deliver them from the hand of the wicked.”<sup>r</sup>

II

<sup>5</sup>*The gods neither know nor understand, wandering about in darkness,
and all the world’s foundations shake.

<sup>6</sup>I declare: “Gods though you be,<sup>*s</sup>
offspring of the Most High all of you,

<sup>7</sup>Yet like any mortal you shall die;

for yours are all the nations.

Prayer Against a Hostile Alliance

<sup>1</sup>A song; a psalm of Asaph.

I

<sup>2</sup>God, do not be silent;
God, do not be deaf or remain

your foes proudly raise their heads.

<sup>4</sup>They conspire against your people, plot against those you protect.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>5</sup>They say, “Come, let us wipe them out as a nation;
let Israel’s name be remembered no
more!”

<sup>6</sup>They scheme with one mind, they have entered into a covenant against you:<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7*</sup>The tents of Edom and the Ishmaelites, of Moab and the Hagrites,<sup>w</sup>

Philistia and the inhabitants of Tyre.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Assyria, too, in league with them, backs the descendants of Lot. Selah

II

<sup>10*</sup>Deal with them as with Midian;
as with Sisera and Jabin at the wadi Kishon,<sup>z</sup>

who became dung for the ground.<sup>a</sup>

all their princes like Zebah and Zalmunna,

<sup>13</sup>Who made a plan together, “Let us take for ourselves the pastures
of God.”

<sup>14</sup>My God, make them like tumbleweed, into chaff flying before the wind.<sup>b</sup>

terrify them with your storm-wind.

till they seek your name, * LORD.

<sup>18</sup>Let them be ashamed and terrified
forever;
let them perish in disgrace.

<sup>19</sup>Let them know that your name is LORD, you alone are the Most High over all the earth.<sup>d</sup>

Prayer of a Pilgrim to Jerusalem

<sup>1</sup>For the leader; “upon the gittith.” A psalm of the Korahites.

O LORD of hosts!<sup>e</sup>

<sup>3</sup>My soul yearns and pines

for the courts of the LORD.<sup>f</sup>

My heart and flesh cry out for the living God.

<sup>4*</sup>As the sparrow finds a home and the swallow a nest to settle her young,

My home is by your altars,

LORD of hosts, my king and my God!<sup>g</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Blessed are those who dwell in your house!

They never cease to praise you. Selah

II

<sup>6</sup>Blessed the man who finds refuge in you,
in their hearts are pilgrim roads.

<sup>7</sup>As they pass through the Baca valley,*
they find spring water to drink.
The early rain covers it with blessings.

<sup>8</sup>They will go from strength to strength*
and see the God of gods on Zion.

III

<sup>9</sup>LORD God of hosts, hear my prayer;
listen, God of Jacob. Selah

<sup>10*</sup>O God, watch over our shield;
look upon the face of your anointed.<sup>h</sup>

than a thousand elsewhere.
Better the threshold of the house of my
    God
than a home in the tents of the wicked.
<sup>12</sup>For a sun and shield is the LORD God, bestowing all grace and glory.
The LORD withholds no good thing from those who walk without reproach.
<sup>13</sup>O LORD of hosts,
    blessed the man who trusts in you!

Prayer for Divine Favor

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of the Korahites.

<sup>2</sup>You once favored, LORD, your land, restored the captives of Jacob.<sup>i</sup> <sup>3</sup>You forgave the guilt of your people, pardoned all their sins. Selah <sup>4</sup>You withdrew all your wrath, turned back from your burning anger.<sup>j</sup>

II

<sup>5</sup>Restore us, God of our salvation;
    let go of your displeasure with us.<sup>k</sup> <sup>6</sup>Will you be angry with us forever, prolong your anger for all generations?<sup>l</sup> <sup>7</sup>Certainly you will again restore our life,
    that your people may rejoice in you.
<sup>8</sup>Show us, LORD, your mercy;
    grant us your salvation.

III

<sup>9*</sup>I will listen for what God, the LORD, has to say;
    surely he will speak of peace

To his people and to his faithful.
May they not turn to foolishness!
<sup>10</sup>Near indeed is his salvation for those
    who fear him;
    glory will dwell in our land.
<sup>11</sup>* Love and truth will meet;
    justice and peace will kiss.<sup>m</sup> <sup>12</sup>Truth will spring from the earth;
    justice will look down from heaven.<sup>n</sup> <sup>13</sup>Yes, the LORD will grant his bounty;
    our land will yield its produce.<sup>o</sup> <sup>14</sup>Justice will march before him,
    and make a way for his footsteps.

Prayer in Time of Distress

<sup>1</sup>A prayer of David.

I

Incline your ear, LORD, and answer me,
    for I am poor and oppressed.
<sup>2</sup>Preserve my life, for I am devoted;
    save your servant who trusts in you.
You are my God; <sup>3</sup>be gracious to me, Lord;
    to you I call all the day.
<sup>4</sup>Gladden the soul of your servant;
    to you, Lord, I lift up my soul.<sup>p</sup> <sup>5</sup>Lord, you are good and forgiving,
    most merciful to all who call on you.<sup>q</sup> <sup>6</sup>LORD, hear my prayer;
    listen to my cry for help.<sup>r</sup> <sup>7</sup>On the day of my distress I call to you,
    for you will answer me.

II

<sup>8</sup>None among the gods can equal you, O

Lord;
nor can their deeds compare to yours.<sup>s</sup> <sup>9</sup>All the nations you have made shall come
to bow before you, Lord,
and give honor to your name.<sup>t</sup> <sup>10</sup>For you are great and do wondrous
deeds;
and you alone are God.

<sup>11</sup>Teach me, LORD, your way that I may walk in your truth,<sup>u</sup> single-hearted and revering your name.
<sup>12</sup>I will praise you with all my heart, glorify your name forever, Lord my
God.
<sup>13</sup>Your mercy to me is great;
you have rescued me from the depths of Sheol.<sup>v</sup> <sup>14</sup>O God, the arrogant have risen against me;
a ruthless band has sought my life;
to you they pay no heed.
<sup>15</sup>But you, Lord, are a compassionate and gracious God,
slow to anger, abounding in mercy and truth.<sup>w</sup> <sup>16</sup>Turn to me, be gracious to me;
give your strength to your servant;
save the son of your handmaid.<sup>x</sup> <sup>17</sup>Give me a sign of your favor:
make my enemies see, to their confusion,
that you, LORD, help and comfort me.

Zion the True Birthplace

<sup>1y</sup>A psalm of the Korahites. A song.

