with the seer and imprisoned him in the stocks, so greatly was he enraged at him over this. Asa also oppressed some of his people at this time.

was filled with spices and various kinds of aromatics compounded into an ointment; and they kindled a huge fire for him.

CHAPTER 17

Jehoshaphat's Zeal for the Law. <sup>1</sup>His son Jehoshaphat succeeded him as king and strengthened his position against Israel.<sup>q</sup> <sup>2</sup>He placed armed forces in all the fortified cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah and in the cities of Ephraim which Asa his father had taken. <sup>3</sup>The LORD was with Jehoshaphat,* for he walked in the earlier ways of David his father, and did not seek the Baals. <sup>4</sup>Rather, he sought the God of his father and walked in his commands, and not the practices of Israel. <sup>5</sup>Through him, the LORD made the kingdom secure, and all Judah gave Jehoshaphat gifts, so that great wealth and glory was his. <sup>6</sup>Thus he was encouraged* to follow the LORD's ways, and once again he removed the high places and the asherahs from Judah.<sup>r</sup>

His Power. <sup>10</sup>Now the fear of the LORD was upon all the kingdoms of the countries surrounding Judah, so that they did not war against Jehoshaphat. <sup>11</sup>Some of the Philistines brought Jehoshaphat gifts and a tribute of silver; the Arabians also brought him a flock of seven thousand seven hundred rams and seven thousand seven hundred he-goats.

<sup>12</sup>Jehoshaphat grew ever greater. He built strongholds and store cities in Judah. <sup>13</sup>He carried out many works in the cities of Judah, and he had soldiers, valiant warriors, in Jerusalem. <sup>14</sup>This was their mustering according to their ancestral houses. From Judah, the commanders of thousands: Adnah the commander, and with him three hundred thousand valiant warriors. <sup>15</sup>Next to him, Jehohanan the commander, and with him two hundred eighty thousand. <sup>16</sup>Next to him, Amasiah, son of Zichri, who offered himself to the LORD, and with him two hundred thousand valiant warriors. <sup>17</sup>From Benjamin: Eliada, a valiant warrior, and with him two hundred thousand armed with bow and buckler. <sup>18</sup>Next to him, Jehozabad, and with him one hundred and eighty thousand equipped for war. <sup>19</sup>These attended the king; in addition to those whom the king had stationed in the fortified cities throughout all Judah.

CHAPTER 18

Alliance with Israel. <sup>1u</sup> Jehoshaphat therefore had wealth and glory in abundance; but he became related to Ahab by marriage. <sup>2</sup>After some years he went down to Ahab at Samaria; Ahab slaughtered numerous sheep and oxen for him and for the people with him, and incited him to go up against Ramoth-gilead. <sup>3</sup>Ahab, king of Is-rael, asked Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, “Will you come with me to Ramoth-gilead?” He answered, “You and I are as one, and your people and my people as well. We will be with you in the battle.” <sup>4</sup>Jehoshaphat also said to the king of Israel, “Seek the word of the LORD at once.”

Prophets in Conflict. <sup>5</sup>The king of Israel assembled the prophets, four hundred of them, and asked, “Shall we go to fight against Ramoth-gilead, or shall I refrain?” They said, “Attack. God will give it into the power of the king.” <sup>6</sup>But Jehoshaphat said, “Is there no other prophet of the LORD here we might consult?” <sup>7</sup>The king of Israel answered, “There is one other man through whom we may consult the LORD; but I hate him, because he prophesies not good but always evil about me. He is Micaiah, son of Imlah.” Jehoshaphat said, “Let not the king say that.” <sup>8</sup>So the king of Israel called an official, and said to him, “Get Micaiah, son of Imlah, at once.” <sup>9</sup>The king of Israel and Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, were seated, each on his throne, clothed in their robes of state in the square at the entrance of the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets were prophesying before them.

<sup>10</sup>Zedekiah, son of Chenaanah, made himself two horns of iron and said: “The LORD says: With these you shall gore Aram until you have destroyed them.” <sup>11</sup>The other prophets prophesied in the same vein, saying: “Attack Ramoth-gilead, and conquer! The LORD will give it into the power of the king.” <sup>12*</sup>Meanwhile the messenger who had gone to call Micaiah said to him: “Look now, the words of the prophets are as one in speaking good for the king. Let your word be at one with theirs; speak a good word.” <sup>13</sup>Micaiah said, “As the LORD lives, I shall speak whatever my God says.”

<sup>14</sup>When he came to the king, the king said to him, “Micah, shall we go to fight at Ramoth-gilead, or shall I refrain?” He said, “Attack and conquer! They will be delivered into your power.” <sup>15</sup>But the king answered him,

“How many times must I adjure you to tell me nothing but the truth in the name of the LORD?” <sup>16</sup>So Micaiah said:

“I see all Israel
scattered on the mountains,
like sheep without a shepherd,
And the LORD saying,
These have no masters!
Let each of them go back home in

<sup>23</sup>Thereupon Zedekiah, son of Chenaanah, came up and struck Micaiah on the cheek, saying, “Has the spirit of the LORD, then, passed from me to speak with you?” <sup>24</sup>Micaiah said, “You shall find out on the day you go into an innermost room to hide.” <sup>25</sup>The king of Israel then said: “Seize Micaiah and take him back to Amon, prefect of the city, and to Joash the king’s son, <sup>26</sup>and say, ‘This is the king’s order: Put this man in prison and feed him scanty rations of bread and water until I come back in safety!’ ” <sup>27</sup>But Micaiah said, “If ever you return in safety, the LORD has not spoken through me.” (He also said, “Hear, O peoples, all of you!”) *

Ahab’s Death. <sup>28</sup>The king of Israel and Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead, <sup>29</sup>and the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, “I will disguise myself and go into battle. But you, put on your own robes.” So the king of Israel disguised himself and they entered the battle. <sup>30</sup>In the meantime, the king of Aram had given his chariot commanders the order, “Fight with no one, great or small, except the king of Israel alone.” <sup>31</sup>When the chariot commanders saw Jehoshaphat, they thought, “There is the king of Israel!” and wheeled to fight him. But Jehoshaphat cried out and the LORD helped him; God induced them to leave him alone. <sup>32</sup>The chariot commanders, seeing that he was not the king of Israel, turned away from him. <sup>33</sup>But someone drew his bow at random and hit the king of Israel between the joints of his breastplate. He ordered his charioteer, “Rein about and take me out of the ranks, for I am wounded.”<sup>v</sup> <sup>34</sup>The battle grew fierce during the day, and the king of Israel braced himself up in his chariot facing the Arameans until evening. He died as the sun was setting.

CHAPTER 19

Jehoshaphat Rebuked. <sup>1</sup>Jehoshaphat king of Judah returned in safety to his house in Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>Jehu the seer, son of Hanani,* went out to meet King Jehoshaphat and said to him: “Should you help the wicked and love those who hate the LORD? For this reason, wrath is upon you from the LORD. <sup>3</sup>Yet some good has been found* in you, since you have removed the asherahs from the land and have set your heart to seek God.”

Judges Appointed. <sup>4</sup>Jehoshaphat dwelt in Jerusalem; but he went out again among the people from Beer-sheba to the highlands of Ephraim and brought them back to the LORD, the God of their ancestors. <sup>5</sup>He appointed judges in the land, in all the fortified cities of Judah, city by city, <sup>6</sup>and he said to them: “Take care what you do, for the judgment you give is not human but divine; for when it comes to judgment God will be with you.<sup>w</sup> <sup>7</sup>And now, let the fear of the LORD be upon you. Act carefully, for with the LORD, our God, there is no injustice, no partiality, no bribe-taking.”<sup>x</sup> <sup>8</sup>In Jerusalem also, Jehoshaphat appointed some Levites and priests and some of the family heads of Israel for the LORD’s judgment and the disputes of those who dwell in Jerusalem.<sup>y</sup> <sup>9</sup>He gave them this command: “Thus you shall act: in the fear of the LORD, with fidelity and with an undivided heart. <sup>10</sup>And in every dispute that comes to you from your kin living in their cities, whether it concerns bloodguilt or questions of law, command, statutes, or ordinances, warn them lest they incur guilt before the LORD and his wrath come upon you and your kin. Do that and you shall not incur guilt.<sup>z</sup> <sup>11</sup>See now, Amariah is chief priest over you for everything that pertains to the LORD, and Zebadiah, son of Ishmael, is leader of the house of Judah in all that pertains to the king; and the Levites will be your officials. Take firm action, and the LORD will be with the good.”

CHAPTER 20

Jehoshaphat’s Prayer. <sup>5</sup>Jehoshaphat stood up in the assembly of Judah and Jerusalem in the house of the LORD before the new court, <sup>6</sup>and he said: “LORD, God of our ancestors, are you not God in heaven, and do you not rule over all the kingdoms of the nations? In your hand is power and might, and no one can withstand you.<sup>b</sup> <sup>7</sup>Was it not you, our God, who dispossessed the inhabitants of this land before your people Israel and gave it forever to the descendants of Abraham, your friend? <sup>8</sup>They have dwelt in it and they built in it a sanctuary for your name. They have said: <sup>9</sup> ‘If evil comes upon us, the sword of judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we will stand before this house and before you, for your name is in this house, and we will cry out to you in our affliction, and you will hear and save!’<sup>c</sup> <sup>10</sup>And now, see the Ammonites, Moabites, and those of Mount Seir whom you did not allow Israel to invade when they came from the land of Egypt, but instead they passed them by and did not destroy them:<sup>d</sup> <sup>11</sup>See how they are now repaying us by coming to drive us out of the possession you have given us. <sup>12</sup>O our God, will you not bring judgment on them? We are powerless before this vast multitude that is coming against us. We ourselves do not know what to do, so our eyes are turned toward you.”

Victory Prophesied. <sup>13</sup>All Judah was standing before the LORD, with their little ones, their wives, and their children. <sup>14</sup>And the spirit of the LORD came upon Jahaziel, son of Zechariah, son of Benaiah, son of Jeiel, son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the clan of Asaph, in the midst of the assembly, <sup>15</sup>and he said: “Pay attention, all of Judah, inhabitants of Jerusalem, and King Jehoshaphat! The LORD says to you: Do not fear or be dismayed at the sight of this vast multitude, for the battle is not yours but God’s. <sup>16</sup>Go down against them tomorrow. You will see them coming up by the ascent of Ziz, and you will come upon them at the end of the wadi which opens on the wilderness of Jeruel. <sup>17</sup>You will not have to fight in this encounter. Take your places, stand firm, and see the salvation of the LORD; he will be with you, Judah and Jerusalem. Do not fear or be dismayed. Tomorrow go out to meet them, and the LORD will be with you.”<sup>e</sup> <sup>18</sup>Then Jehoshaphat knelt down with his face to the ground, and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell down before the LORD in worship. <sup>19</sup>Levites from among the Kohathites and Korahites stood up to sing the praises of the LORD, the God of Israel, their voices ever louder.

The Invaders Destroyed. <sup>20</sup>Early in the morning they went out to the wilderness of Tekoa. As they were going out, Jehoshaphat halted and said: “Listen to me, Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem! Let your faith in the LORD, your God, be firm, and you will be firm.”<sup>f</sup> Have faith in his prophets and you will succeed.” <sup>21</sup> * After taking counsel with the people, he appointed some to sing to the LORD and some to praise the holy Splendor as it went forth at the head of the army. They sang: “Give thanks to the LORD, whose love endures forever.”<sup>g</sup> <sup>22</sup>At the moment they began their jubilant praise, the LORD laid an ambush against the Ammonites, Moabites, and those of Mount Seir who were coming against Judah, so that they were defeated. <sup>23</sup>For the Ammonites and Moabites set upon the inhabitants of Mount Seir and exterminated them according to the ban.<sup>h</sup> And when they had finished with the inhabitants of Seir, each helped to destroy the other.

<sup>24</sup>When Judah came to the watchtower of the wilderness and looked toward the throng, there were only corpses fallen on the ground, with no survivors. <sup>25</sup>Jehoshaphat and his people came to gather the spoils, and they found an abundance of cattle and personal property, garments and precious vessels. They took so much that they were unable to carry it all; it took them three days to gather the spoils, there was so much of it. <sup>26</sup>On the fourth day they held an assembly in the Valley of Berakah * —for there they blessed the LORD; that is why the place is called the Valley of Berakah to this day. <sup>27</sup>Then all the men of Judah and Jerusalem, with Jehoshaphat at their head, returned to Jerusalem with joy; for the LORD had given them joy over their enemies. <sup>28</sup>They came to Jerusalem, with harps, lyres, and trumpets, to the house of the LORD. <sup>29</sup>And the fear of God came upon all the kingdoms of the surrounding lands when they heard how the LORD had fought against the enemies of Israel. <sup>30</sup>Thereafter Jehoshaphat's kingdom had peace, for his God gave him rest on every side.

Jehoshaphat's Other Deeds. <sup>31i</sup> Thus Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah. He was thirty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Azubah, daughter of Shilhi. <sup>32</sup>He walked in the way of Asa his father unceasingly, doing what was right in the LORD's sight. <sup>33</sup>Nevertheless, the high places did not disappear and the people had not yet set their hearts on the God of their ancestors.

CHAPTER 21

Jehoram's Evil Deeds. <sup>4</sup>When Jehoram had acceded to his father's kingdom and was firmly in power, he killed all his brothers with the sword, and also some of the princes of Israel. <sup>5l</sup> Jehoram was thirty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. <sup>6</sup>He walked in the way of the kings of Israel as the house of Ahab had done, since the daughter of Ahab* was his wife; and he did what was evil in the LORD's sight. <sup>7</sup>Even so, the LORD was unwilling to destroy the house of David because of the covenant he had made with David and because of his promise to leave him and his sons a holding for all time.<sup>m</sup>

Jehoram Punished. <sup>12</sup>A letter came to him from Elijah* the prophet with this message: "Thus says the LORD, the God of David your father: Because you have not walked in the way of your father Jehoshaphat, nor of Asa, king of Judah, <sup>13</sup>but instead have walked in the way of the kings of Israel, leading Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem into prostitution, like the harlotries of the house of Ahab, and because you have killed your brothers of your father's house, who were better than you, <sup>14</sup>the LORD will strike your people, your children, your wives, and all that is yours with a great plague. <sup>15</sup>You shall have severe pains from a disease in your bowels, which will fall out because of the disease, day after day.”

<sup>19</sup>Some time later, after a period of two years had elapsed, his bowels fell out because of the disease and he died in great pain. His people did not make a fire for him as they had for his ancestors. <sup>20</sup>He was thirty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. He departed unloved; and they buried him in the City of David, though not in the tombs of the kings.<sup>P</sup>

CHAPTER 22

Ahaziah. <sup>1q</sup> Then the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah, his youngest son, king to succeed him, since all the older sons had been killed by the band that had come into the camp with the Arabians. Thus Ahaziah, son of Jehoram, reigned as the king of Judah. <sup>2</sup>Ahaziah was twenty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Athaliah, daughter of Omri. <sup>3</sup>He, too, walked in the ways of the house of Ahab, because his mother was his counselor in doing evil. <sup>4</sup>To his own destruction, he did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, like the house of Ahab, since they were his counselors after the death of his father.

<sup>5</sup>He was also following their counsel when he joined Jehoram, son of Ahab, king of Israel, in battle against Hazael, king of Aram, at Ramoth-gilead, where the Arameans wounded Jehoram. <sup>6</sup>He returned to Jezreel to be healed of the wounds that had been inflicted on him at Ramah in his battle against Hazael, king of Aram. Then Ahaziah, son of Jehoram, king of Judah, went down to Jezreel to visit Jehoram, son of Ahab, for he was sick. <sup>7</sup>Now from God came Ahaziah's downfall, that he should join Jehoram; for after his arrival he rode out with Jehoram to Jehu, son of Nimshi, whom the LORD had anointed to cut down the house of Ahab.<sup>r</sup> <sup>8</sup>While Jehu was executing judgment on the house of Ahab, he also came upon the princes of Judah and the nephews of Ahaziah who were his attendants, and he killed them.<sup>s</sup> <sup>9</sup>Then he looked for Ahaziah himself. They caught him hiding in Samaria and brought him to Jehu, who put him to death. They buried him, for they said, "He was the grandson of Jehoshaphat, who sought the LORD with his whole heart."<sup>t</sup> Now the house of Ahaziah did not retain the power of kingship.*

Usurpation of Athaliah. <sup>10u</sup> When Athaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she began to kill off the whole royal family of the house of Judah. <sup>11</sup>But Jehosheba, a daughter of the king, took Joash, Ahaziah's son, and spirited him away from among the king's sons who were about to be slain, and put him and his nurse in a bedroom. In this way Jehosheba, the daughter of King Jehoram, a sister of Ahaziah and wife of Jehoiada the priest, concealed the child from Athaliah, so that she did not put him to death. <sup>12</sup>For six years he remained hidden with them in the house of God, while Athaliah ruled as queen over the land.

CHAPTER 23

Athaliah Overthrown. <sup>1v</sup> In the seventh year, Jehoiada took courage and brought into covenant with himself the captains: Azariah, son of Jehoram; Ishmael, son of Jehohanan; Azariah, son of Obed; Maaseiah, son of Adaiah; and Elishaphat, son of Zichri. <sup>2</sup>They journeyed about Judah, gathering the Levites from all the cities of Judah and also the heads of the Israelite families, and they came to Jerusalem. <sup>3</sup>The whole assembly made a covenant with the king in the house of God. Jehoiada said to them: “Here is the king’s son who must reign, as the LORD promised concerning the sons of David. <sup>4</sup>This is what you must do: a third of your number, both priests and Levites, who come on duty on the sabbath must guard the thresholds, <sup>5</sup>another third must be at the king’s house, and the final third at the Foundation Gate, when all the people will be in the courts of the LORD’s house. <sup>6</sup>Let no one enter the LORD’s house except the priests and those Levites who are ministering. They may enter because they are holy; but all the other people must observe the prescriptions of the LORD. <sup>7</sup>The Levites shall surround the king on all sides, each with drawn weapon. Whoever tries to enter the house is to be killed. Stay with the king wherever he goes.”

leading the acclaim, Athaliah tore her garments, saying, "Treason! treason!"

<sup>14</sup>Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains in command of the force: "Escort her with a guard detail. If anyone follows her, let him die by the sword." For the priest had said, "You must not put her to death in the house of the LORD." <sup>15</sup>So they seized her, and when she reached the Horse Gate of the royal palace, they put her to death.

<sup>16</sup>Then Jehoiada made a covenant between himself and all the people and the king, that they should be the LORD's people. <sup>17</sup>Thereupon all the people went to the temple of Baal and demolished it. They shattered its altars and images completely, and killed Mattan, the priest of Baal, before the altars. <sup>18</sup>Then Jehoiada gave the charge of the LORD's house into the hands of the levitical priests, to whom David had assigned turns in the LORD's house for sacrificing the burnt offerings of the LORD, as is written in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and song, as David had provided.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Moreover, he stationed guards at the gates of the LORD's house so that no one unclean in any respect might enter. <sup>20</sup>Then he took the captains, the nobles, the rulers among the people, and all the people of the land, and led the king out of the LORD's house; they came within the upper gate of the king's house, and seated the king upon the royal throne. <sup>21</sup>All the people of the land rejoiced and the city was quiet, now that Athaliah had been slain with the sword.

CHAPTER 24

The Temple Restored. <sup>1y</sup> Joash was seven years old when he became king, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zibiah, from Beer-sheba. <sup>2</sup>Joash did what was right in the LORD's sight as long as Jehoiada the priest lived. <sup>3</sup>Jehoiada provided him with two wives, and he became the father of sons and daughters.

<sup>4</sup>After some time, Joash decided to restore the house of the LORD. <sup>5</sup>He gathered together the priests and Levites and said to them: "Go out to all the cities of Judah and gather money* from all Israel that you may repair the house of your God over the years. You must hurry this project." But the Levites did not. <sup>6</sup>Then the king summoned Jehoiada, who was in charge, and said to him: "Why have you not required the Levites to bring in from Judah and Jerusalem the tax levied by Moses, the servant of the LORD, and by the assembly of Israel, for the tent of the testimony?"<sup>z</sup> <sup>7</sup>For the wicked Athaliah and her sons had damaged the house of God and had even turned over to the Baals the holy things of the LORD's house.

<sup>8</sup>At the king's command, therefore, they made a chest, which they put outside the gate of the LORD's house.<sup>a</sup> <sup>9</sup>They had it proclaimed throughout Judah and Jerusalem that the tax which Moses, the servant of God, had imposed on Israel in the wilderness should be brought to the LORD.<sup>b</sup> <sup>10</sup>All the princes and the people rejoiced; they brought what was asked and cast it into the chest until it was filled. <sup>11</sup>Whenever the chest was brought to the royal officials by the Levites and they noticed that there was a large amount of money, the royal scribe and an overseer for the chief priest would come up, empty the chest, and then take it back and return it to its place. This they did day after day until they had collected a large sum of money. <sup>12</sup>Then the king and Jehoiada gave it to the workers in charge of the labor on the LORD's house, who hired masons and carpenters to restore the LORD's house, and also iron- and bronze-smiths to repair it. <sup>13</sup>The workers labored, and the task of restoration progressed under their hands. They restored the house of God according to its original form, and reinforced it. <sup>14</sup>After they had finished, they brought the rest of the money to the king and to Jehoiada, who had it made into utensils for the house of the LORD, utensils for the service and the burnt offerings, and basins and other gold and silver utensils.* They sacrificed burnt offerings in the LORD's house continually all the days of Jehoiada. <sup>15</sup>Jehoiada grew old, full of years, and died; he was a hundred and thirty years old. <sup>16</sup>They buried him in the City of David with the kings, because of the good he had done in Israel, especially for God and his house.

Joash's Apostasy. <sup>17</sup>After the death of Jehoiada, the princes of Judah came and paid homage to the king; then the king listened to them. <sup>18</sup>They abandoned the house of the LORD, the God of their ancestors, and began to serve the asherahs and the idols;<sup>c</sup> and because of this crime of theirs, wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>19</sup>Although prophets were sent to them to turn them back to the LORD and to warn them, the people would not listen. <sup>20d</sup> Then the spirit of God clothed Zechariah, son of Jehoiada the priest. He took his stand above the people and said to them: "Thus says God, Why are you transgressing the LORD's commands, so that you cannot prosper? Because you have abandoned the LORD, he has abandoned you." <sup>21</sup>But they conspired against him, and at the king's command they stoned him in the court of the house of the LORD. <sup>22</sup>Thus King Joash was unmindful of the devotion shown him by Jehoiada, Zechariah's father, and killed the son. As he was dying, he said, "May the LORD see and avenge."

Joash Punished. <sup>23</sup>At the turn of the year a force of Arameans came up against Joash. They invaded Judah and Jerusalem, killed all the princes of the people, and sent all their spoil to the king of Damascus.<sup>e</sup> <sup>24</sup>Though the Aramean force was small, the LORD handed over a very large force into their power,<sup>f</sup> because Judah had abandoned the LORD, the God of their ancestors. So judgment was meted out to Joash. <sup>25g</sup> After the Arameans had departed from him, abandoning him to his many injuries, his servants conspired against him because of the murder of the son of Jehoiada the priest. They killed him on his sickbed. He was buried in the City of David, but not in the tombs of the kings.

<sup>26</sup>Those who conspired against him were Zabad, son of Shimeath from Ammon, and Jehozabad, son of Shimrith from Moab. <sup>27</sup>An account of his sons, the great tribute imposed on him, and his rebuilding of the house of God is written in the midrash of the book of the kings. His son Amaziah succeeded him as king.<sup>h</sup>

CHAPTER 25

Amaziah's Good Start. <sup>1i</sup> Amaziah was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jehoaddan, from Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's sight, though not wholeheartedly. <sup>3</sup>When he had the kingdom firmly in hand, he struck down the officials who had struck down the king, his father. <sup>4</sup>But their children he did not put to death, for he acted according to what is written in the law, in the Book of Moses, which the LORD commanded: "Parents shall not be put to death for their children, nor shall children be put to death for their parents; they shall each die for their own sin."<sup>j</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Amaziah gathered Judah and placed them, out of all Judah and Benjamin according to their ancestral houses, under leaders of thousands and of hundreds. When he made a count of those twenty years old and over, he found that there were three hundred thousand picked men fit for war, capable of handling lance and shield. <sup>6</sup>He also hired a hundred thousand valiant warriors from Israel for a hundred talents of silver. <sup>7</sup>But a man of God came to him and said: "O king, let not the army of Israel go with you, for the LORD is not with Israel—with any Ephraimite. <sup>8</sup>Instead, go on your own, strongly prepared for the battle; why should the LORD hinder you in the face of the enemy: for with God is power to help or to hinder." <sup>9</sup>Amaziah answered the man of God, "But what is to be done about the hundred talents that I paid for the troops of Israel?" The man of God replied, "The LORD can give you much more than that." <sup>10</sup>Amaziah then disbanded the troops that had come to him from Ephraim, and sent them home. But they became furiously angry with Judah, and returned home blazing with anger.

Amaziah's Apostasy. <sup>14</sup>When Amaziah returned from his conquest of the Edomites he brought back with him the gods of the people of Seir. He set these up as his own gods; he bowed down before them and offered sacrifice to them. <sup>15</sup>Then the anger of the LORD blazed out against Amaziah, and he sent a prophet to him who said: "Why have you sought this people's gods that could not deliver their own people from your power?" <sup>16</sup>While he was still speaking, however, the king said to him: "Have you been appointed the king's counselor? Stop! Why should you have to be killed?" Therefore the prophet stopped. But he said, "I know that God's counsel is your destruction, for by doing this you have refused to listen to my counsel."

Amaziah Punished. <sup>17</sup> Having taken counsel, Amaziah, king of Judah, sent word to Joash, son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, the king of Israel, saying, "Come, let us meet face to face." <sup>18</sup>Joash, king of Israel, sent this reply to Amaziah, king of Judah: "A thistle of Lebanon sent word to a cedar of Lebanon, 'Give your daughter to my son in marriage,' but an animal of Lebanon passed by and trampled the thistle underfoot." <sup>m</sup> <sup>19</sup>You are thinking,

'See, I have struck down Edom!'
Your heart is lifted up,
And glories in it. Stay home!
Why bring misfortune and failure on yourself and on Judah with you?"

<sup>20</sup>But Amaziah did not listen; for it was God's doing that they be handed over because they sought the gods of Edom.

<sup>21</sup>So Joash, king of Israel, advanced, and he and Amaziah, king of Judah, met face to face at Beth-shemesh of Judah, <sup>22</sup>and Judah was defeated by Israel, and all fled to their tents. <sup>23</sup>But Amaziah, king of Judah, son of Joash, son of Jehoahaz, was captured by Joash, king of Israel, at Beth-shemesh. Joash brought him to Jerusalem and tore down the wall of Jerusalem from the Gate of Ephraim to the Corner Gate, four hundred cubits. <sup>24</sup>He took all the gold and silver and all the vessels found in the house of God with Obed-edom,* and in the treasuries of the king's house, and hostages as well. Then he returned to Samaria.

first and last, are recorded in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.
<sup>27</sup>Now from the time that Amaziah turned away from the LORD, a conspiracy was formed against him in Jerusalem, and he fled to Lachish. But he was pursued to Lachish and killed there. <sup>28</sup>He was brought back on horses and was buried with his ancestors in the City of Judah.*

CHAPTER 26

Uzziah's Projects. <sup>10</sup> All the people of Judah took Uzziah, who was only sixteen years old, and made him king to succeed Amaziah his father. <sup>2</sup>It was he who rebuilt Elath and restored it to Judah, after the king rested with his ancestors. <sup>3</sup>Uzziah was sixteen years old when he became king, and he reigned fifty-two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jecoliah, from Jerusalem. <sup>4</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's sight, just as his father Amaziah had done.

<sup>5</sup>He was prepared to seek God as long as Zechariah* lived,<sup>p</sup> who taught him to fear God; and as long as he sought the LORD, God made him prosper. <sup>6</sup>He went out and fought the Philistines and razed the walls of Gath, Jabneh, and Ashdod, and built cities in the district of Ashdod and in Philistia.<sup>q</sup> <sup>7</sup>God helped him against the Philistines, against the Arabians who dwelt in Gurbaal, and against the Meunites. <sup>8</sup>The Ammonites paid tribute to Uzziah and his fame spread as far as Egypt, for he grew stronger and stronger. <sup>9</sup>Moreover, Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the Corner Gate, at the Valley Gate, and at the Angle, and he fortified them. <sup>10</sup>He built towers in the wilderness and dug numerous cisterns, for he had many cattle. He had plowmen in the Shephelah and the plains, farmers and vinedressers in the highlands and the garden land. He was a lover of the soil.

Pride and Fall. <sup>16</sup>But after he had become strong, he became arrogant to his own destruction and acted treacherously with the LORD, his God. He entered the temple of the LORD to make an offering on the altar of incense. <sup>17</sup>But Azariah the priest, and with him eighty other priests of the LORD, courageous men, followed him. <sup>18</sup>They stood up to King Uzziah, saying to him: “It is not for you, Uzziah, to burn incense to the LORD, but for the priests, the sons of Aaron, who have been consecrated for this purpose.<sup>r</sup> Leave the sanctuary, for you have acted treacherously and no longer have a part in the glory that comes from the LORD God.” <sup>19</sup>Uzziah, who was holding a censer for burning the incense, became angry. But at the very moment he showed his anger to the priests, while they were looking at him in the house of the LORD beside the altar of incense, leprosy broke out on his forehead.<sup>s</sup> <sup>20</sup>Azariah the chief priest and all the other priests examined him, and when they saw that his forehead was leprous, they rushed him out. He let himself be expelled, for the LORD had afflicted him. <sup>21</sup><sup>t</sup> King Uzziah remained a leper till the day he died. As a leper he lived in a house apart, for he was excluded from the house of the LORD. Therefore his son Jotham was master of the palace and ruled the people of the land.

<sup>22</sup>The rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, were written by Isaiah the prophet, son of Amoz. <sup>23</sup>Uzziah rested with his ancestors and was buried with them in the field adjoining the royal cemetery, for they said, “He was a leper.” His son Jotham succeeded him as king.

CHAPTER 27

Jotham. <sup>1u</sup> Jotham was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jerusha, daughter of Zadok. <sup>2</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's sight, just as his father Uzziah had done, though he did not enter the temple of the LORD. The people, however, continued to act corruptly.

<sup>3</sup>It was he who built the Upper Gate of the LORD's house and did much construction on the wall of Ophel. <sup>4</sup>Moreover, he built cities in the hill country of Judah, and in the wooded areas he set up fortresses and towers. <sup>5</sup>He fought with the king of the Ammonites and conquered them. That year the Ammonites paid him one hundred talents of silver, together with ten thousand kors of wheat and ten thousand of barley. They brought the same to him also in the second and in the third year. <sup>6</sup>Thus Jotham continued to grow strong because he made sure to walk before the LORD, his God. <sup>7v</sup> The rest of the acts of Jotham, his wars and his activities, are recorded in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah. <sup>8</sup>He was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. <sup>9</sup>Jotham rested with his ancestors and was buried in the City of David, and his son Ahaz succeeded him as king.

CHAPTER 28

Ahaz's Misdeeds. <sup>1w</sup> Ahaz was twenty years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. He did not do what was right in the sight of the LORD as David his father had done. <sup>2</sup>He walked in the ways of the kings of Israel and even made molten idols for the Baals. <sup>3</sup>Moreover, he offered sacrifice in the Valley of Ben-hinnom, and immolated his children by fire in accordance with the abominable practices of the nations whom the LORD had dispossessed before the Israelites.<sup>x</sup> <sup>4</sup>He sacrificed and burned incense on the high places, on hills, and under every green tree.

Ahaz Punished. <sup>5*</sup> Therefore the LORD, his God, delivered him into the power of the king of Aram. The Arameans defeated him and carried away captive a large number of his people, whom they brought to Damascus. He was also delivered into the power of the king of Israel, who defeated him with great slaughter.<sup>y</sup> <sup>6</sup>For Pekah, son of Remaliah, killed one hundred and twenty thousand of Judah in a single day, all of them valiant men, because they had abandoned the LORD, the God of their ancestors. <sup>7</sup>Zichri, an Ephraimite warrior, killed Maaseiah, the king's son, and Azrikam, the master of the palace, and also Elkanah, who was second to the king. <sup>8</sup>The Israelites took away as captives two hundred thousand of their kinfolk's wives, sons, and daughters; they also took from them much plunder, which they brought to Samaria.

Oded's Prophecy. <sup>9</sup>In Samaria there was a prophet of the LORD by the name of Oded. He went out to meet the army returning to Samaria and said to them: "It was because the LORD, the God of your ancestors, was angry with Judah that he delivered them into your power. You, however, have killed them with a fury that has reached up to heaven. <sup>10</sup>And now you are planning to subjugate the people of Judah and Jerusalem as your slaves and bondwomen. Are not you yourselves, therefore, guilty of a crime against the LORD, your God? <sup>11</sup>Now listen to me: send back the captives you have carried off from among your kin, for the burning anger of the LORD is upon you."

of Hadlai, themselves stood up in opposition to those who had returned from the war. <sup>13</sup>They said to them: “Do not bring the captives here, for what you are planning will make us guilty before the LORD and increase our sins and our guilt. Great is our guilt, and there is burning anger upon Israel.” <sup>14</sup>Therefore the soldiers left their captives and the plunder before the princes and the whole assembly. <sup>15</sup>Then the men just named proceeded to help the captives. All of them who were naked they clothed from the spoils; they clothed them, put sandals on their feet, gave them food and drink, anointed them, and all who were weak they set on donkeys. They brought them to Jericho, the City of Palms, to their kinfolk. Then they returned to Samaria.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>22</sup>While he was already in distress, the same King Ahaz increased his treachery to the LORD. <sup>23</sup>He sacrificed to the gods of Damascus who had defeated him, saying, “Since it was the gods of the kings of Aram who helped them, I will sacrifice to them that they may help me also.” However, they only furthered his downfall and that of all Israel.<sup>e</sup> <sup>24</sup>Ahaz gathered up the utensils of God’s house and broke them in pieces. He closed the doors of the LORD’s house and made altars for himself in every corner of Jerusalem.<sup>f</sup> <sup>25</sup>In every city throughout Judah he set up high places to offer sacrifice to other gods. Thus he provoked the LORD, the God of his ancestors, to anger.

was buried in Jerusalem— in the city, for they did not bring him to the tombs of the kings of Israel. His son Hezekiah succeeded him as king.

CHAPTER 29

Hezekiah's Reforms. <sup>1h</sup> Hezekiah was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Abijah, daughter of Zechariah. <sup>2</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's sight, just as David his father had done. <sup>3</sup>In the first month of the first year of his reign, he opened the doors of the LORD's house and repaired them.<sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>He summoned the priests and Levites, gathering them in the open space to the east, <sup>5</sup>and said to them: "Listen to me, you Levites! Sanctify yourselves now and sanctify the house of the LORD, the God of your ancestors, and clean out the filth from the sanctuary. <sup>6</sup>Our ancestors acted treacherously and did what was evil in the eyes of the LORD, our God. They abandoned him, turned away their faces from the LORD's dwelling, and turned their backs on him. <sup>7</sup>They also closed the doors of the vestibule, extinguished the lamps, and failed to burn incense and sacrifice burnt offerings in the sanctuary to the God of Israel.<sup>j</sup> <sup>8k</sup> Therefore the anger of the LORD has come upon Judah and Jerusalem; he has made them an object of terror, horror, and hissing, as you see with your own eyes. <sup>9</sup>For our ancestors fell by the sword, and our sons, our daughters, and our wives have been taken captive because of this. <sup>10</sup>Now, I intend to make a covenant with the LORD, the God of Israel, that his burning anger may turn away from us. <sup>11</sup>My sons, do not be negligent any longer, for it is you whom the LORD has chosen to stand before him, to minister to him, to be his ministers and to offer incense."

<sup>12</sup>Then the Levites arose: Mahath, son of Amasai, and Joel, son of Azariah, of the Kohathites; of the descendants of Merari: Kish, son of Abdi, and Azariah, son of Jehallel; of the Gershonites: Joah, son of Zimmah, and Eden, son of Joah; <sup>13</sup>of the sons of Elizaphan: Shimri and Jeuel; of the sons of Asaph: Zechariah and Mattaniah; <sup>14</sup>of the sons of Heman: Jehuel and Shimei; of the sons of Jeduthun: Shemiah and Uzziel. <sup>15</sup>They gathered their kinfolk together and sanctified themselves; then they came as the king had ordered, in keeping with the words of the LORD, to cleanse the LORD's house.

<sup>18</sup>Then they went inside to King Hezekiah and said: "We have cleansed the entire house of the LORD, the altar for burnt offerings with all its utensils, and the table for the showbread with all its utensils. <sup>19</sup>We have restored and consecrated all the articles which King Ahaz had thrown away during his reign because of his treachery; they are now before the LORD's altar."

The Rite of Expiation. <sup>20</sup>Then King Hezekiah hastened to convoke the princes of the city and went up to the LORD's house. <sup>21</sup>Seven bulls, seven rams, seven lambs, and seven he-goats were presented as a purification offering for the kingdom, for the sanctuary, and for Judah. Hezekiah ordered the sons of Aaron, the priests, to offer them on the altar of the LORD. <sup>22</sup>They slaughtered the bulls, and the priests collected the blood and splashed it on the altar. Then they slaughtered the rams and splashed the blood on the altar; then they slaughtered the lambs and splashed the blood on the altar. <sup>23</sup>Then the he-goats for the purification offering were led before the king and the assembly, who laid their hands upon them. <sup>24</sup>The priests then slaughtered them and offered their blood on the altar to atone for the sin of all Israel. For the king had said, "The burnt offering and the purification offering are for all Israel."

offering had been completed. <sup>29</sup>Once the burnt offering was completed, the king and all who were with him knelt and worshiped. <sup>30</sup>King Hezekiah and the princes then told the Levites to sing the praises of the LORD in the words of David and of Asaph the seer. They sang praises till their joy was full, then fell down and worshiped.

<sup>31</sup>Hezekiah then said: “You have dedicated yourselves to the LORD. Approach, and bring forward the sacrifices and thank offerings for the house of the LORD.” Then the assembly brought forward the sacrifices and thank offerings and all their voluntary burnt offerings. <sup>32</sup>The number of burnt offerings that the assembly brought forward was seventy oxen, one hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all of these as a burnt offering to the LORD. <sup>33</sup>As consecrated gifts there were six hundred oxen and three thousand sheep. <sup>34</sup>Since there were too few priests to skin all the victims for the burnt offerings, their fellow Levites assisted them until the task was completed and the priests had sanctified themselves. The Levites, in fact, were more careful than the priests to sanctify themselves. <sup>35</sup>The burnt offerings were indeed many, along with the fat of the communion offerings and the libations for the burnt offerings. Thus the service of the house of the LORD was re-established. <sup>36</sup>Hezekiah and all the people rejoiced over what God had re-established for the people, and at how suddenly this had been done.

CHAPTER 30

Invitation to Passover. <sup>1</sup>Hezekiah sent word to all Israel and Judah, and even wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasseh, saying that they should come to the house of the LORD in Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover to the LORD, the God of Israel.<sup>m 2n</sup> The king, his princes, and the entire assembly in Jerusalem had agreed to celebrate the Passover during the second month.<sup>3</sup> They could not celebrate it at the regular time because the priests had not sanctified themselves in sufficient numbers, and the people were not gathered at Jerusalem. <sup>4</sup>This seemed right to the king and the entire assembly, <sup>5</sup>and they issued a decree to be proclaimed throughout all Israel from Beer-sheba to Dan, that everyone should come to celebrate the Passover to the LORD, the God of Israel, in Jerusalem; for not many had kept it in the prescribed manner. <sup>6</sup>By the king's command, the couriers, with the letters written by the king and his princes, went through all Israel and Judah. They said: "Israelites, return to the LORD, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, that he may return to you, the remnant left from the hands of the Assyrian kings. <sup>7</sup>Do not be like your ancestors and your kin who acted treacherously toward the LORD, the God of their ancestors, so that he handed them over to desolation, as you yourselves now see.<sup>o</sup> <sup>8</sup>Do not be stiffnecked, as your ancestors were; stretch out your hands to the LORD and come to his sanctuary that he has consecrated forever, and serve the LORD, your God, that he may turn his burning anger from you. <sup>9</sup>If you return to the LORD, your kinfolk and your children will find mercy with their captors and return to this land. The LORD, your God, is gracious and merciful and he will not turn away his face from you if you return to him."<sup>p</sup>

<sup>10</sup>So the couriers passed from city to city in the land of Ephraim and Manasseh and as far as Zebulun, but they were derided and scoffed at. <sup>11</sup>Nevertheless, some from Asher, Manasseh, and Zebulun humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem. <sup>12</sup>In Judah, however, the hand of God brought it about that the people were of one heart to carry out the command of the king and the princes by the word of the LORD. <sup>13</sup>Thus many people gathered in Jerusalem to celebrate the feast of Unleavened Bread in the second month; it was a very great assembly.

Passover Celebrated. <sup>14</sup>They proceeded to remove the altars that were in Jerusalem as well as all the altars of incense, and cast them into the Wadi Kidron.<sup>q</sup> <sup>15</sup>They slaughtered the Passover on the fourteenth day of the second month. The priests and Levites were shamed into sanctifying themselves and brought burnt offerings into the house of the LORD. <sup>16</sup>They stood in the places prescribed for them according to the law of Moses, the man of God. The priests splashed the blood given them by the Levites; <sup>17</sup>for many in the assembly had not sanctified themselves, and the Levites were in charge of slaughtering the Passover victims for all who were unclean so as to consecrate them to the LORD.<sup>r</sup> <sup>18</sup>The greater part of the people, in fact, chiefly from Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves. Nevertheless they ate the Passover, contrary to the prescription; because Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, “May the good LORD grant pardon to <sup>19</sup>all who have set their heart to seek God, the LORD, the God of their ancestors, even though they are not clean as holiness requires.” <sup>20</sup>The LORD heard Hezekiah and healed the people.

<sup>21</sup>Thus the Israelites who were in Jerusalem celebrated the feast of Unleavened Bread with great rejoicing for seven days, and the Levites and the priests sang the praises of the LORD day after day with all their strength. <sup>22</sup>Hezekiah spoke encouragingly to all the Levites who had shown themselves well skilled in the service of the LORD. And when they had completed the seven days of festival, sacrificing communion offerings and singing praises to the LORD, the God of their ancestors, <sup>23</sup>the whole assembly agreed to celebrate another seven days. So with joy they celebrated seven days more. <sup>24</sup>King Hezekiah of Judah had contributed a thousand bulls and seven thousand sheep to the assembly, and the princes a thousand bulls and ten thousand sheep. The priests sanctified themselves in great numbers, <sup>25</sup>and the whole assembly of Judah rejoiced, together with the priests and Levites and the rest of the assembly that had come from Israel, as well as the resident aliens from the land of Israel and those that lived in Judah. <sup>26</sup>There was great rejoicing in Jerusalem, for since the days of Solomon, son of David, king of Israel, there had been nothing like it in the city. <sup>27</sup>Then the levitical priests rose and blessed the people; their voice was heard and their prayer reached heaven, God’s holy dwelling.

CHAPTER 31

Liturgical Reforms. <sup>1</sup>After all this was over, those Israelites who had been present went forth to the cities of Judah and smashed the sacred pillars, cut down the asherahs, and tore down the high places and altars throughout Judah, Benjamin, Ephraim, and Manasseh, until they were all destroyed.<sup>s</sup> Then the Israelites returned to their cities, each to his own possession.

<sup>5</sup>As soon as the order was promulgated, the Israelites brought, in great quantities, the best of their grain, wine, oil, and honey, and all the produce of the fields; they gave a generous tithe of everything.<sup>u</sup> <sup>6</sup>Israelites and Judahites living in other cities of Judah also brought in tithes of oxen, sheep, and votive offerings consecrated to the LORD, their God; these they brought in and heaped up in piles.<sup>v</sup> <sup>7</sup>It was in the third month that they began to establish these heaps, and they completed them in the seventh month.* <sup>8</sup>When Hezekiah and the princes had come and seen the piles, they blessed the LORD and his people Israel. <sup>9</sup>Then Hezekiah questioned the priests and the Levites concerning the piles, <sup>10</sup>and the priest Azariah, head of the house of Zadok, answered him, “Since they began to bring the offerings to the house of the LORD, we have eaten, been satisfied, and had much left over, for the LORD has blessed his people. This great supply is what was left over.”<sup>w</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Hezekiah then gave orders that chambers be constructed in the house of the LORD. When this had been done, <sup>12</sup>they deposited the offerings, tithes, and votive offerings there for safekeeping. The overseer of these things was Conaniah the Levite, and his brother Shimei was second in command. <sup>13</sup>Jehiel, Azaziah, Nahath, Asahel, Jerimoth, Jozabad, Eliel, Ismachiah, Mahath, and Benaiah were supervisors subject to Conaniah the Levite and his brother Shimei by appointment of King Hezekiah and of Azariah, the prefect of the house of God. <sup>14</sup>Kore, the son of Imnah, a Levite and the keeper of the eastern gate, was in charge of the voluntary offerings made to God; he distributed the offerings made to the LORD and the most holy of the votive offerings. <sup>15</sup>Under him in the priestly cities were Eden, Miniamin, Jeshua, Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, who faithfully made the distribution to their brothers, great and small alike, according to their divisions.

<sup>16</sup>There was also a register by ancestral houses of males three years of age* and over, for all priests who were eligible to enter the house of the LORD according to the daily schedule to fulfill their service in the order of their divisions.<sup>x</sup> <sup>17</sup>The priests were inscribed in their family records according to their ancestral houses, as were the Levites twenty years of age and over according to their various offices and divisions.<sup>y</sup> <sup>18</sup>A distribution was also made to all who were inscribed in the family records, for their little ones, wives, sons and daughters—thus for the entire assembly, since they were to sanctify themselves by sharing faithfully in the votive offerings. <sup>19</sup>The sons of Aaron, the priests who lived on the lands attached to their cities, had in every city men designated by name to distribute portions to every male of the priests and to every Levite listed in the family records.

<sup>20</sup>Hezekiah did this in all Judah. He did what was good, upright, and faithful before the LORD, his God. <sup>21</sup>Everything that he undertook, for the service of the house of God or for the law and the commandment, was to seek his God. He did this with all his heart, and he prospered.<sup>z</sup>

Sennacherib's Invasion. <sup>1</sup>But after all this and all Hezekiah's fidelity, there came Sennacherib, king of Assyria. He invaded Judah and besieged the fortified cities, intending to breach and take them.<sup>a</sup> <sup>2</sup>When Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was coming with the intention of attacking Jerusalem, <sup>3</sup>he took the advice of his princes and warriors to stop the waters of the springs outside the city; they promised their help. <sup>4b</sup> A large force was gathered and stopped all the springs and also the stream running nearby. For they said, "Why should the kings of Assyria come and find an abundance of water?" <sup>5</sup>He then looked to his defenses: he rebuilt the wall where it was broken down, raised towers upon it, and built another wall outside.<sup>c</sup> He strengthened the Millo of the City of David and made a great number of spears and shields. <sup>6</sup>Then he appointed army commanders over the people. He gathered them together in his presence in the open space at the gate of the city and encouraged them with these words: <sup>7</sup>"Be strong and steadfast; do not be afraid or dismayed because of the king of Assyria and all the horde coming with him, for there is more with us than with him."<sup>d</sup> <sup>8</sup>He has only an arm of flesh, but we have the LORD, our God, to help us and to fight our battles."<sup>e</sup> And the people took confidence from the words of Hezekiah, king of Judah.

Threat of Sennacherib. <sup>9f</sup> After this, while Sennacherib, king of Assyria, himself remained at Lachish with all his forces, he sent his officials to Jerusalem with this message for Hezekiah, king of Judah, and all the Judahites who were in Jerusalem: <sup>10</sup>"Thus says Sennacherib, king of Assyria: In what are you trusting, now that you are under siege in Jerusalem? <sup>11</sup>Is not Hezekiah deceiving you, delivering you over to a death of famine and thirst, by his claim that 'the LORD, our God, will rescue us from the grasp of the king of Assyria'? <sup>12</sup>Has not this same Hezekiah removed the Lord's own high places and altars and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, 'You shall bow down before one altar only, and on it alone you shall offer incense'? <sup>13</sup>Do you not know what my fathers and I have done to all the peoples of other lands? Were the gods of the nations in those lands able to rescue their lands from my hand? <sup>14</sup>Who among all the gods of those nations which my fathers put under the ban was able to rescue their people from my hand? Will your god, then, be able to rescue you from my hand?

<sup>15</sup>Let not Hezekiah mislead you further and deceive you in any such way. Do not believe him! Since no other god of any other nation or kingdom has been able to rescue his people from my hand or the hands of my fathers, how much the less shall your god rescue you from my hand!”

Exile of Northern Kingdom

<sup>16</sup>His officials said still more against the LORD God and against his servant Hezekiah, <sup>17</sup>for he had written letters to deride the LORD, the God of Israel, speaking of him in these terms: “As the gods of the nations in other lands have not rescued their people from my hand, neither shall Hezekiah’s god rescue his people from my hand.”<sup>g</sup> <sup>18</sup>In a loud voice they shouted in the language of Judah to the people of Jerusalem who were on the wall, to frighten and terrify them so that they might capture their city. <sup>19</sup>They spoke of the God of Israel as though he were one of the gods of the other peoples of the earth, a work of human hands. <sup>20</sup>But because of this, King Hezekiah and Isaiah the prophet, son of Amoz, prayed and cried out to heaven.<sup>h</sup>

Sennacherib's Defeat. <sup>21</sup>Then the LORD sent an angel, who destroyed every warrior, leader, and commander in the camp of the Assyrian king, so that he had to return shamefaced to his own country. And when he entered the temple of his god, some of his own offspring struck him down there with the sword.<sup>i</sup> <sup>22</sup>Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib, king of Assyria, as from every other power; he gave them rest on every side. <sup>23</sup>Many brought gifts for the LORD to Jerusalem and costly objects for Hezekiah, king of Judah, who thereafter was exalted in the eyes of all the nations.<sup>j</sup>

Hezekiah's Later Reign. <sup>24</sup>In those days Hezekiah became mortally ill. He prayed to the LORD, who answered him by giving him a sign.<sup>k</sup> <sup>25</sup>Hezekiah, however, did not respond with like generosity, for he had become arrogant. Therefore wrath descended upon him and upon Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>26l</sup> But then Hezekiah humbled himself for his pride—both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and therefore the wrath of the LORD did not come upon them during the time of Hezekiah.

<sup>27m</sup> Hezekiah possessed very great wealth and glory. He made treasuries for his silver, gold, precious stones, spices, jewels, and other precious things of all kinds; <sup>28</sup>also storehouses for the harvest of grain, for wine and oil, and barns for the various kinds of cattle and flocks. <sup>29</sup>He built cities for himself, and he acquired sheep and oxen in great numbers, for God gave him very great riches. <sup>30</sup>This same Hezekiah stopped the upper outlet for water from Gihon and redirected it underground westward to the City of David. Hezekiah prospered in all his works.<sup>n</sup> <sup>31</sup>Nevertheless, in respect to the ambassadors of the Babylonian officials who were sent to him to investigate the sign that had occurred in the land, God abandoned him as a test, to know all that was in his heart.

CHAPTER 33

Manasseh's Impiety. <sup>1o</sup> Manasseh was twelve years old when he became king, and he reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight, following the abominable practices of the nations whom the LORD dispossessed before the Israelites. <sup>3</sup>He rebuilt the high places which Hezekiah his father had torn down.

He set up altars to the Baals, and also made asherahs. He bowed down to the whole host of heaven and served them. <sup>4</sup>He built altars in the house of the LORD, of which the LORD had said: In Jerusalem shall my name be forever; <sup>5</sup>and he built altars to the whole host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD. <sup>6</sup>It was he, too, who immolated his children by fire in the Valley of Ben-hinnom. He practiced soothsaying and divination, and reintroduced the consulting of ghosts and spirits.

He did much evil in the LORD's sight and provoked him to anger. <sup>7</sup>An idol he had made he placed in the house of God, of which God had said to David and to his son Solomon: In this house and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, I shall set my name forever. <sup>8</sup>I will no longer make Israel step out of the land I assigned to your ancestors, provided that they are careful to observe all I commanded them, the entire law, the statutes, and the ordinances given by Moses.

Manasseh's Conversion. <sup>11p</sup> Therefore the LORD brought against them the army commanders of the Assyrian king; they captured Manasseh with hooks, shackled him with chains, and transported him to Babylon. * <sup>12</sup>In his distress, he began to appease the LORD, his God. He humbled himself abjectly before the God of his ancestors, <sup>13</sup>and prayed to him. * The LORD let himself be won over: he heard his prayer and restored him to his kingdom in Jerusalem. Then Manasseh knew that the LORD is indeed God.

<sup>14</sup>Afterward he built an outer wall for the City of David to the west of Gihon in the valley, extending to the Fish Gate and encircling Ophel; he built it very high. He stationed army officers in all the fortified cities of Judah. <sup>15</sup>He removed the foreign gods and the idol from the LORD's house and all the altars he had built on the mount of the LORD's house and in Jerusalem, and cast them outside the city.<sup>q</sup> <sup>16</sup>He restored the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed on it communion offerings and thank offerings, and commanded Judah to serve the LORD, the God of Israel. <sup>17</sup>Though the people continued to sacrifice on the high places, they now did so to the LORD, their God.

<sup>18r</sup> The rest of the acts of Manasseh, his prayer to his God, and the words of the seers who spoke to him in the name of the LORD, the God of Israel, are written in the chronicles of the kings of Israel. <sup>19</sup>His prayer and how his supplication was heard, all his sins and his treachery, the sites where he built high places and set up asherahs and carved images before he humbled himself, all this is recorded in the chronicles of his seers. <sup>20</sup>Manasseh rested with his ancestors and was buried in his own palace. His son Amon succeeded him as king.

Reign of Amon. <sup>21s</sup> Amon was twentytwo years old when he became king, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. <sup>22</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's sight, as his father Manasseh had done. Amon offered sacrifice to all the idols his father Manasseh had made, and served them. <sup>23</sup>Moreover, he did not humble himself before the LORD as his father Manasseh had humbled himself; on the contrary, Amon only increased his guilt. <sup>24</sup>His officials plotted against him and put him to death in his palace, <sup>25</sup>but the people of the land then slew all who had plotted against King Amon, and the people of the land made his son Josiah king in his stead.

CHAPTER 34

Josiah's Reforms. <sup>1t</sup> Josiah was eight years old when he became king, and he reigned thirty-one years in Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's sight, walking in the way of David his father, not turning right or left. <sup>3u</sup> In the eighth year of his reign, while he was still a youth, he began to seek after the God of David his father. Then in his twelfth year* he began to purify Judah and Jerusalem of the high places, the asherahs, and the carved and molten images. <sup>4</sup>In his presence, the altars of the Baals were torn down; the incense stands erected above them he broke down; the asherahs and the carved and molten images he smashed and beat into dust, which he scattered over the tombs of those who had sacrificed to them; <sup>5</sup>and the bones of the priests he burned upon their altars. Thus he purified Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>6</sup>He did likewise in the cities of Manasseh, Ephraim, Simeon, and in the ruined villages of the surrounding country as far as Naphtali; <sup>7</sup>he tore down the altars and asherahs, and the carved images he beat into dust, and broke down the incense stands throughout the land of Israel. Then he returned to Jerusalem.

The Temple Restored. <sup>8v</sup> In the eighteenth year of his reign, in order to purify the land and the temple, he sent Shaphan, son of Azaliah, Maaseiah, the ruler of the city, and Joah, son of Joahaz, the chancellor, to restore the house of the LORD, his God. <sup>9</sup>They came to Hilkiah the high priest and turned over the money brought to the house of God which the Levites, the guardians of the threshold, had collected from Manasseh, Ephraim, and all the remnant of Israel, as well as from all of Judah, Benjamin, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.<sup>w</sup> <sup>10</sup>They turned it over to the master workers in the house of the LORD, and these in turn used it to pay the workers in the LORD's house who were restoring and repairing it. <sup>11</sup>They also gave it to the carpenters and the masons to buy hewn stone and timber for the tie beams and rafters of the buildings which the kings of Judah had allowed to fall into ruin. <sup>12</sup>The men worked faithfully at their task; their overseers were Jahath and Obadiah, Levites of the line of Merari, and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the Kohathites, who directed them. All those Levites who were skillful with musical instruments <sup>13</sup>were in charge of the men who carried the burdens, and they directed all the workers in every kind of labor. Some of the other Levites were scribes, officials, and gatekeepers.

The Finding of the Law. <sup>14x</sup> When they brought out the money that had been deposited in the house of the LORD, Hilkiah the priest found the book of the law of the LORD given through Moses. <sup>15</sup>He reported this to Shaphan the scribe, saying, “I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD.” Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, <sup>16</sup>who brought it to the king at the same time that he made his report to him. He said, “Your servants are doing everything that has been entrusted to them; <sup>17</sup>they have smelted down the silver deposited in the LORD’s house and have turned it over to the overseers and the workers.” <sup>18</sup>Then Shaphan the scribe also informed the king, “Hilkiah the priest has given me a book,” and then Shaphan read it in the presence of the king.

<sup>19</sup>When the king heard the words of the law, he tore his garments. <sup>20</sup>The king then issued this command to Hilkiah, to Ahikam, son of Shaphan, to Abdon, son of Michah, to Shaphan the scribe, and to Asaiah, the king’s servant: <sup>21</sup>“Go, consult the LORD for me and for those who are left in Israel and Judah, about the words of the book that has been found, for the anger of the LORD burns furiously against us, because our ancestors did not keep the word of the LORD and have not done all that is written in this book.” <sup>22</sup>Then Hilkiah and others from the king went to Huldah the prophet, wife of Shallum, son of Tokhath, son of Hasrah, keeper of the wardrobe; she lived in Jerusalem, in the Second Quarter. They spoke to her as they had been instructed, <sup>23</sup>and she said to them: “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Say to the man who sent you to me, <sup>24</sup>Thus says the LORD: I am about to bring evil upon this place and upon its inhabitants, all the curses written in the book that was read before the king of Judah. <sup>25</sup>Because they have abandoned me and have burned incense to other gods, provoking me by all the works of their hands, my anger burns against this place and it cannot be extinguished.

<sup>26</sup>“But to the king of Judah who sent you to consult the LORD, give this response: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: As for the words you have heard, <sup>27</sup>because you were heartsick and have humbled yourself before God when you heard his words concerning this place and its inhabitants; because you humbled yourself before me, tore your garments, and wept before me, I in turn have heard—oracle of the LORD. <sup>28</sup>I will gather you to your ancestors and you shall go to your grave in peace, and your eyes shall not see all the evil I am about to bring upon this place and upon its inhabitants.”

This they reported to the king.

Covenant Renewal. <sup>29y</sup> The king then had all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem summoned before him. <sup>30</sup> The king went up to the house of the LORD with all the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: priests, Levites, and all the people, great and small. He read aloud to them all the words of the book of the covenant that had been found in the house of the LORD. <sup>31</sup> The king stood by the column* and made a covenant in the presence of the LORD to follow the LORD and to observe his commandments, statutes, and decrees with his whole heart and soul, carrying out the words of the covenant written in this book. <sup>32</sup> He thereby committed all who were in Jerusalem and Benjamin, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem acted according to the covenant of God, the God of their ancestors. <sup>33</sup> Josiah removed every abomination from all the territories belonging to the Israelites, and he obliged all who were in Israel to serve the LORD, their God. During his lifetime they did not turn away from following the LORD, the God of their ancestors.<sup>z</sup>

CHAPTER 35

The Passover. <sup>1a</sup> Josiah celebrated in Jerusalem a Passover to honor the LORD; the Passover sacrifice was slaughtered on the fourteenth day of the first month. <sup>b</sup> <sup>2</sup>He reappointed the priests to their duties and confirmed them in the service of the LORD's house. <sup>3</sup>He said to the Levites who were to instruct all Israel, and who were consecrated to the LORD: "Put the holy ark in the house built by Solomon, son of David, king of Israel. It shall no longer be a burden on your shoulders. Serve now the LORD, your God, and his people Israel." <sup>c</sup> <sup>4</sup>Prepare yourselves by your ancestral houses and your divisions according to the prescriptions of David, king of Israel, and the prescriptions of his son Solomon. <sup>5</sup>Stand in the sanctuary according to the branches of the ancestral houses of your kin, the common people, so that the distribution of the Levites and the families may be the same. <sup>d</sup> <sup>6</sup>Slaughter the Passover sacrifice, sanctify yourselves, and be at the disposition of your kin, that all may be done according to the word of the LORD given through Moses."<sup>e</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Josiah contributed to the common people a flock of lambs and young goats, <sup>f</sup> thirty thousand in number, each to serve as a Passover victim for all who were present, and also three thousand oxen; these were from the king's property. <sup>8</sup>His princes also gave a voluntary offering to the people, the priests, and the Levites. Hilkiah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, prefects of the house of God, gave to the priests two thousand six hundred Passover victims along with three hundred oxen. <sup>g</sup> <sup>9</sup>Conaniah and his brothers Shemaiah, Nethanel, Hashabiah, Jehiel, and Jozabad, the rulers of the Levites, contributed to the Levites five thousand Passover victims, together with five hundred oxen.

Passover on the fire as prescribed, and also cooked the sacred portions in pots, caldrons, and pans, then brought them quickly to all the common people.<sup>h 14</sup>Afterward they prepared the Passover for themselves and for the priests. Indeed the priests, the sons of Aaron, were busy sacrificing burnt offerings and the fatty portions until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves and for the priests, the sons of Aaron.<sup>15</sup>The singers, the sons of Asaph, were at their posts as commanded by David and by Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, the king's seer. The gatekeepers were at every gate; there was no need for them to leave their stations, for their fellow Levites prepared for them.<sup>16</sup>Thus the entire service of the LORD was arranged that day so that the Passover could be celebrated and the burnt offerings sacrificed on the altar of the LORD, as King Josiah had commanded.<sup>17</sup>The Israelites who were present on that occasion kept the Passover and the feast of the Unleavened Bread for seven days.<sup>18i</sup> No such Passover had been observed in Israel since the time of Samuel the prophet; no king of Israel had observed a Passover like that celebrated by Josiah, the priests, and Levites, all of Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.<sup>19</sup>It was in the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign that this Passover was observed.

Josiah's End. <sup>20</sup>After Josiah had done all this to restore the temple, Neco, king of Egypt, came up to fight at Carchemish on the Euphrates, and Josiah went out to meet him.<sup>21</sup>Neco sent messengers to him, saying: "What quarrel is between us, king of Judah? I have not come against you this day, for my war is with another kingdom, and God has told me to hasten. Do not interfere with God who is with me; let him not destroy you."<sup>22</sup>But Josiah would not withdraw from him, for he was seeking a pretext to fight with him. Therefore he would not listen to the words of Neco that came from the mouth of God, but went out to fight in the plain of Megiddo.<sup>23</sup>Then the archers shot King Josiah, who said to his servants, "Take me away, I am seriously wounded."<sup>j 24</sup>His servants took him from his own chariot, placed him in the one he had in reserve, and brought him to Jerusalem, where he died. He was buried in the tombs of his ancestors, and all Judah and Jerusalem mourned him.<sup>25</sup>Jeremiah also composed a lamentation for Josiah, which is recited to this day by all the male and female singers in their lamentations for Josiah. These have been made an ordinance for Israel, and can be found written in the Lamentations.*

CHAPTER 36

Jehoahaz. <sup>1l</sup> The people of the land took Jehoahaz, son of Josiah, and made him king in Jerusalem to succeed his father. <sup>2</sup>Jehoahaz was twenty-three years old when he became king, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. <sup>3</sup>The king of Egypt deposed him in Jerusalem and fined the land one hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold. <sup>4</sup>Then the king of Egypt made Eliakim, the brother of Jehoahaz, king over Judah and Jerusalem, changing his name to Jehoiakim. Neco took Jehoahaz his brother away and brought him to Egypt.

Jehoiakim. <sup>5</sup>Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. He did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, his God. <sup>m 6n</sup> Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, attacked and bound him in chains to take him to Babylon. * <sup>7</sup>Nebuchadnezzar also carried away to Babylon some of the vessels of the house of the LORD and put them in his palace in Babylon. <sup>8</sup>The rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, the abominable things that he did, and what therefore happened to him, are recorded in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah. His son Jehoiachin succeeded him as king. <sup>o</sup>

Jehoiachin. <sup>9</sup>Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he became king, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem. He did what was evil in the LORD's sight. <sup>p 10</sup>At the turn of the year, King Nebuchadnezzar sent for him and had him brought to Babylon, along with precious vessels from the house of the LORD. He made his brother Zedekiah * king over Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>q</sup>

Zedekiah. <sup>11</sup>Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. <sup>r 12</sup>He did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, his God, and he did not humble himself before Jeremiah the prophet, who spoke for the LORD. <sup>s 13</sup>He also rebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by God. He became stiff-necked and hardened his heart rather than return to the LORD, the God of Israel. <sup>t 14</sup>Likewise all the princes of Judah, the priests, and the people added treachery to treachery, practicing all the abominations of the nations and defiling the LORD's house which he had consecrated in Jerusalem.

The Fall of Judah. <sup>15</sup>Early and often the LORD, the God of their ancestors, sent his messengers to them, for he had compassion on his people and his dwelling place.<sup>u</sup> <sup>16</sup>But they mocked God's messengers, despised his words, and scoffed at his prophets, until the LORD's anger against his people blazed up beyond remedy.<sup>v</sup> <sup>17</sup>Then he brought up against them the king of the Chaldeans, who killed their young men with the sword in their own sanctuary, with compassion for neither young men nor young women, neither the old nor the infirm; all of them he delivered into his power.<sup>w</sup> <sup>18</sup>All the utensils of the house of God, large and small, the treasures of the LORD's house, and the treasures of the king and his princes, all these he brought to Babylon.<sup>x</sup> <sup>19</sup>They burnt the house of God, tore down the walls of Jerusalem, burnt down all its palaces, and destroyed all its precious objects.<sup>y</sup> <sup>20</sup>Those who escaped the sword he carried captive to Babylon, where they became servants to him and his sons until the Persian kingdom came to power. <sup>21</sup>All this was to fulfill the word of the LORD spoken by Jeremiah: Until the land has retrieved its lost sabbaths, during all the time it lies waste it shall have rest while seventy years are fulfilled.

Exile of Southern Kingdom

Decree of Cyrus. <sup>22*</sup>In the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia, in order to realize the word of the LORD spoken by Jeremiah, the LORD roused the spirit of Cyrus, King of Persia, to spread this proclamation throughout his kingdom, both by word of mouth and in writing:<sup>z</sup> <sup>23</sup>“Thus says Cyrus, king of Persia: The LORD, the God of heaven, has given to me all the kingdoms of the earth. He has also charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. All among you, therefore, who belong to his people, may their God be with them; let them go up.”

1:5 The bronze altar ... the tabernacle of the LORD: by this notice, the Chronicler justifies Solomon’s worship at the high place of Gibeon. He pictures the tabernacle, i.e., the Mosaic meeting tent, and the bronze altar made at Moses’ command (Ex 31:1–9) as remaining at Gibeon after David had installed the ark of the covenant in another tent in Jerusalem (1 Chr 15:1, 25; 16:1). Bezalel’s altar was made of acacia wood plated with bronze (Ex 27:1–2). Later, Solomon made an all-bronze altar for the Temple in Jerusalem (2 Chr 4:1).

1:16–17 Egypt and Cilicia: it seems likely that the horses came from Cilicia and the chariots from Egypt. Some scholars find a reference to Musur, a mountain district north of Cilicia, rather than to Egypt (Misrayim) in 1 Kgs 10:28–29, the Chronicler’s source for this notice. The Chronicler himself probably understood the source to be speaking of Egypt; cf. 2 Chr 9:28.

2:9 There is probably some exaggeration here. The parallel passage in 1 Kgs 5:25 does not list the barley or the wine, and mentions only twenty kors of olive oil. Kors: see note on Ez 45:14; baths: see note on Is 5:10. The amount given in Chronicles would be one hundred times as much (20,000 baths equals 2,000 kors).

2:13 A Danite woman: in 1 Kgs 7:14 she is called a widow of the tribe of Naphtali. The Danites had settled in the northern section of Naphtali’s territory (Jgs 18:27–29). Bezalel, the head artisan in the time of Moses, had as his assistant a member of the tribe of Dan (Ex 31:6).

3:1 Mount Moriah: Gn 22:2 speaks of a “height in the land of Moriah.” This is the only place in the Bible where the Temple mount is identified with the site where Abraham was to have sacrificed Isaac.

3:4 The front porch ... twenty cubits high: this figure, not given in 1 Kgs 7, is based on a variant Greek text that may be due to a later revision. The Hebrew text itself has “one hundred and twenty cubits high.” The Chronicler nearly doubles the height of the two free-standing columns adjacent to the porch in 2 Chr 3:15 as compared with the source, 1 Kgs 7:15–16.

3:14 The veil: this was suspended at the entrance of the holy of holies, in imitation of the veil of the Mosaic meeting tent (Ex 26:31–32). Solomon’s Temple had doors at this point, according to 1 Kgs 6:31. Apparently the Temple of the Chronicler’s time did have a veil, just as did Herod’s Temple (Mt 27:51; Mk 15:38; Lk 23:45).

4:3 Oxen: in 1 Kgs 7:24 this double row of ornaments is described as consisting of gourds. The text of Kings available to the Chronicler may have been corrupt at this point since the two words sound similar in Hebrew. In 4:16 the Chronicler speaks of forks while 1 Kgs 7:40 refers to bowls.

4:5 Three thousand baths: two thousand baths according to 1 Kgs 7:26; see note on 1 Kgs 7:23–26.

5:3 Festival of the seventh month: feast of Booths (Tabernacles); cf. notes on 7:9–10; 1 Kgs 8:2.

5:4 The Levites: the parallel passage in 1 Kgs 8:3 reads “the priests”; but in 2 Chr 5:5 the Deuteronomic expression “levitical priests” is used, as it is in 23:18; 30:27.

5:9 They remain there to this day: the Chronicler must have copied this notice from his source (1 Kgs 8:8), losing sight of the fact that there was no ark in the Temple of his own day. (According to 2 Mc 2:4–8, the ark of Solomon’s Temple was concealed by Jeremiah at the time of the Babylonian destruction of Jerusalem.)

6:6 Jerusalem ... David: Ps 132:11, 13 puts in parallel the Lord’s choice of David and Zion, the royal house of David and the mountain in Jerusalem as the site for the Lord’s house.

6:13 This verse has no equivalent in 1 Kgs 8:22–23, the Chronicler’s source. Solomon is depicted as praying on “a bronze platform ... in the middle of the courtyard” because in the time of the Chronicler only priests were permitted to pray before the altar.

7:9–10 The feast: Booths, celebrated on the fifteenth day of the seventh month and followed by a solemn octave lasting through the twenty-second day (Lv 23:33–36; Nm 29:12–35); the people are therefore sent home on the twentythird day of the month (v. 10). The festival (v. 8) marking the dedication of the altar and of the Temple was held during the seven days prior to the feast of Booths, i.e., from the seventh to the fourteenth day of the seventh month. According to 1 Kgs 8:3, 65–66 the dedication of the Temple was celebrated concomitantly with the seven days of the feast of Booths, after which the people were dismissed on the eighth day.

8:2 The cities which Hiram had given him: according to 1 Kgs 9:10–14, it was Solomon who ceded the cities to the king of Tyre as payment for the timber and gold received from him. Since, however, 1 Kgs 9:12 states that Hiram was not satisfied with the cities, the Chronicler may have inferred that he gave them back to Solomon.

8:4 Tadmor: later known as Palmyra, an important caravan city in the Syrian desert. The parallel passage in 1 Kgs 9:18 has “Tamar,” in southern Judah; cf. Ez 47:19; 48:28. But Solomon may well have fortified Tadmor against the Arameans.

9:28 See note on 1:16–17.

10:1 All Israel: as in the source (1 Kgs 12:1), this term designates the northern tribes, as distinct from Judah and Benjamin. Elsewhere the Chronicler, writing on his own, speaks comprehensively of “those Israelites who lived in the cities of Judah” (10:17), and “all the Israelites [lit., all Israel] in Judah and Benjamin” (11:3).

11:5–12 These verses have no parallel in 1 Kings; they are apparently based on a separate source.

12:3 Sikkites: foreign mercenaries in the Egyptian army.

12:16 Abijah: in 1 Kgs 14:31–15:8 this king is called Abijam.

13:3–21 This passage is a free composition of the Chronicler based on the reference in 1 Kgs 15:6 to the war between Abijam (so in Kings, “Abijah” in Chronicles) and Jeroboam.

13:5 Covenant of salt: see note on Nm 18:19.

14:7–14 This Ethiopian invasion of Judah is not mentioned in 1 Kings. The account is likely a legend intended to show the pious King Asa being rewarded with divine assistance. It could, however, reflect an incursion by nomads from the Negeb in Asa’s time.

15:10–12 With this description of a covenant ceremony in “the third month” of a year beginning in the spring, the Chronicler provides a basis for the later understanding of the ancient Jewish spring feast of Weeks as a commemoration of the covenant on Mount Sinai; see Ex 19:1–3; Lv 23:16 and note on Lv 23:16–21. In the Greek period the feast came to be called Pentecost, from the Greek word for “fifty,” i.e., fifty days or seven weeks after Passover. The Chronicler’s presentation here has also influenced the celebration of Christian Pentecost as the “birthday of the Church”; cf. Acts 2.

15:16 Mother: see note on 1 Kgs 15:10.

16:7 The king of Aram has escaped: the Lucianic recension of the Septuagint reads, “the king of Israel escaped.” This may well be the original reading, since according to the story Asa hired the king of Aram as an ally against Israel.

17:3 The LORD was with Jehoshaphat: along with his successors Hezekiah and Josiah, Jehoshaphat is one of the Chronicler's exemplary kings.

17:6 Thus he was encouraged: lit., "his heart was high," a phrase that ordinarily describes arrogance and rebelliousness; in this case, however, it introduces a notice of Jehoshaphat's fidelity to the Lord.

18:12–22 See note on 1 Kgs 22:19–23.

18:27 "Hear, O peoples, all of you!": this quotation, which also appears in 1 Kgs 22:28, ascribes to the prophet Micaiah ben Imlah the opening words of the book of the prophet Micah of Moresheth (Mi 1:2), who was active a century later.

19:2 Jehu the seer, son of Hanani: probably not the Jehu, son of Hanani, who prophesied against Baasha of Israel almost fifty years earlier (1 Kgs 16:1).

19:3 Has been found: theological passive, i.e., God is the implied agent.

20:1–30 This account seems to be a free composition of the Chronicler. However, there could well have been a raid of nomads against Judah in the reign of Jehoshaphat, similar to the one that occurred under Asa (14:8–14). The story may also be connected in some way with the campaign of Israel and Judah against Moab launched through the territory of Edom (2 Kgs 3:4–27).

20:21 In accordance with Israelite conceptions of Holy War (cf. Ex 14:13–14), this highly stylized narrative presents the Lord as active in battle, while the people have only to sing hymns of praise; the enemy, in panic, fight among themselves to their mutual destruction (v. 23). Splendor: the Lord "goes before," i.e., leads, the army of Israel (cf. 2 Sm 5:24) with the heavenly hosts. Israel's God is depicted as present "enthroned upon the cherubim" atop the ark of the covenant. By postexilic times, the ark had disappeared, but the Lord was still present to his people. Here that presence is described as "holy Splendor," a phrase found in Ps 29:2; 96:9. Cf. the cognate image of cloud and fire that led Israel in the wilderness (Ex 13:21–22), or the cloud of the Lord's glory that fills the sanctuary (Ex 40:34; 1 Kgs 8:10–11).

21:6 The daughter of Ahab: her name was Athaliah. In 22:2 (and its source, 2 Kgs 8:26) she is called the daughter of Ahab's father Omri, but this should probably be understood in the sense of granddaughter.

21:12 Elijah: this is the Chronicler's only mention of this prophet of the Northern Kingdom. It is doubtful that Elijah was still living in the reign of Jehoram of Judah; in any case, the attribution of the letter to him has a folkloristic quality.

22:9 This account of the death of Ahaziah of Judah does not agree with that given in 2 Kgs 9:27–28.

23:13 By his column: there was a special place reserved for the king in the eastern gateway of the Temple court where the altar for burnt offerings stood. The king occupied this place on feasts and sabbaths at the time of the prescribed offerings, or when he came to make voluntary offerings of his own; cf. 2 Kgs 11:14 and Ez 46:1–8.

24:5 Gather money: according to 2 Kgs 12:5 the people themselves brought the money, consisting at least in part of voluntary contributions, to the Temple. By the time of the Chronicler, a fixed head tax for the upkeep of the Temple had been introduced; see 2 Chr 34:9; Neh 10:32; Ex 30:12–16. This was still in force in New Testament times (Mt 17:24–25).

24:14 See the parallel in 2 Kgs 12:14–15; the passages are difficult to reconcile.

25:12 Sela ... rock: a pun—the name of the city, Sela, in Hebrew means "rock."

25:24 With Obed-edom: perhaps an Edomite priest (cf. v. 14), or possibly a member of a levitical family of gatekeepers; cf. 1 Chr 15:18; 26:12–15.

25:28 The City of Judah: i.e., Jerusalem, the capital of Judah; the parallel passage (2 Kgs 14:20) reads "the City of David."

26:5 Zechariah: not otherwise identified, but cf. 29:1.

28:5–8, 16–23 The account of Ahaz's reign in 2 Kings refers to hostilities of Syria (Aram) and Israel against Judah, the revolt of the Edomites, submission to Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, the stripping of Temple treasures to pay him tribute, and, in deference to him, shaping the cult of the Jerusalem Temple according to patterns seen in Damascus (2 Kgs 16:5–18; cf. Is 7:1–2). The account in Kings relates all this to an attack of Syria and Israel on Judah (735 b.c.), as they attempted to force Judah into an anti-Assyrian coalition; but the Chronicler, who does not mention the attack, depicts these troubles as the result of, or examples of, Ahaz's infidelity.

28:19 Ahaz, king of Israel: in his account of the period of the divided monarchy, the Chronicler regularly uses the term "Israel" as here to designate, not the Northern Kingdom, but the entire people. See note on 10:1.

31:7 Third month ... seventh month: between the late spring feast of Weeks or Pentecost and the fall feast of Booths or Tabernacles, there is seldom any rain in Palestine; at the end of this dry period the problem of storage (v. 11) would become acute.

31:16 Three years of age: this may be a textual error for "thirty years." According to Nm 4:3, 23, 30, men of the priestly clans served from the ages of thirty to fifty.

32:33 The approach to the tombs: lit., "the ascent of the tombs," perhaps "the upper section of the tombs," i.e., their most prominent and honored place.

33:11 There is no evidence elsewhere for such an imprisonment of King Manasseh in Babylon. According to the Assyrian inscriptions, however, Manasseh did pay tribute to the Assyrian kings Esarhaddon (680–669 B.C.) and Assurbanipal (668–627 B.C.). He may well then have been obliged to go to Nineveh, Assyria's capital (rather than to Babylon as the Chronicler has it), to take his oath of allegiance as vassal to the king of Assyria.

33:13 And prayed to him: these words inspired an unknown writer to compose the apocryphal "Prayer of Manasseh," which since the Council of Trent appears as an appendix to many editions of the Vulgate Bible and is used in the Church's liturgy.

34:3 In his twelfth year: ca. 628 b.c., i.e., around the time of the Assyrian emperor Assurbanipal's death, which enabled Judah to free itself from Assyrian domination. On the basis of 2 Kgs 22:1–23:25 alone, one might suppose that Josiah's reform began only after and as a result of the discovery of the book of the law in the Temple, in the eighteenth year of his reign (622 b.c.). But the Chronicler is no doubt right in placing the beginning of the reform at an earlier period. The repair of the Temple itself, which led to the finding of the book of the law, was likely part of a cultic reform initiated by Josiah.

34:31 The column: see note on 23:13.

35:25 There is no mention of such a lamentation for Josiah composed by Jeremiah in either 2 Kings or Jeremiah; but see note on Zec 12:11. Lamentations: probably a reference to the Book of Lamentations.

36:6 Nebuchadnezzar ... bound him in chains to take him to Babylon: the Chronicler does not state that Jehoiakim was actually taken to Babylon. According to 2 Kgs 24:1–6, Jehoiakim revolted after being Nebuchadnezzar's vassal for three years; he died in Jerusalem before the city surrendered to the Babylonians. Dn 1:1–2, apparently based on 2 Chr 36:6–7, does speak of Jehoiakim's deportation to Babylon.

36:10 His brother Zedekiah: Zedekiah was actually the brother of Jehoiakim and the uncle of Jehoiachin (2 Kgs 24:17; Jer 37:1), though scarcely older than his nephew (2 Kgs 24:8, 18; 2 Chr 36:9, 11).

36:22–23 These verses are identical with those of Ezr 1:1–3a and were to prevent the work from ending on a note of doom.

The Book of Ezra

See RG 237–42

The last four books of the Hebrew canon are Ezra, Nehemiah, and 1 and 2 Chronicles, in that order. At one time, however, Ezra and Nehemiah followed 1 and 2 Chronicles and were generally considered to be the work of one and the same author known as “the Chronicler.” In recent years, however, the question of the authorship of Ezra and Nehemiah is seen to be more complex. While some scholars still maintain unity of authorship, others prefer to speak of the influence of a “Chronistic school” on the formation of Ezra-Nehemiah as a single book. The treatment of Ezra-Nehemiah as a single book by the earliest editors was undoubtedly due to the fact that in ancient times the two books were put under the one name, Ezra. The combined work Ezra-Nehemiah is our most important literary source for the formation of the Jewish religious community in the province of Judah after the Babylonian exile. This is known as the period of the Restoration, and the two men most responsible for the reorganization of Jewish life at this time were Ezra and Nehemiah.

In the present state of the Ezra-Nehemiah text, there are several dislocations of large sections so that the chronological or logical sequence is disrupted. The major instance is Ezra’s public reading of the law in Neh 8; others will be pointed out in the footnotes. Since arguments in favor of the chronological priority of Nehemiah to Ezra are indecisive, we accept the order in the text according to which Ezra’s activity preceded that of Nehemiah.

What is known of Ezra and his work is derived almost exclusively from Ezr 7–10 (the “Ezra Memoirs”) and Neh 8–9. Strictly speaking, the term “Ezra Memoirs” should be used only of that section in which Ezra speaks in the first person, i.e., Ezr 7:27–9:15. Compare the “Nehemiah Memoirs” in Neh 1:1–7:72a; 11:1, 2; 12:27–43; 13:4–31. The author combined this material with other sources at his disposal. The personality of Ezra is not so well-known as that of Nehemiah. Ben Sira, in his praise of the fathers (Sir 44–49), omits mention of Ezra, perhaps for polemical reasons. The genealogy of Ezra (7:1–5) traces his priesthood back to Aaron, brother of Moses. This was the accepted way of establishing the legality of one's priestly office. He is also called a scribe, well-versed in the law of Moses (7:6), indicating Ezra's dedication to the study of the Torah, which he sought to make the basic rule of life in the restored community. It was in religious and cultic reform rather than in political affairs that Ezra made his mark as a postexilic leader. Jewish tradition holds him in great esteem. The apocryphal 2 Esdras, sometimes included as an appendix to the Vulgate, where it is known as 4 Esdras, transforms him into a prophet and visionary. The Talmud regards him as a second Moses, claiming that the Torah would have been given to Israel through Ezra had not Moses preceded him.

Ezra is sometimes accused of having been a legalist who gave excessive attention to the letter of the law. His work, however, should be seen and judged within a specific historical context. He gave to his people a cohesion and spiritual unity which helped to prevent the disintegration of the small Jewish community settled in the province of Judah. Had it not been for the intransigence of Ezra and of those who adopted his ideal, it is doubtful that Judaism would have so effectively resisted Hellenism in later centuries. Ezra set the tone of the postexilic community, and it was characterized by fidelity to the Torah, Judaism's authentic way of life. It is in this light that we can judge most fairly the work of Ezra during the Restoration.

The Book of Ezra is divided as follows:

- I. The Return from Exile (1:1–6:22)
- II. The Work of Ezra (7:1–10:44)

CHAPTER 1

The Decree of Cyrus. <sup>1a</sup> In the first year of Cyrus, * king of Persia, in order to fulfill the word of the LORD spoken by Jeremiah, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia to issue a proclamation throughout his entire kingdom, both by word of mouth and in writing: <sup>2</sup>“Thus says Cyrus, king of Persia: ‘All the kingdoms of the earth the LORD, the God of heaven, * has given to me, and he has charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. <sup>3</sup>Those among you who belong to any part of his people, may their God be with them! Let them go up to Jerusalem in Judah to build the house of the LORD the God of Israel, that is, the God who is in Jerusalem. <sup>4</sup>Let all those who have survived, in whatever place they may have lived, be assisted by the people of that place with silver, gold, goods, and livestock, together with voluntary offerings for the house of God in Jerusalem.’ ”

<sup>5</sup>Then the heads of ancestral houses * of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and Levites—everyone, that is, whose spirit had been stirred up by God—prepared to go up to build the house of the LORD in Jerusalem. <sup>6b</sup> All their neighbors gave them help in every way, with silver, gold, goods, livestock, and many precious gifts, besides all their voluntary offerings. <sup>7c</sup> King Cyrus, too, had the vessels of the house of the LORD brought forth that Nebuchadnezzar had taken from Jerusalem and placed in the house of his god. <sup>8</sup>Cyrus, king of Persia, had them brought forth by the treasurer Mithredath, who counted them out to Sheshbazzar, prince of Judah. * <sup>9</sup>This was the inventory: baskets of goldware, thirty; baskets of silverware, one thousand and twenty-nine; <sup>10</sup>golden bowls, thirty; silver bowls, four hundred and ten; other vessels, one thousand. <sup>11</sup>Total of the gold and silver vessels: five thousand four hundred. * All these Sheshbazzar took with him when the exiles were brought up from Babylon to Jerusalem.

The Return from Exile

<sup>64</sup>The entire assembly taken together came to forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty, <sup>65</sup>not counting their male and female servants, who numbered seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven. They also had two hundred male and female singers. <sup>66</sup>Their horses numbered seven hundred and thirty-six, their mules two hundred and forty-five, <sup>67</sup>their camels four hundred and thirty-five, their donkeys six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

<sup>68</sup>When they arrived at the house of the LORD in Jerusalem, some of the heads of ancestral houses made voluntary offerings for the house of God, to rebuild it in its place. <sup>69</sup>According to their means they contributed to the treasury for the temple service: sixty-one thousand drachmas of gold, five thousand minas of silver, and one hundred priestly robes. <sup>70</sup>The priests, the Levites, and some of the people took up residence in Jerusalem; the singers, the gatekeepers, and the temple servants settled in their cities. Thus all the Israelites settled in their cities.

CHAPTER 3

Restoration of Worship. <sup>1h</sup> Now when the seventh month* came, after the Israelites had settled in their cities, the people gathered as one in Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>Then Jeshua, son of Jozadak, together with his kinsmen the priests, and Zerubbabel, son of Shealtiel, together with his kinsmen, began building the altar of the God of Israel in order to offer on it the burnt offerings prescribed in the law of Moses, the man of God. <sup>3i</sup> They set the altar on its foundations, for they lived in fear of the peoples of the lands,* and offered burnt offerings to the LORD on it, both morning and evening. <sup>4j</sup> They also kept the feast of Booths in the manner prescribed, and they offered the daily burnt offerings in the proper number required for each day. <sup>5</sup>Thereafter they offered regular burnt offerings, the sacrifices prescribed for the new moons and all the festivals sacred to the LORD, and those which anyone might bring as a voluntary offering to the LORD.

Laying the Foundations of the Temple. <sup>6</sup>From the first day of the seventh month they reinstituted the burnt offering to the LORD, though the foundation of the LORD's temple had not yet been laid. <sup>7k</sup> Then they hired stonecutters and carpenters, and sent food and drink and oil to the Sidonians and Tyrians that they might ship cedar trees from the Lebanon to the port of Joppa, as Cyrus, king of Persia, had authorized. <sup>8</sup>In the year after their coming to the house of God in Jerusalem, in the second month, Zerubbabel, son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua, son of Jozadak, together with the rest of their kinsmen, the priests and Levites and all who had come from the captivity to Jerusalem, began by appointing the Levites twenty years of age and over to supervise the work on the house of the LORD. <sup>9</sup>Jeshua and his sons and kinsmen, with Kadmiel and Binnui, son of Hodaviah, and their sons and their kindred, the Levites, together undertook to supervise those who were engaged in the work on the house of God. <sup>10l</sup> While the builders were laying the foundation of the LORD's temple, the priests in their vestments were stationed with trumpets and the Levites, sons of Asaph, with cymbals to praise the LORD in the manner laid down by David, king of Israel. <sup>11m</sup> They alternated in songs of praise and thanksgiving to the LORD, "for he is good, for his love for Israel endures forever";* and all the people raised a great shout of joy, praising the LORD because the foundation of the LORD's house had been laid. <sup>12n</sup> Many of the priests, Levites, and heads of ancestral houses, who were old enough to have seen the former house, cried out in sorrow as they watched the foundation of the present house being laid. Many others, however, lifted up their voices in shouts of joy. <sup>13</sup>No one could distinguish the sound of the joyful shouting from the sound of those who were weeping; for the people raised a mighty clamor which was heard far away.

CHAPTER 4

See RG 239–40

Outside Interference. <sup>1</sup>When the enemies of Judah and Benjamin heard that the exiles were building a temple for the LORD, the God of Israel, <sup>20</sup> they approached Zerub-babel and the heads of ancestral houses and said to them, “Let us build with you, for we seek your God just as you do, and we have sacrificed to him since the days of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria,* who brought us here.” <sup>3</sup>But Zerubbabel, Jeshua, and the rest of the heads of ancestral houses of Israel answered them, “It is not your responsibility to build with us a house for our God, but we alone must build it for the LORD, the God of Israel, as Cyrus king of Persia has commanded us.” <sup>4</sup>Thereupon the local inhabitants* discouraged the people of Judah and frightened them off from building. <sup>5</sup>They also bribed counselors to work against them and to frustrate their plans during all the years of Cyrus, king of Persia, and even into the reign of Darius,* king of Persia.

Later Hostility. <sup>6</sup>In the reign of Ahasuerus,* at the beginning of his reign, they prepared a written accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

<sup>7*</sup> Again, in the time of Artaxerxes, Tabeel and the rest of his fellow officials, in concert with Mithredath, wrote to Artaxerxes, king of Persia. The document was written in Aramaic and was accompanied by a translation.

“To King Artaxerxes, your servants, the men of West-of-Euphrates, as follows: <sup>12</sup>Let it be known to the king that the Jews who came up from you to us have arrived at Jerusalem and are now rebuilding this rebellious and evil city. They are completing its walls, and the foundations have already been laid. <sup>13</sup>Now let it be known to the king that if this city is rebuilt and its walls completed, they will no longer pay taxes, tributes, or tolls; eventually the throne will be harmed. <sup>14</sup>Now, since we eat the salt of the palace* and it is not fitting for us to look on while the king is being dishonored, we have sent this message to inform the king, <sup>15</sup>so that inquiry may be made in the historical records of your fathers. In the historical records you will discover and verify that this is a rebellious city, harmful to kings and provinces; its people have been acting seditiously there since ancient times. That is why this city was destroyed. <sup>16</sup>We therefore inform the king, that if this city is rebuilt and its walls completed again, you will thereupon not have a portion in the province West-of-Euphrates.”

<sup>23p</sup> As soon as a copy of King Artaxerxes’ letter had been read before Rehum, the governor, Shimshai, the scribe, and their fellow officials, they immediately went to the Jews in Jerusalem and stopped their work by force of arms. <sup>24</sup>As a result, work on the house of God in Jerusalem ceased. This interruption lasted until the second year of the reign of Darius,* king of Persia.

CHAPTER 5

See RG 239–40

The Work Resumed Under Darius; Further Problems. <sup>1q</sup> Then the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, * son of Iddo, began to prophesy to the Jews in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of the God of Israel. <sup>2</sup>Thereupon Zerubbabel, son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua, son of Jozadak, began again to build the house of God in Jerusalem, with the prophets of God giving them support. <sup>3</sup>At that time Tattenai, governor of West-of-Euphrates, came to them, along with Shethar-bozenai, and their fellow officials, and asked of them: “Who issued the decree for you to build this house and complete this edifice? <sup>4</sup>What are the names of the men who are building this structure?” <sup>5</sup>But the eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews, and they were not delayed during the time a report went to Darius and a written order came back concerning this matter.

“To King Darius, all good wishes! <sup>8</sup>Let it be known to the king that we have visited the province of Judah and the house of the great God: it is being rebuilt of cut stone and the walls are being reinforced with timber; the work is being carried out diligently, prospering under their hands. <sup>9</sup>We then questioned the elders, addressing to them the following words: ‘Who issued the decree for you to build this house and complete this edifice?’ <sup>10</sup>We also asked them their names, in order to give you a list of the men who are their leaders. <sup>11</sup>This was their answer to us: ‘We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and we are rebuilding the house built here many years ago, which a great king of Israel built and completed. <sup>12</sup>But because our ancestors provoked the wrath of the God of heaven, he delivered them into the power of the Chaldean, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, who destroyed this house and exiled the people to Babylon. <sup>13r</sup> However, in the first year of Cyrus, king of Babylon, King Cyrus issued a decree for the rebuilding of this house of God. <sup>14</sup>Moreover, the gold and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the temple in Jerusalem and carried off to the temple in Babylon, King Cyrus ordered to be removed from the temple in Babylon, and they were given to a certain Sheshbazzar, whom he named governor. <sup>15</sup>He commanded him: Take these vessels and deposit them in the temple of Jerusalem, and let the house of God be rebuilt on its former site. <sup>16</sup>Then this same Sheshbazzar came and laid the foundations of the house of God in Jerusalem. Since that time to the present the building has been going on, and is not yet completed.’ <sup>17</sup>Now, if it please the king, let a search be made in the royal archives of Babylon to discover whether a decree really was issued by King Cyrus for the rebuilding of this house of God in Jerusalem. And may the king’s decision in this matter be communicated to us.”

CHAPTER 6

<sup>6</sup>“Now, therefore, Tattenai, governor of West-of-Euphrates, and Shethar-bozenai, and you, their fellow officials in West-of-Euphrates, stay away from there. <sup>7</sup>Let the governor and the elders of the Jews continue the work on that house of God; they are to rebuild it on its former site. <sup>8</sup>I also issue this decree concerning your dealing with these elders of the Jews in the rebuilding of that house of God: Let these men be repaid for their expenses, in full and without delay from the royal revenue, deriving from the taxes of West-of-Euphrates, so that the work not be interrupted. <sup>9</sup>Whatever else is required— young bulls, rams, and lambs for burnt offerings to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the requirements of the priests who are in Jerusalem—let that be delivered to them day by day without fail, <sup>10</sup>that they may continue to offer sacrifices of pleasing odor to the God of heaven and pray for the life of the king and his sons. <sup>11</sup>I also issue this decree: if any man alters this edict, a beam is to be taken from his house, and he is to be lifted up and impaled on it; and his house is to be reduced to rubble for this offense. <sup>12</sup>And may the God who causes his name to dwell there overthrow every king or people who may undertake to alter this decree or to destroy this house of God in Jerusalem. I, Darius, have issued this decree; let it be diligently executed.”

diligence the instructions King Darius had sent them. <sup>14</sup>The elders of the Jews continued to make progress in the building, supported by the message of the prophets, Haggai and Zechariah, son of Iddo. They finished the building according to the command of the God of Israel and the decrees of Cyrus and Darius, and of Artaxerxes, king of Persia. <sup>15</sup>They completed this house on the third day of the month Adar, in the sixth year of the reign of King Darius. <sup>16</sup>The Israelites—priests, Levites, and the other returned exiles—celebrated the dedication of this house of God with joy. <sup>17</sup>For the dedication of this house of God, they offered one hundred bulls, two hundred rams, and four hundred lambs, together with twelve hegoats as a sin offering for all Israel, in keeping with the number of the tribes of Israel. <sup>18</sup>Finally, they set up the priests in their classes and the Levites in their divisions for the service of God in Jerusalem, as is prescribed in the book of Moses.

The Passover. <sup>19t</sup> The returned exiles kept the Passover on the fourteenth day of the first month. <sup>20</sup>The Levites, every one of whom had purified himself for the occasion, sacrificed the Passover for all the exiles, for their colleagues the priests, and for themselves. <sup>21</sup>The Israelites who had returned from the exile and all those who had separated themselves from the uncleanness of the Gentiles in the land shared in it, seeking the LORD, the God of Israel. <sup>22u</sup> They joyfully kept the feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days, for the LORD had filled them with joy by making the king of Assyria* favorable to them, so that he gave them help in their work on the house of God, the God of Israel.

II. The Work of Ezra

CHAPTER 7

Ezra, Priest and Scribe. <sup>1*</sup> <sup>v</sup> After these events, during the reign of Artaxerxes, king of Persia, Ezra, son of Seraiah, son of Azariah, son of Hilkiah, <sup>2</sup>son of Shallum, son of Zadok, son of Ahitub, <sup>3</sup>son of Amariah, son of Azariah, son of Meraioth, <sup>4</sup>son of Zerahiah, son of Uzzi, son of Bukki, <sup>5</sup>son of Abishua, son of Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of Aaron, the high priest—<sup>6w</sup> this Ezra came up from Babylon. He was a scribe, well-versed in the law of Moses given by the LORD, the God of Israel. The king granted him all that he requested, because the hand of the LORD, his God, was over him.

<sup>7</sup>Some of the Israelites and some priests, Levites, singers, gatekeepers, and temple servants also came up to Jerusalem in the seventh year of King Artaxerxes. <sup>8</sup>Ezra came to Jerusalem in the fifth month of that seventh year of the king. <sup>9</sup>On the first day of the first month he began the journey up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month he arrived at Jerusalem, for the favoring hand of his God was over him. <sup>10x</sup> Ezra had set his heart on the study and practice of the law of the LORD and on teaching statutes and ordinances in Israel.

<sup>12y</sup> “Artaxerxes, king of kings, to Ezra the priest, scribe of the law of the God of heaven, greetings! And now, <sup>13</sup>I have issued this decree, that anyone in my kingdom belonging to the people of Israel, its priests or Levites, who is willing to go up to Jerusalem with you, may go, <sup>14f</sup>for you are the one sent by the king and his seven counselors to supervise Judah and Jerusalem with regard to the law of your God which is in your possession, <sup>15</sup>and to bring the silver and gold which the king and his counselors have freely contributed to the God of Israel, whose dwelling is in Jerusalem, <sup>16</sup>as well as all the silver and gold which you may receive throughout the province of Babylon, together with the voluntary offerings the people and priests freely contribute for the house of their God in Jerusalem. <sup>17</sup>Therefore, you must use this money with all diligence to buy bulls, rams, lambs, and the grain offerings and libations proper to these, and offer them on the altar of the house of your God in Jerusalem. <sup>18</sup>You and your kinsmen may do whatever seems best to you with the remainder of the silver and gold, as your God wills. <sup>19</sup>The vessels given to you for the service of the house of your God you are to deposit before the God of Jerusalem. <sup>20</sup>Whatever else you may be required to supply for the needs of the house of your God, you may draw from the royal treasury. <sup>21</sup>I, Artaxerxes the king, issue this decree to all the treasurers of West-of-Euphrates: Whatever Ezra the priest, scribe of the law of the God of heaven, requests of you, let it be done with all diligence, <sup>22</sup>within these limits: silver, one hundred talents; wheat, one hundred kors; *wine, one hundred baths; oil, one hundred baths; salt, without limit. <sup>23</sup>Let everything that is decreed by the God of heaven be carried out exactly for the house of the God of heaven, that wrath may not come upon the realm of the king and his sons. <sup>24</sup>We also inform you that it is not permitted to impose taxes, tributes, or tolls on any priest, Levite, singer, gatekeeper, temple servant, or any other servant of that house of God.

Ezra Prepares for the Journey. <sup>27</sup>Blessed be the LORD, the God of our ancestors, who put it into the heart of the king thus to glorify the house of the LORD in Jerusalem, <sup>28a</sup> and who let me find favor with the king, with his counselors, and with all the most influential royal officials. I therefore took courage and, with the hand of the LORD, my God, over me, I gathered together Israelite leaders to make the return journey with me.