I

His foundation is on holy mountains, <sup>2</sup>The LORD loves the gates * of Zion more than any dwelling in Jacob.
<sup>3</sup>Glorious things are said of you,
O city of God! Selah

<sup>4</sup>Rahab and Babylon I count
among those who know me.
See, Philistia and Tyre, with Ethiopia,
“This one was born there.”
<sup>5*</sup> And of Zion it will be said:
“Each one was born in it.”<sup>z</sup>
The Most High will establish it;<sup>a</sup> <sup>6</sup>the LORD notes in the register of the peoples:
“This one was born there.”<sup>b</sup> Selah
<sup>7</sup>So singers and dancers:
“All my springs are in you.”<sup>c</sup>

A Despairing Lament

For singing; a maskil of Heman the Ezrahite.

<sup>2</sup>LORD, the God of my salvation, I call out
by day;
at night I cry aloud in your presence.<sup>d</sup> <sup>3</sup>Let my prayer come before you; incline your ear to my cry.<sup>e</sup> <sup>4*</sup> For my soul is filled with troubles;<sup>f</sup>
my life draws near to Sheol.

<sup>5</sup>I am reckoned with those who go down to the pit;
I am like a warrior without strength.

<sup>6</sup>My couch is among the dead,
like the slain who lie in the grave.
You remember them no more;
they are cut off from your influence.

<sup>7</sup>You plunge me into the bottom of the pit,
into the darkness of the abyss.

<sup>8</sup>Your wrath lies heavy upon me;
all your waves crash over me.<sup>g</sup>   Selah

II

<sup>9</sup>Because of you my acquaintances shun
me;

you make me loathsome to them;<sup>h</sup>
Caged in, I cannot escape;
<sup>10</sup>my eyes grow dim from trouble.

All day I call on you, LORD;
I stretch out my hands to you.

<sup>11</sup>* Do you work wonders for the dead?
Do the shades arise and praise you?<sup>i</sup>   Selah

<sup>12</sup>Is your mercy proclaimed in the grave, your faithfulness among those who have perished?*

darkness,
your righteous deeds in the land of oblivion?

<sup>14</sup>But I cry out to you, LORD;
in the morning my prayer comes
before you.

<sup>15</sup>Why do you reject my soul, LORD, and hide your face from me?

<sup>16</sup>I have been mortally afflicted since
youth;
I have borne your terrors and I am
made numb.

<sup>17</sup>Your wrath has swept over me;

your terrors have destroyed me.<sup>j</sup> <sup>18</sup>All day they surge round like a flood;
from every side they encircle me.
<sup>19</sup>Because of you friend and neighbor shun me;<sup>k</sup>
my only friend is darkness.

A Lament over God's Promise to David

<sup>2</sup>I will sing of your mercy forever, LORD<sup>l</sup> proclaim your faithfulness through all ages.
<sup>3*</sup>For I said, “My mercy is established
forever;
my faithfulness will stand as long as the heavens.
<sup>4</sup>I have made a covenant with my chosen
one;
I have sworn to David my servant:
<sup>5</sup>I will make your dynasty stand forever and establish your throne through all ages.”<sup>m</sup> Selah

<sup>6</sup>The heavens praise your marvels, LORD, your loyalty in the assembly of the holy ones.<sup>n</sup>
<sup>7</sup>Who in the skies ranks with the LORD?
Who is like the Lord among the sons of the gods?<sup>*o</sup> <sup>8</sup>A God dreaded in the council of the holy ones,
greater and more awesome than all those around him!

- <sup>9</sup>LORD, God of hosts, who is like you?
Mighty LORD, your faithfulness surrounds you.
- <sup>10</sup>You rule the raging sea;<sup>p</sup>
you still its swelling waves.
- <sup>11</sup>You crush Rahab* with a mortal blow;
with your strong arm you scatter your
foes.
- <sup>12</sup>Yours are the heavens, yours the earth;
you founded the world and everything in it.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>13*</sup>Zaphon and Amanus you created;
Tabor and Hermon rejoice in your name.
- <sup>14</sup>You have a mighty arm.
Your hand is strong; your right hand is ever exalted.
- <sup>15</sup>Justice and judgment are the foundation
of your throne;
mercy and faithfulness march before you.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>16</sup>Blessed the people who know the war cry,
who walk in the radiance of your face,
LORD.
- <sup>17</sup>In your name they sing joyfully all the
day;
they rejoice in your righteousness.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>18</sup>You are their majestic strength;
by your favor our horn* is exalted.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>19</sup>Truly the LORD is our shield,
the Holy One of Israel, our king!<sup>u</sup>
- III
- <sup>20</sup>Then you spoke in vision;<sup>v</sup>
to your faithful ones you said:
“I have set a leader over the warriors;
I have raised up a chosen one from the
people.
- <sup>21</sup>I have chosen David, my servant;
with my holy oil I have anointed him.

- 22 My hand will be with him;<sup>w</sup>
my arm will make him strong.
- 23 No enemy shall outwit him,
nor shall the wicked defeat him.
- 24 I will crush his foes before him, strike down those who hate him.
- 25 My faithfulness and mercy will be with
him;
through my name his horn will be exalted.
- 26* I will set his hand upon the sea,
his right hand upon the rivers.
- 27 He shall cry to me, 'You are my father,<sup>x</sup>
my God, the Rock of my salvation!'
- 28 I myself make him the firstborn, Most High* over the kings of the earth.
- 29 Forever I will maintain my mercy for him;<sup>y</sup>
my covenant with him stands firm.
- 30 I will establish his dynasty forever,
his throne as the days of the heavens.
- 31 If his descendants forsake my teaching,<sup>z</sup>
do not follow my decrees,
- 32 If they fail to observe my statutes,
do not keep my commandments,
- 33 I will punish their crime with a rod
and their guilt with blows.
- 34 But I will not take my mercy from him,
nor will I betray my bond of faithfulness.<sup>a</sup>
- 35 I will not violate my covenant;
the promise of my lips I will not alter.<sup>b</sup>
- 36 By my holiness I swore once for all:<sup>c</sup>
I will never be false to David.
- 37* His dynasty will continue forever,<sup>d</sup>
his throne, like the sun before me.

38 Like the moon it will stand eternal,
forever firm like the sky!" Selah

B
IV

39 But now you have rejected and spurned,<sup>e</sup>
been enraged at your anointed.

40 You renounced the covenant with your servant,
defiled his crown in the dust.

41 You broke down all city walls,<sup>f</sup>
left his strongholds in ruins.

42 All who pass through seize plunder;
his neighbors deride him.

43 You have exalted the right hand of his
foes,

have gladdened all his enemies.<sup>g</sup>

44 You turned back his sharp sword,
did not support him in battle.

45 You brought to an end his splendor, hurled his throne to the ground.

46 You cut short the days of his youth, covered him with shame. Selah

V

47 How long, LORD? Will you hide forever?

Must your wrath smolder like fire?<sup>h</sup>

48 Remember how brief life is, how frail the sons of man you have created!<sup>i</sup>

49 What is man, that he should live and not see death?

Who can deliver his soul from the power of Sheol?<sup>j</sup> Selah

VI

50 Where are your former mercies, Lord, that you swore to David in your faithfulness?

51 Remember, Lord, the insults to your servants,
how I have borne in my bosom the slander of the nations.<sup>k</sup> 52 Your enemies, LORD, insult;

they insult each step of your anointed.
53* Blessed be the LORD forever! Amen and amen!<sup>l</sup>

God's Eternity and Human Frailty

<sup>1</sup>A prayer of Moses, the man of God.

I

Lord, you have been our refuge through all generations.
<sup>2</sup>Before the mountains were born,
the earth and the world brought forth,
from eternity to eternity you are God.<sup>m</sup> <sup>3</sup>You turn humanity back into dust,* saying, “Return, you children of Adam!”<sup>n</sup>
<sup>4</sup>A thousand years in your eyes are merely a day gone by,<sup>o</sup>
Before a watch passes in the night,
<sup>5*</sup>you wash them away;<sup>p</sup>
They sleep,
and in the morning they sprout again
like an herb.
<sup>6</sup>In the morning it blooms only to pass
away;
in the evening it is wilted and withered.<sup>*q</sup>

II

<sup>7</sup>Truly we are consumed by your anger, filled with terror by your wrath.

<sup>8</sup>You have kept our faults before you,
our hidden sins in the light of your face.<sup>r</sup>

our years end like a sigh.

<sup>10</sup>Seventy is the sum of our years,
or eighty, if we are strong;
Most of them are toil and sorrow;
they pass quickly, and we are gone.

<sup>11</sup>Who comprehends the strength of your anger?
Your wrath matches the fear it inspires.

<sup>12</sup>Teach us to count our days aright,
that we may gain wisdom of heart.

<sup>13</sup>Relent, O LORD! How long?
Have pity on your servants!

that all our days we may sing for joy.

<sup>15</sup>Make us glad as many days as you humbled us,
for as many years as we have seen trouble.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Show your deeds to your servants,
your glory to their children.

<sup>17</sup>May the favor of the Lord our God be ours.<sup>v</sup>
Prosper the work of our hands!
Prosper the work of our hands!

Security Under God's Protection

<sup>1</sup>You who dwell in the shelter of the Most High,*

who abide in the shade of the Almighty,*
2 Say to the LORD, "My refuge and fortress, my God in whom I trust."<sup>w</sup> 3 He will rescue you from the fowler's
snare,
from the destroying plague,
4 He will shelter you with his pinions, and under his wings you may take refuge,<sup>x</sup>
his faithfulness is a protecting shield.
5 You shall not fear the terror of the night nor the arrow that flies by day,<sup>y</sup> 6 Nor the pestilence that roams in
darkness,
nor the plague that ravages at noon.<sup>z</sup> 7 Though a thousand fall at your side,
ten thousand at your right hand,
near you it shall not come.
8 You need simply watch;
the punishment of the wicked you will see.<sup>a</sup> 9 Because you have the LORD for your refuge
and have made the Most High your stronghold,
10 No evil shall befall you,
no affliction come near your tent.<sup>b</sup> 11* For he commands his angels with regard to you,<sup>c</sup>
to guard you wherever you go.<sup>d</sup> 12 With their hands they shall support you, lest you strike your foot against a stone.<sup>e</sup> 13 You can tread upon the asp and the viper, trample the lion and the dragon.<sup>f</sup>

II

<sup>14</sup>Because he clings to me I will deliver him;
because he knows my name I will set him on high.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>15</sup>He will call upon me and I will answer;<sup>h</sup>
I will be with him in distress;<sup>i</sup>
I will deliver him and give him honor.

<sup>16</sup>With length of days I will satisfy him, and fill him with my saving power.<sup>j</sup>

A Hymn of Thanksgiving for God's Fidelity

<sup>1</sup>A psalm. A sabbath song.

<sup>2</sup>It is good to give thanks to the LORD, to sing praise to your name, Most High,<sup>k</sup>

your faithfulness in the night,

with melody upon the lyre.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>5</sup>For you make me jubilant, LORD, by your
deeds;
at the works of your hands I shout for joy.

<sup>6</sup>How great are your works, LORD!<sup>m</sup>
How profound your designs!

<sup>7</sup>A senseless person cannot know this;
a fool cannot comprehend.

<sup>8</sup>Though the wicked flourish like grass<sup>n</sup>
and all sinners thrive,

They are destined for eternal destruction;

indeed your enemies shall perish;
all sinners shall be scattered.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>11</sup>You have given me the strength of a wild ox;<sup>p</sup>

you have poured rich oil upon me.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>12</sup>My eyes look with glee on my wicked
enemies;

my ears shall hear what happens to my wicked foes.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>13</sup>The just shall flourish like the palm tree, shall grow like a cedar of Lebanon.<sup>s</sup>

they shall flourish in the courts of our
God.

<sup>15</sup>They shall bear fruit even in old age,
they will stay fresh and green,

<sup>16</sup>To proclaim: "The LORD is just;
my rock, in whom there is no wrong."<sup>t</sup>

God Is a Mighty King

<sup>1</sup>The LORD is king, * robed with majesty;
the LORD is robed, girded with might.<sup>u</sup>

The world will surely stand in place,
never to be moved.<sup>v</sup>

you are from everlasting.<sup>w</sup>

the flood has raised up its roar;
the flood has raised its pounding waves.

<sup>4</sup>More powerful than the roar of many waters,
more powerful than the breakers of the sea,

powerful in the heavens is the LORD.
<sup>5</sup>Your decrees are firmly established;
holiness befits your house, LORD,
for all the length of days.

A Prayer for Deliverance from the Wicked

<sup>1</sup>LORD, avenging God, avenging God, shine forth!<sup>x</sup>
give the proud what they deserve!<sup>y</sup>

<sup>3</sup>How long, LORD, shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked glory?<sup>z</sup> <sup>4</sup>How long will they mouth haughty speeches,
go on boasting, all these evildoers?<sup>a</sup> <sup>5</sup>They crush your people, LORD, torment your very own.
<sup>6</sup>They kill the widow and alien;
the orphan they murder.<sup>b</sup> <sup>7</sup>They say, “The LORD does not see; the God of Jacob takes no notice.”<sup>c</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Understand, you stupid people!
You fools, when will you be wise?<sup>d</sup>
<sup>9</sup>Does the one who shaped the ear not hear?
The one who formed the eye not see?<sup>e</sup> <sup>10</sup>Does the one who guides nations not rebuke?
The one who teaches man not have
knowledge?