Ezra's Caravan. <sup>1</sup>These are the heads of the ancestral houses and the genealogies of those who returned with me from Babylon during the reign of King Artaxerxes:

Final Preparations for the Journey. <sup>15</sup>I assembled them by the river that flows toward Ahava,* where we camped for three days. There I perceived that both laymen and priests were present, but I could not discover a single Levite. <sup>16</sup>So I sent for discerning leaders, Eliezer, Ariel, Shemaiah, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, Zechariah, and Meshullam, <sup>17</sup>with a command for Iddo, the leader in the place Casiphia, instructing them what to say to Iddo and his kinsmen, and to the temple servants in Casiphia, in order to procure for us ministers for the house of our God. <sup>18b</sup> Since the favoring hand of our God was over us, they sent to us a well-instructed man, one of the descendants of Mahli, son of Levi, son of Israel, namely Sherebiah, with his sons and kinsmen, eighteen men. <sup>19</sup>They also sent us Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiiah, descendants of Merari, and their kinsmen and their sons, twenty men. <sup>20c</sup> Of the temple servants, those whom David and the princes appointed to serve the Levites, there were two hundred and twenty. All these were enrolled by name.

<sup>21</sup>Then I proclaimed a fast, there by the river of Ahava, that we might humble ourselves before our God to seek from him a safe journey for ourselves, our children, and all our possessions. <sup>22d</sup> For I was ashamed to ask the king for troops and horsemen to protect us against enemies along the way, since we had said to the king, “The favoring hand of our God is over all who seek him, but his fierce anger is against all who forsake him.” <sup>23</sup>So we fasted, seeking this from our God, and it was granted. <sup>24</sup>Next I selected twelve of the priestly leaders along with Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their kinsmen, <sup>25</sup>and I weighed out before them the silver and the gold and the vessels offered for the house of our God by the king, his counselors, his officials, and all the Israelites of that region. <sup>26</sup>I weighed out into their hands these amounts: silver, six hundred and fifty talents; silver vessels, one hundred; gold, one hundred talents; <sup>27</sup>twenty golden bowls valued at a thousand darics; two vases of excellent polished bronze, as precious as gold. <sup>28</sup>I addressed them in these words: “You are consecrated to the LORD, and the vessels are also consecrated; the silver and the gold are a voluntary offering to the LORD, the God of your ancestors. <sup>29</sup>Watch over them carefully until you weigh them out in Jerusalem in the presence of the chief priests and Levites and the leaders of ancestral houses of Israel, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.” <sup>30</sup>The priests and the Levites then took over the silver, the gold, and the vessels that had been weighed out, to bring them to Jerusalem, to the house of our God.

Arrival in Jerusalem. <sup>31</sup>We set out from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month to go to Jerusalem. The hand of our God remained over us, and he protected us from enemies and robbers along the way. <sup>32</sup>We arrived in Jerusalem, where we rested for three days. <sup>33</sup>On the fourth day, the silver, the gold, and the vessels were weighed out in the house of our God and given to the priest Meremoth, son of Uriah, with whom was Eleazar, son of Phinehas; they were assisted by the Levites Jozabad, son of Jeshua, and Noadiah, son of Binnui. <sup>34</sup>Everything was in order as to number and weight, and the total weight was registered. At that same <sup>35</sup>those who had returned from the captivity, the exiles, offered as burnt offerings to the God of Israel twelve bulls for all Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, and twelve goats as sin offerings: all these as a burnt offering to the LORD. <sup>36*</sup> Finally, the orders of the king were presented to the king's satraps and to the governors in West-of-Euphrates, who gave their support to the people and to the house of God.

CHAPTER 9

The Crisis of Mixed Marriages. <sup>1e</sup> When these matters had been concluded, the leaders approached me with this report: “Neither the Israelite laymen nor the priests nor the Levites have kept themselves separate from the peoples of the lands and their abominations—Canaanites, Hittites, Perizzites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians, and Amorites— <sup>2</sup>for they have taken some of their daughters as wives for themselves and their sons, thus intermingling the holy seed with the peoples of the lands. Furthermore, the leaders and rulers have taken a prominent part in this apostasy!”

Ezra’s Reaction. <sup>3f</sup> When I had heard this, I tore my cloak and my mantle, plucked hair from my head and beard, and sat there devastated. <sup>4g</sup> Around me gathered all who were in dread of the sentence of the God of Israel* on the apostasy of the exiles, while I remained devastated until the evening sacrifice. <sup>5</sup>Then, at the time of the evening sacrifice, I rose in my wretchedness, and with cloak and mantle torn I fell on my knees, stretching out my hands to the LORD, my God.

A Penitential Prayer. <sup>6*h</sup> I said: “My God, I am too ashamed and humiliated to raise my face to you, my God, for our wicked deeds are heaped up above our heads and our guilt reaches up to heaven. <sup>7</sup>From the time of our ancestors even to this day our guilt has been great, and for our wicked deeds we have been delivered, we and our kings and our priests, into the hands of the kings of foreign lands, to the sword, to captivity, to pillage, and to disgrace, as is the case today.

<sup>8i</sup> “And now, only a short time ago, mercy came to us from the LORD, our God, who left us a remnant and gave us a stake in his holy place; thus our God has brightened our eyes and given us relief in our slavery. <sup>9j</sup> For slaves we are, but in our slavery our God has not abandoned us; rather, he has turned the good will of the kings of Persia toward us. Thus he has given us new life to raise again the house of our God and restore its ruins, and has granted us a protective wall in Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>10</sup>But now, our God, what can we say after all this? For we have abandoned your commandments, <sup>11k</sup> which you gave through your servants the prophets: The land which you are entering to take as your possession is a land unclean with the filth of the peoples of the lands, with the abominations with which they have filled it from one end to the other by their uncleanness. <sup>12</sup> Do not, then, give your daughters to their sons in marriage, and do not take their daughters for your sons. Never promote their welfare and prosperity; thus you will grow strong, enjoy the produce of the land, and leave it as an inheritance to your children forever.

<sup>13</sup>“After all that has come upon us for our evil deeds and our great guilt—though you, our God, have made less of our sinfulness than it deserved and have allowed us to survive as we do— <sup>14</sup>shall we again violate your commandments by intermarrying with these abominable peoples? Would you not become so angered with us as to destroy us without remnant or survivor?

<sup>15</sup> LORD, God of Israel, you are just; yet we have been spared, the remnant we are today. Here we are before you in our sins. Because of all this, we can no longer stand in your presence.”

CHAPTER 10

Response to the Crisis. <sup>1</sup>While Ezra prayed and acknowledged their guilt, weeping and prostrate before the house of God, a very large assembly of Israelites gathered about him, men, women, and children; and the people wept profusely. <sup>2</sup>Then Shecaniah, the son of Jehiel, one of the descendants of Elam, made this appeal to Ezra: “We have indeed betrayed our God by taking as wives foreign women of the peoples of the land. Yet in spite of this there still remains a hope for Israel. <sup>3</sup>Let us therefore enter into a covenant before our God to dismiss all our foreign wives and the children born of them, in keeping with what you, my lord, advise, and those who are in dread of the commandments of our God. Let it be done according to the law! <sup>4</sup>Rise, then, for this is your duty! We are with you, so have courage and act!”

<sup>9</sup>All the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered together in Jerusalem within the threeday period: it was in the ninth month, * on the twentieth day of the month. All the people, sitting in the open place before the house of God, were trembling both over the matter at hand and because it was raining. <sup>10m</sup> Then Ezra, the priest, stood up and said to them: “Your apostasy in taking foreign women as wives has added to Israel’s guilt. <sup>11</sup>But now, give praise to the LORD, the God of your ancestors, and do his will: separate yourselves from the peoples of the land and from the foreign women.” <sup>12</sup>In answer, the whole assembly cried out with a loud voice: “Yes, it is our duty to do as you say! <sup>13</sup>But the people are numerous and it is the rainy season, so that we cannot remain outside; besides, this is not a task that can be performed in a single day or even two, for those of us who have sinned in this regard are many. <sup>14</sup>Let our leaders represent the whole assembly; then let all those in our cities who have taken foreign women for wives appear at appointed times, accompanied by the elders and magistrates of each city in question, till we have turned away from us our God's burning anger over this affair."

<sup>16*</sup> The exiles did as agreed. Ezra the priest appointed as his assistants men who were heads of ancestral houses, one for each ancestral house, all of them designated by name. They held sessions to examine the matter, beginning with the first day of the tenth month. <sup>17</sup>By the first day of the first month they had finished dealing with all the men who had taken foreign women for wives.

The List of Transgressors. <sup>18</sup>Among the priests, the following were found to have taken foreign women for wives: Of the descendants of Jeshua, son of Jozadak, and his kinsmen: Maaseiah, Eliezer, Jarib, and Gedaliah. <sup>19</sup>They pledged themselves to dismiss their wives, and as a guilt offering for their guilt they gave a ram from the flock. <sup>20</sup>Of the descendants of Immer: Hanani and Zebadiah; <sup>21</sup>of the descendants of Harim: Maaseiah, Elijah, Shemaiah, Jehiel, and Uziah; <sup>22</sup>of the descendants of Pashhur: Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethanel, Jozabad, and Elasa.

1:1 In the first year of Cyrus: the first regnal year of Cyrus was 539 B.C., but his first year as ruler of Babylon, after the conquest of that city, was 538 B.C., the year in which he issued an edict, replicated on the famous Cyrus cylinder, permitting the repatriation of peoples deported by the Babylonians.

1:2 The God of heaven: this title, used as in 7:12, 21, 23, corresponds to a title of the Zoroastrian supreme deity Ahura Mazda, though it is not certain that Cyrus was a Zoroastrian.

1:5 Heads of ancestral houses: the ancestral house was the basic organizational unit of the postexilic community, consisting of an extended kinship group claiming descent from a common ancestor. The patriarchs of these units played an important role in civic government.

1:8 Sheshbazzar, prince of Judah: often identified with Shenassar, fourth son of Jehoiachin, king of Judah, exiled in 598 B.C. (see 1 Chr 3:17–18), and therefore the uncle of Zerubbabel (Ezr 3:2–4). This identification is uncertain.

1:11 Five thousand four hundred: either this figure or the figures given for one or more of the items listed have been corrupted in the transmission of the text.

2:1–67 As it now stands, this list, which also appears at Neh 7:6–72, is an expanded form of lists of Babylonian repatriates from the sixth century B.C. It served to establish membership in the reconstituted Temple community; civic status and perhaps also title to property depended on this membership.

2:41 The singers: the term covers the composition as well as the rendition of liturgical music. Since they are listed as distinct from Levites (2:40), they had not yet attained levitical status, as in Chronicles (e.g., 1 Chr 9:33–34; 23:3–6).

2:42 The gatekeepers: their principal task was to protect the ritual purity of the temple area (e.g., 2 Chr 23:19). The author assumes that they were established by David as a distinct levitical category (1 Chr 15:18; 26:1–19).

2:63 The governor: the honorific title was also held by Nehemiah (Neh 8:9; 10:2). The identity of the governor is unknown; both Sheshbazzar (Ezr 5:14) and Zerubbabel (Hg 1:1, 14; 2:2, 21) are identified as governors of Judah in the early Persian period. Mal 1:8 refers to an unnamed governor, and the names of other occupants of the office (Yehoezer, Ahzai, Elnathan) occur on seal impressions, though their date is uncertain. Urim and Thummim: cf. Ex 28:30.

3:1–2 The seventh month: Tishri (September–October), apparently of the first year of the return (538 b.c.), followed by events in the second year (v. 8). In that case it was Sheshbazzar who laid the foundations of the Temple (5:16), and it was in the second year of Darius I (520 b.c.) that Jeshua and Zerubbabel resumed work on the Temple that had been temporarily interrupted (Ezr 4:24–5:1; Hg 1:1; 2:1). The author, or a later editor, has set the construction and dedication of the Temple under Darius I back into the earliest period of the return. Shealtiel was the oldest son of King Jehoiachin (1 Chr 3:17–19); Zerubbabel was therefore Jehoiachin's grandson; see note on Ezr 1:8.

3:3 Peoples of the lands: referring either to those who had never left Judah or to neighboring peoples—Edomites, Arabs, inhabitants of Samaria—who opposed those who returned.

3:11 “For he is good ... forever”: a refrain occurring frequently in liturgies of ancient Israel (cf. Ps 136).

4:2 Esarhaddon, king of Assyria: the enemies represent themselves as descendants of foreigners forcibly resettled in the Samaria region after the incorporation of the Northern Kingdom into the Assyrian empire (722 B.C.; cf. 2 Kgs 17:24). We have no record of a settlement under Esarhaddon (681–669 B.C.); the Aramaic source (Ezr 4:10) refers to a different resettlement under Osnappar/Ashurbanipal (668–627 B.C.).

4:4 Local inhabitants: lit., “the people of the land.”

4:5 Darius: Darius I (522–486 B.C.). The Temple-building narrative continues in v. 24. In between (vv. 6–23) is a series of notices about opposition to the returned exiles voiced at the Persian court in the early fifth century B.C., after the Temple had been built.

4:6 Ahasuerus: Xerxes (486–465 B.C.); the early years of his reign were occupied with revolts in several parts of the empire.

4:7 There is a note placed in the original text to indicate a change from Hebrew to Aramaic. The Aramaic section beginning here ends with 6:18; in 7:12–26 a royal letter is cited in Aramaic.

4:8–23 The letter to Artaxerxes I (465–424 B.C.) deals with the building of the fortification walls of Jerusalem, not the building of the Temple. The interruption of the work on the city wall some time before 445 B.C. was the occasion for the arrival of Nehemiah in the province (Neh 1:1–4; 2:1–5).

4:10 Osnappar: probably Ashurbanipal; see note on 4:2.

4:14 Eat the salt of the palace: the idiom signifies sharing in the benefits of the palace.

4:24 The second year ... of Darius: that is, 520 B.C.; it marks the beginning of the successful restoration of the Temple, completed within the five years following (5:1–6:18).

5:1 The prophets Haggai and Zechariah: Haggai and Zechariah were active during the early years of Darius I. They document the rebuilding of the Temple and the messianic expectations associated with the Davidic descendant Zerubbabel.

6:1–2 Babylon was the capital city of the satrapy to which Judah belonged; it was therefore the natural place to look. The decree was discovered eventually, however, in Ecbatana (Hamadan), the former capital of the Medes and summer residence of the Persian kings. Cf. the Hebrew version of the decree (1:2–4).

6:22 The king of Assyria: “Assyria” is perhaps used in a broad sense for the Persian empire; or the editor may have in mind the account of Hezekiah’s Passover which refers to those who had escaped the hand of the king of Assyria (2 Chr 30:6).

7:1–10 The editor’s introduction to Ezra’s autobiographical narrative. The context suggests the seventh year of Artaxerxes I, therefore, 458 B.C., as the date of Ezra’s arrival in Jerusalem. The arguments often advanced for 398 B.C., the seventh year of Artaxerxes II, or less often for the thirty-seventh year of Artaxerxes I, that is, 428 B.C., are inconclusive. For Ezra’s descent from Aaron, the editor has drawn selectively on 1 Chr 5:27–41. Seraiah, the chief priest executed by the Babylonians after the fall of Jerusalem (2 Kgs 25:18–21), cannot be Ezra’s father in a literal sense, and Ezra was not himself high priest.

7:22 Kors: see note on Ez 45:14; baths: see note on Is 5:10.

7:25 The wisdom of your God: with reference to the law (cf. Dt 4:6). The law in question was certainly not new, since it was assumed to be known by Jews in Judah and elsewhere. It corresponded to Pentateuchal law, though perhaps this had not yet been given its final form.

8:15 Ahava: an unidentified location near Babylon; also the name of the river or canal on which it stood (vv. 21, 31). A location near water was dictated by ritual as well as practical reasons (cf. Ps 137:1; Ez 1:1, 3; 3:15).

8:36 The story of Ezra’s mission is apparently continued from this point by Neh 7:72b–8:18, which may be read before Ezr 9:1.

9:4 All who were in dread ... God of Israel: lit., “all who trembled”; these people are also mentioned at 10:3, and a similar designation occurs at Is 66:2, 5, a text more or less contemporary with this passage. The allusion may be to a distinct social group of rigorist tendencies who supported Ezra’s marriage reform.

9:6–15 The prayer attributed to Ezra is a communal confession of sin, of a kind characteristic of the Second Temple period (cf. Neh 9:6–37; Dn 9:4–19; 1QS 1:4–2:1), but adapted to the present situation.

10:6 Johanan, son of Eliashib: if this Eliashib is identical with the high priest of that name during Nehemiah’s mission (Neh 3:1), it would be difficult to avoid the conclusion that Ezra followed Nehemiah. But Eliashib is a common name, and, on the hypothesis of Nehemiah’s chronological priority, it would be unlikely that Ezra would consort with a family which had “defiled the priesthood” (Neh 13:28–29).

10:9 The ninth month: Kislev (November–December), during the first of two rainy seasons in Palestine.

10:44 Some scholars find the continuation of the account of the marriage reform in Neh 9:1–5, though the date given at Neh 9:1 would fit better after Ezr 10:15; cf. Hg 2:10–14. The abrupt conclusion to Ezr 9–10 suggests that the policy of forced separation from foreign wives, not mandated by any law known to us, did not succeed. Assuming the chronological priority of Ezra, marriage outside the community was still prevalent during Nehemiah’s administration, and the remarkable demographic expansion of Judaism in the following centuries would be difficult to explain if Ezra’s measures had been put into effect.

Problems common to the combined books Ezra-Nehemiah have been pointed out in the Introduction to the Book of Ezra. The achievements of the two men were complementary; each helped to make it possible for Judaism to maintain its identity during the difficult days of the Restoration. Ezra was the great religious reformer who succeeded in establishing the Torah as the constitution of the returned community. Nehemiah, governor of the province of Judah, was the man of action who rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem and introduced necessary administrative reforms.

The biblical sources for Nehemiah's life and work are the autobiographical portions scattered through the book. They are called the "Memoirs of Nehemiah," and have been used more effectively by the editor than the "Memoirs of Ezra." The substantial authenticity of Nehemiah's memoirs is widely accepted. From these and other sources, the picture emerges of a man dedicated to the single purpose of the welfare of his people. While serving as cupbearer to the king at the Persian court in Susa, Nehemiah received permission from Artaxerxes I to fortify Jerusalem, and served as governor of Judah for two terms, the first lasting twelve years (445–432 B.C.), the second of unknown length (Neh 5:14, 13:6). Despite temperamental shortcomings, Nehemiah was a man of good practical sense combined with deep faith in God. He used his influence as governor of Judah to serve God and the fledgling Jewish community in Jerusalem.

The Book of Nehemiah is divided as follows:

- I. The Deeds of Nehemiah (1:1–7:72)
- II. Promulgation of the Law (8:1–10:40)
- III. Dedication of the Wall; Other Reforms (11:1–13:31)

Nehemiah Hears Bad News. <sup>1*</sup> The words of Nehemiah, son of Hacaliah.

In the month Kislev of the twentieth year, I was in the citadel of Susa <sup>2</sup>when Hanani, one of my brothers, came with other men from Judah. I asked them about the Jews, the remnant preserved after the captivity, and about Jerusalem. <sup>3</sup>They answered me: “The survivors of the captivity there in the province are in great distress and under reproach. The wall of Jerusalem has been breached, its gates gutted by fire.” <sup>4</sup>When I heard this report, I began to weep and continued mourning for several days, fasting and praying before the God of heaven.

<sup>5*a</sup> I prayed: “LORD, God of heaven, great and awesome God, you preserve your covenant of mercy with those who love you and keep your commandments. <sup>6b</sup> May your ears be attentive, and your eyes open, to hear the prayer that I, your servant, now offer in your presence day and night for your servants the Israelites, confessing the sins we have committed against you, I and my ancestral house included. <sup>7c</sup> We have greatly offended you, not keeping the commandments, the statutes, and the ordinances you entrusted to your servant Moses. <sup>8d</sup> But remember the admonition which you addressed to Moses, your servant, when you said: If you prove faithless, I will scatter you among the peoples; <sup>9</sup>but if you return to me and carefully keep my commandments, even though your outcasts have been driven to the farthest corner of the world, I will gather them from there, and bring them back to the place I have chosen as the dwelling place for my name. <sup>10e</sup> They are your servants, your people, whom you freed by your great might and strong hand. <sup>11f</sup> LORD, may your ears be attentive to the prayer of your servant and that of all your servants who willingly revere your name. Grant success to your servant this day, and let him find favor with this man”—for I was cupbearer to the king.*

The Four Stages of Return from Exile

THE CHRONOLOGY OF Ezra and Nehemiah is not completely clear. The following list of stages outlines the possibilities.

Stage 1: Return of the people by permission of the Persian emperor Cyrus in 538 B.C. The leader of the people was Sheshbazzar, and the group he led began to rebuild the temple but abandoned the project when there was local opposition.

Stage 2: Return by permission of the Persian emperor Darius I (late 6th century/early 5th century). The leaders were Zerubbabel and Jeshua, and the group completed the rebuilding of the temple.

Stage 3: A group under the leadership of Ezra, in either 458 or 398 B.C. This group brought a copy of the Law of Moses.

Stage 4: A group returning by permission of the Persian emperor Artaxerxes I in 445 B.C. Nehemiah came as the governor with a retinue, and worked with other returning groups to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem and re-establish worship and the Jewish community.

Appointment by the King. <sup>1</sup>In the month Nisan of the twentieth year of King Artaxerxes, when the wine was in my charge, I took some and offered it to the king. Because I had never before been sad in his presence, <sup>2</sup>the king asked me, “Why do you look sad? If you are not sick, you must be sad at heart.” Though I was seized with great fear, <sup>3</sup>I answered the king: “May the king live forever! How could I not look sad when the city where my ancestors are buried lies in ruins, and its gates consumed by fire?” <sup>4</sup>The king asked me, “What is it, then, that you wish?” I prayed to the God of heaven <sup>5</sup>and then answered the king: “If it please the king, and if your servant is deserving of your favor, send me to Judah, to the city where my ancestors are buried, that I may rebuild it.” <sup>6</sup>Then the king, with the queen seated beside him, asked me, “How long will your journey take and when will you return?” My answer was acceptable to the king and he agreed to let me go; I set a date for my return.

<sup>7</sup>I asked the king further: “If it please the king, let letters be given to me for the governors of West-of-Euphrates, that they may give me safe-conduct till I arrive in Judah; <sup>8g</sup> also a letter for Asaph, the keeper of the royal woods, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the temple citadel, for the city wall and the house that I will occupy.” Since I enjoyed the good favor of my God, the king granted my requests. <sup>9h</sup> Thus I proceeded to the governors of West-of-Euphrates and presented the king’s letters to them. The king also sent with me army officers and cavalry.

Circuit of the City. <sup>11i</sup>When I arrived in Jerusalem, and had been there three days, <sup>12</sup>I set out by night with only a few other men and with no other animals but my own mount (for I had not told anyone what my God had inspired me to do for Jerusalem). <sup>13*</sup> I rode out at night by the Valley Gate, passed by the Dragon Spring, and came to the Dung Gate, observing how the walls of Jerusalem were breached and its gates consumed by fire. <sup>14</sup>Then I passed over to the Fountain Gate and to the King’s Pool. Since there was no room here for my mount to pass with me astride, <sup>15</sup>I continued on foot up the wadi by night, inspecting the wall all the while, until I once more reached the Valley Gate, by which I went back in. <sup>16</sup>The magistrates knew nothing of where I had gone or what I was doing, for as yet I had disclosed nothing to the Jews, neither to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the magistrates, nor to the others who were to do the work.

Decision to Rebuild the City Wall. <sup>17</sup>Afterward I said to them: “You see the trouble we are in: how Jerusalem lies in ruins and its gates have been gutted by fire. Come, let us rebuild the wall of Jerusalem, so that we may no longer be a reproach!” <sup>18j</sup> Then I explained to them how God had shown his gracious favor to me, and what the king had said to me. They replied, “Let us begin building!” And they undertook the work with vigor.

<sup>19</sup>When they heard about this, Sanballat the Horonite, Tobiah the Ammonite official, and Geshem the Arab* mocked and ridiculed us. “What are you doing?” they asked. “Are you rebelling against the king?” <sup>20</sup>My answer to them was this: “It is the God of heaven who will grant us success. We, his servants, shall set about the rebuilding; but you have neither share nor claim nor memorial* in Jerusalem.”

List of Workers. <sup>1*</sup><sup>k</sup> Eliashib the high priest and his priestly kinsmen took up the task of rebuilding the Sheep Gate. They consecrated it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars, then continued the rebuilding to the Tower of the Hundred, the Tower of Hananel. <sup>2</sup>At their side the men of Jericho were rebuilding, and next to them was Zaccur, son of Imri. <sup>3</sup><sup>l</sup> The Fish Gate was rebuilt by the people of Hassenaah; they timbered it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. <sup>4</sup>At their side Meremoth, son of Uriah, son of Hakkoz, carried out the work of repair; next to him was Meshullam, son of Berechiah, son of Meshezabel; and next to him was Zadok, son of Baana. <sup>5</sup>Next to him the Tekoites carried out the work of repair; however, some of their most powerful men would not submit to the labor asked by their masters. <sup>6</sup>The Mishneh Gate* was repaired by Joiada, son of Paseah; and Meshullam, son of Besodeiah; they timbered it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. <sup>7</sup>At their side Melatiah the Gibeonite did the repairing, together with Jadon the Meronothite, and the men of Gibeon and of Mizpah, who were under the jurisdiction of the governor of West-of-Euphrates. <sup>8</sup>Next to them the work of repair was carried out by Uzziel, son of Harhaiah, a member of the goldsmiths' guild, and at his side was Hananiah, one of the perfumers' guild. They restored Jerusalem as far as the Broad Wall.* <sup>9</sup>Next to them the work of repair was carried out by Rephaiah, son of Hur, administrator of half the district of Jerusalem, <sup>10</sup>and at his side was Jedaiah, son of Harumaph, who repaired opposite his own house. Next to him Hattush, son of Hashabneiah, carried out the work of repair. <sup>11</sup>The adjoining sector, as far as the Oven Tower, was repaired by Malchijah, son of Harim, and Hasshub, son of Pahath-moab. <sup>12</sup>At their side the work of repair was carried out by Shallum, son of Hallohesh, administrator of half the district of Jerusalem, together with his daughters. <sup>13</sup>The Valley Gate was repaired by Hanun and the inhabitants of Zanoah; they rebuilt it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. They also repaired a thousand cubits of the wall up to the Dung Gate. <sup>14</sup>The Dung Gate was repaired by Malchijah, son of Rechab, administrator of the district of Beth-haccherem; he rebuilt it and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. <sup>15</sup>The Fountain Gate was repaired by Shallum, son of Colhozeh, administrator of the district of Mizpah; he rebuilt it, roofed it, and set up its doors, its bolts, and its bars. He also repaired the wall of the Aqueduct Pool near the King's Garden as far as the steps that lead down from the City of David. <sup>16</sup>After him, the work of repair was carried out by Nehemiah, son of Azbuk, administrator of half the district of Bethzur, to a place opposite the tombs of David, as far as the Artificial Pool and the barracks.

goldsmiths' guild, carried out the work of repair as far as the quarters of the temple servants and the merchants, in front of the Gate of Inspection and as far as the upper chamber of the Angle. <sup>32</sup>Between the upper chamber of the Angle and the Sheep Gate, the goldsmiths and the merchants carried out the work of repair.

Opposition from Judah's Enemies. <sup>33</sup>When Sanballat heard that we were rebuilding the wall, he became angry and very much incensed. He ridiculed the Jews, <sup>34</sup>saying in the presence of his associates and the troops of Samaria: "What are these miserable Jews trying to do? Will they complete their restoration in a single day? Will they recover these stones, burnt as they are, from the heaps of dust?" <sup>35</sup>Tobiah the Ammonite was beside him, and he said: "Whatever they are building—if a fox attacks it, it will breach their wall of stones!" <sup>36</sup>Hear, our God, how we were mocked! Turn back their reproach upon their own heads and deliver them up as plunder in a land of captivity! <sup>37n</sup> Do not hide their crime and do not let their sin be blotted out in your sight, for they insulted the builders to their faces! <sup>38</sup>We, however, continued to build the wall, and soon it was completed up to half its height. The people worked enthusiastically.

CHAPTER 4

See RG 242–43

<sup>1</sup>When Sanballat, Tobiah, the Arabs, the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites heard that the restoration of the walls of Jerusalem was progressing—for the gaps were beginning to be closed up—they became extremely angry.

<sup>2</sup>They all plotted together to come and fight against Jerusalem and to throw us into confusion. <sup>3</sup>We prayed to our God and posted a watch against them day and night for fear of what they might do. <sup>4</sup>Meanwhile the Judahites were saying:

“Slackened is the bearers’ strength,
there is no end to the rubbish;
Never will we be able to rebuild the wall.”

<sup>6</sup>When the Jews who lived near them had come to us from one place after another, and had told us ten times over that they were about to attack us, <sup>7</sup>I stationed guards down below, behind the wall, near the exposed points, assigning them by family groups with their swords, spears, and bows. <sup>8</sup>I made an inspection, then addressed these words to the nobles, the magistrates, and the rest of the people: “Do not fear them! Keep in mind the LORD, who is great and to be feared, and fight for your kindred, your sons and daughters, your wives and your homes.” <sup>9</sup>When our enemies realized that we had been warned and that God had upset their plan, we all went back, each to our own task at the wall.

wall; <sup>14</sup>wherever you hear the trumpet sound, join us there; our God will fight with us.” <sup>15</sup>Thus we went on with the work, half with spears in hand, from daybreak till the stars came out.

<sup>16</sup>At the same time I told the people to spend the nights inside Jerusalem, each with an attendant, so that they might serve as a guard by night and a working force by day. <sup>17</sup>Neither I, nor my kindred, nor any of my attendants, nor any of the bodyguard that accompanied me took off our clothes; everyone kept a weapon at hand.

CHAPTER 5

Social and Economic Problems. <sup>1p</sup> Then there rose a great outcry of the people and their wives against certain of their Jewish kindred.* <sup>2</sup>Some said: “We are forced to pawn our sons and daughters in order to get grain to eat that we may live.” <sup>3</sup>Others said: “We are forced to pawn our fields, our vineyards, and our houses, that we may have grain during the famine.” <sup>4</sup>Still others said: “To pay the king’s tax we have borrowed money on our fields and vineyards.” <sup>5q</sup> And though these are our own kindred, and our children are as good as theirs, we have had to reduce our sons and daughters to slavery, and violence has been done to some of our daughters! Yet we can do nothing about it, for our fields and vineyards belong to others.”

<sup>6</sup>I was extremely angry when I heard the reasons for their complaint. <sup>7r</sup> After some deliberation, I called the nobles and magistrates to account, saying to them, “You are exacting interest from your own kindred!”* I then rebuked them severely, <sup>8s</sup> saying to them: “As far as we were able, we bought back our Jewish kindred who had been sold to Gentiles; you, however, are selling your own kindred, to have them bought back by us.” They remained silent, for they could find no answer. <sup>9</sup>I continued: “What you are doing is not good. Should you not conduct yourselves out of fear of our God rather than fear of the reproach of our Gentile enemies? <sup>10</sup>I myself, my kindred, and my attendants have lent the people money and grain without charge. Let us put an end to this usury! <sup>11</sup>Return to them this very day their fields, vineyards, olive groves, and houses, together with the interest on the money, the grain, the wine, and the oil that you have lent them.” <sup>12</sup>They answered: “We will return everything and exact nothing further from them. We will do just what you ask.” Then I called for the priests to administer an oath to them that they would do as they had promised. <sup>13</sup>I shook out the folds of my garment, saying, “Thus may God shake from home and fortune every man who fails to keep this promise, and may he thus be shaken out and emptied!” And the whole assembly answered, “Amen,” and praised the LORD. Then the people did as they had promised.

Nehemiah's Record. <sup>14</sup>Moreover, from the time that King Artaxerxes appointed me governor in the land of Judah, from his twentieth to his thirty-second year—during these twelve years neither I nor my kindred lived off the governor's food allowance. <sup>15</sup>The earlier governors,* my predecessors, had laid a heavy burden on the people, taking from them each day forty silver shekels for their food; then, too, their attendants oppressed the people. But I, because I feared God, did not do this. <sup>16</sup>In addition, though I had acquired no land of my own, I did my part in this work on the wall, and all my attendants were gathered there for the work. <sup>17</sup>Though I set my table for a hundred and fifty persons, Jews and magistrates, as well as the neighboring Gentiles who came to us, <sup>18</sup>and though the daily preparations were made at my expense—one ox, six choice sheep, poultry—besides all kinds of wine in abundance every ten days, despite this I did not claim the governor's allowance, for the labor lay heavy upon this people. <sup>19</sup>Keep in mind, my God, to my credit all that I did for this people.

CHAPTER 6

Plots Against Nehemiah. <sup>1</sup>When it had been reported to Sanballat, Tobiah, Geshem the Arab, and our other enemies that I had rebuilt the wall and that there was no breach left in it (though up to that time I had not yet set up the doors in the gates), <sup>2</sup>Sanballat and Geshem sent me this message: “Come, let us hold council together at Chephirim in the plain of Ono.” They were planning to do me harm. <sup>3</sup>I sent messengers to them with this reply: “I am engaged in a great enterprise and am unable to come down. Why should the work stop, while I leave it to come down to you?” <sup>4</sup>Four times they sent me this same proposal, and each time I gave the same reply. <sup>5</sup>Then, the fifth time, Sanballat sent me the same message by one of his servants, who bore an unsealed letter <sup>6</sup>containing this text: “Among the nations it has been reported—Gashmu* is witness to this—that you and the Jews are planning a rebellion; that for this reason you are rebuilding the wall; and that you are to be their king. <sup>7</sup>Also, that you have set up prophets in Jerusalem to proclaim you king of Judah. Now, since matters like these will reach the ear of the king, come, let us hold council together.” <sup>8</sup>I sent him this answer: “Nothing of what you report is happening; rather, it is the invention of your own mind.” <sup>9</sup>They were all trying to intimidate us, thinking, “They will be discouraged from continuing with the work, and it will never be completed.” But instead, I then redoubled my efforts.

<sup>10</sup>I went to the house of Shemaiah, son of Delaiah, son of Mehetabel, who was confined to his house, and he said: “Let us meet in the house of God, inside the temple building; let us lock the doors of the temple. For they are coming to kill you—by night they are coming to kill you.” <sup>11</sup>My answer was: “A man like me take flight? Should a man like me enter the temple to save his life? I will not go!” <sup>12</sup>For on consideration, it was plain to me that God had not sent him; rather, because Tobiah and Sanballat had bribed him, he voiced this prophecy concerning me, <sup>13</sup>that I might act on it out of fear and commit this sin. Then they would have had a shameful story with which to discredit me. <sup>14t</sup> Keep in mind Tobiah and Sanballat, my God, because of these things they did; keep in mind as well Noadiah the woman prophet and the other prophets who were trying to intimidate me.

Completion of the Work. <sup>15</sup>The wall was finished on the twenty-fifth day of Elul; * the work had taken fifty-two days. <sup>16u</sup> When all our enemies had heard of this, and all the neighboring Gentiles round about had taken note of it, they were very discouraged, for they knew that it was with our God's help that this work had been completed. <sup>17</sup>At that same time, however, many letters were going to Tobiah from the nobles of Judah, and Tobiah's letters were reaching them, <sup>18</sup>for many in Judah were in league with him, since he was the son-in-law of Shecaniah, son of Arah, and his son Jehohanan had married the daughter of Meshullam, son of Berechiah. <sup>19</sup>They would praise his good deeds in my presence and relate to him whatever I said; and Tobiah sent letters trying to intimidate me.

CHAPTER 7

Census of the Province. <sup>4</sup>Now, the city was quite wide and spacious, but its population was small, and none of the houses had been rebuilt. <sup>5</sup>When my God had inspired me to gather together the nobles, the magistrates, and the people, and to examine their family records, I came upon the family list of those who had returned in the earliest period. There I found the following written:

The census of the people of Israel: <sup>8</sup>descendants of Parosh, two thousand one hundred and seventy-two; <sup>9</sup>descendants of Shephatiah, three hundred and seventytwo; <sup>10</sup>descendants of Arah, six hundred and fifty-two; <sup>11</sup>descendants of Pahathmoab who were descendants of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand eight hundred and eighteen; <sup>12</sup>descendants of Elam, one thousand two hundred and fifty-four; <sup>13</sup>descendants of Zattu, eight hundred and fortyfive; <sup>14</sup>descendants of Zaccai, seven hundred and sixty; <sup>15</sup>descendants of Binnui, six hundred and forty-eight; <sup>16</sup>descendants of Bebai, six hundred and twentyeight; <sup>17</sup>descendants of Azgad, two thousand three hundred and twenty-two; <sup>18</sup>descendants of Adonikam, six hundred and sixty-seven; <sup>19</sup>descendants of Bigvai, two thousand and sixty-seven; <sup>20</sup>descendants of Adin, six hundred and fifty-five; <sup>21</sup>descendants of Ater who were descendants of Hezekiah, ninety-eight; <sup>22</sup>descendants of Hashum, three hundred and twenty-eight; <sup>23</sup>descendants of Bezai, three hundred and twenty-four; <sup>24</sup>descendants of Hariph, one hundred and twelve; <sup>25</sup>descendants of Gibeon, ninety-five; <sup>26</sup>people of Bethlehem and Netophah, one hundred and eighty-eight; <sup>27</sup>people of Anathoth, one hundred and twenty-eight; <sup>28</sup>people of Beth-azmaveth, forty-two; <sup>29</sup>people of Kiriath-jearim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred and forty-three; <sup>30</sup>people of Ramah and Geba, six hundred and twentyone; <sup>31</sup>people of Michmas, one hundred and twenty-two; <sup>32</sup>people of Bethel and Ai, one hundred and twenty-three; <sup>33</sup>people of Nebo, fifty-two; <sup>34</sup>descendants of the other Elam, one thousand two hundred and fiftyfour; <sup>35</sup>descendants of Harim, three hundred and twenty; <sup>36</sup>descendants of Jericho, three hundred and forty-five; <sup>37</sup>descendants of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred and twenty-one; <sup>38</sup>descendants of Senaah, three thousand nine hundred and thirty.

II. Promulgation of the Law

CHAPTER 8

See RG 243–44

Ezra Reads the Law. <sup>1*w</sup> Now when the seventh month came, the whole people gathered as one in the square in front of the Water Gate, and they called upon Ezra the scribe to bring forth the book of the law of Moses which the LORD had commanded for Israel. <sup>2x</sup> On the first day of the seventh month, therefore, Ezra the priest brought the law before the assembly, which consisted of men, women, and those children old enough to understand. <sup>3</sup> In the square in front of the Water Gate, Ezra read out of the book from daybreak till midday, in the presence of the men, the women, and those children old enough to understand; and all the people listened attentively to the book of the law. <sup>4</sup> Ezra the scribe stood on a wooden platform that had been made for the occasion; at his right side stood Mattithiah, Shema, Anaiah, Uriah, Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, and on his left Pedaiah, Mishael, Malchijah, Hashum, Hashbaddanah, Zechariah, Meshullam. <sup>5</sup> Ezra opened the scroll so that all the people might see it, for he was standing higher than any of the people. When he opened it, all the people stood. <sup>6</sup> Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God, and all the people, their hands raised high, answered, “Amen, amen!” Then they knelt down and bowed before the LORD, their faces to the ground. <sup>7y</sup> The Levites Jeshua, Bani, Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodiah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, and Pelaiah explained the law to the people, who remained in their places. <sup>8z</sup> Ezra read clearly from the book of the law of God, interpreting it so that all could understand what was read. <sup>9</sup> Then Nehemiah, that is, the governor, and Ezra the priest-scribe, and the Levites who were instructing the people said to all the people: “Today is holy to the LORD your God. Do not lament, do not weep!”— for all the people were weeping as they heard the words of the law. <sup>10a</sup> He continued: “Go, eat rich foods and drink sweet drinks, and allot portions to those who had nothing prepared; for today is holy to our LORD. Do not be saddened this day, for rejoicing in the LORD is your strength!” <sup>11</sup> And the Levites quieted all the people, saying, “Silence! Today is holy, do not be saddened.” <sup>12</sup> Then all the people began to eat and drink, to distribute portions, and to celebrate with great joy, for they understood the words that had been explained to them.

The Feast of Booths. <sup>13</sup>On the second day, the heads of ancestral houses of the whole people, and also the priests and the Levites, gathered around Ezra the scribe to study the words of the law. <sup>14b</sup> They found it written in the law commanded by the LORD through Moses that the Israelites should dwell in booths during the feast of the seventh month; <sup>15c</sup> and that they should have this proclamation made throughout their cities and in Jerusalem: “Go out into the hill country and bring in branches of olive, oleaster, myrtle, palm, and other trees in leaf, to make booths, as it is written.” <sup>16</sup>The people went out and brought in branches with which they made booths for themselves, on the roof of their houses, in their courtyards, in the courts of the house of God, and in the squares of the Water Gate and the Gate of Ephraim. <sup>17d</sup> So the entire assembly of the returned exiles made booths and dwelt in them. Now the Israelites had done nothing of this sort from the days of Jeshua, son of Nun, until this occasion; therefore there was very great joy. <sup>18</sup>Ezra read from the book of the law of God day after day, from the first day to the last. They kept the feast for seven days, and the solemn assembly on the eighth day, as was required.

CHAPTER 9

Public Confession of Sin. <sup>1*</sup> <sup>e</sup> On the twenty-fourth day of this month, the Israelites gathered together while fasting and wearing sackcloth, their heads covered with dust. <sup>2f</sup> Those of Israelite descent separated themselves from all who were of foreign extraction, then stood forward and confessed their sins and the guilty deeds of their ancestors. <sup>3</sup> When they had taken their places, they read from the book of the law of the LORD their God, for a fourth of the day, and during another fourth they made their confession and bowed down before the LORD their God. <sup>4</sup> Standing on the platform of the Levites were Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, who cried out to the LORD their God, with a loud voice. <sup>5g</sup> The Levites Jeshua, Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabneiah, Sherebiah, Hodiah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah said, “Arise, bless the LORD, your God,

from eternity to eternity!”
“And may they bless your glorious name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise.”

<sup>6*</sup> “You are the LORD, you alone;
You made the heavens,
the highest heavens and all their host,
The earth and all that is upon it,
the seas and all that is in them.
To all of them you give life,
the heavenly hosts bow down before
you.

<sup>7h</sup> You are the LORD God who chose Abram,
Who brought him from Ur of the Chaldees,
who named him Abraham.

<sup>8i</sup> You found his heart faithful in your sight,
you made the covenant with him
To give the land of the Canaanites, Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Jebusites, and Girgashites to him and his descendants.

You fulfilled your promises, for you are just.

9j You saw the affliction of our ancestors in Egypt,
you heard their cry by the Red Sea;

10k You worked signs and wonders against Pharaoh, against all his servants and the people
of his land,

Because you knew of their insolence toward them;
thus you made for yourself a name
even to this day.

11l The sea you divided before them, on dry ground they passed through the midst of the sea;

Their pursuers you hurled into the depths,
like a stone into the mighty waters.

12m With a column of cloud you led them
by day,
and by night with a column of fire,
To light the way of their journey,
the way in which they must travel.

13n On Mount Sinai you came down,
you spoke with them from heaven;
You gave them just ordinances, true laws,
good statutes and commandments;

14o Your holy sabbath you made known to
them,
commandments, statutes, and law you prescribed for them,
by the hand of Moses your servant.

15p Food from heaven you gave them in their hunger,
water from a rock you sent them in their thirst.

You told them to enter and occupy the land
which you had sworn to give them.

16 But they, our ancestors, proved to be insolent;
they were obdurate* and did not obey your commandments.

17<sup>q</sup> They refused to obey and no longer remembered
the wonders you had worked for them.
They were obdurate and appointed a leader
in order to return to their slavery in Egypt.

But you are a forgiving God, gracious and merciful,
slow to anger and rich in mercy;
you did not forsake them.

18<sup>r</sup> Though they made for themselves a molten calf,
and proclaimed, 'Here is your God who brought you up from Egypt,' and were guilty of great insults,

19 Yet in your great mercy
you did not forsake them in the desert.
By day the column of cloud did not cease to lead them on their journey, by night the column of fire did not cease to light the way they were to travel.

20<sup>s</sup> Your good spirit you bestowed on them, to give them understanding;
Your manna you did not withhold from
their mouths,
and you gave them water in their thirst.

21<sup>t</sup> Forty years in the desert you sustained
them:
they did not want;
Their garments did not become worn,
and their feet did not swell.

22<sup>u</sup> You gave them kingdoms and peoples, which you divided among them as border lands.
They possessed the land of Sihon, king of Heshbon,
and the land of Og, king of Bashan.

23<sup>v</sup> You made their children as numerous as the stars of the heavens, and you brought them into the land which you had commanded their ancestors to enter and possess.

<sup>24</sup>The children went in to possess the land;
you humbled before them the Canaanite inhabitants and gave them into their power,
Their kings and the peoples of the land,
to do with them as they wished.

<sup>25</sup><sup>w</sup> They captured fortified cities and fertile land;
they took possession of houses filled with all good things, Cisterns already dug, vineyards, olive groves,
and fruit trees in abundance.
They ate and had their fill, fattened and feasted on your great goodness.

<sup>26</sup><sup>x</sup> But they were contemptuous and rebelled against you:
they cast your law behind their backs.
They murdered your prophets who bore witness against them to bring them back to you:
they were guilty of great insults.

<sup>27</sup><sup>y</sup> Therefore you gave them into the power of their enemies,
who oppressed them.
But in the time of their oppression they would cry out to you,
and you would hear them from heaven,
And according to your great mercy give them saviors to deliver them from the power of their enemies.

<sup>28</sup>As soon as they had relief, they would go back to doing evil in your sight.
Again you abandoned them to the power
of their enemies,
who crushed them.
Once again they cried out to you, and you heard them from heaven and delivered them according to your mercy, many times over.

29<sup>z</sup> You bore witness against them,
to bring them back to your law.
But they were insolent and would not obey your commandments;
They sinned against your ordinances,
which give life to those who keep them.
They turned stubborn backs, stiffened their necks,
and would not obey.

30 You were patient with them for many years, bearing witness against them through your spirit, by means of your prophets;
Still they would not listen.
Therefore you delivered them into the power of the peoples of the lands.

31 Yet in your great mercy you did not completely destroy them and did not forsake them, for you are a gracious and merciful God.

32<sup>a</sup> Now, our God, great, mighty, and awesome God,
who preserves the covenant of mercy,
do not discount all the hardship that has befallen us,

Our kings, our princes, our priests, our prophets, our ancestors, and your entire people,
from the time of the kings of Assyria until this day!

33<sup>b</sup> In all that has come upon us you have been just,
for you kept faith while we have done evil.

34 Yes, our kings, our princes, our priests, and our ancestors
have not kept your law;
They paid no attention to your commandments
and the warnings which you gave them.

35 While they were still in their kingdom, in the midst of the many good things that you had given them

And in the wide, fertile land that you had spread out before them,
They did not serve you nor turn away from their evil deeds.

<sup>36</sup>Today we are slaves!
As for the land which you gave our ancestors
That they might eat its fruits and good things—
see, we have become slaves upon it!

<sup>37</sup>Its rich produce goes to the kings
you set over us because of our sins,
Who rule over our bodies and our cattle
as they please.
We are in great distress!”

<sup>31f</sup> We will not marry our daughters to the local inhabitants, and we will not accept their daughters for our sons.

<sup>32g</sup> When the local inhabitants bring in merchandise or any kind of grain for sale on the sabbath day, we will not buy from them on the sabbath or on any other holy day. In the seventh year we will forgo the produce, and forgive every kind of debt.

<sup>33h</sup> We impose these commandments on ourselves: to give a third of a shekel each year for the service of the house of our God, <sup>34f</sup>for the showbread, the daily grain offering, the daily burnt offering, for the sabbaths, new moons, and festivals, for the holy offerings and sin offerings to make atonement for Israel, for every service of the house of our God. <sup>35i</sup> We, priests, Levites, and people, have determined by lot concerning the procurement of wood: it is to be brought to the house of our God by each of our ancestral houses at stated times each year, to be burnt on the altar of the LORD, our God, as the law prescribes. <sup>36j</sup> We have agreed to bring each year to the house of the LORD the first fruits of our fields and of our fruit trees, of every kind; <sup>37</sup>also, as is prescribed in the law, to bring to the house of our God, to the priests who serve in the house of our God, the firstborn of our children and our animals, including the firstborn of our flocks and herds. <sup>38k</sup> The first batch of our dough, and our offerings of the fruit of every tree, of wine and oil, we will bring to the priests, to the chambers of the house of our God. We will not neglect the house of our God.

Resettlement of Jerusalem. <sup>1*</sup> <sup>l</sup>The administrators took up residence in Jerusalem, and the rest of the people cast lots to bring one man in ten to reside in Jerusalem, the holy city, while the other nine would remain in the other cities. <sup>2</sup>The people blessed all those who willingly agreed to take up residence in Jerusalem.

<sup>4</sup>In Jerusalem dwelt both Judahites and Benjaminites. Of the Judahites: Athaiah, son of Uzziah, son of Zechariah, son of Amariah, son of Shephatiah, son of Mehallalel, of the sons of Perez; <sup>5</sup>Maaseiah, son of Baruch, son of Colhozeh, son of Hazaiah, son of Adaiah, son of Joiarib, son of Zechariah, a son of the Shelanites. <sup>6</sup>The total of the descendants of Perez who dwelt in Jerusalem was four hundred and sixty-eight people of substance.

<sup>7</sup>These were the Benjaminites: Sallu, son of Meshullam, son of Joed, son of Pedaiah, son of Kolaiah, son of Maaseiah, son of Ithiel, son of Jeshaiiah, <sup>8</sup>and his kinsmen, warriors, nine hundred and twenty-eight in number. <sup>9</sup>Joel, son of Zichri, was their commander, and Judah, son of Hassenuah, was second in command of the city.

<sup>10</sup>Among the priests were: Jedaiah; Joiarib; Jachin; <sup>11</sup>Seraiah, son of Hilkiyah, son of Meshullam, son of Zadok, son of Meraioth, son of Ahitub, the ruler of the house of God, <sup>12</sup>and their kinsmen who carried out the temple service, eight hundred and twenty-two; Adaiah, son of Jeroham, son of Pelaliah, son of Amzi, son of Zechariah, son of Pashhur, son of Malchijah, <sup>13</sup>and his kinsmen, heads of ancestral houses, two hundred and fortytwo; and Amasai, son of Azarel, son of Ahzai, son of Meshillemoth, son of Immer, <sup>14</sup>and his kinsmen, warriors, one hundred and twenty-eight. Their commander was Zabdiel, son of Haggadol.

who were placed over the external affairs of the house of God; <sup>17</sup>Mattaniah, son of Micah, son of Zabdi, son of Asaph, director of the psalms, who led the thanksgiving at prayer; Bakbukiah, second in rank among his kinsmen; and Abda, son of Shammua, son of Galal, son of Jeduthun. <sup>18</sup>The total of the Levites in the holy city was two hundred and eighty-four.

<sup>20</sup>The rest of Israel, including priests and Levites, were in all the other cities of Judah in their own inheritances.

<sup>22n</sup> The prefect of the Levites in Jerusalem was Uzzi, son of Bani, son of Hashabiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Micah; he was one of the descendants of Asaph, the singers appointed to the service of the house of God— <sup>23</sup>for they had been appointed by royal decree, and there was a fixed schedule for the singers assigning them their daily duties.

CHAPTER 12

High Priests. <sup>10*</sup> Jeshua became the father of Joiakim, Joiakim the father of Eliashib, and Eliashib the father of Joiada; <sup>11</sup>Joiada the father of Johanan, and Johanan the father of Jaddua.

<sup>22</sup>In the time of Eliashib, Joiada, Johanan, and Jaddua, the heads of ancestral houses of the priests were written down in the Book of Chronicles, up until the reign of Darius the Persian. <sup>23</sup>The sons of Levi: the family heads were written down in the Book of Chronicles, up until the time of Johanan, the son of Eliashib.

Meshullam, Talmon, and Akkub were gatekeepers. They guarded the storerooms at the gates.

<sup>26</sup>All these lived in the time of Joiakim, son of Jeshua, son of Jozadak (and in the time of Nehemiah the governor and of Ezra the priest-scribe).

Dedication of the Wall. <sup>27*</sup> At the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem, the Levites were sought out wherever they lived and were brought to Jerusalem to celebrate a joyful dedication with thanksgiving hymns and the music of cymbals, harps, and lyres. <sup>28</sup>The levitical singers gathered together from the region about Jerusalem, from the villages of the Netophathites, <sup>29</sup>from Beth-gilgal, and from the plains of Geba and Azmaveth (for the singers had built themselves settlements about Jerusalem). <sup>30</sup>The priests and Levites first purified themselves, then they purified the people, the gates, and the wall.

<sup>40</sup>Both choirs took up a position in the house of God; I, too, and half the magistrates with me, <sup>41</sup>together with the priests Eliakim, Maaseiah, Minjamin, Micaiah, Elieoenai, Zechariah, Hananiah, with the trumpets, <sup>42</sup>and Maaseiah, Shemaiah, Eleazar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Malchijah, Elam, and Ezer. The singers were heard under the leadership of Jezrahiah. <sup>43</sup>Great sacrifices were offered on that day, and they rejoiced, for God had given them cause for great rejoicing. The women and the children joined in, and the rejoicing at Jerusalem could be heard from far off.

<sup>44*</sup> <sup>s</sup> At that time men were appointed over the chambers set aside for stores, offerings, first fruits, and tithes; in them they were to collect from the fields of the various cities the portions legally assigned to the priests and Levites. For Judah rejoiced in its appointed priests and Levites <sup>45</sup>who carried out the ministry of their God and the ministry of purification (as did the singers and the gatekeepers) in accordance with the prescriptions of David and Solomon, his son. <sup>46t</sup> For in the days of David and Asaph, long ago, there were leaders of singers for songs of praise and thanksgiving to God. <sup>47u</sup> All Israel, in the days of Zerubbabel and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the singers and the gatekeepers their portions, according to their daily needs. They made their consecrated offering to the Levites, and the Levites made theirs to the descendants of Aaron.

CHAPTER 13

<sup>1*</sup> <sup>v</sup> At that time, when the book of Moses was being read in the hearing of the people, it was found written there: “No Ammonite or Moabite may ever be admitted into the assembly of God; <sup>2w</sup> for they did not meet the Israelites with food and water, but they hired Balaam to curse them, though our God turned the curse into a blessing.” <sup>3x</sup> When they had heard the law, they separated all those of mixed descent from Israel.

Reform in the Temple. <sup>4*</sup> Before this, the priest Eliashib, who had been placed in charge of the chambers of the house of our God and who was an associate of Tobiah, <sup>5y</sup> had set aside for the latter’s use a large chamber in which had previously been stored the grain offerings, incense and vessels, the tithes in grain, wine, and oil allotted to the Levites, singers, and gatekeepers, and the offerings due the priests. <sup>6</sup> During all this time I had not been in Jerusalem, for in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes, * king of Babylon, I had gone back to the king. After a suitable period of time, however, I asked leave of the king <sup>7</sup> and returned to Jerusalem, where I discovered the evil thing that Eliashib had done for Tobiah, in setting aside for him a chamber in the courts of the house of God. <sup>8</sup> This displeased me very much, so I had all of Tobiah’s household goods thrown outside the chamber. <sup>9</sup> Then I gave orders to purify the chambers, and I brought back the vessels of the house of God, the grain offerings, and the incense.

<sup>10</sup> I learned, too, that the portions due the Levites were no longer being given, so that the Levites and the singers who should have been carrying out the services had deserted to their own fields. <sup>11</sup> I reprimanded the magistrates, demanding, “Why is the house of God neglected?” Then I brought the Levites together and had them resume their stations. <sup>12z</sup> All Judah once more brought in the tithes of grain, wine, and oil to the storerooms. <sup>13</sup> In charge of the storerooms I appointed Shele-miah the priest, Zadok the scribe, and Pedaiah, one of the Levites, together with Hanan, son of Zaccur, son of Mattaniah, as their assistant; for they were considered trustworthy. It was their duty to make the distribution to their kinsmen. <sup>14</sup> Remember this to my credit, my God! Do not forget the good deeds I have done for the house of my God and its services!

Sabbath Observance. <sup>15a</sup> In those days I perceived that people in Judah were treading the wine presses on the sabbath; that they were bringing in sheaves of grain, loading them on their donkeys, together with wine, grapes, figs, and every other kind of load, and bringing them to Jerusalem on the sabbath day. I warned them to sell none of these provisions. <sup>16</sup>In Jerusalem itself the Tyrians residing there were importing fish and every other kind of merchandise and selling it to the Judahites on the sabbath. <sup>17</sup>I reprimanded the nobles of Judah, demanding: “What is this evil thing you are doing, profaning the sabbath day? <sup>18</sup>Did not your ancestors act in this same way, with the result that our God has brought all this evil upon us and upon this city? Would you add to the wrath against Israel by once more profaning the sabbath?”

<sup>19</sup>When the shadows were falling on the gates of Jerusalem before the sabbath, I ordered the doors to be closed and prohibited their reopening until after the sabbath. I posted some of my own people at the gates so that no load might enter on the sabbath day. <sup>20</sup>The merchants and sellers of various kinds of merchandise spent the night once or twice outside Jerusalem, <sup>21</sup>but then I warned them: “Why do you spend the night alongside the wall? If you keep this up, I will beat you!” From that time on, they did not return on the sabbath. <sup>22</sup>Then I ordered the Levites to purify themselves and to watch the gates, so that the sabbath day might be kept holy. This, too, remember in my favor, my God, and have mercy on me in accordance with your great mercy!

Mixed Marriages. <sup>23b</sup> Also in those days I saw Jews who had married women of Ashdod, Ammon, or Moab. <sup>24</sup>Of their children, half spoke the language of Ashdod,* or of one of the other peoples, and none of them knew how to speak the language of Judah. <sup>25</sup>So I reprimanded and cursed them; I beat some of their men and pulled out their hair; and I adjured them by God: “You shall not marry your daughters to their sons nor accept any of their daughters for your sons or for yourselves! <sup>26c</sup> Did not Solomon, the king of Israel, sin because of them? Though among the many nations there was no king like him, and though he was beloved of his God and God had made him king over all Israel, yet even he was led into sin by foreign women. <sup>27</sup>Must it also be heard of you that you have done this same terrible evil, betraying our God by marrying foreign women?”

<sup>28d</sup> One of the sons of Joiada, son of Eliashib the high priest, was the son-in-law of Sanballat the Horonite! I drove him from my presence.

<sup>30</sup>So I cleansed them of all foreign contamination. I established the various functions for the priests and Levites, so that each had an appointed task. <sup>31e</sup> I also provided for the procurement of wood at stated times and for the first fruits. Remember this in my favor, my God!

1:1 The first mission of Nehemiah, from the twentieth year of Artaxerxes I, lasted from the spring (2:1) of 445 B.C. until 433 B.C. (5:14). It is recounted in 1:1–6:15; 12:27–43; 6:16–7:5; 11:1–21; in terms of chronology, these texts may usefully be read in that order. Kislev: the ninth month (November–December). Susa: the winter residence of the Persian kings, in southwest Iran.

1:5 Nehemiah's prayer is a communal confession of sin, characteristic of Second Temple piety; cf. Ezr 9:6–15; Neh 9:6–37; Dn 9:4–19.

1:11 Cupbearer to the king: an important official in the royal household.

2:10 Sanballat the Horonite: the governor of the province of Samaria (3:33–34), apparently a native of one of the Bethhorons. A letter from the Jews living at Elephantine in southern Egypt, dated 408–407 B.C., mentions “Delayah and Shelemyah, the sons of Sanballat, the governor of Samaria,” and papyri discovered in the Wadi ed-Dâliyeh in the Jordan Valley refer to a Sanballat, governor of Samaria, during the last years of Persian rule. Although his own name was Babylonian—Sin-uballit, i.e., “Sin (the moon god) has given life”—his two sons had names based on the divine name Yhwh. Tobiah the Ammonite official: the governor of the province of Ammon in Transjordan. His title, “official,” lit., “servant” (in Hebrew, ‘ebed), could also be understood as “slave,” and Nehemiah perhaps meant it in this derogatory sense. The Tobiads remained a powerful family even in Maccabean times, and something of their history is known from 2 Maccabees (3:11; 12:17), Josephus (Ant. 12:160–236), the Zeno papyri of the third century B.C., and excavation at ‘Araq el-‘Emir in Jordan. Sanballat and Tobiah, together with Geshem the Arab (Neh 2:19; 6:1–2), who was probably in charge of Edom and the regions to the south and southeast of Judah, opposed the rebuilding of Jerusalem's walls on political grounds; the city was the capital of a rival province.

2:13–15 Nehemiah left Jerusalem by the Valley Gate near the northwestern end of the old City of David and went south down the Tyropoean Valley toward the Dragon Spring (or the En-rogel [Jos 15:7; 18:16; 2 Sm 17:17; 1 Kgs 1:9], now known as Job's Well) at the juncture of the Valley of Hinnom and the Kidron Valley. He then turned north at the Dung Gate (or the Potsherd Gate of Jer 19:2) at the southern end of the city and proceeded up the wadi, that is, the Kidron Valley, passing the Fountain Gate (at the Spring of Gihon) and the King's Pool (unidentified); finally he turned west and then south to his starting point.

2:19 Geshem the Arab: see also 6:1–2; in 6:6 the name occurs as Gashmu. He is known from a contemporary inscription as ruler of the Kedarite Arabs, who were threatening Judah from the south and east.

2:20 Neither share nor claim nor memorial: although Sanballat and Tobiah worshiped Yhwh, Nehemiah would not let them participate in any of the activities of the religious community in Jerusalem.

3:1–32 The construction work on the gates and walls of the city is described in counterclockwise direction, beginning and ending at the Sheep Gate (to the north of the Temple). The exact locations of many of the topographical points mentioned are uncertain.

3:6 The Mishneh Gate: the gate leading into the second, expanded quarter of the city; cf. 2 Kgs 22:14; Zep 1:10.

3:8 The Broad Wall: perhaps identical with the wall, seven meters thick, discovered in the Jewish quarter of the Old City.

5:1 Certain of their Jewish kindred: probably Jews who had returned from Babylonia who formed the social and economic elite in the province.

5:7 You are exacting interest from your own kindred!: contrary to the Mosaic law (Dt 23:20).

5:15 The earlier governors: both Sheshbazzar (Ezr 5:14) and Zerubbabel (Hg 1:1, 14; 2:2, 21) are said to be governors, and Mal 1:8 mentions a governor but does not name him. Other names are known from seal impressions of uncertain date.

6:6 Gashmu: elsewhere (vv. 1–2; 2:19) the name is given as Geshem.

6:15 Elul: the sixth month (August–September). Fiftytwo days: according to Josephus (Ant. 11:174–183), the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem by Nehemiah took two years and four months.

7:6–72 See note on Ezr 2:1–67.

7:65, 69 The governor: see note on Ezr 2:63.

8:1–18 Chronologically this belongs after Ezr 8:36. The gloss mentioning Nehemiah in Neh 8:9 was inserted in this Ezra section after the dislocation of several parts of Ezra–Nehemiah had occurred. There is no clear evidence of a simultaneous presence of Nehemiah and Ezra in Jerusalem; Neh 12:26, 36 are also scribal glosses.

9:1–5 The feast of Booths is followed by a penitential liturgy. Since it includes separation from foreigners, some read it as a sequel to Ezr 9–10.

9:6–37 The Septuagint attributes the prayer to Ezra; cf. Ezr 9:6–15.

9:16 They were obdurate: lit., “they stiffened their necks.”

10:1–39 This section belongs to the Nehemiah narrative rather than to that of Ezra. It is best read after Neh 13:31, since the stipulations of the pact seem to presuppose Nehemiah’s measures recorded in Neh 13. In view of all this: considering the situation described in Neh 13:4–31.

11:1–19 This list of the family heads who lived in Jerusalem at the time of Nehemiah is best read after Neh 7:72. It parallels at many points the list of early settlers in 1 Chr 9:2–17.

12:10–11 Jeshua was the high priest when Zerubbabel was governor, in the last decades of the sixth century B.C. (Hg 1:1, 12, 14; 2:2, 4). He was the grandfather of Eliashib, the high priest early in Nehemiah’s governorship (445–433 B.C.; Neh 3:1, 20, 21) and perhaps later. Eliashib, the grandfather of Johanan, was a grown man, if not yet a high priest, at the time of Ezra, ca. 400 B.C. (Ezr 10:6; and note). According to Josephus (Ant. 11:120–183), whose testimony here is doubtful, Jaddua, son of Johanan, died as an old man about the time that Alexander the Great died, 323 B.C. If, as seems probable, this list of the postexilic high priests, at least as far as Johanan, comes from the author himself (cf. Neh 12:23) and not from a later scribe, it is of prime importance for dating the author’s work in the first decades of the fourth century B.C.

12:27–43 The dedication of the wall of Jerusalem took place, no doubt, soon after the restoration of the wall and its gates had been completed. This section, therefore, is best read after Neh 6:15.

12:44–47 This account of the provisions made for the Temple services is a composition either of the author or of a later scribe. The gloss mentioning Nehemiah is not in the Septuagint.

13:1–3 These verses serve as an introduction to the reforms Nehemiah instituted during his second mission in Jerusalem (vv. 4–31). The part of the Book of Moses read to the people is freely quoted here from Dt 23:3–6.

13:4–31 This is part of the “Memoirs of Nehemiah”; it is continued in 10:1–40.

13:6 In the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes: Artaxerxes I, therefore 433 B.C. After ... time: it is not known when Nehemiah returned to Jerusalem or how long his second period of activity there lasted.

13:24 Language of Ashdod: more likely an Aramaic rather than a Philistine dialect. The language of Judah: probably Hebrew.

BIBLICAL NOVELLAS

The Bible conveys the Word of God in many literary forms: historical narrative, poetry, prophetic exhortation, wisdom sayings, and novellas (edifying stories). In the Constitution on Divine Revelation from Vatican II (Dei Verbum), the council fathers give instruction on how to approach this variety: “Attention must be paid to literary forms, for the fact is that truth is differently presented and expressed in the various types of historical writing, in prophetic and poetical texts, and in other forms of literary expression. Hence the interpreter must look for that meaning which the sacred writer intended to express and did in fact express through the medium of a contemporary literary form” (DV 12).

The Books of Tobit, Judith, and Esther are often grouped together. They are stories told to instruct the people concerning the ways of God, to encourage them in critical times, and to entertain. They are aids to the imagination. While they may contain kernels of historical fact, these stories are told primarily to illustrate truths that transcend history.

The author of the Book of Tobit, writing in the second century B.C., tells a story about the life of a devout family in seventh-century Assyria. He gives the people of his own time an example to follow as they struggle with the tensions of living a faithful Jewish life in the midst of a non-Jewish civilization. Tobit, suffering from the affliction of blindness, perseveres in good works and prayer, as do the other characters in the story. God sends an angel who, while hidden from them, leads them to health and happiness. The conclusion demonstrates that God does answer prayer and that perseverance in good works does not go unrewarded.

The author of the Book of Judith gives many clues that this story is beyond history. All the worst enemies of the people—the Assyrians of the eighth and seventh centuries, the sixth-century Babylonian king Nebuchadnezzar—are rolled into one terror. The hero, Judith, is modeled on the heroes of the Book of Judges, yet her story is also reminiscent of a second-century hero, Judas Maccabeus (1–2 Maccabees). Even the conflation of time indications—the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar (2:1; the year 587 B.C., when he destroyed Jerusalem and took the Jews into exile) with the return from exile and rededication of the Temple (4:3; the events of 538 and 515 respectively)—suggests God’s deliverance from the most terrible circumstances. The story may be set in a time long past, but it is meant to encourage the people of the late second century to trust in God when their way of life is threatened. God can use even the most unlikely means, such as a widow, a biblical figure of powerlessness and vulnerability, to deliver them from their enemies.

The Book of Esther includes several historical elements. The Persian king Xerxes (486–465 B.C.), the city of Susa, a court official named Marduka, are all known from other sources. But further investigation shows this is not meant to be a historical account. There is no record of Xerxes having any other queen than Amestris and no mention of such a massacre during his reign. The book has a different purpose: to suggest a historical basis to the festival of Purim, perhaps originally a Persian feast. Through the story of Esther, Purim becomes a celebration of God’s rescue of the people from persecution and certain death.

The message conveyed in these stories is not confined to one geographic place or historical period. It remains a valid expression of God’s care for faithful people in every time and place.

The Book of Tobit, named after its principal character, combines Jewish piety and morality with folklore in a fascinating story that has enjoyed wide popularity in both Jewish and Christian circles. Prayers, psalms, and words of wisdom, as well as the skillfully constructed story itself, provide valuable insights into the faith and the religious milieu of its unknown author. The book was probably written early in the second century B.C.; it is not known where.

Tobit, a devout and wealthy Israelite living among the captives deported to Nineveh from the Northern Kingdom of Israel in 722/721 B.C., suffers severe reverses and is finally blinded. Because of his misfortunes he begs the Lord to let him die. But recalling the large sum he had formerly deposited in far-off Media, he sends his son Tobiah there to bring back the money. In Media, at this same time, a young woman, Sarah, also prays for death, because she has lost seven husbands, each killed in turn on his wedding night by the demon Asmodeus. God hears the prayers of Tobit and Sarah and sends the angel Raphael in human form to aid them both.

Raphael makes the trip to Media with Tobiah. When Tobiah is attacked by a large fish as he bathes in the Tigris River, Raphael orders him to seize it and to remove its gall, heart, and liver because they are useful for medicine. Later, at Raphael's urging, Tobiah marries Sarah, and uses the fish's heart and liver to drive Asmodeus from the bridal chamber. Returning to Nineveh with his wife and his father's money, Tobiah rubs the fish's gall into his father's eyes and cures him. Finally, Raphael reveals his true identity and returns to heaven. Tobit then utters his beautiful hymn of praise. Before dying, Tobit tells his son to leave Nineveh because God will destroy that wicked city. After Tobiah buries his father and mother, he and his family depart for Media, where he later learns that the destruction of Nineveh has taken place.

The inspired author of the book used the literary form of religious novel (as in Esther and Judith) for the purpose of instruction and edification. The seemingly historical data, names of kings, cities, etc., are used as vivid details not only to create interest and charm, but also to illustrate the negative side of the theory of retribution: the wicked are indeed punished.

Although the Book of Tobit is usually listed with the historical books, it more correctly stands midway between them and the wisdom literature. It contains numerous maxims like those found in the wisdom books (cf. 4:3–19, 21; 12:6–10; 14:7, 9) as well as standard wisdom themes: fidelity to the law, intercessory function of angels, piety toward parents, purity of marriage, reverence for the dead, and the value of almsgiving, prayer, and fasting. The book makes Tobit a relative of Ahiqar, a noted hero of ancient Near Eastern wisdom literature and folklore.

Written most likely in Aramaic, the original of the book was lost for centuries. Fragments of four Aramaic texts and of one Hebrew text were discovered in Qumran Cave 4 in 1952 and have only recently been published. These Semitic forms of the book are in substantial agreement with the long Greek recension of Tobit found in Codex Sinaiticus, which had been recovered from St. Catherine's Monastery (Mount Sinai) only in 1844, and in mss. 319 and 910. Two other Greek forms of Tobit have long been known: the short recension, found mainly in the mss. Alexandrinus, Vaticanus, Venetus, and numerous cursive mss.; and an intermediate Greek recension, found in mss. 44, 106, 107. The Book of Tobit has also been known from two Latin versions: the long recension in the Vetus Latina, which is closely related to the long Greek recension and sometimes is even closer to the Aramaic and Hebrew texts than the Greek is; and the short recension in the Vulgate, related to the short Greek recension. The present English translation has been based mainly on Sinaiticus, which is the most complete form of the long Greek recension, despite two lacunae (4:7–19b and 13:6i–10b) and some missing phrases, which make succeeding verses difficult to understand and make it necessary to supplement Sinaiticus from the Vetus Latina or from the short Greek recension. Occasionally, phrases or words have been introduced from the Aramaic or Hebrew texts, when they are significantly different. Forms of the Book of Tobit are also extant in ancient Arabic, Armenian, Coptic (Sahidic), Ethiopic, and Syriac, but these are almost all secondarily derived from the short Greek recension.

The divisions of the Book of Tobit are:

- I. Tobit's Ordeals (1:3–3:6)
  - II. Sarah's Plight (3:7–17)
  - III. Preparation for the Journey (4:1–6:1)
  - IV. Tobiah's Journey to Media (6:2–18)
  - V. Marriage and Healing of Sarah (7:1–9:6)
  - VI. Tobiah's Return Journey to Nineveh and the Healing of Tobit (10:1–11:18)
  - VII. Raphael Reveals His Identity (12:1–22)
  - VIII. Tobit's Song of Praise (13:1–18)
  - IX. Epilogue (14:1–15)

CHAPTER 1

See RG 246–50

Tobit.<sup>1</sup>This book tells the story of Tobit, * son of Tobiel, son of Hananiel, son of Aduel, son of Gabael, son of Raphael, son of Raguel, of the family of Asiel and the tribe of Naphtali. <sup>2</sup>During the days of Shalmaneser, * king of the Assyrians, he was taken captive from Thisbe, which is south of Kedesh Naphtali in upper Galilee, above and to the west of Asher, north of Phogor.<sup>a</sup>

I. Tobit's Ordeals

His Virtue. <sup>3</sup>I, Tobit, have walked all the days of my life on paths of fidelity and righteousness. I performed many charitable deeds for my kindred and my people who had been taken captive with me to Nineveh, in the land of the Assyrians. <sup>4</sup>When I lived as a young man in my own country, in the land of Israel, the entire tribe of my ancestor Naphtali broke away from the house of David, my ancestor, and from Jerusalem, the city that had been singled out of all Israel's tribes that all Israel might offer sacrifice there. It was the place where the temple, God's dwelling, had been built and consecrated for all generations to come. <sup>5b</sup> All my kindred, as well as the house of Naphtali, my ancestor, used to offer sacrifice on every hilltop in Galilee to the calf that Jeroboam, king of Israel, had made in Dan.*

<sup>6c</sup> But I alone used to go often to Jerusalem for the festivals, as was prescribed for all Israel by longstanding decree.* Bringing with me the first fruits of crops, the firstlings of the flock, the tithes of livestock, and the first shearings of sheep,<sup>d</sup> I used to hasten to Jerusalem <sup>7e</sup> and present them to the priests, Aaron's sons, at the altar. To the Levites ministering in Jerusalem I used to give the tithe of grain, wine, olive oil, pomegranates, figs, and other fruits. Six years in a row, I used to give a second tithe in money, which each year I would go to pay in Jerusalem. <sup>8</sup>The third-year tithe I gave to orphans, widows, and converts who had joined the Israelites. Every third year I would bring them this offering, and we ate it in keeping with the decree laid down in the Mosaic law concerning it, and according to the commands of

Deborah, the mother of my father Tobiel; for my father had died and left me an orphan.

<sup>9</sup>When I reached manhood, I married Anna, a woman of our ancestral family. By her I had a son whom I named Tobiah. <sup>10</sup>Now, after I had been deported to the Assyrians and came as a captive to Nineveh, all my kindred and my people used to eat the food of the Gentiles,<sup>f</sup> <sup>11</sup>but I refrained from eating that Gentile food. <sup>12</sup>Because I was mindful of God with all my heart, <sup>13</sup>the Most High granted me favor and status with Shalmaneser, so that I became purchasing agent for all his needs.<sup>g</sup> <sup>14</sup>Until he died, I would go to Media to buy goods for him there. I also deposited pouches of silver worth ten talents* in trust with my kinsman Gabael, son of Gabri, who lived at Rages, in the land of Media. <sup>15</sup>When Shalmaneser died and his son Sennacherib* came to rule in his stead, the roads to Media became unsafe, so I could no longer go to Media.

Courage in Burying the Dead. <sup>16</sup>In the days of Shalmaneser I had performed many charitable deeds for my kindred, members of my people. <sup>17h</sup> I would give my bread to the hungry and clothing to the naked. If I saw one of my people who had died and been thrown behind the wall of Nineveh, I used to bury him.* <sup>18</sup>Sennacherib returned from Judea, having fled during the days of the judgment enacted against him by the King of Heaven because of the blasphemies he had uttered; whomever he killed I buried. For in his rage he killed many Israelites, but I used to take their bodies away by stealth and bury them. So when Sennacherib looked for them, he could not find them. <sup>19</sup>But a certain Ninevite went and informed the king about me, that I was burying them, and I went into hiding. When I realized that the king knew about me and that I was being hunted to be put to death, I became afraid and took flight. <sup>20</sup>All my property was confiscated; I was left with nothing. All that I had was taken to the king's palace, except for my wife Anna and my son Tobiah.*

<sup>21</sup>But forty days did not pass before two of the king's sons assassinated him and fled to the mountains of Ararat. A son of his, Esarhaddon,* succeeded him as king. He put Ahiqar, my kinsman Anael's son, in charge of all the credit accounts of his kingdom, and he took control over the entire administration.<sup>i</sup> <sup>22</sup>Then Ahiqar interceded on my behalf, and I returned to Nineveh. Ahiqar had been chief cupbearer, keeper of the signet ring, treasury accountant, and credit accountant under Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians; and Esarhaddon appointed him as Second to himself. He was, in fact, my nephew, of my father's house, and of my own family.

CHAPTER 2

See RG 246–50

<sup>1</sup>Thus under King Esarhaddon I returned to my home, and my wife Anna and my son Tobiah were restored to me. Then on our festival of Pentecost, the holy feast of Weeks, * a fine dinner was prepared for me, and I reclined to eat.<sup>j</sup> <sup>2</sup>The table was set for me, and the dishes placed before me were many. So I said to my son Tobiah: “Son, go out and bring in whatever poor person you find among our kindred exiled here in Nineveh who may be a sincere worshiper of God to share this meal with me. Indeed, son, I shall wait for you to come back.”*

<sup>3</sup>Tobiah went out to look for some poor person among our kindred, but he came back and cried, “Father!” I said to him, “Here I am, son.” He answered, “Father, one of our people has been murdered! He has been thrown out into the market place, and there he lies strangled.” <sup>4</sup>I sprang to my feet, leaving the dinner untouched, carried the dead man from the square, and put him in one of the rooms until sundown, so that I might bury him. <sup>5</sup>I returned and washed* and in sorrow ate my food<sup>k</sup> <sup>6</sup>I remembered the oracle pronounced by the prophet Amos against Bethel:<sup>l</sup>

and all your songs into dirges.”

<sup>8</sup>My neighbors mocked me, saying: “Does he have no fear? Once before he was hunted, to be executed for this sort of deed, and he ran away; yet here he is again burying the dead!”

Tobit’s Blindness. <sup>9</sup>That same night I washed and went into my courtyard, where I lay down to sleep beside the wall. Because of the heat I left my face uncovered. <sup>10</sup>I did not know that sparrows were perched on the wall above me; their warm droppings settled in my eyes, causing white scales* on them. I went to doctors for a cure, but the more they applied ointments, the more my vision was obscured by the white scales, until I was totally blind. For four years I was unable to see, and all my kindred were distressed at my condition. Ahikar, however, took care of me for two years, until he left for Elam.

<sup>11</sup>At that time my wife Anna worked for hire at weaving cloth, doing the kind of work women do. <sup>12</sup>When she delivered the material to her employers, they would pay her a wage. On the seventh day of the month of Dystrus,* she finished the woven cloth and delivered it to her employers. They paid her the full salary and also gave her a young goat for a meal. <sup>13</sup>On entering my house, the goat began to bleat. So I called to my wife and said: “Where did this goat come from? It was not stolen, was it? Give it back to its owners; we have no right to eat anything stolen!” <sup>14m</sup> But she said to me, “It was given to me as a bonus over and above my wages.” Yet I would not believe her and told her to give it back to its owners. I flushed with anger at her over this. So she retorted: “Where are your charitable deeds now? Where are your righteous acts? Look! All that has happened to you is well known!”*

CHAPTER 3

See RG 246–50

<sup>1</sup>Then sad at heart, I groaned and wept aloud. With sobs I began to pray:*

Tobit's Prayer for Death

and all your deeds are just;
All your ways are mercy and fidelity;
you are judge of the world.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>3</sup>And now, Lord, be mindful of me and look with favor upon me.
Do not punish me for my sins,
or for my inadvertent offenses,
or for those of my ancestors.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>4</sup>and disobeyed your commandments.
So you handed us over to plunder,
captivity, and death,
to become an object lesson, a byword,
and a reproach
in all the nations among whom you scattered us.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>5</sup>“Yes, your many judgments are right in dealing with me as my sins, and those of my ancestors, deserve.
For we have neither kept your
commandments,
nor walked in fidelity before you.

<sup>6</sup>“So now, deal with me as you please;
command my life breath to be taken from me,
that I may depart from the face of the earth and become dust.

It is better for me to die than to live,* because I have listened to undeserved

reproaches,
and great is the grief within me.<sup>9</sup>

“Lord, command that I be released from such anguish;
let me go to my everlasting abode;
Do not turn your face away from me,
Lord.

For it is better for me to die than to endure so much misery in life, and to listen to such reproaches!”

II. Sarah’s Plight

Sarah Falsely Accused. <sup>7*</sup> On that very day, at Ecbatana in Media, it so happened that Raguel’s daughter Sarah also had to listen to reproaches from one of her father’s maids. <sup>8</sup>For she had been given in marriage to seven husbands, but the wicked demon Asmodeus* kept killing them off before they could have intercourse with her, as is prescribed for wives. The maid said to her: “You are the one who kills your husbands! Look! You have already been given in marriage to seven husbands, but you do not bear the name of a single one of them. <sup>9</sup>Why do you beat us? Because your husbands are dead? Go, join them! May we never see son or daughter of yours!”

<sup>10</sup>That day Sarah was sad at heart. She went in tears to an upstairs room in her father’s house and wanted to hang herself. But she reconsidered, saying to herself: “No! May people never reproach my father and say to him, ‘You had only one beloved daughter, but she hanged herself because of her misfortune.’ And thus would I bring my father laden with sorrow in his old age to Hades. It is far better for me not to hang myself, but to beg the Lord that I might die, and no longer have to listen to such reproaches in my lifetime.”<sup>r</sup>

Sarah’s Prayer for Death

“Blessed are you, merciful God!
Blessed be your holy and honorable name forever!
May all your works forever bless you.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Now to you, Lord, I have turned my face and have lifted up my eyes.

<sup>13</sup>Bid me to depart from the earth, never again to listen to such reproaches.

<sup>14</sup>“You know, Master, that I am clean of any defilement with a man.

<sup>15</sup>I have never sullied my own name or my father’s name in the land of my captivity.

“I am my father’s only daughter,
and he has no other child to be his heir,
Nor does he have a kinsman or close relative whose wife I should wait to become.
Seven husbands of mine have already died.
Why then should I live any longer?
But if it does not please you, Lord, to take my life,
look favorably upon me and have pity
on me,
that I may never again listen to such reproaches!”

An Answer to Prayer. <sup>16</sup>At that very time, the prayer of both of them was heard in the glorious presence of God. <sup>17t</sup> So Raphael was sent to heal them both: to remove the white scales from Tobit’s eyes, so that he might again see with his own eyes God’s light; and to give Sarah, the daughter of Raguel, as a wife to Tobiah, the son of Tobit, and to rid her of the wicked demon Asmodeus. For it fell to Tobiah’s lot* to claim her before any others who might wish to marry her.

At that very moment Tobit turned from the courtyard to his house, and Raguel’s daughter Sarah came down from the upstairs room.

III. Preparation for the Journey

CHAPTER 4

See RG 246–50

A Father's Instruction. <sup>1</sup>That same day Tobit remembered the money he had deposited in trust with Gabael at Rages in Media. <sup>2</sup>He thought to himself, “Now that I have asked for death, why should I not call my son Tobiah and let him know about this money before I die?” <sup>3</sup>So he called his son Tobiah; and when he came, he said to him: * “Son, when I die, give me a decent burial. Honor your mother, and do not abandon her as long as she lives. Do whatever pleases her, and do not grieve her spirit in any way.<sup>u</sup> <sup>4</sup>Remember, son, how she went through many dangers for you while you were in her womb. When she dies, bury her in the same grave with me.

<sup>5</sup>“Through all your days, son, keep the Lord in mind, and do not seek to sin or to transgress the commandments. Perform righteous deeds all the days of your life, and do not tread the paths of wickedness. <sup>6v</sup> For those who act with fidelity, all who practice righteousness, will prosper in their affairs.*

<sup>12</sup>“Be on your guard, son, against every kind of fornication, and above all, marry a woman of your own ancestral family. Do not marry a foreign woman, one who is not of your father’s tribe, because we are descendants of the prophets, who were the first to speak the truth. Noah prophesied first, then Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, our ancestors from the beginning of time. Son, remember that all of them took wives from among their own kindred and were blessed in their children, and that their posterity would inherit the land.<sup>z</sup> <sup>13</sup>Therefore, son, love your kindred. Do not act arrogantly toward any of them, the sons and daughters of your people, by refusing to take a wife for yourself from among them. For in arrogance there is ruin and great instability. In idleness there is loss and dire poverty, for idleness is the mother of famine.

<sup>14</sup>“Do not keep with you overnight the wages of those who have worked for you, but pay them at once. If you serve God thus, you will receive your reward. Be on your guard, son, in everything you do; be wise in all that you say and discipline yourself in all your conduct.<sup>a</sup> <sup>15</sup>Do to no one what you yourself hate. Do not drink wine till you become drunk or let drunkenness accompany you on your way.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>19e</sup> At all times bless the Lord, your God, and ask him that all your paths may be straight and all your endeavors and plans may prosper. For no other nation possesses good counsel, but it is the Lord who gives all good things. Whomever the Lord chooses to raise is raised; and whomever the Lord chooses to cast down is cast down to the recesses of Hades. So now, son, keep in mind these my commandments, and never let them be erased from your heart.

<sup>20</sup>“Now, I must tell you, son, that I have deposited in trust ten talents of silver with Gabael, the son of Gabri, at Rages in Media. <sup>21</sup>Do not fear, son, that we have lived in poverty. You will have great wealth, if you fear God, avoid all sin, and do what is good before the Lord your God.”<sup>f</sup>

CHAPTER 5

See RG 246–50

The Angel Raphael. <sup>1</sup>Then Tobiah replied to his father Tobit: “Everything that you have commanded me, father, I shall do. <sup>2</sup>But how will I be able to get that money from him, since he does not know me, and I do not know him? What sign can I give him so that he will recognize and trust me, and give me the money? I do not even know the roads to Media, in order to go there.” <sup>3</sup>Tobit answered his son Tobiah: “He gave me his bond,* and I gave him mine; I divided his into two parts, and each of us took one part; I put one part with the money. It is twenty years since I deposited that money! So, son, find yourself a trustworthy person who will make the journey with you, and we will give him wages when you return; but bring back that money from Gabael while I am still alive.”

<sup>4</sup>Tobiah went out to look for someone who would travel with him to Media, someone who knew the way. He went out and found the angel Raphael standing before him (though he did not know* that this was an angel of God).<sup>9</sup> <sup>5</sup>Tobiah said to him, “Where do you come from, young man?” He replied, “I am an Israelite, one of your kindred. I have come here to work.” Tobiah said to him, “Do you know the way to Media?” <sup>6</sup>“Yes,” he replied, “I have been there many times. I know the place well and am acquainted with all the routes. I have often traveled to Media; I used to stay with our kinsman Gabael, who lives at Rages in Media. It is a good two days’ journey from Ecbatana to Rages,* for Rages is situated in the mountains, but Ecbatana is in the middle of the plain.” <sup>7</sup>Tobiah said to him, “Wait for me, young man, till I go in and tell my father; for I need you to make the journey with me. I will pay you your wages.”<sup>h</sup> <sup>8</sup>He replied, “Very well, I will wait; but do not be long.”

<sup>9</sup>Tobiah went in and informed his father Tobit: “I have found someone of our own Israelite kindred who will go with me!” Tobit said, “Call the man in, so that I may find out from what family and tribe he comes, and whether he is trustworthy enough to travel with you, son.”

me? Here I am, a blind man who cannot see the light of heaven, but must remain in darkness, like the dead who no longer see the light! Though alive, I am among the dead. I can hear people's voices, but I do not see them." The young man said, "Take courage! God's healing is near; so take courage!" Tobit then said: "My son Tobiah wants to go to Media. Can you go with him to show him the way? I will pay you your wages, brother." He answered: "Yes, I will go with him, and I know all the routes. I have often traveled to Media and crossed all its plains so I know well the mountains and all its roads." <sup>11</sup>Tobit asked him, "Brother, tell me, please, from what family and tribe are you?" <sup>12</sup>He replied, "Why? What need do you have for a tribe? Aren't you looking for a hired man?" Tobit replied, "I only want to know, brother, whose son you truly are and what your name is."<sup>i</sup>

<sup>13</sup>He answered, "I am Azariah, * son of the great Hananiah, one of your own kindred." <sup>14</sup>Tobit exclaimed: "Welcome! God save you, brother! Do not be provoked with me, brother, for wanting to learn the truth about your family. It turns out that you are a kinsman, from a noble and good line! I knew Hananiah and Nathan, the two sons of the great Shemeliah. They used to go to Jerusalem with me, where we would worship together. They were not led astray; your kindred are good people. You are certainly of good lineage. So welcome!"

<sup>15</sup>Then he added: "For each day I will give you a drachma as wages, * as well as expenses for you and for my son. So go with my son, and <sup>16</sup>I will even add a bonus to your wages!" The young man replied: "I will go with him. Do not fear. In good health we will leave you, and in good health we will return to you, for the way is safe." <sup>17</sup>Tobit said, "Blessing be upon you, brother." Then he called his son and said to him: "Son, prepare whatever you need for the journey, and set out with your kinsman. May God in heaven protect you on the way and bring you back to me safe and sound; may his angel accompany you for your safety, son."

Tobiah left to set out on his journey, and he kissed his father and mother. Tobit said to him, "Have a safe journey." <sup>18</sup>But his mother began to weep and she said to Tobit: "Why have you sent my child away? Is he not the staff of our hands, as he goes in and out before us? <sup>19</sup>Do not heap money upon money! Rather relinquish it in exchange for our child! <sup>20</sup>What the Lord has given us to live on is certainly enough for us." <sup>21</sup>Tobit reassured her: "Do not worry! Our son will leave in good health and come back to us in good health. Your own eyes will see the day when he returns to you safe and sound. So, do not worry; do not fear for them, my sister.* <sup>22</sup>For a good angel* will go with him, his journey will be successful, and he will return in good health.” <sup>1</sup>Then she stopped weeping.

IV. Tobiah's Journey to Media

CHAPTER 6

See RG 246–50

On the Way to Rages. <sup>2</sup>When the young man left home, accompanied by the angel, the dog followed Tobiah out and went along with them. Both journeyed along, and when the first night came, they camped beside the Tigris River.* <sup>3</sup>When the young man went down to wash his feet in the Tigris River, a large fish leaped out of the water and tried to swallow his foot. He shouted in alarm. <sup>4</sup>But the angel said to the young man, “Grab the fish and hold on to it!” He seized the fish and hauled it up on dry land. <sup>5</sup>The angel then told him: “Slit the fish open and take out its gall, heart, and liver, and keep them with you; but throw away the other entrails. Its gall, heart, and liver are useful for medicine.”* <sup>6</sup>After Tobiah had slit the fish open, he put aside the gall, heart, and liver. Then he roasted and ate part of the fish; the rest he salted and kept for the journey.

Raphael’s Instructions. Afterward the two of them traveled on together till they drew near to Media. <sup>7</sup>Then the young man asked the angel this question: “Brother Azariah, what medicine is in the fish’s heart, liver, and gall?” <sup>8</sup>He answered: “As for the fish’s heart and liver, if you burn them to make smoke in the presence of a man or a woman who is afflicted by a demon or evil spirit, any affliction will flee and never return. <sup>9</sup>As for the gall, if you apply it to the eyes of one who has white scales, blowing right into them, sight will be restored.”

<sup>10</sup>When they had entered Media and were getting close to Ecbatana, <sup>11</sup>Raphael said to the young man, “Brother Tobiah!” He answered, “Here I am!” Raphael continued, “Tonight we must stay in the house of Raguel, who is a relative of yours. He has a beautiful daughter named Sarah, <sup>12</sup>but no other son or daughter apart from Sarah. Since you are Sarah’s closest relative, you more than any other have the right to marry her. Moreover, her father’s estate is rightfully yours to inherit. The girl is wise, courageous, and very beautiful; and her father is a good man who loves her dearly.”<sup>j</sup> <sup>13</sup>He continued: “You have the right to marry her. So listen to me, brother. Tonight I will speak to her father about the girl so that we may take her as your bride. When we return from Rages, we will have the wedding feast for her. I know that Raguel cannot keep her from you or promise her to another man; he would incur the death penalty as decreed in the Book of Moses.* For he knows that you, more than anyone else, have the right to marry his daughter. Now listen to me, brother; we will speak about this girl tonight, so that we may arrange her engagement to you. Then when we return from Rages, we will take her and bring her back with us to your house.”

<sup>14</sup>But Tobiah said to Raphael in reply, “Brother Azariah, I have heard that she has already been given in marriage to seven husbands, and that they have died in the bridal chamber. On the very night they approached her, they would die. I have also heard it said that it was a demon that killed them. <sup>15</sup>So now I too am afraid of this demon, because it is in love with her and does not harm her; but it kills any man who wishes to come close to her. I am my father’s only child. If I should die, I would bring the life of my father and mother down to their grave in sorrow over me; they have no other son to bury them!”<sup>k</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Raphael said to him: “Do you not remember your father’s commands? He ordered you to marry a woman from your own ancestral family. Now listen to me, brother; do not worry about that demon. Take Sarah. I know that tonight she will be given to you as your wife! <sup>17</sup>When you go into the bridal chamber, take some of the fish’s liver and the heart, and place them on the embers intended for incense, and an odor will be given off. <sup>18</sup>As soon as the demon smells the odor, it will flee and never again show itself near her. Then when you are about to have intercourse with her, both of you must first get up to pray.* Beg the Lord of heaven that mercy and protection be granted you. Do not be afraid, for she was set apart for you before the world existed. You will save her, and she will go with you. And I assume that you will have children by her, and they will be like brothers for you. So do not worry.”

When Tobiah heard Raphael’s words that she was his kinswoman, and of the lineage of his ancestral house, he loved her deeply, and his heart was truly set on her.

V. Marriage and Healing of Sarah

CHAPTER 7

See RG 246–50

At the House of Raguel. <sup>1</sup>When they entered Ecbatana, Tobiah said, “Brother Azariah, bring me straight to the house of our kinsman Raguel.” So he did, and they came to the house of Raguel, whom they found seated by his courtyard gate. They greeted him first, and he answered, “Many greetings to you, brothers! Welcome! You have come in peace! Now enter in peace!” And he brought them into his house. <sup>2</sup>He said to his wife Edna, “How this young man resembles Tobit, the son of my uncle!” <sup>3</sup>So Edna asked them, saying, “Where are you from, brothers?” They answered, “We are descendants of Naphtali, now captives in Nineveh.” <sup>4</sup>She said to them, “Do you know our kinsman Tobit?” They answered her, “Indeed, we do know him!” She asked, “Is he well?” <sup>5</sup>They answered, “Yes, he is alive and well.” Then Tobiah said, “He is my father!” <sup>6</sup>Raguel jumped up, kissed him, and broke into tears. <sup>7</sup>Then, finding words, he said, “A blessing upon you, son! You are the son of a good and noble father. What a terrible misfortune that a man so righteous and charitable has been afflicted with blindness!” He embraced his kinsman Tobiah and continued to weep. <sup>8</sup>His wife Edna also wept for Tobit; and their daughter Sarah also began to weep.

Marriage of Tobiah and Sarah. <sup>9</sup>Afterward, Raguel slaughtered a ram from the flock and gave them a warm reception. When they had washed, bathed, and reclined to eat and drink, Tobiah said to Raphael, “Brother Azariah, ask Raguel to give me my kinswoman Sarah.” <sup>10</sup>Raguel overheard the words; so he said to the young man: “Eat and drink and be merry tonight, for no man has a greater right to marry my daughter Sarah than you, brother. Besides, not even I have the right to give her to anyone but you, because you are my closest relative. However, son, I must frankly tell you the truth. <sup>11</sup>I have given her in marriage to seven husbands who were kinsmen of ours, and all died on the very night they approached her. But now, son, eat and drink. The Lord will look after you both.” Tobiah answered, “I will neither eat nor drink anything here until you settle what concerns me.”

Raguel said to him: “I will do it. She is yours as decreed by the Book of Moses. It has been decided in heaven that she be given to you! Take your kinswoman; from now on you are her brother, and she is your sister.* She is given to you today and here ever after. May the Lord of heaven prosper you both tonight, son, and grant you mercy and peace.” <sup>12</sup>Then Raguel called his daughter Sarah, and she came to him. He took her by the hand and gave her to Tobiah with these words: “Take her according to the law. According to the decree written in the Book of Moses I give her to be your wife. Take her and bring her safely to your father. And may the God of heaven grant both of you a safe journey in peace!”<sup>l</sup> <sup>13</sup>He then called her mother and told her to bring writing materials. He wrote out a copy of a marriage contract stating that he gave Sarah to Tobiah as his wife as decreed by the law of Moses. Her mother brought the material, and he drew up the contract, to which he affixed his seal.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Afterward they began to eat and drink. <sup>15</sup>Later Raguel called his wife Edna and said, “My sister, prepare the other bedroom and bring Sarah there.” <sup>16</sup>She went, made the bed in the room, as he had told her, and brought Sarah there. After she had cried over her, she wiped away her tears and said, <sup>17</sup>“Take courage, my daughter! May the Lord of heaven grant you joy in place of your grief! Courage, my daughter!” Then she left.

CHAPTER 8

Expulsion of the Demon. <sup>1</sup>When they had finished eating and drinking, they wanted to retire. So they brought the young man out and led him to the bedroom. <sup>2</sup>Tobiah, mindful of Raphael's instructions, took the fish's liver and heart from the bag where he had them, and put them on the embers intended for incense. * <sup>3</sup>The odor of the fish repulsed the demon, and it fled to the upper regions of Egypt; * Raphael went in pursuit of it and there bound it hand and foot. Then Raphael returned immediately.

<sup>4</sup>When Sarah's parents left the bedroom and closed the door behind them, Tobiah rose from bed and said to his wife, "My sister, come, let us pray and beg our Lord to grant us mercy and protection." <sup>5</sup>She got up, and they started to pray and beg that they might be protected. He began with these words:

"Blessed are you, O God of our ancestors;
blessed be your name forever and ever!
Let the heavens and all your creation bless you forever."<sup>n</sup>

<sup>6</sup>You made Adam, and you made his wife Eve
to be his helper and support;
and from these two the human race has come.
You said, 'It is not good for the man to be alone;
let us make him a helper like himself.'<sup>o</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Now, not with lust, but with fidelity I take this kinswoman
as my wife.
Send down your mercy on me and on her,
and grant that we may grow old together.
Bless us with children."

But Raguel got up and summoned his servants. They went out with him and dug a grave, <sup>10</sup>for he said, “Perhaps Tobiah will die; then we would be a laughingstock and an object of mockery.” <sup>11</sup>When they had finished digging the grave, Raguel went back into the house and called his wife, <sup>12</sup>saying, “Send one of the maids in to see whether he is alive. If he has died, let us bury him without anyone knowing about it.” <sup>13</sup>They sent the maid, lit a lamp, and opened the bedroom door; she went in and found them sleeping together. <sup>14</sup>The maid came out and told them that Tobiah was alive, and that nothing was wrong. <sup>15</sup>Then they praised the God of heaven in these words:

“Blessed are you, God, with every pure blessing!

Let all your chosen ones bless you
forever!

<sup>16</sup>Blessed are you, for you have made me happy;
what I feared did not happen.

Rather you have dealt with us
according to your abundant mercy.

<sup>17</sup>Blessed are you, for you have shown mercy
toward two only children.

Grant them, Master, mercy and protection,
and bring their lives to fulfillment with happiness and mercy.”

Wedding Feast. <sup>19</sup>He asked his wife to bake many loaves of bread; he himself went out to the herd and brought two steers and four rams, which he ordered to be slaughtered. So they began to prepare the feast. <sup>20</sup>He summoned Tobiah and said to him, “For fourteen days* you shall not stir from here, but shall remain here eating and drinking with me; you shall bring joy to my daughter’s afflicted spirit. <sup>21</sup>Now take half of what I own here; go back in good health to your father. The other half will be yours when I and my wife die. Take courage, son! I am your father, and Edna is your mother; we belong to you and to your sister both now and forever. So take courage, son!”