11 The LORD knows the plans of man;
they are like a fleeting breath.<sup>f</sup>

IV

12 Blessed the one whom you guide, LORD,<sup>g</sup>
whom you teach by your instruction,

13 To give rest from evil days,
while a pit is being dug for the wicked.

14 For the LORD will not forsake his people, nor abandon his inheritance.<sup>h</sup>

15 Judgment shall again be just,
and all the upright of heart will follow it.

V

16 Who will rise up for me against the wicked?

Who will stand up for me against evildoers?

17 If the LORD were not my help,
I would long have been silent in the grave.<sup>i</sup>

18 When I say, "My foot is slipping," your mercy, LORD, holds me up.<sup>j</sup>

19 When cares increase within me, your comfort gives me joy.

VI

20 Can unjust judges be your allies,
those who create burdens by decree,

21 Those who conspire against the just and condemn the innocent to death?

22 No, the LORD is my secure height,
my God, my rock of refuge,

23 <sup>k</sup>Who will turn back their evil upon them<sup>l</sup> and destroy them for their wickedness.
Surely the LORD our God will destroy
them!

A Call to Praise and Obedience

I

- <sup>1</sup>Come, let us sing joyfully to the LORD;
cry out to the rock of our salvation.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Let us come before him with a song of
praise,
joyfully sing out our psalms.
- <sup>3</sup>For the LORD is the great God,
the great king over all gods,<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Whose hand holds the depths of the
earth;
who owns the tops of the mountains.
- <sup>5</sup>The sea and dry land belong to God,
who made them, formed them by hand.<sup>o</sup>

II

- <sup>6</sup>Enter, let us bow down in worship;
let us kneel before the LORD who made us.
- <sup>7</sup>For he is our God,
we are the people he shepherds,
the sheep in his hands.<sup>p</sup>

III

- Oh, that today you would hear his voice:<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>Do not harden your hearts as at Meribah,
as on the day of Massah in the desert.*
- <sup>9</sup>There your ancestors tested me;
they tried me though they had seen my works.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Forty years I loathed that generation;
I said: "This people's heart goes astray;
they do not know my ways."<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>Therefore I swore in my anger:
"They shall never enter my rest."*

God of the Universe

I

- <sup>1</sup>Sing to the LORD a new song;<sup>t</sup>
sing to the LORD, all the earth.
<sup>2</sup>Sing to the LORD, bless his name;
proclaim his salvation day after day.
<sup>3</sup>Tell his glory among the nations;
among all peoples, his marvelous
deeds.<sup>u</sup>

II

- <sup>4*</sup>For great is the LORD and highly to be praised,
to be feared above all gods.<sup>v</sup> <sup>5</sup>For the gods of the nations are idols, but the LORD made the heavens.<sup>w</sup> <sup>6</sup>Splendor and power go before him;
power and grandeur are in his holy place.

III

- <sup>7</sup>Give to the LORD, you families of
nations,
give to the LORD glory and might;
<sup>8</sup>give to the LORD the glory due his name!<sup>x</sup>
Bring gifts and enter his courts; <sup>9</sup>bow down to the LORD, splendid in holiness.
Tremble before him, all the earth;
<sup>10y</sup>declare among the nations: The LORD is king.
The world will surely stand fast, never to be shaken.
He rules the peoples with fairness.

IV

- <sup>11</sup>Let the heavens be glad and the earth

rejoice;
let the sea and what fills it resound;<sup>z</sup> <sup>12</sup>let the plains be joyful and all that is in
them.
Then let all the trees of the forest rejoice <sup>13</sup>before the LORD who comes, who comes to govern the earth,<sup>a</sup>
To govern the world with justice
and the peoples with faithfulness.

The Divine Ruler of All

I

<sup>1</sup>The LORD is king; let the earth
rejoice;
let the many islands be glad.<sup>b</sup> <sup>2</sup>Cloud and darkness surround him; justice and right are the foundation of his throne.<sup>c</sup>
consuming his foes on every side.
<sup>4</sup>His lightning illumines the world;
the earth sees and trembles.<sup>d</sup>
<sup>5</sup>The mountains melt like wax before the LORD,
before the LORD of all the earth.<sup>e</sup> <sup>6</sup>The heavens proclaim his justice;
all peoples see his glory.<sup>f</sup>

II

<sup>7</sup>All who serve idols are put to shame,
who glory in worthless things;
all gods* bow down before him.<sup>g</sup> <sup>8</sup>Zion hears and is glad,
and the daughters of Judah rejoice

because of your judgments, O LORD.<sup>h</sup> <sup>9</sup>For you, LORD, are the Most High over all the earth,<sup>i</sup> exalted far above all gods.
<sup>10</sup>You who love the LORD, hate evil,
he protects the souls of the faithful,<sup>j</sup> rescues them from the hand of the
wicked.
<sup>11</sup>Light dawns for the just,
and gladness for the honest of heart.<sup>k</sup> <sup>12</sup>Rejoice in the LORD, you just,
and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness.<sup>l</sup>

The Coming of God

<sup>1</sup>A psalm.

I

Sing a new song to the LORD,
for he has done marvelous deeds.<sup>m</sup>
His right hand and holy arm
have won the victory.<sup>*n</sup> <sup>2</sup>The LORD has made his victory known;
has revealed his triumph in the sight of
the nations,
<sup>3</sup>He has remembered his mercy and faithfulness
toward the house of Israel.
All the ends of the earth have seen
the victory of our God.

<sup>4</sup>Shout with joy to the LORD, all the earth;
break into song; sing praise.

with the lyre and melodious song.

shout with joy to the King, the LORD.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Let the sea and what fills it resound,<sup>p</sup>
the world and those who dwell there.

<sup>8</sup>Let the rivers clap their hands,
the mountains shout with them for joy,<sup>q</sup>

<sup>9r</sup>Before the LORD who comes, who comes to govern the earth,<sup>s</sup>
To govern the world with justice
and the peoples with fairness.

The Holy King

<sup>1</sup>The LORD is king, the peoples tremble;
he is enthroned on the cherubim,* the

exalted above all the peoples.

name:
Holy is he!<sup>u</sup>

<sup>4</sup>O mighty king, lover of justice,
you have established fairness;
you have created just rule in Jacob.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Exalt the LORD, our God;
bow down before his footstool;<sup>*w</sup>
holy is he!