<sup>2</sup>“Brother Azariah, take along with you from here four servants and two camels and travel to Rages. * Go to Gabael’s house and give him this bond. Get the money and then bring him along with you to the wedding celebration. <sup>3</sup>For you know that my father will be counting the days. If I should delay even by a single day, I would cause him intense grief. <sup>4</sup>You have witnessed the oath that Raguel has sworn; I cannot violate his oath.”
<sup>5</sup>So Raphael, together with the four servants and two camels, traveled to Rages in Media, where they stayed at Gabael’s house. Raphael gave Gabael his bond and told him about Tobit’s son Tobiah, that he had married and was inviting him to the wedding celebration. Gabael got up and counted out for him the moneybags with their seals, and they packed them on the camels.

<sup>6</sup>The following morning they both got an early start and traveled to the wedding celebration. When they entered Raguel’s house, they found Tobiah reclining at table. He jumped up and greeted Gabael, who wept and blessed him, exclaiming: “Good and noble child, son of a good and noble, righteous and charitable man, may the Lord bestow a heavenly blessing on you and on your wife, and on your wife’s father and mother. Blessed be God, because I have seen the very image of my cousin Tobit!”

VI. Tobiah’s Return Journey to Nineveh and the Healing of Tobit

CHAPTER 10

Anxiety of the Parents. <sup>1</sup>Meanwhile, day by day, Tobit was keeping track of the time Tobiah would need to go and to return. When the number of days was reached and his son did not appear, <sup>2</sup>he said, “Could it be that he has been detained there? Or perhaps Gabael has died, and there is no one to give him the money?” <sup>3</sup>And he began to grieve. <sup>4</sup>His wife Anna said, “My son has perished and is no longer among the living!” And she began to weep aloud and to wail over her son: <sup>5</sup>“Alas, child, light of my eyes, that I have let you make this journey!” <sup>6</sup>But Tobit kept telling her: “Be still, do not worry, my sister; he is safe! Probably they have to take care of some unexpected business there. The man who is traveling with him is trustworthy and one of our kindred. So do not grieve over him, my sister. He will be here soon.” <sup>7</sup>But she retorted, “You be still, and do not try to deceive me! My son has perished!” She would rush out and keep watch every day at the road her son had taken. She ate nothing. After the sun had set, she would go back home to wail and cry the whole night through, getting no sleep at all.<sup>P</sup>

Departure from Ecbatana. Now when the fourteen days of the wedding celebration, which Raguel had sworn to hold for his daughter, had come to an end, Tobiah went to him and said: “Send me off, now, since I know that my father and mother do not believe they will ever see me again. So I beg you, father, let me depart and go back to my own father. I have already told you how I left him.” <sup>8</sup>Raguel said to Tobiah: “Stay, son, stay with me. I am sending messengers to your father Tobit, and they will give him news of you.” <sup>9</sup>But Tobiah insisted, “No, I beg you to send me back to my father.”

<sup>10</sup>Raguel then promptly handed over to Tobiah his wife Sarah, together with half of all his property: male and female slaves, oxen and sheep, donkeys and camels, clothing, money, and household goods. <sup>11</sup>He saw them safely off. Embracing Tobiah, he said to him: “Farewell, son. Have a safe journey. May the Lord of heaven grant prosperity to you and to your wife Sarah. And may I see children of yours before I die!” <sup>12</sup>Then he said to his daughter Sarah, “My daughter, honor your father-in-law and your mother-in-law, because from now on they are as much your parents as the ones who brought you into the world. Go in peace, daughter; let me hear a good report about you as long as I live.” Finally he said good-bye to them and let them go.

Edna also said to Tobiah: “My child and beloved kinsman, may the Lord bring you back safely, and may I live long enough to see children of you and of my daughter Sarah before I die. Before the Lord, I entrust my daughter to your care. Never cause her grief all the days of your life. Go in peace, son. From now on I am your mother, and Sarah is your sister. Together may we all prosper throughout the days of our lives.” She kissed them both and saw them safely off.

<sup>13</sup>Tobiah left Raguel, full of happiness and joy, and he blessed the Lord of heaven and earth, the King of all, for making his journey so successful. Finally he blessed Raguel and his wife Edna, and added, “I have been commanded by the Lord to honor you all the days of your life!”

CHAPTER 11

See RG 246–50

Homeward Journey. <sup>1</sup>As they drew near to Kaserin, which is opposite Nineveh, <sup>2</sup>Raphael said: “You know how we left your father. <sup>3</sup>Let us hurry on ahead of your wife to prepare the house while they are still on the way.” <sup>4</sup>So both went on ahead together, and Raphael said to him, “Take the gall in your hand!” And the dog ran along behind them.

<sup>5</sup>Meanwhile, Anna sat watching the road by which her son was to come. <sup>6</sup>When she saw him coming, she called to his father, “Look, your son is coming, and the man who traveled with him!”

<sup>7</sup>Raphael said to Tobiah before he came near to his father: “I know that his eyes will be opened. <sup>8</sup>Apply the fish gall to his eyes, and the medicine will make the white scales shrink and peel off from his eyes; then your father will have sight again and will see the light of day.”

Sight Restored. <sup>9</sup>Then Anna ran up to her son, embraced him, and said to him, “Now that I have seen you again, son, I am ready to die!” And she sobbed aloud. <sup>10</sup>Tobit got up and stumbled out through the courtyard gate to meet his son. Tobiah went up to him <sup>11</sup>with the fish gall in his hand and blew into his eyes. Holding him firmly, he said, “Courage, father.” Then he applied the medicine to his eyes, and it made them sting. <sup>12,13</sup>Tobiah used both hands to peel the white scales from the corners of his eyes. Tobit saw his son and threw his arms around him. <sup>14</sup>Weeping, he exclaimed, “I can see you, son, the light of my eyes!” Then he prayed, “Blessed be God,

blessed be his great name,
and blessed be all his holy angels.
May his great name be with us, and blessed be all the angels
throughout all the ages.

<sup>15</sup>God it was who afflicted me,
and God who has had mercy on me.
Now I see my son Tobiah!”

Then Tobit went back in, rejoicing and praising God with full voice. Tobiah related to his father how his journey had been a success; that he had brought back the money; and that he had married Raguel's daughter Sarah, who was about to arrive, for she was near the gate of Nineveh.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Rejoicing and blessing God, Tobit went out to the gate of Nineveh to meet his daughter-in-law. When the people of Nineveh saw him coming, walking along briskly, with no one leading him by the hand, they were amazed. <sup>17</sup>Before them all Tobit proclaimed how God had shown mercy to him and opened his eyes. When Tobit came up to Sarah, the wife of his son Tobiah, he blessed her and said: "Welcome, my daughter! Blessed be your God for bringing you to us, daughter! Blessed are your father and your mother. Blessed be my son Tobiah, and blessed be you, daughter! Welcome to your home with blessing and joy. Come in, daughter!" That day there was joy for all the Jews who lived in Nineveh. <sup>18</sup>Ahiqar and his nephew Nadin* were also on hand to rejoice with Tobit. Tobiah's wedding feast was celebrated with joy for seven days, and many gifts were given to him.

VII. Raphael Reveals his Identity

CHAPTER 12

Raphael's Wages. * <sup>1</sup>When the wedding celebration came to an end, Tobit called his son Tobiah and said to him, “Son, see to it that you pay his wages to the man who made the journey with you and give him a bonus too.” <sup>2</sup>Tobiah said: “Father, how much shall I pay him? It would not hurt to give him half the wealth he brought back with me.” <sup>s</sup> <sup>3</sup>He led me back safe and sound, healed my wife, brought the money back with me, and healed you. How much should I pay him?” <sup>4</sup>Tobit answered, “It is only fair, son, that he should receive half of all that he brought back.” <sup>5</sup>So Tobiah called Raphael and said, “Take as your wages half of all that you have brought back, and farewell!”

Exhortation. * <sup>6</sup>Raphael called the two of them aside privately and said to them: “Bless God and give him thanks before all the living for the good things he has done for you, by blessing and extolling his name in song. Proclaim before all with due honor the deeds of God, and do not be slack in thanking him.” * <sup>7</sup>A king's secret should be kept secret, but one must declare the works of God and give thanks with due honor. Do good, and evil will not overtake you. <sup>8</sup>Prayer with fasting is good. Almsgiving with righteousness is better than wealth with wickedness. It is better to give alms than to store up gold, <sup>t</sup> <sup>9</sup>for almsgiving saves from death, and purges all sin. Those who give alms will enjoy a full life, <sup>u</sup> <sup>10</sup>but those who commit sin and do evil are their own worst enemies.

Raphael's Identity. <sup>11</sup>“I shall now tell you the whole truth and conceal nothing at all from you. I have already said to you, ‘A king's secret should be kept secret, but one must declare the works of God with due honor.’” <sup>12v</sup> Now when you, Tobit, and Sarah prayed, it was I who presented the record of your prayer before the Glory of the Lord; and likewise whenever you used to bury the dead. * <sup>13</sup>When you did not hesitate to get up and leave your dinner in order to go and bury that dead man, <sup>14</sup>I was sent to put you to the test. At the same time, however, God sent me to heal you and your daughter-in-law Sarah. <sup>15</sup>I am Raphael, one of the seven angels who stand and serve before the Glory of the Lord.” <sup>w</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Greatly shaken, the two of them fell prostrate in fear. <sup>17</sup>But Raphael said to them: “Do not fear; peace be with you! Bless God now and forever. <sup>18</sup>As for me, when I was with you, I was not acting out of any favor on my part, but by God’s will. So bless God every day; give praise with song. <sup>19</sup>Even though you saw me eat and drink, I did not eat or drink anything; what you were seeing was a vision. <sup>20</sup>So now bless the Lord on earth and give thanks to God. Look, I am ascending to the one who sent me. Write down all that has happened to you.”<sup>x</sup> And he ascended. <sup>21</sup>They stood up but were no longer able to see him. <sup>22</sup>They kept blessing God and singing his praises, and they continued to give thanks for these marvelous works that God had done, because an angel of God appeared to them.

VIII. Tobit’s Song of Praise

CHAPTER 13

See RG 246–50

<sup>1*</sup> Then Tobit spoke and composed a song of joyful praise; he said:

Blessed be God who lives forever, because his kingship lasts for all ages.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>2</sup>For he afflicts and shows mercy, casts down to the depths of Hades, brings up from the great abyss.
What is there that can snatch from his hand?<sup>z</sup>

presence of the nations, for though he has scattered you among
them,
<sup>4</sup>even there recount his greatness.
Exalt him before every living being, because he is your Lord, and he is your
God,
our Father and God forever and ever!

<sup>5</sup>He will afflict you for your iniquities, but will have mercy on all of you.
He will gather you from all the nations among whom you have been scattered.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>6</sup>When you turn back to him with all your
heart,
and with all your soul do what is right
before him,
Then he will turn to you,
and will hide his face from you no longer.<sup>b</sup>

Now consider what he has done for you,
and give thanks with full voice.
Bless the Lord of righteousness, and exalt the King of the ages.

In the land of my captivity I give thanks, and declare his power and majesty to a sinful nation.

According to your heart do what is right
before him:
perhaps there will be pardon for you.

<sup>7</sup>As for me, I exalt my God,
my soul exalts the King of heaven,
and rejoices all the days of my life.

Let all sing praise to his greatness, <sup>8</sup>let all speak and give thanks in Jerusalem.

<sup>9</sup>Jerusalem, holy city, he will afflict you for the works of your hands,* but will again pity the children of the righteous.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Give thanks to the Lord with
righteousness,
and bless the King of the ages,
so that your tabernacle may be rebuilt in you with joy.

May he gladden within you all who are captives;
may he cherish within you all who are distressed for all generations to come.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>11</sup>A bright light will shine to the limits of
the earth.

Many nations will come to you from afar,

And inhabitants of all the ends of the earth

to your holy name, Bearing in their hands gifts for the King of heaven.

Generation after generation will offer joyful worship in you;
your name will be great forever and ever.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Cursed be all who despise you and revile
you;
cursed be all who hate you and speak a harsh word against you;
cursed be all who destroy you
and pull down your walls,
And all who overthrow your towers and set fire to your homes.
But blessed forever be all those who respect you.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Go, then, rejoice and exult over the children of the righteous, for they will all be gathered together and will bless the Lord of the ages.

<sup>14</sup>Happy are those who love you, and happy are those who rejoice in your peace.

Happy too are all who grieve
over all your afflictions,
For they will rejoice over you and behold all your joy forever.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>16</sup>for Jerusalem will be rebuilt as his house forever.

Happy too will I be if a remnant of my offspring survives to see your glory and to give thanks to the King of heaven!

The gates of Jerusalem will be built with sapphire and emerald, and all your walls with precious stones.

The towers of Jerusalem will be built with gold,
and their battlements with purest
gold.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>17</sup>The streets of Jerusalem will be paved with rubies and stones of Ophir;

<sup>18</sup>The gates of Jerusalem will sing hymns of gladness,

and all its houses will cry out, Hallelujah!
Blessed be the God of Israel for all ages!
For in you the blessed will bless the holy name forever and ever.

IX. Epilogue

CHAPTER 14

See RG 246–50

Parting Advice. <sup>1</sup>So the words of Tobit's hymn of praise came to an end. Tobit died in peace at the age of a hundred and twelve and was buried with honor in Nineveh. <sup>2</sup>He was fifty-eight years old when he lost his eyesight, and after he recovered it he lived in prosperity, giving alms; he continued to fear God and give thanks to the divine Majesty.

<sup>3</sup>As he was dying, he summoned his son Tobiah and Tobiah's seven sons, and commanded him, "Son, take your children<sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>and flee into Media, for I believe God's word that Nahum* spoke against Nineveh. It will all happen and will overtake Assyria and Nineveh; indeed all that was said by Israel's prophets whom God sent will come to pass. Not one of all their words will remain unfulfilled, but everything will take place in the time appointed for it. So it will be safer in Media than in Assyria or Babylon. For I know and believe that whatever God has said will be accomplished. It will happen, and not a single word of the prophecies will fail.

As for our kindred who dwell in the land of Israel, they will all be scattered and taken into captivity from the good land. All the land of Israel will become a wilderness; even Samaria and Jerusalem will be a wilderness! For a time, the house of God will be desolate and will be burned.<sup>j</sup> <sup>5</sup>But God will again have mercy on them and bring them back to the land of Israel. They will build the house again, but it will not be like the first until the era when the appointed times will be completed.* Afterward all of them will return from their captivity, and they will rebuild Jerusalem with due honor. In it the house of God will also be rebuilt, just as the prophets of Israel said of it.<sup>k</sup> <sup>6l</sup> All the nations of the world will turn and reverence God in truth; all will cast away their idols, which have deceitfully led them into error.* <sup>7</sup>They will bless the God of the ages in righteousness. All the Israelites truly mindful of God, who are to be saved in those days, will be gathered together and will come to Jerusalem; in security will they dwell forever in the land of Abraham, which will be given to them. Those who love God sincerely will rejoice, but those who commit sin and wickedness will disappear completely from the land.<sup>m</sup> children to do what is right and to give alms, to be mindful of God and at all times to bless his name sincerely and with all their strength. Now, as for you, son, leave Nineveh; do not stay here. <sup>10</sup>The day you bury your mother next to me, do not even stay overnight within the confines of the city. For I see that there is much wickedness in it, and much treachery is practiced in it, and people are not ashamed. See, my son, all that Nadin* did to Ahiqar, the very one who reared him. Was not Ahiqar brought down alive into the earth? Yet God made Nadin's disgraceful crime rebound against him. Ahiqar came out again into the light, but Nadin went into the everlasting darkness, for he had tried to kill Ahiqar. Because Ahiqar had given alms he escaped from the deadly trap Nadin had set for him. But Nadin fell into the deadly trap himself, and it destroyed him.<sup>n</sup> <sup>11</sup>So, my children, see what almsgiving does, and also what wickedness does—it kills! But now my spirit is about to leave me.”

Death of Tobit and Tobiah. They laid him on his bed, and he died; and he was buried with honor. <sup>12</sup>When Tobiah's mother died, he buried her next to his father. He then departed with his wife and children for Media, where he settled in Ecbatana with his father-in-law Raguel.<sup>o</sup> <sup>13</sup>He took respectful care of his aging father-in-law and mother-in-law; and he buried them at Ecbatana in Media. Then he inherited Raguel's estate as well as that of his father Tobit. <sup>14</sup>He died highly respected at the age of one hundred seventeen. <sup>15</sup>But before he died, he saw and heard of the destruction of Nineveh. He saw the inhabitants of the city being led captive into Media by Cyaxares,* the king of Media. Tobiah blessed God for all that he had done against the Ninevites and Assyrians. Before dying he rejoiced over Nineveh, and he blessed the Lord God forever and ever.

1:1 Tobit: in the Aramaic text the name is given as Tobi, an abbreviated form of Tobiyah (Ezr 2:60) or of Tobiyahu (2 Chr 17:8), a name that means “Yhwh is my welfare.” Tobiel: “El [God] is my welfare.” Hananiel: “El [God] has shown mercy.” The book abounds in theophoric names.

1:2 Shalmaneser (V) (727–722 B.C.): began the siege of Samaria; the inhabitants of the Northern Kingdom were taken into captivity by his successor, Sargon II (722–705); cf. 2 Kgs 17:1–6. Thisbe and Phogor: unidentified towns of Galilee. Kedesh Naphtali: cf. Jos 20:7; 2 Kgs 15:29. Asher: probably Hazor (Jos 11:1).

1:5 Jeroboam established sanctuaries in Dan and Bethel so that the people would no longer have to go to Jerusalem for the festivals. The gold statues of calves that he placed in the sanctuaries were considered the throne of Yhwh; but the people may have tended to worship the images themselves. Jeroboam also encouraged high places or hilltop shrines (1 Kgs 12:26–33).

1:6–8 Longstanding decree: Dt 12:11, 13–14. Refusing to worship at Jeroboam's shrines, the faithful Tobit continued to bring his offerings to Jerusalem; see 2 Chr 11:16. For the various tithes, cf. Lv 27:30–33; Nm 18:20–32; 2 Chr 31:4–6; Dt 14:22–29; 26:12–13.

1:14 Silver worth ten talents: a great sum of money; about ten thousand dollars, at least. Rages: modern Rai, about five miles southeast of Tehran. Media: the northwestern part of modern Iran.

1:15 Sennacherib (705–681 B.C.): the son of Sargon II; neither was descended from Shalmaneser. On such historical inconsistencies, see Introduction; also notes on 5:6; 6:2; 9:2; 14:15.

1:17–18 Tobit risked his own life to bury the dead. Deprivation of burial was viewed with horror by the Jews. Cf. 4:3–4; 6:15; 14:12–13.

1:20 Tobiah: the son bears the fuller form of his father's name; see note on 1:1.

1:21 Esarhaddon: 681–669 B.C. Ahiqar: a hero of ancient folklore, known for his outstanding wisdom. The Story (or Wisdom) of Ahiqar was very popular in antiquity and is extant in many different forms: Aramaic, Syriac, Armenian, Arabic (Arabian Nights), Greek (Aesop's Fables), Slavonic, Ethiopic, and Romanian. The sacred author makes Tobit the uncle of the famous Ahiqar in order to enhance Tobit's own prestige. See note on 14:10.

2:1 Feast of Weeks: also called by its Greek name, Pentecost, was celebrated fifty days after the Passover. Cf. Lv 23:15–21; Dt 16:9–12.

2:2 Almsgiving and charity to the poor are important virtues taught by the book (4:7–11, 16–17; 12:8–9; 14:10–11). A sincere worshiper of God: lit., “who is mindful of God with the whole heart.”

2:5 Washed: because of ritual defilement from touching a corpse (Nm 19:11–13).

2:10 White scales: or white films. A primitive way of describing an eye ailment that results in blindness. Elam: or in Greek, Elymais, an ancient district northeast of the head of the Persian Gulf.

2:12 Seventh day of the month of Dystrus: late in winter. The Macedonian month Dystros corresponds to the Jewish month of Shebat (January–February). A meal: lit., “for the hearth”; the gift had probably been made in view of some springtime festival like the Jewish Purim.

2:14 Anna's sharp rebuke calls to mind the words of Job's wife (Jb 2:9).

3:1 Pray: prayer is a significant theme, occurring at six major turning points in the story (3:2–6, 11–15; 8:5–8, 15–17; 11:14–15; 13:1–18).

3:6 It is better for me to die than to live: in his distress Tobit uses the words of the petulant Jonah (Jon 4:3, 8), who wished to die because God did not destroy the hated Ninevites. In similar circumstances, Moses (Nm 11:15), Elijah (1 Kgs 19:4), and Job (Jb 7:15) also prayed for death. Everlasting abode: a reference to Sheol, the dismal abode of the dead from which no one returns (Jb 7:9–10; 14:12; Is 26:14). See note on Tb 4:6.

3:7 From here on, the story is told in the third person. Verse 7 relates one of the several marvelous coincidences that the storyteller uses to suggest divine providence; see also vv. 16–17; 4:1; 5:4. Ecbatana: Hamadan in modern Iran; this was the capital of ancient Media. Raguel: the Greek form of the Hebrew name Re'u'el, “friend of God.”

3:8 Asmodeus: in Persian aeshma daeva, “demon of wrath,” adopted into Aramaic with the sense of “the Destroyer.” It will be subdued (8:3) by Raphael (v. 17), whose name means “God has healed.”

3:11 Toward the window: that is, looking in prayer toward Jerusalem; cf. Dn 6:11. “Blessed are you” and “Blessed be God” are traditional openings of Jewish prayers (Tb 8:5, 15; 11:14; 13:1).

3:17 It fell to Tobiah's lot: according to the patriarchal custom of marriage within the family group. Tobiah was Sarah's closest eligible relative (6:12). Cf. 4:12–13; Gn 24:4; 28:2; Ru 3:9–12; 4:1–12.

4:3–19 A collection of maxims that parallel those in the wisdom literature, especially Proverbs and Sirach (see Introduction): duties toward parents (vv. 3–4; cf. also 14:13); perseverance in virtue and avoidance of evil (vv. 5–6, 14b); necessity and value of almsgiving and charity (vv. 7–11, 16– 17); marriage within the clan (vv. 12–13a); industry (v. 13b); prompt payment of wages (v. 14a); the golden rule (v. 15a); temperance (v. 15b); docility (v. 18); prayer (v. 19).

4:6 It was commonly thought in the Old Testament that virtue guaranteed earthly prosperity, and sin earthly disaster (Prv 10:2; cf. Dt 28).

4:17 Tobit counsels his son to give alms in honor of the dead or, more probably, to give the “bread of consolation” to the family of the deceased. Cf. Jer 16:7; Ez 24:17.

5:3 Bond: a document called in Greek cheirophonon. In the Middle Ages, notably in England, a deed and its duplicate were written on one piece of parchment, with the Latin word chirographum inscribed across the top of the sheet or between the two copies of the text. The document was then cut in two in either a straight or a wavy line, the parts being given to the persons concerned. Perhaps this procedure was derived from the present verse of Tobit. Duplicate documents, usually one part open and the other sealed, are well known from the ancient Near East.

5:4 He did not know: the theme of an angel in disguise occurs frequently in folklore as well as in the Old Testament (Gn 18; cf. Heb 13:2).

5:6 It is a good two days’ journey from Ecbatana to Rages: Alexander’s army took eleven days in forced marches to cover this distance, about 180 miles. (See notes on 1:15; 3:7 and Introduction.)

5:13–14 Azariah, “Yhwh has helped”; Hananiah, “Yhwh has shown mercy”; Nathan is a shortened form of Nathaniah, “Yhwh has given”; Shemeliah may be a Greek corruption of the Hebrew name, Shemaiah, “Yhwh has heard.”

5:15 A drachma as wages: the normal wages, about seventeen cents, a day’s wage for a laborer.

5:21 My sister: “sister” was a term of endearment used in antiquity even for one’s wife; similarly “brother” for one’s husband. Cf. 7:11, 15; 8:4, 21; 10:6, 13; Sg 4:9–10, 12; 5:1–2.

5:22 A good angel: a reference to a guardian angel, though Tobit does not know, of course, that Raphael himself, disguised as Azariah, is the good angel in this case.

6:2 Tigris River: this river is actually west of Nineveh, so they would not have come to it on their way to Media. See note on 1:15 and the Introduction.

6:5 Its gall ... medicine: belief in the healing power of these organs was common among the physicians of antiquity.

6:13 Raguel ... Book of Moses: Nm 36:6–8 prescribed marriage within the ancestral tribe for daughters who had no brothers who might inherit the ancestral property, but no death penalty is mentioned.

6:18 Get up to pray: prayer, combined with ritual action, drives out the demon.

7:11 You are her brother, and she is your sister: the marriage formula is similar to a marriage contract from the fifth century B.C. found at Elephantine in Egypt: “She is my wife and I am her husband from this day forever.”

8:2–3 The manner of coping with demonic influences among the ancients seems strange to us. However, the fish here is a folktale element, suggesting the hero’s fight with a dragon, and not a recipe for exorcism. It is clear that the author places primary emphasis on the value of prayer to God (6:18; 8:4–8), on the role of the angel as God’s agent, and on the pious disposition of Tobiah.

8:3 The desert was considered the dwelling place of demons. Cf. Is 13:21; 34:14; Mt 4:1; 12:43.’

8:20 For fourteen days: because of the happy, and unexpected, turn of events, Raguel doubles the time of the wedding feast. When Tobiah returns home, the usual seven-day feast is held (11:18). Cf. Jgs 14:12.

9:2 To Rages: see note on 5:6.

11:18 Nadin: see note on 14:10.

12:1–5 Tobit and his son generously agree to give Raphael far more than the wages agreed upon in 5:15–16.

12:6–10 In the fashion of a wisdom teacher, Raphael gives the two men a short exhortation similar to the one Tobit gave his son in 4:3–19.

12:6–7 The faithful considered the praise of God their most esteemed privilege. Without it, life was meaningless; cf. Is 38:16–20.

12:12 Raphael is one of the seven Angels of the Presence, specially designated intercessors who present prayers to God. Angelology was developing in this period. The names of two other of these seven angels are given in the Bible: Gabriel (Dn 8:16; 9:21; Lk 1:19, 26) and Michael (Dn 10:13, 21; 12:1; Jude 9; Rev 12:7). See 1 Enoch for the names of the rest.

13:1–18 Tobit's hymn of praise is divided into two parts. The first part (vv. 1–8) is a song of praise that echoes themes from the psalms; the second (vv. 9–18) is addressed to Jerusalem in the style of those prophets who spoke of a new and ideal Jerusalem (Is 60; cf. Rev 21). Joyful praise: words for joy and gladness occur throughout this prayer (vv. 1, 7, 10, 11, 13, 14, 16, 18).

13:9 Works of your hands: idols.

14:4–5 Nahum: one of the minor prophets, whose book contains oracles of doom against Nineveh. Here, in keeping with the period in which the story is set, the author makes Tobit speak as if the punishment of Nineveh, the destruction of Jerusalem (587 B.C.), the exile from Judah and the return, would all take place in the future. The technique of using the facts of past history as seemingly future predictions is a frequent device of apocalyptic writers. The good land: a favorite name for the promised land. Cf. Dt 1:35; 3:25; 4:21–22.

14:5 Until the era ... completed: a reference to the coming of the day of the Lord, when a new, more perfect temple was to be expected. Cf. Heb 9:1–14.

14:6 Conversion of the nations is also to come with the day of the Lord.

14:10 Nadin: in the Story of Ahiqar, the hero Ahiqar, chancellor under the Assyrian kings Sennacherib and Esarhaddon, adopts his nephew Nadin and prepares him to become his successor. But Nadin treacherously plots to have his uncle put to death. Ahiqar hides in a friend's house and is finally vindicated when Nadin's scheme is discovered. Thereupon Nadin is thrown into a dungeon where he dies. It was Ahiqar's almsgiving that delivered him from death; see note on 2:2. The Greek and Latin versions of the Book of Tobit read the name as Nadab, but the Aramaic form has the ancient name Nadin, which is also found in the fifth-century B.C. Aramaic Story of Ahiqar.

14:15 Cyaxares: Nabopolassar, king of Babylon, and Cyaxares conquered and destroyed Nineveh in 612 B.C.; see note on 1:15.

The Book of Judith

See RG 250–55

The Book of Judith relates the story of God’s deliverance of the Jewish people. This was accomplished “by the hand of a female”—a constant motif (cf. 8:33; 9:9, 10; 12:4; 13:4, 14, 15; 15:10; 16:5) meant to recall the “hand” of God in the Exodus narrative (cf. Ex 15:6). The work may have been written around 100 B.C., but its historical range is extraordinary. Within the reign of Nebuchadnezzar (1:1; 2:1), it telescopes five centuries of historical and geographical information with imaginary details. There are references to Nineveh, the Assyrian capital destroyed in 612 B.C., to Nebuchadnezzar, the ruler not of Assyria but of Babylon (605/604–562), and to the second Temple, built around 515. The postexilic period is presumed (e.g., governance by the High Priest). The Persian period is represented by two characters, Holofernes and Bagoas, who appear together in the military campaigns of Artaxerxes III Ochus (358–338); there seem to be allusions to the second-century Seleucid ruler Antiochus IV Epiphanes. Several mysteries remain: Judith herself, Arphaxad, and others are otherwise unknown. The geographical details, such as the narrow defile into Bethulia (an unidentified town which gives access to the heart of the land), are fanciful. The simple conclusion from these and other details is that the work is historical fiction, written to exalt God as Israel’s deliverer from foreign might, not by an army, but by means of a simple widow.

There are four Greek recensions of Judith (Septuagint codices Vaticanus, Sinaiticus, Alexandrinus, and Basiliano-Vaticanus), four ancient translations (Old Latin, Syriac, Sahidic, and Ethiopic), and some late Hebrew versions, apparently translated from the Vulgate. Despite Jerome’s claim to have translated an Aramaic text, no ancient Aramaic or Hebrew manuscripts have been found. The oldest extant text of Judith is the preservation of 15:1–7 inscribed on a third-century A.D. potsherd. Whatever the reasons, the rabbis did not count Judith among their scriptures, and the Reformation adopted that position. The early Church, however, held this book in high honor. The first-century Pope, St. Clement of Rome, proposes Judith as an example of courageous love (1 Corinthians 55). St. Jerome holds her up as an example of a holy widow and a type of the Church (To Salvina: Letter 79, par. 10; see also To Furia: Letter 54, par. 16) and, in another place, describes Mary as a new Judith (To Eustochium: Letter 22, par. 21). The Council of Trent (1546) included Judith in the canon; thus it is one of the seven deuterocanonical books.

Inner-biblical references are noteworthy: as God acted through Moses' hand (Ex 10:21–22; 14:27–30), so God delivers “by the hand of a female,” Judith. Like Jael, who drove a tent peg through the head of Sisera (Jgs 4), Judith kills an enemy general. Like Deborah (Jgs 4–5), Judith “judges” Israel in the time of military crisis. Like Sarah, the mother of Israel's future (Gn 17:6), Judith's beauty deceives foreigners, with the result that blessings redound to Israel (Gn 12:11–20). Her Hebrew name means “Jewish woman.” Her exploits captured the imagination of liturgists, artists, and writers through the centuries. The book is filled with double entendres and ironic situations, e.g., Judith's conversation with Holofernes in 11:5–8, 19, where “my lord” is ambiguous, and her declaration to Holofernes that she will lead him through Judea to Jerusalem (his head goes on such a journey).

The book can be divided into five parts:

- I. Assyrian Threat (1:1–3:10)
- II. Siege of Bethulia (4:1–7:32)
- III. Judith, Instrument of the Lord (8:1–10:10)
- IV. Judith Goes Out to War (10:11–13:20)
- V. Victory and Thanksgiving (14:1–16:25)

I. Assyrian Threat*

CHAPTER 1

Nebuchadnezzar Against Arphaxad.* <sup>1</sup>It was the twelfth year* of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, who ruled over the Assyrians in the great city of Nineveh. At that time Arphaxad was ruling over the Medes in Ecbatana.<sup>a</sup> <sup>2</sup>* Around Ecbatana he built a wall of hewn stones, three cubits thick and six cubits long. He made the walls seventy cubits high and fifty cubits wide.<sup>3</sup> At its gates he raised towers one hundred cubits high with foundations sixty cubits wide. <sup>4</sup>He made its gates seventy cubits high and forty cubits wide to allow passage of his mighty forces, with his infantry in formation.<sup>5</sup> At that time King Nebuchadnezzar waged war against King Arphaxad in the vast plain that borders Ragau.* <sup>6</sup>Rallying to him were all who lived in the hill country, all who lived along the Euphrates, the Tigris, and the Hydaspes, as well as Arioch, king of the Elamites, in the plains. Thus many nations joined the ranks of the Chelodites.* <sup>b</sup>

<sup>11</sup>But all the inhabitants of the whole land* made light of the summons of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, and would not join him in the war. They were not afraid of him, since he was only a single opponent. So they sent back his envoys empty-handed and disgraced.<sup>f</sup> <sup>12</sup>Then Nebuchadnezzar fell into a violent rage against all the land, and swore by his throne and his kingdom that he would take revenge on all the territories of Cilicia, Damascus, and Syria, and would destroy with his sword all the inhabitants of Moab, Ammon, the whole of Judea, and all those living in Egypt as far as the coasts of the two seas.*

whole force of Arphaxad, his entire cavalry, and all his chariots, <sup>14</sup>and took possession of his cities. He pressed on to Ecbatana, took its towers, sacked its marketplaces, and turned its glory into shame. <sup>15</sup>He captured Arphaxad in the mountains of Ragau, ran him through with spears, and utterly destroyed him once and for all. <sup>16</sup>Then he returned to Nineveh with all his consolidated forces, a very great multitude of warriors; and there he and his forces relaxed and feasted for one hundred and twenty days.<sup>9</sup>

CHAPTER 2

<sup>4</sup>When he had fully recounted his plan, Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, summoned Holofernes, the ranking general* of his forces, second only to himself in command, and said to him: <sup>5</sup>“Thus says the great king, the lord of all the earth: Go forth from my presence, take with you men of proven valor, one hundred and twenty thousand infantry and twelve thousand cavalry,<sup>i</sup> <sup>6</sup>and proceed against all the land of the west, because they disobeyed the order I issued. <sup>7</sup>Tell them to have earth and water* ready, for I will come against them in my wrath; I will cover all the land with the feet of my soldiers, to whom I will deliver them as spoils. <sup>8</sup>Their wounded will fill their ravines and wadies, the swelling river will be choked with their dead; <sup>9</sup>and I will deport them as exiles to the very ends of the earth.

supplies; innumerable sheep, cattle, and goats for their food;<sup>l</sup> <sup>18</sup>abundant provisions for each man, and much gold and silver from the royal palace.

<sup>24</sup>Then, following the Euphrates, he went through Mesopotamia, and battered down every fortified city along the Wadi Abron, until he reached the sea. <sup>25</sup>He seized the territory of Cilicia, and cut down everyone who resisted him. Then he proceeded to the southern borders of Japheth, toward Arabia. <sup>26</sup>He surrounded all the Midianites, burned their tents, and sacked their encampments.<sup>o</sup> <sup>27</sup>Descending to the plain of Damascus at the time of the wheat harvest, he set fire to all their fields, destroyed their flocks and herds, looted their cities, devastated their plains, and put all their young men to the sword.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>28q</sup> Fear and dread of him fell upon all the inhabitants of the coastland, upon those in Sidon and Tyre,<sup>r</sup> and those who dwelt in Sur and Ocina, and the inhabitants of Jamnia. Those in Azotus and Ascalon also feared him greatly.*

CHAPTER 3

See RG 250–55

Submission of the Vassal Nations. <sup>1</sup>So they sent messengers to him to sue for peace in these words: <sup>2</sup>“We, the servants of Nebuchadnezzar the great king, lie prostrate before you; do with us as you will. <sup>3</sup>See, our dwellings and all our land and every wheat field, our flocks and herds, and all our encampments are at your disposal; make use of them as you please. <sup>4</sup>Our cities and their inhabitants are also at your service; come and deal with them as you see fit.”

<sup>5</sup>After the spokesmen had reached Holofernes and given him this message, <sup>6</sup>he went down with his forces to the seacoast, stationed garrisons in the fortified cities, and took selected men from them as auxiliaries. <sup>7</sup>The people of these cities and all the inhabitants of the countryside received him with garlands and dancing to the sound of timbrels. <sup>8</sup>But he devastated their whole territory and cut down their sacred groves, for he was allowed to destroy all the gods of the land, so that every nation might worship only Nebuchadnezzar, and all their tongues and tribes should invoke him as a god.* <sup>s</sup> <sup>9</sup> At length Holofernes reached Esdraelon in the neighborhood of Dothan,* the approach to the main ridge of the Judean mountains; <sup>10</sup>he set up his camp between Geba* and Scythopolis, and stayed there a whole month to replenish all the supplies of his forces.

II. Siege of Bethulia*

CHAPTER 4

See RG 250–55

Israel Prepares for War.* <sup>1</sup>When the Israelites who lived in Judea heard of all that Holofernes, the ranking general of Nebuchadnezzar king of the Assyrians, had done to the nations, and how he had looted all their shrines* and utterly destroyed them, <sup>2</sup>they were in very great fear of him, and greatly alarmed for Jerusalem and the temple of the Lord, their God. <sup>3</sup>Now, they had only recently returned from exile, and all the people of Judea were just now reunited, and the vessels, the altar, and the temple had been purified from profanation.* <sup>t</sup> <sup>4</sup>So they sent word to the whole region of Samaria, to Kona, Beth-horon, Belmain, and Jericho, to Choba and Aesora, and to the valley of Salem.* <sup>5</sup>The people there secured all the high hilltops, fortified the villages on them, and since their fields had recently been harvested, stored up provisions in preparation for war.

Lord Almighty in Jerusalem.<sup>z</sup> <sup>14</sup>Also girded with sackcloth, Joakim, the high priest, and all the priests in attendance before the Lord, and those who ministered to the Lord offered the daily burnt offering, the votive offerings, and the voluntary offerings of the people.<sup>a</sup> <sup>15</sup>With ashes upon their turbans, they cried to the Lord with all their strength to look with favor on the whole house of Israel.<sup>b</sup>

Achior in the Assyrian War Council.* <sup>1</sup>It was reported to Holofernes, the ranking general of the Assyrian forces, that the Israelites were ready for battle, had blocked the mountain passes, fortified the high hilltops, and placed roadblocks in the plains. <sup>2</sup>In great anger he summoned all the rulers of Moab, the governors of Ammon, and all the satraps of the coastland<sup>c</sup> <sup>3</sup>and said to them: “Now tell me, you Canaanites, what sort of people is this that lives in the hill country? Which cities do they inhabit? How large is their force? In what does their power and strength consist? Who has set himself up as their king and the leader of their army? <sup>4</sup>Why have they alone of all the inhabitants of the west refused to come out to meet me?”

<sup>5*</sup> Then Achior, the leader of all the Ammonites, said to him: “My lord, please listen to a report from your servant. I will tell you the truth about this people that lives in the hill country near here. No lie shall escape your servant’s lips.

settled in the land of the Amorites. By their strength they destroyed all the Heshbonites,<sup>i</sup> crossed the Jordan, and took possession of all the hill country.<sup>j</sup> <sup>16</sup>They drove out before them the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Shechemites,* and all the Gergesites,<sup>k</sup> and they lived there a long time.

<sup>17l</sup> “As long as the Israelites did not sin in the sight of their God, they prospered, for their God, who hates wickedness, was with them. <sup>18*</sup> But when they abandoned the way he had prescribed for them, they were utterly destroyed by frequent wars, and finally taken as captives into foreign lands. The temple of their God was razed to the ground, and their cities were occupied by their enemies.<sup>m</sup> <sup>19</sup>But now they have returned to their God, and they have come back from the Diaspora where they were scattered. They have reclaimed Jerusalem, where their sanctuary is, and have settled again in the hill country, because it was unoccupied.

<sup>22</sup>Now when Achior had finished saying these things, all the people standing round about the tent murmured; and the officers of Holofernes and all the inhabitants of the seacoast and of Moab alike said he should be cut to pieces. <sup>23o</sup> “We are not afraid of the Israelites,” they said, “for they are a powerless people, incapable of a strong defense. <sup>24</sup>Therefore let us attack, master Holofernes. They will become fodder for your great army.”

CHAPTER 6

<sup>1</sup>When the noise of the crowd surrounding the council had subsided, Holofernes, the ranking general of the Assyrian forces, said to Achior, in the presence of the whole throng of foreigners, of the Moabites, and of the Ammonite mercenaries: <sup>2</sup>“Who are you,* Achior and the mercenaries of Ephraim, to prophesy among us as you have done today, and to tell us not to fight against the people of Israel because their God shields them? Who is God beside Nebuchadnezzar? He will send his force and destroy them from the face of the earth. Their God will not save them;<sup>p</sup> <sup>3</sup>but we, the servants of Nebuchadnezzar, will strike them down with one blow, for they will be unable to withstand the force of our cavalry. <sup>4</sup>We will overwhelm them with it, and their mountains shall be drunk with their blood, and their plains filled with their corpses. Not a trace of them shall survive our attack; they will utterly perish. So says King Nebuchadnezzar, lord of all the earth. For he has spoken, and his words will not be in vain. <sup>5</sup>As for you, Achior, you Ammonite mercenary, for saying these things in a moment of perversity, you will not see my face after today, until I have taken revenge on this people that came out of Egypt. <sup>6</sup>Then at my return, the sword of my army or the spear of my attendants will pierce your sides, and you will fall among their wounded. <sup>7</sup>My servants will now conduct you to the hill country, and leave you at one of the cities beside the passes. <sup>8</sup>You will not die until you are destroyed together with them. <sup>9</sup>If you still harbor the hope that they will not be taken, then there is no need for you to be downcast.<sup>q</sup> I have spoken, and not one of my words will fail to be fulfilled.”

<sup>10</sup>Then Holofernes ordered the servants who were standing by in his tent to seize Achior, conduct him to Bethulia, and hand him over to the Israelites. <sup>11</sup>So the servants seized him and took him out of the camp into the plain. From the plain they led him up into the hill country until they reached the springs below Bethulia.

bound Achior and left him lying at the foot of the hill; then they returned to their lord.

Achior in Bethulia.* <sup>14</sup>The Israelites came down from their city and found him, untied him, and brought him into Bethulia. They placed him before the rulers of the city, <sup>15</sup>who in those days were Uzziah,* son of Micah of the tribe of Simeon, and Chabris, son of Gothoniell, and Charmis, son of Melchiel.<sup>r</sup> <sup>16</sup>They then convened all the elders of the city, and all their young men, as well as the women, gathered in haste at the place of assembly. They placed Achior in the center of the people, and Uzziah questioned him about what had happened. <sup>17</sup>He replied by giving them an account of what was said in the council of Holofernes, and of all his own words among the Assyrian rulers, and of all the boasting threats of Holofernes against the house of Israel.

<sup>18</sup>At this the people fell prostrate and worshiped God,* and they cried out: <sup>19</sup>“Lord, God of heaven, look at their arrogance! Have mercy on our people in their abject state, and look with favor this day on the faces of those who are consecrated to you.” <sup>20</sup>Then they reassured Achior and praised him highly. <sup>21</sup>Uzziah brought him from the place of assembly to his home, where he gave a banquet for the elders. That whole night they called upon the God of Israel for help.

CHAPTER 7

The Campaign Against Israel.* <sup>1</sup>The following day Holofernes ordered his whole army, and all the troops who had come to join him, to break camp and move against Bethulia, seize the passes into the hills, and make war on the Israelites. <sup>2</sup>That same day all their fighting men went into action. Their forces numbered a hundred and seventy thousand infantry and twelve thousand cavalry, not counting the baggage train or the men who accompanied it on foot, a very great army. <sup>3</sup>They encamped at the spring in the valley near Bethulia, and spread crosswise toward Dothan as far as Balbaim, and lengthwise from Bethulia to Cyamon, which faces Esdraelon.

<sup>4</sup>When the Israelites saw how many there were, they were greatly distressed and said to one another, “Soon they will strip the whole land bare. Neither the high mountains nor the valleys nor the hills will bear their weight.” <sup>5</sup>Yet they all seized their weapons, lighted fires on their towers, and kept watch throughout the night.<sup>s</sup>

The Siege of Bethulia.* <sup>6</sup>On the second day Holofernes led out all his cavalry in the sight of the Israelites who were in Bethulia. <sup>7</sup>He reconnoitered the ascents to their city and located their springs of water; these he seized, stationing armed detachments around them, while he himself returned to his troops.

<sup>8</sup>All the rulers of the Edomites, all the leaders of the Moabites, together with the generals of the coastal region, came to Holofernes and said:<sup>t</sup> <sup>9</sup>“Master, please listen to what we have to say, that there may be no losses among your forces. <sup>10</sup>These Israelite troops do not rely on their spears, but on the height of the mountains where they dwell, for it is not easy to reach the summit of their mountains.”<sup>u</sup> <sup>11</sup>Therefore, master, do not attack them in regular formation, and not a single one of your troops will fall. <sup>12</sup>Stay in your camp, and spare every man of your force. Have some of your servants keep control of the spring of water that flows out at the base of the mountain, <sup>13</sup>for that is where the inhabitants of Bethulia get their water. Then thirst will destroy them, and they will surrender their city. Meanwhile, we and our troops will go up to the nearby hilltops and encamp there to guard against anyone’s leaving the city. <sup>14</sup>They and their wives and children will languish with hunger, and even before the sword strikes them they will be laid low in the streets where they live. <sup>15</sup>Thus you will render them dire punishment for their rebellion and their refusal to meet you peacefully.”

<sup>16</sup>Their words pleased Holofernes and all his attendants, and he ordered their proposal to be carried out. <sup>17</sup>So the Ammonites moved camp, together with five thousand Assyrians. They encamped in the valley and held the water supply and the springs of the Israelites. <sup>18</sup>The Edomites and the Ammonites went up and encamped in the hill country opposite Dothan; and they sent some of their men to the southeast opposite Eggebel, near Chusi, which is on Wadi Mochmur. The rest of the Assyrian army was encamped in the plain, covering all the land. Their tents and equipment were spread out in profusion everywhere, and they formed a vast multitude.

The Distress of the Israelites. <sup>19</sup>The Israelites cried to the Lord, their God, for they were disheartened, since all their enemies had them surrounded, and there was no way of escaping from them.* <sup>20</sup>The whole Assyrian army, infantry, chariots, and cavalry, kept them thus surrounded for thirty-four days.* All the reservoirs of water failed the inhabitants of Bethulia, <sup>21</sup>and the cisterns ran dry, so that on no day did they have enough water to drink, for their drinking water was rationed. <sup>22</sup>Their children were listless, and the women and youths were fainting from thirst and were collapsing in the streets and gateways of the city, with no strength left in them.

<sup>23</sup>So all the people, including youths, women, and children, went in a crowd to Uzziah and the rulers of the city. They cried out loudly and said before all the elders: <sup>24</sup>“May God judge between you and us! You have done us grave injustice in not making peace with the Assyrians.<sup>v</sup> <sup>25</sup>There is no one to help us now! God has sold us into their hands by laying us prostrate before them in thirst and utter exhaustion.<sup>w</sup> <sup>26</sup>So now, summon them and deliver the whole city as plunder to the troops of Holofernes and to all his forces; <sup>27</sup>we would be better off to become their prey. Although we would be made slaves, at least we would live, and not have to see our little ones dying before our eyes, and our wives and children breathing their last.<sup>x</sup> <sup>28</sup>We adjure you by heaven and earth and by our God, the Lord of our ancestors, who is punishing us for our sins and the sins of our ancestors,* that this very day you do as we have proposed.”<sup>y</sup>

<sup>29</sup>All in the assembly with one accord broke into shrill wailing and cried loudly to the Lord their God. <sup>30</sup>But Uzziah said to them, “Courage, my brothers and sisters! Let us endure patiently five days more for the Lord our God to show mercy toward us; for God will not utterly forsake us. <sup>31</sup>But if these days pass and help does not come to us, I will do as you say.” <sup>32</sup>Then he dismissed the people. The men returned to their posts on the walls and towers of the city, the women and children went back to their homes. Throughout the city they were in great misery.

III. Judith, Instrument of the Lord*

CHAPTER 8

Description of Judith. <sup>1*</sup> <sup>z</sup> Now in those days Judith, daughter of Merari,<sup>a</sup> son of Ox, son of Joseph, son of Oziel, son of Elkiah, son of Ananias, son of Gideon, son of Raphain, son of Ahitub, son of Elijah, son of Hilkiah, son of Eliab, son of Nathanael, son of Salamiel, son of Sarasadai, son of Simeon, son of Israel, heard of this. <sup>2</sup>Her husband, Manasseh,* of her own tribe and clan, had died at the time of the barley harvest. <sup>3</sup>While he was supervising those who bound the sheaves in the field, he was overcome by the heat; and he collapsed on his bed and died in Bethulia, his native city. He was buried with his ancestors in the field between Dothan and Balamon. <sup>4b</sup> Judith was living as a widow* in her home for three years and four months. <sup>5</sup>She set up a tent for herself on the roof of her house, put sackcloth about her waist, and wore widow's clothing.<sup>c</sup> <sup>6</sup>She fasted all the days of her widowhood, except sabbath eves and sabbaths, new moon eves and new moons, feastdays and holidays of the house of Israel.<sup>d</sup> <sup>7</sup>She was beautiful in appearance and very lovely to behold.<sup>e</sup> Her husband, Manasseh, had left her gold and silver, male and female servants, livestock and fields, which she was maintaining. <sup>8</sup>No one had a bad word to say about her, for she feared God greatly.

Judith and the Elders. * <sup>9</sup>So when Judith heard of the harsh words that the people, discouraged by their lack of water, had spoken against their ruler, and of all that Uzziah had said to them in reply, swearing that he would hand over the city to the Assyrians at the end of five days, <sup>10</sup>she sent her maid who was in charge of all her things* to summon Uzziah, Chabris, and Charmis, the elders of her city. <sup>11</sup>When they came, she said to them: "Listen to me, you rulers of the people of Bethulia. What you said to the people today is not right. You pronounced this oath, made between God and yourselves, and promised to hand over the city to our enemies unless within a certain time the Lord comes to our aid. <sup>12</sup>Who are you to put God to the test today, setting yourselves in the place of God in human affairs?<sup>* f</sup> <sup>13</sup>And now it is the Lord Almighty you are putting to the test, but you will never understand anything! <sup>14</sup>You cannot plumb the depths of the human heart or grasp the workings of the human mind; how then can you fathom God, who has made all these things, or discern his mind, or understand his plan?<sup>9</sup>

“No, my brothers, do not anger the Lord our God. <sup>15*</sup> For if he does not plan to come to our aid within the five days, he has it equally within his power to protect us at such time as he pleases, or to destroy us in the sight of our enemies. <sup>16</sup>Do not impose conditions on the plans of the Lord our God. God is not like a human being to be moved by threats, nor like a mortal to be cajoled.

<sup>17</sup>“So while we wait for the salvation that comes from him, let us call upon him to help us, and he will hear our cry if it pleases him. <sup>18</sup>For there has not risen among us in recent generations, nor does there exist today, any tribe, or clan, or district, or city of ours that worships gods made by hands, as happened in former days.<sup>h</sup> <sup>19</sup>It was for such conduct that our ancestors were handed over to the sword and to pillage, and fell with great destruction before our enemies.<sup>i</sup> <sup>20</sup>But since we acknowledge no other god but the Lord, we hope that he will not disdain us or any of our people. <sup>21</sup>If we are taken, then all Judea will fall, our sanctuary will be plundered, and God will demand an account from us for their profanation. <sup>22</sup>For the slaughter of our kindred, for the taking of exiles from the land, and for the devastation of our inheritance, he will hold us responsible among the nations. Wherever we are enslaved, we will be a scandal and a reproach in the eyes of our masters. <sup>23</sup>Our servitude will not work to our advantage, but the Lord our God will turn it to disgrace.

<sup>24</sup>“Therefore, my brothers, let us set an example* for our kindred. Their lives depend on us, and the defense of the sanctuary, the temple, and the altar rests with us. <sup>25j</sup> Besides all this, let us give thanks to the Lord our God for putting us to the test as he did our ancestors.<sup>k</sup> <sup>26</sup>Recall how he dealt with Abraham, and how he tested Isaac, and all that happened to Jacob in Syrian Mesopotamia while he was tending the flocks of Laban, his mother’s brother. <sup>27</sup>He has not tested us with fire, as he did them, to try their hearts, nor is he taking vengeance on us. But the Lord chastises those who are close to him in order to admonish them.”

<sup>28</sup>Then Uzziah said to her: “All that you have said you have spoken truthfully, and no one can deny your words. <sup>29</sup>For today is not the first time your wisdom has been evident, but from your earliest days all the people have recognized your understanding, for your heart's disposition is right.

<sup>30</sup>The people, however, were so thirsty that they forced us to do for them as we have promised, and to bind ourselves by an oath that we cannot break.* <sup>1</sup>

<sup>31</sup>But now, since you are a devout woman, pray for us that the Lord may send rain to fill up our cisterns. Then we will no longer be fainting from thirst.”

<sup>32</sup>Then Judith said to them: “Listen to me! I will perform a deed that will go down from generation to generation among our descendants. <sup>33</sup>Stand at the city gate tonight to let me pass through with my maid; and within the days you have specified before you will surrender the city to our enemies, the Lord will deliver Israel by my hand. <sup>34</sup>You must not inquire into the affair, for I will not tell you what I am doing until it has been accomplished.” <sup>35</sup>Uzziah and the rulers said to her, “Go in peace, and may the Lord God go before you to take vengeance upon our enemies!” <sup>36</sup>Then they withdrew from the tent and returned to their posts.

CHAPTER 9

The Prayer of Judith.* <sup>1</sup>Judith fell prostrate, put ashes upon her head, and uncovered the sackcloth she was wearing. Just as the evening incense was being offered in the temple of God in Jerusalem, Judith cried loudly to the Lord:<sup>m</sup> <sup>2</sup>“Lord, God of my father Simeon, into whose hand you put a sword to take revenge upon the foreigners* who had defiled a virgin by violating her, shaming her by uncovering her thighs, and dishonoring her by polluting her womb. You said, ‘This shall not be done!’ Yet they did it. <sup>3</sup>Therefore you handed over their rulers to slaughter; and you handed over to bloodshed the bed in which they lay deceived, the same bed that had felt the shame of their own deceiving. You struck down the slaves together with their masters, and the masters upon their thrones.* <sup>4</sup>Their wives you handed over to plunder, and their daughters to captivity, and all the spoils you divided among your favored children, who burned with zeal for you and in their abhorrence of the defilement of their blood called on you for help. O God, my God, hear me also, a widow.

<sup>5</sup>“It is you who were the author of those events and of what preceded and followed them. The present and the future you have also planned.<sup>n</sup> Whatever you devise comes into being. <sup>6</sup>The things you decide come forward and say, ‘Here we are!’ All your ways are in readiness, and your judgment is made with foreknowledge.<sup>o</sup> supporter of the weak, protector of those in despair, savior of those without hope.

<sup>12</sup>“Please, please, God of my father, God of the heritage of Israel, Master of heaven and earth, Creator of the waters, King of all you have created, hear my prayer! <sup>13</sup>Let my deceitful words<sup>* w</sup> wound and bruise those who have planned dire things against your covenant, your holy temple, Mount Zion, and the house your children possess.<sup>x</sup> <sup>14</sup>Make every nation and every tribe know clearly that you are God, the God of all power and might, and that there is no other who shields the people of Israel but you alone.”

CHAPTER 10

See RG 250–55

Judith Prepares to Depart. <sup>1</sup>As soon as Judith had ceased her prayer to the God of Israel and finished all these words, <sup>2</sup>she rose from the ground. She called her maid and they went down into the house, which she used only on sabbaths and feast days. <sup>3</sup>She took off the sackcloth she had on, laid aside the garments of her widowhood, washed her body with water, and anointed herself with rich ointment. She arranged her hair, put on a diadem, and dressed in the festive attire she had worn while her husband, Manasseh, was living.<sup>y</sup> <sup>4</sup>She chose sandals for her feet, and put on her anklets, bracelets, rings, earrings, and all her other jewelry.<sup>z</sup> Thus she made herself very beautiful, to entice the eyes of all the men who should see her.*

<sup>6</sup>Then they went out to the gate of the city of Bethulia and found Uzziah and the elders of the city, Chabris and Charmis, standing there. <sup>7</sup>When they saw Judith transformed in looks and differently dressed, they were very much astounded at her beauty and said to her, <sup>8</sup>“May the God of our ancestors grant you favor and make your design successful, for the glory of the Israelites and the exaltation of Jerusalem.” <sup>9</sup>Judith bowed down to God.

Judith and Her Maid Leave Bethulia. Then she said to them, “Order the gate of the city opened for me, that I may go to accomplish the matters we discussed.” So they ordered the young men to open the gate for her, as she had requested, <sup>10</sup>and they did so. Then Judith and her maidservant went out. The men of the city kept her in view as she went down the mountain and crossed the valley; then they lost sight of her.

IV. Judith Goes out to War*

<sup>11</sup>As Judith and her maid walked directly across the valley, they encountered the Assyrian patrol. <sup>12</sup>The men took her in custody and asked her, “To what people do you belong? Where do you come from, and where are you going?”<sup>c</sup> She replied: “I am a daughter of the Hebrews, and I am fleeing from them, because they are about to be delivered up to you as prey. <sup>13</sup>I have come to see Holofernes, the ranking general of your forces, to give him a trustworthy report; in his presence I will show him the way by which he can ascend and take possession of the whole hill country without a single one of his men suffering injury or loss of life.”<sup>d</sup>

<sup>14</sup>When the men heard her words and gazed upon her face, which appeared marvelously beautiful to them, they said to her, <sup>15</sup>“By hastening down to see our master, you have saved your life. Now go to his tent; some of us will accompany you to hand you over to him. <sup>16</sup>When you stand before him, have no fear in your heart; give him the report you have given us, and he will treat you well.” <sup>17</sup>So they selected a hundred of their men as an escort for her and her maid, and these conducted them to the tent of Holofernes.

<sup>18</sup>As the news of her arrival spread among the tents, a crowd gathered in the camp. They came and stood around her as she waited outside the tent of Holofernes, while he was being informed about her. <sup>19</sup>They marveled at her beauty, regarding the Israelites with wonder because of her, and they said to one another, “Who can despise this people who have such women among them? It is not good to leave one of their men alive, for if any were to be spared they could beguile the whole earth.”

Judith Meets Holofernes. <sup>20</sup>Then the guards of Holofernes and all his attendants came out and ushered her into the tent. <sup>21</sup>Holofernes was reclining on his bed under a canopy* woven of purple, gold, emeralds, and other precious stones. <sup>22</sup>When they announced her to him, he came out to the front part of the tent, preceded by silver lamps. <sup>23</sup>When Judith came before Holofernes and his attendants, they all marveled at the beauty of her face. She fell prostrate and paid homage to him, but his servants raised her up.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 11

<sup>1</sup>Then Holofernes said to her: “Take courage, woman! Have no fear in your heart! I have never harmed anyone who chose to serve Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the earth. <sup>2</sup>As for your people who live in the hill country, I would never have raised my spear against them, had they not insulted me. They have brought this upon themselves. <sup>3</sup>But now tell me why you have fled from them and come to us? In any case, you have come to safety. Take courage! Your life is spared tonight and for the future.<sup>f</sup> <sup>4</sup>No one at all will harm you. Rather, you will be well treated, as are the servants of my lord, King Nebuchadnezzar.”

<sup>5</sup>Judith answered him: “Listen to the words of your servant, and let your maidservant speak in your presence! I will say nothing false to my lord* this night. <sup>6</sup>If you follow the words of your maidservant, God will successfully perform a deed through you, and my lord will not fail to achieve his designs.* <sup>7</sup>I swear by the life of Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the earth, and by the power of him who has sent you to guide all living things, that not only do human beings serve him through you; but even the wild animals, and the cattle, and the birds of the air, because of your strength, will live for Nebuchadnezzar and his whole house.<sup>g</sup> <sup>8</sup>Indeed, we have heard of your wisdom and cleverness.<sup>h</sup> The whole earth is aware that you above all others in the kingdom are able, rich in experience, and distinguished in military strategy.

<sup>9i</sup> “As for Achior’s speech in your council, we have heard it. When the men of Bethulia rescued him, he told them all he had said to you. <sup>10</sup>So then, my lord and master, do not disregard his word, but bear it in mind, for it is true. Indeed our people are not punished, nor does the sword prevail against them, except when they sin against their God.<sup>j</sup> <sup>11</sup>But now their sin* has caught up with them, by which they will bring the wrath of their God upon them when they do wrong; so that my lord will not be repulsed and fail, but death will overtake them. <sup>12</sup>Because their food has given out and all their water is running low, they have decided to kill their animals, and are determined to consume all the things which God in his laws has forbidden them to eat. <sup>13</sup>They have decided that they would use the first fruits of grain and the tithes of wine and oil, which they had consecrated and reserved for the priests who minister in the presence of our God in Jerusalem—things which the people should not so much as touch with their hands.<sup>k</sup> <sup>14</sup>They have sent messengers to Jerusalem to bring back permission from the senate, for even there people have done these things.<sup>l</sup> <sup>15</sup>On the very day when the response reaches them and they act upon it, they will be handed over to you for destruction.

<sup>16</sup>“As soon as I, your servant, learned all this, I fled from them. God has sent me to perform with you such deeds as will astonish people throughout the whole earth who hear of them. <sup>17</sup>Your servant is, indeed, a God-fearing woman, serving the God of heaven night and day. Now I will remain with you, my lord; but each night your servant will go out into the valley and pray to God. He will tell me when they have committed their offenses. <sup>18</sup>Then I will come and let you know, so that you may march out with all your forces, and not one of them will be able to withstand you. <sup>19</sup>I will lead you through the heart of Judea until you come to Jerusalem, and there in its center I will set up your throne. You will drive them like sheep that have no shepherd, and not even a dog will growl at you.<sup>m</sup> This was told to me in advance and announced to me, and I have been sent to tell you.”

<sup>20</sup>Her words pleased Holofernes and all his attendants. They marveled at her wisdom and exclaimed, <sup>21</sup>“No other woman from one end of the earth to the other looks so beautiful and speaks so wisely!” <sup>22</sup>Then Holofernes said to her: “God has done well in sending you ahead of your people, to bring victory to our hands, and destruction to those who have despised my lord. <sup>23</sup>You are not only beautiful in appearance, but you are also eloquent. If you do as you have said, your God will be my God; * you will live in the palace of King Nebuchadnezzar and be renowned throughout the whole earth.”

CHAPTER 12

Judith at the Banquet of Holofernes. <sup>10</sup>On the fourth day Holofernes gave a banquet for his servants alone, to which he did not invite any of the officers. <sup>11</sup>And he said to Bagoas, the eunuch in charge of his personal affairs, “Go and persuade the Hebrew woman in your care to come and to eat and drink with us. <sup>12</sup>It would bring shame on us to be with such a woman without enjoying her. If we do not seduce her, she will laugh at us.”<sup>r</sup>

<sup>15</sup>So she proceeded to put on her festive garments and all her finery. Meanwhile her servant went ahead and spread out on the ground opposite

Holofernes the fleece Bagoas had furnished for her daily use in reclining while eating.<sup>s 16</sup> Then Judith came in and reclined. The heart of Holofernes was in rapture over her and his passion was aroused. He was burning with the desire to possess her, for he had been biding his time to seduce her from the day he saw her.<sup>t 17</sup> Holofernes said to her, “Drink and be happy with us!”<sup>18</sup> Judith replied, “I will gladly drink, my lord, for today is the greatest day of my whole life.”<sup>19</sup> She then took the things her servant had prepared and ate and drank in his presence.<sup>20</sup> Holofernes, charmed by her, drank a great quantity of wine, more than he had ever drunk on any day since he was born.

Judith Beheads Holofernes. <sup>1</sup>When it grew late, his servants quickly withdrew. Bagoas closed the tent from the outside and dismissed the attendants from their master's presence. They went off to their beds, for they were all tired because the banquet had lasted so long. <sup>2</sup>Judith was left alone in the tent with Holofernes, who lay sprawled on his bed, for he was drunk with wine. <sup>3</sup>Judith had ordered her maidservant to stand outside the bedchamber and to wait, as on the other days, for her to come out; she had said she would be going out for her prayer. She had also said this same thing to Bagoas.

<sup>4</sup>When all had departed, and no one, small or great, was left in the bedchamber, Judith stood by Holofernes' bed and prayed silently, "O Lord, God of all might, in this hour look graciously on the work of my hands for the exaltation of Jerusalem. <sup>5</sup>Now is the time for aiding your heritage and for carrying out my design to shatter the enemies who have risen against us."<sup>u</sup> <sup>6</sup>She went to the bedpost near the head of Holofernes, and taking his sword from it, <sup>7</sup>she drew close to the bed, grasped the hair of his head, and said, "Strengthen me this day, Lord, God of Israel!" <sup>8</sup>Then with all her might she struck his neck twice and cut off his head.<sup>v</sup> <sup>9</sup>She rolled his body off the bed and took the canopy from its posts. Soon afterward, she came out and handed over the head of Holofernes to her maid, <sup>10</sup>who put it into her food bag. Then the two went out together for prayer as they were accustomed to do.

Judith and Her Maid Return to Bethulia. They passed through the camp, and skirting that valley, went up the mountain to Bethulia, and approached its gates. <sup>11</sup>From a distance, Judith shouted to the guards at the gates: "Open! Open the gate! God, our God, is with us. Once more he has shown his strength in Israel and his power against the enemy, as he has today!"

Judith Displays the Head of Holofernes. <sup>12*</sup>When the citizens heard her voice, they hurried down to their city gate and summoned the elders of the city. <sup>13</sup>All the people, from the least to the greatest, hurriedly assembled, for her return seemed unbelievable. They opened the gate and welcomed the two women. They made a fire for light and gathered around the two.

<sup>14</sup>Judith urged them with a loud voice: "Praise God, give praise! Praise God, who has not withdrawn his mercy from the house of Israel, but has shattered our enemies by my hand this very night!" <sup>15</sup>Then she took the head out of the bag, showed it to them, and said: "Here is the head of Holofernes, the ranking general of the Assyrian forces, and here is the canopy under which he lay in his drunkenness. The Lord struck him down by the hand of a female! * <sup>16</sup>Yet I swear by the Lord, who has protected me in the way I have walked, that it was my face that seduced Holofernes to his ruin, and that he did not defile me with sin or shame."

<sup>17</sup>All the people were greatly astonished. They bowed down and worshiped God, saying with one accord, "Blessed are you, our God, who today have humiliated the enemies of your people." <sup>18</sup>Then Uzziah said to her, "Blessed are you, daughter, by the Most High God, above all the women on earth; and blessed be the Lord God, the creator of heaven and earth, who guided your blow at the head of the leader of our enemies.<sup>w</sup>
<sup>19</sup>Your deed of hope will never be forgotten by those who recall the might of God.<sup>x</sup> <sup>20</sup>May God make this redound to your everlasting honor, rewarding you with blessings, because you risked your life when our people were being oppressed, and you averted our disaster, walking in the straight path before our God." And all the people answered, "Amen! Amen!"<sup>y</sup>

CHAPTER 14

Judith's Plan of Attack. <sup>1</sup>Then Judith said to them: “Listen to me,* my brothers and sisters. Take this head and hang it on the parapet of your wall.<sup>z</sup> <sup>2</sup>At daybreak, when the sun rises on the earth, each of you seize your weapons, and let all the able-bodied men rush out of the city under command of a captain, as if about to go down into the valley against the Assyrian patrol, but without going down. <sup>3</sup>The Assyrians will seize their weapons and hurry to their camp to awaken the generals of the army. When they run to the tent of Holofernes and do not find him, panic will seize them, and they will flee before you.<sup>a</sup> <sup>4</sup>Then you and all the other inhabitants of the whole territory of Israel will pursue them and strike them down in their tracks. <sup>5</sup>But before doing this, summon for me Achior the Ammonite, that he may see and recognize the one who despised the house of Israel and sent him here to meet his death.”

Achior's Conversion.* <sup>6</sup>So they called Achior from the house of Uzziah. When he came and saw the head of Holofernes in the hand of one of the men in the assembly of the people, he collapsed in a faint. <sup>7</sup>Then, after they lifted him up, he threw himself at the feet of Judith in homage, saying: “Blessed are you in every tent of Judah! In every nation, all who hear your name will be struck with terror.<sup>b</sup> <sup>8</sup>But now, tell me all that you did during these days.” So Judith told him, in the midst of the people, all that she had done, from the day she left until the time she began speaking to them. <sup>9</sup>When she had finished her account, the people cheered loudly, so that the city resounded with shouts of joy. <sup>10</sup>Now Achior, seeing all that the God of Israel had done, believed firmly in God. He circumcised the flesh of his foreskin and he has been united with the house of Israel to the present day.<sup>c</sup>

Panic in the Assyrian Camp. <sup>11</sup>At daybreak they hung the head of Holofernes on the wall. Then all the Israelite men took up their weapons and went out by groups to the mountain passes. <sup>d</sup> <sup>12</sup>When the Assyrians saw them, they notified their commanders, who, in turn, went to their generals, their division leaders, and all their other leaders. <sup>13</sup>They came to the tent of Holofernes and said to the one in charge of all his things, “Awaken our lord, for the slaves have dared come down against us in battle, to their utter destruction.” <sup>14</sup>So Bagoas went in and knocked at the entry of the tent, presuming that Holofernes was sleeping with Judith. <sup>15</sup>When no one answered, he parted the curtains, entered the bedchamber, and found him thrown on the floor dead, with his head gone! <sup>16</sup>He cried out loudly, weeping, groaning, and howling, and tore his garments. <sup>17</sup>Then he entered the tent where Judith had her quarters; and, not finding her, he rushed out to the troops and cried: <sup>18</sup>“The slaves have duped us! One Hebrew woman has brought shame on the house of King Nebuchadnezzar. Look! Holofernes on the ground—without a head!”<sup>e</sup>

<sup>19</sup>When the leaders of the Assyrian forces heard these words, they tore their tunics and were overcome with great distress. Their loud cries and shouts were heard throughout the camp.

CHAPTER 15

<sup>4</sup>Uzziah sent messengers to Betomasthaim, to Choba and Kona, and to the whole territory of Israel to report what had happened and to urge them all to attack the enemy and destroy them. <sup>5</sup>On hearing this, all the Israelites, with one accord, attacked them and cut them down as far as Choba. Even those from Jerusalem and the rest of the hill country took part in this, for they too had been notified of the happenings in the camp of their enemy. The Gileadites and the Galileans struck the enemy's flanks with great slaughter, even beyond Damascus and its borders. <sup>6</sup>The remaining people of Bethulia swept down on the camp of the Assyrians, plundered it, and acquired great riches. <sup>7</sup>The Israelites, when they returned from the slaughter, took possession of what was left. Even the towns and villages in the hill country and on the plain got an enormous quantity of spoils, for there was a tremendous amount of it.

Israel Celebrates Judith's Victory. <sup>8</sup>Then the high priest Joakim and the senate of the Israelites who lived in Jerusalem came to see for themselves the good things that the Lord had done for Israel, and to meet and congratulate Judith. <sup>9</sup>When they came to her, all with one accord blessed her, saying:

"You are the glory of Jerusalem!*
You are the great pride of Israel!
You are the great boast of our nation!
<sup>10</sup>By your own hand you have done all this.
You have done good things for Israel,
and God is pleased with them.
May the Almighty Lord bless you
forever!"

And all the people said, "Amen!"

<sup>12</sup>All the women of Israel gathered to see her, and they blessed her and performed a dance in her honor.<sup>9</sup> She took branches in her hands and distributed them to the women around her, <sup>13</sup>and she and the other women crowned themselves with olive leaves. Then, at the head of all the people, she led the women in the dance, while the men of Israel followed, bearing their weapons, wearing garlands and singing songs of praise. <sup>14*</sup> Judith led all Israel in this song of thanksgiving, and the people loudly sang this hymn of praise:

CHAPTER 16

Judith's Hymn of Deliverance

<sup>1</sup>And Judith sang:

“Strike up a song to my God with tambourines,<sup>h</sup>
sing to the Lord with cymbals; Improvise for him a new song,
exalt and acclaim his name.

<sup>2</sup>For the Lord is a God who crushes wars;<sup>i</sup> he sets his encampment among his
people;
he delivered me from the hands of my pursuers.

<sup>3</sup>“The Assyrian came from the mountains of the north,
with myriads of his forces he came;
Their numbers blocked the wadies, their cavalry covered the hills.

<sup>4</sup>He threatened to burn my territory, put my youths to the sword,
Dash my infants to the ground,
seize my children as plunder.
And carry off my virgins as spoil.

<sup>5</sup>“But the Lord Almighty thwarted them, by the hand of a female!

<sup>6</sup>Not by youths was their champion struck down,<sup>j</sup> nor did Titans bring him low,
nor did tall giants attack him;<sup>k</sup>
But Judith, the daughter of Merari, by the beauty of her face brought him
down.

<sup>7</sup>She took off her widow's garb to raise up the afflicted in Israel.
She anointed her face with fragrant oil;
<sup>8</sup>fixed her hair with a diadem,
and put on a linen robe to beguile him.
<sup>9</sup>Her sandals ravished his eyes,<sup>l</sup> her beauty captivated his mind,

the sword cut through his neck!<sup>m</sup>

<sup>10</sup>“The Persians trembled at her boldness, the Medes were daunted at her daring.

<sup>11</sup>When my lowly ones shouted,
and my weak ones cried out,
The enemy was terrified,
screamed and took to flight.

<sup>12</sup>Sons of maidservants pierced them through;
wounded them like deserters' children.
They perished before the ranks of my
Lord.

<sup>13</sup>“I will sing a new song to my God.<sup>n</sup>
O Lord, great are you and glorious, marvelous in power and unsurpassable.

<sup>14</sup>Let your every creature serve you;
for you spoke, and they were made.
You sent forth your spirit, and it created them;<sup>o</sup>

no one can resist your voice.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>15</sup>For the mountains to their bases are tossed with the waters;
the rocks, like wax, melt before your glance.<sup>q</sup>

“But to those who fear you,
you will show mercy.

<sup>16</sup>Though the sweet fragrance of every sacrifice is a trifle, and the fat of all burnt offerings but little in your sight,
one who fears the Lord is forever
great.

<sup>17</sup>“Woe to the nations that rise against my people!
the Lord Almighty will requite them;
in the day of judgment he will punish
them:
He will send fire and worms into their flesh,<sup>r</sup>
and they will weep and suffer forever.”

<sup>18</sup>When they arrived at Jerusalem, they worshiped God. As soon as the people were purified, they offered their burnt offerings, voluntary offerings, and donations.<sup>s</sup> <sup>19</sup>Judith dedicated to God all the things of Holofernes that the people had given her, putting under the ban the canopy that she herself had taken from his bedchamber.<sup>t</sup> <sup>20</sup>For three months the people continued their celebration in Jerusalem before the sanctuary, and Judith remained with them.

The Renown and Death of Judith. <sup>21</sup>When those days were over, all of them returned to their inheritance. Judith went back to Bethulia and remained on her estate. For the rest of her life she was renowned throughout the land. <sup>22</sup>Many wished to marry her, but she gave herself to no man all the days of her life from the time her husband, Manasseh, died and was gathered to his people. <sup>23</sup>Her fame continued to increase, and she lived in the house of her husband, reaching the advanced age of one hundred and five.<sup>* u</sup> She set her maid free. And when she died in Bethulia, they buried her in the cave of her husband, Manasseh;<sup>v</sup> <sup>24</sup>and the house of Israel mourned her for seven days.<sup>* w</sup> Before she died, she distributed her property to the relatives of her husband, Manasseh, and to her own relatives.<sup>x</sup>

1:1–3:10 This section consists of an introduction to Nebuchadnezzar (1:1–16), his commissioning of Holofernes (2:1–13), and a description of the campaigns Holofernes leads against the disobedient vassal nations of the west (2:14–3:10).

1:1–16 Introduction to Nebuchadnezzar and his campaign against Arphaxad. Nebuchadnezzar (605/4–562 B.C.), the most famous Neo-Babylonian king, destroyed Jerusalem in 587 B.C., the eighteenth year of his reign (see Jer 32:1). His depiction here as an Assyrian is an invention of the author, as is the description of Arphaxad, an otherwise unknown king of the Medes, in Ecbatana.

1:1 Twelfth year: in the twelfth year of Nebuchadnezzar (593 B.C.) Zedekiah, king of Judah, refused to join a revolt against him (see Jer 27:3; 28:1). Nineveh: capital of Assyria, destroyed in 612

B.C.

1:2–4 Since a cubit was the distance from the elbow to the fingertip (approximately eighteen inches), these dimensions are prodigious. The massive wall around Ecbatana is described as 105 feet high and 75 feet thick, with each stone measuring four and a half feet thick and nine feet long. The tower gates are 150 feet high and 60 feet wide. Such unlikely massive structures have never been found at Ecbatana, which lies beneath the modern city of Hamadan, located in the Zagros mountains of northwest Iran. Ecbatana is mentioned in vv. 1, 2, 14 as Arphaxad's headquarters. Tradition claims Esther and Mordecai are buried there.

1:5 Ragau, the place where Arphaxad is slain (v. 15), one of the oldest settlements in Iran, is located on a plain one hundred miles northeast of Ecbatana. In the Book of Tobit it is the home of Gabael (Tb 1:14; 4:1, 20; 5:6; 6:13; 9:2, 5).

1:6 Chelodites: Greek Cheleoud, probably a corruption of "Chaldeans," i.e., the Neo-Babylonians.

1:7 Mention of Persia suggests a postexilic setting for the book, since this area would have been designated Media before the middle of the fifth century B.C.

1:11 References to "the whole land," "all the land" are used ten times in the first two chapters (vv. 11, 12; 2:1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 19). This signifies all the nations west of Persia as far as Egypt that were subject to Nebuchadnezzar, i.e., the whole earth or world (esp. 2:9). These and similar formulations throughout the book build the case that the "God of heaven" (5:8; 6:19; 11:17) is the true "Master of heaven and earth" (9:12).

1:12 The two seas: probably the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf, though possibly the Red Sea and Mediterranean.

1:13 Seventeenth year: 588 B.C. Without help from the vassal nations, Nebuchadnezzar defeats Arphaxad.

2:1–13 Nebuchadnezzar commissions Holofernes to take vengeance on the vassal nations that refused him auxiliary military support (see 1:7–12).

2:1 Eighteenth year: 587 B.C. Most of the story is set in the catastrophic year when the historical Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, destroyed Jerusalem.

2:4 The ranking general: Holofernes is so identified six times in Judith. See also 4:1; 5:1; 6:1; 10:13; 13:15. Holofernes and Bagoas (12:11) are Persian names; two officers of Artaxerxes III Ochus (358–338 B.C.) were so named.

2:7 Earth and water: in the Persian period, offering these to a conqueror was a symbolic gesture signifying humble submission of one asking for a treaty.

2:12 As I live: an oath proper to God; see the promissory oath of God the divine warrior in Dt 32:39–42; cf. Is 49:18; Jer 22:24; Ez 5:11. By my own hand: in his pride, Nebuchadnezzar claims to do this by his own hand (cf. Is 10:13). In contrast, Judith claims that God will deliver Israel "by my hand" (8:33; 12:4).

2:14–3:10 As Holofernes attacks the western nations, terror sweeps across the empire at large (2:28), then Judea (4:1–2), and finally Bethulia (7:1). In these verses, the line of advance is from Nineveh to Damascus and all who submit are nonetheless devastated and forced to worship Nebuchadnezzar.

2:21 A three-day march: no ancient army could have traveled three hundred miles from Nineveh to Cilicia in three days.

2:23 Put and Lud: mentioned together in Jer 46:9; Ez 27:10; 30:5. Put is thought to be in Libya in Africa; Lud is usually identified with Lydia in Asia Minor. Rather than indicating definite localities here, Put and Lud add assonance and prophetic overtones to the narrative.

2:28 Symbolic of the completeness of the terror that descended on the area, seven towns are listed: Tyre, Sidon, Sur, Ocina, Jamnia, Ashdod, and Ashkelon.

3:8 Invoke him as a god: Holofernes violates Nebuchadnezzar's instructions (see 2:5–13). No Assyrian, Neo-Babylonian, or Persian king is known to have claimed divinity. During Hellenistic times, Ptolemy V (203–181 B.C.) and the Seleucid Antiochus IV made claims to divinity. In Dn 3 and 6, divinity is ascribed to Nebuchadnezzar and Darius, respectively.

3:9 Dothan: a town in Ephraimite territory fourteen miles north of Shechem, mentioned elsewhere only twice (Gn 37:17 and 2 Kgs 6:13), but five times in Judith (3:9; 4:6; 7:3, 18; 8:3). Destroyed in 810 B.C. by Aramean invasions, Dothan was deserted until the Hellenistic period when a small settlement was constructed. Because it is mentioned so often, Dothan is sometimes thought to be the author's home.

3:10 Geba: location uncertain. Scythopolis, the Greek name for ancient Beth-shean (Jos 17:11), the only city in Judith given its Greek name, strategically guarded the eastern end of the Valley of Jezreel.

4:1–7:32 In this section the focus narrows to Judea and specifically the little town of Bethulia. The scenes alternate between the Assyrian camp (5:1–6:13; 7:1–3, 6–18) and Judea/Bethulia (4:1–15; 6:14–21; 7:4–5, 19–32).

4:1–15 Here the scene shifts to Judea where Israel hears and is greatly terrified about Holofernes' destruction of the neighboring places of worship. At Joakim's instruction they take defensive measures and then pray fervently that God will not allow their sanctuary to be destroyed.

4:1 Shrines: the Greek word hiera is used only here and may mean holy places or things. By contrast, the sanctuary in Jerusalem is naos, "temple" (v. 2); oikos, "house" (v. 3); and hagia, lit., "holy things" (v. 12).

4:3 Returned from exile ... purified from profanation: conflated historical references associated with events in 538 B.C. (return from exile) and 515 B.C. (dedication of the Second Temple) or perhaps even 164 B.C. (the rededication of the Second Temple in the Maccabean period).

4:4 Of the eight cities listed, only the locations of Beth-horon, Jericho, and Samaria are known. Salem, mentioned in Gn 17:17, is thought to be an ancient name of Jerusalem.

4:6 Joakim, who was high priest: see also vv. 8, 14; 15:8. Joakim exercises religious and military authority comparable to that of Jonathan in Maccabean times (cf. 1 Mc 10:18–21). Bethulia and Betomesthaim: unknown locations mentioned only in Judith. Bethulia may mean "House of God" (by l/yh) or "House of Ascent" (by t/yh), perhaps a reference to either Bethel or Shechem.

4:7 Only wide enough for two at a time: such a narrow pass near Esdraelon cannot be identified.

4:10 Sackcloth: traditional sign of penitence and supplication is here taken to the extreme. Cf. Jon 3:8.

4:11 Fell prostrate in front of the temple: for a parallel to this ceremony of entreaty see Jl 1:13, 14; 2:15–17.

4:12 The altar ... draped in sackcloth: attested nowhere else in the Bible.

4:13 The Lord heard their cry: this anticipates the role of Judith, the instrument of deliverance (chap. 16), though the people believe God has abandoned them (7:25).

5:1–6:13 The scene shifts to the Assyrian camp below Bethulia where Holofernes talks with Achior and then expels him to the foot of the hill below the little town.

5:5–21 Achior (Heb. "brother of light") traces the covenant of Israel from Abraham to the exile and defends the inviolability of the people because their powerful God will defend them if they do not sin. He later identifies the head Judith displays as that of Holofernes (14:6–10). He may be modeled on the famous sage, Ahiqar (see note on Tb 1:21). Achior is wise, but the wisdom granted Judith by God is more effective than his.

5:8 God of heaven: a common expression in Persian times; see also 6:19; 11:17 (cf. 7:28; 9:12; 13:18).

5:16 Shechemites: perhaps anticipates the allusion in Judith's prayer (9:2) to Simeon's revenge on these people.

5:18–19 Knowledge of the Babylonian exile is presupposed; cf. also 4:3.

5:20 Master: the Greek word despota, usually applied to God in the Septuagint, is applied to Holofernes five times in the Book of Judith (vv. 20, 24; 7:9, 11; 11:10), and only once to God (9:12).

6:2 Who are you: repeated by Judith in 8:12 to the officials of Bethulia and modified in 12:14 in her response to Bagoas' invitation on Holofernes' behalf. The question, "Who is God?" motivates the entire narrative. Holofernes defends Nebuchadnezzar; Judith defends the Lord.

6:14–21 The scene shifts back to Bethulia where Achior tells the town leaders and citizens all that Holofernes has planned against them. The people cry out to God for help.

6:15 Uzziah: Ozeias is the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew 'uzziyyah, "Yah-is-my-strength." His compromise in 7:30 highlights the irony of his name. Chabris ... Charmis: unknown outside Judith.

6:18 The people fell prostrate and worshiped God: here in response to Achior's report, the people properly turn to God in their distress. See 4:12.

7:1–5 The scene returns to the Assyrian camp (vv. 1–3) and then shifts back to Bethulia (vv. 4–5). Holofernes orders war preparations; Israel sees and is greatly terrified.

7:6–32 The scene is set first in the Assyrian camp where Holofernes moves against Bethulia (vv. 6–18), and then in Bethulia where the people cry out to God and, when their courage fails, determine it is time to surrender (vv. 19–32).

7:19 The prayers of the Israelites shift focus from concern for the Temple and Jerusalem (4:12), to concern that God see the arrogance of the enemy and show pity on the covenant people (6:18), to expression of fear and loss of courage regarding their own safety (7:19).

7:20 Thirty-four days: the Bethulians lose heart after being without water; Judith will spend four days in the enemy camp (12:10) and the Israelites will plunder the enemy camp for thirty days (15:11).

7:28 In keeping with the deuteronomic theme of retribution, the Bethulians interpret their persecution as punishment for their sins and the sins of their ancestors (see Ex 20:5; 34:7; Ez 18). In 8:18–27, Judith argues that they are being tested.

8:1–10:10 In this section the hero is introduced (8:1–8) and prepares to deliver Israel (8:9–10:10).

8:1 Judith has the longest genealogy accorded any biblical woman, with family ties back to Israel/Jacob.

8:2 Manasseh: Judith's marriage was endogamous, within her own tribe. The tribe and clan are identified as hers, though usually it is the husband's tribe and clan that are noted.

8:4 Widow: in a reversal of traditional property law, Judith holds title to her husband's estate (see v. 7). However, she will give a part of her inheritance to her late husband's family before her death (16:24); she chooses not to remarry (16:22).

8:9–10:10 This section opens with a repetition of the information that Judith heard about the discouragement of the people and about Uzziah's vow (cf. v. 1). Judith's plan to save Israel then takes shape. In her own home, she meets with the elders of Bethulia (vv. 9–36), prays (9:1–14), prepares herself and the food she will need in the Assyrian camp (10:1–5), goes out to meet the elders again at the gate of Bethulia (10:6–8), and sets out with her maid for the Assyrian camp (10:9–10).

8:10 Her maid who was in charge of all her things: cf. Gn 15:2; 24:2; 39:4. Judith's first act in the story is to send this unnamed maid (habra, lit., "graceful one" or "favorite slave," v. 33; 10:2, 5, 17; 13:9; 16:23) to summon the town officials (see also other terms for female servants, paidiske in 10:10 and doule in 12:15; 13:3). Her last act in the story will be to give this woman her freedom (16:23).

8:12 Judith reprimands the leaders for putting God to the test (cf. Dt 6:16). She will argue that the right to test belongs to God (vv. 25–27).

8:15–16 God's plans are in opposition to Nebuchadnezzar's plans (2:2, 4). To protect ... or to destroy: Judith defends God's freedom (cf. Jb 1:21; 2:10).

8:24 Let us set an example: when Judith says "us," she includes herself. She proposes that she together with Uzziah, Chabris, and Charmis model a faithful response to God's test for the wavering people. "Let us give thanks to the Lord our God for putting us to the test" (v. 25) repeats her intention. "Us" for Uzziah does not include her (see vv. 30, 31).

8:30–31 An oath that we cannot break: Uzziah's request that Judith pray for rain underscores his lack of imagination concerning how God's deliverance might come.

9:1–14 Judith prepares to confront the enemy by turning to God, the source of her strength. Her prayer, an individual lament, moves from a remembrance of God's saving deeds of the past to an appeal to God to exercise the same power in the present. Judith contrasts the empty pride of the Assyrians with God's surpassing might, powerful enough to be exercised in unlikely ways, even through the hand of a woman.

9:2 The foreigners: Shechem, the Hivite, violated Dinah, Jacob and Leah's daughter (Gn 34:2). Defiled a virgin by violating her: meaning of the Greek is unclear; lit., "who loosened the virgin's womb (metran) to defilement." Some read "headdress" or "girdle" (mitran) instead of "womb" (metran).

9:3 Because Shechem had deceived and violated Dinah, her brothers, Simeon and Levi, tricked Shechem and the men of his city into being circumcised, and then killed them while they were recovering from the circumcision (Gn 34:13–29).

9:7–8 You are the Lord who crushes wars; Lord is your name: cf. Ex 15:3, "The Lord is a warrior; Lord is his name" and Jdt 16:2, "The Lord is a God who crushes wars."

9:9–10 In a five-fold petition, Judith asks that God see their pride, send fury on their heads, give her a strong hand, strike down the enemy through her deceit, and crush their pride by the hand of a female (theleia, see also 13:15 and 16:5, rather than the more usual gyne, woman). In an androcentric society, there was no greater dishonor for a male than that he die at the hand of a female (see Jgs 9:53–54). Nine verses emphasize that by her hand God's deliverance is accomplished: 8:33; 9:9, 10; 12:4; 13:4, 14, 15; 15:10; and 16:5.

9:11–12 Ten titles for God are arranged in two groups of five on either side of the repeated Greek particle, nai nai ("verily" or "please"). The title "Master of heaven and earth" (v. 12; see notes on 1:11 and 5:20) is unique to Judith in the Septuagint, as are also "God of the heritage of Israel" and "Creator of the waters."

9:13 Deceitful words: twice Judith asks God to make her a successful liar in order to preserve her people (vv. 10, 13).

10:4 Judith's beauty overcomes all who meet her (8:7; 10:7, 14, 19, 23; 11:21, 23; 12:13).

10:5 Concern for Israel's dietary laws, reflected in her selection of wine, roasted grain, and bread, emphasizes Judith's religious fidelity (cf. 1 Sm 25:18 and Dn 1:8–16).

10:11–13:20 In this section Judith and her maid arrive in the Assyrian camp (10:11–19), where Judith meets (10:20–12:9) and triumphs over Holofernes (12:10–13:10a). Then she and her maid return to Bethulia and announce the victory (13:10b–20).

10:21 Canopy: netting for protection against insects. A prized possession in this story (cf. 13:15; 16:19).

11:5–6 Here the word "lord" has a double meaning, indicating both Holofernes and God. Much irony is evident in Judith's conversation with Holofernes (e.g., 12:4).

11:6 Designs: cf. 10:8; 11:6; 13:5 where this word is used as a synonym for Judith's "affair" (8:34), which she kept secret as she carried out the plan of her God (8:15, 16), unlike her counterpart Nebuchadnezzar, who told all the details of his plan (2:2, 4).

11:11 Sin: but in 8:18–20 Judith asserts that the people have not committed idolatry in recent generations.

11:23 Your God will be my God: in 3:8, Holofernes insisted that Nebuchadnezzar alone is god.

12:2 Cannot eat any: the food of Gentiles was avoided by pious Jews (see Dn 1:8, 13, 15; Tb 1:10–11) because it might have been prohibited as unclean (see Lv 11:13–44), sacrificed to idols (see Ex 34:15; Dt 32:37–38), or contaminated with blood (see Lv 7:26–27). In addition, eating together symbolized the sharing of life.

12:7 Bathed herself: she bathes to purify herself after contact with the Gentiles. Her nightly departure from the camp provides for her escape (cf. 13:10).

12:14 Joy: the irony of this response is obvious; see also the joy of 14:9 and Judith's "new song" in chap. 16.

13:12–20 Elements from chaps. 8–9 are echoed here. The assembly of the people at Judith's return parallels the meeting of the town officials summoned by Judith in 8:10. Uzziah blesses Judith in 8:5 and again in 13:18–20.

13:15 By the hand of a female: cf. 16:5 and note on 9:9–10.

14:1–16:25 This section describes Judith's plan to attack the Assyrian camp (14:1–5) and its execution (14:11–15:7). Between the plan and its execution, Achior identifies the head of Holofernes and is converted to Judaism. The book concludes with the victory celebration (15:8–14), hymn of thanksgiving (16:1–20), and a description of Judith's final days (16:21–25). Elements from chaps. 8–9 recur here: Judith, widow of Manasseh (8:2; 16:22), lived alone in Bethulia on her estate (8:4; 16:22), with servants and property (8:7; 16:21). Judith's instructions begin with the words "listen to me" (8:11; 14:1). Her prayer for success (9:1–14) is balanced by a prayer and display of success in 14:14–16.

14:1–5 Listen to me: an imperative (used also in 8:11, 32) opens Judith's instruction that the people display the head of Holofernes on the parapet and themselves in ranks before the enemy at daybreak. The strategy is to throw the Assyrians into panic and strike them down in their confusion; cf. 15:1–3.

14:6–10 Recognizing the head of Holofernes, Achior faints. Then he throws himself down before Judith, acclaiming her blessed in Judah and every nation. After listening to all she had done, Achior is circumcised and joins the house of Israel. Since this violates the prohibition of Dt 23:4 that no Ammonite or Moabite shall enter the assembly, even to the tenth generation, some suggest that the book was not included in the Hebrew scriptures for this reason. However, see Is 56:3–6.

15:9 In the Lectionary of the Catholic Church, this passage is one of several choices for feasts of Mary (e.g., the Presentation of Mary). These words of praise are also echoed in antiphons for the Liturgy of the Hours on Marian feasts.

15:11 Thirty days: the central actions in each half of the book are accomplished in a total of thirty-four days. Bethulia was without water for thirty-four days (7:20). Judith spent four days in the enemy camp and the Israelites plunder the Assyrian camp for thirty days.

15:14–16:17 Judith's hymn of deliverance is patterned on the Song of Miriam (Ex 15:20–21).

16:23 One hundred and five: long life was a sign of blessing (see Jb 42:16; Prv 16:31; 20:29). The fact that the Maccabean period was one hundred and five years long (168–63 B.C.) may account for assigning this age to Judith.

16:24 Seven days: the customary period for mourning the dead (1 Sm 31:13).

16:25 Spread terror: Judith is compared to the heroes of the Book of Judges (cf. Jgs 3:11, 30).

The Book of Esther

See RG 256–59

The Book of Esther tells a story of the deliverance of the Jewish people. We are shown a Persian emperor, Ahasuerus (loosely based on Xerxes, 485–464 B.C.), who makes momentous decisions for trivial reasons, and his wicked minister, Haman, who takes advantage of the king's compliance to pursue a personal vendetta against the Jews by having a royal decree issued ordering their destruction. The threat is averted by two Jews, Esther and Mordecai. Their influence and intervention allow the Jews to turn the tables on their enemies and rout their attackers. This deliverance is commemorated by the inauguration of the Jewish festival of Purim on the fourteenth and fifteenth of Adar (mid-February through mid-March). The book confronts the modern reader with important themes, the evils of genocide and racism.

Esther's character matures over the course of the narrative. As a girl she is recruited for the king's harem because of her physical beauty. But at a key moment in the book (chap. 4), she rises to the challenge to risk her life for the salvation of her people. At that point, she transforms her status as queen from a position of personal privilege to one of power and public responsibility.

Esther's uncle, Mordecai, appears first as an adoptive father, whose solicitude for Esther leads him to the king's gate, where he foils a plot to assassinate the king. When he learns of the edict against the Jews, he encourages Esther to confront the king. The book ends with Mordecai as the king's chief minister.

The book is a free composition, not a historical document. Its fictional character can be illustrated by many examples of literary motifs: the use of extensive conversation to move the plot along; the motif of concealment (Esther is a Jew, related to Mordecai, but Haman does not know it, even as he comes to her banquet in chap. 7). A whole series of banquets structure the work: two by the king, one by Vashti, three by Esther, and the joyful banqueting that ends the book. Further artificialities are clear in the way characters are paired (e.g., Mordecai and Esther) and in the delays and the speed of the action (Esther delays the banquet in 5:3–8, but the tempo of chaps. 5–6 is particularly fast); Mordecai passes from the threat of death (5:9–14) to royal honors (6:10–11) within twenty-four hours. There are many exaggerations, and even sarcastic implausibilities (cf. the effect of Vashti's disobedience in 1:17–18), and huge ironies (e.g., Haman in 6:6, 10). The work is a composite of reversals (cf. 9:1) in the lives of individuals and communities.

The book was probably written in the third or second century B.C. It has come down to us in two versions: an older Hebrew version, and a Greek version based on a text similar to the Hebrew, but with additions and alterations as described below.

One striking feature of the Hebrew version of the Book of Esther is that no divine names or titles are employed here; God is not mentioned at all. This would not be unusual in a book whose subject matter or outlook was more secular, but Esther is a book in which the religious element is prominent: the Jews fast in order to be delivered from imminent peril, experience deliverance at the eleventh hour, and commemorate their deliverance with an annual festival. Moreover, there are indirect references to divine activity (for example, in 4:14).

The Greek additions to Esther have many explicit references to God, as well as explicit descriptions of the beliefs and emotional states of Esther and Mordecai. They also elaborate on the content of the edicts from Ahasuerus as illustrations of Gentile attitudes toward Jews. While there are only a few contradictions between these Greek additions and the older Hebrew text, reading the book with these additions is a very different experience from reading the book without them. The additions to Esther are an excellent example of a process that occurs throughout the Bible: further reflections on the story become part of the story itself. Although the Book of Esther was questioned by some early Christians, even St. Jerome, the whole book, including the Greek additions, was included in the canon of Scripture by the Council of Trent.

The Greek version of the book dates from ca. 116 to 48 B.C. (see note on F:11). In the present translation, the Greek additions are indicated by the letters A through F. The regular chapter numbers apply to the Hebrew text.

The book may be divided as follows:

- I. Prologue (A:1–17)
- II. Esther Becomes Queen (1:1–2:23)
- III. Haman’s Plot Against the Jews (3:1–13; B:1–7; 3:14–15)
- IV. Esther and Mordecai Plead for Help (4:1–17; C:1–D:16; 5:1–5)
- V. Haman’s Downfall (5:6–8:2)
- VI. The Jewish Victory and the Feast of Purim (8:3–12; E:1–24; 8:13–9:23)

Dream of Mordecai. <sup>1</sup>In the second year of the reign of Ahasuerus the great, on the first day of Nisan, Mordecai, son of Jair, son of Shimei, son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin, had a dream. <sup>* a 2*</sup> He was a Jew residing in the city of Susa, a prominent man who served at the king's court, <sup>3</sup>and one of the captives whom Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, had taken from Jerusalem with Jeconiah, king of Judah. <sup>b</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Having seen this dream and what God intended to do, Mordecai awoke. He kept it in mind, and tried in every way, until night, to understand its meaning.

Mordecai Thwarts an Assassination. <sup>* 12e</sup> Mordecai lodged in the courtyard with Bigthan and Teresh, two eunuchs of the king who guarded the courtyard. <sup>13</sup>He overheard them plotting, investigated their plans, and discovered that they were preparing to assassinate King Ahasuerus. So he informed the king about them. <sup>14</sup>The king had the two eunuchs questioned and, upon their confession, put to death. <sup>15</sup>Then the king had these things recorded; Mordecai, too, put them into writing. <sup>16</sup>The king also appointed Mordecai to serve at the court, and rewarded him for his actions. <sup>f</sup>

The Persian Empire

<sup>17</sup>Haman, however, son of Hammedatha, a Bougean,* who was held in high honor by the king, sought to harm Mordecai and his people because of the two eunuchs of the king.<sup>9</sup>

II. Esther Becomes Queen

CHAPTER 1

See RG 256–59

The Banquet of Ahasuerus. <sup>1*</sup> During the reign of Ahasuerus—the same Ahasuerus who ruled over a hundred and twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia—<sup>2</sup>while he was occupying the royal throne in the royal precinct of Susa, *<sup>3</sup>in the third year of his reign, he gave a feast for all his officials and ministers: the Persian and Median army officers, the nobles, and the governors of the provinces.<sup>h</sup> <sup>4</sup>For as many as a hundred and eighty days, he displayed the glorious riches of his kingdom and the resplendent wealth of his royal estate.

<sup>5</sup>At the end of this time the king gave a feast of seven days in the garden court of the royal palace for all the people, great and small, who were in the royal precinct of Susa. <sup>6</sup>There were white cotton draperies and violet hangings, held by cords of fine crimson linen from silver rings on marble pillars. Gold and silver couches were on a mosaic pavement, which was of porphyry, marble, mother-of-pearl, and colored stones. <sup>7</sup>Drinks were served in a variety of golden cups, and the royal wine flowed freely, as befitted the king's liberality. <sup>8</sup>By ordinance of the king the drinking was unstinted, for he had instructed all the stewards of his household to comply with the good pleasure of everyone. <sup>9</sup>Queen Vashti also gave a feast for the women in the royal palace of King Ahasuerus.

Refusal of Vashti. <sup>10</sup>On the seventh day, when the king was merry with wine, he instructed Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagtha, Zethar, and Carkas, the seven eunuchs who attended King Ahasuerus,<sup>i</sup> <sup>11</sup>to bring Queen Vashti into his presence wearing the royal crown, that he might display her beauty to the populace and the officials, for she was lovely to behold. <sup>12</sup>But Queen Vashti refused to come at the royal order issued through the eunuchs. At this the king's wrath flared up, and he burned with fury. <sup>13</sup>He conferred with the sages who understood the times, because the king's business was conducted in general consultation with lawyers and jurists. <sup>14</sup>He summoned Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, the seven Persian and Median officials who were in the king's personal service and held first rank in the realm,<sup>j</sup> <sup>15</sup>and asked them, “What is to be done by law with Queen Vashti for disobeying the order of King Ahasuerus issued through the eunuchs?”

<sup>16</sup>In the presence of the king and of the officials, Memucan answered: “Queen Vashti has not wronged the king alone, but all the officials and the populace throughout the provinces of King Ahasuerus. <sup>17</sup>For the queen’s conduct will become known to all the women, and they will look with disdain upon their husbands when it is reported, ‘King Ahasuerus commanded that Queen Vashti be ushered into his presence, but she would not come.’ <sup>18</sup>This very day the Persian and Median noblewomen who hear of the queen’s conduct will recount it to all the royal officials, and disdain and rancor will abound. <sup>19</sup>If it please the king, let an irrevocable royal decree* be issued by him and inscribed among the laws of the Persians and Medes, forbidding Vashti to come into the presence of King Ahasuerus and authorizing the king to give her royal dignity to one more worthy than she.<sup>k</sup> <sup>20</sup>Thus, when the decree that the king will issue is published throughout his realm, vast as it is, all wives will honor their husbands, from the greatest to the least.”

<sup>21</sup>This proposal pleased the king and the officials, and the king acted on the advice of Memucan. <sup>22</sup>He sent letters to all the royal provinces, to each province in its own script and to each people in its own language, to the effect that every man should be lord in his own home.

CHAPTER 2

The Search for a New Queen. <sup>1</sup>After this, when King Ahasuerus' wrath had cooled, he thought over what Vashti had done and what had been decreed against her. <sup>2</sup>Then the king's personal attendants suggested: "Let beautiful young virgins be sought for the king. <sup>3</sup>Let the king appoint emissaries in all the provinces of his realm to gather all beautiful young virgins into the harem in the royal precinct of Susa. Under the care of the royal eunuch Hegai, guardian of the women, let cosmetics be given them. <sup>4</sup>Then the young woman who pleases the king shall reign in place of Vashti." This suggestion pleased the king, and he acted accordingly.

<sup>8</sup>When the king's order and decree had been proclaimed and many young women brought together to the royal precinct of Susa under the care of Hegai, Esther also was brought in to the royal palace under the care of Hegai, guardian of the women. <sup>9</sup>The young woman pleased him and won his favor. So he promptly furnished her with cosmetics and provisions. Then choosing seven maids for her from the royal palace, he transferred both her and her maids to the best place in the harem. <sup>10</sup>Esther did not reveal her nationality or family, for Mordecai had commanded her not to do so.

<sup>12</sup>After the twelve months' preparation decreed for the women, each one went in turn to visit King Ahasuerus. During this period of beautifying treatment, six months were spent with oil of myrrh, and the other six months with perfumes and cosmetics. <sup>13</sup>Then, when each one was to visit the king, she was allowed to take with her from the harem to the royal palace whatever she chose. <sup>14</sup>She would go in the evening and return in the morning to a second harem under the care of the royal eunuch Shaashgaz, guardian of the concubines. She could not return to the king unless he was pleased with her and had her summoned by name.<sup>n</sup> <sup>15</sup>As for Esther, daughter of Abihail and adopted daughter of his nephew Mordecai, when her turn came to visit the king, she did not ask for anything but what the royal eunuch Hegai, guardian of the women, suggested. And she won the admiration of all who saw her.

Ahasuerus Chooses Esther. <sup>16</sup>Esther was led to King Ahasuerus in his palace in the tenth month, Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign. <sup>17</sup>The king loved Esther more than all other women, and of all the virgins she won his favor and good will. So he placed the royal crown on her head and made her queen in place of Vashti. <sup>18</sup>Then the king gave a great feast in honor of Esther to all his officials and servants, granting a holiday to the provinces and bestowing gifts with royal generosity.

Mordecai Thwarts an Assassination.* <sup>19o</sup> As was said, from the time the virgins had been brought together, and while Mordecai was passing his time at the king's gate, <sup>20</sup>Esther had not revealed her family or nationality, because Mordecai had told her not to; and Esther continued to follow Mordecai's instructions, just as she had when she was being brought up by him. <sup>21p</sup> During the time that Mordecai spent at the king's gate, Bigthan and Teresh, two of the royal eunuchs who guarded the entrance, became angry and plotted to assassinate King Ahasuerus. <sup>22</sup>When the plot became known to Mordecai, he told Queen Esther, who in turn informed the king in Mordecai's name. <sup>23</sup>The matter was investigated and verified, and both of them were impaled on stakes.* This was written in the annals in the king's presence.

III. Haman's Plot Against the Jews?

CHAPTER 3

Haman's Reprisal. <sup>5</sup>When Haman observed that Mordecai would not kneel and bow down to him, he was filled with anger. <sup>6</sup>But he thought it was beneath him to attack only Mordecai. Since they had told Haman of Mordecai's nationality, he sought to destroy all the Jews, Mordecai's people, throughout the realm of King Ahasuerus. <sup>7</sup>In the first month, Nisan, in the twelfth year of King Ahasuerus, the pur, or lot,* was cast in Haman's presence to determine the day and the month for the destruction of Mordecai's people on a single day, and the lot fell on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar.<sup>t</sup>

Decree Against the Jews. <sup>8</sup>Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus: "Dispersed among the nations throughout the provinces of your kingdom, there is a certain people living apart. Their laws differ from those of every other people and they do not obey the laws of the king; so it is not proper for the king to tolerate them."<sup>u</sup> <sup>9</sup>If it please the king, let a decree be issued to destroy them; and I will deliver to the procurators ten thousand silver talents for deposit in the royal treasury."<sup>v</sup> <sup>10</sup>The king took the signet ring* from his hand and gave it to Haman, son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of the Jews.<sup>w</sup> <sup>11</sup>The king said to Haman, "The silver is yours, as well as the people, to do with as you please."*

<sup>12</sup>So the royal scribes were summoned on the thirteenth day of the first month, and they wrote, at the dictation of Haman, an order to the royal satraps, the governors of every province, and the officials of every people, to each province in its own script and to each people in its own language. It was written in the name of King Ahasuerus and sealed with the royal signet ring. <sup>13</sup>Letters were sent by couriers to all the royal provinces, to destroy, kill and annihilate all the Jews, young and old, including women and children in one day, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, and to seize their goods as spoil.<sup>x</sup>

CHAPTER B

“The great King Ahasuerus writes to the satraps of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia, and the governors subordinate to them, as follows: <sup>2</sup>When I came to rule many peoples and to hold sway over the whole world, not being carried away by a sense of my own authority but always acting fairly and with mildness, I determined to provide for my subjects a life of lasting tranquility; and, by making my kingdom civilized and safe for travel to its farthest borders, to restore the peace desired by all people.<sup>y</sup> <sup>3</sup>When I consulted my counselors as to how this might be accomplished, Haman, who excels among us in discretion, who is outstanding for constant good will and steadfast loyalty, and who has gained a place in the kingdom second only to me,<sup>z</sup> <sup>4</sup>brought it to our attention that, mixed among all the nations throughout the world, there is one people of ill will, which by its laws is opposed to every other people and continually disregards the decrees of kings, so that the unity of empire blamelessly designed by us cannot be established.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>5</sup>“Having noted, therefore, that this nation, and it alone, is continually at variance with all people, lives by divergent and alien laws, is inimical to our government, and does all the harm it can to undermine the stability of the kingdom, <sup>6</sup>we hereby decree that all those who are indicated to you in the letters of Haman, who is in charge of the administration and is a second father to us, shall, together with their wives and children, be utterly destroyed by the swords of their enemies, without any pity or mercy, on the fourteenth day* of the twelfth month, Adar, of the current year;<sup>b</sup> <sup>7</sup>so that when these people, whose present ill will is of long standing, have gone down into Hades by a violent death on a single day, they may leave our government completely stable and undisturbed for the future.”

(CHAPTER 3)

See RG 256–59

<sup>14</sup>A copy of the decree to be promulgated as law in every province was published to all the peoples, that they might be prepared for that day. <sup>15</sup>The couriers set out in haste at the king's command; meanwhile, the decree was promulgated in the royal precinct of Susa. The king and Haman then sat down to drink, but the city of Susa was thrown into confusion.

IV. Esther and Mordecai Plead for Help

CHAPTER 4

Mordecai Exhorts Esther. <sup>1</sup>When Mordecai learned all that was happening, he tore his garments, put on sackcloth and ashes, and went through the city crying out loudly and bitterly,<sup>c</sup> <sup>2</sup>till he came before the royal gate, which no one clothed in sackcloth might enter. <sup>3</sup>Likewise in each of the provinces, wherever the king's decree and law reached, the Jews went into deep mourning, with fasting, weeping, and lament; most of them lay on sackcloth and ashes.

<sup>4</sup>Esther's maids and eunuchs came and told her. Overwhelmed with anguish, the queen sent garments for Mordecai to put on, so that he might take off his sackcloth; but he refused. <sup>5</sup>Esther then summoned Hathach, one of the king's eunuchs whom he had placed at her service, and commanded him to find out what this action of Mordecai meant and the reason for it. <sup>6</sup>So Hathach went out to Mordecai in the public square in front of the royal gate, <sup>7</sup>and Mordecai recounted all that had happened to him, as well as the exact amount of silver Haman had promised to pay to the royal treasury for the slaughter of the Jews. <sup>8</sup>He also gave him a copy of the written decree for their destruction that had been promulgated in Susa, to show and explain to Esther. Hathach was to instruct her to go to the king and to plead and intercede with him on behalf of her people.*

<sup>9</sup>Hathach returned to Esther and told her what Mordecai had said. <sup>10</sup>Then Esther replied to Hathach and gave him this message for Mordecai: <sup>11</sup>"All the servants of the king and the people of his provinces know that any man or woman who goes to the king in the inner court without being summoned is subject to the same law—death. Only if the king extends the golden scepter will such a person live. Now as for me, I have not been summoned to the king for thirty days."<sup>d</sup>

<sup>12</sup>When Esther's words were reported to Mordecai, <sup>13</sup>he had this reply brought to her: "Do not imagine that you are safe in the king's palace, you alone of all the Jews. <sup>14</sup>Even if you now remain silent, relief and deliverance will come to the Jews from another source;* but you and your father's house will perish. Who knows—perhaps it was for a time like this that you became queen?"

<sup>15</sup>Esther sent back to Mordecai the response: <sup>16</sup>“Go and assemble all the Jews who are in Susa; fast on my behalf, all of you, not eating or drinking night or day for three days. I and my maids will also fast in the same way. Thus prepared, I will go to the king, contrary to the law. If I perish, I perish!”<sup>e</sup> <sup>17</sup>Mordecai went away and did exactly as Esther had commanded.

CHAPTER C

See RG 256–59

Prayer of Mordecai. <sup>1</sup>Recalling all that the Lord had done, Mordecai prayed to the Lord <sup>2</sup>and said: “Lord, Lord, King and Ruler of all, everything is in your power, and there is no one to oppose you when it is your will to save Israel. <sup>3</sup>You made heaven and earth and every wonderful thing under heaven. <sup>4</sup>You are Lord of all, and there is no one who can resist you, the Lord. <sup>5f</sup> You know all things. You know, Lord, that it was not out of insolence or arrogance or desire for glory that I acted thus in not bowing down to the arrogant Haman. <sup>6</sup>I would have gladly kissed the soles of his feet for the salvation of Israel. <sup>7</sup>But I acted as I did so as not to place the honor of a mortal above that of God. I will not bow down to anyone but you, my Lord. It is not out of arrogance that I am acting thus. <sup>8</sup>And now, Lord God, King, God of Abraham, spare your people, for our enemies regard us with deadly envy and are bent upon destroying the inheritance that was yours from the beginning. <sup>9</sup>Do not spurn your portion, which you redeemed for yourself out of the land of Egypt. <sup>10</sup>Hear my prayer; have pity on your inheritance and turn our mourning into feasting, that we may live to sing praise to your name, Lord. Do not silence the mouths of those who praise you.”

Prayer of Esther. <sup>12g</sup> Queen Esther, seized with mortal anguish, fled to the Lord for refuge. <sup>13</sup>Taking off her splendid garments, she put on garments of distress and mourning. In place of her precious ointments she covered her head with dung and ashes. She afflicted her body severely and in place of her festive adornments, her tangled hair covered her.

<sup>14</sup>Then she prayed to the Lord, the God of Israel, saying: “My Lord, you alone are our King. Help me, who am alone and have no help but you, <sup>15</sup>for I am taking my life in my hand. <sup>h16</sup>From birth, I have heard among my people that you, Lord, chose Israel from among all nations, and our ancestors from among all their forebears, as a lasting inheritance, and that you fulfilled all your promises to them. <sup>i17</sup>But now we have sinned in your sight, and you have delivered us into the hands of our enemies, <sup>18</sup>because we worshiped their gods. You are just, O Lord. <sup>19</sup>But now they are not satisfied with our bitter servitude, but have sworn an oath to their idols <sup>20</sup>to do away with the decree you have pronounced, to destroy your inheritance, to close the mouths of those who praise you, to extinguish the glory of your house and your altar, <sup>21</sup>to open the mouths of the nations to acclaim their worthless gods, and to extol a mortal king forever.

<sup>22</sup>“Lord, do not relinquish your scepter to those who are nothing. Do not let our foes gloat over our ruin, but turn their own counsel against them and make an example of the one who began this against us. <sup>23</sup>Be mindful of us, Lord. Make yourself known in the time of our distress and give me courage, King of gods and Ruler of every power. <sup>24</sup>Put in my mouth persuasive words in the presence of the lion, and turn his heart to hatred for our enemy, so that he and his co-conspirators may perish. <sup>25</sup>Save us by your power, and help me, who am alone and have no one but you, Lord.

<sup>26</sup>“You know all things. You know that I hate the pomp of the lawless, and abhor the bed of the uncircumcised or of any foreigner. <sup>27</sup>You know that I am under constraint, that I abhor the sign of grandeur that rests on my head when I appear in public. I abhor it like a polluted rag, and do not wear it in private. <sup>28</sup>I, your servant, have never eaten at the table of Haman, nor have I graced the banquet of the king or drunk the wine of libations.* <sup>29</sup>From the day I was brought here till now, your servant has had no joy except in you, Lord, God of Abraham. <sup>30</sup>O God, whose power is over all, hear the voice of those in despair. Save us from the power of the wicked, and deliver me from my fear.”

CHAPTER D

Esther Goes to Ahasuerus.* <sup>1</sup>On the third day, ending her prayers, she took off her prayer garments and arrayed herself in her splendid attire. <sup>2</sup>In making her appearance, after invoking the all-seeing God and savior, she took with her two maids; <sup>3</sup>on the one she leaned gently for support, <sup>4</sup>while the other followed her, bearing her train. <sup>5</sup>She glowed with perfect beauty and her face was as joyous as it was lovely, though her heart was pounding with fear. <sup>6</sup>She passed through all the portals till she stood before the king, who was seated on his royal throne, clothed in full robes of state, and covered with gold and precious stones, so that he inspired great awe. <sup>7</sup>As he looked up in extreme anger, his features fiery and majestic, the queen staggered, turned pale and fainted, collapsing against the maid in front of her. <sup>8</sup>But God changed the king's anger to gentleness. In great anxiety he sprang from his throne, held her in his arms until she recovered, and comforted her with reassuring words. <sup>9</sup>"What is it, Esther?" he said to her. "I am your brother."* Take courage! <sup>10</sup>You shall not die; this order of ours applies only to our subjects. <sup>11</sup>Come near!" <sup>12</sup>Raising the golden scepter, he touched her neck with it, embraced her, and said, "Speak to me."<sup>j</sup>

<sup>13</sup>She replied: "I saw you, my lord, as an angel of God, and my heart was shaken by fear of your majesty. <sup>14</sup>For you are awesome, my lord, though your countenance is full of mercy." <sup>15</sup>As she said this, she fainted. <sup>16</sup>The king was shaken and all his attendants tried to revive her.

CHAPTER 5

<sup>3</sup>Then the king said to her, “What is it, Queen Esther? What is your request? Even if it is half of my kingdom, it shall be granted you.”<sup>k</sup> <sup>4</sup>Esther replied, “If it please your majesty, come today with Haman to a banquet I have prepared.” <sup>5</sup>The king ordered, “Have Haman make haste to fulfill the wish of Esther.”

V. Haman’s Downfall

First Banquet of Esther. So the king went with Haman to the banquet Esther had prepared. <sup>6</sup>During the drinking of the wine, the king said to Esther, “Whatever you ask for shall be granted, and whatever request you make shall be honored, even if it is for half my kingdom.”<sup>l</sup> <sup>7</sup>Esther replied: “This is my petition and request: <sup>8</sup>if I have found favor with the king and if it pleases your majesty to grant my petition and honor my request, let the king come with Haman tomorrow to a banquet I will prepare; and tomorrow I will do as the king asks.”

Haman’s Plot Against Mordecai. <sup>9</sup>That day Haman left happy and in good spirits. But when he saw that Mordecai at the royal gate did not rise, and showed no fear of him, he was filled with anger toward him.<sup>m</sup> <sup>10</sup>Haman restrained himself, however, and went home, where he summoned his friends and his wife Zeresh. <sup>11</sup>He recounted the greatness of his riches, the large number of his sons, and how the king had promoted him and placed him above the officials and royal servants.<sup>n</sup> <sup>12</sup>“Moreover,” Haman added, “Queen Esther invited no one but me to come with the king to the banquet she prepared; again tomorrow I am to be her guest with the king. <sup>13</sup>Yet none of this satisfies me as long as I continue to see the Jew Mordecai sitting at the royal gate.”<sup>o 14</sup>His wife Zeresh and all his friends said to him, “Have a stake set up, fifty cubits in height, and in the morning ask the king to have Mordecai impaled on it. Then go to the banquet with the king in good spirits.” This suggestion pleased Haman, and he had the stake erected.<sup>p</sup>

CHAPTER 6

Mordecai's Reward from the King. <sup>1</sup>That night the king, unable to sleep, asked that the chronicle of notable events be brought in. While this was being read to him, <sup>2</sup>the passage occurred in which Mordecai reported Bigthan and Teresh, two of the royal eunuchs who guarded the entrance, for seeking to assassinate King Ahasuerus.<sup>q</sup> <sup>3</sup>The king asked, “What was done to honor and exalt Mordecai for this?” The king’s attendants replied, “Nothing was done for him.”<sup>r</sup>

<sup>4*</sup> “Who is in the court?” the king asked. Now Haman had entered the outer court of the king’s palace to suggest to the king that Mordecai should be impaled on the stake he had raised for him.<sup>s</sup> <sup>5</sup>The king’s attendants answered him, “Haman is waiting in the court.” The king said, “Let him come in.” <sup>6</sup>When Haman entered, the king said to him, “What should be done for the man whom the king wishes to reward?” Now Haman thought to himself, “Whom would the king wish to honor more than me?” <sup>7</sup>So he replied to the king: “For the man whom the king wishes to honor <sup>8</sup>there should be brought the royal robe the king wore and the horse the king rode with the royal crest placed on its head. <sup>9</sup>The robe and the horse should be given to one of the noblest of the king’s officials, who must clothe the man the king wishes to reward, have him ride on the horse in the public square of the city, and cry out before him, ‘This is what is done for the man whom the king wishes to honor!’”<sup>t</sup> <sup>10</sup>Then the king said to Haman: “Hurry! Take the robe and horse as you have proposed, and do this for the Jew Mordecai, who is sitting at the royal gate. Do not omit anything you proposed.”<sup>u</sup> <sup>11</sup>So Haman took the robe and horse, clothed Mordecai, had him ride in the public square of the city, and cried out before him, “This is what is done for the man whom the king wishes to honor!”

Esther's Second Banquet. <sup>14</sup>While they were speaking with him, the king's eunuchs arrived and hurried Haman off to the banquet Esther had prepared.

CHAPTER 7

See RG 256–59

<sup>1</sup>So the king and Haman went to the banquet with Queen Esther. <sup>2</sup>Again, on this second day, as they were drinking wine, the king said to Esther, “Whatever you ask, Queen Esther, shall be granted you. Whatever request you make, even for half the kingdom, shall be honored.”<sup>w</sup> <sup>3</sup>Queen Esther replied: “If I have found favor with you, O king, and if it pleases your majesty, I ask that my life be spared, and I beg that you spare the lives of my people. <sup>4</sup>For we have been sold, I and my people, to be destroyed, killed, and annihilated. If we were only to be sold into slavery I would remain silent, for then our distress would not have been worth troubling the king.”<sup>x</sup> <sup>5</sup>King Ahasuerus said to Queen Esther, “Who and where is the man who has dared to do this?”<sup>y</sup> <sup>6</sup>Esther replied, “The enemy oppressing us is this wicked Haman.” At this, Haman was seized with dread of the king and queen.

Punishment of Haman. <sup>9z</sup> Harbona, one of the eunuchs who attended the king, said, “At the house of Haman stands a stake fifty cubits high. Haman made it for Mordecai, who gave the report that benefited the king.” The king answered, “Impale him on it.” <sup>10</sup>So they impaled Haman on the stake he had set up for Mordecai, and the anger of the king abated.

The Second Royal Decree. <sup>3</sup>Esther again spoke to the king. She fell at his feet and tearfully implored him to revoke the harm done by Haman the Agagite and the plan he had devised against the Jews. <sup>4</sup>The king stretched forth the golden scepter to Esther. So she rose and, standing before him, <sup>5</sup>said: “If it seems good to the king and if I have found favor with him, if the thing seems right to the king and I am pleasing in his eyes, let a document be issued to revoke the letters that the schemer Haman, son of Hammedatha the Agagite, wrote for the destruction of the Jews in all the royal provinces.<sup>c</sup> <sup>6</sup>For how can I witness the evil that is to befall my people, and how can I behold the destruction of my kindred?”

<sup>7</sup>King Ahasuerus then said to Queen Esther and to the Jew Mordecai: “Now that I have given Esther the house of Haman, and they have impaled him on the stake because he was going to attack the Jews, <sup>8d</sup> you in turn may write in the king's name what you see fit concerning the Jews and seal the letter with the royal signet ring.” For a decree written in the name of the king and sealed with the royal signet ring cannot be revoked.*

<sup>9</sup>At that time, on the twenty-third day of the third month, Sivan, the royal scribes were summoned. Exactly as Mordecai dictated, they wrote to the Jews and to the satraps, governors, and officials of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces from India to Ethiopia: to each province in its own script and to each people in its own language, and to the Jews in their own script and language. <sup>10</sup>These letters, which he wrote in the name of King

Ahasuerus and sealed with the royal signet ring, he sent by mounted couriers riding thoroughbred royal steeds. <sup>11e</sup> In these letters the king authorized the Jews in each and every city to gather and defend their lives, to destroy, kill, and annihilate every armed group of any nation or province that might attack them, along with their wives and children, and to seize their goods as spoil <sup>12</sup>on a single day throughout the provinces of King Ahasuerus, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar.

CHAPTER E

<sup>1</sup>The following is a copy of the letter: “The great King Ahasuerus to the governors of the provinces in the hundred and twenty-seven satrapies from India to Ethiopia, and to those who are loyal to our government: Greetings!

<sup>10</sup>“For instance, Haman, son of Hammedatha, a Macedonian,* certainly not of Persian blood, and very different from us in generosity, was hospitably received by us. <sup>11</sup>He benefited so much from the good will we have toward all peoples that he was proclaimed ‘our father,’ before whom everyone was to bow down; and he attained a position second only to the royal throne.<sup>g</sup> <sup>12</sup>But, unable to control his arrogance, he strove to deprive us of kingdom and of life, <sup>13</sup>and by weaving intricate webs of deceit he demanded the destruction of Mordecai, our savior and constant benefactor, and of Esther, our blameless royal consort, together with their whole nation.<sup>h</sup> <sup>14</sup>For by such measures he hoped to catch us defenseless and to transfer the rule of the Persians to the Macedonians. <sup>15</sup>But we find that the Jews, who were doomed to extinction by this archcriminal, are not evildoers, but rather are governed by very just laws <sup>16</sup>and are the children of the Most High, the living God of majesty, who has maintained the kingdom in a flourishing condition for us and for our forebears.

<sup>17</sup>“You will do well, then, to ignore the letter sent by Haman, son of Hammedatha, <sup>18</sup>for he who composed it has been impaled, together with his entire household, before the gates of Susa. Thus swiftly has God, who governs all, brought just punishment upon him.”<sup>i</sup>

<sup>19</sup>“You shall exhibit a copy of this letter publicly in every place to certify that the Jews may follow their own laws <sup>20</sup>and that you may help them on the day set for their ruin, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, to defend themselves against those who attack them. <sup>21</sup>For God, the ruler of all, has turned that day from one of destruction of the chosen people into one of joy for them. <sup>22</sup>Therefore, you too must celebrate this memorable day among your designated feasts with all rejoicing, <sup>23</sup>so that both now and in the future it may be a celebration of deliverance for us and for Persians of good will, but for those who plot against us a reminder of destruction.

<sup>24</sup>“Every city and province without exception that does not observe this decree shall be ruthlessly destroyed with fire and sword, so that it will be left not merely untrodden by people, but even shunned by wild beasts and birds forever.”<sup>j</sup>

(CHAPTER 8)

See RG 256–59

<sup>13</sup>A copy of the letter to be promulgated as law in each and every province was published among all the peoples, so that the Jews might be prepared on that day to avenge themselves on their enemies. <sup>14</sup>Couriers mounted on royal steeds sped forth in haste at the king's order, and the decree was promulgated in the royal precinct of Susa.

<sup>15</sup>Mordecai left the king's presence clothed in a royal robe of violet and of white cotton, with a large crown of gold and a mantle of fine crimson linen. The city of Susa shouted with joy,<sup>k</sup> <sup>16</sup>and for the Jews there was splendor and gladness, joy and triumph. <sup>17</sup>In each and every province and in each and every city, wherever the king's order arrived, there was merriment and joy, banqueting and feasting for the Jews. And many of the peoples of the land identified themselves as Jews, for fear of the Jews fell upon them.<sup>l</sup>

CHAPTER 9

The Massacre Reversed. <sup>1m</sup> When the day arrived on which the order decreed by the king was to be carried out, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, on which the enemies of the Jews had expected to overpower them, the situation was reversed: the Jews overpowered those who hated them. <sup>2</sup>The Jews mustered in their cities throughout the provinces of King Ahasuerus to attack those who sought to do them harm, and no one could withstand them, for fear of them fell upon all the peoples. <sup>3</sup>Moreover, all the officials of the provinces, the satraps, governors, and royal procurators supported the Jews out of fear of Mordecai; <sup>4</sup>for Mordecai was powerful in the royal palace, and the report was spreading through all the provinces that he was continually growing in power.

<sup>5</sup>The Jews struck down all their enemies with the sword, killing and destroying them; they did to those who hated them as they pleased.<sup>n 6o</sup> In the royal precinct of Susa, the Jews killed and destroyed five hundred people. <sup>7</sup>They also killed Parshandatha, Dalphon, Aspatha, <sup>8</sup>Poratha, Adalia, Aridatha, <sup>9</sup>Parmashta, Arisai, Aridai, and Vaizatha, <sup>10p</sup> the ten sons of Haman, son of Hammedatha, the foe of the Jews. However, they did not engage in plundering.

<sup>11</sup>On the same day, when the number of those killed in the royal precinct of Susa was reported to the king, <sup>12</sup>he said to Queen Esther: “In the royal precinct of Susa the Jews have killed and destroyed five hundred people, as well as the ten sons of Haman. What must they have done in the other royal provinces! You shall again be granted whatever you ask, and whatever you request shall be honored.” <sup>13</sup>So Esther said, “If it pleases your majesty, let the Jews in Susa be permitted again tomorrow to act according to today’s decree, and let the ten sons of Haman be impaled on stakes.” <sup>14</sup>The king then gave an order that this be done, and the decree was published in Susa. So the ten sons of Haman were impaled,<sup>q 15</sup> and the Jews in Susa mustered again on the fourteenth of the month of Adar and killed three hundred people in Susa. However, they did not engage in plundering.<sup>r</sup>

seventy-five thousand of those who hated them, but they did not engage in plunder.<sup>s 17</sup> This happened on the thirteenth day of the month of Adar.

The Feast of Purim.* On the fourteenth of the month they rested, and made it a day of feasting and rejoicing.

<sup>18</sup>The Jews in Susa, however, mustered on the thirteenth and fourteenth of the month. But on the fifteenth they rested, and made it a day of joyful banqueting. <sup>19</sup>That is why the rural Jews, who dwell in villages, celebrate the fourteenth of the month of Adar as a day of joyful banqueting, a holiday on which they send food to one another.

<sup>20</sup>Mordecai recorded these events and sent letters to all the Jews, both near and far, in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus. <sup>21*</sup> He ordered them to celebrate every year both the fourteenth and the fifteenth of the month of Adar <sup>22</sup>as the days on which the Jews obtained rest from their enemies and as the month which was turned for them from sorrow into joy, from mourning into celebration. They were to observe these days with joyful banqueting, sending food to one another and gifts to the poor. <sup>23*</sup> The Jews adopted as a custom what they had begun doing and what Mordecai had written to them.<sup>t</sup>

VII. Epilogue: The Rise of Mordecai

Summary of the Story. <sup>24u</sup> Haman, son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the foe of all the Jews, had planned to destroy them and had cast the pur, or lot, for the time of their defeat and destruction. <sup>25</sup>Yet, when the plot became known to the king, the king ordered in writing that the wicked plan Haman had devised against the Jews should instead be turned against Haman and that he and his sons should be impaled on stakes.<sup>v</sup> <sup>26</sup>And so these days have been named Purim after the word pur.

Thus, because of all that was contained in this letter, and because of what they had witnessed and experienced in this event, <sup>27</sup>the Jews established and adopted as a custom for themselves, their descendants, and all who should join them, the perpetual obligation of celebrating these two days every year in the manner prescribed by this letter, and at the time appointed.<sup>w</sup> <sup>28</sup>These days were to be commemorated and kept in every generation, by every clan, in every province, and in every city. These days of Purim were never to be neglected among the Jews, nor forgotten by their descendants.

Esther and Mordecai Act in Concert.* <sup>29</sup>Queen Esther, daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote to confirm with full authority this second letter about Purim, <sup>30</sup>and Mordecai sent documents concerning peace and security to all the Jews in the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of Ahasuerus' kingdom.<sup>x</sup> <sup>31</sup>Thus were established, for their appointed time, these days of Purim which Mordecai the Jew and Queen Esther had designated for the Jews, just as they had previously enjoined upon themselves and upon their descendants the duty of fasting and supplication. <sup>32</sup>The command of Esther confirmed these prescriptions for Purim and was recorded in the book.

The Rise of Mordecai Completed. <sup>1</sup>King Ahasuerus levied a tax on the land and on the islands of the sea. <sup>2</sup>All the acts of his power and valor, as well as a detailed account of the greatness of Mordecai, whom the king promoted, are recorded in the chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia. <sup>3</sup>The Jew Mordecai was next in rank to King Ahasuerus, in high standing among the Jews, popular with many of his kindred, seeking the good of his people and speaking out on behalf of the welfare of all its descendants.<sup>y</sup>

CHAPTER F

See RG 256–59

Mordecai's Dream Fulfilled. <sup>1z</sup> then Mordecai said: “This is the work of God. <sup>2</sup>I recall the dream I had about these very things, and not a single detail has been left unfulfilled— <sup>3</sup>the tiny spring that grew into a river, and there was light, and sun, and many waters. The river is Esther, whom the king married and made queen. <sup>4</sup>The two dragons are myself and Haman. <sup>5</sup>The nations are those who assembled to destroy the name of the Jews, <sup>6</sup>but my people is Israel, who cried to God and was saved.

“The Lord saved his people and delivered us from all these evils. God worked signs and great wonders, such as have not occurred among the nations. <sup>7</sup>For this purpose he arranged two lots: * one for the people of God, the second for all the other nations. <sup>8</sup>These two lots were fulfilled in the hour, the time, and the day of judgment before God and among all the nations. <sup>9</sup>God remembered his people and rendered justice to his inheritance.

Colophon. * <sup>11</sup>In the fourth year of the reign of Ptolemy and Cleopatra, Dositheus, who said he was a priest and Levite, and his son Ptolemy brought the present letter of Purim, saying that it was genuine and that Lysimachus, son of Ptolemy, of the community of Jerusalem, had translated it.

A:1 The genealogy of Mordecai is designed to reflect opposition to Israel's enemy Haman, an Agagite (v. 17). In 1 Sm 15:1–9, Saul (whose father's name was Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin) conquered Agag the Amalekite.

A:2–3 Repeats information from 2:5–6, on which see note, but states that Mordecai is already a court official. In the Hebrew text, Mordecai is not given this rank until 7:10–8:2.

A:4 An interpretation of the dream that relates its features to the plot of the book is given in F:1–6.

A:12–17 Retells the story in 2:21–23, but with several differences. Addition A has Mordecai inform the king directly, whereas in 2:22 Mordecai informs the king through Esther after she has become queen. A:16 has Mordecai rewarded immediately after his service, whereas the Hebrew text defers the reward of Mordecai to 6:3–13. In A:17, the failure of the eunuchs' plot becomes Haman's reason for seeking the destruction of Mordecai and his people, something which the Hebrew text attributes to Mordecai's refusal to bow to Haman (see note on 3:2).

A:17 A Bougean: the origin of this term is unknown; it may represent a garbled attempt to render the Hebrew "Agagite" (3:1). In the Greek additions Haman not only knows the plot to assassinate the king, but is apparently a co-conspirator.

1:1 The Hebrew text opens with a portrait of the power and luxury of the Persian king Ahasuerus (Xerxes I, whose empire consisted of only about thirty provinces).

1:2 Susa was the winter capital of the Persian empire. The "royal precinct" (sometimes translated "stronghold" or "citadel") was a well-fortified section of the city that included the king's residence. The Book of Esther depicts other citizens living in this section as well.

1:19 An irrevocable royal decree: the first of several in the book. In a satiric portrayal, even a minor domestic disagreement is resolved through a sweeping international edict. The irrevocable nature of the decree is intended to increase its force, but creates problems if the king needs to adapt to new information or conditions. See note on 8:8.

2:5 Mordecai: a Babylonian name, deriving from the god Marduk. Like Esther, Mordecai may have had a Jewish name as well, although in his case we do not know what it is. The chronology of the book makes him well over one hundred years old, since he was deported with Jehoiachin about 598 B.C.; cf. A:1.

2:7 Esther: a Babylonian name, deriving from the goddess Ishtar. She is given a Hebrew name as well, "Hadassah," which means "myrtle."

2:19–23 This story is retold and placed at the beginning of the book in Greek addition A:12–17, with significant differences (see note). The Greek also has a translation of the account in 2:19–23 at this point in the narrative.

2:23 Impaled on stakes: a method of execution used by the Persians, known from ancient records and reliefs.

3:2 We are not told the reasons for Mordecai's refusal to bow. It may be the result of a form of Jewish piety that refuses to offer such homage to any mortal; see also Greek addition C:5–7.

3:7 The pur, or lot: the Hebrew text preserves the Akkadian word pur because its plural, purim, became the name of the feast of Purim commemorating the deliverance of the Jews; cf. 9:24, 26. The lot functions as a kind of horoscope to determine the most favorable day for the pogrom.

3:10 Signet ring: a ring containing a seal that was impressed on documents to authenticate them. With this ring, Haman can issue decrees in the king's name.

3:11 Although Ahasuerus seems to refuse the bribe, this is probably a polite way of accepting it that makes him appear munificent (compare Gn 23:11–15, where Ephron tells Abraham that he "gives" him the field and, after a few more pleasantries, sets a very high price for it). Both 4:7 and 7:4 seem to assume Ahasuerus has accepted the money.

B:6 Fourteenth day: only the Greek text here names the fourteenth of Adar as the day set aside for the destruction of the Jews. The Hebrew text consistently gives the date as the thirteenth of Adar (e.g., 3:13) as does Greek addition E:20; see note on 9:17–19.

4:8 The Greek text adds the following to Mordecai's message to Esther: "Remember the days of your lowly estate, when you were brought up in my charge; for Haman, who is second to the king, has asked for our death. Invoke the Lord and speak to the king for us: save us from death."

4:14 From another source: probably Mordecai refers to divine aid; the Greek additions (C) are explicit about this.

C:28 Wine of libations: offered in sacrifice to the gods.

D:1–16 Addition D expands on and replaces 5:1–2 of the Hebrew text.

D:9 Brother: along with "sister," a common term of affection between lovers or husband and wife. See, e.g., Sg 4:9–12; 8:1; Tb 5:22; 7:11.

5:1–2 The Hebrew text translated here is a short form of the account which is in Greek addition D.

6:4–13 Haman’s presumption that the king wants to honor him creates the irony that Haman himself prescribes and fulfills the elaborate terms of Mordecai’s reward. This comic reversal mirrors the fatal reversal to come: Haman and those who hate the Jews find that their plot to destroy them recoils on their own head.

8:8 A decree written ... cannot be revoked: the king cannot directly grant Esther’s request (v. 5) to revoke the previous decree against the Jews because of the irrevocable character of the laws of the Medes and Persians (see 1:19 and note). He can, however, empower Esther to issue another decree in his name to counteract the earlier one. The second decree authorizes the Jews to defend themselves against those who would kill them, which is what they do in 9:2. This is why the outcome of the two decrees is that the attackers are killed instead of the Jews, rather than a simple cancellation of all hostilities.

E:10 Macedonian: throughout the book Haman is identified with terms of contempt—in the Hebrew text as an Agagite (3:1, 10; 8:3, 5; 9:24; cf. note on A:17), thus making him a descendant of Agag, king of the Amalekites, a group hated by the Israelites; in the Greek additions Haman is identified as a Macedonian, reflecting the enmity between the Persians and the Macedonians after Macedonia’s conquest of Persia in the fourth century B.C.

9:17–19 According to Esther, Jewish feasting on the day after the defeat of their enemies establishes the date of the holiday. Since in Susa the fighting lasts for two days, the Jews of that community initially celebrate Purim a day later than Jews elsewhere.

9:21 Mordecai creates a compromise among the Jews by making Purim a two-day festival.

9:23 According to the story, the two-day celebration has its roots in popular observance, which Mordecai’s leadership reinforces and regularizes.

9:29–32 In attempting to give the impression of concerted action between Esther and Mordecai, the Hebrew text here presents several unresolved difficulties. Verse 29 makes Mordecai and Esther joint authors of a letter that is ascribed in v. 32 to Esther alone. Verse 31 makes Mordecai and Esther joint authors of a letter that is ascribed in vv. 20–22 to Mordecai alone. Finally, it is difficult to see the purpose of confirming a second letter in the second letter itself.

F:7 Two lots: this passage of the Greek text gives an additional interpretation of the feast. The two lots are drawn by God to determine, respectively, the destiny of Israel and that of the nations; contrast with 3:7 of the Hebrew text.

F:11 Several “Ptolemies” (Greek kings reigning in Egypt) had wives named Cleopatra. This postscript dates the Greek version somewhere between 116 B.C. and 48 B.C.

The First Book of Maccabees

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16

See RG 259–64

The name Maccabee, probably meaning “hammer,” is actually applied in the Books of Maccabees to only one man, Judas, third son of the priest Mattathias and first leader of the revolt against the Seleucid kings who persecuted the Jews (1 Mc 2:4, 66; 2 Mc 8:5, 16; 10:1, 16). Traditionally the name has come to be extended to the brothers of Judas, his supporters, and even to other Jewish heroes of the period, such as the seven brothers (2 Mc 7).

The two Books of Maccabees contain independent accounts of events (in part identical) that accompanied the attempted suppression of Judaism in Palestine in the second century B.C. The vigorous reaction to this attempt established for a time the religious and political independence of the Jews.

First Maccabees was written about 100 B.C., in Hebrew, but the original has not come down to us. Instead, we have an early, pre-Christian, Greek translation full of Hebrew idioms. The author, probably a Palestinian Jew, is unknown. He was familiar with the traditions and sacred books of his people and had access to much reliable information on their recent history (from 175 to 134 B.C.). He may well have played some part in it himself in his youth. His purpose in writing is to record the deliverance of Israel that God worked through the family of Mattathias (5:62)—especially through his three sons, Judas, Jonathan, and Simon, and his grandson, John Hyrcanus. The writer compares their virtues and their exploits with those of Israel’s ancient heroes, the Judges, Samuel, and David.

There are seven poetic sections in the book that imitate the style of classical Hebrew poetry: four laments (1:25–28, 36–40; 2:7–13; 3:45), and three hymns of praise of “our fathers” (2:51–64), of Judas (3:3–9), and of Simon (14:4–15). The doctrine expressed in the book is the customary belief of Israel, without the new developments which appear in 2 Maccabees and Daniel. The people of Israel have been specially chosen by the one true God as covenant-partner, and they alone are privileged to know and worship God, their eternal benefactor and unfailing source of help. The people, in turn, must worship the Lord alone and observe exactly the precepts of the law given to them. The rededication of the Jerusalem Temple described in 4:36–59 (see 2 Mc 10:1–8) is the origin of the Jewish feast of Hanukkah.

Unlike the Second Book of Maccabees, there is no doctrine of individual immortality except in the survival of one's name and fame, nor does the book express any messianic expectation, though messianic images are applied historically to "the days of Simon" (1 Mc 14:4–17). In true Deuteronomic tradition, the author insists on fidelity to the law as the expression of Israel's love for God. The contest which he describes is a struggle, not simply between Jew and Gentile, but between those who would uphold the law and those, Jews or Gentiles, who would destroy it. His severest condemnation goes, not to the Seleucid politicians, but to the lawless apostates among his own people, adversaries of Judas and his brothers, who are models of faith and loyalty.

The first and second Books of Maccabees, though regarded by Jews and Protestants as apocryphal, i.e., not inspired Scripture, because not contained in the Jewish list of books drawn up at the end of the first century A.D., have always been accepted by the Catholic Church as inspired and are called "deuterocanonical" to indicate that they are canonical even though disputed by some.

First Maccabees can be divided as follows:

- I. Crisis and Response (1:1–2:70)
- II. Leadership of Judas Maccabeus (3:1–9:22)
- III. Leadership of Jonathan (9:23–12:53)
- IV. Leadership of Simon (13:1–16:24)

I. Crisis and Response

CHAPTER 1

See RG 259–64

From Alexander to Antiochus. <sup>1a</sup> After Alexander the Macedonian, Philip's son, who came from the land of Kittim,* had defeated Darius, king of the Persians and Medes, he became king in his place, having first ruled in Greece. <sup>2</sup>He fought many battles, captured fortresses, and put the kings of the earth to death. <sup>3</sup>He advanced to the ends of the earth, gathering plunder from many nations; the earth fell silent before him, and his heart became proud and arrogant. <sup>4</sup>He collected a very strong army and won dominion over provinces, nations, and rulers, and they paid him tribute.

<sup>5</sup>But after all this he took to his bed, realizing that he was going to die. <sup>6</sup>So he summoned his noblest officers, who had been brought up with him from his youth, and divided his kingdom among them while he was still alive. <sup>7</sup>Alexander had reigned twelve years* when he died.

<sup>8</sup>So his officers took over his kingdom, each in his own territory, <sup>9</sup>and after his death they all put on diadems,* and so did their sons after them for many years, multiplying evils on the earth.

Lawless Jews. <sup>11b</sup> In those days there appeared in Israel transgressors of the law who seduced many, saying: "Let us go and make a covenant with the Gentiles all around us; since we separated from them, many evils have come upon us." <sup>12</sup>The proposal was agreeable; <sup>13</sup>some from among the people promptly went to the king, and he authorized them to introduce the ordinances of the Gentiles. <sup>14</sup>Thereupon they built a gymnasium* in Jerusalem according to the Gentile custom. <sup>15</sup>They disguised their circumcision and abandoned the holy covenant; they allied themselves with the Gentiles and sold themselves to wrongdoing.

Antiochus in Egypt. <sup>16c</sup> When his kingdom seemed secure, Antiochus undertook to become king of the land of Egypt and to rule over both kingdoms. <sup>17</sup>He invaded Egypt with a strong force, with chariots, elephants* and cavalry, and with a large fleet, <sup>18</sup>to make war on Ptolemy,* king of Egypt. Ptolemy was frightened at his presence and fled, and many were wounded and fell dead. <sup>19</sup>The fortified cities in the land of Egypt were captured, and Antiochus plundered the land of Egypt.

Robbery of the Temple. <sup>20d</sup> After Antiochus had defeated Egypt in the one hundred and forty-third year, * he returned and went up against Israel and against Jerusalem with a strong force. <sup>21</sup>He insolently entered the sanctuary * and took away the golden altar, the lampstand for the light with all its utensils, <sup>22</sup>the offering table, the cups and bowls, the golden censers, and the curtain. The cornices and the golden ornament on the facade of the temple—he stripped it all off. <sup>23</sup>And he took away the silver and gold and the precious vessels; he also took all the hidden treasures he could find. <sup>24</sup>Taking all this, he went back to his own country. He shed much blood and spoke with great arrogance.

<sup>25</sup>And there was great mourning
throughout all Israel,
<sup>26</sup>and the rulers and the elders groaned.
Young women and men languished,
and the beauty of the women faded.
<sup>27</sup>Every bridegroom took up lamentation, while the bride sitting in her chamber mourned, <sup>28</sup>And the land quaked on account of its inhabitants,
and all the house of Jacob was clothed with shame.

Attack and Occupation. <sup>29e</sup> Two years later, the king sent the Mysian commander * to the cities of Judah, and he came to Jerusalem with a strong force. <sup>30</sup>He spoke to them deceitfully in peaceful terms, and they believed him. Then he attacked the city suddenly, in a great onslaught, and destroyed many of the people in Israel. <sup>31</sup>He plundered the city and set fire to it, demolished its houses and its surrounding walls. <sup>32</sup>And they took captive the women and children, and seized the animals. <sup>33</sup>Then they built up the City of David with a high, strong wall and strong towers, and it became their citadel. *<sup>34</sup>There they installed a sinful race, transgressors of the law, who fortified themselves inside it. <sup>35</sup>They stored up weapons and provisions, depositing there the plunder they had collected from Jerusalem, and they became a great snare.

<sup>36</sup>The citadel became an ambush against the sanctuary,
and a wicked adversary to Israel at all times.

<sup>37</sup>They shed innocent blood around the sanctuary;
they defiled the sanctuary.

<sup>38</sup>Because of them the inhabitants of Jerusalem fled away,
she became the abode of strangers.
She became a stranger to her own offspring,
and her children forsook her.

<sup>39</sup><sup>f</sup> Her sanctuary became desolate as a wilderness;
her feasts were turned into mourning,
Her sabbaths to shame,
her honor to contempt.

<sup>40</sup>As her glory had been, so great was her dishonor:
her exaltation was turned into mourning.

Religious Persecution. <sup>41</sup> <sup>g</sup> Then the king wrote to his whole kingdom that all should be one people, <sup>42</sup>and abandon their particular customs. All the Gentiles conformed to the command of the king, <sup>43</sup>and many Israelites delighted in his religion; they sacrificed to idols and profaned the sabbath.

The Campaigns of the Maccabees and Hasmoneans

“Woe is me! Why was I born to see the ruin of my people, the ruin of the holy city—
 To dwell there
 as it was given into the hands of enemies, the sanctuary into the hands of strangers?

<sup>8</sup>Her temple has become like a man disgraced,

<sup>9</sup>her glorious vessels carried off as spoils,
Her infants murdered in her streets, her youths by the sword of the enemy.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>10</sup>What nation has not taken its share of her realm,
and laid its hand on her spoils?

<sup>11</sup>All her adornment has been taken away.
Once free, she has become a slave.

<sup>12</sup>We see our sanctuary laid waste,
our beauty, our glory.

The Gentiles have defiled them!

<sup>13</sup>Why are we still alive?"

The Jerusalem Vicinity

Pagan Worship Refused and Resisted. <sup>15</sup>The officers of the king in charge of enforcing the apostasy came to the city of Modein to make them sacrifice. <sup>16</sup>Many of Israel joined them, but Mattathias and his sons drew together. <sup>17</sup>Then the officers of the king addressed Mattathias: “You are a leader, an honorable and great man in this city, supported by sons and kindred. <sup>18</sup>Come now, be the first to obey the king’s command, as all the Gentiles and Judeans and those who are left in Jerusalem have done. Then you and your sons shall be numbered among the King’s Friends,* and you and your sons shall be honored with silver and gold and many gifts.”

<sup>23</sup>As he finished saying these words, a certain Jew came forward in the sight of all to offer sacrifice on the altar in Modein according to the king’s order. <sup>24</sup>When Mattathias saw him, he was filled with zeal; his heart was moved and his just fury was aroused; he sprang forward and killed him upon the altar. <sup>25</sup>At the same time, he also killed the messenger of the king who was forcing them to sacrifice, and he tore down the altar. <sup>26</sup>Thus he showed his zeal for the law, just as Phinehas did with Zimri, son of Salu.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>27</sup>Then Mattathias cried out in the city, “Let everyone who is zealous for the law and who stands by the covenant follow me!” <sup>28</sup>Then he and his sons fled to the mountains, leaving behind in the city all their possessions.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>29</sup>At that time many who sought righteousness and justice went out into the wilderness* to settle there, <sup>30</sup>they and their children, their wives and their animals, because misfortunes pressed so hard on them. <sup>31</sup>It was reported to the officers and soldiers of the king who were in the City of David, in Jerusalem, that those who had flouted the king’s order had gone out to secret refuges in the wilderness. <sup>32n</sup> Many hurried out after them, and having caught up with them, camped opposite and prepared to attack them on the sabbath. <sup>33</sup>The pursuers said to them, “Enough of this! Come out and obey the king’s command, and you will live.” <sup>34</sup>But they replied, “We will not come out, nor will we obey the king’s command to profane the sabbath.” <sup>35</sup>Then the enemy attacked them at once. <sup>36</sup>But they did not retaliate; they neither threw stones, nor blocked up their secret refuges. <sup>37</sup>They said, “Let us all die in innocence; heaven and earth are our witnesses that you destroy us unjustly.” <sup>38</sup>So the officers and soldiers attacked them on the sabbath, and they died with their wives, their children and their animals, to the number of a thousand persons.

<sup>39</sup>When Mattathias and his friends heard of it, they mourned deeply for them. <sup>40</sup>They said to one another, “If we all do as our kindred have done, and do not fight against the Gentiles for our lives and our laws, they will soon destroy us from the earth.” <sup>41</sup>So on that day they came to this decision: “Let us fight against anyone who attacks us on the sabbath, so that we may not all die as our kindred died in their secret refuges.”

<sup>42</sup>Then they were joined by a group of Hasideans, * mighty warriors of Israel, all of them devoted to the law. <sup>43</sup>And all those who were fleeing from the persecutions joined them and supported them. <sup>44</sup>They gathered an army and struck down sinners in their wrath and the lawless in their anger, and the survivors fled to the Gentiles for safety. <sup>45</sup>Mattathias and his friends went about and tore down the pagan altars; <sup>46</sup>they also forcibly circumcised any uncircumcised boys whom they found in the territory of Israel. <sup>47</sup>They put to flight the arrogant, and the work prospered in their hands. <sup>48</sup>They saved the law from the hands of the Gentiles and of the kings and did not let the sinner triumph.

Farewell of Mattathias. <sup>49</sup>When the time came for Mattathias to die, he said to his sons: “Arrogance and scorn have now grown strong; it is a time of disaster and violent wrath. <sup>50</sup>Therefore, my children, be zealous for the law and give your lives for the covenant of our ancestors.

<sup>51</sup>“Remember the deeds that our ancestors did in their times, and you shall win great honor and an everlasting name.

<sup>52</sup>Was not Abraham found faithful in trial, and it was credited to him as righteousness?<sup>O</sup>

<sup>53</sup>Joseph, when in distress, kept the commandment,
and he became master of Egypt.<sup>P</sup>

<sup>54</sup>Phinehas our ancestor, for his burning zeal, received the covenant of an everlasting priesthood.<sup>Q</sup>

<sup>55</sup>Joshua, for executing his commission, became a judge in Israel.<sup>R</sup>

<sup>56</sup>Caleb, for bearing witness before the assembly,
received an inheritance in the land.<sup>S</sup>

- <sup>57</sup>David, for his loyalty, received as a heritage a throne of eternal kingship.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>58</sup>Elijah, for his burning zeal for the law, was taken up to heaven.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>59</sup>Hananiah, Azariah and Mishael, for their faith, were saved from the fire.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>60</sup>Daniel, for his innocence, was delivered from the mouths of lions.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>61</sup>And so, consider this from generation to generation,
that none who hope in Heaven shall fail in strength.
- <sup>62</sup>Do not fear the words of sinners, for their glory ends in corruption and worms.<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>63</sup>Today exalted, tomorrow not to be found,
they have returned to dust,
their schemes have perished.
- <sup>64</sup>Children! be courageous and strong in keeping the law,
for by it you shall be honored.

<sup>69</sup>Then he blessed them, and he was gathered to his ancestors. <sup>70</sup>He died in the year one hundred and forty-six,* and was buried in the tombs of his ancestors in Modein, and all Israel mourned him greatly.

II. Leadership of Judas Maccabeus

CHAPTER 3

See RG 259–64

Judas and His Early Victories. <sup>1</sup>Then his son Judas, who was called Maccabeus, took his place. <sup>2</sup>All his brothers and all who had joined his father supported him, and they gladly carried on Israel's war.

<sup>3</sup>He spread abroad the glory of his people, and put on his breastplate like a giant.
He armed himself with weapons of war;
he fought battles and protected the camp with his sword.

<sup>4</sup>In his deeds he was like a lion,
like a young lion roaring for prey.

<sup>5</sup>He pursued the lawless, hunting them out,
and those who troubled his people he destroyed by fire.

<sup>6</sup>The lawless were cowed by fear of him,
and all evildoers were dismayed.
By his hand deliverance was happily achieved,

<sup>7</sup>and he afflicted many kings.
He gave joy to Jacob by his deeds,
and his memory is blessed forever.

<sup>8</sup>He went about the cities of Judah destroying the renegades there.
He turned away wrath from Israel,

<sup>9</sup>was renowned to the ends of the earth; and gathered together those who were perishing.

<sup>10</sup>Then Apollonius* gathered together the Gentiles, along with a large army from Samaria, to fight against Israel. <sup>11</sup>When Judas learned of it, he went out to meet him and struck and killed him. Many fell wounded, and the rest fled. <sup>12</sup>They took their spoils, and Judas took the sword of Apollonius and fought with it the rest of his life.

<sup>13</sup>But Seron, commander of the Syrian army, heard that Judas had mustered an assembly of faithful men ready for war. <sup>14</sup>So he said, "I will make a name for myself and win honor in the kingdom. I will wage war against Judas and his followers, who have despised the king's command."

<sup>16</sup>When he reached the ascent of Beth-horon,* Judas went out to meet him with a few men. <sup>17</sup>But when they saw the army coming against them, they said to Judas: "How can we, few as we are, fight such a strong host as this? Besides, we are weak since we have not eaten today." <sup>18</sup>But Judas said: "Many are easily hemmed in by a few; in the sight of Heaven there is no difference between deliverance by many or by few; <sup>19</sup>for victory in war does not depend upon the size of the army, but on strength that comes from Heaven.<sup>y</sup> <sup>20</sup>With great presumption and lawlessness they come against us to destroy us and our wives and children and to despoil us; <sup>21</sup>but we are fighting for our lives and our laws. <sup>22</sup>He* will crush them before us; so do not fear them." <sup>23</sup>When he finished speaking, he rushed suddenly upon Seron and his army, who were crushed before him. <sup>24</sup>He pursued Seron down the descent of Beth-horon into the plain. About eight hundred* of their men fell, and the rest fled to the land of the Philistines. <sup>25</sup>Then Judas and his brothers began to be feared, and dread fell upon the Gentiles about them. <sup>26</sup>His fame reached the king, and the Gentiles talked about the battles of Judas.

The King's Strategy. <sup>27</sup>When King Antiochus heard these reports, he was filled with rage; so he ordered that all the forces of his kingdom be gathered, a very strong army. <sup>28</sup>He opened his treasury, gave his soldiers a year's pay, and commanded them to be prepared for anything. <sup>29</sup>But then he saw that this exhausted the money in his treasury; moreover the tribute from the province was small because of the dissension and distress he had brought upon the land by abolishing the laws which had been in effect from of old. <sup>30</sup>He feared that, as had happened once or twice, he would not have enough for his expenses and for the gifts that he was accustomed to give with a lavish hand—more so than all previous kings. <sup>31</sup>Greatly perplexed, he decided to go to Persia and levy tribute on those provinces, and so raise a large sum of money.

to take care of his son Antiochus until his return. <sup>34</sup>He entrusted to him half of his forces, and the elephants, and gave him instructions concerning everything he wanted done. As for the inhabitants of Judea and Jerusalem, <sup>35</sup>Lysias was to send an army against them to crush and destroy the power of Israel and the remnant of Jerusalem and efface their memory from the place. <sup>36</sup>He was to settle foreigners in all their territory and distribute their land by lot. <sup>37*</sup> The king took the remaining half of the army and set out from Antioch, his capital, in the year one hundred and forty-seven; he crossed the Euphrates River and went through the provinces beyond.

Preparations for Battle. <sup>38z</sup> Lysias chose Ptolemy, son of Dorymenes, and Nicanor* and Gorgias, powerful men among the King's Friends, <sup>39</sup>and with them he sent forty thousand foot soldiers and seven thousand cavalry to invade and ravage the land of Judah according to the king's orders. <sup>40</sup>Setting out with their whole force, they came and pitched their camp near Emmaus* in the plain. <sup>41</sup>When the merchants of the region heard of their prowess, they came to the camp, bringing a huge sum of silver and gold, along with fetters, to buy the Israelites as slaves. A force from Edom and from Philistia joined with them.

<sup>42</sup>Judas and his brothers saw that evils had multiplied and that armies were encamped within their territory. They learned of the orders which the king had given to destroy and utterly wipe out the people. <sup>43</sup>So they said to one another, "Let us raise our people from their ruin and fight for them and for our sanctuary!"

<sup>45</sup>Jerusalem was uninhabited, like a wilderness;
not one of her children came in or went out.

The sanctuary was trampled on,
and foreigners were in the citadel;
it was a habitation for Gentiles.
Joy had disappeared from Jacob,
and the flute and the harp were silent.

<sup>46</sup>* Thus they assembled and went to Mizpah near Jerusalem, because formerly at Mizpah there was a place of prayer for Israel.<sup>a</sup> <sup>47</sup> That day they fasted and wore sackcloth; they sprinkled ashes on their heads and tore their garments. <sup>48</sup> They unrolled the scroll of the law, to learn about the things for which the Gentiles consulted the images of their idols.* <sup>49</sup> They brought with them the priestly garments, the first fruits, and the tithes; and they brought forward the nazirites* <sup>b</sup> who had completed the time of their vows. <sup>50</sup> And they cried aloud to Heaven: "What shall we do with these, and where shall we take them? <sup>51</sup> For your sanctuary has been trampled on and profaned, and your priests are in mourning and humbled. <sup>52</sup> Now the Gentiles are gathered together against us to destroy us. You know what they plot against us. <sup>53</sup> How shall we be able to resist them unless you help us?" <sup>54</sup> Then they blew the trumpets and cried out loudly.

<sup>55</sup> After this Judas appointed officers for the people, over thousands, over hundreds, over fifties, and over tens. <sup>56</sup> He proclaimed that those who were building houses, or were just married, or were planting vineyards, and those who were afraid, could each return home, according to the law.<sup>c</sup> <sup>57</sup> Then the army moved off, and they camped to the south of Emmaus. <sup>58</sup> Judas said: "Arm yourselves and be brave; in the morning be ready to fight these Gentiles who have assembled against us to destroy us and our sanctuary. <sup>59</sup> It is better for us to die in battle than to witness the evils befalling our nation and our sanctuary. <sup>60</sup> Whatever is willed in heaven will be done."

CHAPTER 4

See RG 259–64

Victory over Gorgias. <sup>1</sup>Now Gorgias took five thousand infantry and a thousand picked cavalry, and this detachment set out at night <sup>2</sup>in order to fall upon the camp of the Jews in a surprise attack. Some from the citadel were his guides. <sup>3</sup>Judas heard of it and himself set out with his soldiers to attack the king's army at Emmaus <sup>4</sup>while these forces were still scattered away from the camp. <sup>5</sup>During the night Gorgias came into the camp of Judas, and found no one there; so he sought them in the mountains, saying, "They are fleeing from us."

<sup>16</sup>When Judas and the army returned from the pursuit, <sup>17</sup>he said to the people: "Do not be greedy for plunder; for there is a fight ahead of us, <sup>18</sup>and Gorgias and his army are near us on the mountain. But now stand firm against our enemies and fight them. Afterward you can freely take the plunder."

<sup>19</sup>As Judas was finishing this speech, a detachment * appeared, looking down from the mountain. <sup>20</sup>They saw that their army had been put to flight and their camp was burning. The smoke they saw revealed what had happened. <sup>21</sup>When they realized this, they completely lost heart; and when they also saw the army of Judas in the plain ready to attack, <sup>22</sup>they all fled to the land of the foreigners.*

Victory over Lysias. <sup>26g</sup> But those of the foreigners who had escaped went and told Lysias all that had occurred. <sup>27</sup>When he heard it he was disturbed and discouraged, because things had not turned out in Israel as he intended and as the king had ordered.

<sup>28</sup>So the following year he gathered together sixty thousand picked men and five thousand cavalry, to fight them. <sup>29</sup>They came into Idumea and camped at Beth-zur,* and Judas met them with ten thousand men. <sup>30</sup>Seeing that the army was strong, he prayed thus:

<sup>34</sup>Then they engaged in battle, and about five thousand of Lysias’ army fell in hand-to-hand fighting. <sup>35*</sup> When Lysias saw the tide of the battle turning, and the increased boldness of Judas, whose men were ready either to live or to die nobly, he withdrew to Antioch and began to recruit mercenaries so as to return to Judea with greater numbers.<sup>i</sup>

Purification and Rededication of the Temple. <sup>36 j</sup> Then Judas and his brothers said, “Now that our enemies have been crushed, let us go up to purify the sanctuary* and rededicate it.” <sup>37</sup>So the whole army assembled, and went up to Mount Zion. <sup>38</sup>They found the sanctuary desolate, the altar desecrated, the gates burnt, weeds growing in the courts as in a thicket or on some mountain, and the priests’ chambers demolished.<sup>k</sup> <sup>39</sup>Then they tore their garments and made great lamentation; they sprinkled their heads with ashes <sup>40</sup>and prostrated themselves. And when the signal was given with trumpets, they cried out to Heaven.

<sup>60</sup>At that time they built high walls and strong towers around Mount Zion, to prevent the Gentiles from coming and trampling it as they had done before. <sup>61</sup>Judas also placed a garrison there to protect it, and likewise fortified Beth-zur, that the people might have a stronghold facing Idumea.

Victories over Hostile Neighbors.* <sup>1r</sup> When the nations round about heard that the altar had been rebuilt and the sanctuary restored as before, they were enraged. <sup>2</sup>So they decided to destroy the descendants of Jacob who were among them, and they began to kill and eradicate the people. <sup>3s</sup> Then Judas attacked the Edomites* at Akrabattene in Idumea, because they were blockading Israel; he dealt them a heavy blow, humbled and despoiled them. <sup>4</sup>He also remembered the malice of the Baeonites,* who had become a snare and a stumbling block to the people by ambushing them along the roads. <sup>5</sup>He forced them to take refuge in towers, which he besieged; he put them under the ban and burned down their towers along with all who were in them. <sup>6*t</sup> Then he crossed over to the Ammonites, where he found a strong army and a large body of people with Timothy as their leader. <sup>7</sup>He fought many battles with them, routed them, and struck them down. <sup>8</sup>After seizing Jazer and its villages, he returned to Judea.

Liberation of Jews in Galilee and Gilead. <sup>9</sup>The Gentiles in Gilead assembled to destroy the Israelites who were in their territory; these then fled to the stronghold of Dathema.* <sup>10</sup>They sent a letter to Judas and his brothers saying: “The Gentiles around us have assembled against us to destroy us, <sup>11</sup>and they are preparing to come and seize this stronghold to which we have fled. Timothy is the leader of their army. <sup>12</sup>Come at once to rescue us from them, for many of us have fallen. <sup>13</sup>All our kindred who were in the territory of the Tobiads* have been killed; the Gentiles have captured their wives, their children and their goods, and they have slain there about a thousand men.”<sup>u</sup>

<sup>14</sup>While they were reading this letter, suddenly other messengers, with garments torn, arrived from Galilee to deliver a similar message: <sup>15</sup>that “the inhabitants of Ptolemais,* Tyre, and Sidon, and the whole of Gentile Galilee have joined forces to destroy us.” <sup>16</sup>When Judas and the people heard this, a great assembly convened to consider what they should do for their kindred who were in distress and being attacked by enemies.

<sup>17</sup>Judas said to his brother Simon: “Choose men for yourself, and go, rescue your kindred in Galilee; my brother Jonathan and I will go to Gilead.”

<sup>21</sup>Simon went into Galilee and fought many battles with the Gentiles. They were crushed before him, <sup>22</sup>and he pursued them to the very gate of Ptolemais. About three thousand of the Gentiles fell, and he gathered their spoils. <sup>23</sup>He took with him the Jews who were in Galilee and in Arbatta,* with their wives and children and all that they had, and brought them to Judea with great rejoicing.

<sup>28</sup>Thereupon Judas suddenly changed direction with his army, marched across the wilderness to Bozrah, and captured the city. He put every male to the sword, took all their spoils, and set fire to the city. <sup>29*</sup> He led his army from that place by night, and they marched toward the stronghold. <sup>30</sup>When morning came, they looked ahead and saw a countless multitude, with ladders and machines for capturing the stronghold, beginning to attack. <sup>31</sup>When Judas perceived that the struggle had begun and that the noise of the battle was resounding to heaven with trumpet blasts and loud shouting, <sup>32</sup>he said to the men of his army, “Fight for our kindred today.” <sup>33</sup>He came up behind them with three columns blowing their trumpets and crying out in prayer. <sup>34</sup>When the army of Timothy realized that it was Maccabeus, they fled before him, and he inflicted on them a great defeat. About eight thousand of their men fell that day.

<sup>35</sup>Then he turned toward Alema* and attacked and captured it; he killed every male, took spoils, and burned it down. <sup>36</sup>From there he moved on and took Chaspho, Maked, Bosor, and the other cities of Gilead.

<sup>37w</sup> After these events Timothy assembled another army and camped opposite Raphon, on the other side of the wadi. <sup>38</sup>Judas sent men to spy on the camp, and they reported to him: “All the Gentiles around us have rallied to him, making a very large force; <sup>39</sup>they have also hired Arabians to help them, and have camped beyond the wadi, ready to attack you.” So Judas went forward to meet them.

<sup>40</sup>As Judas and his army were approaching the flowing wadi, Timothy said to the officers of his army: “If he crosses over to us first, we shall not be able to resist him; he will certainly defeat us.<sup>x</sup> <sup>41</sup>But if he is hesitant and camps on the other side of the river, we will cross over to him and defeat him.” <sup>42</sup>But when Judas reached the flowing wadi, he stationed the officers of the people beside it and gave them this order: “Do not allow anyone to encamp; all must go into battle.” <sup>43</sup>He was the first to cross to the attack, with all the people behind him, and all the Gentiles were crushed before them. They threw away their arms and fled to the temple enclosure at Carnaim. <sup>44</sup>But Judas’ troops captured the city and burnt the temple enclosure with all who were in it. So Carnaim was subdued, and Judas met with no more resistance.

Return to Jerusalem. <sup>45 y</sup> Then Judas assembled all the Israelites, great and small, who were in Gilead, with their wives and children and their goods, a very large company, to go into the land of Judah. <sup>46</sup>When they reached Ephron,* a large and strongly fortified city along the way, they found it impossible to go around it on either the right or the left; they would have to march right through it.<sup>z</sup> <sup>47</sup>But the people in the city shut them out and blocked up the gates with stones. <sup>48</sup>Then Judas sent them this peaceful message: “Let us cross your territory in order to reach our own; no one will harm you; we will only march through.” But they would not open to him. <sup>49</sup>So Judas ordered a proclamation to be made in the camp that everyone should take up positions where they were. <sup>50</sup>When the men of the army took up their positions, he assaulted the city all that day and night, and it was delivered into his hand. <sup>51</sup>He put every male to the sword, leveled the city, took spoils and passed through it over the slain.

whole way, until he reached the land of Judah. <sup>54</sup>They ascended Mount Zion in joy and gladness and sacrificed burnt offerings, because not one of them had fallen; they had returned in safety.

Joseph and Azariah Defeated. <sup>55</sup>In those days when Judas and Jonathan were in the land of Gilead, and Simon his brother was in Galilee opposite Ptolemais, <sup>56</sup>Joseph, son of Zechariah, and Azariah, the leaders of the army, heard about the brave deeds and the fighting that they were doing. <sup>57</sup>They said, “Let us also make a name for ourselves by going out and fighting against the Gentiles around us.” <sup>58</sup>They gave orders to those of their army who were with them, and marched against Jamnia.* <sup>59</sup>But Gorgias and his men came out of the city to meet them in battle. <sup>60</sup>Joseph and Azariah were routed and were pursued to the frontiers of Judea, and about two thousand Israelites fell that day. <sup>61</sup>It was a great setback for the people, because they had not obeyed Judas and his brothers, thinking that they would do brave deeds. <sup>62</sup>But they were not of the family through whom Israel’s deliverance was given.

Victories at Hebron and Azotus. <sup>63</sup>The valiant Judas and his brothers were greatly honored in all Israel and among all the Gentiles, wherever their name was heard; <sup>64</sup>and people gathered about them and praised them.

<sup>65a</sup> Then Judas and his brothers went out and attacked the Edomites in the land toward the south; he took Hebron and its villages, and he destroyed its strongholds and burned the towers around it. <sup>66</sup>He then set out for the land of the foreigners and passed through Marisa. <sup>67</sup>On that day some priests fell in battle who had gone out rashly to fight in their desire to do brave deeds. <sup>68</sup>Judas then turned toward Azotus in the land of the foreigners. He destroyed their altars and burned the carved images of their gods; and after plundering their cities he returned to the land of Judah.

CHAPTER 6

See RG 259–64

<sup>1b</sup> As King Antiochus passed through the eastern provinces, he heard that in Persia there was a city, Elam, * famous for its wealth in silver and gold, <sup>2</sup>and that its temple was very rich, containing gold helmets, breastplates, and weapons left there by the first king of the Greeks, Alexander, son of Philip, king of Macedon. <sup>3</sup>He went therefore and tried to capture and loot the city. But he could not do so, because his plan became known to the people of the city <sup>4</sup>who rose up in battle against him. So he fled and in great dismay withdrew from there to return to Babylon.

<sup>5</sup>While he was in Persia, a messenger brought him news that the armies that had gone into the land of Judah had been routed; <sup>6</sup>that Lysias had gone at first with a strong army and been driven back; that the people of Judah had grown strong by reason of the arms, wealth, and abundant spoils taken from the armies they had cut down; <sup>7</sup>that they had pulled down the abomination which he had built upon the altar in Jerusalem; and that they had surrounded with high walls both the sanctuary, as it had been before, and his city of Beth-zur. <sup>c</sup>

son Antiochus,* whom he had reared as a child, to be king in his place; and he gave him the title Eupator.<sup>d</sup>

Siege of the Citadel. <sup>18</sup>Those in the citadel were hemming Israel in around the sanctuary, continually trying to harm them and to strengthen the Gentiles.<sup>e</sup> <sup>19</sup>And so Judas planned to destroy them, and assembled the people to besiege them. <sup>20</sup>So in the one hundred and fiftieth year* they assembled and besieged the citadel, for which purpose he constructed platforms and siege engines. <sup>21</sup>But some of the besieged escaped, and some renegade Israelites joined them. <sup>22</sup>They went to the king and said: “How long will you fail to do justice and to avenge our kindred? <sup>23</sup>We agreed to serve your father and to follow his orders and obey his edicts. <sup>24</sup>And for this our own people have become our enemies; they have put to death as many of us as they could find and have seized our inheritances. <sup>25</sup>They have acted aggressively not only against us, but throughout their whole territory. <sup>26</sup>Look! Today they have besieged the citadel in Jerusalem in order to capture it, and they have fortified the sanctuary and Beth-zur. <sup>27</sup>Unless you act quickly to prevent them, they will do even worse things than these, and you will not be able to stop them.”

and never left it. <sup>37</sup>Each elephant was outfitted with a strong wooden tower, fastened to it by a harness; each tower held three soldiers who fought from it, besides the Indian driver. <sup>38</sup>The remaining cavalry were stationed on one or the other of the two flanks of the army, to harass the enemy and to be protected by the phalanxes. <sup>39</sup>When the sun shone on the gold and bronze shields, the mountains gleamed with their brightness and blazed like flaming torches. <sup>40</sup>Part of the king's army spread out along the heights, while some were on low ground, and they marched forward steadily in good order. <sup>41</sup>All who heard the noise of their numbers, the tramp of their marching, and the clanging of the arms, trembled; for the army was very great and strong.

The Siege of Jerusalem. <sup>48</sup>Some of the king's army went up to Jerusalem to attack them, and the king established camps in Judea and at Mount Zion. <sup>49</sup>He made peace with the people of Beth-zur, and they evacuated the city, because they had no food there to enable them to withstand a siege, for that was a sabbath year in the land.* <sup>h</sup> <sup>50</sup>The king took Beth-zur and stationed a garrison there to hold it. <sup>51</sup>For many days he besieged the sanctuary, setting up platforms and siege engines, fire-throwers, catapults and mechanical bows for shooting arrows and projectiles. <sup>52</sup>The defenders countered by setting up siege engines of their own, and kept up the fight a long time. <sup>53</sup>But there were no provisions in the storerooms, because it was the seventh year, and the reserves had been eaten up by those who had been rescued from the Gentiles and brought to Judea. <sup>54</sup>Few men remained in the sanctuary because the famine was too much for them; the rest scattered, each to his own home.

Peace Treaty. <sup>55i</sup> Lysias heard that Philip, whom King Antiochus, before his death, had appointed to train his son Antiochus to be king, <sup>56</sup>had returned from Persia and Media with the army that accompanied the king, and that he was seeking to take over the government. <sup>57</sup>So he hastily decided to withdraw. He said to the king, the leaders of the army, and the soldiers: “We are growing weaker every day, our provisions are scanty, the place we are besieging is strong, and it is our duty to take care of the affairs of the kingdom.” <sup>58</sup>Therefore let us now come to terms with these people and make peace with them and all their nation. <sup>59</sup>Let us grant them freedom to live according to their own laws as formerly; it was on account of their laws, which we abolished, that they became enraged and did all these things.”

<sup>60</sup>The proposal pleased the king and the leaders; he sent peace terms to the Jews, and they accepted. <sup>61</sup>So the king and the leaders swore an oath to them, and on these terms the Jews evacuated the fortification. <sup>62</sup>But when the king entered Mount Zion and saw how the place was fortified, he broke the oath he had sworn and gave orders to tear down the encircling wall. <sup>63</sup>Then he departed in haste and returned to Antioch, where he found Philip in control of the city. He fought against him and took the city by force.

CHAPTER 7

See RG 259–64

Expedition of Bacchides and Alcimus. <sup>1k</sup> In the one hundred and fifty-first year, * Demetrius, son of Seleucus, set out from Rome, arrived with a few men at a coastal city, and began to rule there. <sup>2</sup>As he was entering the royal palace of his ancestors, the soldiers seized Antiochus and Lysias to bring them to him. <sup>3</sup>When he was informed of this, he said, “Do not show me their faces.” <sup>4</sup>So the soldiers killed them, and Demetrius assumed the royal throne.

<sup>5</sup>Then all the lawless men and renegades of Israel came to him. They were led by Alcimus, * who desired to be high priest. <sup>6</sup>They made this accusation to the king against the people: “Judas and his brothers have destroyed all your friends and have driven us out of our land. <sup>7</sup>So now, send a man whom you trust to go and see all the destruction Judas has wrought on us and on the king’s territory, and let him punish them and all their supporters.”

<sup>12</sup>A group of scribes, however, gathered about Alcimus and Bacchides to ask for a just agreement. <sup>13l</sup> The Hasideans were the first among the Israelites to seek peace with them, <sup>14c</sup>for they said, “A priest of the line of Aaron has come with the army, and he will not do us any wrong.” <sup>15</sup>He spoke with them peacefully and swore to them, “We will not seek to injure you or your friends.” <sup>16</sup>So they trusted him. But he arrested sixty of them and killed them in one day, according to the words that he wrote: *

and their blood they have spilled all around about Jerusalem, and no one was left to bury them.” <sup>m</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Then fear and dread of them came upon all the people, who said: “There is no truth or justice among them; they violated the agreement and the oath that they swore.”

<sup>19</sup>Bacchides withdrew from Jerusalem and camped in Beth-zaith.* He had many of the men who deserted to him arrested and some of the people. He killed them and threw them into a great cistern. <sup>20</sup>He handed the province over to Alcimus, leaving troops to help him, while he himself returned to the king.

<sup>21</sup>Alcimus struggled to maintain his high priesthood, <sup>22</sup>and all those who were troubling the people gathered about him. They took possession of the land of Judah and caused great distress in Israel. <sup>23</sup>When Judas saw all the evils that Alcimus and those with him were bringing upon the Israelites, even more than the Gentiles had, <sup>24</sup>he went about all the borders of Judea and took revenge on the men who had deserted, preventing them from going out into the country. <sup>25</sup>But when Alcimus saw that Judas and his followers were gaining strength and realized that he could not resist them, he returned to the king and accused them of grave crimes.

Defeat of Nicanor. <sup>26n</sup> Then the king sent Nicanor, one of his honored officers, who was a bitter enemy of Israel, with orders to destroy the people. <sup>27</sup>Nicanor came to Jerusalem with a large force and deceitfully sent to Judas* and his brothers this peaceable message: <sup>28</sup>“Let there be no fight between me and you. I will come with a few men to meet you face to face in peace.”

<sup>29</sup>So he came to Judas, and they greeted one another peaceably. But Judas’ enemies were prepared to seize him. <sup>30</sup>When he became aware that Nicanor had come to him with deceit in mind, Judas was afraid of him and would not meet him again. <sup>31o</sup>When Nicanor saw that his plan had been discovered, he went out to fight Judas near Capharsalama.* <sup>32</sup>About five hundred men of Nicanor’s army fell; the rest fled to the City of David.*

<sup>33p</sup> After this, Nicanor went up to Mount Zion. Some of the priests from the sanctuary and some of the elders of the people came out to greet him peaceably and to show him the burnt offering that was being sacrificed for the king. <sup>34</sup>But he mocked and ridiculed them, defiled them,* and spoke arrogantly. <sup>35</sup>In a rage he swore: “If Judas and his army are not delivered to me at once, when I return victorious I will burn this temple down.” He went away in great anger. <sup>36q</sup>The priests, however, went in and stood before the altar and the sanctuary. They wept and said: <sup>37</sup>“You have chosen this house to bear your name, to be a house of prayer and supplication for your people. <sup>38</sup>Take revenge on this man and his army, and let them fall by the sword. Remember their blasphemies, and do not let them continue.”

Eulogy of the Romans. <sup>1*</sup> Judas had heard of the reputation of the Romans. They were valiant fighters and acted amiably to all who took their side. They established a friendly alliance with all who applied to them. <sup>2</sup>He was also told of their battles and the brave deeds that they performed against the Gauls,* conquering them and forcing them to pay tribute; <sup>3</sup>and what they did in Spain to get possession of the silver and gold mines there. <sup>4</sup>By planning and persistence they subjugated the whole region, although it was very remote from their own. They also subjugated the kings who had come against them from the far corners of the earth until they crushed them and inflicted on them severe defeat. The rest paid tribute to them every year. <sup>5</sup>Philip* and Perseus, king of the Macedonians, and the others who opposed them in battle they overwhelmed and subjugated. <sup>6</sup>Antiochus* the Great, king of Asia, who fought against them with a hundred and twenty elephants and with cavalry and chariots and a very great army, was defeated by them. <sup>7</sup>They took him alive and obliged him and the kings who succeeded him to pay a heavy tribute, to give hostages and to cede <sup>8</sup>Lycia, Mysia, and Lydia* from among their best provinces. The Romans took these from him and gave them to King Eumenes. <sup>9*</sup>When the Greeks planned to come and destroy them, <sup>10</sup>the Romans discovered it, and sent against the Greeks a single general who made war on them. Many were wounded and fell, and the Romans took their wives and children captive. They plundered them, took possession of their land, tore down their strongholds and reduced them to slavery even to this day. <sup>11</sup>All the other kingdoms and islands that had ever opposed them they destroyed and enslaved; with their friends, however, and those who relied on them, they maintained friendship. <sup>12</sup>They subjugated kings both near and far, and all who heard of their fame were afraid of them. <sup>13</sup>Those whom they wish to help and to make kings, they make kings; and those whom they wish, they depose; and they were greatly exalted. <sup>14</sup>Yet with all this, none of them put on a diadem or wore purple as a display of grandeur. <sup>15</sup>But they made for themselves a senate chamber, and every day three hundred and twenty men took counsel, deliberating on all that concerned the people and their well-being. <sup>16</sup>They entrust their government to one man* every year, to rule over their entire land, and they all obey that one, and there is no envy or jealousy among them.

Treaty with the Romans. <sup>17</sup>So Judas chose Eupolemus, son of John, son of Accos, and Jason, son of Eleazar, and sent them to Rome to establish friendship and alliance with them.<sup>u</sup> <sup>18</sup>He did this to lift the yoke from Israel, for it was obvious that the kingdom of the Greeks was subjecting them to slavery. <sup>19</sup>After making a very long journey to Rome, the envoys entered the senate chamber and spoke as follows: <sup>20</sup>“Judas, called Maccabeus, and his brothers, with the Jewish people, have sent us to you to establish alliance and peace with you, and to be enrolled among your allies and friends.” <sup>21</sup>The proposal pleased the Romans, <sup>22</sup>and this is a copy of the reply they inscribed on bronze tablets and sent to Jerusalem,* to remain there with the Jews as a record of peace and alliance:<sup>v</sup>

<sup>23</sup>“May it be well with the Romans and the Jewish nation at sea and on land forever; may sword and enemy be far from them. <sup>24</sup>But if war is first made on Rome, or any of its allies in any of their dominions, <sup>25</sup>the Jewish nation will fight along with them wholeheartedly, as the occasion shall demand; <sup>26</sup>and to those who wage war they shall not give or provide grain, weapons, money, or ships, as seems best to Rome. They shall fulfill their obligations without receiving any recompense. <sup>27</sup>In the same way, if war is made first on the Jewish nation, the Romans will fight along with them willingly, as the occasion shall demand, <sup>28</sup>and to those who attack them there shall not be given grain, weapons, money, or ships, as seems best to Rome. They shall fulfill their obligations without deception. <sup>29</sup>On these terms the Romans have made an agreement with the Jewish people. <sup>30</sup>But if both parties hereafter agree to add or take away anything, they shall do as they choose, and whatever they shall add or take away shall be valid.

<sup>31</sup>“Moreover, concerning the wrongs that King Demetrius is doing to them, we have written to him thus: ‘Why have you made your yoke heavy upon our friends and allies the Jews? <sup>32</sup>If they petition against you again, we will enforce justice and make war on you by sea and land.’ ”

Death of Judas. <sup>1</sup>When Demetrius heard that Nicanor and his army had fallen in battle, he again sent Bacchides and Alcimus into the land of Judah, along with the right wing of his army. <sup>2</sup>They took the road to Galilee, and camping opposite the ascent at Arbela, they captured it* and killed many people. <sup>3</sup>In the first month of the one hundred and fifty-second year,* they encamped against Jerusalem. <sup>4</sup>Then they set out for Berea with twenty thousand men and two thousand cavalry. <sup>5</sup>Judas, with three thousand picked men, had camped at Elasa. <sup>6</sup>When they saw the great number of the troops, they were very much afraid, and many slipped away from the camp, until only eight hundred of them remained.

<sup>7</sup>When Judas saw that his army was melting away just as the battle was imminent, he was brokenhearted, because he had no time to gather them together. <sup>8</sup>In spite of his discouragement he said to those who remained: “Let us go forward to meet our enemies; perhaps we can put up a good fight against them.” <sup>9</sup>They tried to dissuade him, saying: “We certainly cannot. Let us save our own lives now, and come back with our kindred, and then fight against them. Now we are too few.” <sup>10</sup>But Judas said: “Far be it from me to do such a thing as to flee from them! If our time has come, let us die bravely for our kindred and not leave a stain upon our honor!”

III. Leadership of Jonathan

Jonathan Succeeds Judas. <sup>23</sup>After the death of Judas, the lawless raised their heads in every part of Israel, and all kinds of evildoers appeared. <sup>24</sup>In those days there was a very great famine, and the country deserted to them. <sup>25</sup>Bacchides chose renegades and made them masters of the country. <sup>26</sup>These sought out and hunted down the friends of Judas and brought them to Bacchides, who punished and derided them. <sup>27</sup>There was great tribulation in Israel, the like of which had not been since the time prophets ceased to appear among them.

<sup>28</sup>Then all the friends of Judas came together and said to Jonathan: <sup>29</sup>“Ever since your brother Judas died, there has been no one like him to lead us against our enemies, both Bacchides and those of our nation who are hostile to us. <sup>30</sup>Now therefore we have chosen you today to be our ruler and leader in his place, to fight our battle.” <sup>31</sup>From that moment Jonathan accepted the leadership, and took the place of Judas his brother.

Bacchides Pursues Jonathan. <sup>32</sup>When Bacchides learned of it, he sought to kill him. <sup>33</sup>But Jonathan and his brother Simon and all who were with him discovered this, and they fled to the wilderness of Tekoa* and camped by the waters of the pool of Asphar. [<sup>34</sup>]*

are bringing the bride, the daughter of one of the great princes of Canaan, from Nadabath.” <sup>38</sup>Remembering the blood of John their brother, they went up and hid themselves under cover of the mountain. <sup>39</sup>As they watched there appeared a noisy throng with much baggage; then the bridegroom and his friends and kinsmen had come out to meet them with tambourines and musicians with their instruments. <sup>40</sup>Jonathan and his party rose up against them from their ambush and killed them. Many fell wounded; the rest fled toward the mountain; all their spoils were taken. <sup>41</sup>Thus the wedding was turned into mourning, and the sound of their music into lamentation. <sup>42</sup>Having taken their revenge for the blood of their brother, they returned to the marshes of the Jordan.

<sup>43</sup>When Bacchides heard of it, he came on the sabbath to the banks of the Jordan with a large force. <sup>44</sup>Then Jonathan said to his companions, “Let us rise up now and fight for our lives, for today is not like yesterday and the day before. <sup>45</sup>The battle is before us, behind us are the waters of the Jordan, on either side of us, marsh and thickets; there is no way of escape.” <sup>46</sup>Cry out now to Heaven so that you may be delivered from the hand of our enemies.” <sup>47</sup>When they joined battle, Jonathan raised his hand to strike Bacchides, but Bacchides backed away from him. <sup>48</sup>Jonathan and those with him jumped into the Jordan and swam across to the other side, but the enemy did not pursue them across the Jordan. <sup>49</sup>About a thousand men on Bacchides’ side fell that day.

agony at that time. <sup>57</sup>Seeing that Alcimus was dead, Bacchides returned to the king, and the land of Judah was at rest for two years.

<sup>58</sup>Then all the lawless took counsel and said: "Jonathan and those with him are living in peace and security. Now then, let us have Bacchides return, and he will capture all of them in a single night." <sup>59</sup>So they went and took counsel with him. <sup>60</sup>When Bacchides was setting out with a large force, he sent letters secretly to all his allies in Judea, telling them to seize Jonathan and his companions. They were not able to do this, however, because their plan became known. <sup>61</sup>In fact, Jonathan's men seized about fifty of the men of the country who were leaders in the conspiracy and put them to death.

<sup>70</sup>Jonathan learned of this and sent ambassadors to agree on peace with him and to obtain the release of the prisoners. <sup>71</sup>He agreed to do as Jonathan asked. He swore an oath to him that he would never try to do him any harm for the rest of his life; <sup>72</sup>and he released to him the prisoners he had previously taken from the land of Judah. Thereupon he returned to his own land and never came into their territory again. <sup>73</sup>Then the sword ceased from Israel. Jonathan settled in Michmash;* he began to judge the people and he eliminated the renegades from Israel.

CHAPTER 10

Jonathan Becomes High Priest. <sup>1</sup>In the one hundred and sixtieth year,* Alexander Epiphanes, son of Antiochus, came up and took Ptolemais. They accepted him as king and he began to reign there. <sup>2</sup>When King Demetrius heard of it, he mustered a very large army and marched out to engage him in battle. <sup>3</sup>Demetrius sent a letter to Jonathan written in peaceful terms, to exalt him; <sup>4</sup>for he said: “Let us be the first to make peace with him, before he makes peace with Alexander against us, <sup>5</sup>since he will remember all the wrongs we have done to him, his brothers, and his nation.”

<sup>6</sup>So Demetrius authorized him to gather an army and procure arms as his ally; and he ordered that the hostages in the citadel be released to him. <sup>7</sup>Accordingly Jonathan went to Jerusalem and read the letter to all the people and to those who were in the citadel. <sup>8</sup>They were struck with fear when they heard that the king had given him authority to gather an army. <sup>9</sup>Those in the citadel released the hostages to Jonathan, and he gave them back to their parents.<sup>z</sup> <sup>10</sup>Thereafter Jonathan dwelt in Jerusalem, and began to build and restore the city. <sup>11</sup>He ordered those doing the work to build the walls and to encircle Mount Zion with square stones for its fortification, and they did so. <sup>12</sup>The foreigners in the strongholds that Bacchides had built took flight; <sup>13</sup>all of them left their places and returned to their own lands. <sup>14</sup>Only in Beth-zur did some remain of those who had abandoned the law and the commandments, for it was a place of refuge.

<sup>15</sup>King Alexander heard of the promises that Demetrius had made to Jonathan; he was also told of the battles and brave deeds of Jonathan and his brothers and of the troubles that they had endured. <sup>16</sup>He said, “Shall we ever find another man like him? Let us now make him our friend and ally.” <sup>17</sup>So he sent Jonathan a letter written in these terms: <sup>18</sup>“King Alexander sends greetings to his brother Jonathan. <sup>19</sup>We have heard of you, that you are a mighty warrior and worthy to be our friend. <sup>20</sup>We have therefore appointed you today to be high priest of your nation; you are to be called the King’s Friend, and you are to look after our interests and preserve friendship with us.” He also sent him a purple robe and a crown of gold.<sup>a</sup> <sup>21</sup>Jonathan put on the sacred vestments in the seventh month of the one hundred and sixtieth year at the feast of Booths,* and he gathered an army and procured many weapons.

A Letter from Demetrius to Jonathan. <sup>22</sup>When Demetrius heard of these things, he was distressed and said: <sup>23</sup>“Why have we allowed Alexander to get ahead of us by gaining the friendship of the Jews and thus strengthening himself? <sup>24</sup>I too will write them encouraging words and offer honors and gifts, so that they may support me.” <sup>25</sup>So he sent them this message: “King Demetrius sends greetings to the Jewish nation. <sup>26</sup>We have heard how you have kept the treaty with us and continued in our friendship and not gone over to our enemies, and we are glad. <sup>27</sup>Continue, therefore, to keep faith with us, and we will reward you with favors in return for what you do in our behalf. <sup>28</sup>We will grant you many exemptions and will bestow gifts on you.

<sup>29b</sup> “I now free you and exempt all the Jews from the tribute, the salt tax, and the crown levies. <sup>30</sup>Instead of collecting the third of the grain and the half of the fruit of the trees that should be my share, I renounce the right from this day forward. Neither now nor in the future will I collect them from the land of Judah or from the three districts annexed from Samaria.* <sup>31</sup>Let Jerusalem and her territory, her tithes and her tolls, be sacred and free from tax. <sup>32</sup>I also yield my authority over the citadel in Jerusalem, and I transfer it to the high priest, that he may put in it such men as he shall choose to guard it. <sup>33</sup>Every Jew who has been carried into captivity from the land of Judah into any part of my kingdom I set at liberty without ransom; and let all their taxes, even those on their cattle, be canceled.

<sup>34</sup>Let all feast days, sabbaths, new moon festivals, appointed days, and the three days that precede each feast day, and the three days that follow, be days of immunity and exemption for all Jews in my kingdom. <sup>35</sup>No one will have authority to exact payment from them or to harass any of them in any matter.

<sup>36</sup>“Let thirty thousand Jews be enrolled in the king’s army and allowances be given them, as is due to all the king’s soldiers. <sup>37</sup>Let some of them be stationed in the king’s principal strongholds, and of these let some be given positions of trust in the affairs of the kingdom. Let their superiors and their rulers be chosen from among them, and let them follow their own laws, as the king has commanded in the land of Judah.

<sup>38</sup>“Let the three districts that have been added to Judea from the province of Samaria be annexed to Judea so that they may be under one rule and obey no other authority than the high priest. <sup>39</sup>Ptolemais and its confines I give as a present to the sanctuary in Jerusalem for the necessary expenses of the sanctuary. <sup>40</sup>I make a yearly personal grant of fifteen thousand silver shekels out of the royal revenues, taken from appropriate places. <sup>41</sup>All the additional funds that the officials did not hand over as they had done in the first years shall henceforth be handed over for the services of the temple. <sup>42</sup>Moreover, the dues of five thousand silver shekels that used to be taken from the revenue of the sanctuary every year shall be canceled, since these funds belong to the priests who perform the services. <sup>43</sup>All who take refuge in the temple of Jerusalem or in any of its precincts, because of money they owe the king, or because of any other debt, shall be released, together with all the goods they possess in my kingdom. <sup>44</sup>The cost of rebuilding and restoring the structures of the sanctuary shall be covered out of the royal revenue. <sup>45</sup>Likewise the cost of building the walls of Jerusalem and fortifying it all around, and of building walls in Judea, shall be donated from the royal revenue.”

<sup>46</sup>When Jonathan and the people heard these words, they neither believed nor accepted them, for they remembered the great evil that Demetrius had done in Israel, and the great tribulation he had brought upon them. <sup>47</sup>They therefore decided in favor of Alexander, for he had been the first to address them peaceably, and they remained his allies for the rest of his life.

Treaty of Ptolemy and Alexander. <sup>51</sup>Alexander sent ambassadors to Ptolemy, king of Egypt, with this message: <sup>52</sup>“Now that I have returned to my realm, taken my seat on the throne of my ancestors, and established my rule by crushing Demetrius and gaining control of my country— <sup>53</sup>for I engaged him in battle, he and his army were crushed by us, and we assumed his royal throne— <sup>54</sup>let us now establish friendship with each other. Give me now your daughter for my wife; and as your son-in-law, I will give to you and to her gifts worthy of you.”

<sup>55</sup>King Ptolemy answered in these words: “Happy the day on which you returned to the land of your ancestors and took your seat on their royal throne! <sup>56</sup>I will do for you what you have written; but meet me in Ptolemais, so that we may see each other, and I will become your father-in-law as you have proposed.”

<sup>59</sup>King Alexander also wrote to Jonathan to come and meet him. <sup>60</sup>So he went with pomp to Ptolemais, where he met the two kings and gave them and their friends silver and gold and many gifts and thus won their favor.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>61</sup>Some villainous men of Israel, transgressors of the law, united against him to accuse him, but the king paid no heed to them. <sup>62</sup>The king ordered Jonathan to be divested of his garments and to be clothed in royal purple; and so it was done. <sup>63</sup>The king also had him seated at his side. He said to his magistrates: “Go with him to the center of the city and make a proclamation that no one is to bring charges against him on any grounds or be troublesome to him for any reason.” <sup>64d</sup> When his accusers saw the honor paid to him according to the king’s proclamation, and him clothed in purple, they all fled. <sup>65</sup>And so the king honored him, enrolling him among his Chief Friends, and he made him governor and chief of the province. <sup>66</sup>So Jonathan returned in peace and happiness to Jerusalem.

Jonathan Defeats Apollonius. <sup>67</sup>In the one hundred and sixty-fifth year,* Demetrius, son of Demetrius, came from Crete to the land of his ancestors. <sup>68</sup>When King Alexander heard of it he was greatly troubled, and returned to Antioch. <sup>69</sup>Demetrius set Apollonius over Coelesyria.* Having gathered a large army, Apollonius encamped at Jamnia. From there he sent this message to Jonathan the high priest:

<sup>70</sup>“You are the only one who resists us. I am laughed at and put to shame on your account. Why are you exercising authority against us in the mountains? <sup>71</sup>If you have confidence in your forces, come down now to us in the plain, and let us test each other's strength there; for the forces of the cities are on my side. <sup>72</sup>Inquire and find out who I am and who the others are who are helping me. People are saying that you cannot make a stand against us because your ancestors were twice put to flight* in their own land. <sup>73</sup>Now you too will be unable to withstand our cavalry and such a force as this in the plain, where there is not a stone or a pebble or a place to flee."

<sup>77</sup>When Apollonius heard of it, he drew up three thousand cavalry and a large force of infantry. He marched toward Azotus as though he were going on through, but at the same time he was advancing into the plain, because he had such a large number of cavalry to rely on. <sup>78</sup>Jonathan pursued him toward Azotus, and the armies engaged in battle. <sup>79</sup>Apollonius, however, had left a thousand cavalry in hiding behind them. <sup>80</sup>Jonathan discovered that there was an ambush behind him; his army was surrounded. From morning until evening they showered his troops with arrows. <sup>81</sup>But his troops held their ground, as Jonathan had commanded, while the enemy's horses became tired out.

<sup>86</sup>Then Jonathan left there and encamped at Askalon, and the people of that city came out to meet him with great pomp. <sup>87</sup>Jonathan and those with him then returned to Jerusalem, with much spoil. <sup>88</sup>When King Alexander heard of these events, he accorded new honors to Jonathan. <sup>89</sup>He sent him a gold buckle, such as is usually given to King's Kinsmen; * he also gave him Ekron and all its territory as a possession.

CHAPTER 11

See RG 259–64

Alliance of Ptolemy and Demetrius II. <sup>1</sup>Then the king of Egypt gathered forces as numerous as the sands of the seashore, and many ships; and he sought by deceit to take Alexander's kingdom and add it to his own. <sup>2</sup>He set out for Syria with peaceful words, and the people in the cities opened their gates to welcome him, as King Alexander had ordered them to do, since Ptolemy was his father-in-law. <sup>3</sup>But when Ptolemy entered the cities, he stationed a garrison of troops in each one.

<sup>4</sup>As they neared Azotus, they showed him the temple of Dagon destroyed by fire, Azotus and its suburbs demolished, corpses lying about, and the charred bodies of those burned in the war, for they had heaped them up along his route.<sup>f</sup> <sup>5</sup>They told the king what Jonathan had done in order to denigrate him; but the king said nothing. <sup>6</sup>Jonathan met the king with pomp at Joppa, and they greeted each other and spent the night there. <sup>7</sup>Jonathan accompanied the king as far as the river called Eleutherus* and then returned to Jerusalem.