<sup>6</sup>Moses and Aaron were among his
priests,
Samuel among those who called on his

name;
they called on the LORD, and he answered them.<sup>x</sup> <sup>7</sup>From the pillar of cloud he spoke to them;
they kept his decrees, the law he had given them.<sup>y</sup> <sup>8</sup>O LORD, our God, you answered them;
you were a forgiving God to them,
though you punished their offenses.<sup>z</sup> <sup>9</sup>Exalt the LORD, our God;
bow down before his holy mountain;
holy is the LORD, our God.

Processional Hymn

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of thanksgiving.

Shout joyfully to the LORD, all you lands;
<sup>2</sup>serve the LORD with gladness;
come before him with joyful song.
<sup>3*</sup>Know that the LORD is God,
he made us, we belong to him,
we are his people, the flock he shepherds.<sup>a</sup> <sup>4</sup>Enter his gates with thanksgiving,
his courts with praise.
Give thanks to him, bless his name;<sup>b</sup>
<sup>5</sup>good indeed is the LORD,
His mercy endures forever,
his faithfulness lasts through every generation.

Norm of Life for Rulers

<sup>1</sup>A psalm of David.

I

I sing of mercy and justice;
to you, LORD, I sing praise.

when will you come to me?
I act with integrity of heart within my household.<sup>*d</sup>

<sup>3</sup>I do not allow into my presence anything base.
I hate wrongdoing;
I will have no part of it.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>4</sup>May the devious heart keep far from me;
the wicked I will not acknowledge.

I will reduce to silence.<sup>f</sup>

Haughty eyes and arrogant hearts<sup>g</sup>
I cannot endure.

<sup>6</sup>I look to the faithful of the land* to sit at my side.

Whoever follows the way of integrity<sup>h</sup>
is the one to enter my service.

<sup>7</sup>No one who practices deceit
can remain within my house.
No one who speaks falsely can last in my presence.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>8*</sup>Morning after morning I clear all the wicked from the land,
to rid the city of the LORD of all doers
of evil.

before the LORD.

<sup>2</sup>LORD, hear my prayer;
let my cry come to you.
<sup>3</sup>Do not hide your face from me in the day of my distress.<sup>j</sup> Turn your ear to me;
when I call, answer me quickly.
<sup>4</sup>For my days vanish like smoke;<sup>k</sup>
my bones burn away as in a furnace.
<sup>5</sup>My heart is withered, dried up like grass, too wasted to eat my food.
<sup>6</sup>From my loud groaning
I become just skin and bones.
<sup>7</sup>I am like a desert owl,
like an owl among the ruins.
<sup>8</sup>I lie awake and moan,
like a lone sparrow on the roof.
<sup>9</sup>All day long my enemies taunt me;
in their rage, they make my name a curse.* <sup>10</sup>I eat ashes like bread, mingle my drink with tears.<sup>l</sup> <sup>11</sup>Because of your furious wrath,
you lifted me up just to cast me down.
<sup>12m</sup>My days are like a lengthening shadow;<sup>n</sup>
I wither like the grass.

<sup>13</sup>But you, Lord, are enthroned forever;
your renown is for all generations.<sup>o</sup> <sup>14</sup>You will again show mercy to Zion;
now is the time for pity;
the appointed time has come.
<sup>15</sup>Its stones are dear to your servants;
its dust moves them to pity.

- <sup>16</sup>The nations shall fear your name, LORD,
all the kings of the earth, your glory,<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>17</sup>Once the LORD has rebuilt Zion
and appeared in glory,
- <sup>18</sup>Heeding the plea of the lowly,
not scorning their prayer.
- <sup>19</sup>Let this be written for the next
generation,
for a people not yet born,
that they may praise the LORD:<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>20*</sup>“The LORD looked down from the holy
heights,
viewed the earth from heaven,<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>21</sup>To attend to the groaning of the prisoners, to release those doomed to die.”<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>22</sup>Then the LORD’S name will be declared
on Zion,
his praise in Jerusalem,
- <sup>23</sup>When peoples and kingdoms gather to serve the LORD.<sup>t</sup>

III

- <sup>24</sup>He has shattered my strength in mid-course,
has cut short my days.
- <sup>25</sup>I plead, O my God,
do not take me in the midst of my days.<sup>*u</sup> Your years last through all generations.
- <sup>26</sup>Of old you laid the earth’s foundations;<sup>v</sup>
the heavens are the work of your
hands.
- <sup>27</sup>They perish, but you remain;
they all wear out like a garment;
Like clothing you change them and they are changed,
- <sup>28</sup>but you are the same, your years have no end.
- <sup>29</sup>May the children of your servants live on;

may their descendants live in your presence.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Of David.

I

Bless the LORD, my soul;
all my being, bless his holy name!

and do not forget all his gifts,

<sup>3</sup>Who pardons all your sins,
and heals all your ills,

and crowns you with mercy and compassion,

<sup>5</sup>Who fills your days with good things,
so your youth is renewed like the eagle's.*

II

<sup>6</sup>The LORD does righteous deeds, brings justice to all the oppressed.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>7</sup>He made known his ways to Moses,
to the Israelites his deeds.

<sup>8</sup>Merciful and gracious is the LORD, slow to anger, abounding in mercy.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>9</sup>He will not always accuse,
and nurses no lasting anger;

<sup>10</sup>He has not dealt with us as our sins merit,
nor requited us as our wrongs deserve.

III

<sup>11</sup>For as the heavens tower over the earth, so his mercy towers over those who fear him.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>12</sup>As far as the east is from the west,
so far has he removed our sins from us.

<sup>13</sup>As a father has compassion on his
children,
so the LORD has compassion on those
who fear him.

<sup>14</sup>For he knows how we are formed, remembers that we are dust.<sup>b</sup>

he blossoms like a flower in the field.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>16</sup>A wind sweeps over it and it is gone;
its place knows it no more.

<sup>17</sup>But the LORD's mercy is from age to age, toward those who fear him.

<sup>18</sup>of those who keep his covenant,
and remember to carry out his precepts.

<sup>19</sup>The LORD has set his throne in heaven;
his dominion extends over all.

<sup>20</sup>Bless the LORD, all you his angels,<sup>d</sup> mighty in strength, acting at his behest,
obedient to his command.

<sup>21</sup>Bless the LORD, all you his hosts, his ministers who carry out his will.

<sup>22</sup>Bless the LORD, all his creatures, everywhere in his domain.
Bless the LORD, my soul!