<sup>8</sup>And so King Ptolemy took possession of the cities along the seacoast as far as Seleucia by the sea,* plotting evil schemes against Alexander all the while. <sup>9</sup>He sent ambassadors to King Demetrius, saying: "Come, let us make a covenant with each other; I will give you my daughter whom Alexander has married, and you shall reign over your father's kingdom. <sup>10</sup>I regret that I gave him my daughter, for he has sought to kill me."*<sup>11</sup>He was criticizing Alexander, however, because he coveted his kingdom. <sup>12</sup>After taking his daughter away, Ptolemy gave her to Demetrius and broke with Alexander; the enmity between them was now evident. <sup>13</sup>Then Ptolemy entered Antioch and assumed the crown* of Asia; thus he set upon his head two crowns, that of Egypt and that of Asia.

<sup>14</sup>Now King Alexander was in Cilicia at that time, because the people of that region had revolted. <sup>15</sup>When Alexander heard the news, he came against Ptolemy in battle. Ptolemy marched out and met him with a strong force and routed him. <sup>16</sup>When Alexander fled to Arabia to seek protection, King Ptolemy was triumphant. <sup>17</sup>Zabdiel the Arabian cut off Alexander's head and sent it to Ptolemy. <sup>18</sup>But three days later King Ptolemy himself died, and his troops in the strongholds were killed by the inhabitants of the strongholds. <sup>19</sup>Thus Demetrius became king in the one hundred and sixty-seventh year.*

Alliance of Jonathan and Demetrius II. <sup>20</sup>In those days Jonathan gathered together the people of Judea to attack the citadel in Jerusalem, and they set up many siege engines against it. <sup>21</sup>But some transgressors of the law, enemies of their own nation, went to the king and informed him that Jonathan was besieging the citadel. <sup>22</sup>When Demetrius heard this, he was enraged; and as soon as he heard it, he set out and came to Ptolemais. He wrote to Jonathan to discontinue the siege and to meet him for a conference at Ptolemais as soon as possible.

<sup>30h</sup> “King Demetrius sends greetings to his brother* Jonathan and to the Jewish nation. <sup>31</sup>We are sending you, for your information, a copy of the letter that we wrote to Lasthenes* our Kinsman concerning you. <sup>32</sup>‘King Demetrius sends greetings to his father Lasthenes. <sup>33</sup>Upon the Jewish nation, who are our friends and observe their obligations to us, we have decided to bestow benefits because of the good will they show us. <sup>34i</sup> Therefore we confirm their possession, not only of the territory of Judea, but also of the three districts of Aphairema,* Lydda, and Ramathaim. These districts, together with all their dependencies, are hereby transferred from Samaria to Judea for those who offer sacrifices in Jerusalem in lieu of the royal taxes the king used to receive yearly from the produce of earth and trees. <sup>35</sup>From payment of the other things that would henceforth be due to us, namely, the tithes and taxes, as well as the salt tax, and the crown tax—from all these we grant them release. <sup>36</sup>Henceforth and forever not one of these provisions shall ever be revoked. <sup>37</sup>See to it, therefore, that a copy of these instructions be made and given to Jonathan. Let it be displayed on the holy mountain in a conspicuous place.’ ”

The Intrigue of Trypho. <sup>38</sup>When King Demetrius saw that the land was peaceful under his rule and that he had no opposition, he dismissed his entire army, each to his own home, except the foreign troops which he had hired from the islands of the nations. So all the soldiers who had served under his predecessors became hostile to him. <sup>39</sup>When a certain Trypho, who had previously supported Alexander, saw that all the troops were grumbling against Demetrius, he went to Imalkue the Arabian, who was raising Alexander’s young son Antiochus.<sup>j40</sup> Trypho kept urging Imalkue to hand over the boy to him, so that he might succeed his father as king. He told him of all that Demetrius had done and of the hostility his soldiers had for him; and he remained there for many days.

Jonathan Aids Demetrius II. <sup>41</sup>Meanwhile Jonathan sent the request to King Demetrius to withdraw the troops in the citadel from Jerusalem and from the other strongholds, for they were constantly waging war on Israel. <sup>42</sup>Demetrius, in turn, sent this word to Jonathan: “I will do not only this for you and your nation, but I will greatly honor you and your nation when I find the opportunity. <sup>43</sup>Now, therefore, you will do well to send men to fight for me, because all my troops have revolted.”

their weapons and made peace. The Jews thus gained honor in the eyes of the king and all his subjects, and they became renowned throughout his kingdom. Finally they returned to Jerusalem with much plunder.

<sup>52</sup>But when King Demetrius was sure of his royal throne, and the land was peaceful under his rule, <sup>53</sup>he broke all his promises and became estranged from Jonathan. Instead of repaying Jonathan for all the favors he had received from him, he caused him much distress.

Alliance of Jonathan and Antiochus VI. <sup>54</sup>After this, Trypho returned and brought with him the young boy Antiochus, who became king and put on the diadem.<sup>k</sup> <sup>55</sup>All the soldiers whom Demetrius had discharged rallied around Antiochus and fought against Demetrius, who was routed and fled. <sup>56</sup>Trypho captured the elephants and occupied Antioch. <sup>57</sup>Then young Antiochus wrote to Jonathan: "I confirm you in the high priesthood and appoint you ruler over the four districts, and to be one of the King's Friends." <sup>58</sup>He also sent him gold dishes and a table service, gave him the right to drink from gold cups, to dress in royal purple, and to wear a gold buckle.<sup>l</sup> <sup>59</sup>Likewise, he made Jonathan's brother Simon governor of the region from the Ladder of Tyre* to the borders of Egypt.

Campaigns of Jonathan and Simon. <sup>60</sup>Jonathan set out and traveled through the province of West-of-Euphrates* and its cities, and all the forces of Syria espoused his cause as allies. When he arrived at Askalon, the citizens welcomed him with pomp. <sup>61</sup>But when he set out for Gaza, the people of Gaza shut him out. So he besieged it, and burned and plundered its suburbs. <sup>62</sup>Then the people of Gaza appealed to Jonathan, and he granted them terms of peace. He took the sons of their leaders as hostages and sent them to Jerusalem. He then traveled on through the province as far as Damascus.

Alliances with Rome and Sparta. <sup>1</sup>When Jonathan saw that the time was right, he chose men and sent them to Rome to confirm and renew the friendship with the Romans.<sup>n</sup> <sup>2</sup>He also sent letters to the Spartans and other places to the same effect.

<sup>3</sup>After reaching Rome, the men entered the senate chamber and said, “The high priest Jonathan and the Jewish people have sent us to renew the friendship and alliance of earlier times with them.” <sup>4</sup>The Romans gave them letters addressed to authorities in various places, with the request to provide them with safe conduct to the land of Judah.

<sup>6</sup>“Jonathan the high priest, the senate of the nation, the priests, and the rest of the Jewish people send greetings to their brothers the Spartans. <sup>7</sup>Long ago a letter was sent* to the high priest Onias from Arius, who then reigned over you, stating that you are our brothers, as the attached copy shows.<sup>o</sup>
<sup>8</sup>Onias welcomed the envoy with honor and received the letter, which spoke clearly of alliance and friendship. <sup>9</sup>Though we have no need of these things, since we have for our encouragement the holy books that are in our possession,* <sup>p</sup> <sup>10</sup>we have ventured to send word to you for the renewal of brotherhood and friendship, lest we become strangers to you; a long time has passed since you sent your message to us. <sup>11</sup>We, on our part, have unceasingly remembered you in the sacrifices and prayers that we offer on our feasts and other appropriate days, as it is right and proper to remember brothers. <sup>12</sup>We likewise rejoice in your renown. <sup>13</sup>But many tribulations and many wars have beset us, and the kings around us have attacked us. <sup>14</sup>We did not wish to be troublesome to you and to the rest of our allies and friends in these wars. <sup>15</sup>For we have the help of Heaven for our support, and we have been saved from our enemies, and our enemies have been humbled. <sup>16</sup>So we have chosen Numenius, son of Antiochus, and Antipater, son of Jason, and we have sent them to the Romans to renew with them the friendship and alliance of earlier times.<sup>q</sup> <sup>17</sup>We have also ordered them to come to you and greet you, and to deliver to you our letter concerning the renewal of our brotherhood. <sup>18</sup>Therefore kindly send us an answer on this matter.”

More Campaigns of Jonathan and Simon. <sup>24</sup>Then Jonathan heard that the officers of Demetrius had returned to attack him with a stronger army than before. <sup>25</sup>So he set out from Jerusalem and met them in the territory of Hamath,* giving them no opportunity to enter his province. <sup>26</sup>The spies he had sent into their camp came back and reported to him that the enemy were preparing to attack them that night. <sup>27</sup>Therefore, when the sun set, Jonathan ordered his men to keep watch, with their weapons at the ready for battle, throughout the night; and he set outposts around the camp. <sup>28</sup>When the enemy heard that Jonathan and his men were ready for battle, their hearts sank with fear and dread. They lighted fires in their camp and then withdrew. <sup>29</sup>But because Jonathan and his men were watching the campfires burning, they did not know until the morning what had happened. <sup>30</sup>Then Jonathan pursued them, but he could not overtake them, for they had crossed the river Eleutherus. <sup>31</sup>So Jonathan turned aside against the Arabians who are called Zabadeans, and he struck them down and plundered them. <sup>32</sup>Then he broke camp, marched on toward Damascus and traveled through the whole region.

<sup>33</sup>Simon also set out and traveled as far as Askalon and its neighboring strongholds. He then turned to Joppa and took it by surprise, <sup>34r</sup>for he heard that its people intended to hand over the stronghold to the supporters of Demetrius. He left a garrison there to guard it.

<sup>35</sup>When Jonathan returned, he assembled the elders of the people, and with them he made plans for building strongholds in Judea, <sup>36r</sup>for making the walls of Jerusalem still higher, and for erecting a high barrier between the citadel and the city, to separate it from the city and isolate it, so that its garrison could neither buy nor sell. <sup>37</sup>The people therefore gathered together to build up the city, for part of the wall of the eastern valley had collapsed. And Jonathan repaired the quarter called Chaphenatha. <sup>38</sup>Simon likewise built up Adida in the Shephelah, and fortified it by installing gates and bars.

Capture of Jonathan. <sup>39</sup>Then Trypho sought to become king of Asia, assume the diadem, and do violence to King Antiochus.<sup>s</sup> <sup>40</sup>But he was afraid that Jonathan would not permit him, but would fight against him. Looking for a way to seize and kill him, he set out and came to Beth-shan. <sup>41</sup>Jonathan marched out to meet him with forty thousand picked fighting men and came to Beth-shan. <sup>42</sup>But when Trypho saw that Jonathan had arrived with a large army he was afraid to do him violence. <sup>43</sup>Instead, he received him with honor, introduced him to all his friends, and gave him presents. He also ordered his friends and soldiers to obey him as they would himself. <sup>44</sup>Then he said to Jonathan: “Why have you put all these people to so much trouble when we are not at war? <sup>45</sup>Now pick out a few men to stay with you, send the rest to their homes, and then come with me to Ptolemais. I will hand it over to you together with other strongholds and the remaining troops, as well as all the officials; then I will turn back and go home. That is why I came here.”

<sup>46</sup>Jonathan trusted him and did as he said. He dismissed his troops, and they returned to the land of Judah. <sup>47</sup>But he kept with him three thousand men, of whom he left two thousand in Galilee while one thousand accompanied him. <sup>48</sup>Then as soon as Jonathan entered Ptolemais, the people of Ptolemais closed the gates and seized him; all who had entered with him, they killed with the sword.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>49</sup>Then Trypho sent soldiers and cavalry to Galilee and the Great Plain* to destroy all Jonathan’s men. <sup>50</sup>These, upon learning that Jonathan had been captured and killed along with his companions, encouraged one another and went out in close formation, ready to fight. <sup>51</sup>As their pursuers saw that they were ready to fight for their lives, they turned back. <sup>52</sup>Thus all Jonathan’s men came safely into the land of Judah. They mourned Jonathan and those who were with him. They were in great fear, and all Israel fell into deep mourning. <sup>53</sup>All the nations round about sought to crush them. They said, “Now that they have no leader or helper, let us make war on them and wipe out their memory from the earth.”<sup>u</sup>

IV. Leadership of Simon

CHAPTER 13

See RG 259–64

Simon as Leader. <sup>1</sup>When Simon heard that Trypho was gathering a large army to invade and ravage the land of Judah, <sup>2</sup>and saw that the people were trembling with terror, he went up to Jerusalem. There he assembled the people <sup>3</sup>and exhorted them in these words: “You know what I, my brothers, and my father’s house have done for the laws and the sanctuary; what battles and hardships we have seen. <sup>4</sup>For the sake of this, for the sake of Israel, all my brothers have perished, and I alone am left. <sup>5</sup>Far be it from me, then, to save my own life in any time of distress, for I am not better than my brothers. <sup>6</sup>But I will avenge my nation and the sanctuary, as well as your wives and children, for out of hatred all the Gentiles have united to crush us.”<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>As the people heard these words, their spirit was rekindled. <sup>8</sup>They shouted in reply: “You are our leader in place of your brothers Judas and Jonathan. <sup>9</sup>Fight our battles, and we will do everything that you tell us.” <sup>10</sup>So Simon mustered all the men able to fight, and hastening to complete the walls of Jerusalem, fortified it on every side. <sup>11</sup>He sent Jonathan, son of Absalom, to Joppa with a strong force; Jonathan drove out the occupants and remained there.

Trypho’s Deceit. <sup>12</sup>Then Trypho moved from Ptolemais with a large army to invade the land of Judah, bringing Jonathan with him as a prisoner. <sup>13</sup>Simon encamped at Adida, facing the plain. <sup>14</sup>When Trypho learned that Simon had succeeded his brother Jonathan, and that he intended to fight him, he sent ambassadors to him with this message: <sup>15</sup>“It was on account of the money your brother Jonathan owed the royal treasury in connection with the offices that he held, that we have detained him. <sup>16</sup>Now send a hundred talents of silver, and two of his sons as hostages to guarantee that when he is set free he will not revolt against us, and we will release him.”

<sup>17</sup>Simon knew that they were speaking deceitfully to him. Nevertheless, for fear of provoking much hostility among the people, he sent for the money and the boys, <sup>18</sup>lest the people say “Jonathan perished because I would not send Trypho the money and the boys.” <sup>19</sup>So he sent the boys and the hundred talents; but Trypho broke his promise and would not release Jonathan.

<sup>20*</sup> Next Trypho moved to invade and ravage the country. His troops went around by the road that leads to Adora, but Simon and his army moved along opposite him everywhere he went. <sup>21</sup>The people in the citadel kept sending emissaries to Trypho, pressing him to come to them by way of the wilderness, and to send them provisions. <sup>22</sup>Although Trypho got all his cavalry ready to go, there was a very heavy snowfall that night, and he could not go on account of the snow. So he left for Gilead. <sup>23</sup>When he was approaching Baskama,* he had Jonathan killed and buried him there. <sup>24</sup>Then Trypho returned to his own land.

Jonathan's Tomb. <sup>25</sup>Simon sent for the remains of his brother Jonathan, and buried him in Modein, the city of his ancestors. <sup>26</sup>All Israel bewailed him with solemn lamentation, mourning over him for many days. <sup>27</sup>Then Simon erected over the tomb of his father and his brothers a monument of stones, polished front and back, and raised high enough to be seen at a distance. <sup>28</sup>He set up seven pyramids facing one another for his father and his mother and his four brothers.<sup>w</sup> <sup>29</sup>For the pyramids he devised a setting of massive columns, which he adorned with suits of armor as a perpetual memorial, and next to the armor carved ships, which could be seen by all who sailed the sea. <sup>30</sup>This tomb which he built at Modein is there to the present day.

<sup>36</sup>“King Demetrius sends greetings to Simon, high priest and friend of kings, and to the elders and the Jewish people. <sup>37</sup>We have received the gold crown and the palm branch that you sent. We are ready to make a lasting peace with you and to write to our officials to grant you exemption.

<sup>38</sup>Whatever decrees we have made in your regard remain in force, and the strongholds that you have built you may keep. <sup>39</sup>We pardon any oversights and offenses committed up to now, as well as the crown tax that you owe. Any other tax that used to be collected in Jerusalem shall no longer be collected there. <sup>40</sup>Any of you qualified for enrollment in our service may be enrolled. Let there be peace between us.”

Simon Captures Gazara. <sup>43y</sup> In those days Simon besieged Gazara * and surrounded it with troops. He made a siege machine, brought it up against the city, and attacked and captured one of the towers. <sup>44</sup>Those in the siege machine leaped down into the city and a great tumult arose there. <sup>45</sup>Those in the city, together with their wives and children, went up on the wall, with their garments rent, and cried out in loud voices, begging Simon to grant them terms of peace. <sup>46</sup>They said, “Treat us not according to our evil deeds but according to your mercy.” <sup>47</sup>So Simon came to terms with them and did not attack them. He expelled them from the city, however, and he purified the houses in which there were idols. Then he entered the city with hymns and songs of praise. <sup>48</sup>After removing from it everything that was impure, he settled there people who observed the law. He improved its fortifications and built himself a residence.

Simon Captures the Citadel. <sup>49</sup>The people in the citadel in Jerusalem were prevented from going out into the country and back to buy or sell; they suffered greatly from hunger, and many of them died of starvation. <sup>50</sup>They finally cried out to Simon, and he gave them terms of peace. He expelled them from the citadel and cleansed it of impurities. <sup>51</sup>On the twenty-third day of the second month, * in the one hundred and seventy-first year, the Jews entered the citadel with shouts of praise, the waving of palm branches, the playing of harps and cymbals and lyres, and the singing of hymns and canticles, because a great enemy of Israel had been crushed. <sup>z</sup> <sup>52</sup>Simon decreed that this day should be celebrated every year with rejoicing. He also strengthened the fortifications of the temple mount alongside the citadel, and he and his people dwelt there. <sup>53</sup>Seeing that his son John* was now a grown man, Simon made him commander of all his soldiers, and he dwelt in Gazara.

CHAPTER 14

Praise of Simon

Simon,
who sought the good of his nation.
His rule delighted his people and his glory all his days.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>5</sup>As his crowning glory he took Joppa for a port and made it a gateway to the isles of the sea.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>6</sup>He enlarged the borders of his nation and gained control of the country.

<sup>7</sup>He took many prisoners of war and made himself master of Gazara,
Beth-zur, and the citadel.
He cleansed the citadel of its impurities;
there was no one to withstand him.

<sup>8</sup>The people cultivated their land in peace;
the land yielded its produce,
the trees of the field their fruit.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Old men sat in the squares, all talking about the good times, while the young men put on the glorious raiment of war.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>10</sup>He supplied the cities with food and equipped them with means of defense,

till his glorious name reached the ends of the earth.

<sup>11</sup>He brought peace to the land, and Israel was filled with great joy.<sup>e</sup>

with no one to disturb them.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>13</sup>No attacker was left in the land;
the kings in those days were crushed.

<sup>14</sup>He strengthened all the lowly among his people
and was zealous for the law;
he destroyed the lawless and the wicked.

<sup>15</sup>The sanctuary he made splendid and multiplied its furnishings.

Alliance with Rome and Sparta. <sup>16</sup>When people in Rome and even in Sparta heard that Jonathan had died, they were deeply grieved.* <sup>17</sup>But when they heard that his brother Simon had become high priest in his place and was master of the territory and its cities, <sup>18</sup>they sent him inscribed tablets of bronze to renew with him the friendship and alliance that they had established with his brothers Judas and Jonathan.<sup>g</sup> <sup>19</sup>These were read before the assembly in Jerusalem.

<sup>20</sup>This is a copy of the letter that the Spartans sent: “The rulers and the city of the Spartans send greetings to Simon the high priest, the elders, the priests, and the rest of the Jewish people, our brothers. <sup>21</sup>The ambassadors sent to our people have informed us of your glory and renown, and we rejoiced at their coming. <sup>22</sup>In accordance with what they said we have recorded the following in the public decrees: Numenius, son of Antiochus, and Antipater, son of Jason, ambassadors of the Jews, have come to us to renew their friendship with us.<sup>h</sup> <sup>23</sup>The people have resolved to receive these men with honor, and to deposit a copy of their words in the public archives, so that the people of Sparta may have a record of them. A copy of this decree has been made for Simon the high priest.”

Official Honors for Simon. <sup>25</sup>When the people heard of these things, they said, “How shall we thank Simon and his sons? <sup>26</sup>He and his brothers and his father’s house have stood firm and repulsed Israel’s enemies, and so have established its freedom.” So they made an inscription on bronze tablets, which they affixed to pillars on Mount Zion.

<sup>29</sup>“ ‘Since there have often been wars in our country, Simon, son of the priest Mattathias, descendant of Joarib, and his brothers have put themselves in danger and resisted the enemies of their nation, so that their sanctuary and law might be maintained, and they have thus brought great glory to their nation. <sup>30</sup>Jonathan rallied the nation, became their high priest, and was gathered to his people. <sup>31</sup>When their enemies sought to invade and ravage their country and to violate their sanctuary, <sup>32</sup>Simon rose up and fought for his nation, spending large sums of his own money to equip his nation’s forces and give them their pay. <sup>33</sup>He fortified the cities of Judea, especially the border city of Bethzur, formerly the site of the enemy’s weaponry, and he stationed there a garrison of Jewish soldiers. <sup>34</sup>He also fortified Joppa by the sea and Gazara on the border of Azotus, a place previously occupied by the enemy; these cities he settled with Jews and furnished them with all that was necessary for their restoration. <sup>35</sup>When the people saw Simon’s fidelity and the glory he planned to bring to his nation, they made him their leader and high priest because of all he had accomplished and the justice and fidelity he had shown his nation. In every way he sought to exalt his people.

<sup>36</sup>“ ‘In his time and under his guidance they succeeded in driving the Gentiles out of their country and those in the City of David in Jerusalem, who had built for themselves a citadel from which they used to sally forth to defile the environs of the sanctuary and inflict grave injury on its purity. <sup>37</sup>In this citadel he stationed Jewish soldiers, and he strengthened its fortifications for the security of the land and the city, while he also built up the wall of Jerusalem to a greater height. <sup>38</sup>Consequently, King Demetrius confirmed him in the high priesthood, <sup>39</sup>made him one of his Friends, and conferred great honor on him.<sup>i</sup> <sup>40</sup>This was because he had heard that the Romans had addressed the Jews as friends, allies, and brothers, that they had received Simon's envoys with honor, <sup>41</sup>and that the Jewish people and their priests had decided the following: Simon shall be their leader and high priest forever until a trustworthy prophet arises.<sup>j</sup> <sup>42</sup>He shall act as governor over them, and shall have charge of the sanctuary, to make regulations concerning its functions and concerning the country, its weapons and strongholds. <sup>43</sup>He shall be obeyed by all. All contracts in the country shall be written in his name, and he shall be clothed in purple and gold.<sup>k</sup> <sup>44</sup>It shall not be lawful for any of the people or priests to nullify any of these decisions, or to contradict the orders given by him, or to convene an assembly in the country without his consent, to be clothed in purple or wear a gold buckle. <sup>45</sup>Whoever acts otherwise or violates any of these prescriptions shall be liable to punishment.

<sup>46</sup>“ ‘Thus all the people approved of granting Simon the right to act in accord with these decisions, <sup>47</sup>and Simon accepted and agreed to be high priest, governor, and ethnarch* of the Jewish people and priests, and to have authority over all.’ ”

<sup>48</sup>It was decreed that this inscription should be engraved on bronze tablets, to be set up in a conspicuous place in the precincts of the sanctuary, <sup>49</sup>and that copies of it should be deposited in the treasury, where they would be available to Simon and his sons.

CHAPTER 15

See RG 259–64

Letter of Antiochus VII.<sup>1</sup>Antiochus,* son of King Demetrius, sent a letter from the islands of the sea to Simon, the priest and ethnarch of the Jews, and to all the nation,<sup>2</sup>which read as follows:

“King Antiochus sends greetings to Simon, the high priest and ethnarch, and to the Jewish nation.<sup>3</sup>Whereas certain villains have gained control of the kingdom of our ancestors, I intend to reclaim it, that I may restore it to its former state. I have recruited a large number of mercenary troops and equipped warships.<sup>4</sup>I intend to make a landing in the country so that I may take revenge on those who have ruined our country and laid waste many cities in my kingdom.

Simon the high priest and the Jewish people, <sup>18</sup>and they brought with them a gold shield of a thousand minas. <sup>m</sup> <sup>19</sup>Therefore we have decided to write to various kings and countries, that they are not to venture to harm them, or wage war against them or their cities or their country, and are not to assist those who fight against them. <sup>20</sup>We have also decided to accept the shield from them. <sup>21</sup>If, then, any troublemakers from their country take refuge with you, hand them over to Simon the high priest, so that he may punish them according to their law.”

Hostility from Antiochus VII. <sup>25</sup>When King Antiochus encamped before Dor, he assaulted it continuously both with troops and with the siege engines he had made. He blockaded Trypho by preventing anyone from going in or out. <sup>26</sup>Simon sent to Antiochus’ support two thousand elite troops, together with silver and gold and much equipment. <sup>27</sup>But he refused to accept the aid; in fact, he broke all the agreements he had previously made with Simon and became hostile toward him. <sup>n</sup>

<sup>32</sup>So Athenobius, the king’s Friend, came to Jerusalem and on seeing the splendor of Simon’s court, the gold and silver plate on the sideboard, and his rich display, he was amazed. When he gave him the king’s message, <sup>33</sup>Simon said to him in reply: “It is not foreign land we have taken nor have we seized the property of others, but only our ancestral heritage which for a time had been unjustly held by our enemies. <sup>34</sup>Now that we have the opportunity, we are holding on to the heritage of our ancestors. <sup>35</sup>As for Joppa and Gazara, which you demand, those cities were doing great harm to our people and our country. For these we will give you a hundred talents.” Athenobius made no reply, <sup>36</sup>but returned to the king in anger. When he told him of Simon’s words, of his splendor, and of all he had seen, the king fell into a violent rage.

Victory over Cendebeus. <sup>37</sup>Trypho had boarded a ship and escaped to Orthosia. <sup>38</sup>Then the king appointed Cendebeus commander-in-chief of the seacoast, and gave him infantry and cavalry forces. <sup>39</sup>He ordered him to encamp against Judea and to fortify Kedron* and strengthen its gates, so that he could wage war on the people. Meanwhile the king went in pursuit of Trypho. <sup>40</sup>When Cendebeus came to Jamnia, he began to harass the people and to make incursions into Judea, where he took people captive and massacred them. <sup>41</sup>As the king ordered, he fortified Kedron and stationed cavalry and infantry there, so that they could go out and patrol the roads of Judea.

CHAPTER 16

See RG 259–64

<sup>1</sup>John then went up from Gazara and told his father Simon what Cendebeus was doing.<sup>o</sup> <sup>2</sup>Simon called his two oldest sons, Judas and John, and said to them: “I and my brothers and my father’s house have fought the wars of Israel from our youth until today, and many times we succeeded in saving Israel. <sup>3</sup>I have now grown old, but you, by the mercy of Heaven, have come to maturity. Take my place and my brother’s, and go out and fight for our nation; and may the help of Heaven be with you!”

<sup>4</sup>John then mustered in the land twenty thousand warriors and cavalry. Setting out against Cendebeus, they spent the night at Modein, <sup>5</sup>rose early, and marched into the plain. There, facing them, was an immense army of foot soldiers and cavalry, and between the two armies was a wadi. <sup>6</sup>John and his people took their position against the enemy. Seeing that his people were afraid to cross the wadi, John crossed first. When his men saw this, they crossed over after him.<sup>p</sup> <sup>7</sup>Then he divided his infantry and put his cavalry in the center, for the enemy’s cavalry were very numerous. <sup>8</sup>They blew the trumpets, and Cendebeus and his army were routed; many of them fell wounded, and the rest fled toward the stronghold. <sup>9</sup>It was then that John’s brother Judas fell wounded; but John pursued them until Cendebeus reached Kedron, which he had fortified. <sup>10</sup>Some took refuge in the towers on the plain of Azotus, but John set fire to these, and about two thousand of the enemy perished. He then returned to Judea in peace.<sup>q</sup>

Murder of Simon and His Sons. <sup>11</sup>Ptolemy, son of Abubus, had been appointed governor of the plain of Jericho, and he had much silver and gold, <sup>12</sup>being the son-in-law of the high priest. <sup>13</sup>But his heart became proud and he was determined to get control of the country. So he made treacherous plans to do away with Simon and his sons. <sup>14</sup>As Simon was inspecting the cities of the country and providing for their needs, he and his sons Mattathias and Judas went down to Jericho in the one hundred and seventy-seventh year, in the eleventh month* (that is, the month Shebat). <sup>15</sup>The son of Abubus gave them a deceitful welcome in the little strong-hold called Dok* which he had built. He served them a sumptuous banquet, but he had his men hidden there. <sup>16</sup>Then, when Simon and his sons were drunk, Ptolemy and his men sprang up, weapons in hand, rushed upon Simon in the banquet hall, and killed him, his two sons, and some of his servants.

<sup>18</sup>Then Ptolemy wrote a report and sent it to the king, asking him to send troops to help him and to turn over to him their country and its cities. <sup>19</sup>He sent other men to Gazara to do away with John. To the army officers he sent letters inviting them to come to him so that he might present them with silver, gold, and gifts. <sup>20</sup>He also sent others to seize Jerusalem and the temple mount. <sup>21</sup>But someone ran ahead and brought word to John at Gazara that his father and his brothers had perished, and “Ptolemy has sent men to kill you also.” <sup>22</sup>On hearing this, John was utterly astounded. When the men came to kill him, he seized them and put them to death, for he knew that they sought to kill him.

1:1 Land of Kittim: Greece. The name referred originally to inhabitants of Kiti, capital of the isle of Cyprus, then to any Cypriots (Is 23:1; Jer 2:10), later to Greeks in general, and finally even to Romans. See note on Dn 11:30. Darius: Darius III, Codoman (336–331 B.C.).

1:7 Twelve years: 336–323 B.C. The division of the empire was not fully settled until 305 B.C.

1:9 Diadems: decorated bands of white cloth worn around the head, symbolizing kingship. The Ptolemies, based in Egypt, controlled Judea until 198 B.C., when they were replaced by the Seleucids, based in Syria.

1:10 The one hundred and thirty-seventh year: Antiochus IV seized the throne in September, 175 B.C. Dates are given in this book according to the beginning of the Seleucid era, which however was reckoned in two different ways. Antiochians considered this date to be October, 312 B.C. (Syrian calendar), while Babylonians and Jewish priests accepted April, 311 B.C. as the commencement of the era (Temple calendar). The author of 1 Maccabees dates political events by the Syrian calendar but religious events by the Temple calendar. Accordingly, the civil New Year occurred variously in September or October, the religious New Year in March or April.

1:14 Gymnasium: symbol and center of Greek athletic and intellectual life, it was the chief instrument of Hellenistic culture. Jewish youth were attracted by sports and encouraged to join youth clubs. They received training in military skills and in the duties of citizens. Many were won over to paganism, and some even sought surgical correction of their circumcision (since physical exercise was carried out in nudity).

1:17 Elephants: an important part of Seleucid armament (cf. 6:34–37).

1:18 Ptolemy VI Philometer, a nephew of Antiochus.

1:20 Defeated Egypt in the one hundred and forty-third year: 169 B.C. No mention is made in 1 Maccabees of the second expedition to Egypt a year later, described in 2 Mc 5:1, 11; Dn 11:25, 29 records both.

1:21 Entered the sanctuary: to pay his soldiers, Antiochus seized the sacred vessels and the money deposited at the Temple (see 2 Mc 3:10–11).

1:29 Mysian commander: in 2 Mc 5:24 he is identified as “Apollonius, commander of the Mysians” (mercenaries from Asia Minor). The Greek text of 1 Mc 1:29 (“chief collector of tribute”) reflects a misreading of the Hebrew original.

1:33 Citadel: literally, akra means fortress. This was a garrison for foreign troops and renegade Jews that was established near the Temple area and fell to Simon only in 141 B.C. (13:49–50).

1:54 Fifteenth day of the month Kislev, in the year one hundred and forty-five: December 6, 167 B.C. Desolating abomination: in the original Hebrew, a contemptuous pun on the title “Lord of heaven” given to the god to whom an image or perhaps an altar was erected upon the altar of burnt offerings in the Temple of Jerusalem; cf. Dn 9:27; 11:31.

1:56 Scrolls of the law: one or more of the first five books of the Old Testament, the traditional law of Israel.

2:1 Modein: a village about twenty miles northwest of Jerusalem, the family’s ancestral home (see 2:70; 9:19).

2:18 The King’s Friends: a regular order of nobility at Hellenistic courts (see 10:65; 11:27).

2:29 The wilderness: the sparsely inhabited mountain country southward from Jerusalem and west of the Dead Sea, in the region where the Dead Sea Scrolls were found.

2:42 Hasideans: in Hebrew hasidim, “pious ones,” a militant religious group devoted to the strict observance of the law. They first supported the Maccabean movement, but subsequently opposed it, regarding it as too political (see 7:12–18).

2:70 In the year one hundred and forty-six: 166 B.C.

3:10 Apollonius: the Mysian commander mentioned in 1 Mc 1:29; 2 Mc 5:24.

3:16 Beth-horon: the famous pass leading up from the coastal plain to the Judean hill country. Here Joshua won an important battle (Jos 10:10–11), and in A.D. 66 a Roman force under Cestius was trapped and massacred.

3:22 He: out of reverence for God, the author of 1 Maccabees prefers to use the pronoun and other expressions, such as “Heaven,” instead of the divine name. Cf. v. 50%.

3:24 About eight hundred: the figures given in this book for strength of armies and number of casualties are not always to be taken literally. In accordance with biblical usage, they indicate rather the importance of the battle described or the greatness of the victory.

3:37 This expedition, in the spring of 165 B.C., resulted in failure; cf. chap. 6.

3:38 Nicanor: perhaps the leader of another attack against the Jews four years later; he was finally killed by Judas; cf. 7:26–46.

3:40 Emmaus: probably not the village mentioned in Lk 24:13 but a settlement about twenty miles west of Jerusalem at the edge of the hill country.

3:46 Mizpah ... a place of prayer for Israel: a holy place of great antiquity eight miles north and slightly west of Jerusalem. It was here that Samuel began to judge the Israelites (1 Sm 7:5–11; 10:17).

3:48 To learn ... idols: favorable omens for the coming battle. A contrast is intended between the idol worship of the pagans and the consultation of the word of God by the Jews; cf. 2 Mc 8:23.

3:49 Nazirites: see note on Nm 6:2–21.

4:7 Army of the Gentiles: the main force; cf. 3:39–40; 4:1–2.

4:15 Gazara: Gezer of the Hebrew Bible, five miles northwest of Emmaus; Azotus, Hebrew Ashdod, lay to the southwest; and Jamnia, Hebrew Jabneel (Jos 15:11) or Jabneh (2 Chr 26:6), to the west of Gazara.

4:19 A detachment: i.e., Gorgias’ force; cf. vv. 1–5.

4:22 The land of the foreigners: i.e., territory controlled by the Syrians. The Greek term used here is the same as that used throughout 1–2 Samuel in Greek for Philistine territory and intends to compare Maccabean victories to those of Saul and David.

4:29 Beth-zur: an important frontier city (between Judea and Idumea) in the mountain area, fifteen miles south of Jerusalem.

4:35 According to 2 Mc 11:13–15, peace negotiations followed between Lysias and Judas.

4:36 The sanctuary: the whole Temple area with its walls, courts and outbuildings, to be distinguished from the Temple proper, the oblong edifice with porch, main room and inner shrine.

4:52 Twenty-fifth day of the ninth month ... in the year one hundred and forty-eight: December 14, 164 B.C.

4:59 Days of the dedication: institution of the feast of Hanukkah, also called the feast of Dedication (Jn 10:22). Josephus calls it the feast of Lights (Ant. 12:325).

5:1 The events of this chapter occurred within the year 163 B.C.

5:3 Edomites: lit., “sons of Esau”; here a pejorative term for the Idumeans. Cf. also 5:65. Akrabattene: either a district southwest of the Dead Sea or on the eastern border of Judea and Samaria.

5:4 Baeonites: 2 Mc 10:15–23 calls them simply Idumeans.

5:6–8 This summary anticipates the order of events and would fit better between vv. 36 and 37. It corresponds to 2 Mc 12:17–23. The action was probably a reprisal for the massacre referred to in 1 Mc 5:13. Timothy may have been a local ruler, or the Seleucid governor of Transjordan. Jazer: a town on the road from the Jordan to Amman.

5:9 Dathema: the exact location is uncertain; it was east of the Jordan (in Gilead) and a night’s journey from Bozrah (v. 29%).

5:13 Tobiads: a prominent Jewish family that settled east of the Jordan.

5:15 Ptolemais: Hebrew Acco (Jgs 1:31), modern Acre, on the coast north of Haifa.

5:23 Arbatta: (or, Narbatta), probably south of Mount Carmel.

5:25 Nabateans: an Arab people who acquired wealth and power as caravan merchants in the final two centuries B.C. They established Petra as their capital and for a time controlled all of Transjordan, even as far as Damascus. It was from a Nabatean governor of Damascus that Paul escaped (2 Cor 11:32–33).

5:29 Cf. v. 9.

5:35 Alema: see v. 26%; other manuscripts read Maapha, which may be Mizpah of Gilead (Jgs 11:29).

5:46 Ephron: a city in Transjordan opposite Beth-shan (v. 52), about nine miles east of the Jordan River. Situated on a height, it dominated the valleys of the two tributaries of the Jordan.

5:58 Jamnia: Yavneh (see 10:69), the capital of the province of Azotus (Ashdod).

6:1 Elam: in fact, the mountainous region north of the Persian Gulf, rather than a city. The city may have been Persepolis. This section continues the story from 3:37 and pertains to events preceding those in 4:37–39.

6:16 The one hundred and forty-ninth year: September 22, 164, to October 9, 163 B.C. A Babylonian list of the Seleucid kings indicates that Antiochus died in November or early December of 164, about the same time as the rededication of the Temple.

6:17 The king’s son Antiochus: Antiochus V Eupator (“of a good father”), then about nine years old. He was in Antioch, still in the charge of Lysias, who proceeded to govern and wage wars in his name. Both were put to death two years later, when Demetrius, brother of Antiochus IV, arrived to claim the kingship; cf. 7:1–3.

6:20 The one hundred and fiftieth year: October, 163, to September, 162 B.C.

6:32 Beth-zachariah: south of Jerusalem, and six miles north of Beth-zur.

6:49 A sabbath year in the land: when sowing and reaping were prohibited (Ex 23:10–11; Lv 25:2–7). The year without a harvest (autumn of 164 to autumn of 163) was followed by a food shortage.

7:1–3 The one hundred and fifty-first year: the spring of 161 B.C. Demetrius, son of Seleucus, was the lawful heir to the kingdom; but when only nine years old, he was taken as a hostage to Rome in place of his uncle, who ruled as Antiochus IV Epiphanes. At the age of twenty-five Demetrius fled secretly from Rome and, with the support of the Syrians, overcame his rival Antiochus V and put him to death. The royal palace: at Antioch.

7:5–6 Alcimus: a Jew hostile to the Maccabees, who became high priest after the death of Menelaus (2 Mc 14:3). He received confirmation in his office from the new king Demetrius (1 Mc 7:9), and brought malicious charges against Judas and his brothers and the people (1 Mc 7:6).

7:16 The words that he wrote: based on Ps 79:2–3. But who is “he”—David, Alcimus, Judas, or someone else?

7:19 Beth-zait: about three miles north of Beth-zur and twelve miles south of Jerusalem.

7:27 Nicanor ... deceitfully sent to Judas: a more favorable picture of Nicanor, as an honest man who became a personal friend of Judas, is given in 2 Mc 14:17–25. Their friendship was broken by the intrigues of Alcimus (2 Mc 14:26–30).

7:31 Capharsalama: a village north of Jerusalem whose precise location is disputed.

7:32 City of David: the citadel occupied by the Seleucid garrison in Jerusalem.

7:34 Defiled them: spitting on the priests caused them to become legally defiled.

7:40 Adasa: a village between Jerusalem and Beth-horon.

7:41 They who were sent by the king: 2 Kgs 18:19–25, 29–35; 19:10–13 recount in detail the boastful threats made by Sennacherib, the Assyrian king, through his emissaries. Your angel: a reference to 2 Kgs 19:35, which describes the fate of the Assyrian army which besieged Jerusalem in the days of Hezekiah, king of Judah.

7:49 The thirteenth of Adar: March 27, 160 B.C. This day in the Jewish calendar was called the “Day of Nicanor” (2 Mc 15:36), but it was not long celebrated by the Jews.

7:50 For a few days: about one month following the death of Nicanor. After that began the attack of Bacchides resulting in the death of Judas (9:1–18).

8:1 This chapter contains the account of the embassy which Judas sent to Rome, probably before the death of Nicanor, to conclude a treaty of alliance between Rome and the Jewish nation. Without precise chronology, the pertinent data are gathered into a unified theme.

The image of the Roman Republic greatly impressed the smaller Eastern peoples seeking support against their overlords (vv. 1–16), because of Roman success in war (vv. 2–11) and effective aid to their allies (vv. 12–13). Numerous interventions by Rome in the politics of the Near East bear witness to its power and prestige in the second century B.C. See 1:10; 7:2; 12:3; 15:15–24; 2 Mc 11:34. With the increased Roman control of Palestine after 63 B.C., the Republic and later the Empire became heartily detested. The eulogy of Rome in this chapter is one of the reasons why 1 Maccabees was not preserved by the Palestinian Jews of the century that followed.

8:2 Gauls: probably the Celts of northern Italy and southern France, subdued by the Romans in 222 B.C., and again in 200–191 B.C.; but also those in Asia Minor (the Galatians), whom the Romans defeated in 189 B.C.

8:5 Philip: Philip V of Macedonia, defeated by a Graeco-Roman alliance at Cynoscephalae in 197 B.C. Perseus, his son, was defeated at Pydna in 168 B.C., and died a prisoner. With this, the kingdom of Macedonia came to an end.

8:6 Antiochus: Antiochus III, greatest of the Seleucid kings. He was defeated at Magnesia in 190 B.C. By the Treaty of Apamea in 189 B.C., he was obliged to pay Rome a crushing indemnity of 15,000 talents. The weakening of Antiochene power and the growing military and economic influence of Rome may have led Antiochus IV to adopt the policy of political, religious, and cultural unification of Syria and Palestine.

8:8 Lycia, Mysia, and Lydia: regions in western Asia Minor. “Lycia” and “Mysia” are restored here by conjectural emendation; the Greek text has “India, Media,” most likely through scribal error. Eumenes: Eumenes II (197–158 B.C.), king of Pergamum, an ally of Rome who benefited greatly from Antiochus’ losses.

8:9–10 The revolt of the Achaean League, inserted here, occurred in 146 B.C., after Judas’ time. It was crushed by the Roman consul Lucius Mummius and marked the end of Greek independence.

8:16 They entrust their government to one man: actually the Roman Republic had two consuls chosen yearly as joint heads of the government.

8:22 The reply ... on bronze tablets and sent to Jerusalem: the decree of the Senate would be inscribed on bronze and kept in the Roman Capitol, with only a copy in letter form sent to Jerusalem.

9:2 They took the road ... Arbela, they captured it: this passage is restored, in part, by conjectural emendation. The present Greek text could be translated, “They took the road to Gilgal, and camping opposite Mesaloth at Arbela, they captured it.” But Arbela (modern Khirbet Irbid) was in Galilee, on a high hill overlooking the western shore of the Sea of Galilee. Gilgal, on the contrary, was in the Jordan valley near Jericho. “Mesaloth” is probably a corrupt form of a Hebrew word meaning “steps, ascent.” It is possible, however, that all these terms referred to places in the Judean hills.

9:3 The first month of the one hundred and fifty-second year: April/May 160 B.C., by the Temple calendar.

9:15 As far as the mountain slopes: conjectural emendation. The Greek text has “as far as Mount Azotus”; this is most unlikely. Apparently the Greek translator mistook the Hebrew word ashdot, “slopes,” for ashdod, “Azotus.”

9:33 Tekoa: home of the prophet Amos in the wild country above the Dead Sea, southeast of Jerusalem.

9:34 Omitted, it is a dittography of v. 43.

9:35 Jonathan sent his brother: this was John who was called Gaddi (2:2; cf. 9:36, 38).

9:36 Medaba: northeast of the Dead Sea.

9:45 Jonathan’s force may have been trapped in one of the many oxbows of the lower Jordan. Bacchides had crossed and caught them still on the east bank.

9:50 These sites constitute a ring on the edges of the province of Judea.

9:54 In the one hundred and fifty-third year, in the second month: May, 159 B.C. The work of the prophets: probably Haggai and Zechariah, who were instrumental in building the Second Temple after the Babylonian exile; cf. Hg 1:12–14; Zec 4:8–10; Ezr 5:1–2.

9:62 Bethbasi: two miles east of Bethlehem and six miles north of Tekoa.

9:73 Michmash, southeast of Bethel, famous for the exploits of Jonathan, son of Saul; see 1 Sm 14. It was Jonathan’s base from 157 to 152 B.C. Began to judge: exercise the governing authority as in the Book of Judges. With Jerusalem and the garrison towns (v. 50) firmly in Seleucid hands, Jonathan’s freedom of action was greatly restricted.

10:1 The one hundred and sixtieth year: 152 B.C. Alexander ... Antiochus: Alexander Balas claimed to be a son of Antiochus IV. He had the backing of the Romans, who had never forgiven

Demetrius for becoming king without their permission. The latter meanwhile had become unpopular with his own people as well as with the Jews.

10:21 Jonathan ... feast of Booths: Jonathan began to discharge the office of high priest in October 152 B.C. For seven years after the death of Alcimus there had been no high priest in Jerusalem. It was taken for granted that the king, though a Gentile, had the power to appoint one (2 Mc 4:7, 23–24). The Maccabees, though a priestly family (1 Mc 2:1), were not of the line of Zadok, and some in Israel (perhaps the Qumran community) regarded Jonathan's tenure as a usurpation.

10:30 The three districts annexed from Samaria: mentioned by name in 11:34. The present Greek text, by a scribal error, has added "and Galilee" after "Samaria."

10:57 Cleopatra: Cleopatra Thea, then about fifteen years old. She later married Demetrius II, and later still, his brother Antiochus VII. Ptolemais (Acco) on the coast of Palestine was a neutral site. The one hundred and sixty-second year: 151/150 B.C.

10:67 The one hundred and sixty-fifth year: 147 B.C. Demetrius: Demetrius II Nicator.

10:69 Coelesyria: originally the region between the Lebanon and anti-Lebanon mountains, it came later to refer to Palestine also. Jamnia: on the coast, also known as Yavneh (5:58).

10:72 Twice put to flight: the reference is unclear.

10:76 Joppa: about forty miles northwest of Jerusalem. For the first time the Maccabees took possession of a seaport, though nominally it was on behalf of King Alexander.

10:89 Kinsmen: a rank higher than Chief Friends.

11:7 Eleutherus: two hundred miles north of Joppa, in the second century B.C. the northern limit of Coelesyria.

11:8 Seleucia by the sea: at the mouth of the Orontes, the port city of Antioch.

11:10 I regret ... to kill me: according to Josephus, Ammonius, a friend of Alexander, had tried to assassinate Ptolemy, and the latter claimed that Alexander was the instigator, thus calumniating him to gain his kingdom (v. 11).

11:13 Crown: lit., diadem.

11:19 The one hundred and sixty-seventh year: 146/145 B.C. The two deaths (vv. 17–18) occurred in the summer of 145 B.C.

11:30 Brother: this term and "father" in v. 32 are honorific expressions used of the Kinsmen.

11:31 Lasthenes: leader of the mercenary troops who had come with Demetrius from Crete. He was now the young king's chief minister and was apparently responsible for the disastrous policy (v. 38) of disbanding the national army.

11:34 Aphairema: the Ophrah of Jos 18:23; 1 Sm 13:17; the Ephron of 2 Chr 13:19; and the Ephraim of Jn 11:54—modern et-Taiyibeh, five miles northeast of Bethel. Lydda: the Lod of the postexilic Jews (Ezr 2:33; Neh 11:35) and the hometown of Aeneas, who was cured by Peter (Acts 9:32–34). It is ten miles southeast of Joppa. Ramathaim: the Ramathaim-zophim of 1 Sm 1:1, and the Arimathea of Mt 27:57, modern Rentis, nine miles northeast of Lydda.

11:59 Ladder of Tyre: modern Ras en-Naqurah, where the mountains reach the sea, so that the coastal road must ascend in a series of steps. Thus the Maccabees controlled the coastal area from Syria to Egypt.

11:60 The province of West-of-Euphrates: refers here to the territory of Palestine and Coelesyria, but not Upper Syria; cf. 7:8.

11:67 Plain of Hazor: the site of the ancient Canaanite city (Jos 11:10), ten miles north of the Lake of Gennesaret.

12:7 Long ago a letter was sent: i.e., a century and a half before. Onias: Onias I, high priest from 323 to 300 or 290 B.C. Arius: Arius I, king from 309 to 265 B.C.

12:9 The holy books ... in our possession: a reference to "the law, the prophets and other books," as mentioned in the Prologue to Sirach.

12:25 Territory of Hamath: the Seleucid territory of Upper Syria northeast of Coelesyria and separated from it by the Eleutherus River. The latter territory was under the command of Jonathan (11:59–60).

12:49 The Great Plain: of Beth-shan (v. 41), where Jonathan's disbanded troops remained.

13:20–21 The invaders made a wide flanking movement to invade Judea from the south (see 4:29; 6:31). Adora was a few miles southwest of Beth-zur. They would avoid Beth-zur itself and other strongholds of the Maccabees by following the way of the wilderness.

13:23 Baskama: perhaps northeast of the Sea of Galilee.

13:41 The one hundred and seventieth year: March, 142, to April, 141 B.C., by the Temple calendar.

13:43 Gazara: ancient Gezer, a key position in the Shephelah, fortified by Bacchides in 160 B.C.; cf. 9:52.

13:51 The twenty-third day of the second month: June 3, 141 B.C.

13:53 John: John Hyrcanus, who was to succeed his father as ruler and high priest; cf. 16:23–24.

14:1 The one hundred and seventy-second year: 141/140 B.C. The expedition began most probably in the spring of 140.

14:2 Arsaces: Arsaces VI, also called Mithridates I, the Parthian king (171–138 B.C.). Parthians had overrun Persia and now held Babylonia, both of which had hitherto belonged to the Seleucid empire. The Greeks and Macedonians in these countries had appealed to Demetrius for help.

14:16 The embassy to Rome and Sparta was sent soon after Simon's accession to power, and the replies were received before Demetrius' expedition (vv. 1–3), probably in 142 B.C.

14:27 Eighteenth day of Elul: September 13, 140 B.C. Asaramel: perhaps a Hebrew name meaning "court of the people of God."

14:47 Ethnarch: a subordinate ruler over an ethnic group whose office needed confirmation by a higher authority within the empire.

15:1 Antiochus: Antiochus VII Sidetes, son of Demetrius I, and younger brother of Demetrius II (now a prisoner of the Parthians). At the age of twenty he set out from the island of Rhodes to take his brother's place and drive out the usurper Trypho.

15:10 The one hundred and seventy-fourth year: 138 B.C.

15:11 Dor, by the sea: a fortress on the Palestinian coast, fifteen miles south of Carmel.

The Second Book of Maccabees

See RG 265–70

Although this book, like the preceding one, receives its title from its protagonist, Judas Maccabee (or Maccabeus), it is not a sequel to 1 Maccabees. The two differ in many respects. Whereas the first covers the period from the beginning of the reign of Antiochus IV (175 B.C.) to the accession of John Hyrcanus I (134 B.C.), this book treats of the events in Jewish history from the time of the high priest Onias III and King Seleucus IV (ca. 180 B.C.) to the defeat of Nicanor's army (161 B.C.).

The author of 2 Maccabees states (2:23) that this one-volume work is an abridgment of a five-volume work by Jason of Cyrene; but since this latter has not survived, it is difficult to determine its relationship to the present epitome. One does not know how freely the anonymous epitomizer may have rewritten the original composition or how closely the abridgment follows the wording of the original. Some parts of the text here clearly not derived from Jason's work are the preface (2:19–32), the epilogue (15:37–39), and probably also certain moralizing reflections (e.g., 5:17–20; 6:12–17). It is certain, however, that both works were written in Greek, which explains in part why 2 Maccabees was not included in the canon of the Hebrew Bible.

The book is not without genuine historical value in supplementing 1 Maccabees, and it contains some apparently authentic official documents (11:16–38). Its purpose, whether intended by Jason himself or read into it by the compiler, is to give a theological interpretation to the history of the period. The major concern is the Jerusalem Temple, whose defender is the God of Israel. There is less interest, therefore, in the military exploits of Judas Maccabeus and more in God's marvelous interventions on behalf of the Jews and their Temple. These divine actions direct the course of events, both to punish the sacrilegious and blasphemous pagans and to purify and restore the Temple. The author sometimes effects this purpose by transferring events from their proper chronological order, by giving exaggerated figures for the size of armies and the numbers killed in battle, by placing long, edifying discourses and prayers in the mouths of heroes, and by describing elaborate celestial apparitions (3:24–34; 5:2–4; 10:29–30; 15:11–16). The book is the earliest known source of stories that glorify God's holy martyrs (6:18–7:42; 14:37–46).

Of theological importance are the author's teachings on Israel's sufferings (5:17–20; 6:12–17), the resurrection of the just on the last day (7:9, 11, 14, 23; 14:46), the intercession of the saints in heaven for people living on earth (15:11–16), and the power of the living to offer prayers and sacrifices for the dead (12:39–46).

The beginning of 2 Maccabees consists of two letters sent by the Jews of Jerusalem to their coreligionists in Egypt. They deal with the observance of the feast commemorating the central event of the book, the purification of the Temple (Hanukkah). It is uncertain whether the author or a later scribe prefixed these letters to the narrative proper. If the author is responsible for their insertion, the book must have been written some time after 124 B.C., the date of the more recent of the two letters. A date of composition in the late second century B.C. is likely.

The main divisions of 2 Maccabees are:

- I. Letters to the Jews in Egypt (1:1–2:18)
- II. Compiler's Preface (2:19–32)
- III. Heliodorus' Attempt to Profane the Temple (3:1–40)
- IV. Profanation and Persecution (4:1–7:42)
- V. Victories of Judas and Purification of the Temple (8:1–10:9)
- VI. Renewed Persecution (10:10–15:36)
- VII. Epilogue (15:37–39)

I. Letters to the Jews in Egypt

CHAPTER 1

See RG 267

Letter 1:124 B.C. <sup>1</sup>The Jews in Jerusalem and in the land of Judea send greetings to their kindred, the Jews in Egypt, and wish them true peace! <sup>2</sup>May God do good to you and remember his covenant with his faithful servants, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, <sup>3</sup>give to all of you a heart to worship him and to do his will wholeheartedly and with a willing spirit, <sup>4</sup>open your heart to his law and commandments and grant you peace, <sup>5</sup>hear your prayers, and be reconciled to you, and never forsake you in time of adversity. <sup>6</sup>Even now we are praying for you here.

Letter 2: 164 B.C. The people of Jerusalem and Judea, the senate, and Judas send greetings and good wishes to Aristobulus, teacher of King Ptolemy and member of the family of the anointed priests, and to the Jews in Egypt. <sup>11</sup>Since we have been saved by God from grave dangers, we give him great thanks as befits those who fought against the king; * <sup>12c</sup> for it was God who drove out those who fought against the holy city. <sup>13</sup>When their leader arrived in Persia with his seemingly irresistible army, they were cut to pieces in the temple of the goddess Nanea * through a deceitful stratagem employed by Nanea's priests. <sup>14*</sup> On the pretext of marrying the goddess, Antiochus with his Friends had come to the place to get its great treasures as a dowry. <sup>15</sup>When the priests of Nanea's temple had displayed the treasures and Antiochus with a few attendants had come inside the wall of the temple precincts, the priests locked the temple as soon as he entered. <sup>16</sup>Then they opened a hidden trapdoor in the ceiling, and hurling stones at the leader and his companions, struck them down. They dismembered the bodies, cut off their heads and tossed them to the people outside. <sup>17</sup>Forever blessed be our God, who has thus punished the impious!

<sup>18*</sup> Since we shall be celebrating the purification of the temple on the twenty-fifth day of the month Kislev,<sup>d</sup> we thought it right to inform you, that you too may celebrate the feast of Booths and of the fire that appeared when Nehemiah, the rebuilder of the temple* and the altar, offered sacrifices. <sup>19</sup>For when our ancestors were being led into captivity in Persia,* devout priests at the time took some of the fire from the altar and hid it secretly in the hollow of a dry cistern, making sure that the place would be unknown to anyone. <sup>20</sup>Many years later, when it so pleased God, Nehemiah, commissioned by the king of Persia, sent the descendants of the priests who had hidden the fire to look for it. <sup>21</sup>When they informed us that they could not find any fire, but only a thick liquid, he ordered them to scoop some out and bring it. After the material for the sacrifices had been prepared, Nehemiah ordered the priests to sprinkle the wood and what lay on it with the liquid. <sup>22</sup>This was done, and when at length the sun, which had been clouded over, began to shine, a great fire blazed up, so that everyone marveled. <sup>23</sup>While the sacrifice was being burned, the priests recited a prayer, and all present joined in with them. Jonathan led and the rest responded with Nehemiah.

had hidden the fire, a liquid was found with which Nehemiah and his people had burned the sacrifices, <sup>34</sup>the king, after verifying the fact, fenced the place off and declared it sacred. <sup>35</sup>To those whom the king favored, he distributed many benefits he received. <sup>36</sup>Nehemiah and his companions called the liquid nephthar, meaning purification, but most people named it naphtha. * f

CHAPTER 2

See RG 267

<sup>1</sup>In the records it will be found that Jeremiah the prophet ordered the deportees to take some of the fire with them as indicated, <sup>2</sup>and that the prophet, in giving them the law, directed the deportees not to forget the commandments of the Lord or be led astray in their thoughts, when seeing the gold and silver idols and their adornments.<sup>g</sup> <sup>3</sup>With other similar words he exhorted them that the law should not depart from their hearts.

<sup>4*</sup>The same document also tells how the prophet, in virtue of an oracle, ordered that the tent and the ark should accompany him, and how he went to the very mountain that Moses climbed to behold God's inheritance.<sup>h</sup> <sup>5</sup>When Jeremiah arrived there, he found a chamber in a cave in which he put the tent, the ark, and the altar of incense; then he sealed the entrance. <sup>6</sup>Some of those who followed him came up intending to mark the path, but they could not find it. <sup>7</sup>When Jeremiah heard of this, he reproved them: "The place is to remain unknown until God gathers his people together again and shows them mercy. <sup>8</sup>Then the Lord will disclose these things, and the glory of the Lord and the cloud will be seen, just as they appeared in the time of Moses and of Solomon when he prayed that the place* might be greatly sanctified."<sup>i</sup>

<sup>9</sup>It is also related how Solomon in his wisdom offered a sacrifice for the dedication and the completion of the temple. <sup>10</sup>Just as Moses prayed to the Lord and fire descended from the sky and consumed the sacrifices, so also Solomon prayed and fire came down and consumed the burnt offerings.<sup>j</sup> <sup>11*</sup>Moses had said, "Because it had not been eaten, the purification offering was consumed."<sup>k</sup> <sup>12</sup>Solomon also celebrated the feast in the same way for eight days.

<sup>16</sup>As we are about to celebrate the purification, we are writing: you should celebrate the feast days. <sup>17</sup>It is God who has saved all his people and has restored to all of them their inheritance, the kingdom, the priesthood, and the sacred rites, <sup>18</sup>as he promised through the law. For we hope in God, that he will soon have mercy on us and gather us together from everywhere under the heavens to his holy place, for he has rescued us from great perils and has purified the place.<sup>m</sup>

II. Compiler's Preface

<sup>24</sup>For in view of the flood of data, and the difficulties encountered, given such abundant material, by those who wish to plunge into accounts of the history, <sup>25</sup>we have aimed to please those who prefer simply to read, to make it easy for the studious who wish to commit things to memory, and to be helpful to all. <sup>26</sup>For us who have undertaken the labor of making this digest, the task, far from being easy, is one of sweat and of sleepless nights. <sup>27</sup>Just so, the preparation of a festive banquet is no light matter for one who seeks to give enjoyment to others. Similarly, to win the gratitude of many we will gladly endure this labor, <sup>28</sup>leaving the responsibility for exact details to the historian, and confining our efforts to presenting only a summary outline. <sup>29</sup>As the architect of a new house must pay attention to the whole structure, while the one who undertakes the decoration and the frescoes has to be concerned only with what is needed for ornamentation, so I think it is with us.<sup>n</sup> <sup>30</sup>To enter into questions and examine them from all sides and to be busy about details is the task of the historian; <sup>31</sup>but one who is making an adaptation should be allowed to aim at brevity of expression and to forgo complete treatment of the matter. <sup>32</sup>Here, then, let us begin our account without adding to what has already been said; it would be silly to lengthen the preface to the history and then cut short the history itself.

III. Heliodorus' Attempt to Profane the Temple*

CHAPTER 3

Heliodorus' Arrival in Jerusalem. <sup>1</sup>While the holy city lived in perfect peace and the laws were strictly observed because of the piety of the high priest Onias* and his hatred of evil,<sup>o</sup> <sup>2</sup>the kings themselves honored the place and glorified the temple with the most magnificent gifts. <sup>3</sup>Thus Seleucus,* king of Asia, defrayed from his own revenues all the expenses necessary for the liturgy of sacrifice.

<sup>4</sup>But a certain Simon, of the priestly clan of Bilgah,* who had been appointed superintendent of the temple, had a quarrel with the high priest about the administration of the city market.<sup>p</sup> <sup>5</sup>Since he could not prevail against Onias, he went to Apollonius of Tarsus, who at that time was governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, <sup>6</sup>and reported to him that the treasury in Jerusalem was full of such untold riches that the sum total of the assets was past counting and that since they did not belong to the account of the sacrifices, it would be possible for them to fall under the authority of the king.

<sup>9</sup>When he arrived in Jerusalem and had been graciously received by the high priest of the city, he told him about the information that had been given, and explained the reason for his presence, and he inquired if these things were really true. <sup>10</sup>The high priest explained that there were deposits for widows and orphans,<sup>q11</sup> and some was the property of Hyrcanus, son of Tobias,* a man who occupied a very high position. Contrary to the misrepresentations of the impious Simon, the total amounted only to four hundred talents of silver and two hundred of gold. <sup>12</sup>It was utterly unthinkable to defraud those who had placed their trust in the sanctity of the place and in the sacred inviolability of a temple venerated all over the world.

Heliodorus' Plan to Rob the Temple. <sup>13</sup>But Heliodorus, because of the orders he had from the king, said that in any case this money must be confiscated for the royal treasury. <sup>14</sup>So on the day he had set he went in to take an inventory of the funds. There was no little anguish throughout the city. <sup>15</sup>Priests prostrated themselves before the altar in their priestly robes, and called toward heaven for the one who had given the law about deposits to keep the deposits safe for those who had made them.<sup>r</sup> <sup>16</sup>Whoever saw the appearance of the high priest was pierced to the heart, for the changed complexion of his face revealed his mental anguish. <sup>17</sup>The terror and bodily trembling that had come over the man clearly showed those who saw him the pain that lodged in his heart. <sup>18</sup>People rushed out of their houses and crowded together making common supplication, because the place was in danger of being profaned. <sup>19</sup>Women, girded with sackcloth below their breasts, filled the streets. Young women secluded indoors all ran, some to the gates, some to the walls, others peered through the windows— <sup>20</sup>all of them with hands raised toward heaven, making supplication. <sup>21</sup>It was pitiful to see the populace prostrate everywhere and the high priest full of dread and anguish. <sup>22</sup>While they were imploring the almighty Lord to keep the deposits safe and secure for those who had placed them in trust, <sup>23</sup>Heliodorus went on with his plan.

God Protects the Temple. <sup>24</sup>But just as Heliodorus was arriving at the treasury with his bodyguards, the Lord of spirits and all authority produced an apparition so great that those who had been bold enough to accompany Heliodorus were panic-stricken at God's power and fainted away in terror. <sup>25</sup>There appeared to them a richly caparisoned horse, mounted by a fearsome rider. Charging furiously, the horse attacked Heliodorus with its front hooves. The rider was seen wearing golden armor. <sup>26</sup>Then two other young men, remarkably strong, strikingly handsome, and splendidly attired, appeared before him. Standing on each side of him, they flogged him unceasingly, inflicting innumerable blows. <sup>27</sup>Suddenly he fell to the ground, enveloped in great darkness. His men picked him up and laid him on a stretcher. <sup>28</sup>They carried away helpless the man who a moment before had entered that treasury under arms with a great retinue and his whole bodyguard. They clearly recognized the sovereign power of God.

The Restoration and Testimony of Heliodorus. <sup>29</sup>As Heliodorus lay speechless because of God's action and deprived of any hope of recovery, <sup>30</sup>the people praised the Lord who had marvelously glorified his own place; and the temple, charged so shortly before with fear and commotion, was filled with joy and gladness, now that the almighty Lord had appeared. <sup>31</sup>Quickly some of the companions of Heliodorus begged Onias to call upon the Most High to spare the life of one who was about to breathe his last. <sup>32</sup>The high priest, suspecting that the king might think that Heliodorus had suffered some foul play at the hands of the Jews, offered a sacrifice for the man's recovery. <sup>33</sup>While the high priest was offering the sacrifice of atonement, the same young men dressed in the same clothing again appeared and stood before Heliodorus. "Be very grateful to the high priest Onias," they told him. "It is for his sake that the Lord has spared your life. <sup>34</sup>Since you have been scourged by Heaven, proclaim to all God's great power." When they had said this, they disappeared.

<sup>35</sup>After Heliodorus had offered a sacrifice to the Lord and made most solemn vows to the one who had spared his life, he bade Onias farewell, and returned with his soldiers to the king. <sup>36</sup>Before all he gave witness to the deeds of the most high God that he had seen with his own eyes. <sup>37</sup>When the king asked Heliodorus what sort of person would be suitable to be sent to Jerusalem next, he answered: <sup>38</sup>"If you have an enemy or one who is plotting against the government, send him there, and you will get him back with a flogging, if indeed he survives at all; for there is certainly some divine power about the place. <sup>39</sup>The one whose dwelling is in heaven watches over that place and protects it, and strikes down and destroys those who come to harm it." <sup>40</sup>This was how the matter concerning Heliodorus and the preservation of the treasury turned out.

IV. Profanation and Persecution

CHAPTER 4

See RG 267–68

Simon Accuses Onias. <sup>1</sup>The Simon mentioned above as the informer about the funds against his own country slandered Onias as the one who incited Heliodorus and instigated the whole miserable affair. <sup>2</sup>He dared to brand as a schemer against the government the man who was the benefactor of the city, the protector of his compatriots, and a zealous defender of the laws. <sup>3</sup>When Simon's hostility reached such a pitch that murders were being committed by one of his henchmen, <sup>4</sup>Onias saw that the opposition was serious and that Apollonius, son of Menestheus, the governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, was abetting Simon's wickedness. <sup>5</sup>So he had recourse to the king, not as an accuser of his compatriots, but as one looking to the general and particular good of all the people. <sup>6</sup>He saw that without royal attention it would be impossible to have a peaceful government, and that Simon would not desist from his folly.

Jason as High Priest. <sup>7</sup>But Seleucus died,* and when Antiochus surnamed Epiphanes succeeded him on the throne, Onias' brother Jason obtained the high priesthood by corrupt means:<sup>s</sup> <sup>8</sup>in an interview, he promised the king three hundred and sixty talents of silver, as well as eighty talents from another source of income. <sup>9</sup>Besides this he would undertake to pay a hundred and fifty more, if he was given authority to establish a gymnasium and a youth center* for it and to enroll Jerusalemites as citizens of Antioch.

<sup>10</sup>When Jason received the king's approval and came into office, he immediately initiated his compatriots into the Greek way of life. <sup>11</sup>He set aside the royal concessions granted to the Jews through the mediation of John, father of Eupolemus* (that Eupolemus who would later go on an embassy to the Romans to establish friendship and alliance with them); he set aside the lawful practices and introduced customs contrary to the law.<sup>t</sup> <sup>12u</sup>With perverse delight he established a gymnasium* at the very foot of the citadel, where he induced the noblest young men to wear the Greek hat. <sup>13</sup>The craze for Hellenism and the adoption of foreign customs reached such a pitch, through the outrageous wickedness of Jason, the renegade and would-be high priest, <sup>14</sup>that the priests no longer cared about the service of the altar. Disdaining the temple and neglecting the sacrifices, they hastened, at the signal for the games, to take part in the unlawful exercises at the arena. <sup>15</sup>What their ancestors had regarded as honors they despised; what the Greeks esteemed as glory they prized highly. <sup>16</sup>For this reason they found themselves in serious trouble: the very people whose manner of life they emulated, and whom they desired to imitate in everything, became their enemies and oppressors. <sup>17</sup>It is no light matter to flout the laws of God, as subsequent events will show.

<sup>18</sup>When the quinquennial games were held at Tyre in the presence of the king, <sup>19</sup>the vile Jason sent representatives of the Antiochians of Jerusalem, to bring three hundred silver drachmas for the sacrifice to Hercules. But the bearers themselves decided that the money should not be spent on a sacrifice, as that was not right, but should be used for some other purpose. <sup>20</sup>So the contribution meant for the sacrifice to Hercules by the sender, was in fact applied to the construction of triremes* by those who brought it.

Menelaus as High Priest. <sup>23</sup>Three years later Jason sent Menelaus,* brother of the aforementioned Simon, to deliver the money to the king, and to complete negotiations on urgent matters. <sup>24</sup>But after his introduction to the king, he flattered him with such an air of authority that he secured the high priesthood for himself, outbidding Jason by three hundred talents of silver. <sup>25</sup>He returned with the royal commission, but with nothing that made him worthy of the high priesthood; he had the temper of a cruel tyrant and the rage of a wild beast. <sup>26</sup>So Jason, who had cheated his own brother and now saw himself cheated by another man, was driven out as a fugitive to the country of the Ammonites. <sup>27</sup>But Menelaus, who obtained the office, paid nothing of the money he had promised to the king, <sup>28</sup>in spite of the demand of Sostratus, the commandant of the citadel, whose duty it was to collect the taxes. For this reason, both were summoned before the king.

Murder of Onias. <sup>30</sup>While these things were taking place, the people of Tarsus and Mallus* rose in revolt, because their cities had been given as a gift to Antiochis, the king's concubine. <sup>31</sup>So the king hastened off to settle the affair, leaving Andronicus, one of his nobles, as his deputy. <sup>32</sup>Menelaus, for his part, thinking this a good opportunity, stole some gold vessels from the temple and presented them to Andronicus; he had already sold other vessels in Tyre and in the neighboring cities. <sup>33</sup>When Onias had clear evidence, he accused Menelaus publicly, after withdrawing to the inviolable sanctuary at Daphne, near Antioch. <sup>34</sup>Thereupon Menelaus approached Andronicus privately and urged him to seize Onias. So Andronicus went to Onias, treacherously reassuring him by offering his right hand in oath, and persuaded him, in spite of his suspicions, to leave the sanctuary. Then, with no regard for justice, he immediately put him to death.

<sup>35</sup>As a result, not only the Jews, but many people of other nations as well, were indignant and angry over the unjust murder of the man. <sup>36</sup>When the king returned from the region of Cilicia, the Jews of the city,* together with the Greeks who detested the crime, went to see him about the murder of Onias. <sup>37</sup>Antiochus was deeply grieved and full of pity; he wept as he recalled the prudence and noble conduct of the deceased. <sup>38</sup>Inflamed with anger, he immediately stripped Andronicus of his purple robe, tore off his garments, and had him led through the whole city to the very place where he had committed the outrage against Onias; and there he put the murderer to death. Thus the Lord rendered him the punishment he deserved.

More Outrages. <sup>39</sup>Many acts of sacrilege had been committed by Lysimachus in the city* with the connivance of Menelaus. When word spread, the people assembled in protest against Lysimachus, because a large number of gold vessels had been stolen. <sup>40</sup>As the crowds, now thoroughly enraged, began to riot, Lysimachus launched an unjustified attack against them with about three thousand armed men under the leadership of a certain Auranus, a man as advanced in folly as he was in years. <sup>41</sup>Seeing Lysimachus' attack, people picked up stones, pieces of wood or handfuls of the ashes lying there and threw them in wild confusion at Lysimachus and his men. <sup>42</sup>As a result, they wounded many of them and even killed a few, while they put all to flight. The temple robber himself they killed near the treasury.

<sup>43</sup>Charges about this affair were brought against Menelaus. <sup>44</sup>When the king came to Tyre, three men sent by the senate pleaded the case before him. <sup>45</sup>But Menelaus, seeing himself on the losing side, promised Ptolemy, son of Dorymenes, a substantial sum of money if he would win the king over.<sup>w</sup> <sup>46</sup>So Ptolemy took the king aside into a colonnade, as if to get some fresh air, and persuaded him to change his mind. <sup>47</sup>Menelaus, who was the cause of all the trouble, the king acquitted of the charges, while he condemned to death those poor men who would have been declared innocent even if they had pleaded their case before Scythians. <sup>48</sup>Thus, those who had prosecuted the case on behalf of the city, the people, and the sacred vessels, quickly suffered unjust punishment. <sup>49</sup>For this reason, even Tyrians, detesting the crime, provided sumptuously for their burial. <sup>50</sup>But Menelaus, thanks to the greed of those in power, remained in office, where he grew in wickedness, scheming greatly against his fellow citizens.

CHAPTER 5

Jason's Revolt. <sup>1</sup>About this time Antiochus sent his second expedition* into Egypt.<sup>x 2y</sup> It then happened that all over the city, for nearly forty days, there appeared horsemen, clothed in garments of a golden weave, charging in midair—companies fully armed with lances and drawn swords; <sup>3</sup>squadrons of cavalry in battle array, charges and countercharges on this side and that, with brandished shields and bristling spears, flights of arrows and flashes of gold ornaments, together with armor of every sort. <sup>4</sup>Therefore all prayed that this vision might be a good omen.

<sup>5</sup>But when a false rumor circulated that Antiochus was dead, Jason* gathered at least a thousand men and suddenly attacked the city. As the defenders on the walls were forced back and the city was finally being taken, Menelaus took refuge in the citadel. <sup>6</sup>For his part, Jason continued the merciless slaughter of his fellow citizens, not realizing that triumph over one's own kindred is the greatest calamity; he thought he was winning a victory over his enemies, not over his own people. <sup>7</sup>Even so, he did not gain control of the government, but in the end received only disgrace for his treachery, and once again took refuge in the country of the Ammonites. <sup>8</sup>At length he met a miserable end. Called to account before Aretas,* ruler of the Arabians, he fled from city to city, hunted by all, hated as an apostate from the laws, abhorred as the executioner of his country and his compatriots. Driven into Egypt, <sup>9</sup>he set out by sea for the Lacedaemonians, among whom he hoped to find protection because of his relations with them. He who had exiled so many from their country perished in exile; <sup>10</sup>and he who had cast out so many to lie unburied went unmourned and without a funeral of any kind, nor any place in the tomb of his ancestors.

Revenge by Antiochus. <sup>11z</sup>When these happenings were reported to the king, he thought that Judea was in revolt. Raging like a wild animal, he set out from Egypt and took Jerusalem by storm. <sup>12</sup>He ordered his soldiers to cut down without mercy those whom they met and to slay those who took refuge in their houses. <sup>13</sup>There was a massacre of young and old, a killing of women and children, a slaughter of young women and infants. <sup>14</sup>In the space of three days, eighty thousand were lost, forty thousand meeting a violent death, and the same number being sold into slavery.

<sup>15</sup>Not satisfied with this, the king dared to enter the holiest temple in the world; Menelaus, that traitor both to the laws and to his country, served as guide. <sup>16</sup>He laid his impure hands on the sacred vessels and swept up with profane hands the votive offerings made by other kings for the advancement, the glory, and the honor of the place. <sup>17</sup>Antiochus became puffed up in spirit, not realizing that it was because of the sins of the city's inhabitants that the Sovereign Lord was angry for a little while: hence the disregard of the place.<sup>a</sup> <sup>18</sup>If they had not become entangled in so many sins, this man, like that Heliodorus sent by King Seleucus to inspect the treasury, would have been flogged and turned back from his presumptuous act as soon as he approached. <sup>19</sup>The Lord, however, had not chosen the nation for the sake of the place, but the place for the sake of the nation. <sup>20</sup>Therefore, the place itself, having shared in the nation's misfortunes, afterward participated in their good fortune; and what the Almighty had forsaken in wrath was restored in all its glory, once the great Sovereign Lord became reconciled.

<sup>27</sup>But Judas Maccabeus and about nine others withdrew to the wilderness to avoid sharing in defilement; there he and his companions lived like the animals in the hills, eating what grew wild.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 6

See RG 268–69

Abolition of Judaism.<sup>1f</sup> Not long after this the king sent an Athenian senator* to force the Jews to abandon the laws of their ancestors and live no longer by the laws of God,<sup>2</sup> also to profane the temple in Jerusalem and dedicate it to Olympian Zeus,* and the one on Mount Gerizim to Zeus the Host to Strangers, as the local inhabitants were wont to be.<sup>g</sup> <sup>3</sup>This was a harsh and utterly intolerable evil. <sup>4</sup>The Gentiles filled the temple with debauchery and revelry; they amused themselves with prostitutes and had intercourse with women even in the sacred courts. They also brought forbidden things into the temple,<sup>h</sup> <sup>5</sup>so that the altar was covered with abominable offerings prohibited by the laws.

<sup>6</sup>No one could keep the sabbath or celebrate the traditional feasts, nor even admit to being a Jew. <sup>7</sup>Moreover, at the monthly celebration of the king's birthday the Jews, from bitter necessity, had to partake of the sacrifices, and when the festival of Dionysus* was celebrated, they were compelled to march in his procession, wearing wreaths of ivy.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Following upon a vote of the citizens of Ptolemais, a decree was issued ordering the neighboring Greek cities to adopt the same measures, obliging the Jews to partake of the sacrifices <sup>9</sup>and putting to death those who would not consent to adopt the customs of the Greeks. It was obvious, therefore, that disaster had come upon them. <sup>10</sup>Thus, two women who were arrested for having circumcised their children were publicly paraded about the city with their babies hanging at their breasts and then thrown down from the top of the city wall.<sup>j</sup> <sup>11</sup>Others, who had assembled in nearby caves to observe the seventh day in secret, were betrayed to Philip and all burned to death. In their respect for the holiness of that day, they refrained from defending themselves.<sup>k</sup>

God's Purpose. <sup>12l</sup> Now I urge those who read this book not to be disheartened by these misfortunes, but to consider that these punishments were meant not for the ruin but for the correction of our nation. <sup>13</sup>It is, in fact, a sign of great kindness to punish the impious promptly instead of letting them go for long. <sup>14m</sup> Thus, in dealing with other nations, the Sovereign Lord patiently waits until they reach the full measure of their sins before punishing them; but with us he has decided to deal differently, <sup>15</sup>in order that he may not have to punish us later, when our sins have reached their fullness. <sup>16</sup>Therefore he never withdraws his mercy from us. Although he disciplines us with misfortunes, he does not abandon his own people. <sup>17</sup>Let these words suffice for recalling this truth. Without further ado we must go on with our story.

<sup>21</sup>Those in charge of that unlawful sacrifice took the man aside, because of their long acquaintance with him, and privately urged him to bring his own provisions that he could legitimately eat, and only to pretend to eat the sacrificial meat prescribed by the king. <sup>22</sup>Thus he would escape death, and be treated kindly because of his old friendship with them. <sup>23</sup>But he made up his mind in a noble manner, worthy of his years, the dignity of his advanced age, the merited distinction of his gray hair, and of the admirable life he had lived from childhood. Above all loyal to the holy laws given by God, he swiftly declared, “Send me to Hades!”

He spoke thus, and went immediately to the instrument of torture. <sup>29</sup>Those who shortly before had been kindly disposed, now became hostile toward him because what he had said seemed to them utter madness.<sup>o</sup> <sup>30</sup>When he was about to die under the blows, he groaned, saying: “The Lord in his holy knowledge knows full well that, although I could have escaped death, I am not only enduring terrible pain in my body from this scourging, but also suffering it with joy in my soul because of my devotion to him.”

<sup>31</sup>This is how he died, leaving in his death a model of nobility and an unforgettable example of virtue not only for the young but for the whole nation.

CHAPTER 7

See RG 268–69

Martyrdom of a Mother and Her Seven Sons. <sup>1</sup>It also happened that seven brothers with their mother were arrested and tortured with whips and scourges by the king to force them to eat pork in violation of God's law.<sup>p</sup> <sup>2</sup>One of the brothers, speaking for the others, said: "What do you expect to learn by questioning us? We are ready to die rather than transgress the laws of our ancestors."

<sup>3</sup>At that the king, in a fury, gave orders to have pans and caldrons heated. <sup>4</sup>These were quickly heated, and he gave the order to cut out the tongue of the one who had spoken for the others, to scalp him and cut off his hands and feet, while the rest of his brothers and his mother looked on. <sup>5</sup>When he was completely maimed but still breathing, the king ordered them to carry him to the fire and fry him. As a cloud of smoke spread from the pan, the brothers and their mother encouraged one another to die nobly, with these words: <sup>6</sup>"The Lord God is looking on and truly has compassion on us, as Moses declared in his song, when he openly bore witness, saying, 'And God will have compassion on his servants.'"<sup>q</sup>

<sup>7</sup>After the first brother had died in this manner, they brought the second to be made sport of. After tearing off the skin and hair of his head, they asked him, "Will you eat the pork rather than have your body tortured limb by limb?" <sup>8</sup>Answering in the language of his ancestors, he said, "Never!" So he in turn suffered the same tortures as the first. <sup>9</sup>With his last breath he said: "You accursed fiend, you are depriving us of this present life, but the King of the universe will raise us up* to live again forever, because we are dying for his laws."<sup>r</sup>

<sup>10</sup>After him the third suffered their cruel sport. He put forth his tongue at once when told to do so, and bravely stretched out his hands, <sup>11</sup>as he spoke these noble words: "It was from Heaven that I received these; for the sake of his laws I disregard them; from him I hope to receive them again." <sup>12</sup>Even the king and his attendants marveled at the young man's spirit, because he regarded his sufferings as nothing.

<sup>13</sup>After he had died, they tortured and maltreated the fourth brother in the same way. <sup>14</sup>When he was near death, he said, "It is my choice to die at the hands of mortals with the hope that God will restore me to life; but for you, there will be no resurrection to life.”

<sup>18</sup>After him they brought the sixth brother. When he was about to die, he said: “Have no vain illusions. We suffer these things on our own account, because we have sinned against our God; that is why such shocking things have happened. <sup>19</sup>Do not think, then, that you will go unpunished for having dared to fight against God.”

<sup>24</sup>Antiochus, suspecting insult in her words, thought he was being ridiculed. As the youngest brother was still alive, the king appealed to him, not with mere words, but with promises on oath, to make him rich and happy if he would abandon his ancestral customs: he would make him his Friend and entrust him with high office. <sup>25</sup>When the youth paid no attention to him at all, the king appealed to the mother, urging her to advise her boy to save his life. <sup>26</sup>After he had urged her for a long time, she agreed to persuade her son. <sup>27</sup>She leaned over close to him and, in derision of the cruel tyrant, said in their native language: “Son, have pity on me, who carried you in my womb for nine months, nursed you for three years, brought you up, educated and supported you to your present age. <sup>28</sup>I beg you, child, to look at the heavens and the earth and see all that is in them; then you will know that God did not make them out of existing things.* In the same way humankind came into existence. <sup>29</sup>Do not be afraid of this executioner, but be worthy of your brothers and accept death, so that in the time of mercy I may receive you again with your brothers.”

<sup>30</sup>She had scarcely finished speaking when the youth said: “What is the delay? I will not obey the king’s command. I obey the command of the law given to our ancestors through Moses. <sup>31</sup>But you, who have contrived every kind of evil for the Hebrews, will not escape the hands of God. <sup>32</sup>We, indeed, are suffering because of our sins.<sup>u</sup> <sup>33</sup>Though for a little while our living Lord has been angry, correcting and chastising us, he will again be reconciled with his servants. <sup>34</sup>But you, wretch, most vile of mortals, do not, in your insolence, buoy yourself up with unfounded hopes, as you raise your hand against the children of heaven. <sup>35</sup>You have not yet escaped the judgment of the almighty and all-seeing God. <sup>36</sup>Our brothers, after enduring brief pain, have drunk of never-failing life, under God’s covenant. But you, by the judgment of God, shall receive just punishments for your arrogance. <sup>37</sup>Like my brothers, I offer up my body and my life for our ancestral laws, imploring God to show mercy soon to our nation, and by afflictions and blows to make you confess that he alone is God. <sup>38</sup>Through me and my brothers, may there be an end to the wrath of the Almighty that has justly fallen on our whole nation.”

V. Victories of Judas and Purification of the Temple

CHAPTER 8

See RG 268–69

Resistance from Judas Maccabeus. <sup>1v</sup> Judas Maccabeus and his companions entered the villages secretly, summoned their kindred, and enlisted others who had remained faithful to Judaism. Thus they assembled about six thousand men. <sup>2</sup>They implored the Lord to look kindly upon this people, who were being oppressed by all; to have pity on the sanctuary, which was profaned by renegades; <sup>3</sup>to have mercy on the city, which was being destroyed and was about to be leveled to the ground; to listen to the blood that cried out to him; <sup>4</sup>to remember the criminal slaughter of innocent children and the blasphemies uttered against his name; and to manifest his hatred of evil.

<sup>5w</sup> Once Maccabeus got his men organized, the Gentiles could not withstand him, for the Lord's wrath had now changed to mercy. <sup>6</sup>Coming by surprise upon towns and villages, he set them on fire. He captured strategic positions, and put to flight not a few of the enemy. <sup>7</sup>He preferred the nights as being especially favorable for such attacks. Soon talk of his valor spread everywhere.

First Victory over Nicanor. * <sup>8</sup>When Philip saw that Judas was gaining ground little by little and that his successful advances were becoming more frequent, he wrote to Ptolemy, governor of Coelesyria and Phoenicia, to come to the aid of the king's interests. <sup>x9y</sup> Ptolemy promptly selected Nicanor, son of Patroclus, one of the Chief Friends, and sent him at the head of at least twenty thousand armed men of various nations to wipe out the entire Jewish nation. With him he associated Gorgias, a general, experienced in the art of war. <sup>z10</sup> Nicanor planned to raise the two thousand talents of tribute owed by the king to the Romans * by selling captured Jews into slavery. <sup>11</sup> So he immediately sent word to the coastal cities, inviting them to buy Jewish slaves and promising to deliver ninety slaves for a talent *—little anticipating the punishment that was to fall upon him from the Almighty.

others sold everything they had left, and at the same time entreated the Lord to deliver those whom the ungodly Nicanor had sold before even capturing them. <sup>15</sup>They entreated the Lord to do this, if not for their sake, at least for the sake of the covenants made with their ancestors, and because they themselves invoked his holy and glorious name. <sup>16</sup>Maccabeus assembled his forces, six thousand strong, and exhorted them not to be panic-stricken before the enemy, nor to fear the very large number of Gentiles unjustly attacking them, but to fight nobly. <sup>17</sup>They were to keep before their eyes the lawless outrage perpetrated by the Gentiles against the holy place and the affliction of the humiliated city, as well as the subversion of their ancestral way of life. <sup>18</sup>He said, “They trust in weapons and acts of daring, but we trust in almighty God, who can by a mere nod destroy not only those who attack us but even the whole world.” <sup>19</sup>He went on to tell them of the times when help had been given their ancestors: both the time of Sennacherib, when a hundred and eighty-five thousand of his men perished,<sup>a</sup> <sup>20</sup>and the time of the battle in Babylonia against the Galatians,* when only eight thousand Jews fought along with four thousand Macedonians; yet when the Macedonians were hard pressed, the eight thousand, by the help they received from Heaven, destroyed one hundred and twenty thousand and took a great quantity of spoils. <sup>21b</sup> With these words he encouraged them and made them ready to die for their laws and their country.

Then Judas divided his army into four, <sup>22</sup>placing his brothers, Simon, Joseph,* and Jonathan, each over a division, assigning them fifteen hundred men apiece.<sup>c</sup> <sup>23</sup>There was also Eleazar.* After reading to them from the holy book and giving them the watchword, “The help of God,” Judas himself took charge of the first division and joined in battle with Nicanor.<sup>d</sup> <sup>24</sup>With the Almighty as their ally, they killed more than nine thousand of the enemy, wounded and disabled the greater part of Nicanor’s army, and put all of them to flight. <sup>25</sup>They also seized the money of those who had come to buy them as slaves. When they had pursued the enemy for some time, they were obliged to return by reason of the late hour. <sup>26</sup>It was the day before the sabbath, and for that reason they could not continue the pursuit. <sup>27</sup>They collected the enemy’s weapons and stripped them of their spoils, and then observed the sabbath with fervent praise and thanks to the Lord who kept them safe for that day on which he allotted them the beginning of his mercy. <sup>28</sup>After the sabbath, they gave a share of the spoils to those who were tortured and to widows and orphans; the rest they divided among themselves and their children.<sup>e</sup> <sup>29</sup>When this was done, they made supplication in common, imploring the merciful Lord to be completely reconciled with his servants.

Other Victories. <sup>30</sup>They also challenged the forces of Timothy and Bacchides, killed more than twenty thousand of them, and captured some very high fortresses. They divided the considerable plunder, allotting half to themselves and the rest to victims of torture, orphans, widows, and the aged. <sup>31</sup>They collected the enemies' weapons and carefully stored them in strategic places; the rest of the spoils they carried to Jerusalem. <sup>32</sup>They also killed the commander of Timothy's forces, a most wicked man, who had done great harm to the Jews. <sup>33</sup>While celebrating the victory in their ancestral city, they burned both those who had set fire to the sacred gates and Callisthenes, who had taken refuge in a little house; so he received the reward his wicked deeds deserved.

<sup>34f</sup> The thrice-accursed Nicanor, who had brought the thousand slave dealers to buy the Jews, <sup>35</sup>after being humbled through the Lord's help by those whom he had thought of no account, laid aside his fine clothes and fled alone across country like a runaway slave, until he reached Antioch. He was eminently successful in destroying his own army. <sup>36</sup>So he who had promised to provide tribute for the Romans by the capture of the people of Jerusalem proclaimed that the Jews had a champion, and that because they followed the laws laid down by him, they were unharmed.

Punishment and Death of Antiochus IV.<sup>* 1g</sup> About that time Antiochus retreated in disgrace from the region of Persia. <sup>2</sup>He had entered the city called Persepolis and attempted to rob the temples and gain control of the city. Thereupon the people had swift recourse to arms, and Antiochus' forces were routed, so that in the end Antiochus was put to flight by the people of that region and forced to beat a shameful retreat. <sup>3</sup>On his arrival in Ecbatana, he learned what had happened to Nicanor and to Timothy's forces. <sup>4</sup>Overcome with anger, he planned to make the Jews suffer for the injury done by those who had put him to flight. Therefore he ordered his charioteer to drive without stopping until he finished the journey. Yet the condemnation of Heaven rode with him, because he said in his arrogance, "I will make Jerusalem the common graveyard of Jews as soon as I arrive there."

<sup>5</sup>So the all-seeing Lord, the God of Israel, struck him down with an incurable and invisible blow; for scarcely had he uttered those words when he was seized with excruciating pains in his bowels and sharp internal torment,<sup>h</sup> <sup>6</sup>a fit punishment for him who had tortured the bowels of others with many barbarous torments. <sup>7</sup>Far from giving up his insolence, he was all the more filled with arrogance. Breathing fire in his rage against the Jews, he gave orders to drive even faster. As a result he hurtled from the speeding chariot, and every part of his body was racked by the violent fall. <sup>8</sup>Thus he who previously, in his superhuman presumption, thought he could command the waves of the sea, and imagined he could weigh the mountaintops in his scales, was now thrown to the ground and had to be carried on a litter, clearly manifesting to all the power of God.<sup>i</sup> <sup>9</sup>The body of this impious man swarmed with worms, and while he was still alive in hideous torments, his flesh rotted off, so that the entire army was sickened by the stench of his corruption.<sup>j</sup> <sup>10</sup>Shortly before, he had thought that he could reach the stars of heaven, and now, no one could endure to transport the man because of this intolerable stench.

stench, he said, “It is right to be subject to God, and not to think one’s mortal self equal to God.”<sup>k 13</sup> Then this vile man vowed to him who would never again show him mercy, the Sovereign Lord, <sup>14</sup>that the holy city, toward which he had been hurrying with the intention of leveling it to the ground and making it a common graveyard, he would now set free; <sup>15</sup>that the Jews, whom he had judged not even worthy of burial, but fit only to be thrown out with their children to be eaten by vultures and wild animals—all of them he would make equal to the Athenians; <sup>16</sup>that he would adorn with the finest offerings the holy temple which he had previously despoiled, restore all the sacred vessels many times over, and provide from his own revenues the expenses required for the sacrifices. <sup>17</sup>Besides all this, he would become a Jew himself and visit every inhabited place to proclaim there the power of God. <sup>18</sup>But since his sufferings were not lessened, for God’s just judgment had come upon him, he lost hope for himself and wrote the following letter to the Jews in the form of a supplication. It read thus:

<sup>19*</sup> “To the worthy Jewish citizens, Antiochus, king and general, sends hearty greetings and best wishes for their health and prosperity. <sup>20</sup>If you and your children are well and your affairs are going as you wish, I thank God very much, for my hopes are in heaven. <sup>21</sup>Now that I am ill, I recall with affection your esteem and goodwill. On returning from the regions of Persia, I fell victim to a troublesome illness; so I thought it necessary to form plans for the general security of all. <sup>22</sup>I do not despair about my health, since I have much hope of recovering from my illness. <sup>23</sup>Nevertheless, I know that my father, whenever he went on campaigns in the hinterland, would name his successor, <sup>24</sup>so that, if anything unexpected happened or any unwelcome news came, the people throughout the realm would know to whom the government had been entrusted, and so not be disturbed. <sup>25</sup>I am also bearing in mind that the neighboring rulers, especially those on the borders of our kingdom, are on the watch for opportunities and waiting to see what will happen. I have therefore appointed as king my son Antiochus, whom I have often before entrusted and commended to most of you, when I made hurried visits to the outlying provinces. I have written to him what is written here. <sup>26</sup>Therefore I beg and entreat each of you to remember the general and individual benefits you have received, and to continue to show goodwill toward me and my son. <sup>27</sup>I am confident that, following my policy, he will treat you with equity and kindness in his relations with you.”

Purification of the Temple. <sup>1m</sup> When Maccabeus and his companions, under the Lord's leadership, had recovered the temple and the city, <sup>2</sup>they destroyed the altars erected by the foreigners in the marketplace and the sacred shrines. <sup>3</sup>After purifying the temple, they made another altar. Then, with fire struck from flint, they offered sacrifice for the first time in two years, * burned incense, and lighted lamps. They also set out the showbread. <sup>4</sup>When they had done this, they prostrated themselves and begged the Lord that they might never again fall into such misfortunes, and that if they should sin at any time, he might chastise them with moderation and not hand them over to blasphemous and barbarous Gentiles. <sup>5</sup>On the anniversary of the day on which the temple had been profaned by the foreigners, that is, the twenty-fifth of the same month Kislev, the purification of the temple took place. <sup>6</sup>The Jews celebrated joyfully for eight days as on the feast of Booths, remembering how, a little while before, they had spent the feast of Booths living like wild animals in the mountains and in caves. <sup>7</sup>Carrying rods entwined with leaves, * beautiful branches and palms, they sang hymns of grateful praise to him who had successfully brought about the purification of his own place. <sup>8</sup>By public decree and vote they prescribed that the whole Jewish nation should celebrate these days every year. <sup>9</sup>Such was the end of Antiochus surnamed Epiphanes.

VI. Renewed Persecution

Accession of Antiochus V. <sup>10</sup>Now we shall relate what happened under Antiochus Eupator, the son of that godless man, and shall give a summary of the chief evils caused by the wars. <sup>11</sup>When Eupator succeeded to the kingdom, he put a certain Lysias in charge of the government as commander-in-chief of Coelesyria and Phoenicia. <sup>12</sup>Ptolemy, called Macron, * had taken the lead in treating the Jews fairly because of the previous injustice that had been done them, and he endeavored to have peaceful relations with them. <sup>13</sup>As a result, he was accused before Eupator by the King's Friends. In fact, on all sides he heard himself called a traitor for having abandoned Cyprus, which Philometor had entrusted to him, and for having gone over to Antiochus Epiphanes. Since he could not command the respect due to his high office, he ended his life by taking poison.

Victory over the Idumeans. * <sup>14n</sup>When Gorgias became governor of the region, he employed foreign troops and used every opportunity to attack the Jews. <sup>15</sup>At the same time the Idumeans, who held some strategic strongholds, were harassing the Jews; they welcomed fugitives from Jerusalem and endeavored to continue the war. <sup>16</sup>Maccabeus and his companions, after public prayers asking God to be their ally, moved quickly against the strongholds of the Idumeans. <sup>17</sup>Attacking vigorously, they gained control of the places, drove back all who were fighting on the walls, and cut down those who opposed them, killing no fewer than twenty thousand. <sup>18</sup>When at least nine thousand took refuge in two very strong towers, well equipped to sustain a siege, <sup>19</sup>Maccabeus left Simon and Joseph, along with Zacchaeus and his forces, in sufficient numbers to besiege them, while he himself went off to places where he was more urgently needed. <sup>20</sup>But some of those in Simon's force who were lovers of money let themselves be bribed by some of those in the towers; on receiving seventy thousand drachmas, they allowed a number of them to escape. <sup>21</sup>When Maccabeus was told what had happened, he assembled the rulers of the people and accused those men of having sold their kindred for money by setting their enemies free to fight against them. <sup>22</sup>So he put them to death as traitors, and without delay captured the two towers. <sup>23</sup>As he was successful at arms in all his undertakings, he destroyed more than twenty thousand in the two strongholds.

Victory over Timothy. <sup>24</sup>Timothy, who had previously been defeated by the Jews, * gathered a tremendous force of foreign troops and collected a large number of cavalry from Asia; then he appeared in Judea, ready to conquer it by force. <sup>25</sup>At his approach, Maccabeus and his companions made supplication to God, sprinkling earth upon their heads and girding their loins in sackcloth. <sup>26</sup>Lying prostrate at the foot of the altar, they begged him to be gracious to them, and to be an enemy to their enemies, and a foe to their foes, as the law declares. <sup>o</sup> <sup>27</sup>After the prayer, they took up their weapons and advanced a considerable distance from the city, halting when they were close to the enemy. <sup>28</sup>As soon as dawn broke, * the armies joined battle, the one having as pledge of success and victory not only their valor but also their reliance on the Lord, and the other taking fury as their leader in the fight.

<sup>32</sup>Timothy, however, fled to a well-fortified stronghold called Gazara, where Chaereas was in command.<sup>q</sup> <sup>33</sup>For four days Maccabeus and his forces eagerly besieged the fortress. <sup>34</sup>Those inside, relying on the strength of the place, kept repeating outrageous blasphemies and uttering abominable words. <sup>35</sup>When the fifth day dawned, twenty young men in the army of Maccabeus, angered over such blasphemies, bravely stormed the wall and with savage fury cut down everyone they encountered. <sup>36</sup>Similarly, others climbed up and swung around on the defenders; they put the towers to the torch, spread the fire and burned the blasphemers alive. Still others broke down the gates and let in the rest of the troops, who took possession of the city. <sup>37</sup>Timothy had hidden in a cistern, but they killed* him, along with his brother Chaereas, and Apollophanes. <sup>38</sup>On completing these exploits, they blessed, with hymns of grateful praise, the Lord who shows great kindness to Israel and grants them victory.