Praise of God the Creator

<sup>1</sup>Bless the LORD, my soul!
LORD, my God, you are great indeed!
You are clothed with majesty and
splendor,

<sup>2</sup>robed in light as with a cloak.
You spread out the heavens like a tent;<sup>e</sup> <sup>3</sup>setting the beams of your chambers upon the waters.*
You make the clouds your chariot;
traveling on the wings of the wind.
<sup>4</sup>You make the winds your messengers;
flaming fire, your ministers.<sup>f</sup>

II

<sup>5*</sup>You fixed the earth on its foundation,
so it can never be shaken.
<sup>6</sup>The deeps covered it like a garment;
above the mountains stood the waters.
<sup>7</sup>At your rebuke they took flight;
at the sound of your thunder they fled.<sup>g</sup> <sup>8</sup>They rushed up the mountains, down the valleys
to the place you had fixed for them.
<sup>9</sup>You set a limit they cannot pass;
never again will they cover the earth.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>10</sup>You made springs flow in wadies that wind among the mountains.
<sup>11</sup>They give drink to every beast of the field;<sup>i</sup>
here wild asses quench their thirst.
<sup>12</sup>Beside them the birds of heaven nest;
among the branches they sing.
<sup>13</sup>You water the mountains from your chambers;
from the fruit of your labor the earth
abounds.
<sup>14</sup>You make the grass grow for the cattle and plants for people's work
to bring forth food from the earth, <sup>15</sup>wine to gladden their hearts,
oil to make their faces shine,
and bread to sustain the human heart.

16* The trees of the LORD drink their fill,
the cedars of Lebanon, which you planted.

17 There the birds build their nests;
the stork in the junipers, its home.<sup>j</sup>

18 The high mountains are for wild goats;
the rocky cliffs, a refuge for badgers.

IV

19 You made the moon to mark the seasons,<sup>k</sup>
the sun that knows the hour of its setting.

20 You bring darkness and night falls, then all the animals of the forest wander about.

21 Young lions roar for prey;
they seek their food from God.<sup>l</sup>

22 When the sun rises, they steal away
and settle down in their dens.

23 People go out to their work,
to their labor till evening falls.

V

24 How varied are your works, LORD!
In wisdom you have made them all;
the earth is full of your creatures.<sup>m</sup>

25 There is the sea, great and wide!
It teems with countless beings,
living things both large and small.<sup>n</sup>

26 There ships ply their course and Leviathan,* whom you formed to play with.<sup>o</sup>

VI

27 All of these look to you to give them food in due time.<sup>p</sup>

28 When you give it to them, they gather;
when you open your hand, they are well filled.

29* When you hide your face, they panic.
Take away their breath, they perish

and return to the dust.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>30</sup>Send forth your spirit, they are created and you renew the face of the earth.

<sup>31</sup>May the glory of the LORD endure forever;
may the LORD be glad in his works!

<sup>32</sup>Who looks at the earth and it trembles,
touches the mountains and they smoke!<sup>r</sup>

<sup>33</sup>I will sing to the LORD all my life;
I will sing praise to my God while I live.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>34</sup>May my meditation be pleasing to him;
I will rejoice in the LORD.

<sup>35</sup>May sinners vanish from the earth,
and the wicked be no more.

Bless the LORD, my soul! Hallelujah!*

God's Fidelity to the Promise

<sup>1</sup>Give thanks to the LORD, invoke his name,<sup>t</sup>

I

make known among the peoples his

<sup>2</sup>Sing praise to him, play music;
proclaim all his wondrous deeds!

<sup>3</sup>Glory in his holy name;
let hearts that seek the LORD rejoice!

<sup>4</sup>Seek out the LORD and his might; constantly seek his face.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Recall the wondrous deeds he has done,
his wonders and words of judgment,

<sup>6</sup>You descendants of Abraham his
servant,
offspring of Jacob the chosen one!

II

<sup>7</sup>He the LORD, is our God whose judgments reach through all the
earth.

<sup>8</sup>He remembers forever his covenant, the word he commanded for a thousand generations,

<sup>9</sup>Which he made with Abraham, and swore to Isaac,<sup>w</sup>

<sup>10</sup>And ratified in a statute for Jacob,
an everlasting covenant for Israel:

<sup>11</sup>“To you I give the land of Canaan, your own allotted inheritance.”<sup>x</sup>

III

<sup>12</sup>When they were few in number,<sup>y</sup>
a handful, and strangers there,

from one kingdom to another people,

<sup>14</sup>He let no one oppress them;
for their sake he rebuked kings:*

to my prophets do no harm.”

IV

<sup>16</sup>Then he called down a famine on the
land,
destroyed the grain that sustained
them.<sup>*z</sup>

<sup>17</sup>He had sent a man ahead of them, Joseph, sold as a slave.<sup>a</sup>

collared his neck in iron,<sup>b</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Till his prediction came to pass,
and the word of the LORD proved him
true.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>20</sup>The king sent and released him;
the ruler of peoples set him free.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>21</sup>He made him lord over his household,

- ruler over all his possessions,<sup>e</sup>
- 22 To instruct his princes as he desired,
to teach his elders wisdom.
- 23 Then Israel entered Egypt;<sup>f</sup>
Jacob sojourned in the land of Ham.*
- 24 God greatly increased his people, made them more numerous than their foes.<sup>g</sup>
- 25 He turned their hearts to hate his people,
to treat his servants deceitfully.<sup>h</sup>
- 26 He sent his servant Moses,
and Aaron whom he had chosen.<sup>i</sup>
- 27* They worked his signs in Egypt<sup>j</sup>
and wonders in the land of Ham.
- 28 He sent darkness and it grew dark,
but they rebelled against his word.
- 29 He turned their waters into blood and killed their fish.
- 30 Their land swarmed with frogs,
even the chambers of their kings.
- 31 He spoke and there came swarms of flies,
gnats through all their country.
- 32 For rain he gave them hail, flashes of lightning throughout their
land.
- 33 He struck down their vines and fig trees,
shattered the trees of their country.
- 34 He spoke and the locusts came,
grasshoppers without number.<sup>k</sup>
- 35 They devoured every plant in the land;
they devoured the crops of their fields.
- 36 He struck down every firstborn in the
land,
the first fruits of all their vigor.
- 37 He brought his people out, laden with silver and gold;<sup>l</sup>
no one among the tribes stumbled.

for fear had seized them.

<sup>39</sup>He spread a cloud out as a cover, and made a fire to light up the night.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>40</sup>They asked and he brought them quail;
with bread from heaven he filled
them.<sup>n</sup>

it flowed through the desert like a river.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>42</sup>For he remembered his sacred promise to Abraham his servant.

his chosen ones with shouts of triumph.

<sup>44</sup>He gave them the lands of the nations, they took possession of the wealth of the peoples,<sup>p</sup>

<sup>45</sup>That they might keep his statutes and observe his teachings.<sup>q</sup>
Hallelujah!