CHAPTER 11

Defeat of Lysias. * <sup>1r</sup> Very soon afterward, Lysias, guardian and kinsman of the king and head of the government, being greatly displeased at what had happened, <sup>2</sup>mustered about eighty thousand infantry and all his cavalry and marched against the Jews. His plan was to make their city a Greek settlement; <sup>3</sup>to levy tribute on the temple, as he did on the shrines of the other nations; and to put the high priesthood up for sale every year. <sup>s</sup> <sup>4</sup>He did not take God's power into account at all, but felt exultant confidence in his myriads of foot soldiers, his thousands of cavalry, and his eighty elephants. <sup>t</sup> <sup>5</sup>So he invaded Judea, and when he reached Beth-zur, a fortified place about five stadia * from Jerusalem, launched a strong attack against it.

<sup>6</sup>When Maccabeus and his companions learned that Lysias was besieging the strongholds, they and all the people begged the Lord with lamentations and tears to send a good angel to save Israel. <sup>u</sup> <sup>7</sup>Maccabeus himself was the first to take up arms, and he exhorted the others to join him in risking their lives to help their kindred. Then they resolutely set out together. <sup>8</sup>Suddenly, while they were still near Jerusalem, a horseman appeared at their head, clothed in white garments and brandishing gold weapons. <sup>v</sup> <sup>9</sup>Then all of them together thanked the merciful God, and their hearts were filled with such courage that they were ready to assault not only human beings but even the most savage beasts, or even walls of iron. <sup>10</sup>Now that the Lord had shown mercy toward them, they advanced in battle order with the aid of their heavenly ally. <sup>11</sup>Hurling themselves upon the enemy like lions, they laid low eleven thousand foot soldiers and sixteen hundred cavalry, and put all the rest to flight. <sup>12</sup>Most of those who survived were wounded and disarmed, while Lysias himself escaped only by shameful flight.

Peace Negotiations. <sup>13w</sup> But Lysias was not a stupid man. He reflected on the defeat he had suffered, and came to realize that the Hebrews were invincible because the mighty God was their ally. He therefore sent a message <sup>14</sup>persuading them to settle everything on just terms, and promising to persuade the king also, and to induce him to become their friend. <sup>15</sup>Maccabeus, solicitous for the common good, agreed to all that Lysias proposed; and the king granted on behalf of the Jews all the written requests of Maccabeus to Lysias.

<sup>16</sup>These are the terms of the letter which Lysias wrote to the Jews: “Lysias sends greetings to the Jewish people. <sup>17</sup>John and Absalom, your envoys, have presented your signed communication and asked about the matters contained in it. <sup>18</sup>Whatever had to be referred to the king I called to his attention, and the things that were acceptable he has granted. <sup>19</sup>If you maintain your loyalty to the government, I will endeavor to further your interests in the future. <sup>20</sup>On the details of these matters I have authorized my representatives, as well as your envoys, to confer with you. <sup>21</sup>Farewell.” The one hundred and forty-eighth year,* the twenty-fourth of Dioscorinthus.

<sup>27</sup>The king’s letter to the people was as follows: “King Antiochus sends greetings to the Jewish senate and to the rest of the Jews. <sup>28</sup>If you are well, it is what we desire. We too are in good health. <sup>29</sup>Menelaus has told us of your wish to return home and attend to your own affairs. <sup>30</sup>Therefore, those who return by the thirtieth of Xanthicus will have our assurance of full permission <sup>31</sup>to observe their dietary and other laws, just as before, and none of the Jews shall be molested in any way for faults committed through ignorance. <sup>32</sup>I have also sent Menelaus to reassure you. <sup>33</sup>Farewell.” In the one hundred and fortyeighth year, the fifteenth of Xanthicus.*

people. <sup>35</sup>What Lysias, kinsman of the king, has granted you, we also approve. <sup>36</sup>But for the matters that he decided should be submitted to the king, send someone to us immediately with your decisions so that we may present them to your advantage, for we are on our way to Antioch. <sup>37</sup>Make haste, then, to send us those who can inform us of your preference. <sup>38</sup>Farewell.” In the one hundred and fortyeighth year, the fifteenth of Xanthicus.*

CHAPTER 12

Incidents at Joppa and Jamnia. <sup>1</sup>After these agreements were made, Lysias returned to the king, and the Jews went about their farming. <sup>2</sup>But some of the local governors, Timothy and Apollonius, son of Gennaesus,* as also Hieronymus and Demophon, to say nothing of Nicanor, the commander of the Cyprians, would not allow them to live in peace and quiet.

<sup>3</sup>Some people of Joppa also committed this outrage: they invited the Jews who lived among them, together with their wives and children, to embark on boats which they had provided. There was no hint of enmity toward them. <sup>4</sup>This was done by public vote of the city. When the Jews, wishing to live on friendly terms and not suspecting anything, accepted the invitation, the people of Joppa took them out to sea and drowned at least two hundred of them.

<sup>5</sup>As soon as Judas heard of the barbarous deed perpetrated against his compatriots, he summoned his men; <sup>6</sup>and after calling upon God, the just judge, he marched against the murderers of his kindred. In a night attack he set the harbor on fire, burned the boats, and put to the sword those who had taken refuge there. <sup>7</sup>Because the gates of the town were shut, he withdrew, intending to come back later and wipe out the entire population of Joppa.

<sup>8</sup>On hearing that the people of Jamnia planned in the same way to wipe out the Jews who lived among them, <sup>9</sup>he attacked the Jamnians by night, setting fire to the harbor and the fleet, so that the glow of the flames was visible as far as Jerusalem, thirty miles away.

More Victories by Judas. <sup>10x</sup> When the Jews had gone about a mile from there* in the march against Timothy, they were attacked by Arabians numbering at least five thousand foot soldiers and five hundred cavalry. <sup>11</sup>After a hard fight, Judas and his companions, with God's help, were victorious. The defeated nomads begged Judas to give pledges of friendship, and they promised to supply the Jews with livestock and to be of service to them in any other way. <sup>12</sup>Realizing that they could indeed be useful in many respects, Judas agreed to make peace with them. After the pledges of friendship had been exchanged, the Arabians withdrew to their tents.

<sup>13</sup>He also attacked a certain city called Caspin, fortified with earthworks and walls and inhabited by a mixed population of Gentiles. <sup>14</sup>Relying on the strength of their walls and their supply of provisions, the besieged treated Judas and his men with contempt, insulting them and even uttering blasphemies and profanity. <sup>15</sup>But Judas and his men invoked the aid of the great Sovereign of the world, who, in the days of Joshua, overthrew Jericho without battering rams or siege engines; then they furiously stormed the walls.<sup>y</sup> <sup>16</sup>Capturing the city by the will of God, they inflicted such indescribable slaughter on it that the adjacent pool, which was about a quarter of a mile wide, seemed to be filled with the blood that flowed into it.

<sup>17z</sup> When they had gone on some ninety miles, they reached Charax, where there were certain Jews known as Toubians.* <sup>a</sup> <sup>18</sup>But they did not find Timothy in that region, for he had already departed from there without having done anything except to leave behind in one place a very strong garrison. <sup>19</sup>But Dositheus and Sosipater, two of Maccabeus' captains, marched out and destroyed the force of more than ten thousand men that Timothy had left in the stronghold. <sup>20</sup>Meanwhile, Maccabeus divided his army into cohorts, with a commander over each cohort, and went in pursuit of Timothy, who had a force of a hundred and twenty thousand foot soldiers and twentyfive hundred cavalry. <sup>21</sup>When Timothy learned of the approach of Judas, he sent on ahead of him the women and children, as well as the baggage, to a place called Karnion, which was hard to besiege and even hard to reach because of the difficult terrain of that region. <sup>22</sup>But when Judas' first cohort appeared, the enemy was overwhelmed with fear and terror at the manifestation of the all-seeing One. Scattering in every direction, they rushed away in such headlong flight that in many cases they wounded one another, pierced by the points of their own swords. <sup>23</sup>Judas pressed the pursuit vigorously, putting the sinners to the sword and destroying as many as thirty thousand men.

<sup>24</sup>Timothy himself fell into the hands of those under Dositheus and Sosipater; but with great cunning, he begged them to spare his life and let him go, because he had in his power the parents and relatives of many of them, and would show them no consideration. <sup>25</sup>When he had fully confirmed his solemn pledge to restore them unharmed, they let him go for the sake of saving their relatives.

<sup>36</sup>After Esdris and his men had been fighting for a long time and were weary, Judas called upon the Lord to show himself their ally and leader in the battle. <sup>37</sup>Then, raising a battle cry in his ancestral language, and with hymns, he charged Gorgias' men when they were not expecting it and put them to flight.

Expiation for the Dead. <sup>38</sup>Judas rallied his army and went to the city of Adullam. As the seventh day was approaching, they purified themselves according to custom and kept the sabbath there. <sup>39</sup>On the following day, since the task had now become urgent, Judas and his companions went to gather up the bodies of the fallen and bury them with their kindred in their ancestral tombs. <sup>40</sup>But under the tunic of each of the dead they found amulets sacred to the idols of Jamnia, which the law forbids the Jews to wear. So it was clear to all that this was why these men had fallen.<sup>c 41</sup> They all therefore praised the ways of the Lord, the just judge who brings to light the things that are hidden.<sup>42*</sup> Turning to supplication, they prayed that the sinful deed might be fully blotted out. The noble Judas exhorted the people to keep themselves free from sin, for they had seen with their own eyes what had happened because of the sin of those who had fallen.<sup>d 43</sup> He then took up a collection among all his soldiers, amounting to two thousand silver drachmas, which he sent to Jerusalem to provide for an expiatory sacrifice. In doing this he acted in a very excellent and noble way, inasmuch as he had the resurrection in mind;<sup>44</sup> for if he were not expecting the fallen to rise again, it would have been superfluous and foolish to pray for the dead.<sup>45</sup> But if he did this with a view to the splendid reward that awaits those who had gone to rest in godliness, it was a holy and pious thought.<sup>46</sup> Thus he made atonement for the dead that they might be absolved from their sin.

CHAPTER 13

See RG 269

Death of Menelaus. <sup>1e</sup> In the one hundred and forty-ninth year,* Judas and his men learned that Antiochus Eupator was invading Judea with a large force, <sup>2</sup>and that with him was Lysias, his guardian, who was in charge of the government. They led* a Greek army of one hundred and ten thousand foot soldiers, fifty-three hundred cavalry, twenty-two elephants, and three hundred chariots armed with scythes.

Battle near Modein. <sup>9</sup>The king was advancing, his mind full of savage plans for inflicting on the Jews things worse than those they suffered in his father's time. <sup>10</sup>When Judas learned of this, he urged the people to call upon the Lord day and night, now more than ever, to help them when they were about to be deprived of their law, their country, and their holy temple; <sup>11</sup>and not to allow this people, which had just begun to revive, to be subjected again to blasphemous Gentiles. <sup>12</sup>When they had all joined in doing this, and had implored the merciful Lord continuously with weeping and fasting and prostrations for three days, Judas encouraged them and told them to stand ready.

outcome to the Creator of the world, and exhorting his followers to fight nobly to death for the laws, the temple, the city, the country, and the government, he encamped near Modein. <sup>15</sup>Giving his troops the battle cry “God’s Victory,” he made a night attack on the king’s pavilion with a picked force of the bravest young men and killed about two thousand in the camp. He also stabbed the lead elephant and its rider.<sup>9</sup><sup>16</sup>Finally they withdrew in triumph,* having filled the camp with terror and confusion. <sup>17</sup>Day was just breaking when this was accomplished with the help and protection of the Lord.

Treaty with Antiochus V. <sup>18</sup><sup>h</sup> The king, having had a taste of the Jews’ boldness, tried to take their positions by a stratagem. <sup>19</sup>So he marched against Beth-zur, a strong fortress of the Jews; but he was driven back, checked, and defeated. <sup>20</sup>Judas sent supplies to the men inside, <sup>21</sup>but Rhodocus, of the Jewish army, betrayed military secrets* to the enemy. He was found out, arrested, and imprisoned. <sup>22</sup>The king made a second attempt by negotiating with the people of Beth-zur. After giving them his pledge and receiving theirs, he withdrew <sup>23</sup>and attacked Judas’ men. But he was defeated. Next he heard that Philip, who was left in charge of the government in Antioch, had rebelled. Dismayed, he negotiated with the Jews, submitted to their terms, and swore to observe all their rights. Having come to this agreement, he offered a sacrifice, and honored the sanctuary and the place with a generous donation. <sup>24</sup>He received Maccabeus, and left Hegemonides as governor of the territory from Ptolemais to the region of the Gerrhenes.* <sup>25</sup>When he came to Ptolemais, the people of Ptolemais were angered by the peace treaty; in fact they were so indignant that they wanted to annul its provisions. <sup>26</sup>But Lysias took the platform, defended the treaty as well as he could and won them over by persuasion. After calming them and gaining their goodwill, he returned to Antioch. That is the story of the king’s attack and withdrawal.

CHAPTER 14

<sup>1i</sup> Three years later,* Judas and his companions learned that Demetrius, son of Seleucus, had sailed into the port of Tripolis with a powerful army and a fleet, <sup>2</sup>and that he had occupied the country, after doing away with Antiochus and his guardian Lysias.

<sup>3</sup>A certain Alcimus, a former high priest,* who had willfully incurred defilement before the time of the revolt, realized that there was no way for him to be safe and regain access to the holy altar. <sup>4</sup>So he went to King Demetrius around the one hundred and fifty-first year and presented him with a gold crown and a palm branch, as well as some of the customary olive branches from the temple. On that day he kept quiet.<sup>j</sup> <sup>5</sup>But he found an opportunity to further his mad scheme when he was invited to the council by Demetrius and questioned about the dispositions and intentions of the Jews. He replied: <sup>6</sup>“Those Jews called Hasideans, led by Judas Maccabeus,* are warmongers, who stir up sedition and keep the kingdom from enjoying peace.<sup>k</sup> <sup>7</sup>For this reason, now that I am deprived of my ancestral dignity, that is to say, the high priesthood, I have come here, <sup>8</sup>first, out of my genuine concern for the king’s interests, and second, out of consideration for my own compatriots, since our entire nation is suffering no little affliction from the rash conduct of the people just mentioned. <sup>9</sup>When you have informed yourself in detail on these matters, O king, provide for our country and its hard-pressed people with the same gracious consideration that you show toward all. <sup>10</sup>As long as Judas is around, it is impossible for the government to enjoy peace.” <sup>11</sup>When he had said this, the other Friends who were hostile to Judas quickly added fuel to Demetrius’ indignation.

Dealings with Nicanor. <sup>12l</sup> The king immediately chose Nicanor, who had been in command of the elephants, and appointed him governor of Judea. He sent him off <sup>13</sup>with orders to put Judas to death, to disperse his followers, and to set up Alcimus as high priest of the great temple. <sup>14</sup>The Gentiles from Judea, who had fled before Judas, flocked to Nicanor, thinking that the misfortunes and calamities of the Jews would mean prosperity for themselves.

<sup>15m</sup> When the Jews heard of Nicanor's coming, and that the Gentiles were rallying to him, they sprinkled themselves with earth and prayed to him who established his people forever, and who always comes to the aid of his heritage by manifesting himself. <sup>16</sup>At their leader's command, they set out at once from there and came upon the enemy at the village of Adasa. <sup>17</sup>Judas' brother Simon had engaged Nicanor, but he suffered a slight setback because of the sudden appearance of the enemy.

<sup>18</sup>However, when Nicanor heard of the valor of Judas and his companions, and the great courage with which they fought for their country, he shrank from deciding the issue by bloodshed. <sup>19</sup>So he sent Posidonius, Theodotus and Mattathias to exchange pledges of friendship. <sup>20</sup>After a long discussion of the terms, each leader communicated them to his troops; and when general agreement was expressed, they assented to the treaty. <sup>21</sup>A day was set on which the leaders would meet by themselves. From each side a chariot came forward, and thrones were set in place. <sup>22</sup>Judas had posted armed men in readiness at strategic points for fear that the enemy might suddenly commit some treachery. But the conference was held in the proper way.

<sup>23</sup>Nicanor stayed on in Jerusalem, where he did nothing out of place. He disbanded the throngs of people who gathered around him; <sup>24</sup>and he always kept Judas in his company, for he felt affection* for the man. <sup>25</sup>He urged him to marry and have children; so Judas married and settled into an ordinary life.

Nicanor's Threat Against Judas. <sup>26</sup>When Alcimus saw their mutual goodwill, he took the treaty that had been made, went to Demetrius, and said that Nicanor was plotting against the government, for he had appointed Judas, that conspirator against the kingdom, as his successor. <sup>27</sup>Stirred up by the villain's slander, the king became enraged. He wrote to Nicanor, stating that he was displeased with the treaty, and ordering him to send Maccabeus at once as a prisoner to Antioch. <sup>28</sup>When this message reached Nicanor he was dismayed and troubled at the thought of annulling his agreement with a man who had done no wrong. <sup>29</sup>However, there was no way of opposing the king, so he watched for an opportunity to carry out this order by a stratagem. <sup>30</sup>But Maccabeus, noticing that Nicanor was more harsh in his dealings with him, and acting with unaccustomed rudeness when they met, concluded that this harshness was not a good sign. So he gathered together not a few of his men, and went into hiding from Nicanor.

<sup>31n</sup> When Nicanor realized that he had been cleverly outwitted by the man, he went to the great and holy temple, at a time when the priests were offering the customary sacrifices, and ordered them to surrender Judas. <sup>32</sup>As they declared under oath that they did not know where the man they sought was, <sup>33</sup>he stretched out his right arm toward the temple and swore this oath: “If you do not hand Judas over to me as prisoner, I will level this shrine of God to the ground; I will tear down the altar, and erect here a splendid temple to Dionysus.”

<sup>34</sup>With these words he went away. The priests stretched out their hands toward heaven, calling upon the unfailing defender of our nation in these words: <sup>35</sup>“Lord of all, though you are in need of nothing, you were pleased to have a temple for your dwelling place among us. <sup>36</sup>Therefore, Holy One, Lord of all holiness, preserve forever undefiled this house, which has been so recently purified.”<sup>o</sup>

Martyrdom of Razis. * <sup>37</sup>A certain Razis, one of the elders of Jerusalem, was denounced to Nicanor as a patriot. A man highly regarded, he was called a father of the Jews because of his goodwill toward them. <sup>38</sup>In the days before the revolt, he had been convicted of being a Jew, and had risked body and soul in his ardent zeal for Judaism. <sup>39</sup>Nicanor, to show his disdain for the Jews, sent more than five hundred soldiers to arrest him. <sup>40</sup>He thought that by arresting that man he would deal the Jews a hard blow.

<sup>41</sup>But when the troops, on the point of capturing the tower, were forcing the outer gate and calling for fire to set the door ablaze, Razis, now caught on all sides, turned his sword against himself, <sup>42</sup>preferring to die nobly* rather than fall into the hands of vile men and suffer outrages unworthy of his noble birth. <sup>43</sup>In the excitement of the struggle he failed to strike exactly. So while the troops rushed in through the doors, he gallantly ran up to the top of the wall and courageously threw himself down into the crowd. <sup>44</sup>But as they quickly drew back and left an opening, he fell into the middle of the empty space. <sup>45</sup>Still breathing, and inflamed with anger, he got up and ran through the crowd, with blood gushing from his frightful wounds. Then, standing on a steep rock, <sup>46</sup>as he lost the last of his blood, he tore out his entrails and flung them with both hands into the crowd, calling upon the Lord of life and of spirit to give these back to him again. Such was the manner of his death.<sup>p</sup>

CHAPTER 15

Nicanor's Arrogance. <sup>1</sup>When Nicanor learned that Judas and his companions were in the territory of Samaria, he decided he could attack them in complete safety on the day of rest. <sup>2</sup>The Jews who were forced to accompany him pleaded, "Do not massacre them so savagely and barbarously, but show respect for the day which the All-seeing has exalted with holiness above all other days." <sup>3</sup>At this the thrice-accursed wretch asked if there was a ruler in heaven who prescribed the keeping of the sabbath day.<sup>q</sup> <sup>4</sup>They replied, "It is the living Lord, the ruler in heaven, who commands the observance of the sabbath day." <sup>5</sup>Then he said, "I, the ruler on earth, command you to take up arms and carry out the king's business." Nevertheless he did not succeed in carrying out his cruel plan.

<sup>6</sup>In his utter boastfulness and arrogance Nicanor had determined to erect a public victory monument* over Judas and his companions. <sup>7</sup>But Maccabeus remained confident, fully convinced that he would receive help from the Lord. <sup>8</sup>He urged his men not to fear the attack of the Gentiles, but mindful of the help they had received in the past from Heaven, to expect now the victory that would be given them by the Almighty. <sup>9</sup>By encouraging them with words from the law and the prophets,* and by reminding them of the battles they had already won, he filled them with fresh enthusiasm. <sup>10</sup>Having stirred up their courage, he gave his orders and pointed out at the same time the perfidy of the Gentiles and their violation of oaths. <sup>11</sup>When he had armed each of them, not so much with the security of shield and spear as with the encouragement of noble words, he cheered them all by relating a dream, a kind of waking vision, worthy of belief.

his right hand, Jeremiah presented a gold sword to Judas. As he gave it to him he said, <sup>16</sup>“Accept this holy sword as a gift from God; with it you shall shatter your adversaries.”

<sup>17</sup>Encouraged by Judas’ words, so noble and capable of instilling valor and stirring young hearts to courage, they determined not merely to march, but to charge gallantly and decide the issue by hand-to-hand combat with the utmost courage, since city, sanctuary and temple were in danger. <sup>18</sup>They were not so much concerned about wives and children, or family and relations; their first and foremost fear was for the consecrated sanctuary.<sup>s</sup> <sup>19</sup>Those who were left in the city suffered no less an agony, anxious as they were about the battle in the open country. <sup>20</sup>Everyone now awaited the decisive moment. The enemy were already drawing near with their troops drawn up in battle line, their beasts placed in strategic positions, and their cavalry stationed on the flanks.

Defeat of Nicanor. <sup>21</sup>Maccabeus, surveying the hosts before him, the variety of weaponry, and the fierceness of their beasts, stretched out his hands toward heaven and called upon the Lord who works wonders; for he knew that it is not weapons but the Lord’s decision that brings victory to those who deserve it. <sup>22</sup>Calling upon God, he spoke in this manner: “You, master, sent your angel in the days of King Hezekiah of Judea, and he slew a hundred and eightyfive thousand men of Sennacherib’s camp.<sup>t</sup> <sup>23</sup>And now, Sovereign of the heavens, send a good angel to spread fear and trembling ahead of us. <sup>24</sup>By the might of your arm may those be struck down who have blasphemously come against your holy people!” With these words he ended his prayer.

<sup>30</sup>Then Judas, that man who was ever in body and soul the chief defender of his fellow citizens, and had maintained from youth his affection for his compatriots, ordered Nicanor's head and right arm up to the shoulder to be cut off and taken to Jerusalem. <sup>31</sup>When he arrived there, he assembled his compatriots, stationed the priests before the altar, and sent for those in the citadel.* <sup>32</sup>He showed them the vile Nicanor's head and the wretched blasphemer's arm that had been boastfully stretched out against the holy dwelling of the Almighty. <sup>33</sup>He cut out the tongue of the godless Nicanor, saying he would feed it piecemeal to the birds and would hang up the other wages of his folly opposite the temple. <sup>34</sup>At this, everyone looked toward heaven and praised the Lord who manifests himself: "Blessed be the one who has preserved undefiled his own place!" <sup>35</sup>Judas hung Nicanor's head and arm on the wall of the citadel, a clear and evident sign to all of the Lord's help.<sup>v</sup> <sup>36</sup>By public vote it was unanimously decreed never to let this day pass unobserved, but to celebrate the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, called Adar in Aramaic, the eve of Mordecai's Day.* <sup>w</sup>

VII. Epilogue

Compiler's Apology. <sup>37</sup>Since Nicanor's doings ended in this way, with the city remaining in the possession of the Hebrews from that time on, I will bring my story to an end here too. <sup>38x</sup> If it is well written and to the point, that is what I wanted; if it is poorly done and mediocre, that is the best I could do. <sup>39</sup>Just as it is unpleasant to drink wine by itself or just water, whereas wine mixed with water makes a delightful and pleasing drink, so a skillfully composed story delights the ears of those who read the work. Let this, then, be the end.

1:7 Demetrius: Demetrius II, king of Syria (145–139, 129–125 B.C.). The one hundred and sixty-ninth year: i.e., of the Seleucid era, 143 B.C. Regarding the dates in 1 and 2 Maccabees, see note on 1 Mc 1:10. On the troubles caused by Jason and his revolt against the kingdom, i.e., the rule of the legitimate high priest, see 2 Mc 4:7–22.

1:8 Our prayer was heard: in the victory of the Maccabees.

1:9 Feast of Booths in the month of Kislev: really the feast of the Dedication of the Temple, Hanukkah (2 Mc 10:1–8), celebrated on the twenty-fifth of Kislev (Nov.–Dec.). Its solemnity resembles that of the actual feast of Booths (Lv 23:33–43), celebrated on the fifteenth of Tishri (Sept.–Oct.); cf. 2 Mc 1:18.

1:10 The one hundred and eighty-eighth year: 124 B.C. The date pertains to the preceding, not the following letter. Senate: the council of Jewish elders of Jerusalem; cf. 1 Mc 12:6. King Ptolemy: Ptolemy VI Philometor, ruler of Egypt from 180 to 145 B.C.; he is mentioned also in 1 Mc 1:18; 10:51–59.

1:11–12 The king: Antiochus IV of Syria, the bitter persecutor of the Jews, who, as leader of the Syrian army that invaded Persia, perished there in 164 B.C.

1:13 Nanea: an oriental goddess comparable to Artemis of the Greeks.

1:14–17 Differing accounts of the death of Antiochus IV are found in 2 Mc 9:1–29 and in 1 Mc 6:1–16 (see also Dn 11:40–45). The writer of this letter had probably heard a distorted rumor of the king's death. This and other indications suggest that the letter was written very soon after Antiochus IV died, perhaps in 164 B.C.

1:18–36 This legendary account of Nehemiah's miraculous fire is incorporated in the letter because of its connection with the Temple and its rededication. Booths: see note on v. 9.

1:18 Nehemiah, the rebuilder of the temple: he rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem, but the Temple had been rebuilt by Zerubbabel almost a century before.

1:19 Persia: actually Babylonia, which later became part of the Persian empire.

1:36 By a play on words, the Greek term naphtha (petroleum) is assimilated to some Semitic word, perhaps nephthar, meaning "loosened."

2:4–5 This legendary account is given for the purpose of explaining why the postexilic Temple was the legitimate place of worship even without these sacred objects. The very mountain: Nebo;

cf. Dt 32:49; 34:1.

2:8 The place: the Temple of Jerusalem.

2:11 The statement attributed here to Moses seems to be based on Lv 10:16–20.

2:13 Nehemiah's memoirs: a lost apocryphal work, or perhaps Neh 1–7, 11–13.

2:20 For the account of the campaigns against Antiochus IV Epiphanes, see 4:7–10:9; and for the account of those against his son Antiochus V Eupator, see 10:10–13:26.

3:1–40 This legendary episode about Heliodorus is recounted here for the purpose of stressing the inviolability of the Temple of Jerusalem; its later profanation was interpreted as owing to the sins of the people; cf. 5:17–18.

3:1 Onias: Onias III was high priest from 196 to 175 B.C. and died in 171 B.C. He was the son of Simon, whose praises are sung in Sir 50:1–21.

3:3 Seleucus: Seleucus IV Philopator, who reigned from 187 to 175 B.C.

3:4 Bilgah: a priestly family mentioned in 1 Chr 24:14; Neh 12:5, 18.

3:11 Hyrcanus, son of Tobias: a member of the Tobiad family of Transjordan (Neh 2:10; 6:17–19; 13:4–8). Hyrcanus' father was Joseph, whose mother was the sister of the high priest Onias II.

4:7 Seleucus died: he was murdered by Heliodorus. Antiochus Epiphanes was his younger brother. Onias' brother showed his enthusiasm for the Greek way of life (v. 10) by changing his Hebrew name Joshua, or Jesus, to the Greek name Jason.

4:9 Youth center: an educational institution in which young men were trained both in Greek intellectual culture and in physical fitness. Citizens of Antioch: honorary citizens of Antioch, a Hellenistic city of the Seleucid Kingdom that had a corporation of such Antiochians, who enjoyed certain political and commercial privileges.

4:11 Eupolemus: one of the two envoys sent to Rome by Judas Maccabeus (1 Mc 8:17).

4:12 Since the gymnasium, where the youth exercised naked (Greek gymnos), lay in the Tyropoeon Valley to the east of the citadel, it was directly next to the Temple on its eastern side. The Greek hat: a wide-brimmed hat, traditional headgear of Hermes, the patron god of athletic contests; it formed part of the distinctive costume of the members of the "youth center."

4:20 Triremes: war vessels with three banks of oars.

4:21 Philometor: Ptolemy VI, king of Egypt, ca. 172 to ca. 145 B.C.

4:23 Menelaus: Jewish high priest from ca. 172 to his execution in 162 B.C. (13:3–8).

4:30 Mallus: a city of Cilicia (v. 36) in southeastern Asia Minor, about thirty miles east of Tarsus.

4:36 The city: Antioch. But some understand the Greek to mean "each city."

4:39 The city: Jerusalem. Menelaus was still in Syria.

5:1 Second expedition: the first invasion of Egypt by Antiochus IV in 169 B.C. (1 Mc 1:16–20) is not mentioned in 2 Maccabees, unless the coming of the Syrian army to Palestine (2 Mc 4:21–22) is regarded as the first invasion. The author of 2 Maccabees apparently combines the first pillage of Jerusalem in 169 B.C. after Antiochus' first invasion of Egypt (1 Mc 1:20–28; cf. 2 Mc 5:5–7) with the second pillage of the city two years later (167 B.C.), following the king's second invasion of Egypt in 168 B.C. (1 Mc 1:29–35; cf. 2 Mc 5:24–26).

5:5 Jason: brother of Onias III, claimant of the high priesthood (4:7–10). Later he was supplanted by Menelaus, who drove him into Transjordan (4:26).

5:8 Aretas: King Aretas I of the Nabateans; cf. 1 Mc 5:25.

5:22 Philip, a Phrygian by birth: the Philip of 2 Mc 6:11 and 8:8, but probably not the same as Philip the regent of 2 Mc 9:29 and 1 Mc 6:14.

5:23 Mount Gerizim: the sacred mountain of the Samaritans at Shechem; cf. 2 Mc 6:2.

5:24 Apollonius: the Mysian commander of 1 Mc 1:29; mentioned also in 2 Mc 3:5; 4:4.

6:1 Athenian senator: or, Geron the Athenian, since geron can also be a proper name.

6:2 Olympian Zeus: equated with the Syrian Baal Shamen (“the lord of the heavens”), a term which the Jews mockingly rendered as shiqqus shomem, “desolating abomination” (Dn 9:27; 11:31; 12:11; 1 Mc 1:54).

6:7 Dionysus: also called Bacchus, the god of the grape harvest and of wine; ivy was one of his symbols.

6:18–7:42 The stories of Eleazar and of the mother and her seven sons, among the earliest models of “martyrology,” were understandably popular. Written to encourage God’s people in times of persecution, they add gruesome details to the record of tortures, and place long speeches in the mouths of the martyrs.

7:9 The King of the universe will raise us up: here, and in vv. 11, 14, 23, 29, 36, belief in the future resurrection of the body, at least for the just, is clearly stated; cf. also 12:44; 14:46; Dn 12:2.

7:28 God did not make them out of existing things: that is, all things were made solely by God’s omnipotent will and creative word; cf. Heb 11:3. This statement has often been taken as a basis for “creation out of nothing” (Latin creatio ex nihilo).

8:8–29, 34–35 This account of the campaign of Nicanor and Gorgias against Judas is paralleled, with certain differences, in 1 Mc 3:38–4:24.

8:10 Tribute owed by the king to the Romans: the payment imposed on Antiochus III in 188 B.C. by the treaty of Apamea.

8:11 Ninety slaves for a talent: a low price for so many slaves, thus expressing the opponents’ contempt for the Jews.

8:20 Galatians: a mercenary force, defeated by Jews and Macedonians in Babylon. Nothing else is known about this battle.

8:22 Joseph: called John in 1 Mc 2:2; 9:36, 38. This paragraph interrupts the story of Nicanor’s defeat, which is resumed in v. 34. The purpose of the author apparently is to group together the defeats suffered by the Syrians on various occasions. Battles against Timothy are recounted in 1 Mc 5:37–44 and 2 Mc 12:10–25; against Bacchides, in 1 Mc 7:8–20.

8:23 Eleazar: this parenthetical reference notes the existence of a fifth brother; cf. 1 Mc 2:5.

9:1–29 In order to keep together the various accounts of God’s punishment of the persecutors of his people, the author places here the stories of Antiochus’ illness and death (in actuality the king died about the same time as the purification of the Temple, i.e., 164 B.C.; cf. 1 Mc 4:36–59; 6:1–16; 2 Mc 10:1–8); of Judas’ campaigns in Idumea and Transjordan; cf. 1 Mc 5:1–51; 2 Mc 10:14–38; and of the first expedition of Lysias (1 Mc 4:26–35; 2 Mc 11:1–15).

9:19–27 Despite the statement in v. 18 this letter is not really a supplication. It is rather a notification to all the king’s subjects of the appointment of his son as his successor and a request that they be loyal to the new king. Apparently the same letter, which has every appearance of being authentic, was sent to the various peoples throughout the kingdom, with only a few words of address changed for each group.

9:29 Foster brother: an honorary title conferred by the king on prominent courtiers, whether or not they had been raised with him. Philip tried to seize control of Antioch from the young Antiochus V (1 Mc 6:55–56, 63) and fled to Egypt when he failed.

10:3 Two years: three years according to 1 Mc 1:54 and 4:52.

10:7 Rods entwined with leaves: the wreathed wands (thyrsoi) carried in processions honoring Dionysus (6:7) were apparently not regarded as distinctively pagan.

10:12 Ptolemy, called Macron: son of Dorymenes (4:45); he supported Antiochus IV in 168 B.C. during his invasion of Cyprus.

10:14–23 Probably the same campaign of Judas against the Idumeans that is mentioned in 1 Mc 5:1–3.

10:24 Timothy, who had previously been defeated by the Jews: as recounted in 8:30–33.

10:28 As soon as dawn broke: the same battle at dawn as in 1 Mc 5:30–34.

10:37 Timothy ... they killed: apparently Timothy is still alive in 12:2, 18–25. Perhaps there was more than one Timothy. Or the present passage is not in chronological order. Gazara, v. 32 (Gezer), was not captured by the Jews until much later (cf. 1 Mc 9:50–52; 13:53). See 1 Mc 5:8 for the capture of Jazer.

11:1–12 The defeat of Lysias at Beth-zur probably occurred before the purification of the Temple; cf. 1 Mc 4:26–35.

11:5 Five stadia: one stadium is equal to about six hundred six feet. The actual distance to Beth-zur is about twenty miles.

11:21 The one hundred and forty-eighth year: 164 B.C. The reading of the name of the month and its position in the calendar are uncertain. The most likely chronological sequence of the four letters is vv. 16–21; vv. 34–38; vv. 27–33; vv. 22–26.

11:33 The date, which is the same as the date of the Romans' letter (v. 38), cannot be correct. The king's letter must be connected with the peace treaty of the one hundred forty-ninth year of the Seleucid era, i.e., 163 B.C. Perhaps the mention of the month of Xanthicus in the body of the letter (v. 30) caused the date of the Romans' letter to be transferred to this one.

11:38 The date is March 12, 164 B.C.

12:2 Apollonius, son of Gennaëus: not the Apollonius who was the son of Menestheus (4:21). Nicanor: probably distinct from the Nicanor of 14:2.

12:10 From there: not from Jamnia (vv. 8–9) or Joppa (vv. 3–7), but from a place in Transjordan; vv. 10–26 parallel the account given in 1 Mc 5:9–13, 24–54 of Judas' campaign in northern Transjordan.

12:17 Certain Jews known as Toubians: because they lived “in the land of Tob” (1 Mc 5:13).

12:26 Atargatis: a Syrian goddess, represented by the body of a fish, who in Hellenistic times was identified with Astarte and Artemis.

12:29 Scythopolis: the Greek name of the city of Bethshan; cf. 1 Mc 5:52.

12:35 One of Bacenor's men: certain ancient witnesses to the text have “one of the Toubians”; cf. v. 17.

12:42–45 This is the earliest statement of the doctrine that prayers (v. 42) and sacrifices (v. 43) for the dead are efficacious. Judas probably intended his purification offering to ward off punishment from the living. The author, however, uses the story to demonstrate belief in the resurrection of the just (7:9, 14, 23, 36), and in the possibility of expiation for the sins of otherwise good people who have died. This belief is similar to, but not quite the same as, the Catholic doctrine of purgatory.

13:2 They led: the Greek means literally “each (of them) led,” but it is unlikely that the author meant the already immense numbers to be doubled; the numbers are similar to those in 1 Mc 6:30.

13:4 Beroea: the Greek name of Aleppo in Syria.

13:5 Ashes: probably smoldering ashes; the tower resembles the ancient Persian fire towers.

13:16 They withdrew in triumph: according to 1 Mc 6:47 they fled.

13:21 Military secrets: probably about the lack of provisions in the besieged city; cf. 1 Mc 6:49.

13:24 Gerrhenes: probably the inhabitants of Gerar, southeast of Gaza.

14:1 Three years later: actually, Demetrius (I Soter), son of Seleucus (IV), landed at Tripolis in the year 151 of the Seleucid era (1 Mc 14:4), i.e., 162/161 B.C.; cf. 1 Mc 7:1–7.

14:3 Alcimus, a former high priest: he was apparently appointed high priest by Antiochus V after Menelaus was executed, and then deposed for collaborating with the Seleucids.

14:6 Hasideans, led by Judas Maccabeus: according to 1 Mc 2:42 and 7:12–17, the Hasideans were a party separate from the Maccabees.

14:24 Affection: compare 1 Mc 7:26–32, where there is no hint of this cordial relationship between Nicanor and Judas.

14:37–46 The story of Razis belongs to the “martyrology” class of literature; it is similar to the stories in 6:18–7:42.

14:42 Die nobly: Razis’s willingness to die nobly rather than to fall into enemy hands had a precedent in Saul (1 Sm 31:4). Razis took his life because he was convinced that God would restore his body in the resurrection of the dead (see 7:11, 22–23; 14:46).

15:6 Public victory monument: a heap of stones covered with the arms and armor of the fallen enemy.

15:9 The law and the prophets: the first of the three parts of the Hebrew Scriptures, called the sacred books (1 Mc 12:9; 2 Mc 2:14).

15:12 Onias, the former high priest: Onias III (3:1–40). Evidently the author believed that departed just persons were in some way alive even before their resurrection.

15:14 Aman: regarded by the postexilic Jews as one of the greatest figures in their history; cf. 2:1; Mt 16:14. Who ... prays for the people: Jeremiah’s prayer in heaven has been taken in the Roman Catholic tradition as a biblical witness to the intercession of the saints.

15:31 Those in the citadel: presumably Jewish soldiers; actually, the citadel was still in the possession of the Syrians (1 Mc 13:50).

15:36 Mordecai’s Day: the feast of Purim, celebrated on the fourteenth and fifteenth days of Adar (Est 3:7; 9:20–23; F:10).

a: 2 Mc 4:7–20.

THE WISDOM BOOKS

See RG 271–315

“Wisdom” is a convenient umbrella term to designate the Books of Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes (Qoheleth), Wisdom, and Sirach (Ecclesiasticus). Two other books are often associated with them: Psalms, a collection of mostly devotional lyrics, and the Song of Songs, a collection of love poems. All are marked by a skillful use of parallelism, or verses of balanced and symmetrical phrases. These works have been classified as wisdom or didactic literature, so called because their general purpose is instruction.

A striking feature of the wisdom books is the absence of references to the promises made to the patriarchs or to Moses, or to Sinai or typical items in Israelite tradition; Sirach (chaps. 44–50) and Wisdom (chaps. 10–19) are the exception. Biblical wisdom literature concentrates on daily human experience: how is life to be lived? In this respect it is comparable to other ancient Near Eastern compositions from Mesopotamia and Egypt that also reflect on the problems of everyday life. The literary style is wide-ranging: aphorisms, numerical sayings, paradoxes, instructions, alphabetical and acrostic poems, lively speeches, and so forth. Wisdom itself is an art: how to deal with various situations and achieve a good life. And it is also a teaching: the lessons garnered from experience were transmitted at various levels, from education in the home all the way to training in the court. Belief in the Lord and acceptance of the prevailing codes of conduct were presupposed; they fed into the training of youths. The task of wisdom is character formation: what is the wise path to follow? The lessons are conveyed by observations that challenge as well as by admonitions that warn. Although the need of discipline is underlined, the general approach is persuasion. The pursuit of wisdom demands more than human industry. Paradoxically, it remains also the gift of God (Prv 2:6). Its religious character is indicated by the steady identification of wisdom and virtue (e.g., Prv 10–15).

But wisdom is far more than a practical guide. The strongest personification in the Bible is Woman Wisdom, and she speaks somewhat mysteriously in divine accents about her origins and identity. Her appeal to humanity is sounded in several books: Prv 8; Sir 24; Wis 7–9; Bar 3:9–4:4. She offers “life” to her followers (Prv 8:35, “whoever finds me finds life”). This image of personified Wisdom is reflected in the Logos poem of Jn 1:1–18 and in Paul’s reference to Jesus as “the wisdom of God” (1 Cor 1:24, 30). The bearing of wisdom literature on the New Testament is also exemplified in the sayings and parables of Jesus and in the practical admonitions in the Letter of James.

Each book has a distinctive character. Proverbs consists of long poems dealing with moral conduct (chaps. 1–9), which introduce collections of aphorisms (chaps. 10–29) reflecting on the experiences of life. The Book of Job is a literary presentation of the problem of the suffering of the innocent and god-fearing Job. Psalms, the book of prayer par excellence, derives from varied origins, especially liturgical celebrations; it contains personal cries of agony as well as of praise and thanksgiving. Some betray a wisdom influence (e.g., Ps 37), and the very first Psalm serves as an invitation to learn about the ways of the just and wicked in the rest of the psalter. Ecclesiastes examines the hard questions of life, and has become famous for the expressive phrase “vanity of vanities.” The Song of Songs is a collection of poems that give meaning to human and divine love (Sg 8:6; Prv 30:18–19). Ben Sira is the only author who identifies himself (Sir 50:27), and circa 200 B.C. he writes a compendium of Jewish wisdom and creation theology. The Wisdom of Solomon was written in Greek against a Hellenistic background, affirming human immortality in terms of a continuing relationship with God. Except for Psalms (of which almost half are attributed to David), Job, and Sirach, the books are attributed to Solomon, but he is not the author. The Solomonic claim is doubtless due to his fame as a wise man, according to 1 Kgs 5:9–14; 10:1–10. Who were the sages? Some were found in ordinary families (father, mother, Prv 1:8, 10:1); others were scribes at court. All contributed, both men (the counselors of Absalom, 2 Sm 16–17; the men of King Hezekiah, Prv 25:1) and also women (the “wise woman” of Abel Beth-maacah, 2 Sm 20:16). The wisdom literature is predominantly a postexilic composition, but the dating is only approximate.

In Jewish tradition, Megillot (Scrolls) came to be the accepted term for the five books of Ruth, Song of Songs, Ecclesiastes, Lamentations, and Esther. In the Protestant tradition, Sirach and Wisdom are classified as apocrypha and not printed as a part of Scripture. The Orthodox tradition does accept them, along with other works, such as 3–4 Maccabees and the Prayer of Manasseh.

The Book of Job, named after its protagonist (apparently not an Israelite; cf. Ez 14:14, 20), is an exquisite dramatic treatment of the problem of the suffering of the innocent. The contents of the book, together with its artistic structure and elegant style, place it among the literary masterpieces of all time. This is a literary composition, and not a transcript of historical events and conversations.

The prologue (chaps. 1–2) provides the setting for Job’s testing. When challenged by the satan’s questioning of Job’s sincerity, the Lord gives leave for a series of catastrophes to afflict Job. Three friends come to console him. Job breaks out in complaint (chap. 3), and a cycle of speeches begins. Job’s friends insist that his plight can only be a punishment for personal wrongdoing and an invitation from God to repent. Job rejects their inadequate explanation and challenges God to respond (chaps. 3–31). A young bystander, Elihu, now delivers four speeches in support of the views of the three friends (chaps. 32–37). In response to Job’s plea that he be allowed to see God and hear directly the reason for his suffering, the Lord answers (38:1–42:6), not by explaining divine justice, but by cataloguing the wonders of creation. Job is apparently content with this, and, in an epilogue (42:7–17), the Lord restores Job’s fortune.

The author or authors of the book are unknown; it was probably composed some time between the seventh and fifth centuries B.C. Its literary pattern, with speeches, prologue and epilogue disposed according to a studied plan, indicates that the purpose of the writing is didactic. But the lessons that the book teaches are not transparent, and different interpretations of the divine speeches and of the final chapter are possible. The Book of Job does not definitively answer the problem of the suffering of the innocent, but challenges readers to come to their own understanding.

The Book of Job can be divided as follows:

- I. Prologue (1:1–2:13)
  - II. First Cycle of Speeches (3:1–14:22)
  - III. Second Cycle of Speeches (15:1–21:34)
  - IV. Third Cycle of Speeches (22:1–27:21)
  - V. The Poem on Wisdom (28:1–28)
  - VI. Job's Final Summary of His Cause (29:1–31:37)
  - VII. Elihu's Speeches (32:1–37:24)
  - VIII. The Lord and Job Meet (38:1–42:6)
  - IX. Epilogue (42:7–17)

I. Prologue

CHAPTER 1

Job's Piety.<sup>1</sup>In the land of Uz* there was a blameless and upright man named Job, <sup>a</sup> who feared God and avoided evil. <sup>2</sup>Seven sons and three daughters were born to him; <sup>3</sup>and he had seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred she-donkeys, and a very large household, so that he was greater than anyone in the East.* <sup>4</sup>His sons used to take turns giving feasts, sending invitations to their three sisters to eat and drink with them. <sup>5</sup> And when each feast had run its course, Job would send for them and sanctify them, rising early and offering sacrifices for every one of them. For Job said, “It may be that my children have sinned and cursed* God in their hearts.” Job did this habitually.

The Interview Between the Lord and the Satan. <sup>6b</sup>One day, when the sons of God* came to present themselves before the LORD, the satan also came among them.<sup>c</sup> <sup>7</sup>The LORD said to the satan, “Where have you been?” Then the satan answered the LORD and said,<sup>d</sup> “Roaming the earth and patrolling it.” <sup>8</sup>The LORD said to the satan, “Have you noticed my servant Job? There is no one on earth like him, blameless and upright, fearing God and avoiding evil.” <sup>9</sup> The satan answered the LORD and said, “Is it for nothing that Job is God-fearing? <sup>10</sup>Have you not surrounded him and his family and all that he has with your protection? You have blessed the work of his hands, and his livestock are spread over the land. <sup>11e</sup> But now put forth your hand and touch all that he has, and surely he will curse you to your face.” <sup>12</sup>The LORD said to the satan, “Very well, all that he has is in your power; only do not lay a hand on him.” So the satan went forth from the presence of the LORD.

The First Trial. <sup>13</sup> One day, while his sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in the house of their eldest brother, <sup>14</sup>a messenger came to Job and said, “The oxen were plowing and the donkeys grazing beside them, <sup>15</sup>and the Sabeans* carried them off in a raid. They put the servants to the sword, and I alone have escaped to tell you.” <sup>16</sup>He was still speaking when another came and said, “God’s fire has fallen from heaven and struck the sheep and the servants and consumed them; I alone have escaped to tell you.” <sup>17</sup>He was still speaking when another came and said, “The Chaldeans* formed three columns, seized the camels, carried them off, and put the servants to the sword; I alone have escaped to tell you.” <sup>18</sup>He was still speaking when another came and said, “Your sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in the house of their eldest brother, <sup>19</sup>and suddenly a great wind came from across the desert and smashed the four corners of the house. It fell upon the young people and they are dead; I alone have escaped to tell you.”

Job’s Reaction. <sup>20</sup>Then Job arose and tore his cloak and cut off his hair. He fell to the ground and worshiped. <sup>21</sup>He said,

“Naked I came forth from my mother’s womb,<sup>f</sup>
and naked shall I go back there.*
The LORD gave and the LORD has taken away;
blessed be the name of the LORD!”

<sup>22</sup>In all this Job did not sin,<sup>g</sup> nor did he charge God with wrong.

CHAPTER 2

See RG 273–79

The Second Interview. <sup>1</sup>One day, when the sons of God<sup>h</sup> came to present themselves before the LORD, the satan also came with them. <sup>2</sup>The LORD said to the satan, “Where have you been?” Then the satan answered the LORD and said, “Roaming the earth and patrolling it.” <sup>3</sup>The LORD said to the satan, “Have you noticed my servant Job? There is no one on earth like him, blameless and upright, fearing God and avoiding evil.<sup>i</sup> He still holds fast to his innocence although you incited me against him to ruin him for nothing.” <sup>4</sup>The satan answered the LORD and said, “Skin for skin! * All that a man has he will give for his life. <sup>5j</sup> But put forth your hand and touch his bone and his flesh. Then surely he will curse you to your face.” <sup>6</sup>And the LORD said to the satan, “He is in your power; only spare his life.”

The Second Trial. <sup>7</sup>So the satan went forth from the presence of the LORD and struck Job with severe boils from the soles of his feet to the crown of his head.

Job’s Reaction. <sup>8</sup>He took a potsherd to scrape himself, as he sat among the ashes. <sup>9</sup>Then his wife said to him,<sup>k</sup> “Are you still holding to your innocence? Curse God and die!”* <sup>10</sup>But he said to her, “You speak as foolish women do. We accept good things from God; should we not accept evil?” Through all this, Job did not sin in what he said.<sup>l</sup>

Job’s Three Friends. <sup>11</sup>Now when three of Job’s friends heard of all the misfortune that had come upon him, they set out each one from his own place: Eliphaz from Teman,* Bildad from Shuh, and Zophar from Naamath. They met and journeyed together to give him sympathy and comfort. <sup>12</sup>But when, at a distance, they lifted up their eyes and did not recognize him, they began to weep aloud; they tore their cloaks and threw dust into the air over their heads. <sup>13</sup>Then they sat down upon the ground with him seven days and seven nights, but none of them spoke a word to him; for they saw how great was his suffering.

II. First Cycle of Speeches

CHAPTER 3

See RG 273–79

Job's Complaint. <sup>1</sup> After this, Job opened his mouth and cursed his day. <sup>2</sup> Job spoke out and said:

<sup>3</sup> Perish the day on which I was born,<sup>m</sup> the night when they said, "The child is a boy!"

<sup>4</sup> May that day be darkness:
may God* above not care for it,
may light not shine upon it!

<sup>5</sup> May darkness and gloom claim it, clouds settle upon it,
blackness of day* affright it!

<sup>6</sup> May obscurity seize that night;
may it not be counted among the days
of the year,
nor enter into the number of the months!

<sup>7</sup> May that night be barren;
let no joyful outcry greet it!

<sup>8</sup> Let them curse it who curse the Sea, those skilled at disturbing Leviathan!*

<sup>9</sup> May the stars of its twilight be darkened; may it look for daylight, but have none,
nor gaze on the eyes of the dawn,

<sup>10</sup> Because it did not keep shut the doors of the womb
to shield my eyes from trouble!

<sup>11</sup> Why did I not die at birth,<sup>n</sup>
come forth from the womb and expire?

<sup>12</sup> Why did knees receive me, or breasts nurse me?

<sup>13</sup> For then I should have lain down and been tranquil;
had I slept, I should then have been at rest

- 14 With kings and counselors of the earth who rebuilt what were ruins
- 15 Or with princes who had gold and filled their houses with silver.
- 16 Or why was I not buried away like a stillborn child, like babies that have never seen the light?
- 17 There * the wicked cease from troubling,
there the weary are at rest.
- 18 The captives are at ease together,
and hear no overseer's voice.
- 19 Small and great are there;
the servant is free from the master.
- 20 Why is light given to the toilers, life to the bitter in spirit?
- 21 They wait for death and it does not come;
they search for it more than for hidden treasures.
- 22 They rejoice in it exultingly,
and are glad when they find the grave:
- 23 A man whose path is hidden from him, one whom God has hemmed in! *
- 24 For to me sighing comes more readily than food;
my groans well forth like water.
- 25 For what I feared overtakes me;
what I dreaded comes upon me.
- 26 I have no peace nor ease;
I have no rest, for trouble has come!

CHAPTER 4

See RG 273–79

Eliphaz's First Speech. <sup>1</sup>Then Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>If someone attempts a word with you,
would you mind?

How can anyone refrain from speaking?

<sup>3</sup>Look, you have instructed many,
and made firm their feeble hands.

<sup>4</sup>Your words have upheld the stumbler;
you have strengthened faltering knees.

<sup>5</sup>But now that it comes to you, you are impatient;
when it touches you, you are dismayed.

<sup>6</sup>Is not your piety a source of confidence, and your integrity of life your hope?

<sup>7</sup>Reflect now, what innocent person perishes?<sup>o</sup>
Where are the upright destroyed?

<sup>8</sup>As I see it, those who plow mischief and sow trouble will reap them.

<sup>9</sup>By the breath of God they perish,<sup>p</sup> and by the blast of his wrath they are consumed.

<sup>10</sup>Though the lion * roars, though the king of beasts cries out, yet the teeth of the young lions are broken;

<sup>11</sup>The old lion perishes for lack of prey, and the cubs of the lioness are scattered.

<sup>12</sup>A word was stealthily brought to me,*
my ear caught a whisper of it.

<sup>13</sup>In my thoughts during visions of the night,<sup>q</sup>
when deep sleep falls on mortals,

- <sup>14</sup>Fear came upon me, and shuddering, that terrified me to the bone.
- <sup>15</sup>Then a spirit passed before me,
and the hair of my body stood on end.
- <sup>16</sup>It paused, but its likeness I could not recognize;
a figure was before my eyes,
in silence I heard a voice:<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>17</sup>“Can anyone be more in the right than God?<sup>s</sup>
Can mortals be more blameless than their Maker?
- <sup>18</sup>Look, he puts no trust in his servants,<sup>t</sup> and even with his messengers he finds fault.
- <sup>19</sup>How much more with those who dwell in houses of clay,
whose foundation is in the dust,
who are crushed more easily than a moth!
- <sup>20</sup>Morning or evening they may be shattered;
unnoticed, they perish forever.
- <sup>21</sup>The pegs of their tent are plucked up;
they die without knowing wisdom.”

CHAPTER 5

See RG 273–79

<sup>1</sup>Call now! Will anyone respond to
you?

To which of the holy ones* will you turn?

<sup>2</sup>Surely impatience kills the fool and indignation slays the simpleton.

<sup>3</sup>I have seen a fool spreading his roots,<sup>u</sup>
but I cursed his household suddenly:

<sup>4</sup>May his children be far from safety;
may they be crushed at the gate*
without a rescuer.

<sup>5</sup>What they have reaped may the hungry eat up,
or God take away by blight,
or the thirsty swallow their substance.

<sup>6</sup>For not from dust does mischief come,
nor from the soil does trouble sprout.

<sup>7</sup>Human beings beget mischief as sparks* fly upward.

<sup>8</sup>In your place, I would appeal to God, and to God I would state my plea.

<sup>9*</sup>He does things great and unsearchable,
things marvelous and innumerable.

<sup>10</sup>He gives rain upon the earth and sends water upon the fields;

<sup>11<sup>v</sup></sup>He sets up the lowly on high,
and those who mourn are raised to safety.

<sup>12</sup>He frustrates the plans of the cunning,
so that their hands achieve no success;

<sup>13</sup>He catches the wise in their own ruses,<sup>w</sup> and the designs of the crafty are routed.

<sup>14</sup>They meet with darkness in the daytime, at noonday they grope as though it were night.

<sup>15</sup>But he saves the poor from the sword of their mouth,* from the hand of the mighty.

<sup>16</sup>Thus the needy have hope,
and iniquity closes its mouth.

The Almighty's* discipline do not reject.

<sup>18</sup>For he wounds, but he binds up;<sup>x</sup>
he strikes, but his hands give healing.

<sup>19</sup>Out of six troubles he will deliver you, and at the seventh* no evil shall touch
you.

<sup>20</sup>In famine he will deliver you from death, and in war from the power of the sword;

<sup>21</sup>From the scourge of the tongue you shall be hidden,
and you shall not fear approaching ruin.

<sup>22</sup>At ruin and want you shall laugh;
the beasts of the earth, do not fear.

<sup>23</sup>With the stones of the field shall your covenant be,
and the wild beasts shall be at peace
with you.

<sup>24</sup>And you shall know that your tent is secure;
taking stock of your household, you shall miss nothing.

<sup>25</sup>You shall know that your descendants are many,
and your offspring like the grass of the earth.

<sup>26</sup>You shall approach the grave in full vigor, as a shock of grain comes in at its season.

<sup>27</sup>See, this we have searched out; so it is!
This we have heard, and you should know.

Job's First Reply. <sup>1</sup>Then Job answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>Ah, could my anguish but be measured and my calamity laid with it in the scales,

<sup>3</sup>They would now outweigh the sands of the sea!
Because of this I speak without restraint.

<sup>4</sup>For the arrows of the Almighty are in me,<sup>y</sup> and my spirit drinks in their poison;
the terrors of God are arrayed against
me.

<sup>5</sup>Does the wild donkey bray when it has grass?*
Does the ox low over its fodder?

<sup>6</sup>Can anything insipid be eaten without salt?
Is there flavor in the white of an egg?

<sup>7</sup>I refuse to touch them;
they are like loathsome food to me.

<sup>8</sup>Oh, that I might have my request, and that God would grant what I long for:

<sup>9</sup>Even that God would decide to crush me, that he would put forth his hand and cut me off!

<sup>10</sup>Then I should still have consolation and could exult through unrelenting pain, because I have not transgressed the commands of the Holy One.

<sup>11</sup>What strength have I that I should endure, and what is my limit that I should be patient?

<sup>12</sup>Have I the strength of stones, or is my flesh of bronze?

- 13 Have I no helper,<sup>z</sup> and has my good sense deserted me?
- 14 A friend owes kindness to one in despair, though he has forsaken the fear of the Almighty.
- 15 My companions are undependable as a wadi,
as watercourses that run dry in the wadies;
- 16 Though they may be black with ice,
and with snow heaped upon them,
- 17 Yet once they flow, they cease to be;
in the heat, they disappear from their
place.
- 18 Caravans wander from their routes;
they go into the wasteland and perish.
- 19 The caravans of Tema* search,
the companies of Sheba have hopes;
- 20 They are disappointed, though they were confident;
they come there and are frustrated.
- 21 It is thus that you have now become for me;*
you see a terrifying thing and are afraid.
- 22 Have I said, "Give me something, make a bribe on my behalf from your possessions"?
- 23 Or "Deliver me from the hand of the enemy,
redeem me from oppressors"?
- 24 Teach me, and I will be silent;
make me understand how I have erred.
- 25 How painful honest words can be;
yet how unconvincing is your argument!
- 26 Do you consider your words as proof, but the sayings of a desperate man as wind?
- 27 You would even cast lots for the orphan,
and would barter over your friend!

<sup>28</sup>Come, now, give me your attention;
surely I will not lie to your face.

<sup>29</sup>Think it over; let there be no injustice.
Think it over; I still am right.

<sup>30</sup>Is there insincerity on my tongue, or cannot my taste discern falsehood?

CHAPTER 7

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1a</sup> Is not life on earth a drudgery,* its days like those of a hireling?
- <sup>2</sup> Like a slave who longs for the shade,
a hireling who waits for wages,
- <sup>3</sup> So I have been assigned months of futility,
and troubled nights have been counted off for me.
- <sup>4</sup> When I lie down I say, “When shall I arise?”
then the night drags on;
I am filled with restlessness until the dawn.
- <sup>5</sup> My flesh is clothed with worms and scabs;<sup>b</sup>
my skin cracks and festers;
- <sup>6</sup> My days are swifter than a weaver’s shuttle;
they come to an end without hope.
- <sup>7</sup> Remember that my life is like the wind;<sup>c</sup>
my eye will not see happiness again.
- <sup>8</sup> The eye that now sees me shall no more behold me;
when your eye is on me, I shall be gone.
- <sup>9</sup> As a cloud dissolves and vanishes,<sup>d</sup> so whoever goes down to Sheol shall not come up.
- <sup>10</sup> They shall not return home again;
their place shall know them no more.
- <sup>11</sup> My own utterance I will not restrain;
I will speak in the anguish of my spirit;
I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.
- <sup>12*</sup> Am I the Sea, or the dragon, that you place a watch over me?*

13 When I say, "My bed shall comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint,"

14 Then you frighten me with dreams and terrify me with visions,

15 So that I should prefer strangulation and death rather than my existence.*

16 I waste away: I will not live forever;<sup>e</sup> let me alone, for my days are but a breath.

17* What are human beings, that you make much of them,
or pay them any heed?

18 You observe them every morning<sup>f</sup> and try them at every moment!

19 How long before you look away from
me,
and let me alone till I swallow my spit?

20 If I sin, what do I do to you,
O watcher of mortals?

Why have you made me your target?
Why should I be a burden for you?

21 Why do you not pardon my offense, or take away my guilt?

For soon I shall lie down in the dust;
and should you seek me I shall be gone.

CHAPTER 8

See RG 273–79

Bildad's First Speech. <sup>1</sup>Bildad the Shuhite answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>How long will you utter such things?
The words from your mouth are a mighty wind!

<sup>3</sup>Does God pervert judgment,<sup>g</sup>
does the Almighty pervert justice?

<sup>4</sup>If your children have sinned against him and he has left them in the grip of their guilt,

<sup>5</sup>Still, if you yourself have recourse to God
and make supplication to the Almighty,

<sup>6</sup>Should you be blameless and upright, surely now he will rouse himself for
you
and restore your rightful home.

<sup>7</sup>Though your beginning was small,
your future will flourish indeed.

<sup>8</sup>Inquire of the former generations, pay attention to the experience of their ancestors—<sup>h</sup>

<sup>9</sup>As we are but of yesterday and have no knowledge,
because our days on earth are but a shadow—<sup>i</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Will they not teach you and tell you and utter their words of understanding?

<sup>11</sup>* Can the papyrus grow up without mire?
Can the reed grass flourish without water?

<sup>12</sup>While it is yet green and uncut,
it withers quicker than any grass.

<sup>13</sup>So is the end of everyone who forgets

God,
and so shall the hope of the godless perish.

<sup>14</sup>His confidence is but a gossamer thread, his trust is a spider's house.

<sup>15</sup>He shall lean upon his house, but it shall not stand;
he shall cling to it, but it shall not endure.

<sup>16</sup>He thrives in full sun,
and over his garden his shoots go forth;

<sup>17</sup>About a heap of stones his roots are entwined;
among the rocks he takes hold.

<sup>18</sup>Yet if one tears him from his place, it will disown him: "I have never seen
you!"

<sup>19</sup>There he lies rotting beside the road, and out of the soil another sprouts.

<sup>20</sup>Behold, God will not cast away the upright;
neither will he take the hand of the
wicked.

<sup>21</sup>Once more will he fill your mouth with laughter
and your lips with rejoicing.

<sup>22</sup>Those who hate you shall be clothed with shame,
and the tent of the wicked shall be no more.

CHAPTER 9

See RG 273–79

Job's Second Reply. <sup>1</sup>Then Job answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>I know well that it is so;
but how can anyone be in the right before God?

<sup>3</sup>Should one wish to contend with him,* he could not answer him once in a thousand times.

<sup>4</sup>God is wise in heart and mighty in strength;
who has withstood him and remained whole?

<sup>5</sup>He removes the mountains before they know it;
he overturns them in his anger.

<sup>6</sup>He shakes the earth out of its place,<sup>j</sup> and the pillars beneath it tremble.

<sup>7</sup>He commands the sun, and it does not rise;
he seals up the stars.

<sup>8</sup>He alone stretches out the heavens<sup>k</sup> and treads upon the back of the sea.

<sup>9</sup>He made the Bear and Orion, the Pleiades and the constellations of the south;

<sup>10</sup>He does things great and unsearchable,
things marvelous and innumerable.

<sup>11</sup>Should he come near me, I do not see
him;
should he pass by, I am not aware of
him;

<sup>12</sup>Should he seize me forcibly, who can resist?
Who can say to him, “What are you doing?”

<sup>13</sup>He is God and he does not relent;

the helpers of Rahab* bow beneath
him.

<sup>14</sup>How then could I give him any answer, or choose out arguments against him!

<sup>15</sup>Even though I were right, I could not answer,<sup>l</sup>
but should rather beg for what was due
me.

<sup>16</sup>If I appealed to him and he answered me,
I could not believe that he would listen
to me;

<sup>17</sup>With a storm he might overwhelm me,
and multiply my wounds for nothing;

<sup>18</sup>He would not allow me to draw breath,
but might fill me with bitter griefs.

<sup>19</sup>If it be a question of strength, he is mighty;
or of judgment, who will call him to account?

<sup>20</sup>Though I were right, my own mouth might condemn me;<sup>m</sup> were I innocent, it might put me in the wrong.

<sup>21</sup>I am innocent, but I cannot know it;
I despise my life.

<sup>22</sup>It is all one! therefore I say:
Both the innocent and the wicked he destroys.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>23</sup>When the scourge slays suddenly,
he scoffs at the despair of the innocent.

<sup>24</sup>The earth is given into the hands of the
wicked;
he covers the faces of its judges.
If it is not he, who then is it?

<sup>25</sup>My days are swifter than a runner,
they flee away; they see no happiness;<sup>o</sup>

<sup>26</sup>They shoot by like skiffs of reed,
like an eagle swooping upon its prey.

<sup>27</sup>If I say: I will forget my complaining,

I will lay aside my sadness and be of good cheer,

<sup>28</sup>Then I am in dread of all my pains;

I know that you * will not hold me innocent.

<sup>29</sup>It is I who will be accounted guilty;
why then should I strive in vain?

<sup>30</sup>If I should wash myself with soap and cleanse my hands with lye,

<sup>31</sup>Yet you would plunge me in the ditch,
so that my garments would abhor me.

<sup>32</sup>For he is not a man like myself, that I should answer him,
that we should come together in judgment.

<sup>33</sup>Would that there were an arbiter between us,
who could lay his hand upon us both

<sup>34</sup>and withdraw his rod from me,

So that his terrors did not frighten me;

<sup>35</sup>that I might speak without being afraid of him.

Since this is not the case with me,

<sup>10:1*</sup> I loathe my life.<sup>p</sup>

CHAPTER 10

See RG 273–79

I will give myself up to complaint;
I will speak from the bitterness of my soul.

<sup>2</sup>I will say to God: Do not put me in the wrong!
Let me know why you oppose me.

<sup>3*</sup> Is it a pleasure for you to oppress, to spurn the work of your hands,
and shine on the plan of the wicked?

<sup>4</sup>Have you eyes of flesh?
Do you see as mortals see?

<sup>5</sup>Are your days like the days of a mortal,<sup>q</sup> and are your years like a human lifetime,

<sup>6</sup>That you seek for guilt in me
and search after my sins,

<sup>7</sup>Even though you know that I am not wicked,<sup>r</sup> and that none can deliver me out of your hand?

<sup>8</sup>Your hands have formed me and fashioned me;
will you then turn and destroy me?

<sup>9</sup>Oh, remember that you fashioned me from clay!<sup>s</sup> Will you then bring me down to dust
again?

<sup>10</sup>Did you not pour me out like milk, and thicken me like cheese?

<sup>11</sup>With skin and flesh you clothed me, with bones and sinews knit me together.

<sup>12</sup>Life and love you granted me, and your providence has preserved my spirit.

<sup>13</sup>Yet these things you have hidden in your heart;

I know they are your purpose:

<sup>14</sup>If I should sin, you would keep a watch
on me,
and from my guilt you would not absolve me.

<sup>15</sup>If I should be wicked, alas for me!
even if righteous, I dare not hold up my head,
sated with shame, drenched in affliction!

<sup>16</sup>Should it lift up, you hunt me like a lion:
repeatedly you show your wondrous power against me,

<sup>17</sup>You renew your attack* upon me and multiply your harassment of me;
in waves your troops come against me.

<sup>18</sup>Why then did you bring me forth from the womb?<sup>t</sup>
I should have died and no eye have seen me.

<sup>19</sup>I should be as though I had never lived;
I should have been taken from the womb to the grave.

<sup>20</sup>Are not my days few? Stop!
Let me alone, that I may recover a little

<sup>21</sup>Before I go whence I shall not return,<sup>u</sup> to the land of darkness and of gloom,

<sup>22</sup>The dark, disordered land where darkness is the only light.

CHAPTER 11

See RG 273–79

Zophar's First Speech. <sup>1</sup>And Zophar the Naamathite answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>Should not many words be answered, or must the garrulous man necessarily be right?

<sup>3</sup>Shall your babblings keep others silent, and shall you deride and no one give rebuke?

<sup>4</sup>Shall you say: “My teaching is pure, and I am clean in your sight”?

<sup>5</sup>But oh, that God would speak,*
and open his lips against you,

<sup>6</sup>And tell you the secrets of wisdom,
for good sense has two sides;
So you might learn that God overlooks some of your sinfulness.

<sup>7</sup>Can you find out the depths of God?<sup>V</sup> or find out the perfection of the Almighty?

<sup>8</sup>It is higher than the heavens; what can you do?
It is deeper than Sheol; what can you
know?

<sup>9</sup>It is longer than the earth in measure, and broader than the sea.

<sup>10</sup>If he should seize and imprison or call to judgment, who then could turn him back?

<sup>11</sup>For he knows the worthless and sees iniquity; will he then ignore
it?

<sup>12</sup>An empty head will gain understanding, when a colt of a wild jackass<sup>W</sup> is born human.*

<sup>13</sup>If you set your heart aright
and stretch out your hands toward him,

<sup>14</sup>If iniquity is in your hand, remove it, and do not let injustice dwell in your tent,

<sup>15</sup>Surely then you may lift up your face in innocence;
you may stand firm and unafraid.

<sup>16</sup>For then you shall forget your misery, like water that has ebbed away you shall regard it.

<sup>17</sup>Then your life shall be brighter than the noonday;
its gloom shall become like the morning,

<sup>18</sup>And you shall be secure, because there is hope;
you shall look round you and lie down
in safety;<sup>x</sup>

<sup>19</sup>you shall lie down and no one will disturb you.

Many shall entreat your favor, but the wicked, looking on, shall be consumed with envy.

Escape shall be cut off from them,
their only hope their last breath.

CHAPTER 12

See RG 273–79

Job's Third Reply. <sup>1*</sup> Then Job answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>No doubt you are the people with whom wisdom shall die!

<sup>3</sup>But I have intelligence as well as you;<sup>y</sup>
I do not fall short of you;
for who does not know such things as these?

<sup>4</sup>I have become the sport of my neighbors:*
“The one whom God answers when he calls upon him,
The just, the perfect man,” is a laughingstock;<sup>z</sup>

<sup>5</sup>The undisturbed esteem my downfall a disgrace
such as awaits unsteady feet;

<sup>6</sup>Yet the tents of robbers are prosperous, and those who provoke God are secure,
whom God has in his power.*

<sup>7</sup>But now ask the beasts to teach you,
the birds of the air to tell you;

<sup>8</sup>Or speak to the earth to instruct you,
and the fish of the sea to inform you.

<sup>9</sup>Which of all these does not know that the hand of God has done this?

<sup>10</sup>In his hand is the soul of every living thing,<sup>a</sup>
and the life breath of all mortal flesh.

<sup>11</sup>Does not the ear judge words as the mouth tastes food?<sup>b</sup>

<sup>12</sup>So with old age is wisdom,<sup>c</sup>
and with length of days understanding.

<sup>13</sup>With him are wisdom and might;
his are counsel and understanding.

- <sup>14</sup>If he knocks a thing down, there is no rebuilding;<sup>d</sup>
if he imprisons, there is no release.
- <sup>15</sup>He holds back the waters and there is drought;<sup>e</sup> he sends them forth and they overwhelm the land.
- <sup>16</sup>With him are strength and prudence;
the misled and the misleaders are his.
- <sup>17</sup>He sends counselors away barefoot, makes fools of judges.
- <sup>18</sup>He loosens the belt of kings, ties a waistcloth on their loins.*
- <sup>19</sup>He sends priests away barefoot, leads the powerful astray.
- <sup>20</sup>He silences the trusted adviser, takes discretion from the elders.
- <sup>21</sup>He pours shame on nobles,<sup>f</sup>
the waistband of the strong he loosens.
- <sup>22</sup>He uncovers deep things from the
darkness,
brings the gloom into the light.
- <sup>23</sup>He makes nations great and destroys
them,
spreads peoples abroad and abandons
them.
- <sup>24</sup>He takes understanding from the leaders of the land,
makes them wander in a pathless
desert.
- <sup>25</sup>They grope in the darkness without light;
he makes them wander like drunkards.

CHAPTER 13

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>All this my eye has seen;
my ear has heard and perceived it.
- <sup>2</sup>What you know, I also know;<sup>g</sup>
I do not fall short of you.
- <sup>3</sup>But I would speak with the Almighty;<sup>h</sup>
I want to argue with God.
- <sup>4</sup>But you gloss over falsehoods, you are worthless physicians, every one of you!
- <sup>5</sup>Oh, that you would be altogether silent;
that for you would be wisdom!
- <sup>6</sup>Hear now my argument and listen to the accusations from my lips.
- <sup>7</sup>Is it for God that you speak falsehood?
Is it for him that you utter deceit?
- <sup>8</sup>Is it for him that you show partiality?
Do you make accusations on behalf of
God?
- <sup>9</sup>Will it be well when he shall search you
out?
Can you deceive him as you do a mere human being?
- <sup>10</sup>He will openly rebuke you if in secret you show partiality.
- <sup>11</sup>Surely his majesty will frighten you and dread of him fall upon you.
- <sup>12</sup>Your reminders are ashy maxims, your fabrications mounds of clay.
- <sup>13</sup>Be silent! Let me alone that I may speak, no matter what happens to me.
- <sup>14</sup>I will carry my flesh between my teeth,
and take my life in my hand.*
- <sup>15</sup>Slay me though he might,<sup>i</sup> I will wait for
him;*

I will defend my conduct before him.

<sup>16</sup>This shall be my salvation:
no impious man can come into his presence.

<sup>17</sup>Pay close attention to my speech, give my statement a hearing.

<sup>18</sup>Behold, I have prepared my case,<sup>j</sup>
I know that I am in the right.

<sup>19</sup>If anyone can make a case against me, then I shall be silent and expire.

<sup>20</sup>Two things only do not use against me,* then from your presence I need not hide:

<sup>21</sup>Withdraw your hand far from me,
do not let the terror of you frighten me.

<sup>22</sup>Then call me, and I will respond;
or let me speak first, and answer me.

<sup>23</sup>What are my faults and my sins?
My misdeed, my sin make known to
me!

<sup>24</sup>Why do you hide your face and consider me your enemy?<sup>* k</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Will you harass a wind-driven leaf or pursue a withered straw?

<sup>26</sup>For you draw up bitter indictments against me,
and punish in me the faults of my youth.

<sup>27</sup>You put my feet in the stocks;
you watch all my paths
and trace out all my footsteps,

<sup>28</sup>Though I wear out like a leather bottle, like a garment the moth has consumed.

CHAPTER 14

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>Man born of woman is short-lived and full of trouble,<sup>* l</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Like a flower that springs up and fades,<sup>m</sup> swift as a shadow that does not abide.
- <sup>3</sup>Upon such a one will you set your eyes, bringing me into judgment before
you?
- <sup>4</sup>Can anyone make the unclean clean?<sup>n</sup>
No one can.
- <sup>5</sup>Since his days are determined—you know the number of his months;
you have fixed the limit which he cannot pass—
- <sup>6</sup>Look away from him and let him be, while, like a hireling, he completes his
day.
- <sup>7</sup>For a tree there is hope;
if it is cut down, it will sprout again,
its tender shoots will not cease.
- <sup>8</sup>Even though its root grow old in the earth and its stump die in the dust,
- <sup>9</sup>Yet at the first whiff of water it sprouts and puts forth branches like a young plant.
- <sup>10</sup>But when a man dies, all vigor leaves him;<sup>o</sup> when a mortal expires, where then is he?
- <sup>11</sup>As when the waters of a lake fail,
or a stream shrivels and dries up,
- <sup>12</sup>So mortals lie down, never to rise.
Until the heavens are no more, they shall not awake,
nor be roused out of their sleep.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>Oh, that you would hide me in Sheol,

- shelter me till your wrath is past,
fix a time to remember me!
- 14 If a man were to die, and live again, all the days of my drudgery I would wait<sup>q</sup>
for my relief to come.
- 15 You would call, and I would answer you;
you would long for the work of your hands.
- 16 Surely then you would count my steps,<sup>r</sup>
and not keep watch for sin in me.
- 17 My misdeeds would be sealed up in a pouch,*
and you would cover over my guilt.
- 18 Mountains fall and crumble,
rocks move from their place,
- 19 And water wears away stone, and floods wash away the soil of the land—
so you destroy the hope of mortals!
- 20 You prevail once for all against them and they pass on;
you dismiss them with changed appearance.
- 21 If their children are honored, they are not aware of it;
or if disgraced, they do not know about them.
- 22 Only for themselves, their pain;
only for themselves, their mourning.

III. Second Cycle of Speeches

CHAPTER 15

See RG 273–79

Second Speech of Eliphaz. <sup>1*</sup> Then Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>Does a wise man answer with windy opinions,
or puff himself up with the east wind?

<sup>3</sup>Does he argue in speech that does not avail,
and in words that are to no profit?

<sup>4</sup>You in fact do away with piety,
you lessen devotion toward God,

<sup>5</sup>Because your wickedness instructs your mouth,
and you choose to speak like the crafty.

<sup>6</sup>Your own mouth condemns you, not I;<sup>S</sup> your own lips refute you.

<sup>7</sup>Were you the first to be born?
Were you brought forth before the hills?

<sup>8</sup>Do you listen in on God's council<sup>t</sup> and restrict wisdom to yourself?

<sup>9</sup>What do you know that we do not know,<sup>u</sup> or understand that we do not?

<sup>10</sup>There are gray-haired old men among us, more advanced in years than your father.

<sup>11</sup>Are the consolations of God not enough for you,
and speech that deals gently with you?

<sup>12</sup>Why does your heart carry you away,
and why do your eyes flash,

<sup>13</sup>So that you turn your anger against God and let such words escape your mouth!

<sup>14</sup>How can any mortal be blameless,<sup>v</sup> anyone born of woman be righteous?<sup>w</sup>

<sup>15</sup>If in his holy ones God places no confidence,<sup>x</sup> and if the heavens are not without blame in his sight, 16How much less so is the abominable and corrupt:

people who drink in iniquity like
water!
17I will show you, if you listen to me;
what I have seen I will tell—18What the wise relate and have not contradicted since the days of their ancestors, 19To whom alone the land was given, when no foreigner moved among
them:
20The wicked is in torment all his days, and limited years are in store for the ruthless;
21The sound of terrors is in his ears;
when all is prosperous, a spoiler comes upon him.
22He despairs of escaping the darkness,
and looks ever for the sword;
23A wanderer, food for vultures,
he knows destruction is imminent.
24A day of darkness fills him with dread;
distress and anguish overpower him,
like a king expecting an attack.
25Because he has stretched out his hand against God
and arrogantly challenged the Almighty,
26Rushing defiantly against him,
with the stout bosses of his shields.
27Although he has covered his face with his crassness,
padded his loins with blubber, 28He shall dwell in ruined cities,
in houses that are deserted,
crumbling into rubble.

<sup>29</sup>He shall not be rich, his possessions shall not endure;
his property shall not spread over the land.

<sup>30</sup>A flame shall sear his early growth, and with the wind his blossoms shall disappear.

<sup>31</sup>Let him not trust in his height, misled, even though his height be like the palm tree.*

<sup>32</sup>He shall wither before his time, his branches no longer green.

<sup>33</sup>He shall be like a vine that sheds its grapes unripened, like an olive tree casting off its blossom.

<sup>34</sup>For the breed of the impious shall be sterile,<sup>y</sup> and fire shall consume the tents of extortioners.

<sup>35</sup>They conceive malice, bring forth deceit,<sup>z</sup> give birth to fraud.*

Job's Fourth Reply. <sup>1</sup>Then Job answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>I have heard this sort of thing many times.<sup>a</sup>

Troublesome comforters, all of you!

<sup>3</sup>Is there no end to windy words?
What sickness makes you rattle on?

<sup>4</sup>I also could talk as you do,
were you in my place.

I could declaim over you,
or wag my head at you;

<sup>5</sup>I could strengthen you with talk,
with mere chatter give relief.

<sup>6</sup>If I speak, my pain is not relieved;
if I stop speaking, nothing changes.

<sup>7</sup>But now he has exhausted me;
you have stunned all my companions.

<sup>8</sup>You * have shriveled me up; it is a witness, my gauntness rises up to testify against
me;

<sup>9</sup>His wrath tears and assails me,
he gnashes his teeth against me;
My enemy looks daggers at me.

<sup>10</sup>They gape at me with their mouths;
They strike me on the cheek with insults;
they are all enlisted against me.

<sup>11</sup>God has given me over to the impious; into the hands of the wicked he has cast me.

<sup>12</sup>I was in peace, but he dislodged me, seized me by the neck, dashed me to pieces.

He has set me up for a target;

<sup>13</sup>his arrows strike me from all directions.

He pierces my sides without mercy,

pours out my gall upon the ground.

<sup>14</sup>He pierces me, thrust upon thrust, rushes at me like a warrior.

<sup>15</sup>I have sewn sackcloth on my skin, laid my horn low in the dust.

<sup>16</sup>My face is inflamed with weeping,
darkness covers my eyes,

<sup>17</sup>Although my hands are free from violence, and my prayer sincere.

<sup>18</sup>O earth, do not cover my blood, nor let my outcry come to rest!*

<sup>19</sup>Even now my witness* is in heaven, my advocate is on high.

<sup>20</sup>My friends it is who wrong me;
before God my eyes shed tears,

<sup>21</sup>That justice may be done for a mortal with God:
as for a man with his neighbor.

<sup>22</sup>For my years are numbered,
and I go the road of no return.

CHAPTER 17

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>My spirit is broken, my days
finished,
my burial at hand.
- <sup>2</sup>Surely mockers surround me, at their provocation, my eyes grow dim.
- <sup>3</sup>Put up a pledge for me with you: * who is there to give surety for me?
- <sup>4</sup>You darken their minds to knowledge; therefore you will not exalt them.
- <sup>5</sup>For a share of property he informs on friends,
while the eyes of his children grow
dim.
- <sup>6</sup>I am made a byword of the people; <sup>b</sup>
I am one at whom people spit.
- <sup>7</sup>My eyes are blind with anguish,
and my whole frame is like a shadow.
- <sup>8</sup>The upright are astonished at this,
the innocent aroused against the wicked.
- <sup>9</sup>The righteous holds to his way,
the one with clean hands increases in strength.
- <sup>10</sup>But turn now, and come on again;
I do not find a wise man among you!
- <sup>11</sup>My days pass by, my plans are at an end,
the yearning of my heart.
- <sup>12</sup>They would change the night into day;
where there is darkness they talk of approaching light.
- <sup>13*</sup> If my only hope is dwelling in Sheol,
and spreading my couch in darkness,
- <sup>14</sup>If I am to say to the pit, “You are my father,”
and to the worm “my mother,” “my sister,”

<sup>15</sup>Where then is my hope, my happiness, who can see it?

<sup>16</sup>Will they descend with me into Sheol?
Shall we go down together into the dust?

CHAPTER 18

See RG 273–79

Bildad's Second Speech. <sup>1</sup>Then Bildad the Shuhite answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>When will you put an end to words?
Reflect, and then we can have discussion.

<sup>3</sup>Why are we accounted like beasts, equal to them in your sight?

<sup>4</sup>You who tear yourself in your anger—shall the earth be neglected on your account
or the rock be moved out of its place?

<sup>5</sup>Truly, the light of the wicked is extinguished;
the flame of his fire casts no light.

<sup>6</sup>In his tent light is darkness;
the lamp above him goes out.<sup>c</sup>

his own counsel casts him down.

<sup>8</sup>A net catches him by the feet,
he wanders into a pitfall.

<sup>9</sup>A trap seizes him by the heel,
a snare lays hold of him.

<sup>10</sup>A noose is hidden for him on the ground, a netting for him on the path.

<sup>11</sup>On every side terrors frighten him;<sup>d</sup> they harry him at each step.

<sup>12</sup>His strength is famished,
disaster is ready at his side,

<sup>13</sup>His skin is eaten to the limbs,
the firstborn of Death* eats his limbs.

<sup>14</sup>He is plucked from the security of his
tent;
and marched off to the king of terrors.*

<sup>15</sup>Fire lodges in his tent, over his abode brimstone is scattered.

- <sup>16</sup>Below, his roots dry up,
and above, his branches wither.
- <sup>17</sup>His memory perishes from the earth,<sup>e</sup> and he has no name in the countryside.
- <sup>18</sup>He is driven from light into darkness, and banished from the world.
- <sup>19</sup>He has neither offshoot nor offspring
among his people,
no survivor where once he dwelt.
- <sup>20</sup>Those who come after shall be appalled at his fate;
those who went before are seized with horror.
- <sup>21</sup>So is it then with the dwelling of the impious;
such is the place of the one who does not know God!

CHAPTER 19

See RG 273–79

Job's Fifth Reply. <sup>1*</sup> Then Job answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>How long will you afflict my spirit, grind me down with words?

<sup>3</sup>These ten times you have humiliated me, have assailed me without shame!

<sup>4</sup>Even if it were true that I am at fault,
my fault would remain with me;

<sup>5</sup>If truly you exalt yourselves at my expense,
and use my shame as an argument
against me,

<sup>6</sup>Know then that it is God who has dealt unfairly with me,
and compassed me round with his net.

<sup>7</sup>If I cry out “Violence!” I am not answered.<sup>f</sup>
I shout for help, but there is no justice.

<sup>8</sup>He has barred my way and I cannot pass;
veiled my path in darkness;

<sup>9</sup>He has stripped me of my glory, taken the diadem from my brow.

<sup>10</sup>He breaks me down on every side, and I am gone;
he has uprooted my hope like a tree.

<sup>11</sup>He has kindled his wrath against me; he counts me one of his enemies.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>12</sup>His troops advance as one;
they build up their road to attack me,
encamp around my tent.

<sup>13</sup>My family has withdrawn from me,<sup>h</sup>
my friends are wholly estranged.

<sup>14</sup>My relatives and companions neglect me,
my guests have forgotten me.

<sup>15</sup>Even my maidservants consider me a stranger;

I am a foreigner in their sight.
16 I call my servant, but he gives no answer, though I plead aloud with him.
17 My breath is abhorrent to my wife;<sup>i</sup>
I am loathsome to my very children.
18 Even young children despise me;
when I appear, they speak against me.
19 All my intimate friends hold me in horror;
those whom I loved have turned against me!<sup>j</sup> 20 My bones cling to my skin, and I have escaped by the skin of my teeth.*
21 Pity me, pity me, you my friends, for the hand of God has struck me!
22 Why do you pursue me like God,
and prey insatiably upon me?
23 Oh, would that my words were written down!<sup>k</sup>
Would that they were inscribed in a record: *
24 That with an iron chisel and with lead
they were cut in the rock forever!
25 As for me, I know that my vindicator lives,* and that he will at last stand forth upon the dust.<sup>l</sup> 26 This will happen when my skin has been stripped off,
and from my flesh I will see God:
27 I will see for myself, my own eyes, not another's, will behold him:
my inmost being is consumed with longing.
28 But you who say, "How shall we persecute him, seeing that the root of the matter is found in him?”

<sup>29</sup>Be afraid of the sword for yourselves, for your anger is a crime deserving the
sword;
that you may know that there is a judgment.

CHAPTER 20

See RG 273–79

Zophar's Second Speech. <sup>1</sup>Then Zophar the Naamathite answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>So now my thoughts provide an answer
for me,
because of the feelings within me.

<sup>3</sup>A rebuke that puts me to shame I hear, and from my understanding a spirit gives me a reply.

<sup>4</sup>Do you not know this: from of old, since human beings were placed upon
the earth,

<sup>5</sup>The triumph of the wicked is short and the joy of the impious but for a moment?<sup>m</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Though his pride mount up to the heavens
and his head reach to the clouds,

<sup>7</sup>Yet he perishes forever like the dung he uses for fuel,
and onlookers say, “Where is he?”<sup>n</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Like a dream he takes flight and cannot be found;
he fades away like a vision of the night.

<sup>9</sup>The eye which saw him does so no more;
nor shall his dwelling again behold
him.

<sup>10</sup>His sons will restore to the poor, and his hands will yield up his riches.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Though his bones are full of youthful vigor,
it shall lie with him in the dust.

<sup>12</sup>Though wickedness is sweet in his mouth,
and he hides it under his tongue,

- 13 Though he retains it and will not let it go but keeps it still within his mouth,
- 14 Yet in his stomach the food shall turn;
it shall be venom of asps inside him.
- 15 The riches he swallowed he shall vomit
up;
God shall make his belly disgorge
them.
- 16 The poison of asps he shall drink in;
the viper's fangs shall slay him.
- 17 He shall see no streams of oil,*
no torrents of honey or milk.
- 18 He shall give back his gains, never used;
like his profit from trade, never enjoyed.
- 19 Because he has oppressed and neglected
the poor,
and stolen a house he did not build;
- 20 For he has known no quiet in his greed,
in his treasure he cannot save himself.<sup>p</sup>
- 21 None of his survivors will consume it, therefore his prosperity shall not endure.
- 22<sup>q</sup> When he has more than enough, distress shall be his,
every sort of trouble shall come upon
him.
- 23 When he has filled his belly, God shall send against him the fury of his wrath
and rain down his missiles upon him.
- 24 Should he escape an iron weapon,
a bronze bow shall pierce him through;
- 25 The dart shall come out of his back,
a shining point out of his gall-bladder:
terrors fall upon him.
- 26 Complete darkness is in store for his treasured ones;
a fire unfanned shall consume him;<sup>r</sup> any survivor in his tent shall be destroyed.

<sup>27</sup>The heavens shall reveal his guilt,
and the earth rise up against him.

<sup>28</sup>The flood shall sweep away his house, torrents in the day of God's anger.

<sup>29</sup>This is the portion of the wicked, the heritage appointed him by God. * S

CHAPTER 21

See RG 273–79

Job's Sixth Reply. <sup>1</sup>Then Job answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>At least listen to my words,<sup>t</sup> and let that be the consolation you offer.

<sup>3</sup>Bear with me while I speak;
and after I have spoken, you can mock!

<sup>4</sup>Is my complaint toward any human being?
Why should I not be impatient?

<sup>5</sup>Look at me and be appalled, put your hands over your mouths.

<sup>6</sup>When I think of it, I am dismayed, and shuddering seizes my flesh.

<sup>7*</sup> Why do the wicked keep on living, grow old, become mighty in power?<sup>u</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Their progeny is secure in their sight;
their offspring are before their eyes.

<sup>9</sup>Their homes are safe, without fear,
and the rod of God is not upon them.

<sup>10</sup>Their bulls breed without fail;
their cows calve and do not miscarry.

<sup>11</sup>They let their young run free like sheep, their children skip about.

<sup>12</sup>They sing along with drum and lyre, and make merry to the sound of the pipe.

<sup>13</sup>They live out their days in prosperity, and tranquilly go down to Sheol.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Yet they say to God, “Depart from us,<sup>w</sup> for we have no desire to know your ways!

<sup>15</sup>What is the Almighty that we should serve him?
And what do we gain by praying to him?"<sup>x</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Their happiness is not in their own hands.
The designs of the wicked are far from me!<sup>y</sup>

<sup>17</sup>How often is the lamp of the wicked put out?
How often does destruction come upon them,
the portion God allots in his anger?

<sup>18</sup>Let them be like straw before the wind, like chaff the storm carries away!

<sup>19</sup>"God is storing up the man's misery for his children"?—
let him requite the man himself so that he knows it!

<sup>20</sup>Let his own eyes behold his calamity, and the wrath of the Almighty let him drink!

<sup>21</sup>For what interest has he in his family
after him,
when the number of his months is finished?

<sup>22</sup>Can anyone teach God knowledge, seeing that he judges those on high?*

<sup>23</sup>One dies in his full vigor,
wholly at ease and content;

<sup>24</sup>His figure is full and nourished,
his bones are moist with marrow.

<sup>25</sup>Another dies with a bitter spirit, never having tasted happiness.

<sup>26</sup>Alike they lie down in the dust, and worms cover them both.

<sup>27</sup>See, I know your thoughts, and the arguments you plot against me.

<sup>28</sup>For you say, "Where is the house of the great,
and where the dwelling place of the wicked?"

<sup>29</sup>Have you not asked the wayfarers and do you not acknowledge the witness they give?

<sup>30</sup>On the day of calamity the evil man is spared,
on the day that wrath is released.

<sup>31</sup>Who will charge him to his face about his conduct,
and for what he has done who will repay him?

<sup>32</sup>He is carried to the grave and at his tomb they keep watch.

<sup>33</sup>Sweet to him are the clods of the valley.
All humankind will follow after him,
and countless others before him.

<sup>34</sup>How empty the consolation you offer
me!
Your arguments remain a fraud.

IV. Third Cycle of Speeches*

CHAPTER 22

See RG 273–79

Eliphaz's Third Speech. <sup>1</sup>Then Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>Can a man be profitable to God?<sup>z</sup>

Can a wise man be profitable to him?

<sup>3</sup>Does it please the Almighty that you are just?<sup>a</sup>

Does he gain if your ways are perfect?*

<sup>4</sup>Is it because of your piety that he reproves you—
that he enters into judgment with you?

<sup>5</sup>Is not your wickedness great,
your iniquity endless?

<sup>6</sup>You keep your relatives' goods in pledge unjustly,* leave them stripped naked of their clothing.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>7</sup>To the thirsty you give no water to drink, and from the hungry you withhold
bread;

<sup>8</sup>As if the land belonged to the powerful, and only the privileged could dwell in
it!

<sup>9</sup>You sent widows away empty-handed, and the resources of orphans are destroyed.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Therefore snares are round about you,<sup>d</sup> sudden terror makes you panic,

<sup>11</sup>Or darkness—you cannot see!
A deluge of waters covers you.

<sup>12</sup>Does not God, in the heights of the heavens,<sup>e</sup> behold the top of the stars, high though they are?

<sup>13</sup>Yet you say, "What does God know?"<sup>f</sup>
Can he judge through the thick

darkness?

<sup>14</sup>Clouds hide him so that he cannot see as he walks around the circuit of the heavens!”

<sup>15</sup>Do you indeed keep to the ancient way trodden by the worthless?

<sup>16</sup>They were snatched before their time;
their foundations a river swept away.

<sup>17</sup>They said to God, “Let us alone!”
and, “What can the Almighty do to us?”

<sup>18</sup>Yet he had filled their houses with good things.

The designs of the wicked are far from me! * g

<sup>19</sup>The just look on and are glad,
and the innocent deride them: * h

<sup>20</sup>“Truly our enemies are destroyed, and what was left to them, fire has consumed!”

<sup>21</sup>Settle with him and have peace.
That way good shall come to you:

<sup>22</sup>Receive instruction from his mouth,
and place his words in your heart.

<sup>23</sup>If you return to the Almighty, you will be restored;

if you put iniquity far from your tent,

<sup>24</sup>And treat raw gold as dust, the fine gold of Ophir * as pebbles in the wadi,

<sup>25</sup>Then the Almighty himself shall be your gold
and your sparkling silver.

<sup>26</sup>For then you shall delight in the Almighty,
you shall lift up your face toward God.

<sup>27</sup>Entreat him and he will hear you, i and your vows you shall fulfill.

<sup>28</sup>What you decide shall succeed for you,
and upon your ways light shall shine.

<sup>29</sup>For when they are brought low, you will say, "It is pride!"

But downcast eyes he saves.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>30</sup>He will deliver whoever is innocent;
you shall be delivered if your hands are clean.<sup>k</sup>

CHAPTER 23

See RG 273–79

Job's Seventh Reply. <sup>1</sup>Then Job answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>Today especially my complaint is bitter, his hand is heavy upon me in my groanings.

<sup>3</sup>Would that I knew how to find him, that I might come to his dwelling!

<sup>4</sup>I would set out my case before him,
fill my mouth with arguments;

<sup>5</sup>I would learn the words he would answer
me,
understand what he would say to me.

<sup>6</sup>Would he contend against me with his great power?
No, he himself would heed me!

<sup>7</sup>There an upright man might argue with
him,
and I would once and for all be delivered from my judge.

<sup>8</sup>But if I go east, he is not there;* or west, I cannot perceive him;

<sup>9</sup>The north enfolds him, and I cannot catch sight of him;
The south hides him, and I cannot see
him.

<sup>10</sup>Yet he knows my way;
if he tested me, I should come forth like gold.†

<sup>11</sup>My foot has always walked in his steps;
I have kept his way and not turned aside.

<sup>12</sup>From the commands of his lips I have not departed;
the words of his mouth I have treasured in my heart.

<sup>13</sup>But once he decides, who can contradict

him?

What he desires, that he does.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>14</sup>For he will carry out what is appointed
for me,
and many such things he has in store.

<sup>15</sup>Therefore I am terrified before him;
when I take thought, I dread him.

<sup>16</sup>For it is God who has made my heart faint,
the Almighty who has terrified me.

<sup>17</sup>Yes, would that I had vanished in
darkness,
hidden by the thick gloom before me.

CHAPTER 24

See RG 273–79

<sup>1</sup>Why are times not set by the Almighty,
and why do his friends not see his days?*

<sup>2</sup>People remove landmarks;
they steal herds and pasture them.

<sup>3</sup>The donkeys of orphans they drive away;
they take the widow's ox for a pledge.

<sup>4</sup>They force the needy off the road;
all the poor of the land are driven into hiding.

<sup>5</sup>Like wild donkeys in the wilderness, they go forth to their task of seeking prey;
the steppe provides food for their young;

<sup>6</sup>They harvest fodder in the field,
and glean in the vineyard of the wicked.

<sup>7</sup>They pass the night naked, without clothing;
they have no covering against the cold;

<sup>8</sup>They are drenched with rain from the mountains,
and for want of shelter they cling to the rock.

<sup>9</sup>Orphans are snatched from the breast, infants of the needy are taken in pledge.*

<sup>10</sup>They go about naked, without clothing, and famished, they carry the sheaves.*

<sup>11</sup>Between the rows they press out the oil;
they tread the wine presses, yet are thirsty.

<sup>12</sup>In the city the dying groan, and the souls of the wounded cry out.

Yet God does not treat it as a disgrace!

<sup>13</sup>They are rebels against the light:<sup>n</sup> they do not recognize its ways;
they do not stay in its paths.

<sup>14</sup>When there is no light the murderer rises, to kill the poor and needy;
in the night he acts like a thief.

<sup>15</sup>The eye of the adulterer watches for the twilight;<sup>o</sup>
he says, "No eye will see me."

He puts a mask over his face;

<sup>16</sup>in the dark he breaks into houses;
By day they shut themselves in;
they do not know the light.

<sup>17</sup>Indeed, for all of them morning is deep
darkness;
then they recognize the terrors of deep
darkness.

<sup>18</sup>He is swift on the surface of the water:* their portion in the land is accursed, they do not turn aside by way of the vineyards.

<sup>19</sup>Drought and heat snatch away the snow
waters,
Sheol, those who have sinned.

<sup>20</sup>May the womb forget him,
may the worm find him sweet,
may he no longer be remembered;
And may wickedness be broken like a tree.

<sup>21</sup>May his companion be barren, unable to give birth,
may his widow not prosper!

<sup>22</sup>He* sustains the mighty by his strength, to him who rises without assurance of his life

<sup>23</sup>he gives safety and support, and his eyes are on their ways.

<sup>24</sup>They are exalted for a while, and then are no more;
laid low, like everyone else they are gathered up;

like ears of grain they shrivel.
<sup>25</sup>If this be not so, who can make me a liar,
and reduce my words to nothing?

CHAPTER 25

Bildad's Third Speech. <sup>1*</sup> Then Bildad the Shuhite answered and said:

<sup>2</sup>Dominion and dread are his who brings about harmony in his heavens.

<sup>3</sup>Is there any numbering of his troops?*
Yet on which of them does his light not rise?

<sup>4</sup>How can anyone be in the right against God,<sup>p</sup> or how can any born of woman be innocent?

<sup>5</sup>Even the moon is not bright and the stars are not clean in his eyes.

<sup>6</sup>How much less a human being, who is but a worm,
a mortal, who is only a maggot?<sup>q</sup>

CHAPTER 26

See RG 273–79

Job's Reply. <sup>1</sup>Then Job answered and said:*

<sup>2</sup>What help you give to the powerless, what strength to the feeble arm!

<sup>3</sup>How you give counsel to one without wisdom;
how profuse is the advice you offer!

<sup>4</sup>With whose help have you uttered those words,
whose breath comes forth from you?<sup>r</sup>

<sup>5</sup>The shades* beneath writhe in terror,<sup>s</sup>
the waters, and their inhabitants.

and Abaddon has no covering.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>7</sup>He stretches out Zaphon* over the void, and suspends the earth over nothing at all;

<sup>8</sup>He binds up the waters in his clouds, yet the cloud is not split by their weight;

<sup>9</sup>He holds back the appearance of the full moon
by spreading his clouds before it.

<sup>10</sup>He has marked out a circle* on the surface of the deep<sup>u</sup> as the boundary of light and darkness.

<sup>11</sup>The pillars of the heavens tremble and are stunned at his thunderous rebuke;<sup>v</sup>

<sup>12</sup>By his power he stilled Sea, by his skill he crushed Rahab;*

<sup>13</sup>By his wind the heavens were made clear, his hand pierced the fleeing serpent.*<sup>w</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Lo, these are but the outlines of his ways, and what a whisper of a word we hear

of him:

Who can comprehend the thunder of his power?

CHAPTER 27

Job's Reply. <sup>1</sup>Job took up his theme again and said:

<sup>2</sup>As God lives, * who takes away my right, <sup>x</sup>
the Almighty, who has made my life bitter,

<sup>3</sup>So long as I still have life breath in me,
the breath of God in my nostrils,

<sup>4</sup>My lips shall not speak falsehood, nor my tongue utter deceit!

<sup>5</sup>Far be it from me to account you right;
till I die I will not renounce my innocence. <sup>y</sup>

<sup>6</sup>My justice I maintain and I will not relinquish it;
my heart does not reproach me for any
of my days.

<sup>7*</sup> Let my enemy be as the wicked and my adversary as the unjust!

<sup>8</sup>For what hope has the impious when he is cut off,
when God requires his life?

<sup>9</sup>Will God then listen to his cry
when distress comes upon him,

<sup>10</sup>If he delights in the Almighty and calls upon God constantly?

<sup>11</sup>I will teach you what is in God's hand, and the way of the Almighty I will not conceal.

<sup>12</sup>Look, you yourselves have all seen it;
why do you spend yourselves in empty
words!

<sup>13</sup>This is the portion of the wicked with God,
the heritage oppressors receive from the Almighty: <sup>z</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Though his children be many, the sword awaits them.

His descendants shall want for bread.

<sup>15</sup>His survivors shall be buried in death;
their widows shall not weep.

<sup>16</sup>Though he heap up silver like dust and store away mounds of clothing,

<sup>17</sup>What he has stored the righteous shall wear,
and the innocent shall divide the silver.

<sup>18</sup>He builds his house as of cobwebs, or like a booth put up by a watchman.

<sup>19</sup>He lies down a rich man, one last time;
he opens his eyes—nothing is there.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Terrors flood over him like water, at night the tempest carries him off.

<sup>21</sup>The east wind seizes him and he is gone;
it sweeps him from his place;

<sup>22</sup>It hurls itself at him without pity,
as he tries to flee from its power.

<sup>23</sup>It claps its hands at him,
and whistles at him from its place.

V. The Poem on Wisdom*

CHAPTER 28

See RG 273–79

Where Is Wisdom to Be Found?

- <sup>1</sup>There is indeed a mine for silver,* and a place for refining gold.
- <sup>2</sup>Iron is taken from the earth,
and copper smelted out of stone.
- <sup>3*</sup> He sets a boundary for the darkness;
the farthest confines he explores.
- <sup>4</sup>He breaks open a shaft far from habitation, unknown to human feet;
suspended, far from people, they sway.
- <sup>5</sup>The earth, though out of it comes forth
bread,
is in fiery upheaval underneath.
- <sup>6</sup>Its stones are the source of lapis lazuli, and there is gold in its dust.
- <sup>7</sup>The path no bird of prey knows,
nor has the hawk's eye seen it.
- <sup>8</sup>The proud beasts have not trodden it,
nor has the lion gone that way.
- <sup>9</sup>He sets his hand to the flinty rock, and overturns the mountains at their root.
- <sup>10</sup>He splits channels in the rocks;
his eyes behold all that is precious.
- <sup>11</sup>He dams up the sources of the streams, and brings hidden things to light.
- <sup>12</sup>As for wisdom—where can she be found?

Where is the place of understanding?<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>Mortals do not know her path, nor is she to be found in the land of the living.
- <sup>14</sup>The Deep says, “She is not in me”;
and the Sea says, “She is not with me.”
- <sup>15</sup>Solid gold cannot purchase her,

nor can her price be paid with silver.<sup>c</sup>

16 She cannot be bought with gold of Ophir,*
with precious onyx or lapis lazuli,

17 Gold or crystal cannot equal her, nor can golden vessels be exchanged for her.

18 Neither coral nor crystal should be thought of;
the value of wisdom surpasses pearls.

19 Ethiopian topaz does not equal her, nor can she be weighed out for pure
gold.

20 As for wisdom, where does she come from?
Where is the place of understanding?

21 She is hidden from the eyes of every living thing;
even from the birds of the air she is concealed.

22 Abaddon* and Death say,
“Only by rumor have we heard of her.”

23* But God understands the way to her;<sup>d</sup> it is he who knows her place.<sup>e</sup>

24 For he beholds the ends of the earth and sees all that is under the heavens.

25 When he weighed out the wind,
and measured out the waters;

26 When he made a rule for the rain and a path for the thunderbolts,<sup>f</sup>

27 Then he saw wisdom and appraised her, established her, and searched her out.

28* And to mortals he said:
See: the fear of the Lord is wisdom;
and avoiding evil is understanding.<sup>g</sup>

VI. Job's Final Summary of His Cause

CHAPTER 29

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1*</sup> Job took up his theme again and said:
<sup>2</sup> Oh, that I were as in the months past, as in the days when God watched over me:<sup>h</sup> <sup>3</sup> While he kept his lamp shining above my head,
and by his light I walked through
darkness;
<sup>4</sup> As I was in my flourishing days,
when God sheltered my tent;
<sup>5</sup> When the Almighty was still with me,
and my children were round about me;
<sup>6</sup> When my footsteps were bathed in cream,
and the rock flowed with streams of oil.* <sup>7</sup> Whenever I went out to the gate of the city
and took my seat in the square, <sup>8</sup> The young men saw me and withdrew,
and the elders rose up and stood;
<sup>9</sup> Officials refrained from speaking and covered their mouths with their hands;<sup>i</sup> <sup>10</sup> The voice of the princes was silenced, and their tongues stuck to the roofs of
their mouths.
<sup>11</sup> The ear that heard blessed me;
the eye that saw acclaimed me.
<sup>12</sup> For I rescued the poor who cried out for help,
the orphans, and the unassisted;
<sup>13</sup> The blessing of those in extremity came upon me,
and the heart of the widow I made joyful.

<sup>14</sup>I wore my righteousness like a garment;
justice was my robe and my turban.

<sup>15</sup>I was eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame was I.

<sup>16</sup>I was a father to the poor;
the complaint of the stranger I pursued,

<sup>17</sup>And I broke the jaws of the wicked man;
from his teeth I forced the prey.

<sup>18</sup>I said: "In my own nest I shall grow old;
I shall multiply years like the phoenix.*

<sup>19</sup>My root is spread out to the waters;
the dew rests by night on my branches.

<sup>20</sup>My glory is fresh within me,
and my bow is renewed in my hand!"

<sup>21</sup>For me they listened and waited;
they were silent for my counsel.

<sup>22</sup>Once I spoke, they said no more, but received my pronouncement drop by drop.

<sup>23</sup>They waited for me as for the rain;
they drank in my words like the spring rains.

<sup>24</sup>When I smiled on them they could not believe it;
they would not let the light of my face
be dimmed.

<sup>25</sup>I decided their course and sat at their head,
I lived like a king among the troops,
like one who comforts mourners.

CHAPTER 30

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>But now they hold me in derision who are younger than I,<sup>j</sup> Whose fathers I should have disdained to rank with the dogs of my flock.
- <sup>2</sup>Such strength as they had meant nothing
to me;
their vigor had perished.
- <sup>3</sup>In want and emaciating hunger<sup>k</sup>
they fled to the parched lands:
to the desolate wasteland by night.
- <sup>4</sup>They plucked saltwort* and shrubs;
the roots of the broom plant were their food.
- <sup>5</sup>They were banished from the community, with an outcry like that against a thief—
- <sup>6</sup>To dwell on the slopes of the wadies,
in caves of sand and stone;
- <sup>7</sup>Among the bushes they brayed;
under the nettles they huddled
together.
- <sup>8</sup>Irresponsible, of no account,
they were driven out of the land.
- <sup>9</sup>Yet now they sing of me in mockery;
I have become a byword among them.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>They abhor me, they stand aloof,
they do not hesitate to spit in my face!
- <sup>11</sup>* Because he has loosened my bowstring and afflicted me,
they have thrown off restraint in my presence.
- <sup>12</sup>On my right the young rabble rise up;
they trip my feet,
they build their approaches for my
ruin.

- <sup>13</sup>They tear up my path,
they promote my ruin,
no helper is there against them.
- <sup>14</sup>As through a wide breach they advance;
amid the uproar they come on in waves;
- <sup>15</sup>terrors roll over me.
My dignity is driven off like the wind, and my well-being vanishes like a cloud.
- <sup>16</sup>And now my life ebbs away from me, days of affliction have taken hold of
me.
- <sup>17*</sup> At night he pierces my bones,
my sinews have no rest.
- <sup>18</sup>With great difficulty I change my clothes,
the collar of my tunic fits around my waist.
- <sup>19</sup>He has cast me into the mire;
I have become like dust and ashes.
- <sup>20</sup>I cry to you, but you do not answer me;<sup>m</sup>
I stand, but you take no notice.
- <sup>21</sup>You have turned into my tormentor, and with your strong hand you attack
me.
- <sup>22</sup>You raise me up and drive me before the wind;
I am tossed about by the tempest.
- <sup>23</sup>Indeed I know that you will return me to death
to the house destined for everyone alive.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>24</sup>Yet should not a hand be held out to help a wretched person in distress?
- <sup>25</sup>Did I not weep for the hardships of others;
was not my soul grieved for the poor?<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>26</sup>Yet when I looked for good, evil came;
when I expected light, darkness came.
- <sup>27</sup>My inward parts seethe and will not be stilled;

days of affliction have overtaken me.
<sup>28</sup>I go about in gloom, without the sun;
I rise in the assembly and cry for help.
<sup>29</sup>I have become a brother to jackals,
a companion to ostriches.
<sup>30</sup>My blackened skin falls away from me;
my very frame is scorched by the heat.
<sup>31</sup>My lyre is tuned to mourning, and my reed pipe to sounds of weeping.

CHAPTER 31

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>I made a covenant with my eyes not to gaze upon a virgin.
- <sup>2</sup>What portion comes from God above, what heritage from the Almighty on high?
- <sup>3</sup>Is it not calamity for the unrighteous,
and woe for evildoers?
- <sup>4</sup>Does he not see my ways, and number all my steps?<sup>P</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>If I have walked in falsehood* and my foot has hastened to deceit,
- <sup>6</sup>Let God weigh me in the scales of
justice;
thus will he know my innocence!<sup>Q</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>If my steps have turned out of the way, and my heart has followed my eyes,
or any stain clings to my hands,
- <sup>8</sup>Then may I sow, but another eat,
and may my produce be rooted up!
- <sup>9</sup>If my heart has been enticed toward a woman,
and I have lain in wait at my neighbor's door;
- <sup>10</sup>Then may my wife grind for another,
and may others kneel over her!
- <sup>11</sup>For that would be heinous,
a crime to be condemned,<sup>R</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>A fire that would consume down to Abaddon* till it uprooted all my crops.<sup>S</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>Had I refused justice to my manservant or to my maidservant, when they had a complaint against me,
- <sup>14</sup>What then should I do when God rises

up?
 What could I answer when he demands an account?
 15 Did not he who made me in the belly make him?
 Did not the same One fashion us in the womb?
 16 If I have denied anything that the poor desired,<sup>t</sup> or allowed the eyes of the widow to languish
 17 While I ate my portion alone, with no share in it for the fatherless, 18 Though like a father he* has reared me from my youth, guiding me even from my mother's
 womb—
 19 If I have seen a wanderer without clothing,
 or a poor man without covering, 20 Whose limbs have not blessed me when warmed with the fleece of my sheep;
 21 If I have raised my hand against the innocent
 because I saw that I had supporters at the gate—* 22 Then may my arm fall from the shoulder,
 my forearm be broken at the elbow!
 23 For I dread calamity from God,
 and his majesty will overpower me.
 24 Had I put my trust in gold or called fine gold my security; 25 Or had I rejoiced that my wealth was great,
 or that my hand had acquired abundance—
 26 Had I looked upon the light* as it shone,<sup>u</sup> or the moon in the splendor of its progress,

<sup>27</sup>And had my heart been secretly enticed to blow them a kiss with my hand, <sup>28</sup>This too would be a crime for condemnation,
for I should have denied God above.<sup>v</sup> <sup>29</sup>Had I rejoiced at the destruction of my enemy
or exulted when evil came upon him,<sup>w</sup> <sup>30</sup>Even though I had not allowed my mouth to sin
by invoking a curse against his life—
<sup>31</sup>Had not the men of my tent exclaimed, “Who has not been filled with his meat!”* <sup>32</sup>No stranger lodged in the street, for I opened my door to wayfarers—<sup>33*</sup> Had I, all too human, hidden my sins and buried my guilt in my bosom <sup>34</sup>Because I feared the great multitude and the scorn of the clans terrified
me—
then I should have remained silent,
and not come out of doors!
<sup>35*</sup> Oh, that I had one to hear my case:
here is my signature:* let the Almighty answer me!
Let my accuser write out his indictment!<sup>x</sup> <sup>36</sup>Surely, I should wear it on my shoulder* or put it on me like a diadem; <sup>37</sup>Of all my steps I should give him an account;
like a prince* I should present myself
before him.
<sup>38</sup>If my land has cried out against me till its furrows wept together; <sup>39</sup>If I have eaten its strength without payment
and grieved the hearts of its tenants;
<sup>40</sup>Then let the thorns grow instead of wheat and stinkweed instead of barley!

The words of Job are ended.

VII. Elihu's Speeches

CHAPTER 32

See RG 273–79

<sup>1</sup>Then the three men ceased to answer Job, because in his own eyes he was in the right.<sup>y 2z</sup> But the anger of Elihu,* son of Barachel the Buzite, of the clan of Ram, was kindled. He was angry with Job for considering himself rather than God to be in the right.<sup>3a</sup> He was angry also with the three friends because they had not found a good answer and had not condemned Job. <sup>4</sup>But since these men were older than he, Elihu bided his time before addressing Job. <sup>5</sup>When, however, Elihu saw that there was no reply in the mouths of the three men, his wrath was inflamed. <sup>6</sup>So Elihu, son of Barachel the Buzite, answered and said:

- I am young and you are very old;
therefore I held back and was afraid to declare to you my knowledge.
- <sup>7</sup>I thought, days should speak, and many years teach wisdom!<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>But there is a spirit in human beings,<sup>c</sup>
the breath of the Almighty, that gives them understanding.
- <sup>9</sup>It is not those of many days who are wise,
nor the aged who understand the right.
- <sup>10</sup>Therefore I say, listen to me;
I also will declare my knowledge!
- <sup>11</sup>Behold, I have waited for your words, have given ear to your arguments,
as you searched out what to say.
- <sup>12</sup>Yes, I followed you attentively:
And look, none of you has convicted Job,
not one could refute his statements.
- <sup>13</sup>So do not say, “We have met wisdom;* God can vanquish him but no mortal!”
- <sup>14</sup>For had he addressed his words to me,
I would not then have answered him with your words.

- <sup>15</sup>They are dismayed, they make no more reply;
words fail them.
- <sup>16</sup>Must I wait? Now that they speak no
more,
and have ceased to make reply,
- <sup>17</sup>I too will speak my part;
I also will declare my knowledge!
- <sup>18</sup>For I am full of words;
the spirit within me compels me.
- <sup>19</sup>My belly is like unopened wine, like wineskins ready to burst.
- <sup>20</sup>Let me speak and obtain relief;
let me open my lips, and reply.
- <sup>21</sup>I would not be partial to anyone,
nor give flattering titles to any.
- <sup>22</sup>For I know nothing of flattery;
if I did, my Maker would soon take me
away.

CHAPTER 33

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>Therefore, O Job, hear my discourse;
listen to all my words.
- <sup>2</sup>Behold, now I open my mouth;
my tongue and voice form words.
- <sup>3</sup>I will state directly what is in my mind,
my lips shall speak knowledge clearly;
- <sup>4</sup>For the spirit of God made me,
the breath of the Almighty keeps me alive.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>If you are able, refute me;
draw up your arguments and take your stand.
- <sup>6</sup>Look, I am like you before God,
I too was pinched from clay.<sup>* e</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>Therefore fear of me should not dismay
you,
nor should I weigh heavily upon you.
- <sup>8</sup>But you have said in my hearing, as I listened to the sound of your
words:
- <sup>9</sup>“I am clean, without transgression;
I am innocent, there is no guilt in me.”<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Yet he invents pretexts against me and counts me as an enemy.<sup>* g</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>He puts my feet in the stocks, watches all my paths!”<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>In this you are not just, let me tell you;
for God is greater than mortals.
- <sup>13</sup>Why, then, do you make complaint against him
that he gives no reply to their words?<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>For God does speak, once,

even twice, though you do not see it: *

<sup>15</sup>In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falls upon mortals
as they slumber in their beds.

<sup>16</sup>It is then he opens their ears and with a warning, terrifies them,

<sup>17</sup>By turning mortals from acting and keeping pride away from a man,

<sup>18</sup>He holds his soul from the pit,
his life from passing to the grave.

<sup>19</sup>Or he is chastened on a bed of pain, suffering continually in his bones,

<sup>20</sup>So that to his appetite food is repulsive, his throat rejects the choicest nourishment.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>21</sup>His flesh is wasted, it cannot be seen;
bones, once invisible, appear;

<sup>22</sup>His soul draws near to the pit,
his life to the place of the dead.

<sup>23</sup>If then there be a divine messenger, *
a mediator, one out of a thousand,
to show him what is right,

<sup>24</sup>He will take pity on him and say, “Deliver him from going down to the pit;
I have found him a ransom.”

<sup>25</sup>Then his flesh shall become soft as a boy’s;
he shall be again as in the days of his youth.

<sup>26</sup>He shall pray and God will favor him;
he shall see God’s face with rejoicing;<sup>k</sup> for he restores a person’s righteousness.

<sup>27</sup>He shall sing before all and say,
“I sinned and did wrong,
yet I was not punished accordingly.

<sup>28</sup>He delivered me from passing to the pit, and my life sees light.”

- <sup>29</sup>See, all these things God does,
two, even three times, for a man,
- <sup>30</sup>Bringing back his soul from the pit to the light, in the light of the living.
- <sup>31</sup>Be attentive, Job, listen to me!
Be silent and I will speak.
- <sup>32</sup>If you have anything to say, then answer
me.
Speak out! I should like to see you justified.
- <sup>33</sup>If not, then you listen to me;
be silent, and I will teach you wisdom.

CHAPTER 34

See RG 273–79

<sup>1</sup>Then Elihu answered and said: *

<sup>2</sup>Hear my discourse, you that are wise;
you that have knowledge, listen to me!

<sup>3</sup>For the ear tests words, as the palate tastes food. <sup>l</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Let us choose what is right;
let us determine among ourselves what is good.

<sup>5</sup>For Job has said, “I am innocent, but God has taken away what is my right. <sup>m</sup>

<sup>6</sup>I declare the judgment on me to be a lie;
my arrow-wound is incurable, sinless
though I am.” <sup>n</sup>

<sup>7</sup>What man is like Job?
He drinks in blasphemies like water,

<sup>8</sup>Keeps company with evildoers and goes along with the wicked,

<sup>9</sup>When he says, “There is no profit in pleasing God.” <sup>o</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Therefore, you that have understanding, hear me:
far be it from God to do wickedness;
far from the Almighty to do wrong! <sup>p</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Rather, he requites mortals for their conduct,
and brings home to them their way of life. <sup>q</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Surely, God cannot act wickedly, the Almighty cannot pervert justice. <sup>r</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Who gave him charge over the earth, or who set all the world in its place? <sup>s</sup>

14 If he were to set his mind to it, gather to himself his spirit and breath, 15 All flesh would perish together, and mortals return to dust.<sup>t</sup>
16 Now you *—understand, hear this!
Listen to the words I speak!
17 Can an enemy of justice be in control, will you condemn the supreme Just
One,
18 Who says to a king, “You are worthless!”
and to nobles, “You are wicked!”
19 Who neither favors the person of princes, nor respects the rich more than the poor?
For they are all the work of his hands;<sup>u</sup> 20 in a moment they die, even at midnight.<sup>v</sup>
People are shaken, and pass away, the powerful are removed without lifting a hand;
21 For his eyes are upon our ways,
and all our steps he sees.
22 There is no darkness so dense that evildoers can hide in it.
23 For no one has God set a time to come before him in judgment.
24 Without inquiry he shatters the mighty,<sup>w</sup>
and appoints others in their place, 25 Thus he discerns their works;
overnight they are crushed.
26 * Where the wicked are, he strikes them,
in a place where all can see,
27 Because they turned away from him and did not understand his ways at all:
28 And made the cry of the poor reach him, so that he heard the cry of the afflicted.
29 If he is silent, who then can condemn?
If he hides his face, who then can

- behold him,
whether nation or individual?
- 30 Let an impious man not rule,
nor those who ensnare their people.
- 31 Should anyone say to God,
“I accept my punishment; I will offend
no more;
- 32 What I cannot see, teach me:
if I have done wrong, I will do so no
more,”
- 33 Would you then say that God must punish,
when you are disdainful?
It is you who must choose, not I;
speak, therefore, what you know.
- 34 Those who understand will say to me,
all the wise who hear my views:
- 35 “Job speaks without knowledge, his words make no sense.”<sup>x</sup>
- 36 Let Job be tested to the limit, since his answers are those of the
impious;
- 37 For he is adding rebellion to his sin
by brushing off our arguments and addressing many words to God.”

CHAPTER 35

<sup>1*</sup> Then Elihu answered and said:

<sup>2</sup> Do you think it right to say,

“I am in the right, not God”?<sup>y</sup>

<sup>3</sup> When you ask what it profits you,

“What advantage do I have from not sinning?”<sup>z</sup>

<sup>4</sup> I have words for a reply to you*
and your friends as well.

<sup>5</sup> Look up to the skies and see;
behold the heavens high above you.

<sup>6</sup> If you sin, what do you do to God?
Even if your offenses are many, how do you affect him?

<sup>7</sup> If you are righteous, what do you give
him,
or what does he receive from your hand?<sup>a</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Your wickedness affects only someone like yourself,
and your justice, only a fellow human being.

<sup>9</sup> In great oppression people cry out;
they call for help because of the power of the great,

<sup>10</sup> No one says, “Where is God, my Maker, who gives songs in the night,

<sup>11</sup> Teaches us more than the beasts of the earth,
and makes us wiser than the birds of the heavens?”

<sup>12</sup> Though thus they cry out, he does not answer
because of the pride of the wicked.

<sup>13</sup> But it is idle to say God does not hear or that the Almighty does not take notice.

<sup>14</sup>Even though you say, “You take no notice of it,”*
the case is before him; with trembling wait upon him.

<sup>15</sup>But now that you have done otherwise, God’s anger punishes, nor does he show much concern over a life.

<sup>16</sup>Yet Job to no purpose opens his mouth, multiplying words without knowledge.<sup>b</sup>

CHAPTER 36

See RG 273–79

<sup>1</sup>Elihu continued and said:

<sup>2</sup>Wait a little and I will instruct you, for there are still words to be said for
God.

<sup>3</sup>I will assemble arguments from afar, and for my maker I will establish what is right.

<sup>4</sup>For indeed, my words are not a lie;
one perfect in knowledge is before
you.

<sup>5</sup>Look, God is great, not disdainful;
his strength of purpose is great.
He does not preserve the life of the wicked.

<sup>6</sup>He establishes the right of the poor;<sup>c</sup> he does not divert his eyes from the just

<sup>7</sup>But he seats them upon thrones with kings, exalted forever.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>8</sup>If they are bound with fetters, held fast by bonds of affliction,

<sup>9</sup>He lets them know what they have done, and how arrogant are their sins.

<sup>10</sup>He opens their ears to correction and tells them to turn back from evil.

<sup>11</sup>If they listen and serve him, they spend their days in prosperity,
their years in happiness.

<sup>12</sup>But if they do not listen, they pass to the grave,
they perish for lack of knowledge.

<sup>13</sup>The impious in heart lay up anger; they do not cry for help when he binds
them;

<sup>14</sup>They will die young—their life* among the reprobate.

15 But he saves the afflicted through their affliction,
and opens their ears through oppression.

16* He entices you from distress,
to a broad place without constraint;
what rests on your table is rich food.

17 Though you are full of the judgment of
the wicked,
judgment and justice will be maintained.

18 Let not anger at abundance entice you,
nor great bribery lead you astray.

19 Will your wealth equip you against distress,
or all your exertions of strength?

20 Do not long for the night,
when peoples vanish in their place.

21 Be careful; do not turn to evil;
for this you have preferred to
affliction.

22* Look, God is exalted in his power.
What teacher is there like him?

23 Who prescribes for him his way?
Who says, "You have done wrong"?<sup>e</sup>

24 Remember, you should extol his work, which people have praised in song.

25 All humankind beholds it;
everyone views it from afar.

26 See, God is great beyond our knowledge, the number of his years past searching
out.

27 He holds in check the waterdrops that filter in rain from his flood,

28 Till the clouds flow with them and they rain down on all humankind.

29* Can anyone understand the spreading clouds,
the thunderings from his tent?

<sup>30</sup>Look, he spreads his light over it,
it covers the roots of the sea.

<sup>31</sup>For by these he judges the nations, and gives food in abundance.

<sup>32</sup>In his hands he holds the lightning, and he commands it to strike the mark.

<sup>33</sup>His thunder announces him and incites the fury of the storm.

CHAPTER 37

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>At this my heart trembles and leaps out of its place.
- <sup>2</sup>Listen to his angry voice* and the rumble that comes forth from his mouth!
- <sup>3</sup>Everywhere under the heavens he sends
it,
with his light, to the ends of the earth.
- <sup>4</sup>Again his voice roars, his majestic voice thunders;
he does not restrain them when his voice is heard.
- <sup>5</sup>God thunders forth marvels with his voice;
he does great things beyond our knowing.
- <sup>6</sup>He says to the snow, “Fall to the earth”;
likewise to his heavy, drenching rain.
- <sup>7</sup>He shuts up all humankind indoors,
so that all people may know his work.
- <sup>8</sup>The wild beasts take to cover and remain quiet in their dens.
- <sup>9</sup>Out of its chamber the tempest comes forth;
from the north winds, the cold.
- <sup>10</sup>With his breath God brings the frost, and the broad waters congeal.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>The clouds too are laden with moisture,
the storm-cloud scatters its light.
- <sup>12*</sup> He it is who changes their rounds,
according to his plans,
to do all that he commands them across the inhabited world.
- <sup>13</sup>Whether for punishment or mercy,
he makes it happen.

- <sup>14</sup>Listen to this, Job!
Stand and consider the marvels of God!
- <sup>15</sup>Do you know how God lays his command upon them,
and makes the light shine forth from his clouds?
- <sup>16</sup>Do you know how the clouds are banked, the marvels of him who is perfect in knowledge?
- <sup>17</sup>You, who swelter in your clothes when calm lies over the land from the south,
- <sup>18</sup>Can you with him spread out the firmament of the skies, hard as a molten mirror?*
- <sup>19</sup>Teach us then what we shall say to him;
we cannot, for the darkness, make our plea.
- <sup>20</sup>Will he be told about it when I speak?
Can anyone talk when he is being destroyed?
- <sup>21</sup>Rather, it is as the light that cannot be seen
while it is obscured by the clouds, till the wind comes by and sweeps them away.*
- <sup>22</sup>From Zaphon* the golden splendor comes,
surrounding God's awesome majesty!
- <sup>23</sup>The Almighty! We cannot find him, preeminent in power and judgment, abundant in justice, who never oppresses.
- <sup>24</sup>Therefore people fear him;
none can see him, however wise their hearts.*

VIII. The Lord and Job Meet

CHAPTER 38

See RG 273–79

<sup>1</sup>Then the LORD* answered Job out of the storm and said:

<sup>2</sup>Who is this who darkens counsel with words of ignorance?

<sup>3</sup>Gird up your loins* now, like a man;
I will question you, and you tell me the answers!<sup>g</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Where were you when I founded the
earth?
Tell me, if you have understanding.

<sup>5</sup>Who determined its size? Surely you know?
Who stretched out the measuring line
for it?

<sup>6</sup>Into what were its pedestals sunk, and who laid its cornerstone,

<sup>7</sup>While the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God* shouted for joy?

<sup>8</sup>Who shut within doors the sea, when it burst forth from the womb,<sup>h</sup>

<sup>9</sup>When I made the clouds its garment and thick darkness its swaddling bands?

<sup>10</sup>When I set limits for it and fastened the bar of its door,

<sup>11</sup>And said: Thus far shall you come but no farther,
and here shall your proud waves stop?

<sup>12</sup>Have you ever in your lifetime commanded the morning and shown the dawn its place

<sup>13</sup>For taking hold of the ends of the earth, till the wicked are shaken from it?

- <sup>14</sup>The earth is changed as clay by the seal,
and dyed like a garment;
- <sup>15</sup>But from the wicked their light is withheld,
and the arm of pride is shattered.
- <sup>16</sup>Have you entered into the sources of the sea,
or walked about on the bottom of the deep?
- <sup>17</sup>Have the gates of death been shown to
you,
or have you seen the gates of darkness?
- <sup>18</sup>Have you comprehended the breadth of
the earth?
Tell me, if you know it all.
- <sup>19</sup>What is the way to the dwelling of light,
and darkness—where is its place?
- <sup>20</sup>That you may take it to its territory and know the paths to its home?
- <sup>21</sup>You know, because you were born then,
and the number of your days is great!*
- <sup>22</sup>Have you entered the storehouses of the snow,
and seen the storehouses of the hail
- <sup>23</sup>Which I have reserved for times of distress,
for a day of war and battle?<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>24</sup>What is the way to the parting of the winds,
where the east wind spreads over the earth?
- <sup>25</sup>Who has laid out a channel for the downpour
and a path for the thunderstorm
- <sup>26</sup>To bring rain to uninhabited land,
the unpeopled wilderness;
- <sup>27</sup>To drench the desolate wasteland till the desert blooms with verdure?
- <sup>28</sup>Has the rain a father?
Who has begotten the drops of dew?

- 29 Out of whose womb comes the ice, and who gives the hoarfrost its birth in
the skies,
- 30 When the waters lie covered as though with stone that holds captive the surface of the deep?
- 31 Have you tied cords to the Pleiades,*
or loosened the bonds of Orion?
- 32 Can you bring forth the Mazzaroth in their season,
or guide the Bear with her children?
- 33 Do you know the ordinances of the
heavens;
can you put into effect their plan on
the earth?
- 34 Can you raise your voice to the clouds, for them to cover you with a deluge of waters?
- 35 Can you send forth the lightnings on their way,
so that they say to you, "Here we are"?
- 36 Who gives wisdom to the ibis,
and gives the rooster* understanding?
- 37 Who counts the clouds with wisdom?
Who tilts the water jars of heaven
- 38 So that the dust of earth is fused into a mass
and its clods stick together?
- 39 Do you hunt the prey for the lion or appease the hunger of young lions,
- 40 While they crouch in their dens,
or lie in ambush in the thicket?
- 41 Who provides nourishment for the raven when its young cry out to God,<sup>j</sup> wandering about without food?

CHAPTER 39

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>Do you know when mountain goats are born,
or watch for the birth pangs of deer, <sup>2</sup>Number the months that they must fulfill,
or know when they give birth, <sup>3</sup>When they crouch down and drop their young,
when they deliver their progeny?
<sup>4</sup>Their offspring thrive and grow in the open,
they leave and do not return.
<sup>5</sup>Who has given the wild donkey his freedom,
and who has loosed the wild ass from bonds?
<sup>6</sup>I have made the wilderness his home and the salt flats his dwelling.
<sup>7</sup>He scoffs at the uproar of the city, hears no shouts of a driver.
<sup>8</sup>He ranges the mountains for pasture,
and seeks out every patch of green.
<sup>9</sup>Will the wild ox consent to serve you,
or pass the nights at your manger?
<sup>10</sup>Will you bind the wild ox with a rope in the furrow,
and will he plow the valleys after you?
<sup>11</sup>Will you depend on him for his great strength
and leave to him the fruits of your toil?
<sup>12</sup>Can you rely on him to bring in your grain and gather in the yield of your threshing floor?
<sup>13</sup>The wings of the ostrich* flap away;
her plumage is lacking in feathers.
<sup>14</sup>When she abandons her eggs on the ground*

and lets them warm in the sand, 15 She forgets that a foot may crush them,
that the wild beasts may trample them;
16 She cruelly disowns her young and her labor is useless; she has no fear.
17 For God has withheld wisdom from her and given her no share in understanding.
18 Yet when she spreads her wings high,
she laughs at a horse and rider.
19 Do you give the horse his strength,* and clothe his neck with a mane?
20 Do you make him quiver like a locust, while his thunderous snorting spreads terror?
21 He paws the valley, he rejoices in his strength,
and charges into battle.
22 He laughs at fear and cannot be terrified;
he does not retreat from the sword.
23 Around him rattles the quiver, flashes the spear and the javelin.
24 Frenzied and trembling he devours the ground;
he does not hold back at the sound of the trumpet;
25 at the trumpet's call he cries, "Aha!"
Even from afar he scents the battle, the roar of the officers and the shouting.
26 Is it by your understanding that the hawk soars,
that he spreads his wings toward the south?
27 Does the eagle fly up at your command to build his nest up high?
28 On a cliff he dwells and spends the night,
on the spur of cliff or fortress.
29 From there he watches for his food;

his eyes behold it afar off.

<sup>30</sup>His young ones greedily drink blood;
where the slain are, there is he.<sup>k</sup>

CHAPTER 40

See RG 273–79

<sup>1</sup>The LORD then answered Job and said:

<sup>2</sup>Will one who argues with the Almighty be corrected?
Let him who would instruct God give answer!<sup>l</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Then Job answered the LORD and said:

<sup>4*</sup> Look, I am of little account; what can I answer you?
I put my hand over my mouth.

<sup>5</sup>I have spoken once, I will not reply;
twice, but I will do so no more.

<sup>6</sup>Then the LORD answered Job out of the storm and said:

<sup>7</sup>Gird up your loins now, like a man.
I will question you, and you tell me the answers!

<sup>8*</sup> Would you refuse to acknowledge my right?
Would you condemn me that you may be justified?

<sup>9</sup>Have you an arm like that of God, or can you thunder with a voice like his?

<sup>10</sup>Adorn yourself with grandeur and majesty, and clothe yourself with glory and splendor.

<sup>11</sup>Let loose the fury of your wrath;
look at everyone who is proud and bring them down.

<sup>12</sup>Look at everyone who is proud, and humble them.
Tear down the wicked in their place,

<sup>13</sup>bury them in the dust together;

- in the hidden world imprison them.
- <sup>14</sup>Then will I too praise you,
for your own right hand can save you.
- <sup>15</sup>Look at Behemoth, * whom I made along
with you,
who feeds on grass like an ox.
- <sup>16</sup>See the strength in his loins,
the power in the sinews of his belly.
- <sup>17</sup>He carries his tail like a cedar;
the sinews of his thighs are like cables.
- <sup>18</sup>His bones are like tubes of bronze;
his limbs are like iron rods.
- <sup>19</sup>He is the first of God's ways, only his maker can approach him with a sword.
- <sup>20</sup>For the mountains bring him produce, and all wild animals make sport there.
- <sup>21</sup>Under lotus trees he lies,
in coverts of the reedy swamp.
- <sup>22</sup>The lotus trees cover him with their shade;
all about him are the poplars in the wadi.
- <sup>23</sup>If the river grows violent, he is not disturbed;
he is tranquil though the Jordan surges about his mouth.
- <sup>24</sup>Who can capture him by his eyes,
or pierce his nose * with a trap?
- <sup>25</sup>Can you lead Leviathan * about with a hook,
or tie down his tongue with a rope?
- <sup>26</sup>Can you put a ring into his nose, or pierce through his cheek with a gaff?
- <sup>27</sup>Will he then plead with you, time after time,
or address you with tender words?
- <sup>28</sup>Will he make a covenant with you that you may have him as a slave

forever?

<sup>29</sup>Can you play with him, as with a bird?
Can you tie him up for your little girls?

<sup>30</sup>Will the traders bargain for him?
Will the merchants * divide him up?

<sup>31</sup>Can you fill his hide with barbs,
or his head with fish spears?

<sup>32</sup>Once you but lay a hand upon him, no need to recall any other conflict!

CHAPTER 41

See RG 273–79

- <sup>1</sup>Whoever might vainly hope to do so need only see him to be overthrown.
- <sup>2</sup>No one is fierce enough to arouse him;
    who then dares stand before me?
- <sup>3</sup>Whoever has assailed me, I will pay back—
    Everything under the heavens is mine.
- <sup>4</sup>I need hardly mention his limbs, his strength, and the fitness of his equipment.
- <sup>5</sup>Who can strip off his outer garment, or penetrate his double armor?
- <sup>6</sup>Who can force open the doors of his face,
    close to his terrible teeth?
- <sup>7</sup>Rows of scales are on his back,
    tightly sealed together;
- <sup>8</sup>They are fitted so close to each other that no air can come between them;
- <sup>9</sup>So joined to one another that they hold fast and cannot be parted.
- <sup>10</sup>When he sneezes, light flashes forth;
    his eyes are like the eyelids of the dawn.
- <sup>11</sup>Out of his mouth go forth torches;
    sparks of fire leap forth.
- <sup>12</sup>From his nostrils comes smoke
    as from a seething pot or bowl.
- <sup>13</sup>His breath sets coals afire;
    a flame comes from his mouth.
- <sup>14</sup>Strength abides in his neck,
    and power leaps before him.
- <sup>15</sup>The folds of his flesh stick together,
    it is cast over him and immovable.
- <sup>16</sup>His heart is cast as hard as stone;

cast as the lower millstone.

<sup>17</sup>When he rises up, the gods are afraid;
when he crashes down, they fall back.

<sup>18</sup>Should a sword reach him, it will not avail;
nor will spear, dart, or javelin.

<sup>19</sup>He regards iron as chaff,
and bronze as rotten wood.

<sup>20</sup>No arrow will put him to flight; slingstones used against him are but straw.

<sup>21</sup>Clubs he regards as straw;
he laughs at the crash of the spear.

<sup>22</sup>Under him are sharp pottery fragments, spreading a threshing sledge upon the mire.

<sup>23</sup>He makes the depths boil like a pot;
he makes the sea like a perfume bottle.

<sup>24</sup>Behind him he leaves a shining path;
you would think the deep had white hair.

<sup>25</sup>Upon the earth there is none like him,
he was made fearless.

<sup>26</sup>He looks over all who are haughty,
he is king over all proud beasts.

CHAPTER 42

See RG 273–79

<sup>1</sup>Then Job answered the LORD and said:

<sup>2</sup>I know that you can do all things,* and that no purpose of yours can be hindered.

<sup>3</sup>“Who is this who obscures counsel with ignorance?”
I have spoken but did not understand;
things too marvelous for me, which I did not know.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>4</sup>“Listen, and I will speak;
I will question you, and you tell me the
answers.”

<sup>5</sup>By hearsay I had heard of you, but now my eye has seen you.*

<sup>6</sup>Therefore I disown what I have said, and repent in dust and ashes.*

IX. Epilogue

Job's Restoration. <sup>7</sup>And after the LORD had spoken these words to Job, the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite, "My anger blazes against you and your two friends! * You have not spoken rightly concerning me, as has my servant Job. <sup>8</sup>So now take seven bulls and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and sacrifice a burnt offering for yourselves, and let my servant Job pray for you. * To him I will show favor, and not punish your folly, for you have not spoken rightly concerning me, as has my servant Job." <sup>9</sup>Then Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite, went and did as the LORD had commanded them. The LORD showed favor to Job.

<sup>10</sup>The LORD also restored the prosperity of Job, after he had prayed for his friends; the LORD even gave to Job twice * as much as he had before. <sup>11</sup>Then all his brothers and sisters came to him, and all his former acquaintances, and they dined with him in his house. They consoled and comforted him for all the evil the LORD had brought upon him, and each one gave him a piece of money * and a gold ring.

<sup>12n</sup> Thus the LORD blessed the later days of Job more than his earlier ones. Now he had fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-donkeys. <sup>13</sup>He also had seven sons and three daughters: <sup>14</sup>the first daughter he called Jemimah, the second Keziah, and the third Keren-happuch. * <sup>15</sup>In all the land no other women were as beautiful as the daughters of Job; and their father gave them an inheritance * among their brothers.

1:1 Uz: somewhere in Edom or Arabia; see Lam 4:21. Job: the name probably means "Where is the (divine) father?" In Hebrew it is almost a homonym with the word for "enemy" (see note on 13:24; cf. 33:10).

1:3 The East: that is, east of Palestine.

1:5 Cursed: lit., "blessed." So also in v. 11; 2:5, 9.

1:6 Sons of God: members of the divine council; see Gn 6:1–4; Dt 32:8; Ps 82:1. The satan: lit., “adversary” (as in 1 Kgs 11:14). Here a member of the heavenly court, “the accuser” (Zec 3:1). In later biblical traditions this character will be developed as the devil (Gk. diabolos, “adversary”).

1:15 Sabeans: from southern Arabia.

1:17 Chaldeans: from southern Mesopotamia; in the mid-first millennium B.C., synonymous with “Babylonians.”

1:21 Go back there: to the earth; cf. Gn 2:7; see note on Sir 40:1.

2:4 Skin for skin: a proverbial expression derived perhaps from bartering; the precise meaning is unclear.

2:9 Curse God and die: the presupposition is that such blasphemy would be met with immediate death.

2:11 Teman: in Edom (see Gn 36:9–11). The Temanites (Jer 49:7; cf. Ob 8) enjoyed a reputation for wisdom. Shuh and Naamath: locations unknown.

3:1 His day: that is, the day of his birth.

3:4 God: in Heb. ’Eloah, another name for the divinity, used frequently in Job.

3:5 Blackness of day: that is, an eclipse.

3:8 Leviathan: a mythological sea monster symbolizing primeval chaos. It is parallel to Sea, which was the opponent of Baal in the Ugaritic legends. Cf. 9:13; 26:13; 40:25–41:26; Ps 74:13–14; 104:26; Is 27:1.

3:17 There: in death.

3:23 Hemmed in: contrast the same verb as used in 1:10.

4:10 The lion: used figuratively here for the violent, rapacious sinner who cannot prevail against God.

4:12–21 A dramatic presentation of the idea of human nothingness in contrast to God’s greatness (v. 17). The message of the “private revelation” that stirs Eliphaz so deeply is in reality expressed countless times in the Bible. The statements of the friends are often “truths” that are insensitive or irrelevant to Job’s questioning.

5:1 Holy ones: members of the heavenly court; cf. 1:6 and note. They were viewed as heavenly intercessors.

5:4 At the gate: of the city, where justice was administered.

5:7 Sparks: in Hebrew, “sons of resheph,” which the ancient versions took as the name of a bird. Resheph was an underworld deity of plague, but the word also means “flames” in Sg 8:6.

5:9 Perhaps to be omitted here; it is a duplicate of 9:10.

5:15 From the sword of their mouth: the Hebrew is obscure.

5:17 Almighty: standard translation of Heb. Shaddai.

5:19 Six ... the seventh: proverbial expression for any large number; cf. Prv 24:16; Lk 17:4.

6:5–6 Job would not complain if his life were as pleasant to him as fodder to a hungry animal; but his life is as disagreeable as insipid food. White of an egg: thus the obscure Hebrew has been understood in Jewish tradition; some render it “mallow juice.”

6:19 Tema: in northwest Arabia. Sheba: home of the Sabeans; see note on 1:15.

6:21 It is only at this point that the previous lines (vv. 1–20) are clearly directed to the three friends. The style of replying in these chapters (3–31) is often indirect. Job and the friends become mouthpieces through which the author presents current views on divine retribution in dramatic fashion. In chap. 7, Job will not even speak directly to the friends.

7:1 Drudgery: taken by some to refer to military service; cf. also 14:14.

7:12–21 Job now speaks not to his friends (who never speak to God), but to God. He does this frequently; cf. 9:28; 10:2–22; 13:20–28; 14:13–22.

7:12 An allusion to the personification of primeval chaos as a monstrous ocean vanquished by God; see note on 3:8.

7:15 Existence: lit., bones; the Hebrew is unclear.

7:17–18 An ironic allusion to Ps 8:5.

8:11–13 As marsh plants need water, so human beings need God. These verses may be a quotation from the teaching of the ancestors; cf. v. 10.

9:3 Job begins to explore the possibility of challenging God in a lawsuit, a theme that will recur (10:2), but he knows the odds are against him (vv. 12–20).

9:13 Rahab: another name for the primeval sea-monster; see notes on 3:8 and Ps 89:11; cf. Jb 7:12; 26:12.

9:28–31 You: refers to God.

10:1 I loathe my life: these words complete the thought of 9:35.

10:3–12 These lines are a delicate mixture of sarcasm and prayer; Job “reminds” God, challenging the divine providence. Note the piteous tone of the final request in vv. 20–22.

10:17 Attack: or “witnesses,” continuing the metaphor of lawsuit used in these chapters.

11:5 This is another of many ironies (e.g., cf. 11:16–19) that occur throughout the book. Zophar does not know that God will speak (chaps. 38–42), but contrary to what he thinks.

11:12 A colt ... is born human: the Hebrew is obscure. As translated, it seems to be a proverb referring to an impossible event.

12:1 Job begins his third and longest speech to the friends with sarcasm, and eventually he accuses them of falsehood (13:4–11). The dialogue between them becomes increasingly sharp. With the appeal to learning from beasts and birds (12:7), Job launches into what seems to be a bitter parody of the power of God.

12:4–5 The Hebrew is somewhat obscure, but the general sense is that the wicked mock the pious when the latter appear to be abandoned by God; cf. Ps 22:7–9; Mt 27:39–43.

12:6 Whom God has in his power: the Hebrew is obscure. The line may be a scribal error; some of the phrases occur in vv. 9, 10.

12:18 He reduces kings to the condition of slaves, who wear only a cloth wrapped about the waist.

13:14 The second half of the verse is a common biblical expression for risking one’s life; cf. Jgs 12:3; 1 Sm 19:5; 28:21; Ps 119:109; the first half of the verse must have a similar meaning. Job is so confident of his innocence that he is willing to risk his life by going to judgment with God.

13:15 Many translations adopt the Ketib reading, “I have no hope.”

13:20 In 13:20–14:22, Job directs his address to God; cf. 7:8–21; 9:28–10:22. His three friends never do this.

13:24 The Hebrew word for “enemy” (oyeb) is very close to the Hebrew form of Job’s name (‘iyyob). The play on the word implies that God has confused the two.

14:1 The sorrowful lament of Job is that God should relent in view of the limited life of human beings. When compared to plant life, which dies but can revive, the death of human beings is final. Job’s wild and “unthinkable” wish in vv. 13–17 is a bold stroke of imagination and desire: if only in Sheol he were protected till God would remember him! Were he to live again (v. 14), things would be different, but alas, God destroys “the hope of mortals” (v. 19).

14:17 Sealed up in a pouch: hidden away and forgotten.

15:1 The tone of Eliphaz’s speech is now much rougher. In vv. 7–9 he ridicules Job’s knowledge with a sarcastic question about whether he was a member of the divine council before creation and thus had unique wisdom (according to Prv 8:22–31, only Woman Wisdom existed before creation). Verses 20–35 are a typical description of the fate of the wicked.

15:31 The translation is uncertain.

15:35 The plans of the wicked yield nothing but futile results. Cf. Ps 7:15; Is 59:4.

16:8 You: God. Job then describes in vv. 9–17 the savage treatment that he has received from God.

16:18 As the exposed blood of those who were unjustly slain cries to heaven for vengeance (Gn 4:10; Ez 24:6–9), so Job’s sufferings demand redress.

16:19 Witness: refers perhaps to God (is Job appealing to God against God?), or to a mediator (cf. 9:33), or to a personification of Job’s prayer.

17:3 Addressed to God; v. 10 to Job’s friends.

17:13–16 Job elaborates another of the vivid descriptions of “life” in Sheol; cf. 3:13–23; 10:21–22.

18:13 Firstborn of Death: that is, disease, plague.

18:14 The king of terrors: of Sheol, of Death (cf. the “terrors” in v. 11). However, the Hebrew of this verse is obscure.

19:1 Job continues railing against his friends (vv. 2–5), and describing God’s savage attack in words reminiscent of 16:9–17.

19:20 Skin of my teeth: although the metaphor is not clear, this has become a proverbial expression for a narrow escape. It does not fit Job’s situation here.

19:23–24 What Job is about to say is so important that he wants it recorded in a permanent manner.

19:25–27 The meaning of this passage is obscure because the original text has been poorly preserved and the ancient versions do not agree among themselves. Job asserts three times that he shall see a future vindicator (Hebrew goel), but he leaves the time and manner of this vindication undefined. The Vulgate translation has Job indicating a belief in resurrection after death, but the Hebrew and the other ancient versions are less specific.

20:17 Oil: olive oil, one of the main agricultural products of ancient Palestine, a land proverbially rich in honey and milk; see Ex 3:8; etc.

20:29 Zophar ends his lecture in the style of Bildad (cf. 18:19) with a summary appraisal of what he has been saying about the fate of the wicked.

21:7 In vv. 7–29 Job launches into a realistic description of the fate of the wicked, contrary to the claims made by the friends.

21:22 Those on high: the heavenly beings; cf. 1:6; Ps 82:1–8.

22:1–27:23 The traditional three cycles of speeches breaks down in chaps. 22–27, because Zophar does not appear. This may be interpreted as a sign that the three friends see no point in further dialogue, or that Job’s replies have reduced them to silence, or that there has been a mistake in the transmission of the text (hence various transferrals of verses have been proposed to include Zophar, but without any textual evidence).

22:3 Another irony: God will “gain,” because he will have been proved right in his claim to the satan that Job is “perfect.”

22:6–9 This criticism of Job by Eliphaz is untrue (cf. 31:19), but he is driven to it by his belief that God always acts justly, even when he causes someone to suffer; suffering is due to wrongdoing (cf. v. 29).

22:18 The second part of the verse repeats 21:16.

22:19 Them: the wicked. Eliphaz obviously thinks that the just can be pleased by God’s punishment of the wicked. Such pleasure at the downfall of the wicked is expressed elsewhere, e.g., Ps 58:11; 63:12.

22:24 Ophir: see note on Ps 45:10.

23:8 Job’s confident desire to confront God (vv. 2–7, contrary to his fears in 9:14–20 and 13:21–27) gives way to his dark night: God’s absence (vv. 8–9), which also terrifies (vv. 13–17).

24:1 After his failure to find God, Job takes up the question: Why does God not favor his friends by the speedy punishment of his enemies?

24:9 This verse continues the description of the plight of the poor in vv. 2–4, and may belong there.

24:10 This verse is a variant of v. 7, and may be an erroneous scribal repetition.

24:18–24 These verses are inconsistent with Job's views elsewhere. Moreover, they are in general poorly preserved, and in some cases obscure.

24:22 He: God.

25:1 At this point any structure in the dialogues disappears. Bildad's speech is very short, and there follow two speeches attributed to Job, with significantly different introductions in 27:1 and 29:1, and with no intervening third speech of Zophar.

25:3 His troops: the heavenly host, or army, the stars (cf. Jgs 5:20), later understood as angels.

26:1–14 Perhaps to be read as Job's reply to Bildad's short speech.

26:5 Shades: the dead in Sheol, the nether world; cf. Ps 88:11; Is 26:14.

26:6 Sheol: cf. note on Ps 6:6. Abaddon: Hebrew for "(place of) destruction," a synonym for nether world; cf. Jb 28:22; Rev 9:11.

26:7 Zaphon: lit., "the north," used here as a synonym for the firmament, the heavens; cf. Is 14:13.

26:10 Circle: the horizon of the ocean which serves as the boundary for the activity of light and darkness; cf. Prv 8:27.

26:12 Rahab: another name for the primeval sea-monster; see notes on Jb 3:8 and Ps 89:11; cf. also Jb 7:12; 9:13.

26:13 The fleeing serpent: the same term occurs in Is 27:1 in apposition to Leviathan; see note on Jb 3:8.

27:2–6 As God lives ... far be it: Job affirms two oaths about his innocence by the very God whom he has accused of violating his right. Such is the paradoxical situation of a tortured person who cannot give the lie to his personal justice, but also refuses to renounce God. He dares God to be "just" as he, Job, understands this.

27:7–23 These verses are inconsistent with Job's views elsewhere, and may be part of a missing speech of Zophar; cf. notes on 24:18–24 and 25:1. Or possibly they are an ironic description of the fate of the three friends.

28:1–28 This chapter contains a beautifully vivid description of that Wisdom which is beyond the attainment of creatures and known only to God. The pronouns referring to Wisdom may be translated as either feminine or neuter; in view of Wisdom's role as God's companion and partner in creation (see Prv 8:22–30; Sir 24:1–21; Wis 9:9; Bar 3:9–4:4), the feminine is used here. There is no consensus about the authorship of this poem; it may originally have been an independent composition incorporated into the Book of Job.

28:3–4 The subject of the verbs in these verses has no clear antecedent; the context of vv. 2–6 suggests miners. The Hebrew of v. 4 is especially difficult. The general sense of vv. 1–11 is that one can find minerals in the earth; in contrast, where is Wisdom to be found (vv. 12, 20)?

28:16 Ophir: cf. note on Ps 45:10.

28:22 Abaddon: cf. note on Jb 26:6.

28:23–27 In reply to the question of vv. 12, 20, these verses indicate that the creator (vv. 24–26) knows the "place" of wisdom and even "established" her, but the specifics are not given. For further development of this theme, cf. Sir 1:1–10 and Bar 3:9–4:4.

28:28 This verse may be a later addition expressing a commonplace of the wisdom tradition; see cross-references. The addition seems to tie the poem in with the description of Job as fearing God and avoiding evil (1:1, 8; 2:3).

29:1 This chapter begins Job's soliloquy, which will end in 31:40. He describes in florid and exaggerated terms his former lifestyle with all its blessings, a deliberate contrast to his current plight, which will be further described in chap. 30.

29:6 Hyperbole to express abundance; see note on 20:17.

29:18 Phoenix: a legendary bird which, after several centuries of life, consumed itself in fire, then rose from its ashes in youthful freshness.

30:4 Saltwort: found in salt marshes and very sour to the taste; eaten by the extremely poor as a cooked vegetable. Broom plant: the juniper or brushwood; cf. Ps 120:4; a figure of bitterness and poverty, because of its bitter-tasting roots which are practically inedible.

30:11 God is the subject of the verbs. Loosened my bowstring: i.e., disarmed and disabled me.

30:17–23 Job here refers to God's harsh treatment of him. Cf. 16:9–17; 19:6–12.

31:5–34 In a series of purificatory oaths, Job protests his innocence.

31:12 Abaddon: see note on 26:6.

31:18 He: presumably God.

31:21 Gate: cf. notes on 5:4; Ru 4:1.

31:26–28 Light: of the sun. Job never sinned by worshiping the sun or the moon. Blow them a kiss: an act of idolatrous worship.

31:31 The members of his extended family will testify to his hospitality.

31:33–34 Job's present protest is made, not in spite of hidden sins which he had been unwilling to disclose, but out of genuine innocence. All too human: can also be translated "like Adam."

31:35–37 This concluding bravado fits better after v. 40a.

31:35 My signature: lit., "tau," the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet, shaped like a cross. Job issues a subpoena to God, and challenges him to follow proper legal procedure as well.

31:36 On my shoulder: i.e., boldly, proudly.

31:37 Like a prince: not as a frightened criminal.

32:2 Elihu means "My God is he." This speaker was from Buz, which, according to Jer 25:23, was near Tema and Dedan. A young man, he impetuously and impatiently upbraids Job for his boldness toward God, and the three friends for not successfully answering Job. He undertakes to defend God's absolute justice and to explain more clearly why there is suffering. While fundamentally his position is the same as that of the three friends, he locates the place of suffering in the divine plan. Because Elihu's four speeches (32:6–33:33; 34:2–37; 35:2–16; 36:2–37:24) repeat the substance of the earlier arguments of the three friends and also anticipate the content of the divine speeches (chaps. 39–41), many scholars consider them a later addition to the book.

32:13 Met wisdom: in Job's arguments.

33:6 Pinched from clay: a reference to the tradition that human beings were made from clay; cf. Gn 2:7; Jb 10:9; Is 64:7.

33:10 Enemy: see note on 1:1; cf. 13:24.

33:14 Elihu asserts that God speaks through warning in dream and also through pain. However, his presupposition is that the restored person admits sinfulness (v. 27). This of course is not relevant to Job's situation.

33:23 Divine messenger: or "angel," one of the thousands who serve as mediators.

34:1 Elihu replies, although no one else has spoken. This connective phrase (see also 35:1 and 36:1) may indicate that these speeches of Elihu are a secondary addition to the book (see note on 32:2).

34:16 Now you: Elihu turns to Job and addresses him directly.

34:26, 29–30 The extant Hebrew text of these verses is obscure.

35:1 See note on 34:1.

35:4 Areply to you: Elihu refers to Job's statement that the innocent suffer as much as the wicked, and especially to Eliphaz's words in 22:2–3.

35:14–15 The text here is uncertain. It seems to indicate that Job should have realized God's indifference is only apparent, and that, because he has not done so, God will punish him.

36:14 Life: a miserable life before death or a shadowy existence in Sheol. Reprobate: cf. Dt 23:18–19.

36:16–20 The Hebrew text here is obscure. Although each verse makes some sense, they do not constitute a logical sequence.

36:22–25 These verses serve as an introduction to the hymn about the divine marvels, 36:26–37:24, which in some respects anticipates the tone and content of the Lord's speeches in chaps. 38–41.

36:29–31 The translation of these verses is uncertain.

37:2 Voice: the thunder.

37:12–13 The translation of these verses is uncertain.

37:18 The firmament ... mirror: the ancients thought of the sky as a ceiling above which were the "upper waters" (cf. Gn 1:6–7; 7:11); when this ceiling became as hard as metal, the usual rain failed to fall on the earth (cf. Lv 26:19; Dt 28:23).

37:21 Elihu argues that even though God seems not to know our circumstances, he does know them, just as surely as the sun shines behind the clouds.

37:22 Zaphon: the mythical mountain of the gods; cf. note on 26:7.

37:24 The concluding remark of Elihu is ironic in view of the appearance of the Lord in the next chapter and Job's claim in 42:5.

38:1 Now the Lord enters the debate and addresses two discourses (chaps. 38–39 and 40–41) to Job, speaking of divine wisdom and power. Such things are altogether beyond the capacity of Job. Out of the storm: frequently the background of the appearances of the Lord in the Old Testament; cf. Ps 18; 50; Na 1:3; Hb 3:2–15.

38:3 Gird up your loins: prepare for combat—figuratively, be ready to defend yourself in debate.

38:7 Sons of God: see note on 1:6.

38:21 Ironic, but not a harsh rebuke.

38:31–32 Pleiades ... Orion ... Bear: cf. 9:9. Mazzaroth: it is uncertain what astronomical group is meant by this Hebrew word; perhaps a southern constellation.

38:36 Ibis ... rooster: the translation is uncertain.

39:13 The wings of the ostrich cannot raise her from the ground, but they help her to run swiftly.

39:14–16 People thought that, because the ostrich laid her eggs on the sand, she was thereby cruelly abandoning them; cf. Lam 4:3.

39:19–25 A classic description of a war horse.

40:4–5 Job's first reaction is humble, but also seemingly cautious.

40:8–14 The issue is joined in these verses, and the Lord seems to challenge Job to play God and to bring down the proud and wicked.

40:15 Behemoth: a primeval monster of chaos; identified by some scholars as the hippopotamus, on which the description of Behemoth is partially based. The point of the Behemoth-Leviathan passages is that only the Lord, not Job, can control the cosmic evil which these forces symbolize.

40:24 Eyes ... nose: the only exposed parts of the submerged beast.

40:25 Leviathan: although identified by some scholars as the crocodile, it is more likely another chaos monster; see note on 3:8.

40:30 Merchants: lit., "Canaanites," whose reputation for trading was so widespread that their name came to be used for merchants; cf. Prv 31:24.

42:2–4 In his final speech, Job quotes God’s own words (see 38:2–3; 40:7).

42:5 In 19:25–27 Job had affirmed a hope to “see” (three times) his vindicator. Now he has seen the Lord about whom he had heard so much.

42:6 A difficult verse. Some doubt, in view of God’s commendation in v. 7, that Job does in fact express repentance, and alternative translations are often given. Along with v. 5, it describes a change in Job, which the encounter with the Lord has brought about. Dust and ashes: an ambiguous phrase. It can refer to the human condition (cf. Gn 18:27; Jb 30:19) or to Job’s ash heap (2:8).

42:7 The three friends of Job (Elihu is ignored in the epilogue) are criticized by the Lord because they had “not spoken rightly” (vv. 7–8).

42:8 An ironic touch: Job becomes the intercessor for his friends.

42:10 Twice: this is the fine for damage inflicted upon another; cf. Ex 22:3. The Lord pays up!

42:11 A piece of money: lit., qesitah, value unknown; also used in Gn 33:19; Jos 24:32. Gold ring: for the nose or ear.

42:14 Job’s daughters had names symbolic of their charms: Jemimah, dove; Keziah, precious perfume (cf. Ps 45:9); Keren-happuch, cosmetic jar—more precisely, a container for a black powder used like modern mascara.

42:15 Ordinarily daughters did not inherit property unless there were no sons; cf. Nm 27:1–11.

The Hebrew Psalter numbers 150 songs. The corresponding number in the Septuagint differs because of a different division of certain Psalms. Hence the numbering in the Greek Psalter (which was followed by the Latin Vulgate) is usually one digit behind the Hebrew. In the New American Bible the numbering of the verses follows the Hebrew numbering; many of the traditional English translations are often a verse number behind the Hebrew because they do not count the superscriptions as a verse.

The superscriptions derive from pre-Christian Jewish tradition, and they contain technical terms, many of them apparently liturgical, which are no longer known to us. Seventy-three Psalms are attributed to David, but there is no sure way of dating any Psalm. Some are preexilic (before 587), and others are postexilic (after 539), but not as late as the Maccabean period (ca. 165). The Psalms are the product of many individual collections (e.g., Songs of Ascents, Ps 120–134), which were eventually combined into the present work in which one can detect five “books,” because of the doxologies which occur at 41:14; 72:18–19; 89:53; 106:48.

Two important features of the Psalms deserve special notice. First, the majority were composed originally precisely for liturgical worship. This is shown by the frequent indication of liturgical leaders interacting with the community (e.g., Ps 118:1–4). Secondly, they follow certain distinct patterns or literary forms. Thus, the hymn is a song of praise, in which a community is urged joyfully to sing out the praise of God. Various reasons are given for this praise (often introduced by “for” or “because”): the divine work of creation and sustenance (Ps 135:1–12; 136). Some of the hymns have received a more specific classification, based on content. The “Songs of Zion” are so called because they exalt Zion, the city in which God dwells among the people (Ps 47; 96–99). Characteristic of the songs of praise is the joyful summons to get involved in the activity; Ps 104 is an exception to this, although it remains universal in its thrust.

Another type of Psalm is similar to the hymn: the thanksgiving Psalm. This too is a song of praise acknowledging the Lord as the rescuer of the psalmist from a desperate situation. Very often the psalmist will give a flashback, recounting the past distress, and the plea that was uttered (Ps 30; 116). The setting for such prayers seems to have been the offering of a todah (a “praise” sacrifice) with friends in the Temple.

There are more Psalms of lament than of any other type. They may be individual (e.g., Ps 3–7; 22) or communal (e.g., Ps 44). Although they usually begin with a cry for help, they develop in various ways. The description of the distress is couched in the broad imagery typical of the Bible (one is in Sheol, the Pit, or is afflicted by enemies or wild beasts, etc.)—in such a way that one cannot pinpoint the exact nature of the psalmist’s plight. However, Ps 51 (cf. also Ps 130) seems to refer clearly to deliverance from sin. Several laments end on a note of certainty that the Lord has heard the prayer (cf. Ps 7, but contrast Ps 88), and the Psalter has been characterized as a movement from lament to praise. If this is somewhat of an exaggeration, it serves at least to emphasize the frequent expressions of trust which characterize the lament. In some cases it would seem as if the theme of trust has been lifted out to form a literary type all its own; cf. Ps 23, 62, 91. Among the communal laments can be counted Ps 74 and 79. They complain to the Lord about some national disaster, and try to motivate God to intervene in favor of the suffering people.

Other Psalms are clearly classified on account of content, and they may be in themselves laments or Psalms of thanksgiving. Among the “royal” Psalms that deal directly with the currently reigning king, are Ps 20, 21, and 72. Many of the royal Psalms were given a messianic interpretation by Christians. In Jewish tradition they were preserved, even after kingship had disappeared, because they were read in the light of the Davidic covenant reported in 2 Sm 7. Certain Psalms are called wisdom Psalms because they seem to betray the influence of the concerns of the ages (cf. Ps 37, 49), but there is no general agreement as to the number of these prayers. Somewhat related to the wisdom Psalms are the “torah” Psalms, in which the torah (instruction or law) of the Lord is glorified (Ps 1; 19:8–14; 119). Ps 78, 105, 106 can be considered as “historical” Psalms. Although the majority of the Psalms have a liturgical setting, there are certain prayers that may be termed “liturgies,” so clearly does their structure reflect a liturgical incident (e.g., Ps 15, 24).

It is obvious that not all of the Psalms can be pigeon-holed into neat classifications, but even a brief sketch of these types help us to catch the structure and spirit of the Psalms we read. It has been rightly said that the Psalms are “a school of prayer.” They not only provide us with models to follow, but inspire us to voice our own deepest feelings and aspirations.

True Happiness in God’s Law

I

<sup>1</sup>Blessed is the man who does not walk in the counsel of the wicked,
Nor stand in the way* of sinners,
nor sit in company with scoffers.<sup>a</sup>

The Structure of the Book of Psalms

PSALMS IS DIVIDED into five “books,” each of which ends with a verse or song of praise (a doxology).

Book 1, Psalms 1–41	Doxology is 41:14
Book 2, Psalms 42–72	Doxology is 72:18–19
Book 3, Psalms 73–89	Doxology is 89:53
Book 4, Psalms 90–106	Doxology is 106:48
Book 5, Psalms 107–150	Doxology is Psalm 150

Books 1, 4, and 5 tend to use “LORD” (“Yahweh”) as the name of God; books 2 and 3 use “God” (“Elohim”). This indicates that there may have been two centers of collection for Psalms, and in one case—Psalms 14 and 53—we have a nearly identical Psalm with the different names for God.

<sup>2</sup>Rather, the law of the LORD* is his joy;
and on his law he meditates day and night.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>3</sup>He is like a tree<sup>c</sup> planted near streams of water, that yields its fruit in season;
Its leaves never wither;
whatever he does prospers.

II

<sup>4</sup>But not so are the wicked,* not so!
They are like chaff driven by the wind.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Therefore the wicked will not arise at the judgment,
nor will sinners in the assembly of the just.

<sup>6</sup>Because the LORD knows the way of the just,<sup>e</sup> but the way of the wicked leads to ruin.

A Psalm for a Royal Coronation

- <sup>1</sup>Why do the nations protest and the peoples conspire in vain?<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Kings on earth rise up and princes plot together against the LORD and against his anointed one: <sup>*g</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>“Let us break their shackles and cast off their chains from us!”<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>The one enthroned in heaven laughs;
the Lord derides them,<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>Then he speaks to them in his anger,
in his wrath he terrifies them:
- <sup>6</sup>“I myself have installed my king on Zion, my holy mountain.”
- <sup>7</sup>I will proclaim the decree of the LORD,
he said to me, “You are my son;
today I have begotten you.”<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>Ask it of me, and I will give you the nations as your inheritance,
and, as your possession, the ends of
the earth.
- <sup>9</sup>With an iron rod you will shepherd them,
like a potter’s vessel you will shatter them.”<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>And now, kings, give heed;
take warning, judges on earth.
- <sup>11</sup>Serve the LORD with fear;
exult with trembling,
Accept correction
lest he become angry and you perish along the way
when his anger suddenly blazes up.<sup>l</sup>
- Blessed are all who take refuge in him!

Threatened but Trusting

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of David, when he fled from his son Absalom. <sup>*m</sup>

<sup>2</sup>How many are my foes, LORD!

How many rise against me!

<sup>3*</sup>How many say of me,
“There is no salvation for him in God.”<sup>n</sup>

Selah

<sup>4</sup>But you, LORD, are a shield around me; my glory, you keep my head high.<sup>o</sup>

II

<sup>5</sup>With my own voice I will call out to the LORD,
and he will answer me from his holy mountain.

Selah

<sup>6</sup>I lie down and I fall asleep,
[and] I will wake up, for the LORD sustains me.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>7</sup>I do not fear, then, thousands of people arrayed against me on every side.

III

<sup>8</sup>Arise, LORD! Save me, my God!
For you strike the cheekbone of all my foes;
you break the teeth of the wicked.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Salvation is from the LORD!
May your blessing be upon your people!<sup>r</sup> Selah

Trust in God

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; * with stringed instruments. A psalm of David.

I

<sup>2</sup>Answer me when I call, my saving God.
When troubles hem me in, set me free;
take pity on me, hear my prayer.<sup>S</sup>

II

<sup>3</sup>How long, O people, will you be hard of
heart?
Why do you love what is worthless,
chase after lies?<sup>*t</sup> Selah

<sup>4</sup>Know that the LORD works wonders for his faithful one;
the LORD hears when I call out to him.

<sup>5</sup>Tremble* and sin no more;
weep bitterly* within your hearts,
wail upon your beds,<sup>u</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Offer fitting sacrifices and trust in the LORD.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Many say, “May we see better times!
LORD, show us the light of your face!”<sup>w</sup> Selah

<sup>8</sup>But you have given my heart more joy than they have when grain and wine abound.

<sup>9x*</sup>In peace I will lie down and fall asleep, for you alone, LORD, make me secure.

Prayer for Divine Help

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; with wind instruments. A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>Give ear to my words, O LORD; understand my sighing.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Attend to the sound of my cry, my king and my God!
For to you I will pray, LORD;
<sup>4</sup>in the morning you will hear my voice;
in the morning I will plead before you and wait.<sup>z</sup>

II

<sup>5</sup>You are not a god who delights in evil; no wicked person finds refuge with
you;
<sup>6</sup>the arrogant cannot stand before your eyes.
You hate all who do evil;
<sup>7</sup>you destroy those who speak falsely.<sup>a</sup>
A bloody and fraudulent man
the LORD abhors.

III

<sup>8</sup>But I, through the abundance of your mercy,*
will enter into your house.
I will bow down toward your holy sanctuary
out of fear of you.<sup>b</sup> <sup>9</sup>LORD, guide me in your justice because of my foes;
make straight your way before me.<sup>c</sup>

IV

<sup>10</sup>For there is no sincerity in their mouth;
their heart is corrupt.
Their throat* is an open grave;<sup>d</sup>
on their tongue are subtle lies.
<sup>11</sup>Declare them guilty, God;
make them fall by their own devices.<sup>e</sup> Drive them out for their many sins;
for they have rebelled against you.

V

<sup>12</sup>Then all who trust in you will be glad and forever shout for joy.<sup>f</sup>
You will protect them and those will rejoice in you who love your name.

<sup>13</sup>For you, LORD, bless the just one;
you surround him with favor like a shield.

Prayer in Distress

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; with stringed instruments, “upon the eighth.”*
A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>Do not reprove me in your anger, LORD, nor punish me in your wrath.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Have pity on me, LORD, for I am weak; heal me, LORD, for my bones are shuddering.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>4</sup>My soul too is shuddering greatly—and you, LORD, how long ...? <sup>*i</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Turn back, LORD, rescue my soul;
save me because of your mercy.

<sup>6</sup>For in death there is no remembrance of
you.

Who praises you in Sheol? <sup>*j</sup>

II

<sup>7</sup>I am wearied with sighing; all night long I drench my bed with tears;
I soak my couch with weeping.

<sup>8</sup>My eyes are dimmed with sorrow, worn out because of all my foes.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Away from me, all who do evil!<sup>l</sup>
The LORD has heard the sound of my weeping.

<sup>10</sup>The LORD has heard my plea;
the LORD will receive my prayer.

<sup>11</sup>My foes will all be disgraced and will shudder greatly;
they will turn back in sudden disgrace.<sup>m</sup>

God the Vindicator

<sup>1</sup>A plaintive song of David, which he sang to the LORD concerning Cush, the Benjaminite.

I

<sup>2</sup>LORD my God, in you I trusted; save me; rescue me from all who pursue me,<sup>n</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Lest someone maul me like a lion, tear my soul apart with no one to deliver.

<sup>4</sup>LORD my God, if I have done this,*
if there is guilt on my hands,

<sup>5</sup>If I have maltreated someone treating me equitably—
or even despoiled my oppressor
without cause—

<sup>6</sup>Then let my enemy pursue and overtake my soul,
trample my life to the ground,
and lay my honor in the dust.<sup>o</sup>   Selah

<sup>7</sup>Rise up, LORD, in your anger; be aroused against the outrages of my oppressors.<sup>p</sup> Stir up the justice, my God, you have commanded.

<sup>8</sup>Have the assembly of the peoples gather about you;
and return on high above them, <sup>9</sup>the LORD will pass judgment on the peoples.

Judge me, LORD, according to my righteousness,
and my integrity.
<sup>10</sup>Let the malice of the wicked end.
Uphold the just one,
O just God,<sup>q</sup> who tries hearts and minds.

<sup>11</sup>God is a shield above me saving the upright of heart.<sup>r</sup> <sup>12</sup>God is a just judge, powerful and patient,*
not exercising anger every day.
<sup>13</sup>If one does not repent,
God sharpens his sword,
strings and readies the bow,<sup>s</sup> <sup>14</sup>Prepares his deadly shafts, makes arrows blazing thunderbolts.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Consider how one conceives iniquity;
is pregnant with mischief,
and gives birth to deception.<sup>u</sup> <sup>16</sup>He digs a hole and bores it deep, but he falls into the pit he has made.<sup>v</sup> <sup>17</sup>His malice turns back upon his head;
his violence falls on his own skull.

VI

<sup>18</sup>I will thank the LORD in accordance with his justice;
I will sing the name of the LORD Most High.<sup>w</sup>

Divine Majesty and Human Dignity

<sup>2</sup>O LORD, our Lord,
how awesome is your name through
all the earth!

I will sing of your majesty above the
heavens

<sup>3</sup>with the mouths of babes<sup>x</sup> and infants.*

You have established a bulwark* against your foes,
to silence enemy and avenger.*

<sup>4</sup>When I see your heavens, the work of your fingers,
the moon and stars that you set in place—

<sup>5</sup>* What is man that you are mindful of him,<sup>y</sup> and a son of man that you care for him?<sup>z</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Yet you have made him little less than a
god,*
crowned him with glory and honor.

<sup>7</sup>You have given him rule over the works of your hands,<sup>a</sup> put all things at his feet:

<sup>8</sup>All sheep and oxen,
even the beasts of the field,

<sup>9</sup>The birds of the air, the fish of the sea, and whatever swims the paths of the seas.

<sup>10</sup>O LORD, our Lord, how awesome is your name through
all the earth!

Thanksgiving for Victory and Prayer for Justice

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; according to Muth Labben.*

A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>I will praise you, LORD, with all my heart;
I will declare all your wondrous deeds.

<sup>3</sup>I will delight and rejoice in you;
I will sing hymns to your name, Most High.

<sup>4</sup>When my enemies turn back, they stumble and perish before you.

II

<sup>5</sup>For you upheld my right and my cause, seated on your throne, judging justly.

<sup>6</sup>You rebuked the nations, you destroyed
the wicked;
their name you blotted out for all time.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>7</sup>The enemies have been ruined forever;
you destroyed their cities;
their memory has perished.

<sup>8</sup>The LORD rules forever, has set up his throne for judgment.

<sup>9</sup>It is he who judges the world with justice,<sup>c</sup> who judges the peoples with fairness.

<sup>10</sup>The LORD is a stronghold for the oppressed,
a stronghold in times of trouble.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Those who know your name trust in you;
you never forsake those who seek you,
LORD.

IV

<sup>12</sup>Sing hymns to the LORD enthroned on Zion;
proclaim his deeds among the nations!

<sup>13</sup>For the avenger of bloodshed remembers, does not forget the cry of the afflicted.<sup>e</sup>

V

<sup>14</sup>Be gracious to me, LORD;
 see how my foes afflict me!
 You alone can raise me from the gates of death.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Then I will declare all your praises, sing joyously of your salvation
 in the gates of daughter Zion.*

VI

<sup>16</sup>The nations fall into the pit they dig; in the snare they hide, their own foot is caught.

<sup>17</sup>*The LORD is revealed in making judgments:
 by the deeds they do the wicked are trapped.<sup>g</sup> Higgaion. Selah*

VII

<sup>18</sup>To Sheol the wicked will depart, all the nations that forget God.

<sup>19</sup>For the needy will never be forgotten, nor will the hope of the afflicted ever fade.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Arise, LORD, let no mortal prevail;
 let the nations be judged in your presence.

<sup>21</sup>Strike them with terror, LORD;
 show the nations they are only human. Selah

PSALM 10

I

<sup>1</sup>Why, LORD, do you stand afar and pay no heed in times of trouble?
<sup>2</sup>Arrogant scoundrels pursue the poor; they trap them by their cunning schemes.<sup>i</sup>

II

<sup>3</sup>The wicked even boast of their greed;

these robbers curse and scorn the

LORD.<sup>j</sup>

“God does not care; there is no God.”<sup>k</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Yet their affairs always succeed;
they ignore your judgment on high;
they sneer at all who oppose them.

<sup>6</sup>They say in their hearts, “We will never fall;
never will we see misfortune.”

<sup>7</sup>Their mouths are full of oaths, violence, and lies;
discord and evil are under their tongues.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>8</sup>They wait in ambush near towns;
their eyes watch for the helpless to murder the innocent in secret.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>9</sup>They lurk in ambush like lions in a thicket, hide there to trap the poor,
snare them and close the net.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>10</sup>The helpless are crushed, laid low;
they fall into the power of the wicked,

<sup>11</sup>Who say in their hearts, “God has forgotten,
shows no concern, never bothers to look.”<sup>o</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Rise up, LORD! God, lift up your hand!
Do not forget the poor!

<sup>13</sup>Why should the wicked scorn God, say in their hearts, “God does not care”?

<sup>14</sup>But you do see;
you take note of misery and sorrow;<sup>p</sup>
you take the matter in hand.

To you the helpless can entrust their cause;
you are the defender of orphans.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Break the arm of the wicked and depraved;
make them account for their crimes;
let none of them survive.

- <sup>16</sup>The LORD is king forever;<sup>r</sup>
the nations have vanished from his land.
- <sup>17</sup>You listen, LORD, to the needs of the poor;
you strengthen their heart and incline your ear.
- <sup>18</sup>You win justice for the orphaned and oppressed;<sup>s</sup>
no one on earth will cause terror again.

Confidence in the Presence of God

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. Of David.

I

- In the LORD I take refuge;
how can you say to me,
“Flee like a bird to the mountains!”<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>See how the wicked string their bows, fit their arrows to the string to shoot from the shadows at the upright of heart.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>3*</sup>If foundations are destroyed, what can the just one do?”

- <sup>4</sup>The Lord is in his holy temple;
the LORD’s throne is in heaven.<sup>v</sup> God’s eyes keep careful watch;
they test the children of Adam.
- <sup>5</sup>The LORD tests the righteous and the wicked,
hates those who love violence,
- <sup>6</sup>And rains upon the wicked fiery coals and brimstone, a scorching wind their allotted cup.<sup>*w</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>The LORD is just and loves just deeds;
the upright will see his face.

Prayer Against Evil Tongues

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; “upon the eighth.” A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>Help, Lord, for no one loyal remains;
the faithful have vanished from the children of men.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>3</sup>They tell lies to one another, speak with deceiving lips and a double heart.<sup>y</sup>

II

<sup>4</sup>May the Lord cut off all deceiving lips, and every boastful tongue,

<sup>5</sup>Those who say, “By our tongues we prevail;
when our lips speak, who can lord it over us?”<sup>z</sup>

<sup>6</sup>“Because they rob the weak, and the needy groan,
I will now arise,” says the LORD;
“I will grant safety to whoever longs for it.”<sup>a</sup>

<sup>7</sup>The promises of the Lord are sure, silver refined in a crucible,* silver purified seven times.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>8</sup>You, O Lord, protect us always;
preserve us from this generation.

<sup>9</sup>On every side the wicked roam;
the shameless are extolled by the children of men.

Prayer for Help

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>How long, Lord? Will you utterly forget
me?

How long will you hide your face from me?<sup>c</sup>

<sup>3</sup>How long must I carry sorrow in my soul, grief in my heart day after day?
How long will my enemy triumph over
me?

II

<sup>4</sup>Look upon me, answer me, LORD, my
God!
Give light to my eyes lest I sleep in
death,

<sup>5</sup>Lest my enemy say, “I have prevailed,” lest my foes rejoice at my downfall.<sup>d</sup>

III

<sup>6</sup>But I trust in your mercy.
Grant my heart joy in your salvation,
I will sing to the LORD,
for he has dealt bountifully with me!<sup>e</sup>

A Lament over Widespread Corruption

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. Of David.

I

The fool says in his heart,
“There is no God.”
Their deeds are loathsome and corrupt;
not one does what is good.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>2</sup>The LORD looks down from heaven upon the children of men,<sup>g</sup>
To see if even one is wise,

if even one seeks God.<sup>h</sup> <sup>3</sup>All have gone astray;
all alike are perverse.
Not one does what is good,
not even one.<sup>i</sup>

II

<sup>4</sup>Will these evildoers never learn?
They devour my people as they devour bread;<sup>j</sup>
they do not call upon the LORD.<sup>k</sup> <sup>5</sup>They have good reason, then, to fear;
God is with the company of the just.
<sup>6</sup>They would crush the hopes of the poor, but the poor have the LORD as their refuge.

III

<sup>7</sup>Oh, that from Zion might come
the salvation of Israel!
Jacob would rejoice, and Israel be glad when the LORD restores his people!*

The Righteous Israelite

<sup>1m</sup>A psalm of David.

I

LORD, who may abide in your tent?*

Who may dwell on your holy mountain?*

<sup>2</sup>Whoever walks without blame,<sup>n</sup> doing what is right,
speaking truth from the heart;
<sup>3</sup>Who does not slander with his tongue,
does no harm to a friend,
never defames a neighbor;

<sup>4</sup>Who disdains the wicked,
but honors those who fear the LORD;
Who keeps an oath despite the cost, <sup>5</sup>lends no money at interest,* accepts no bribe against the innocent.<sup>o</sup>

III

Whoever acts like this shall never be shaken.

God the Supreme Good

<sup>1p</sup>A miktam* of David.

I

Keep me safe, O God;
in you I take refuge.
<sup>2</sup>I say to the LORD,
you are my Lord,
you are my only good.
<sup>3</sup>As for the holy ones who are in the land,
they are noble,
in whom is all my delight.
<sup>4*</sup>They multiply their sorrows who court other gods.
Blood libations to them I will not pour
out,
nor will I take their names upon my
lips.
<sup>5</sup>LORD, my allotted portion and my cup, you have made my destiny secure.<sup>q</sup> <sup>6*</sup>Pleasant places were measured out for
me;
fair to me indeed is my inheritance.

II

<sup>7</sup>I bless the LORD who counsels me;
even at night my heart exhorts me.
<sup>8</sup>I keep the LORD always before me;

with him at my right hand, I shall never be shaken.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Therefore my heart is glad, my soul rejoices;
my body also dwells secure,

<sup>10</sup>For you will not abandon my soul to Sheol,
nor let your devout one see the pit.<sup>*s</sup>

<sup>11</sup>You will show me the path to life, abounding joy in your presence,
the delights at your right hand forever.

Prayer for Rescue from Persecutors

<sup>1</sup>A prayer of David.

I

Hear, LORD, my plea for justice; pay heed to my cry;
Listen to my prayer
from lips without guile.

<sup>2</sup>From you let my vindication come;
your eyes see what is right.

<sup>3</sup>You have tested my heart, searched it in the night.<sup>t</sup>

You have tried me by fire,
but find no malice in me.

My mouth has not transgressed
<sup>4</sup>as others often do.

As your lips have instructed me,
I have kept from the way of the lawless.

<sup>5</sup>My steps have kept to your paths;
my feet have not faltered.<sup>u</sup>

II

<sup>6</sup>I call upon you; answer me, O God.
Turn your ear to me; hear my speech.

<sup>7</sup>Show your wonderful mercy,

you who deliver with your right arm
those who seek refuge from their foes.

<sup>8*</sup>Keep me as the apple of your eye;
hide me in the shadow of your wings
<sup>9</sup>from the wicked who despoil me.<sup>v</sup>

III

My ravenous enemies press upon me;<sup>w</sup> <sup>10*</sup>they close their hearts, they fill their mouths with proud roaring.

<sup>11</sup>Their steps even now encircle me;
they watch closely, keeping low to the ground,

<sup>12</sup>Like lions eager for prey,
like a young lion lurking in ambush.

<sup>13</sup>Rise, O Lord, confront and cast them
down;
rescue my soul from the wicked.

<sup>14</sup>Slay them with your sword;
with your hand, LORD, slay them; snatch them from the world in their prime.

Their bellies are being filled with your friends;
their children are satisfied too, for they share what is left with their young.

<sup>15</sup>I am just—let me see your face;
when I awake, let me be filled with your presence.<sup>x</sup>

A King's Thanksgiving for Victory

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. Of David, the servant of the LORD, who sang to the LORD the words of this song after the LORD had rescued him from the clutches of all his enemies and from the hand of Saul. <sup>2</sup>He said:<sup>y</sup>

I

I love you, LORD, my strength, <sup>3</sup>LORD, my rock, my fortress, my deliverer,
My God, my rock of refuge, my shield, my saving horn, * my stronghold!<sup>z</sup>
<sup>4</sup>Praised be the Lord, I exclaim!
    I have been delivered from my enemies.

II

<sup>5</sup>The cords of death encompassed me;
    the torrents of destruction terrified me.
<sup>6</sup>The cords * of Sheol encircled me;
    the snares of death lay in wait for me.<sup>a</sup>
<sup>7</sup>In my distress I called out: LORD!
    I cried out to my God.<sup>b</sup>
From his temple he heard my voice;
    my cry to him reached his ears.
<sup>8*</sup>The earth rocked and shook;
    the foundations of the mountains
    trembled;
    they shook as his wrath flared up.<sup>c</sup> <sup>9</sup>Smoke rose from his nostrils,
    a devouring fire from his mouth;
    it kindled coals into flame.
<sup>10</sup>He parted the heavens and came down, a dark cloud under his feet.<sup>d</sup> <sup>11</sup>Mounted on a cherub * he flew,
    borne along on the wings of the wind.
<sup>12</sup>He made darkness his cloak around him;
    his canopy, water-darkened stormclouds.
<sup>13</sup>From the gleam before him, his clouds passed,
    hail and coals of fire.<sup>e</sup> <sup>14</sup>The LORD thundered from heaven;
    the Most High made his voice
    resound.<sup>f</sup>

15 He let fly his arrows* and scattered them;
shot his lightning bolts and dispersed them.<sup>g</sup>

16 Then the bed of the sea appeared;
the world's foundations lay bare,<sup>h</sup>
At your rebuke, O LORD,
at the storming breath of your nostrils.

17 He reached down from on high and
seized me;
drew me out of the deep waters.<sup>i</sup>

18 He rescued me from my mighty enemy,
from foes too powerful for me.

19 They attacked me on my day of distress, but the LORD was my support.

20 He set me free in the open;
he rescued me because he loves me.

III

21 The LORD acknowledged my
righteousness,
rewarded my clean hands.<sup>j</sup>

22 For I kept the ways of the LORD;
I was not disloyal to my God.

23 For his laws were all before me,
his decrees I did not cast aside.

24 I was honest toward him;
I was on guard against sin.

25 So the LORD rewarded my righteousness,
the cleanness of my hands in his sight.

26 Toward the faithful you are faithful; to the honest man you are honest;<sup>k</sup>

27 Toward the pure, you are pure;
but to the perverse you are devious.

28 For humble people you save;
haughty eyes you bring low.<sup>l</sup>

29 For you, LORD, give light to my lamp;
my God brightens my darkness.<sup>m</sup>

30 With you I can rush an armed band,
with my God to help I can leap a wall.

31 God's way is unerring;
the LORD's promise is refined;
he is a shield for all who take refuge in him.<sup>n</sup>

IV

32 Truly, who is God except the LORD?

Who but our God is the rock?<sup>o</sup>

33 This God who girded me with might,
kept my way unerring,

34 Who made my feet like a deer's, and set me on the heights,<sup>p</sup>

35 Who trained my hands for war,
my arms to string a bow of bronze.<sup>*q</sup>

V

36 You have given me your saving shield;
your right hand has upheld me;
your favor made me great.

37 You made room for my steps beneath
me;
my ankles never twisted.<sup>r</sup>

38 I pursued my enemies and overtook
them;
I did not turn back till I destroyed
them.

39 I decimated them; they could not rise;
they fell at my feet.

40 You girded me with valor for war, subjugated my opponents beneath me.

41 You made my foes expose their necks to
me;
those who hated me I silenced.

42 They cried for help, but no one saved
them;
cried to the LORD but received no
answer.

43 I ground them to dust before the wind;
I left them like mud in the streets.

44 You rescued me from the strife of peoples;

you made me head over nations.
A people I had not known served me; <sup>45</sup>as soon as they heard of me they obeyed.
Foreigners submitted before me;
<sup>46</sup>foreigners cringed;
they came cowering from their dungeons.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>47</sup>The LORD lives! Blessed be my rock!<sup>t</sup>
Exalted be God, my savior!
<sup>48</sup>O God who granted me vengeance, made peoples subject to me,<sup>u</sup> <sup>49</sup>and saved me from my enemies, Truly you have elevated me above my opponents,
from a man of lawlessness you have rescued me.
<sup>50</sup>Thus I will praise you, LORD, among the nations;
I will sing praises to your name.<sup>v</sup> <sup>51</sup>You have given great victories to your
king,
and shown mercy to his anointed, to David and his posterity forever.<sup>w</sup>

God's Glory in the Heavens and in the Law

<sup>2</sup>The heavens declare the glory of God;
the firmament proclaims the works of his hands.<sup>x</sup> <sup>3</sup>Day unto day pours forth speech;
night unto night whispers knowledge.
<sup>4*</sup>There is no speech, no words;
their voice is not heard;

<sup>5</sup>A report goes forth through all the earth, their messages, to the ends of the world.

He has pitched in them a tent for the sun;*

<sup>6</sup>it comes forth like a bridegroom from his canopy,
and like a hero joyfully runs its course.

<sup>7</sup>From one end of the heavens it comes forth;
its course runs through to the other;
nothing escapes its heat.

II

<sup>8</sup>The law of the LORD is perfect, refreshing the soul.
The decree of the LORD is trustworthy, giving wisdom to the simple.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>9</sup>The precepts of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart.
The command of the LORD is clear, enlightening the eye.

<sup>10</sup>The fear of the LORD is pure, enduring forever.
The statutes of the LORD are true,
all of them just;

<sup>11</sup>More desirable than gold,
than a hoard of purest gold, Sweeter also than honey or drippings from the comb.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>12</sup>By them your servant is warned;* obeying them brings much reward.

III

<sup>13</sup>Who can detect trespasses?
Cleanse me from my inadvertent sins.

<sup>14</sup>Also from arrogant ones restrain your servant;
let them never control me.
Then shall I be blameless, innocent of grave sin.

<sup>15</sup>Let the words of my mouth be acceptable,

the thoughts of my heart before you,
LORD, my rock and my redeemer.

Prayer for the King in Time of War

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>The LORD answer you in time of distress;
the name of the God of Jacob defend
you!

<sup>3</sup>May he send you help from the sanctuary, from Zion be your support.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>4</sup>May he remember* your every offering, graciously accept your burnt offering, Selah

<sup>5</sup>Grant what is in your heart, fulfill your every plan.

<sup>6</sup>May we shout for joy at your victory,* raise the banners in the name of our
God.
The LORD grant your every petition!

II

<sup>7</sup>Now I know the Lord gives victory to his anointed.<sup>b</sup>

He will answer him from the holy heavens with a strong arm that brings victory.

<sup>8</sup>Some rely on chariots, others on horses, but we on the name of the Lord our God.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>9</sup>They collapse and fall, but we stand strong and firm.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>10</sup>LORD, grant victory to the king;
answer when we call upon you.

Thanksgiving and Assurances for the King

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

<sup>2</sup>LORD, the king finds joy in your power;<sup>e</sup> in your victory how greatly he rejoices!

<sup>3</sup>You have granted him his heart's desire;
you did not refuse the request of his lips. Selah

<sup>4</sup>For you welcomed him with goodly blessings;
you placed on his head a crown of pure gold.

<sup>5</sup>He asked life of you;
you gave it to him,
length of days forever.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Great is his glory in your victory; majesty and splendor you confer upon
him.

<sup>7</sup>You make him the pattern of blessings
forever,
you gladden him with the joy of your face.

<sup>8</sup>For the king trusts in the LORD, stands firm through the mercy of the Most High.

II

<sup>9</sup>Your hand will find all your enemies;
your right hand will find your foes!

<sup>10</sup>At the time of your coming you will make them a fiery furnace.
Then the LORD in his anger will consume
them,
devour them with fire.

<sup>11</sup>Even their descendants you will wipe out from the earth,
their offspring from the human race.

<sup>12</sup>Though they intend evil against you, devising plots, they will not succeed, <sup>13</sup>For you will put them to flight;

you will aim at their faces with your bow.

<sup>14</sup>Arise, LORD, in your power!<sup>g</sup>
We will sing and chant the praise of your might.

The Prayer of an Innocent Person

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; according to “The deer of the dawn.”* A psalm of David.

I

<sup>2</sup>My God, my God, why have you abandoned me?
Why so far from my call for help,
from my cries of anguish?<sup>h</sup> <sup>3</sup>My God, I call by day, but you do not answer;
by night, but I have no relief.<sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>Yet you are enthroned as the Holy One; you are the glory of Israel.<sup>j</sup> <sup>5</sup>In you our fathers trusted;
they trusted and you rescued them.
<sup>6</sup>To you they cried out and they escaped;
in you they trusted and were not disappointed.<sup>k</sup> <sup>7</sup>* But I am a worm, not a man, scorned by men, despised by the people.<sup>l</sup> <sup>8</sup>All who see me mock me;
they curl their lips and jeer;
they shake their heads at me:<sup>m</sup> <sup>9</sup>“He relied on the LORD—let him deliver
him;

if he loves him, let him rescue him.”<sup>n</sup> <sup>10</sup>For you drew me forth from the womb, made me safe at my mother’s breasts.
<sup>11</sup>Upon you I was thrust from the womb; since my mother bore me you are my God.<sup>o</sup>
<sup>12</sup>Do not stay far from me, for trouble is near,
and there is no one to help.<sup>p</sup>

II

<sup>13</sup>Many bulls* surround me;
fierce bulls of Bashan* encircle me.
<sup>14</sup>They open their mouths against me, lions that rend and roar.<sup>q</sup> <sup>15</sup>Like water my life drains away;
all my bones are disjointed.
My heart has become like wax,
it melts away within me.
<sup>16</sup>As dry as a potsherd is my throat;
my tongue cleaves to my palate;
you lay me in the dust of death.* <sup>17</sup>Dogs surround me;
a pack of evildoers closes in on me.
They have pierced my hands and my feet
<sup>18</sup>I can count all my bones.<sup>r</sup>
They stare at me and gloat; <sup>19</sup>they divide my garments among
them;
for my clothing they cast lots.<sup>s</sup> <sup>20</sup>But you, Lord, do not stay far off;
my strength, come quickly to help me.
<sup>21</sup>Deliver my soul from the sword,
my life from the grip of the dog.
<sup>22</sup>Save me from the lion’s mouth, my poor life from the horns of wild bulls.<sup>t</sup>

III

23 Then I will proclaim your name to my brethren;

in the assembly I will praise you: *u

24 “You who fear the LORD, give praise!
All descendants of Jacob, give honor;
show reverence, all descendants of Israel!

25 For he has not spurned or disdained
the misery of this poor wretch,

Did not turn away * from me,
but heard me when I cried out.

26 I will offer praise in the great assembly;
my vows I will fulfill before those who fear him.

27 The poor * will eat their fill;
those who seek the LORD will offer
praise.

May your hearts enjoy life forever!” v

IV

28 All the ends of the earth will remember and turn to the LORD;
All the families of nations will bow low before him. w

29 For kingship belongs to the LORD, the ruler over the nations. x

30 * All who sleep in the earth will bow low before God;
All who have gone down into the dust will kneel in homage.

31 And I will live for the LORD;
my descendants will serve you.

32 The generation to come will be told of
the Lord,
that they may proclaim to a people yet unborn
the deliverance you have brought. y

The Lord, Shepherd and Host

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of David.

I

The LORD is my shepherd;*
there is nothing I lack.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>2</sup>In green pastures he makes me lie down;
to still waters he leads me;
<sup>3a</sup>he restores my soul.

He guides me along right paths*
for the sake of his name.

<sup>4</sup>Even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,<sup>b</sup>
I will fear no evil, for you are with me;
your rod and your staff comfort me.

II

<sup>5*</sup>You set a table before me in front of my enemies;*

You anoint my head with oil;<sup>*c</sup>
my cup overflows.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Indeed, goodness and mercy* will pursue
me
all the days of my life;

I will dwell in the house of the LORD<sup>e</sup>
for endless days.

The Glory of God in Procession to Zion

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of David.

I

The earth is the Lord's and all it holds,<sup>f</sup>
the world and those who dwell in it.

<sup>2</sup>For he founded it on the seas, established it over the rivers.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Who may go up the mountain of the Lord?<sup>h</sup>

Who can stand in his holy place?

<sup>4*</sup>“The clean of hand and pure of heart, who has not given his soul to useless
things,
what is vain.

<sup>5</sup>He will receive blessings from the LORD, and justice from his saving God.

<sup>6</sup>Such is the generation that seeks him, that seeks the face of the God of Jacob.” Selah

<sup>7</sup>Lift up your heads, O gates;* be lifted, you ancient portals, that the king of glory may enter.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Who is this king of glory?
The LORD, strong and mighty,
the LORD, mighty in war.

<sup>9</sup>Lift up your heads, O gates;
rise up, you ancient portals,
that the king of glory may enter.

<sup>10</sup>Who is this king of glory?
The LORD of hosts, he is the king of glory. Selah

Confident Prayer for Forgiveness and Guidance

<sup>1</sup>Of David.

I

To you, O Lord, I lift up my soul, <sup>2j</sup>my God, in you I trust;

- do not let me be disgraced;<sup>k</sup>
do not let my enemies gloat over me.
- <sup>3</sup>No one is disgraced who waits for you,<sup>l</sup> but only those who are treacherous without cause.
- <sup>4</sup>Make known to me your ways, LORD;
teach me your paths.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>Guide me by your fidelity and teach me,
for you are God my savior,
for you I wait all the day long.
- <sup>6</sup>Remember your compassion and your mercy, O LORD,
for they are ages old.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>Remember no more the sins of my youth;<sup>o</sup> remember me according to your
mercy,
because of your goodness, LORD.
- II
- <sup>8</sup>Good and upright is the LORD, therefore he shows sinners the way,
- <sup>9</sup>He guides the humble in righteousness,
and teaches the humble his way.
- <sup>10</sup>All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth toward those who honor his covenant and decrees.
- <sup>11</sup>For the sake of your name, LORD, pardon my guilt, though it is great.
- <sup>12</sup>Who is the one who fears the LORD?
God shows him the way he should choose.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>He will abide in prosperity, and his descendants will inherit the land.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>The counsel of the Lord belongs to those
who fear him;
and his covenant instructs them.
- <sup>15</sup>My eyes are ever upon the LORD, who frees my feet from the snare.<sup>r</sup>

III

<sup>16</sup>Look upon me, have pity on me, for I am alone and afflicted.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Relieve the troubles of my heart;
bring me out of my distress.