Israel's Confession of Sin

A

Give thanks to the LORD, who is good, whose mercy endures forever.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Who can recount the mighty deeds of the
LORD,
proclaim in full God's praise?

whose deeds are always just.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Remember me, LORD, as you favor your

people;
come to me with your saving help,<sup>t</sup> 5 That I may see the prosperity of your chosen ones,
rejoice in the joy of your people,
and glory with your heritage.

B

6 We have sinned like our ancestors;<sup>u</sup>
we have done wrong and are guilty.

I

7 Our ancestors in Egypt
did not attend to your wonders.
They did not remember your manifold
mercy;
they defied the Most High at the Red Sea.

8 Yet he saved them for his name's sake to make his power known.<sup>v</sup>

9 He roared at the Red Sea and it dried up.
He led them through the deep as through a desert.<sup>w</sup>

10 He rescued them from hostile hands, freed them from the power of the enemy.

11 The waters covered their oppressors;
not one of them survived.

12 Then they believed his words and sang his praise.<sup>x</sup>

II

13 But they soon forgot all he had done;
they had no patience for his plan.

14 In the desert they gave in to their cravings, tempted God in the wasteland.<sup>y</sup>

15 So he gave them what they asked and sent a wasting disease against them.<sup>z</sup>

III

16 In the camp they challenged Moses<sup>a</sup>
and Aaron, the holy one of the LORD.

17 The earth opened and swallowed Dathan,

it closed on the followers of Abiram.

flames consumed the wicked.

<sup>19</sup>At Horeb they fashioned a calf,<sup>b</sup>
worshiped a metal statue.

<sup>20</sup>They exchanged their glory*
for the image of a grass-eating bull.

who had done great deeds in Egypt,<sup>c</sup>

fearsome deeds at the Red Sea.

<sup>23</sup>He would have decreed their destruction,
had not Moses, his chosen one,

Withstood him in the breach*
to turn back his destroying anger.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Next they despised the beautiful land;<sup>e</sup>
they did not believe the promise.

they did not heed the voice of the
LORD.

<sup>26</sup>So with raised hand he swore
he would destroy them in the desert,

<sup>27</sup>And scatter their descendants among the
nations,
disperse them in foreign lands.

<sup>28</sup>They joined in the rites of Baal of Peor,<sup>f</sup> ate food sacrificed to the dead.

<sup>29</sup>They provoked him by their actions,
and a plague broke out among them.

<sup>30</sup>Then Phinehas rose to intervene,
and the plague was brought to a halt.

<sup>31</sup>This was counted for him as a righteous deed
for all generations to come.

<sup>32</sup>At the waters of Meribah they angered God,<sup>g</sup>

and Moses suffered because of them.*

33 They so embittered his spirit that rash words crossed his lips.

VIII

34 They did not destroy the peoples
as the LORD had commanded them,<sup>h</sup>

35 But mingled with the nations and imitated their ways.<sup>i</sup>

36 They served their idols and were ensnared by them.<sup>j</sup>

37 They sacrificed to demons*
their own sons and daughters,

38 Shedding innocent blood,
the blood of their own sons and daughters,

Whom they sacrificed to the idols of Canaan,
desecrating the land with bloodshed.

39 They defiled themselves by their actions,
became adulterers by their conduct.

40 So the LORD grew angry with his people, abhorred his own heritage.

41 He handed them over to the nations,
and their adversaries ruled over them.<sup>k</sup>

42 Their enemies oppressed them, kept them under subjection.

43 Many times did he rescue them,
but they kept rebelling and scheming
and were brought low by their own guilt.<sup>l</sup>

44 Still God had regard for their affliction
when he heard their wailing.

45 For their sake he remembered his covenant and relented in his abundant mercy,<sup>m</sup>

46 Winning for them compassion from all who held them captive.

C

47 Save us, LORD, our God;

gather us from among the nations
That we may give thanks to your holy name

and glory in praising you.<sup>n</sup>

48* Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel,
from everlasting to everlasting!

Let all the people say, Amen!<sup>o</sup>
Hallelujah!

God the Savior of Those in Distress

1“Give thanks to the LORD for he is good, his mercy endures forever!”<sup>p</sup>

2Let that be the prayer of the LORD’s redeemed,
those redeemed from the hand of the foe,<sup>q</sup>

3Those gathered from foreign lands,
from east and west, from north and south.<sup>r</sup>

I

4Some had lost their way in a barren desert;
found no path toward a city to live in.

5They were hungry and thirsty;
their life was ebbing away.<sup>s</sup>

6In their distress they cried to the LORD,
who rescued them in their peril,

7<sup>t</sup>Guided them by a direct path so they reached a city to live in.<sup>u</sup>

8Let them thank the LORD for his mercy,
such wondrous deeds for the children

of Adam.

<sup>9</sup>For he satisfied the thirsty,
filled the hungry with good things.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Some lived in darkness and gloom, imprisoned in misery and chains.

and scorned the counsel of the Most High,<sup>w</sup>

<sup>12</sup>He humbled their hearts through hardship;
they stumbled with no one to help.<sup>x</sup>

who saved them in their peril;

<sup>14</sup>He brought them forth from darkness and the shadow of death
and broke their chains asunder.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Let them thank the LORD for his mercy,
such wondrous deeds for the children
of Adam.

<sup>16</sup>For he broke down the gates of bronze and snapped the bars of iron.

<sup>17</sup>Some fell sick from their wicked ways, afflicted because of their sins.

<sup>18</sup>They loathed all manner of food;<sup>z</sup>
they were at the gates of death.

who saved them in their peril,

<sup>20</sup>Sent forth his word to heal them,<sup>a</sup>
and snatched them from the grave.

<sup>21</sup>Let them thank the LORD for his mercy,
such wondrous deeds for the children
of Adam.

<sup>22</sup>Let them offer a sacrifice in thanks, recount his works with shouts of joy.

<sup>23</sup>Some went off to sea in ships, plied their trade on the deep waters.<sup>b</sup>

24 They saw the works of the LORD,
the wonders of God in the deep.
25 He commanded and roused a storm wind;
it tossed the waves on high.<sup>c</sup> 26 They rose up to the heavens, sank to the depths;
their hearts trembled at the danger.
27 They reeled, staggered like drunkards;
their skill was of no avail.<sup>d</sup>
28 In their distress they cried to the LORD,
who brought them out of their peril;
29 He hushed the storm to silence,
the waves of the sea were stilled.<sup>e</sup> 30 They rejoiced that the sea grew calm, that God brought them to the harbor
they longed for.
31 Let them thank the LORD for his mercy,
such wondrous deeds for the children
of Adam.
32 Let them extol him in the assembly of the
people,
and praise him in the council of the elders.