<sup>18</sup>Look upon my affliction and suffering;
take away all my sins.

<sup>19</sup>See how many are my enemies,
see how fiercely they hate me.

<sup>20</sup>Preserve my soul and rescue me;
do not let me be disgraced, for in you I seek refuge.

<sup>21</sup>Let integrity and uprightness preserve me;
I wait for you, O LORD.

<sup>22*</sup>Redeem Israel, O God, from all its distress!

Prayer of Innocence

<sup>1</sup>Of David.

I

Judge me, LORD!

For I have walked in my integrity.<sup>t</sup>
In the LORD I trust;
I do not falter.

<sup>2</sup>Examine me, Lord, and test me; search my heart and mind.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Your mercy is before my eyes;
I walk guided by your faithfulness.<sup>v</sup>

II

<sup>4</sup>I do not sit with worthless men, nor with hypocrites do I mingle.

<sup>5</sup>I hate an evil assembly;
with the wicked I do not sit.

<sup>6</sup>I will wash my hands* in innocence<sup>w</sup> so that I may process around your altar, LORD,
<sup>7</sup>To hear the sound of thanksgiving, and recount all your wondrous deeds.
<sup>8</sup>Lord, I love the refuge of your house, the site of the dwelling-place of your glory.<sup>x</sup>

III

<sup>9</sup>Do not take me away with sinners, nor my life with the men of blood,<sup>y</sup> <sup>10</sup>In whose hands there is a plot, their right hands full of bribery.
<sup>11</sup>But I walk in my integrity,<sup>z</sup> redeem me, be gracious to me!<sup>a</sup> <sup>12</sup>My foot stands on level ground;* in assemblies I will bless the LORD.<sup>b</sup>

Trust in God

<sup>1c</sup>Of David.

A

I

The LORD is my light and my salvation;
whom should I fear?
The LORD is my life's refuge;
of whom should I be afraid?
<sup>2</sup>When evildoers come at me to devour my flesh,<sup>*d</sup>
These my enemies and foes themselves stumble and fall.
<sup>3</sup>Though an army encamp against me,
my heart does not fear;
Though war be waged against me,
even then do I trust.

II

<sup>4</sup>One thing I ask of the LORD;
     this I seek:
 To dwell in the LORD's house
     all the days of my life,
 To gaze on the LORD's beauty,
     to visit his temple.<sup>e</sup> <sup>5</sup>For God will hide me in his shelter in time of trouble,<sup>f</sup>
 He will conceal me in the cover of his
     tent;
     and set me high upon a rock.
<sup>6</sup>Even now my head is held high above my enemies on every side!
 I will offer in his tent sacrifices with shouts of joy;
 I will sing and chant praise to the LORD.

B

I

<sup>7</sup>Hear my voice, LORD, when I call;
     have mercy on me and answer me.
<sup>8</sup>"Come," says my heart, "seek his face";* your face, LORD, do I seek!<sup>g</sup> <sup>9</sup>Do not hide your face from me;
     do not repel your servant in anger.
 You are my salvation; do not cast me off;
     do not forsake me, God my savior!
<sup>10</sup>Even if my father and mother forsake me, the LORD will take me in.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>11</sup>LORD, show me your way; lead me on a level path
     because of my enemies.<sup>i</sup> <sup>12</sup>Do not abandon me to the desire of my foes;
     malicious and lying witnesses have risen against me.
<sup>13</sup>I believe I shall see the LORD's goodness in the land of the living.<sup>*j</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Wait for the LORD, take courage;
be stouthearted, wait for the LORD!

Petition and Thanksgiving

<sup>1</sup>Of David.

I

To you, LORD, I call;
my Rock, do not be deaf to me,<sup>k</sup>
Do not be silent toward me, so that I join those who go down to the pit.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Hear the sound of my pleading when I cry to you for help when I lift up my hands toward your holy place.<sup>*m</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Do not drag me off with the wicked, with those who do wrong,<sup>n</sup>
Who speak peace to their neighbors though evil is in their hearts.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Repay them for their deeds, for the evil that they do.
For the work of their hands repay them;
give them what they deserve.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Because they do not understand the LORD's works,
the work of his hands,<sup>q</sup>
He will tear them down,
never to rebuild them.

II

<sup>6*</sup>Blessed be the LORD,
who has heard the sound of my pleading.

<sup>7</sup>The LORD is my strength and my shield,
in whom my heart trusts.
I am helped, so my heart rejoices;

with my song I praise him.

III

<sup>8*</sup> LORD, you are a strength for your people, the saving refuge of your anointed.

<sup>9</sup> Save your people, bless your inheritance;
pasture and carry them forever!

The Lord of Majesty Acclaimed as King of the World

<sup>1</sup> A psalm of David.

I

Give to the LORD, you sons of God,*
give to the LORD glory and might;

<sup>2</sup> Give to the Lord the glory due his
name.

Bow down before the Lord's holy splendor!<sup>r</sup>

<sup>3</sup> The voice of the Lord* is over the waters;
the God of glory thunders,
the LORD, over the mighty waters.

<sup>4</sup> The voice of the LORD is power;
the voice of the LORD is splendor.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>5</sup> The voice of the LORD cracks the cedars;
the LORD splinters the cedars of Lebanon,

<sup>6</sup> Makes Lebanon leap like a calf,
and Sirion* like a young bull.

<sup>7</sup> The voice of the Lord strikes with fiery flame;

<sup>8</sup> the voice of the LORD shakes the desert;
the LORD shakes the desert of Kadesh.

<sup>9*</sup> The voice of the LORD makes the deer dance and strips the forests bare.

All in his Temple say, "Glory!"

III

<sup>10</sup>The LORD sits enthroned above the flood! <sup>*t</sup>

The LORD reigns as king forever!

<sup>11</sup>May the LORD give might to his people; * may the LORD bless his people with peace! <sup>u</sup>

Thanksgiving for Deliverance

<sup>1</sup>A psalm. A song for the dedication of the Temple. * Of David.

<sup>2</sup>I praise you, Lord, for you raised me up and did not let my enemies rejoice over me.

<sup>3</sup>O LORD, my God,
I cried out to you for help and you healed * me.

<sup>4</sup>LORD, you brought my soul up from Sheol; you let me live, from going down to the pit. <sup>*v</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Sing praise to the LORD, you faithful;
give thanks to his holy memory.

<sup>6</sup>For his anger lasts but a moment;
his favor a lifetime.
At dusk weeping comes for the night;
but at dawn there is rejoicing.

<sup>7</sup>Complacent, * I once said,
"I shall never be shaken."

<sup>8</sup>LORD, you showed me favor, established for me mountains of virtue.

But when you hid your face

I was struck with terror.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>9</sup>To you, Lord, I cried out;
with the Lord I pleaded for mercy:

<sup>10*</sup>“What gain is there from my lifeblood, from my going down to the grave?

Does dust give you thanks or declare your faithfulness?

<sup>11</sup>Hear, O Lord, have mercy on me;
LORD, be my helper.”

IV

<sup>12</sup>You changed my mourning into dancing;
you took off my sackcloth and clothed me with gladness.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>13</sup>So that my glory may praise you and not be silent.

O LORD, my God,
forever will I give you thanks.

Prayer in Distress and Thanksgiving for Escape

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>In you, Lord, I take refuge;<sup>y</sup>
let me never be put to shame.

In your righteousness deliver me;

<sup>3</sup>incline your ear to me;
make haste to rescue me!

Be my rock of refuge,
a stronghold to save me.

<sup>4</sup>For you are my rock and my fortress;<sup>z</sup> for your name's sake lead me and guide me.

<sup>5</sup>Free me from the net they have set for
me,
for you are my refuge.

6* Into your hands I commend my spirit;<sup>a</sup> you will redeem me, LORD, God of truth.

7 You hate those who serve worthless idols,
but I trust in the LORD.

8 I will rejoice and be glad in your mercy,
once you have seen my misery, [and] gotten to know the distress of my soul.<sup>b</sup>

9 You will not abandon me into enemy
hands,
but will set my feet in a free and open space.

II

10 Be gracious to me, Lord, for I am in distress;
affliction is wearing down my eyes,
my throat and my insides.

11 My life is worn out by sorrow,
and my years by sighing.
My strength fails in my affliction;
my bones are wearing down.<sup>c</sup>

12 To all my foes I am a thing of scorn, and especially to my neighbors
a horror to my friends.
When they see me in public,
they quickly shy away.<sup>d</sup>

13 I am forgotten, out of mind like the dead;
I am like a worn-out tool.*

14 I hear the whispers of the crowd; terrors are all around me.*

They conspire together against me;
they plot to take my life.

15 But I trust in you, LORD;
I say, "You are my God."<sup>e</sup>

16 My destiny is in your hands;
rescue me from my enemies,
from the hands of my pursuers.

<sup>17</sup>Let your face shine on your servant;<sup>f</sup> save me in your mercy.

<sup>18</sup>Do not let me be put to shame,
for I have called to you, LORD.

Put the wicked to shame;
reduce them to silence in Sheol.

<sup>19</sup>Strike dumb their lying lips, which speak arrogantly against the righteous
in contempt and scorn.<sup>g</sup>

III

<sup>20</sup>How great is your goodness, Lord, stored up for those who fear you.
You display it for those who trust you,
in the sight of the children of Adam.

<sup>21</sup>You hide them in the shelter of your presence,
safe from scheming enemies.
You conceal them in your tent,
away from the strife of tongues.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Blessed be the LORD,
marvelously he showed to me
his mercy in a fortified city.

<sup>23</sup>Though I had said in my alarm,
“I am cut off from your eyes.”<sup>i</sup> Yet you heard my voice, my cry for
mercy,
when I pleaded with you for help.

<sup>24</sup>Love the LORD, all you who are faithful to him.
The LORD protects the loyal,
but repays the arrogant in full.

<sup>25</sup>Be strong and take heart,
all who hope in the LORD.

Remission of Sin

<sup>1j</sup>Of David. A maskil.

I

Blessed is the one whose fault is removed,
whose sin is forgiven.

<sup>2</sup>Blessed is the man to whom the LORD
imputes no guilt,
in whose spirit is no deceit.

<sup>3</sup>Because I kept silent, * my bones wasted away;

I groaned all day long. <sup>k</sup>

<sup>4</sup>For day and night your hand was heavy
upon me;
my strength withered as in dry summer heat. Selah

<sup>5</sup>Then I declared my sin to you; my guilt I did not hide. <sup>l</sup>

I said, "I confess my transgression to the LORD,"

and you took away the guilt of my sin. Selah

<sup>6</sup>Therefore every loyal person should pray to you in time of distress.

Though flood waters * threaten,
they will never reach him. <sup>m</sup>

<sup>7</sup>You are my shelter; you guard me from
distress;
with joyful shouts of deliverance you surround me. Selah

III

<sup>8</sup>I will instruct you and show you the way you should walk,
give you counsel with my eye upon you.

<sup>9</sup>Do not be like a horse or mule, without understanding;
with bit and bridle their temper is curbed,
else they will not come to you.

IV

<sup>10</sup>Many are the sorrows of the wicked one, but mercy surrounds the one who trusts in the LORD.

<sup>11</sup>Be glad in the LORD and rejoice, you
righteous;
exult, all you upright of heart.<sup>n</sup>

Praise of God's Power and Providence

I

<sup>1</sup>Rejoice, you righteous, in the LORD; praise from the upright is fitting.<sup>o</sup> <sup>2</sup>Give thanks to the LORD on the harp;
on the ten-stringed lyre offer praise.<sup>p</sup> <sup>3</sup>Sing to him a new song;
skillfully play with joyful chant.
<sup>4</sup>For the Lord's word is upright;
all his works are trustworthy.
<sup>5</sup>He loves justice and right.
The earth is full of the mercy of the LORD.<sup>q</sup>

II

<sup>6</sup>By the LORD's word the heavens were made;
by the breath of his mouth all their host.<sup>*r</sup> <sup>7*</sup>He gathered the waters of the sea as a mound;
he sets the deep into storage vaults.<sup>s</sup>

III

<sup>8</sup>Let all the earth fear the LORD;
let all who dwell in the world show him reverence.
<sup>9</sup>For he spoke, and it came to be, commanded, and it stood in place.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>10</sup>The LORD foils the plan of nations, frustrates the designs of peoples.
<sup>11</sup>But the plan of the LORD stands forever, the designs of his heart through all generations.<sup>u</sup> <sup>12</sup>Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD,
the people chosen as his inheritance.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>13</sup>From heaven the LORD looks down and observes the children of Adam,<sup>w</sup> <sup>14</sup>From his dwelling place he surveys all who dwell on earth.
<sup>15</sup>The One who fashioned together their hearts
is the One who knows all their works.

<sup>16</sup>A king is not saved by a great army, nor a warrior delivered by great
strength.
<sup>17</sup>Useless is the horse for safety;
despite its great strength, it cannot be saved.
<sup>18</sup>Behold, the eye of the LORD is upon those who fear him,
upon those who count on his mercy,
<sup>19</sup>To deliver their soul from death, and to keep them alive through famine.

VI

<sup>20</sup>Our soul waits for the LORD, he is our help and shield.<sup>x</sup> <sup>21</sup>For in him our hearts rejoice;
in his holy name we trust.
<sup>22</sup>May your mercy, LORD, be upon us;
as we put our hope in you.

Thanksgiving to God Who Delivers the Just <sup>1</sup>Of David, when he feigned madness before Abimelech,* who drove him out and he went away.

I

<sup>2</sup>I will bless the LORD at all times; his praise shall be always in my mouth.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>3</sup>My soul will glory in the LORD;
let the poor hear and be glad.

<sup>4</sup>Magnify the LORD with me;
and let us exalt his name together.

II

<sup>5</sup>I sought the LORD, and he answered me, delivered me from all my fears.

<sup>6</sup>Look to him and be radiant, and your faces may not blush for shame.

<sup>7</sup>This poor one cried out and the LORD heard,
and from all his distress he saved him.

<sup>8</sup>The angel of the LORD encamps around those who fear him, and he saves them.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Taste and see that the LORD is good; blessed is the stalwart one who takes refuge in him.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Fear the LORD, you his holy ones; nothing is lacking to those who fear him.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>11</sup>The rich grow poor and go hungry, but those who seek the LORD lack no good thing.

<sup>12</sup>Come, children,* listen to me;<sup>c</sup>
I will teach you fear of the LORD.

<sup>13</sup>Who is the man who delights in life,<sup>d</sup>

- who loves to see the good days?
- <sup>14</sup>Keep your tongue from evil,
your lips from speaking lies.
- <sup>15</sup>Turn from evil and do good;<sup>e</sup> seek peace and pursue it.
- <sup>16</sup>The eyes of the LORD are directed toward the righteous<sup>f</sup> and his ears toward their cry.
- <sup>17</sup>The LORD's face is against evildoers to wipe out their memory from the earth.
- <sup>18</sup>The righteous cry out, the LORD hears and he rescues them from all their afflictions.
- <sup>19</sup>The LORD is close to the brokenhearted, saves those whose spirit is crushed.
- <sup>20</sup>Many are the troubles of the righteous, but the LORD delivers him from them
all.
- <sup>21</sup>He watches over all his bones;
not one of them shall be broken.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>22</sup>Evil will slay the wicked;
those who hate the righteous are condemned.
- <sup>23</sup>The LORD is the redeemer of the souls of his servants;
and none are condemned who take refuge in him.

Prayer for Help Against Unjust Enemies

<sup>1</sup>Of David.

I

- * Oppose, O LORD, those who oppose me; war upon those who make war upon
me.

<sup>2</sup>Take up the shield and buckler;
rise up in my defense.
<sup>3</sup>Brandish lance and battle-ax against my pursuers.
Say to my soul,
“I am your salvation.”
<sup>4</sup>Let those who seek my life
be put to shame and disgrace.
Let those who plot evil against me<sup>h</sup> be turned back and confounded.
<sup>5</sup>Make them like chaff before the wind,<sup>i</sup> with the angel of the LORD driving them on.
<sup>6</sup>Make their way slippery and dark, with the angel of the LORD pursuing
them.

II

<sup>7</sup>Without cause they set their snare for me;
without cause they dug a pit for me.
<sup>8</sup>Let ruin overtake them unawares;
let the snare they have set catch them;
let them fall into the pit they have dug.<sup>j</sup> <sup>9</sup>Then I will rejoice in the LORD, exult in God’s salvation.
<sup>10</sup>My very bones shall say,
“O LORD, who is like you,<sup>k</sup> Who rescue the afflicted from the powerful,
the afflicted and needy from the despoiler?”

III

<sup>11</sup>Malicious witnesses rise up, accuse me of things I do not know.
<sup>12</sup>They repay me evil for good;
my soul is desolate.<sup>l</sup> <sup>13*</sup>Yet I, when they were ill, put on sackcloth,
afflicted myself with fasting,
sobbed my prayers upon my bosom.
<sup>14</sup>I went about in grief as for my brother, bent in mourning as for my mother.

<sup>15</sup>Yet when I stumbled they gathered with glee, gathered against me and I did not know it.

They slandered me without ceasing;
<sup>16</sup>without respect they mocked me, gnashed their teeth against me.

IV

<sup>17</sup>O Lord, how long will you look on?
Restore my soul from their destruction,
my very life from lions!<sup>m</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Then I will thank you in the great assembly;
I will praise you before the mighty throng.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Do not let lying foes rejoice over me, my undeserved enemies wink knowingly.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>20</sup>They speak no words of peace, but against the quiet in the land
they fashion deceitful speech.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>21</sup>They open wide their mouths against me.
They say, "Aha! Good!
Our eyes have seen it!"<sup>q</sup>

<sup>22</sup>You see this, LORD; do not be silent;<sup>r</sup>
Lord, do not withdraw from me.

<sup>23</sup>Awake, be vigilant in my defense,
in my cause, my God and my Lord.

<sup>24</sup>Defend me because you are just, Lord;
my God, do not let them rejoice over
me.

<sup>25</sup>Do not let them say in their hearts, "Aha! Our soul!"*

Do not let them say,
"We have devoured that one!"

<sup>26</sup>Put to shame and confound all who relish my misfortune.

Clothe with shame and disgrace
those who lord it over me.

<sup>27</sup>But let those who favor my just cause shout for joy and be glad.

May they ever say, "Exalted be the LORD who delights in the peace of his loyal servant."

<sup>28</sup>Then my tongue shall recount your justice, declare your praise, all the day long.<sup>s</sup>

Human Wickedness and Divine Providence

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. Of David, the servant of the LORD.

I

<sup>2</sup>Sin directs the heart of the wicked man; his eyes are closed to the fear of God.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>3</sup>For he lives with the delusion:
his guilt will not be known and hated.*

<sup>4</sup>Empty and false are the words of his mouth;
he has ceased to be wise and do good.

<sup>5</sup>On his bed he hatches plots;
he sets out on a wicked way;
he does not reject evil.<sup>u</sup>

II

<sup>6*</sup>Lord, your mercy reaches to heaven; your fidelity, to the clouds.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Your justice is like the highest mountains;
your judgments, like the mighty deep;
human being and beast you sustain,
LORD.

<sup>8</sup>How precious is your mercy, O God!
The children of Adam take refuge in the shadow of your wings.*<sup>w</sup>

- <sup>9</sup>They feast on the rich food of your house;
from your delightful stream<sup>x</sup> you give them drink.
- <sup>10</sup>For with you is the fountain of life,<sup>y</sup> and in your light we see light.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>Show mercy on those who know you, your just defense to the upright of
heart.
- <sup>12</sup>Do not let the foot of the proud overtake
me,
nor the hand of the wicked disturb me.
- <sup>13</sup>There make the evildoers fall;
thrust them down, unable to rise.

The Fate of Sinners and the Reward of the Just

<sup>1</sup>Of David.

ALEPH

Do not be provoked by evildoers;
do not envy those who do wrong.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Like grass they wither quickly; like green plants they wilt away.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Trust in the LORD and do good that you may dwell in the land* and live secure.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Find your delight in the LORD who will give you your heart's desire.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Commit your way to the LORD; trust in him and he will act<sup>e</sup>

<sup>6</sup>And make your righteousness shine like the dawn,

your justice like noonday.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Be still before the LORD;
wait for him.

Do not be provoked by the prosperous,
nor by malicious schemers.

<sup>8</sup>Refrain from anger; abandon wrath;
do not be provoked; it brings only harm.

<sup>9</sup>Those who do evil will be cut off, but those who wait for the LORD will inherit the earth.<sup>g</sup>

WAW

<sup>10</sup>Wait a little, and the wicked will be no
more;
look for them and they will not be there.

<sup>11</sup>But the poor will inherit the earth,<sup>h</sup> will delight in great prosperity.

ZAYIN

<sup>12</sup>The wicked plot against the righteous and gnash their teeth at them;

<sup>13</sup>But my Lord laughs at them,<sup>i</sup> because he sees that their day is coming.

HETH

<sup>14</sup>The wicked unsheath their swords;
they string their bows

To fell the poor and oppressed, to slaughter those whose way is upright.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Their swords will pierce their own hearts;
their bows will be broken.

TETH

<sup>16</sup>Better the meagerness of the righteous
one

than the plenty of the wicked.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>17</sup>The arms of the wicked will be broken, while the LORD will sustain the righteous.

YODH

<sup>18</sup>The LORD knows the days of the blameless;
their heritage lasts forever.

<sup>19</sup>They will not be ashamed when times are bad;
in days of famine they will be satisfied.

KAPH

<sup>20</sup>The wicked perish, enemies of the LORD;
They shall be consumed like fattened lambs;
like smoke they disappear.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>21</sup>The wicked one borrows but does not repay;
the righteous one is generous and gives.

<sup>22</sup>For those blessed by the Lord will inherit
the earth,
but those accursed will be cut off.

MEM

<sup>23</sup>The valiant one whose steps are guided by the LORD,
who will delight in his way,<sup>m</sup>

<sup>24</sup>May stumble, but he will never fall, for the LORD holds his hand.

NUN

<sup>25</sup>Neither in my youth, nor now in old age have I seen the righteous one abandoned<sup>n</sup> or his offspring begging for bread.

<sup>26</sup>All day long he is gracious and lends, and his offspring become a blessing.

SAMEKH

<sup>27</sup>Turn from evil and do good, that you may be settled forever.<sup>o</sup>

28 For the LORD loves justice and does not abandon the faithful.

AYIN

When the unjust are destroyed,
and the offspring of the wicked cut off,

29 The righteous will inherit the earth and dwell in it forever.<sup>p</sup>

PE

30 The mouth of the righteous utters wisdom;<sup>q</sup>
his tongue speaks what is right.

31 God's teaching is in his heart;<sup>r</sup>
his steps do not falter.

SADHE

32 The wicked spies on the righteous and seeks to kill him.

33 But the LORD does not abandon him in his power,
nor let him be condemned when tried.

QOPH

34 Wait eagerly for the LORD, and keep his way;<sup>s</sup>
He will raise you up to inherit the earth;
you will see when the wicked are cut off.

RESH

35 I have seen a ruthless scoundrel, spreading out like a green cedar.<sup>t</sup>

36 When I passed by again, he was gone; though I searched, he could not be found.

SHIN

37 Observe the person of integrity and mark
the upright;
Because there is a future for a man of peace.<sup>u</sup>

38 Sinners will be destroyed together;
the future of the wicked will be cut off.

TAW

39 The salvation of the righteous is from the

LORD,
their refuge in a time of distress.<sup>v</sup> <sup>40</sup>The LORD helps and rescues them, rescues and saves them from the
wicked,
because they take refuge in him.

Prayer of an Afflicted Sinner

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of David. For remembrance.

<sup>2</sup>LORD, do not punish me in your anger; in your wrath do not chastise me!<sup>w</sup> <sup>3</sup>Your arrows have sunk deep in me;<sup>x</sup> your hand has come down upon me.
<sup>4</sup>There is no wholesomeness in my flesh because of your anger;
there is no health in my bones because of my sin.<sup>y</sup> <sup>5</sup>My iniquities overwhelm me, a burden too heavy for me.<sup>z</sup>

II

<sup>6</sup>Foul and festering are my sores because of my folly.
<sup>7</sup>I am stooped and deeply bowed;<sup>a</sup>
every day I go about mourning.
<sup>8</sup>My loins burn with fever;
there is no wholesomeness in my flesh.
<sup>9</sup>I am numb and utterly crushed;
I wail with anguish of heart.<sup>b</sup>
<sup>10</sup>My Lord, my deepest yearning is before
you;
my groaning is not hidden from you.
<sup>11</sup>My heart shudders, my strength forsakes

me;
the very light of my eyes has failed.<sup>c</sup> <sup>12</sup>Friends and companions shun my disease;
my neighbors stand far off.
<sup>13</sup>Those who seek my life lay snares for
me;
they seek my misfortune, they speak of ruin;
they plot treachery every day.

III

<sup>14</sup>But I am like the deaf, hearing nothing, like the mute, I do not open my mouth, <sup>15</sup>I am even like someone who does not hear,
who has no answer ready.
<sup>16</sup>LORD, it is for you that I wait;
O Lord, my God, you respond.<sup>d</sup> <sup>17</sup>For I have said that they would gloat
over me,
exult over me if I stumble.

IV

<sup>18</sup>I am very near to falling;
my wounds are with me always.
<sup>19</sup>I acknowledge my guilt and grieve over my sin.<sup>e</sup> <sup>20</sup>My enemies live and grow strong, those who hate me grow numerous fraudulently, <sup>21</sup>Repaying me evil for good, accusing me for pursuing good.<sup>f</sup> <sup>22</sup>Do not forsake me, O LORD; my God, be not far from me!<sup>g</sup> <sup>23</sup>Come quickly to help me,<sup>h</sup>
my Lord and my salvation!

The Vanity of Life

<sup>1</sup>For the leader, for Jeduthun.<sup>i</sup> A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>I said, "I will watch my ways,
lest I sin with my tongue;
I will keep a muzzle on my mouth."

<sup>3</sup>Mute and silent before the wicked,
I refrain from good things.

But my sorrow increases;

<sup>4</sup>my heart smolders within me.<sup>j</sup>
In my sighing a fire blazes up, and I break into speech:

II

<sup>5</sup>LORD, let me know my end, the number
of my days,
that I may learn how frail I am.

<sup>6</sup>To be sure, you establish the expanse of my days;
indeed, my life is as nothing before
you.

Every man is but a breath.<sup>k</sup> Selah

<sup>7</sup>Man goes about as a mere phantom;
they hurry about, although in vain;
he heaps up stores without knowing for whom.

<sup>8</sup>And now, LORD, for what do I wait?
You are my only hope.

<sup>9</sup>From all my sins deliver me;
let me not be the taunt of fools.

<sup>10</sup>I am silent and do not open my mouth because you are the one who did this.

<sup>11</sup>Take your plague away from me;
I am ravaged by the touch of your hand.

<sup>12</sup>You chastise man with rebukes for sin;
like a moth you consume his treasures.
Every man is but a breath. Selah

<sup>13</sup>Listen to my prayer, Lord, hear my cry;
do not be deaf to my weeping!

For I am with you like a foreigner,
a refugee, like my ancestors.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Turn your gaze from me, that I may smile
before I depart to be no more.

Gratitude and Prayer for Help

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>Surely, I wait for the LORD;
who bends down to me and hears my cry,<sup>m</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Draws me up from the pit of destruction, out of the muddy clay,<sup>n</sup> Sets my feet upon rock,
steadies my steps,

<sup>4</sup>And puts a new song* in my mouth,<sup>o</sup> a hymn to our God.
Many shall look on in fear and they shall trust in the LORD.

<sup>5</sup>Blessed the man who sets his security in the Lord, who turns not to the arrogant or to those who stray after falsehood.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>6</sup>You, yes you, O LORD, my God, have done many wondrous deeds!
And in your plans for us
there is none to equal you.<sup>q</sup> Should I wish to declare or tell them, too many are they to recount.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>7*</sup>Sacrifice and offering you do not want;<sup>s</sup> you opened my ears.
Holocaust and sin-offering you do not request;

<sup>8</sup>so I said, “See; I come with an inscribed scroll written upon

me.

<sup>9</sup>I delight to do your will, my God; your law is in my inner being!”<sup>t</sup>

<sup>10</sup>When I sing of your righteousness in a great assembly,
See, I do not restrain my lips;
as you, LORD, know.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>11</sup>I do not conceal your righteousness within my heart;
I speak of your loyalty and your salvation.
I do not hide your mercy or faithfulness from a great assembly.

<sup>12</sup>LORD, may you not withhold your compassion from me;
May your mercy and your faithfulness continually protect me.<sup>v</sup>

B

<sup>13</sup>But evils surround me until they cannot be counted.
My sins overtake me,
so that I can no longer see.
They are more numerous than the hairs of my head;
my courage fails me.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>14</sup>LORD, graciously rescue me!<sup>x</sup>
Come quickly to help me, LORD!

<sup>15</sup>May those who seek to destroy my life be shamed and confounded.
Turn back in disgrace
those who desire my ruin.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Let those who say to me “Aha!”<sup>z</sup>
Be made desolate on account of their shame.

<sup>17</sup>While those who seek you rejoice and be glad in you.
May those who long for your salvation always say, “The LORD is great.”<sup>a</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Though I am afflicted and poor, my Lord keeps me in mind.

You are my help and deliverer;
my God, do not delay!

Thanksgiving After Sickness

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

<sup>2</sup>Blessed the one concerned for the poor;* on a day of misfortune, the LORD delivers him.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>3</sup>The LORD keeps and preserves him, makes him blessed in the land,
and does not betray him to his enemies.

<sup>4</sup>The LORD sustains him on his sickbed, you turn down his bedding whenever he is ill.*

II

<sup>5</sup>Even I have said, “LORD, take note of
me;
heal me, although I have sinned against you.

<sup>6</sup>My enemies say bad things against me:
‘When will he die and his name be forgotten?’

<sup>7</sup>When someone comes to visit me, he speaks without sincerity.
His heart stores up malice;
when he leaves, he gossips.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>8</sup>All those who hate me whisper together
against me;
they imagine the worst about me:

<sup>9</sup>‘He has had ruin poured over him;
that one lying down will never rise
again.’

<sup>10</sup>*Even my trusted friend, who ate my bread,

has raised his heel against me.<sup>d</sup>

III

<sup>11</sup>“But you, LORD, take note of me to raise me up

that I may repay them.”*

<sup>12</sup>By this I will know you are pleased with
me,
that my enemy no longer shouts in triumph over me.

<sup>13</sup>In my integrity may you support me and let me stand in your presence
forever.

<sup>14*</sup> Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, from all eternity and forever.

Amen. Amen.<sup>e</sup>

Longing for God’s Presence in the Temple

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A maskil of the Korahites.*

<sup>2</sup>As the deer longs for streams of water,<sup>f</sup> so my soul longs for you, O God.

<sup>3</sup>My soul thirsts for God, the living God.
When can I enter and see the face of God?<sup>*g</sup>

<sup>4</sup>My tears have been my bread day and night,<sup>h</sup> as they ask me every day, “Where is your God?”<sup>i</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Those times I recall as I pour out my soul,<sup>j</sup>

When I would cross over to the shrine of the Mighty One,*
to the house of God,
Amid loud cries of thanksgiving,
with the multitude keeping festival.<sup>k</sup> <sup>6</sup>Why are you downcast, my soul;
why do you groan within me?
Wait for God, for I shall again praise
him,
my savior and my God.

II

<sup>7</sup>My soul is downcast within me;
therefore I remember you
From the land of the Jordan* and Hermon, from Mount Mizar,<sup>l</sup> <sup>8*</sup>Deep calls to deep in the roar of your torrents, and all your waves and breakers sweep over me.<sup>m</sup> <sup>9</sup>By day may the LORD send his mercy, and by night may his righteousness be
with me!
I will pray* to the God of my life,
<sup>10</sup>I will say to God, my rock:
“Why do you forget me?<sup>n</sup>
Why must I go about mourning
with the enemy oppressing me?”
<sup>11</sup>It shatters my bones, when my adversaries reproach me,
when they say to me every day:
“Where is your God?”
<sup>12</sup>Why are you downcast, my soul,
why do you groan within me?
Wait for God, for I shall again praise
him,
my savior and my God.

PSALM 43

<sup>1</sup>Grant me justice, O God;
defend me from a faithless people;
from the deceitful and unjust rescue me.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>2</sup>You, O God, are my strength.
Why then do you spurn me?
Why must I go about mourning,
with the enemy oppressing me?

<sup>3p</sup>Send your light and your fidelity,* that they may be my guide;<sup>q</sup> Let them bring me to your holy
mountain,
to the place of your dwelling,

<sup>4</sup>That I may come to the altar of God,
to God, my joy, my delight.
Then I will praise you with the harp,
O God, my God.

<sup>5</sup>Why are you downcast, my soul?
Why do you groan within me?
Wait for God, for I shall again praise him,
my savior and my God.

God's Past Favor and Israel's Present Need

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A maskil of the Korahites.

<sup>2</sup>O God, we have heard with our own ears; our ancestors have told us<sup>r</sup>
The deeds you did in their days,
with your own hand in days of old:

<sup>3</sup>You rooted out nations to plant them,<sup>s</sup> crushed peoples and expelled them.

<sup>4</sup>Not with their own swords did they conquer the land,<sup>t</sup> nor did their own arms bring victory;
It was your right hand, your own arm,

the light of your face for you favored them.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>5</sup>You are my king and my God,<sup>v</sup> who bestows victories on Jacob.

<sup>6</sup>Through you we batter our foes;
through your name we trample our adversaries.

<sup>7</sup>Not in my bow do I trust, nor does my sword bring me victory.

<sup>8</sup>You have brought us victory over our enemies,
shamed those who hate us.

<sup>9</sup>In God we have boasted all the day long;
your name we will praise forever.Selah

<sup>10</sup><sup>w</sup>But now you have rejected and disgraced us;
you do not march out with our armies.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>11</sup>You make us retreat* before the foe;
those who hate us plunder us at will.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>12</sup>You hand us over like sheep to be slaughtered, scatter us among the nations.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>13</sup>You sell your people for nothing;
you make no profit from their sale.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>14</sup>You make us the reproach of our neighbors,<sup>b</sup> the mockery and scorn of those around us.

<sup>15</sup>You make us a byword among the nations;
the peoples shake their heads at us.

<sup>16</sup>All day long my disgrace is before me;
shame has covered my face

<sup>17</sup>At the sound of those who taunt and revile, at the sight of the enemy and avenger.

III

<sup>18</sup>All this has come upon us, though we have not forgotten you,
nor been disloyal to your covenant.

- 19* Our hearts have not turned back, nor have our steps strayed from your path.
- 20 Yet you have left us crushed, desolate in a place of jackals; *c you have covered us with a shadow of death.
- 21 If we had forgotten the name of our God, stretched out our hands to another god,
- 22 Would not God have discovered this,
God who knows the secrets of the
heart?
- 23 For you we are slain all the day long, considered only as sheep to be slaughtered. d

IV

- 24 Awake! Why do you sleep, O Lord?
Rise up! Do not reject us forever! e
- 25 Why do you hide your face; f
why forget our pain and misery?
- 26 For our soul has been humiliated in the dust; g
our belly is pressed to the earth.
- 27 Rise up, help us!
Redeem us in your mercy.

Song for a Royal Wedding

- <sup>1</sup>For the leader; according to “Lilies.” A maskil of the Korahites. A love song.

I

- <sup>2</sup>My heart is stirred by a noble theme,
as I sing my ode to the king.
My tongue is the pen of a nimble scribe.

II

- <sup>3</sup>You are the most handsome of men;
fair speech has graced your lips,
for God has blessed you forever.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Gird your sword upon your hip, mighty warrior!
In splendor and majesty ride on triumphant!<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>In the cause of truth, meekness, and justice may your right hand show your wondrous deeds.
- <sup>6</sup>Your arrows are sharp;
peoples will cower at your feet;
the king's enemies will lose heart.
- <sup>7</sup>Your throne, O God, * stands forever;<sup>j</sup> your royal scepter is a scepter for justice.
- <sup>8</sup>You love justice and hate wrongdoing;
therefore God, your God, has anointed
you
with the oil of gladness above your fellow kings.
- <sup>9</sup>With myrrh, aloes, and cassia your robes are fragrant.
From ivory-paneled palaces * stringed instruments bring you joy.
- <sup>10</sup>Daughters of kings are your lovely wives;
a princess arrayed in Ophir's gold * comes to stand at your right hand.

III

- <sup>11</sup>Listen, my daughter, and understand;
pay me careful heed.
Forget your people and your father's house, * <sup>12</sup>that the king might desire your beauty.
He is your lord;
- <sup>13</sup><sup>k</sup>honor him, daughter of Tyre.
Then the richest of the people will seek your favor with gifts.
- <sup>14</sup>All glorious is the king's daughter as she enters,<sup>l</sup>

her raiment threaded with gold; <sup>15</sup>In embroidered apparel she is led to the king.
The maids of her train are presented to the king.
<sup>16</sup>They are led in with glad and joyous acclaim;
they enter the palace of the king.

IV

<sup>17</sup>The throne of your fathers your sons will have;
you shall make them princes through all the land.<sup>m</sup> <sup>18</sup>I will make your name renowned through all generations;
thus nations shall praise you forever.<sup>n</sup>

God, the Protector of Zion

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A song of the Korahites.

According to alamoth.<sup>***</sup>

I

<sup>2</sup>God is our refuge and our strength, an ever-present help in distress.<sup>o</sup> <sup>3*</sup>Thus we do not fear, though earth be shaken and mountains quake to the depths of
the sea,
<sup>4</sup>Though its waters rage and foam and mountains totter at its surging.<sup>p</sup> Selah
<sup>5*</sup>Streams of the river gladden the city of God,
the holy dwelling of the Most High.<sup>q</sup>

the LORD, amid trumpet blasts.<sup>a</sup> 7Sing praise to God, sing praise;
sing praise to our king, sing praise.

III

8For God is king over all the earth;<sup>b</sup> sing hymns of praise.
9God rules over the nations;
God sits upon his holy throne.
10The princes of the peoples assemble with the people of the God of Abraham.
For the shields of the earth belong to
God,
highly exalted.<sup>c</sup>

The Splendor of the Invincible City

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of the Korahites. * A song.

<sup>2</sup>Great is the LORD and highly praised in the city of our God:<sup>d</sup>
His holy mountain, <sup>3</sup>fairest of heights, the joy of all the earth,<sup>e</sup>
Mount Zion, the heights of Zaphon, <sup>*f</sup>
the city of the great king.

II

<sup>4</sup>God is in its citadel, renowned as a stronghold.
<sup>5</sup>See! The kings assembled, together they advanced.
<sup>6*</sup>When they looked they were astounded;
terrified, they were put to flight!<sup>g</sup> <sup>7</sup>Trembling seized them there, anguish, like a woman's labor,<sup>h</sup>

<sup>8</sup>As when the east wind wrecks the ships of Tarshish!*

III

<sup>9</sup>*What we had heard we have now seen in the city of the LORD of hosts,
In the city of our God,
which God establishes forever. Selah

<sup>10</sup>We ponder, O God, your mercy within your temple

<sup>11</sup>Like your name, O God, so is your praise to the ends of the earth.<sup>i</sup>

Your right hand is fully victorious.

<sup>12</sup>Mount Zion is glad!
The daughters of Judah rejoice because of your judgments!<sup>j</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Go about Zion, walk all around it, note the number of its towers.

<sup>14</sup>Consider the ramparts, examine its citadels,
that you may tell future generations:<sup>k</sup>

<sup>15</sup>That this is God, our God for ever and ever.*
He will lead us until death.

Confidence in God Rather than in Riches

<sup>2</sup>Hear this, all you peoples!
Give ear, all who inhabit the world,

<sup>3</sup>You of lowly birth or high estate, rich and poor together.

<sup>4</sup>My mouth shall speak words of wisdom, my heart shall offer insights.<sup>l</sup> 5 I will turn my ear to a riddle,* expound my question on a lyre.

I

6 Why should I fear in evil days, with the iniquity of my assailants surrounding me,
7 Of those who trust in their wealth and boast of their abundant riches?<sup>m</sup> 8* No man can ransom even a brother, or pay to God his own ransom.<sup>n</sup> 9 The redemption of his soul is costly;
and he will pass away forever.
10 Will he live on forever, then,
and never see the Pit of Corruption?
11 Indeed, he will see that the wise die, and the fool will perish together with the senseless,<sup>o</sup> and they leave their wealth to others.<sup>p</sup> 12 Their tombs are their homes forever, their dwellings through all
generations,
“They named countries after themselves”
13—but man does not abide in splendor.
He is like the beasts—they perish.<sup>q</sup>

II

14 This is the way of those who trust in themselves,
and the end of those who take pleasure in their own mouth. Selah
15 Like a herd of sheep they will be put into Sheol,
and Death will shepherd them.
Straight to the grave they descend,
where their form will waste away,
Sheol will be their palace.
16 But God will redeem my life, will take me* from the hand of Sheol.<sup>r</sup> Selah

- <sup>17</sup>Do not fear when a man becomes rich, when the wealth of his house grows
great.
- <sup>18</sup>At his death he will not take along anything,
his glory will not go down after him.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>19</sup>During his life his soul uttered blessings; “They will praise you, for you do well
for yourself.”
- <sup>20</sup>But he will join the company of his fathers,
never again to see the light.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>21</sup>In his prime, man does not understand.
He is like the beasts—they perish.

The Acceptable Sacrifice

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of Asaph.

I

- The God of gods, the LORD, has spoken and summoned the earth from the rising of the sun to its setting.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>From Zion, the perfection of beauty, God shines forth.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>Our God comes and will not be silent!
Devouring fire precedes him,
it rages strongly around him.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>He calls to the heavens above and to the earth to judge his people:
- <sup>5</sup>“Gather my loyal ones to me,
those who made a covenant with me
by sacrifice.”
- <sup>6</sup>The heavens proclaim his righteousness, for God himself is the judge.<sup>x</sup>   Selah

II

- <sup>7</sup>“Listen, my people, I will speak;
Israel, I will testify against you;
God, your God, am I.
- <sup>8</sup>Not for your sacrifices do I rebuke you,
your burnt offerings are always before
me.
- <sup>9</sup>I will not take a bullock from your house, or he-goats from your folds.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>For every animal of the forest is mine, beasts by the thousands on my mountains.
- <sup>11</sup>I know every bird in the heights;
whatever moves in the wild is mine.
- <sup>12</sup>Were I hungry, I would not tell you,
for mine is the world and all that fills it.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>Do I eat the flesh of bulls or drink the blood of he-goats?
- <sup>14</sup>Offer praise as your sacrifice to God;<sup>a</sup> fulfill your vows to the Most High.
- <sup>15</sup>Then call on me on the day of distress;<sup>b</sup>
I will rescue you, and you shall honor
me.”

III

- <sup>16</sup>But to the wicked God says:
“Why do you recite my commandments
and profess my covenant with your mouth?
- <sup>17</sup>You hate discipline;
you cast my words behind you!
- <sup>18</sup>If you see a thief, you run with him;
with adulterers you throw in your lot.
- <sup>19</sup>You give your mouth free rein for evil;
you yoke your tongue to deceit.
- <sup>20</sup>You sit and speak against your brother, slandering your mother’s son.
- <sup>21</sup>When you do these things should I be silent?
Do you think that I am like you?

I accuse you, I lay out the matter before your eyes.

<sup>22</sup>“Now understand this, you who forget
God,
lest I start ripping apart and there be no rescuer.

<sup>23</sup>Those who offer praise as a sacrifice honor me;
I will let him whose way is steadfast look upon the salvation of God.”<sup>c</sup>

The Miserere: Prayer of Repentance

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David, <sup>2</sup>when Nathan the prophet came to him after he had sgone in to Bathsheba.<sup>d</sup>

I

<sup>3</sup>Have mercy on me, God, in accord with your merciful love;
in your abundant compassion blot out my transgressions.

<sup>4</sup>Thoroughly wash away my guilt;
and from my sin cleanse me.

<sup>5</sup>For I know my transgressions;
my sin is always before me.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Against you, you alone have I sinned;
I have done what is evil in your eyes
So that you are just in your word, and without reproach in your judgment.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Behold, I was born in guilt, in sin my mother conceived me.<sup>*g</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Behold, you desire true sincerity;
and secretly you teach me wisdom.

<sup>9</sup>Cleanse me with hyssop, * that I may be pure;

wash me, and I will be whiter than snow.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>10</sup>You will let me hear gladness and joy;
the bones you have crushed will rejoice.

II

<sup>11</sup>Turn away your face from my sins; blot out all my iniquities.

<sup>12</sup>A clean heart create for me, God;
renew within me a steadfast spirit.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Do not drive me from before your face, nor take from me your holy spirit.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Restore to me the gladness of your salvation;
uphold me with a willing spirit.

<sup>15</sup>I will teach the wicked your ways, that sinners may return to you.

<sup>16</sup>Rescue me from violent bloodshed, God, my saving God,
and my tongue will sing joyfully of your justice.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Lord, you will open my lips; and my mouth will proclaim your
praise.

<sup>18</sup>For you do not desire sacrifice* or I would give it;
a burnt offering you would not accept.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>19</sup>My sacrifice, O God, is a contrite spirit;
a contrite, humbled heart, O God, you will not scorn.

III

<sup>20*</sup>Treat Zion kindly according to your good will;
build up the walls of Jerusalem.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Then you will desire the sacrifices of the
just,
burnt offering and whole offerings;
then they will offer up young bulls on your altar.

The Deceitful Tongue

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A maskil of David, <sup>2</sup>when Doeg the Edomite entered and reported to Saul, saying to him: “David has entered the house of Ahimelech.”<sup>n</sup>

I

<sup>3</sup>Why do you glory in what is evil, you who are mighty by the mercy of God?

All day long

<sup>4</sup>you are thinking up intrigues;
your tongue is like a sharpened razor,
you worker of deceit.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>5</sup>You love evil more than good, lying rather than saying what is right.<sup>p</sup> Selah

<sup>6</sup>You love all the words that create confusion,
you deceitful tongue.<sup>q</sup>

II

<sup>7</sup>God too will strike you down forever, he will lay hold of you and pluck you from your tent,
uproot you from the land of the living.<sup>r</sup> Selah

<sup>8</sup>The righteous will see and they will fear; but they will laugh at him:<sup>s</sup>

<sup>9</sup>“Behold the man! He did not take God as his refuge, but he trusted in the abundance of his wealth,
and grew powerful through his wickedness.”<sup>t</sup>

III

<sup>10</sup>But I, like an olive tree* flourishing in the house of God,<sup>u</sup>

I trust in God's mercy forever and ever.
<sup>11</sup>I will thank you forever for what you have done.
I will put my hope in your name—for it is good,<sup>v</sup>
—in the presence of those devoted to
you.

A Lament over Widespread Corruption

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; according to Mahalath. A maskil of David.

I

<sup>2</sup>The fool says in his heart,<sup>w</sup>
“There is no God.”<sup>x</sup>
They act corruptly and practice injustice;
there is none that does good.
<sup>3</sup>God looks out from the heavens upon the children of Adam,<sup>y</sup>
To see if there is a discerning person<sup>z</sup> who is seeking God.
<sup>4</sup>All have gone astray;
each one is altogether perverse.
There is not one who does what is good, not even one.<sup>a</sup>

II

<sup>5b</sup>Do they not know better, those who do evil,
who feed upon my people as they feed upon bread?<sup>c</sup>
Have they not called upon God?
<sup>6</sup>They are going to fear his name with great fear,
though they had not feared it before.
For God will scatter the bones of those encamped against you.
They will surely be put to shame,

for God has rejected them.

III

<sup>7</sup>Who will bring forth from Zion
the salvation of Israel?
When God reverses the captivity of his people
Jacob will rejoice and Israel will be glad.<sup>d</sup>

Confident Prayer in Great Peril

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. On stringed instruments. A maskil of David, <sup>2</sup>when the Ziphites came and said to Saul, “David is hiding among us.”<sup>e</sup>

<sup>3</sup>O God, by your name* save me.
By your strength defend my cause.
<sup>4</sup>O God, hear my prayer.
Listen to the words of my mouth.
<sup>5</sup>Strangers have risen against me;
the ruthless seek my life;
they do not keep God before them.<sup>f</sup> Selah

<sup>6</sup>God is present as my helper;<sup>g</sup>
the Lord sustains my life.
<sup>7</sup>Turn back the evil upon my foes;
in your faithfulness, destroy them.<sup>h</sup> <sup>8</sup>Then I will offer you generous sacrifice and give thanks to your name, LORD, for it is good.
<sup>9</sup>Because it has rescued me from every trouble,
and my eyes look down on my foes.<sup>i</sup>

A Lament over Betrayal

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. On stringed instruments.

A maskil of David.

<sup>2</sup>Listen, God, to my prayer;<sup>j</sup>
do not hide from my pleading;

<sup>3</sup>hear me and give answer.

I rock with grief; I groan

<sup>4</sup>at the uproar of the enemy,
the clamor of the wicked.

They heap trouble upon me,
savagely accuse me.

<sup>5</sup>My heart pounds within me;
death's terrors fall upon me.

<sup>6</sup>Fear and trembling overwhelm me;
shuddering sweeps over me.

<sup>7</sup>I say, "If only I had wings like a dove that I might fly away and find rest."<sup>k</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Far away I would flee;

I would stay in the desert.<sup>l</sup> Selah

<sup>9</sup>"I would soon find a shelter from the raging wind and storm."

<sup>10</sup>Lord, check and confuse their tongues.
For I see violence and strife in the city

<sup>11</sup>making rounds on its walls day and night.

Within are mischief and trouble;

<sup>12</sup>treachery is in its midst; oppression and fraud never leave its streets.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>13</sup>For it is not an enemy that reviled me—that I could bear—

Not a foe who viewed me with contempt,

from that I could hide.

<sup>14</sup>But it was you, my other self, my comrade and friend,<sup>n</sup>

<sup>15</sup>You, whose company I enjoyed, at whose side I walked in the house of God.

III

<sup>16</sup>Let death take them; let them go down alive to Sheol,<sup>o</sup>
for evil is in their homes and bellies.

<sup>17</sup>But I will call upon God, and the LORD will save me.

<sup>18</sup>At dusk, dawn, and noon
I will grieve and complain, and my prayer will be heard.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>19</sup>He will redeem my soul in peace from those who war against me, though there are many who oppose me.

<sup>20</sup>God, who sits enthroned forever,<sup>q</sup> will hear me and afflict them. Selah

For they will not mend their ways;
they have no fear of God.

<sup>21</sup>He stretched out his hand at his friends and broke his covenant.

<sup>22</sup>Softer than butter is his speech,
but war is in his heart.

Smoother than oil are his words,
but they are unsheathed swords.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>23</sup>Cast your care upon the LORD, who will give you support.

He will never allow the righteous to stumble.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>24</sup>But you, God, will bring them down to the pit of destruction.<sup>t</sup>

These bloodthirsty liars will not live half their days, but I put my trust in you.<sup>u</sup>

Trust in God

<sup>1</sup>For the director. According to Yonath elem rehoqim. * A miktam of David, when the Philistines seized him at Gath.<sup>v</sup>

I

<sup>2</sup>Have mercy on me, God,
for I am treated harshly;
attackers press me all the day.

<sup>3</sup>My foes treat me harshly all the day;
yes, many are my attackers.

O Most High, <sup>4</sup>when I am afraid,
in you I place my trust.

<sup>5</sup>I praise the word of God;
I trust in God, I do not fear.<sup>w</sup>
What can mere flesh do to me?<sup>x</sup>

II

<sup>6</sup>All the day they foil my plans; their every thought is of evil against
me.

<sup>7</sup>They hide together in ambush;
they watch my every step;
they lie in wait for my life.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>8</sup>They are evil; watch them, God!
Cast the nations down in your anger!

<sup>9</sup>My wanderings you have noted;
are my tears not stored in your flask,* recorded in your book?<sup>z</sup>

<sup>10</sup>My foes turn back when I call on you.
This I know: God is on my side.

<sup>11</sup>I praise the word of God,
I praise the word of the LORD.

<sup>12</sup>In God I trust, I do not fear.
What can man do to me?

III

<sup>13</sup>I have made vows to you, God;

with offerings I will fulfill them,<sup>a</sup> <sup>14</sup>For you have snatched me from death, kept my feet from stumbling,
That I may walk before God
in the light of the living.

Confident Prayer for Deliverance

<sup>1</sup>For the director. Do not destroy.* A miktam of David, when he fled from Saul into a cave.<sup>b</sup>

I

<sup>2</sup>Have mercy on me, God,
have mercy on me.
In you I seek refuge.
In the shadow of your wings* I seek refuge till harm pass by.<sup>c</sup> <sup>3</sup>I call to God Most High,
to God who provides for me.
<sup>4</sup>May God send help from heaven to save
me,
shame those who trample upon me.
May God send fidelity and mercy. Selah <sup>5</sup>I must lie down in the midst of lions hungry for human prey.<sup>d</sup>
Their teeth are spears and arrows;
their tongue, a sharpened sword.<sup>e</sup> <sup>6</sup>Be exalted over the heavens, God;
may your glory appear above all the earth.<sup>f</sup>

II

<sup>7</sup>They have set a trap for my feet;
my soul is bowed down;
They have dug a pit before me.
May they fall into it themselves!<sup>g</sup> Selah <sup>8</sup>My heart is steadfast, God, my heart is steadfast.

I will sing and chant praise.<sup>h</sup> <sup>9</sup>Awake, my soul;
awake, lyre and harp!
I will wake the dawn.<sup>*i</sup>
<sup>10</sup>I will praise you among the peoples,
Lord;
I will chant your praise among the nations.<sup>j</sup> <sup>11</sup>For your mercy towers to the heavens;
your faithfulness reaches to the skies.<sup>k</sup> <sup>12</sup>Exalt yourself over the heavens, God;
may your glory appear above all the
earth.

The Dethroning of Unjust Rulers

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. Do not destroy.* A miktam of David.

<sup>2</sup>Do you indeed pronounce justice, O gods;* do you judge fairly you children of Adam?<sup>l</sup>
<sup>3</sup>No, you freely engage in crime;
your hands dispense violence to the earth.

II

<sup>4</sup>The wicked have been corrupt since birth;
liars from the womb, they have gone astray.
<sup>5*</sup>Their venom is like the venom of a snake,
like that of a serpent stopping its ears,<sup>m</sup> <sup>6</sup>So as not to hear the voice of the charmer or the enchanter with cunning spells.

III

- <sup>7</sup>O God, smash the teeth in their mouths;
break the fangs of these lions, LORD!<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>Make them vanish like water flowing away;<sup>o</sup> trodden down, let them wither like grass.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>Let them dissolve like a snail that oozes away,* like an untimely birth that never sees the sun.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Suddenly, like brambles or thistles, have the whirlwind snatch them away.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>Then the just shall rejoice to see the vengeance and bathe their feet in the blood of the wicked.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>Then people will say: “Truly there is a reward for the just;
there is a God who is judge on earth!”

Complaint Against Bloodthirsty Enemies

- <sup>1</sup>For the director. Do not destroy.* A miktam of David, when Saul sent people to watch his house and kill him.<sup>t</sup>

I

- <sup>2</sup>Rescue me from my enemies, my God;
lift me out of reach of my foes.
- <sup>3</sup>Deliver me from evildoers;
from the bloodthirsty save me.
- <sup>4</sup>They have set an ambush for my life;
the powerful conspire against me.
For no offense or misdeed of mine,
LORD,

<sup>5</sup>for no fault they hurry to take up arms.
Come near and see my plight!

<sup>6</sup>You, LORD God of hosts, are the God of Israel!

Awake! Punish all the nations.

Have no mercy on these worthless
traitors. Selah

<sup>7</sup>Each evening they return, growling like dogs, prowling the city.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Their mouths pour out insult;
sharp words are on their lips.

They say: "Who is there to hear?"*

<sup>9</sup>But you, LORD, laugh at them; you deride all the nations.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>10</sup>My strength, for you I watch;
you, God, are my fortress,

<sup>11</sup>my loving God.

II

May God go before me,
and show me my fallen foes.

<sup>12</sup>Slay them, God, lest they deceive my people.

Shake them by your power;
Lord, our shield, bring them down.

<sup>13</sup>For the sinful words of their mouths and lips
let them be caught in their pride.

For the lies they have told under oath<sup>w</sup>

<sup>14</sup>destroy them in anger, destroy till they are no more.

Then people will know God rules over Jacob,

yes, even to the ends of the earth.<sup>x</sup> Selah

<sup>15</sup>Each evening they return, growling like dogs, prowling the city.

<sup>16</sup>They roam about as scavengers;
if they are not filled, they howl.

III

<sup>17</sup>But I shall sing of your strength,

extol your mercy at dawn,
For you are my fortress,
my refuge in time of trouble.
<sup>18</sup>My strength, your praise I will sing;
you, God, are my fortress, my loving
God.

Lament After Defeat in Battle

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; according to “The Lily of....” A miktam of David (for teaching), <sup>2</sup>when he fought against Aram-Naharaim and Aram-Zobah; and Joab, coming back, killed twelve thousand Edomites in the Valley of Salt.<sup>y</sup>

I

<sup>3</sup>O God, you rejected us, broke our defenses;
you were angry but now revive us.
<sup>4</sup>You rocked the earth, split it open;<sup>z</sup> repair the cracks for it totters.
<sup>5</sup>You made your people go through hardship, made us stagger from the wine you gave us.<sup>a</sup> <sup>6</sup>Raise up a banner for those who revere you, a refuge for them out of bow shot. Selah <sup>7*</sup>Help with your right hand and answer us that your loved ones may escape.

II

<sup>8*</sup>In the sanctuary God promised:
“I will exult, will apportion Shechem;
the valley of Succoth * I will measure out.
<sup>9</sup>Gilead is mine, mine is Manasseh;
Ephraim is the helmet for my head,
Judah, my own scepter.* <sup>10*</sup>Moab is my washbowl;

upon Edom I cast my sandal.<sup>*b</sup>
I will triumph over Philistia.”

<sup>11</sup>Who will bring me to the fortified city?*
Who will lead me into Edom?

<sup>12</sup>Was it not you who rejected us, God?
Do you no longer march with our armies?<sup>c</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Give us aid against the foe;
worthless is human help.

<sup>14</sup>We will triumph with the help of God, who will trample down our foes.

Prayer of the King in Time of Danger

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; with stringed instruments. Of David.

<sup>2</sup>Hear my cry, O God,
listen to my prayer!

<sup>3</sup>From the ends of the earth* I call;
my heart grows faint.
Raise me up, set me on a rock,

<sup>4</sup>for you are my refuge,
a tower of strength against the foe.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Let me dwell in your tent forever, take refuge in the shelter of your wings.<sup>e</sup>   Selah

II

<sup>6</sup>For you, O God, have heard my vows, you have granted me the heritage of those who revere your name.

<sup>7</sup>Add days to the life of the king;
may his years be as from generation to generation;<sup>f</sup>

<sup>8g</sup>May he reign before God forever;

send your love and fidelity* to preserve him—<sup>h</sup>

<sup>9</sup>I will duly sing to your name forever, fulfill my vows day after day.

Trust in God Alone

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; ‘al Jeduthun.* A psalm of David.

I

<sup>2</sup>My soul rests in God alone,<sup>i</sup> from whom comes my salvation.

<sup>3</sup>God alone is my rock and salvation, my fortress; I shall never fall.

<sup>4</sup>How long will you set yourself against a man?

You shall all be destroyed,
Like a sagging wall
or a tumbled down fence!

<sup>5</sup>Even highly placed people plot to overthrow him.

They delight in lies;
they bless with their mouths,
but inwardly they curse.<sup>j</sup>   Selah

II

<sup>6</sup>My soul, be at rest in God alone, from whom comes my hope.

<sup>7</sup>God alone is my rock and my salvation, my fortress; I shall not fall.

<sup>8</sup>My deliverance and honor are with God,<sup>k</sup> my strong rock;
my refuge is with God.

<sup>9</sup>Trust God at all times, my people!
Pour out your hearts to God our refuge!   Selah

III

<sup>10</sup>Mortals are a mere breath, the sons of man but an illusion;<sup>l</sup>

On a balance they rise;<sup>***</sup> together they weigh nothing.
<sup>11</sup>Do not trust in extortion;
in plunder put no empty hope.
On wealth that increases,
do not set your heart.<sup>m</sup> <sup>*12**</sup>One thing God has said; two things I have heard:<sup>n</sup>
Strength belongs to God;
<sup>13</sup>so too, my Lord, does mercy,
For you repay each man
according to his deeds.<sup>o</sup>

Ardent Longing for God

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah.<sup>p</sup>

I

<sup>2</sup>O God, you are my God—it is you I seek!
For you my body yearns;
for you my soul thirsts,
In a land parched, lifeless, and without water.<sup>q</sup> <sup>3</sup>I look to you in the sanctuary to see your power and glory.
<sup>4</sup>For your love is better than life;<sup>***</sup> my lips shall ever praise you!

II

<sup>5</sup>I will bless you as long as I live;
I will lift up my hands, calling on your
name.
<sup>6</sup>My soul shall be sated as with choice food, with joyous lips my mouth shall praise
you!

<sup>7</sup>I think of you upon my bed,
I remember you through the watches of the night

<sup>8</sup>You indeed are my savior, and in the shadow of your wings I shout for joy.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>9</sup>My soul clings fast to you;
your right hand upholds me.

III

<sup>10</sup>But those who seek my life will come to ruin;
they shall go down to the depths of the netherworld!

<sup>11</sup>Those who would hand over my life to the sword shall become the prey of jackals!

<sup>12</sup>But the king shall rejoice in God;
all who swear by the Lord* shall exult, but the mouths of liars will be shut!<sup>s</sup>

Treacherous Conspirators Punished by God

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David.

<sup>2</sup>O God, hear my anguished voice;
from a dreadful foe protect my life.

<sup>3</sup>Hide me from the malicious crowd,
the mob of evildoers.

<sup>4</sup>They sharpen their tongues like swords, bend their bows of poison words.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>5</sup>They shoot at the innocent from ambush, they shoot him in a moment and do not fear.

<sup>6</sup>They resolve on their wicked plan;
they conspire to set snares;

they say: “Who will see us?”

<sup>7</sup>They devise wicked schemes, conceal the schemes they devise;
the designs of their hearts are hidden.<sup>u</sup>

II

<sup>8</sup>God shoots an arrow at them;
in a moment they are struck down.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>9</sup>They are brought down by their own tongues;
all who see them flee.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Every person fears and proclaims God’s actions,
they ponder his deeds.

<sup>11</sup>The righteous rejoices and takes refuge in the LORD;
all the upright give praise.<sup>x</sup>

Thanksgiving for God’s Blessings

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David. A song.

I

<sup>2</sup>To you we owe our hymn of praise,
O God on Zion;

To you our vows * must be fulfilled,

<sup>3*</sup> you who hear our prayers.

To you all flesh must come<sup>y</sup>

<sup>4</sup>with its burden of wicked deeds.

We are overcome by our sins;

only you can pardon them.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Blessed the one whom you will choose and bring to dwell in your courts.

May we be filled with the good things of your house,
your holy temple!

- <sup>6</sup>You answer us with awesome deeds * of
 justice,
 O God our savior,
 The hope of all the ends of the earth and of those far off across the sea. <sup>a</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>You are robed in power, you set up the mountains by your might.
- <sup>8</sup>You still the roaring of the seas, <sup>b</sup>
 the roaring of their waves,
 the tumult of the peoples. <sup>c</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>Distant peoples stand in awe of your marvels;
 the places of morning and evening you make resound with joy.
- <sup>10*</sup> You visit the earth and water it, make it abundantly fertile. <sup>d</sup>
- God's stream * is filled with water;
 you supply their grain.
 Thus do you prepare it:
<sup>11</sup>you drench its plowed furrows,
 and level its ridges.
 With showers you keep it soft,
 blessing its young sprouts.
- <sup>12</sup>You adorn the year with your bounty;
 your paths * drip with fruitful rain.
- <sup>13</sup>The meadows of the wilderness also drip;
 the hills are robed with joy.
- <sup>14</sup>The pastures are clothed with flocks,
 the valleys blanketed with grain;
 they cheer and sing for joy. <sup>e</sup>

Praise of God, Israel's Deliverer

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A song; a psalm.

<sup>2</sup>Shout joyfully to God, all the earth;
sing of his glorious name;
give him glorious praise.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Say to God: "How awesome your deeds!
Before your great strength your enemies cringe.

<sup>4</sup>All the earth falls in worship before you;<sup>g</sup>
they sing of you, sing of your name!" Selah

II

<sup>5*</sup>Come and see the works of God, awesome in deeds before the children of Adam.

<sup>6</sup>He changed the sea to dry land;
through the river they passed on foot.<sup>h</sup>
There we rejoiced in him,

<sup>7</sup>who rules by his might forever,
His eyes are fixed upon the nations.
Let no rebel rise to challenge! Selah

<sup>8</sup>Bless our God, you peoples;
loudly sound his praise,

<sup>9</sup>Who has kept us alive and not allowed our feet to slip.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>10</sup>You tested us, O God, tried us as silver tried by fire.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>11</sup>You led us into a snare;
you bound us at the waist as captives.

<sup>12*</sup>You let captors set foot on our neck;
we went through fire and water;
then you led us out to freedom.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>13</sup>I will bring burnt offerings* to your house;
to you I will fulfill my vows,

<sup>14</sup>Which my lips pronounced and my mouth spoke in my distress.

<sup>15</sup>Burnt offerings of fatlings I will offer
you
and sacrificial smoke of rams;

I will sacrifice oxen and goats. Selah
<sup>16</sup>Come and hear, all you who fear God, while I recount what has been done
 for me.
<sup>17</sup>I called to him with my mouth;
 praise was upon my tongue.
<sup>18</sup>Had I cherished evil in my heart,
 the Lord would not have heard.
<sup>19</sup>But God did hear and listened to my voice in prayer.
<sup>20</sup>Blessed be God, who did not reject my prayer and refuse his mercy.

Harvest Thanks and Petition

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; with stringed instruments. A psalm; a song.

I

<sup>2</sup>May God be gracious to us* and bless us;
 may his face shine upon us.<sup>l</sup> Selah <sup>3</sup>So shall your way be known upon the earth,
 your victory among all the nations.<sup>m</sup> <sup>4</sup>May the peoples praise you, God;
 may all the peoples praise you!

<sup>5</sup>May the nations be glad and rejoice; for you judge the peoples with fairness,
 you guide the nations upon the earth.<sup>n</sup> Selah <sup>6</sup>May the peoples praise you, God;
 may all the peoples praise you!

III

<sup>7</sup>The earth has yielded its harvest; God, our God, blesses us.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>8</sup>May God bless us still;
that the ends of the earth may revere
him.

The Exodus and Conquest, Pledge of Future Help

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David; a song.

<sup>2*</sup>May God arise;
may his enemies be scattered;
may those who hate him flee before him.<sup>P</sup>

<sup>3</sup>As the smoke is dispersed, disperse
them;
as wax is melted by fire,
so may the wicked perish before God.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Then the just will be glad;
they will rejoice before God;
they will celebrate with great joy.

<sup>5</sup>Sing to God, praise his name; exalt the rider of the clouds.* Rejoice before him whose name is the LORD.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Father of the fatherless, defender of widows<sup>s</sup>—
God in his holy abode,

<sup>7</sup>God gives a home to the forsaken,
who leads prisoners out to prosperity,
while rebels live in the desert.*

III

<sup>8</sup>God, when you went forth before your people,<sup>t</sup>
when you marched through the desert, Selah

<sup>9</sup>The earth quaked, the heavens poured, before God, the One of Sinai, before God, the God of Israel.

<sup>10</sup>You poured abundant rains, God, your inheritance was weak and you repaired it.

<sup>11</sup>Your creatures dwelt in it;
you will establish it in your goodness for the poor, O God.

IV

<sup>12</sup>The Lord announced:
“Those bringing news are a great Army.

<sup>13</sup>The kings of the armies are in desperate flight.<sup>u</sup>

Every household will share the spoil,

<sup>14</sup>though you lie down among the sheepfolds,<sup>v</sup>

you shall be covered with silver as the wings of a dove,
her feathers bright as fine gold.”

<sup>15</sup>When the Almighty routs the kings there, it will be as when snow fell on Zalmon.*

V

<sup>16</sup>You mountain of God, mountain of Bashan,
you rugged mountain, mountain of Bashan,

<sup>17</sup>You rugged mountains, why look with envy

at the mountain* where God has chosen to dwell,

where the LORD resides forever?<sup>w</sup>

<sup>18</sup>God’s chariots were myriad, thousands upon thousands;
from Sinai the Lord entered the holy place.

<sup>19</sup>You went up to its lofty height;
you took captives, received slaves as tribute,<sup>x</sup> even rebels, for the LORD God to dwell.

VI

- <sup>20</sup>Blessed be the Lord day by day,
 God, our salvation, who carries us.<sup>y</sup> Selah
- <sup>21</sup>Our God is a God who saves; escape from death is the LORD God's.
- <sup>22</sup>God will crush the heads of his enemies, the hairy scalp of the one who walks in sin.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>23</sup>The Lord has said:
 "Even from Bashan I will fetch them, fetch them even from the depths of the sea."*
- <sup>24</sup>You will wash your feet in your enemy's blood;
 the tongues of your dogs will lap it up."<sup>a</sup>

- <sup>25</sup>*Your procession comes into view, O God, your procession into the holy place,
 my God and king.
- <sup>26</sup>The singers go first, the harpists follow;
 in their midst girls sound the timbrels.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>27</sup>In your choirs, bless God;
 LORD, Israel's fountain.
- <sup>28</sup>In the lead is Benjamin, few in number;
 there the princes of Judah, a large throng,
 the princes of Zebulun, the princes of Naphtali, too.<sup>c</sup>

VIII

- <sup>29</sup>Summon again, O God, your power, the divine power you once showed for us,
- <sup>30</sup>From your temple on behalf of Jerusalem, that kings may bring you tribute.
- <sup>31</sup>Roar at the wild beast of the reeds,* the herd of mighty bulls, the calves of the peoples;
 trampling those who lust after silver scatter the peoples that delight in war.

<sup>32</sup>Let bronze be brought from Egypt,<sup>d</sup>
Ethiopia hurry its hands to God.<sup>e</sup>

IX

<sup>33</sup>You kingdoms of the earth, sing to God;<sup>f</sup> chant the praises of the Lord, Selah

<sup>34</sup>Who rides the heights of the ancient
heavens,
Who sends forth his voice as a mighty
voice?

<sup>35</sup>Confess the power of God, whose majesty protects Israel,
whose power is in the sky.

<sup>36</sup>Awesome is God in his holy place,
the God of Israel,
who gives power and strength to his people.<sup>g</sup>

Blessed be God!

A Cry of Anguish in Great Distress

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; according to “Lilies.”* Of David.

<sup>2</sup>Save me, God, for the waters* have reached my neck.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>3</sup>I have sunk into the mire of the deep,
where there is no foothold.
I have gone down to the watery depths;
the flood overwhelms me.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>4</sup>I am weary with crying out;
my throat is parched.
My eyes fail,
from looking for my God.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>5</sup>More numerous than the hairs of my head are those who hate me without cause.<sup>k</sup>
Those who would destroy me are mighty,

my enemies without reason.
Must I now restore what I did not steal?*

II

- <sup>6</sup>God, you know my folly;
my faults are not hidden from you.
- <sup>7</sup>Let those who wait in hope for you,
LORD of hosts,
not be shamed because of me.
- Let those who seek you, God of Israel,<sup>l</sup> not be disgraced because of me.
- <sup>8</sup>For it is on your account I bear insult, that disgrace covers my face.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>I have become an outcast to my kindred,
a stranger to my mother's children.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Because zeal for your house has consumed me,*
I am scorned by those who scorn
you.<sup>*o</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>When I humbled my spirit with fasting,<sup>p</sup>
this led only to scorn.
- <sup>12</sup>When I clothed myself in sackcloth;
I became a byword for them.
- <sup>13</sup>Those who sit in the gate gossip
about me;
drunkards make me the butt of songs.

III

- <sup>14</sup>But I will pray to you, LORD,
at a favorable time.
God, in your abundant kindness,
answer me
with your sure deliverance.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>15</sup>Rescue me from the mire,<sup>r</sup>
and do not let me sink.
Rescue me from those who hate me and from the watery depths.
- <sup>16</sup>Do not let the flood waters overwhelm me,
nor the deep swallow me,

- nor the pit close its mouth over me.
- <sup>17</sup>Answer me, LORD, in your generous love;
in your great mercy turn to me.
- <sup>18</sup>Do not hide your face from your servant;
hasten to answer me, for I am in distress.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>19</sup>Come and redeem my life;
because of my enemies ransom me.
- <sup>20</sup>You know my reproach, my shame, my
disgrace;
before you stand all my foes.
- <sup>21</sup>Insult has broken my heart, and I despair;
I looked for compassion, but there was none,<sup>t</sup>
for comforters, but found none.
- <sup>22</sup>Instead they gave me poison for my
food;
and for my thirst they gave me
vinegar.<sup>u</sup>

IV

- <sup>23</sup>May their own table be a snare for them, and their communion offerings a trap.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>24</sup>Make their eyes so dim they cannot see;
keep their backs ever feeble.
- <sup>25</sup>Pour out your wrath upon them;
let the fury of your anger overtake
them.
- <sup>26</sup>Make their camp desolate, with none to dwell in their tents.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>27</sup>For they pursued the one you struck, added to the pain of the one you wounded.
- <sup>28</sup>Heap punishment upon their punishment;
let them gain from you no vindication.
- <sup>29</sup>May they be blotted from the book of
life;
not registered among the just!<sup>x</sup>

V

- <sup>30</sup>But here I am miserable and in pain;
let your saving help protect me, God, <sup>31</sup>*That I may praise God's name in song and glorify it with thanksgiving.
<sup>32</sup>That will please the LORD more than oxen,
more than bulls with horns and hooves:<sup>y</sup> <sup>33</sup>"See, you lowly ones, and be glad;
you who seek God, take heart!<sup>z</sup> <sup>34</sup>For the LORD hears the poor, and does not spurn those in bondage.
<sup>35</sup>Let the heaven and the earth praise him,
the seas and whatever moves in them!"

VI

- <sup>36</sup>For God will rescue Zion, and rebuild the cities of Judah.<sup>a</sup>
They will dwell there and possess it; <sup>37</sup>the descendants of God's servants will inherit it;
those who love God's name will dwell in it.<sup>b</sup>

Prayer for Divine Help

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; of David. For remembrance.

- <sup>2</sup>Graciously rescue me, God!<sup>c</sup>
Come quickly to help me, LORD!<sup>d</sup>
<sup>3</sup>Let those who seek my life be confused and put to shame.<sup>e</sup> Let those who desire my ruin
turn back in disgrace.
<sup>4</sup>Let those who say "Aha!"<sup>f</sup> turn back in their shame.

<sup>5</sup>But may all who seek you
    rejoice and be glad in you,
Those who long for your help always say, “God be glorified!”<sup>g</sup> <sup>6</sup>I am miserable and poor.
    God, come to me quickly!
You are my help and deliverer.
    LORD, do not delay!

Prayer in Time of Old Age

<sup>1</sup>In you, LORD, I take refuge,<sup>h</sup> let me never be put to shame.<sup>i</sup> <sup>2</sup>In your justice rescue and deliver me;
    listen to me and save me!
<sup>3</sup>Be my rock of refuge,
    my stronghold to give me safety;
    for you are my rock and fortress.<sup>j</sup> <sup>4</sup>My God, rescue me from the hand of the wicked,
    from the clutches of the evil and violent.<sup>k</sup> <sup>5</sup>You are my hope, Lord;
    my trust, God, from my youth.
<sup>6</sup>On you I have depended since birth; from my mother’s womb you are my strength;<sup>l</sup>
    my hope in you never wavers.
<sup>7*</sup>I have become a portent to many,
    but you are my strong refuge!
<sup>8</sup>My mouth shall be filled with your praise, shall sing your glory every day.

<sup>9</sup>Do not cast me aside in my old age;

as my strength fails, do not forsake me.

<sup>10</sup>For my enemies speak against me;
they watch and plot against me.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>11</sup>They say, "God has abandoned him.
Pursue, and seize him!
No one will come to the rescue!"

<sup>12</sup>God, be not far from me;
my God, hasten to help me.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Bring to a shameful end
those who attack me;
Cover with contempt and scorn
those who seek my ruin.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>14</sup>I will always hope in you and add to all your praise.

<sup>15</sup>My mouth shall proclaim your just deeds, day after day your acts of deliverance,
though I cannot number them all.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>16</sup>I will speak of the mighty works of the Lord;
O God, I will tell of your singular
justice.

III

<sup>17</sup>God, you have taught me from my youth; to this day I proclaim your wondrous
deeds.

<sup>18</sup>Now that I am old and gray,<sup>q</sup>
do not forsake me, God,
That I may proclaim your might to all generations yet to come,<sup>r</sup>

Your power <sup>19</sup>and justice, God, to the highest heaven.

You have done great things;<sup>s</sup>
O God, who is your equal?<sup>t</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Whatever bitter afflictions you sent me,
you would turn and revive me.
From the watery depths of the earth
once more raise me up.

<sup>21</sup>Restore my honor;
turn and comfort me,

<sup>22</sup>That I may praise you with the lyre for your faithfulness, my God,
And sing to you with the harp,
O Holy One of Israel!

<sup>23</sup>My lips will shout for joy as I sing your praise;
my soul, too, which you have redeemed.

<sup>24</sup>Yes, my tongue shall recount your justice day by day.
For those who sought my ruin have been shamed and disgraced.

A Prayer for the King

<sup>1</sup>Of Solomon.

<sup>2</sup>O God, give your judgment to the king; your justice to the king's son; <sup>*u</sup>
That he may govern your people with
justice,
your oppressed with right judgment, <sup>v</sup> <sup>3</sup>That the mountains may yield their bounty for the people, and the hills great abundance, <sup>w</sup> <sup>4</sup>That he may defend the oppressed among the people,
save the children of the poor and crush
the oppressor.

II

<sup>5</sup>May they fear you with the sun, and before the moon, through all generations. <sup>x</sup> <sup>6</sup>May he be like rain coming down upon the fields,
like showers watering the earth, <sup>y</sup>

<sup>7</sup>That abundance may flourish in his days, great bounty, till the moon be no more.

III

<sup>8*</sup>May he rule from sea to sea, from the river to the ends of the earth.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>9</sup>May his foes kneel before him, his enemies lick the dust.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>10</sup>May the kings of Tarshish and the islands* bring tribute, the kings of Sheba and Seba offer gifts.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>11</sup>May all kings bow before him, all nations serve him.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>12</sup>For he rescues the poor when they cry out,
the oppressed who have no one to help.

<sup>13</sup>He shows pity to the needy and the poor<sup>d</sup> and saves the lives of the poor.

<sup>14</sup>From extortion and violence he redeems
them, for precious is their blood* in his sight.

<sup>15</sup>Long may he live, receiving gold from Sheba, prayed for without cease, blessed day
by day.

<sup>16*</sup>May wheat abound in the land, flourish even on the mountain heights.
May his fruit be like that of Lebanon, and flourish in the city like the grasses of the land.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>17</sup>May his name be forever;
as long as the sun, may his name endure.<sup>f</sup>
May the tribes of the earth give blessings with his name;* may all the nations regard him as favored.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>18*</sup>Blessed be the LORD God, the God of Israel,

who alone does wonderful deeds.<sup>h</sup> <sup>19</sup>Blessed be his glorious name forever;
may he fill all the earth with his glory.<sup>i</sup>
Amen and amen.

The Trial of the Just

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of Asaph.

How good God is to the upright, to those who are pure of heart!

I

<sup>2</sup>But, as for me, my feet had almost stumbled;
my steps had nearly slipped,

<sup>3</sup>Because I was envious of the arrogant when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>4</sup>For they suffer no pain;
their bodies are healthy and sleek.

<sup>5</sup>They are free of the burdens of life;
they are not afflicted like others.

<sup>6</sup>Thus pride adorns them as a necklace;
violence clothes them as a robe.

<sup>7</sup>Out of such blindness comes sin;
evil thoughts flood their hearts.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>8</sup>They scoff and spout their malice; from on high they utter threats.<sup>l</sup>

9* They set their mouths against the
    heavens,
    their tongues roam the earth.
10* So my people turn to them and drink deeply of their words.
11 They say, "Does God really know?"
    "Does the Most High have any knowledge?"<sup>m</sup> 12 Such, then, are the wicked, always carefree, increasing their wealth.

II

13 Is it in vain that I have kept my heart pure, washed my hands in innocence?<sup>n</sup> 14 For I am afflicted day after day, chastised every morning.
15 Had I thought, "I will speak as they do,"
    I would have betrayed this generation of your children.
16 Though I tried to understand all this,
    it was too difficult for me,
17 Till I entered the sanctuary of God and came to understand their end.*

III

18 You set them, indeed, on a slippery road;
    you hurl them down to ruin.
19 How suddenly they are devastated;
    utterly undone by disaster!
20 They are like a dream after waking, Lord, dismissed like shadows when you arise.<sup>o</sup>

IV

21 Since my heart was embittered and my soul deeply wounded,
22 I was stupid and could not understand;
    I was like a brute beast in your presence.
23 Yet I am always with you;
    you take hold of my right hand.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>24</sup>With your counsel you guide me, and at the end receive me with honor.*
<sup>25</sup>Whom else have I in the heavens?
None beside you delights me on earth.
<sup>26</sup>Though my flesh and my heart fail, God is the rock of my heart, my portion forever.
<sup>27</sup>But those who are far from you perish;
you destroy those unfaithful to you.
<sup>28</sup>As for me, to be near God is my good,
to make the Lord God my refuge.
I shall declare all your works
in the gates of daughter Zion.*

Prayer at the Destruction of the Temple

<sup>1</sup>A maskil of Asaph.

I

Why, God, have you cast us off forever?*<sup>q</sup> Why does your anger burn against the sheep of your pasture?<sup>r</sup> <sup>2</sup>Remember your people, whom you acquired of old,
the tribe you redeemed as your own
heritage,
Mount Zion where you dwell.<sup>s</sup> <sup>3</sup>Direct your steps toward the utter destruction,
everything the enemy laid waste in the
sanctuary.
<sup>4</sup>Your foes roared triumphantly in the place of your assembly;
they set up their own tokens of victory.
<sup>5</sup>They hacked away like a forester gathering boughs,

swinging his ax in a thicket of trees.

<sup>6</sup>They smashed all its engraved work, struck it with ax and pick.

<sup>7</sup>They set your sanctuary on fire, profaned your name's abode by razing
it to the ground.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>8</sup>They said in their hearts, "We will destroy them all!
Burn all the assembly-places of God in the land!"

<sup>9*</sup>Even so we have seen no signs for us, there is no prophet any more,<sup>u</sup> no one among us who knows for how long.

<sup>10</sup>How long, O God, will the enemy jeer?<sup>v</sup>
Will the enemy revile your name
forever?

<sup>11</sup>Why draw back your hand, why hold back your right hand within your bosom?*

II

<sup>12*</sup>Yet you, God, are my king from of old, winning victories throughout the
earth.

<sup>13</sup>You stirred up the sea by your might;<sup>w</sup> you smashed the heads of the dragons on the waters.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>14</sup>You crushed the heads of Leviathan,<sup>y</sup> gave him as food to the sharks.

<sup>15</sup>You opened up springs and torrents, brought dry land out of the primeval waters.*

<sup>16</sup>Yours the day and yours the night too;
you set the moon and sun in place.

<sup>17</sup>You fixed all the limits of the earth; summer and winter you made.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Remember how the enemy has jeered,
LORD,
how a foolish people has reviled your

name.

<sup>19</sup>Do not surrender to wild animals those who praise you;
do not forget forever the life of your
afflicted.

<sup>20</sup>Look to your covenant, for the recesses of the land are full of the haunts of violence.

<sup>21</sup>Let not the oppressed turn back in shame;
may the poor and needy praise your
name.

<sup>22</sup>Arise, God, defend your cause; remember the constant jeering of the fools.

<sup>23</sup>Do not forget the clamor of your foes,
the unceasing uproar of your enemies.

God the Judge of the World

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. Do not destroy! A psalm of Asaph; a song.

I

<sup>2</sup>We thank you, God, we give thanks;
we call upon your name,
we declare your wonderful deeds.

[You said:]*

<sup>3</sup>“I will choose the time;
I will judge fairly.

<sup>4</sup>Though the earth and all its inhabitants quake,

I make steady its pillars.”<sup>a</sup> Selah

II

<sup>5</sup>So I say to the boastful: “Do not boast!”<sup>b</sup> to the wicked: “Do not raise your horns!”*

<sup>6</sup>Do not raise your horns against heaven!

Do not speak with a stiff neck!”<sup>c</sup> <sup>7</sup>For judgment comes not from east or from west,
 not from the wilderness or the mountains,<sup>d</sup> <sup>8</sup>But from God who decides, who brings some low and raises others high.<sup>e</sup> <sup>9</sup>Yes, a cup* is in the LORD’s hand, foaming wine, fully spiced.*
 When God pours it out,
 they will drain it even to the dregs;
 all the wicked of the earth will drink.<sup>f</sup> <sup>10</sup>But I will rejoice forever;
 I will sing praise to the God of Jacob,
<sup>11g</sup>[Who has said:]
 “I will cut off all the horns of the wicked, but the horns of the righteous will be exalted.”

God Defends Zion

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; a psalm with stringed instruments. A song of Asaph.

<sup>2</sup>Renowned in Judah is God,<sup>h</sup> whose name is great in Israel.
<sup>3</sup>On Salem* is God’s tent, his shelter on Zion.
<sup>4</sup>There the flashing arrows were shattered,
 shield, sword, and weapons of war.<sup>i</sup> Selah

II

<sup>5</sup>Terrible and awesome are you, stronger than the ancient mountains.*

<sup>6</sup>Despoiled are the stouthearted;
they sank into sleep;
the hands of all the men of valor have failed.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>7</sup>At your roar, O God of Jacob, chariot and steed lay still.

<sup>8</sup>You, terrible are you;
who can stand before you and your great anger?<sup>k</sup>

<sup>9</sup>From the heavens you pronounced sentence;
the earth was terrified and reduced to silence,

<sup>10</sup>When you arose, O God, for judgment to save the afflicted of the land. Selah

<sup>11</sup>Surely the wrath of man will give you thanks;
the remnant of your furor will keep your feast.

III

<sup>12</sup>Make and keep vows to the LORD your God.<sup>l</sup>
May all around him bring gifts to the one to be feared,

<sup>13</sup>Who checks the spirit of princes, who is fearful to the kings of earth.

Confidence in God During National Distress

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; According to Jeduthun.

A psalm of Asaph.

<sup>2</sup>I cry aloud to God,
I cry to God to hear me.

<sup>3</sup>On the day of my distress I seek the Lord;

by night my hands are stretched out unceasingly;<sup>m</sup>
 I refuse to be consoled.
 4When I think of God, I groan;
 as I meditate, my spirit grows faint.<sup>n</sup>   Selah 5You have kept me from closing my eyes
 in sleep;
 I am troubled and cannot speak.
 6I consider the days of old;
 the years long past 7I remember.<sup>o</sup>
 At night I ponder in my heart;
 and as I meditate, my spirit probes:
 8“Will the Lord reject us forever,<sup>p</sup> never again show favor?
 9Has God’s mercy ceased forever?
 The promise to go unfulfilled for future ages?
 10Has God forgotten how to show mercy,
 in anger withheld his compassion?”   Selah 11* I conclude: “My sorrow is this, the right hand of the Most High has abandoned us.”<sup>q</sup>

II

12* I will recall the deeds of the LORD;
 yes, recall your wonders of old.<sup>r</sup> 13I will ponder all your works;
 on your exploits I will meditate.
 14Your way, God, is holy;
 what god is as great as our God?<sup>s</sup> 15You are the God who does wonders;
 among the peoples you have revealed your might.<sup>t</sup> 16With your mighty arm you redeemed your people,
 the children of Jacob and Joseph.<sup>u</sup>   Selah 17The waters saw you, God;
 the waters saw you and lashed about,
 even the deeps of the sea * trembled.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>18</sup>The clouds poured down their rains;
the thunderheads rumbled;
your arrows flashed back and forth.<sup>w</sup> <sup>19</sup>The thunder of your chariot wheels resounded;
your lightning lit up the world;
the earth trembled and quaked.<sup>x</sup> <sup>20</sup>Through the sea was your way;
your path, through the mighty waters,
though your footsteps were unseen.<sup>y</sup> <sup>21</sup>You led your people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron.<sup>z</sup>

A New Beginning in Zion and David

<sup>1</sup>A maskil of Asaph.

I

Attend, my people, to my teaching;
listen to the words of my mouth.
<sup>2</sup>I will open my mouth in a parable,* unfold the puzzling events of the past.<sup>a</sup> <sup>3</sup>What we have heard and know; things our ancestors have recounted to us.<sup>b</sup> <sup>4</sup>We do not keep them from our children;
we recount them to the next generation,
The praiseworthy deeds of the LORD and his strength,
the wonders that he performed.<sup>c</sup> <sup>5</sup>God made a decree in Jacob, established a law in Israel:<sup>d</sup>
Which he commanded our ancestors,
they were to teach their children; <sup>6</sup>That the next generation might come to know,

children yet to be born.<sup>e</sup>
In turn they were to recount them to their children,
7 that they too might put their confidence in God,
And not forget God's deeds,
but keep his commandments.
8 They were not to be like their ancestors,
a rebellious and defiant generation,<sup>f</sup>
A generation whose heart was not constant,<sup>g</sup> and whose spirit was not faithful to
God.
9 The ranks of Ephraimite archers,* retreated on the day of battle.
10 They did not keep God's covenant; they refused to walk according to his law.
11 They forgot his deeds,
the wonders that he had shown them.

12 In the sight of their ancestors God did wonders,
in the land of Egypt, the plain of Zoan.<sup>*h</sup>
13 He split the sea and led them across,<sup>i</sup> making the waters stand like walls.<sup>j</sup> 14 He led them with a cloud by day, all night with the light of fire.<sup>k</sup> 15 He split rocks in the desert, gave water to drink, abundant as the depths of the sea.<sup>l</sup> 16 He made streams flow from crags, caused rivers of water to flow down.
17 But they went on sinning against him, rebellious against the Most High in the desert.<sup>m</sup>

18 They tested God in their hearts, demanding the food they craved.<sup>n</sup>

19 They spoke against God, and said, “Can God spread a table in the wilderness?”<sup>o</sup>

20 True, when he struck the rock, water gushed forth,
the wadies flooded.
But can he also give bread,
or provide meat to his people?”

C

21 The LORD heard and grew angry;<sup>p</sup> fire blazed up against Jacob;
anger flared up against Israel.

22 For they did not believe in God, did not trust in his saving power.

23* So he commanded the clouds above;
and opened the doors of heaven.

24 God rained manna upon them for food; grain from heaven he gave them.<sup>q</sup>

25 Man ate the bread of the angels;* food he sent in abundance.

26 He stirred up the east wind in the skies;
by his might God brought on the south
wind.

27 He rained meat upon them like dust,
winged fowl like the sands of the sea,

28 They fell down in the midst of their camp,
all round their dwellings.

29 They ate and were well filled;
he gave them what they had craved.

30 But while they still wanted more,
and the food was still in their mouths,

31 God’s anger flared up against them, and he made a slaughter of their strongest,

laying low the youth of Israel.<sup>r</sup>

32 In spite of all this they went on sinning, they did not believe in his wonders.

D

33 God ended their days abruptly, their years in sudden death.

34 When he slew them, they began to seek
him;

they again looked for God.<sup>s</sup>

35 They remembered* that God was their rock,
God Most High, their redeemer.

36 But they deceived him with their mouths,
lied to him with their tongues.

37 Their hearts were not constant toward
him;

they were not faithful to his covenant.<sup>t</sup>

38* But God being compassionate forgave their sin;

he did not utterly destroy them.

Time and again he turned back his anger,
unwilling to unleash all his rage.<sup>u</sup>

39 He remembered that they were flesh, a breath that passes on and does not return.

III

A

40 How often they rebelled against God in the wilderness,
grieved him in the wasteland.

41 Again and again they tested God, provoked the Holy One of Israel.

42 They did not remember his power, the day he redeemed them from the foe,<sup>v</sup>

43* When he performed his signs in Egypt, his wonders in the plain of Zoan.<sup>w</sup>

44 God turned their rivers to blood;
their streams they could not drink.

45 He sent swarms of insects that devoured them,<sup>x</sup> frogs that destroyed them.

46 He gave their harvest to the caterpillar, the fruits of their labor to the locust.

47 He killed their vines with hail,<sup>y</sup> their sycamores with frost.

48 He exposed their cattle to plague, their flocks to pestilence.<sup>z</sup>

49 He let loose against them the heat of his anger,
wrath, fury, and distress,
a band of deadly messengers.

50 He cleared a path for his anger;
he did not spare them from death, but delivered their animals to the plague.

51 He struck all the firstborn of Egypt,<sup>a</sup>
the first fruits of their vigor in the tents of Ham.

52 Then God led forth his people like sheep, guided them like a flock through the wilderness.<sup>b</sup>

53 He led them on secure and unafraid, while the sea enveloped their enemies.<sup>c</sup>

54 And he brought them to his holy mountain,
the hill his right hand had won.<sup>d</sup>

55 He drove out the nations before them, allotted them as their inherited portion,
and settled in their tents the tribes of Israel.

B

56 But they tested and rebelled against God
Most High,
his decrees they did not observe.

57 They turned disloyal, faithless like their ancestors;
they proved false like a slack bow.

58 They enraged him with their high places, and with their idols provoked him* to jealous anger.<sup>e</sup>

C

59 God heard and grew angry;
he rejected Israel completely.
60 He forsook the shrine at Shiloh,<sup>*f</sup>
the tent he set up among human beings.
61 He gave up his might into captivity, his glorious ark into the hands of the foe.<sup>g</sup> 62 God delivered his people to the sword;
he was enraged against his heritage.
63 Fire consumed their young men;
their young women heard no wedding songs.<sup>h</sup> 64 Their priests fell by the sword;
their widows made no lamentation.

D

65 Then the Lord awoke as from sleep, like a warrior shouting from the effects of wine.
66 He put his foes to flight;
everlasting shame he dealt them.
67 He rejected the tent of Joseph, chose not the tribe of Ephraim.
68* God chose the tribe of Judah, Mount Zion which he loved.<sup>i</sup> 69 He built his shrine like the heavens, like the earth which he founded forever.
70 He chose David his servant, took him from the sheepfolds.<sup>j</sup> 71 From tending ewes God brought him, to shepherd Jacob, his people,
Israel, his heritage.<sup>k</sup> 72 He shepherded them with a pure heart;
with skilled hands he guided them.

A Prayer for Jerusalem

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of Asaph.

I

O God, the nations have invaded your inheritance;
they have defiled your holy temple;
they have laid Jerusalem in ruins.<sup>l</sup> <sup>2</sup>They have left the corpses of your servants as food for the birds of the sky, the flesh of those devoted to you for the beasts of the earth.<sup>m</sup> <sup>3</sup>They have poured out their blood like water
all around Jerusalem, and no one is left to do the burying.<sup>n</sup> <sup>4</sup>We have become the reproach of our neighbors,
the scorn and derision of those around us.<sup>o</sup>

II

<sup>5</sup>How long, LORD? Will you be angry
forever?
Will your jealous anger keep burning like fire?<sup>p</sup> <sup>6</sup>Pour out your wrath on nations that do not recognize you, on kingdoms that do not call on your name,<sup>q</sup> <sup>7</sup>For they have devoured Jacob, laid waste his dwelling place.
<sup>8</sup>Do not remember against us the iniquities of our forefathers;
let your compassion move quickly
ahead of us,
for we have been brought very low.<sup>r</sup>

III

<sup>9</sup>Help us, God our savior, on account of the glory of your name.
Deliver us, pardon our sins
for your name's sake.<sup>S</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Why should the nations say,
"Where is their God?"<sup>t</sup> Before our eyes make known to the nations
that you avenge the blood of your servants which has been poured out.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Let the groaning of the imprisoned come in before you;
in accord with the greatness of your arm preserve those doomed to die.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Turn back sevenfold into the bosom of our neighbors
the insult with which they insulted
you, Lord.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Then we, your people, the sheep of your pasture,
will give thanks to you forever;
from generation to generation
we will recount your praise.

Prayer to Restore God's Vineyard

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; according to "Lilies." Eduth.* A psalm of Asaph.

<sup>2</sup>O Shepherd of Israel, lend an ear, you who guide Joseph like a flock!
Seated upon the cherubim, shine forth<sup>x</sup> <sup>3</sup>upon Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh.

Stir up your power, and come to save us.

<sup>4y</sup>O God, restore us; light up your face and we shall be saved.

<sup>5</sup>LORD of hosts, how long will you smolder in anger
while your people pray?<sup>z</sup>

<sup>6</sup>You have fed them the bread of tears, made them drink tears in great measure.<sup>*a</sup>

<sup>7</sup>You have left us to be fought over by our neighbors;
our enemies deride us.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>8</sup>O God of hosts, restore us;
light up your face and we shall be saved.

<sup>9</sup>You brought a vine* out of Egypt;
you drove out nations and planted it.

<sup>10</sup>You cleared out what was before it;
it took deep root and filled the land.

<sup>11</sup>The mountains were covered by its shadow,
the cedars of God by its branches.

<sup>12</sup>It sent out its boughs as far as the sea,* its shoots as far as the river.*

<sup>13</sup>Why have you broken down its walls, so that all who pass along the way
pluck its fruit?<sup>c</sup>

<sup>14</sup>The boar from the forest strips the vine;
the beast of the field feeds upon it.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Turn back again, God of hosts;
look down from heaven and see;

Visit this vine,

<sup>16</sup>the stock your right hand has planted, and the son* whom you made strong
for yourself.

<sup>17</sup>Those who would burn or cut it down—may they perish at your rebuke.

<sup>18</sup>May your hand be with the man on your right,* with the son of man whom you made strong for yourself.

<sup>19</sup>Then we will not withdraw from you; revive us, and we will call on your
name.

<sup>20</sup>LORD God of hosts, restore us;
light up your face and we shall be
saved.

An Admonition to Fidelity

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; “upon the gittith.”* Of Asaph.

I

<sup>2</sup>Sing joyfully to God our strength;<sup>e</sup> raise loud shouts to the God of Jacob!

<sup>3</sup>Take up a melody, sound the timbrel,
the pleasant lyre with a harp.

<sup>4</sup>* Blow the shofar at the new moon, at the full moon, on our solemn feast.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>5</sup>For this is a law for Israel, an edict of the God of Jacob,<sup>g</sup>

<sup>6</sup>He made it a decree for Joseph when he came out of the land of Egypt.

II

<sup>7</sup>* I heard a tongue I did not know:
“I removed his shoulder from the burden;* his hands moved away from the basket.<sup>*h</sup>

<sup>8</sup>In distress you called and I rescued you;

I answered you in secret with thunder;
At the waters of Meribah * I tested you:<sup>i</sup>

<sup>9</sup>‘Listen, my people, I will testify against you   Selah

If only you will listen to me, Israel!<sup>j</sup>

<sup>10</sup>There shall be no foreign god among you; *<sup>k</sup> you shall not bow down to an alien
god.

<sup>11</sup>‘I am the LORD your God, who brought you up from the land of Egypt.
Open wide your mouth that I may fill
it.’

<sup>12</sup>But my people did not listen to my words;
Israel would not submit to me.

<sup>13</sup>So I thrust them away to the hardness of their heart;
‘Let them walk in their own machinations.’<sup>l</sup>

<sup>14</sup>O that my people would listen to me, that Israel would walk in my ways,<sup>m</sup>

<sup>15</sup>In a moment I would humble their foes, and turn back my hand against their oppressors.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Those who hate the LORD will try flattering him,
but their fate is fixed forever.

<sup>17</sup>But Israel I will feed with the finest wheat,
I will satisfy them with honey from the rock.”<sup>o</sup>