V

33* God changed rivers into desert, springs of water into thirsty ground,<sup>f</sup> 34 Fruitful land into a salty waste, because of the wickedness of its people.<sup>g</sup> 35 He changed the desert into pools of water, arid land into springs of water,<sup>h</sup> 36 And settled the hungry there;
they built a city to live in.<sup>i</sup> 37 They sowed fields and planted vineyards, brought in an abundant harvest.<sup>j</sup> 38<sup>k</sup> God blessed them, and they increased greatly,

and their livestock did not decrease.<sup>l</sup> 39 But he poured out contempt on princes,
made them wander trackless wastes, 40 Where they were diminished and brought low
through misery and cruel oppression.
41 While he released the poor man from affliction,
and increased their families like flocks.<sup>m</sup> 42 The upright saw this and rejoiced;<sup>n</sup>
all wickedness shut its mouth.
43 Whoever is wise will take note of these things,<sup>o</sup>
and ponder the merciful deeds of the
LORD.

Prayer for Victory

<sup>2</sup>My heart is steadfast, God;<sup>p</sup>
my heart is steadfast.
Let me sing and chant praise.
<sup>3</sup>Awake, lyre and harp!
I will wake the dawn.<sup>q</sup>
<sup>4</sup>I will praise you among the peoples,
LORD;
I will chant your praise among the nations.<sup>r</sup> <sup>5</sup>For your mercy is greater than the
heavens;
your faithfulness, to the skies.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Appear on high over the heavens, God;

your glory above all the earth.

<sup>7</sup>Help with your right hand and answer us that your loved ones may escape.

<sup>8</sup>God speaks in his holiness: <sup>*t</sup>
“I will exult, I will apportion Shechem;
the valley of Succoth I will measure
out.

Ephraim is the helmet for my head,
Judah, my scepter.

<sup>10</sup>Moab is my washbowl;
upon Edom I cast my sandal; <sup>u</sup>
I will shout in triumph over Philistia.”

<sup>11</sup>Who will bring me to the fortified city?
Who will lead me into Edom?

<sup>12</sup>Was it not you who rejected us, God?
Do you no longer march with our armies? <sup>v</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Give us aid against the foe;
worthless is human help.

<sup>14</sup>We will triumph with the help of God,
who will trample down our foes.

Prayer of a Person Falsely Accused

<sup>2</sup>O God, whom I praise, do not be silent, <sup>w</sup>
for wicked and treacherous mouths attack me.

They speak against me with lying
tongues;

<sup>3</sup>with hateful words they surround me, attacking me without cause.

<sup>4</sup>In return for my love they slander me,
even though I prayed for them.

<sup>5</sup>They repay me evil for good, hatred for my love.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Appoint an evil one over him,
an accuser* to stand at his right hand,

<sup>7</sup>That he may be judged and found guilty,
that his plea may be in vain.

<sup>8</sup>May his days be few;
may another take his office.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>9</sup>May his children be fatherless, his wife, a widow.<sup>z</sup>

driven from their hovels.

<sup>11</sup>May the usurer snare all he owns,
strangers plunder all he earns.

<sup>12</sup>May no one treat him with mercy
or pity his fatherless children.

<sup>13</sup>May his posterity be destroyed,<sup>a</sup> their name rooted out in the next generation.

<sup>14</sup>May his fathers' guilt be mentioned to
the LORD;
his mother's sin not rooted out.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>15</sup>May their guilt be always before the LORD,<sup>c</sup>
till their memory is banished from the earth,<sup>d</sup>

<sup>16</sup>For he did not remember to show mercy,
but hounded the wretched poor
and brought death to the brokenhearted.

<sup>17</sup>He loved cursing; may it come upon him;
he hated blessing; may none come to
him.

<sup>18</sup>May cursing clothe him like a robe;
may it enter his belly like water,
his bones like oil.

19 May it be near as the clothes he wears,
as the belt always around him.

20* May this be the reward for my accusers
from the LORD,
for those speaking evil against me.

III

21 But you, LORD, are my LORD, deal kindly with me for your name's sake;
in your great mercy rescue me.

22 For I am poor and needy;
my heart is pierced within me.

23 Like a lengthening shadow I am gone,
I am shaken off like the locust.

24 My knees totter from fasting;<sup>e</sup>
my flesh has wasted away.

25 I have become a mockery to them;
when they see me, they shake their heads.

26 Help me, LORD, my God;
save me in your mercy.

27 Make them know this is your hand,
that you, LORD, have done this.

28 Though they curse, may you bless;
arise, shame them, that your servant
may rejoice.

29 Clothe my accusers with disgrace;
make them wear their shame like a mantle.

30 I will give fervent thanks to the LORD;
before a crowd I will praise him.<sup>f</sup>

31 For he stands at the right hand of the poor
to save him from those who pass judgment on him.

God Appoints the King both King and Priest

The LORD says to my lord:*

“Sit at my right hand, while I make your enemies your footstool.”*<sup>g</sup>

the LORD extends your strong scepter
from Zion.

Have dominion over your enemies!

<sup>3</sup>Yours is princely power from the day of your birth.

In holy splendor before the daystar,
like dew I begot you.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>4</sup>The LORD has sworn and will not waver:
“You are a priest forever in the manner of Melchizedek.”*<sup>i</sup>

who crushes kings on the day of his wrath,<sup>j</sup>

crushes heads across the wide earth,

<sup>7</sup>*Who drinks from the brook by the wayside
and thus holds high his head.<sup>k</sup>

Praise of God for Goodness to Israel

<sup>1</sup>Hallelujah!

I will praise the LORD with all my heart<sup>l</sup> in the assembled congregation of the upright.*

<sup>2</sup>Great are the works of the LORD,

studied by all who delight in them.
<sup>3</sup> Majestic and glorious is his work,
his righteousness endures forever.
<sup>4</sup> He won renown for his wondrous deeds;
gracious and merciful is the LORD.<sup>m</sup> <sup>5</sup> He gives food to those who fear him,*
he remembers his covenant forever.
<sup>6</sup> He showed his powerful deeds to his
people,
giving them the inheritance of the
nations.
<sup>7</sup> The works of his hands are true and
just,
reliable all his decrees,
<sup>8</sup> Established forever and ever,
to be observed with truth and equity.
<sup>9</sup> He sent release to his people, decreed his covenant forever;
holy and fearsome is his name.
<sup>10*</sup> The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom;<sup>n</sup>
prudent are all who practice it.
His praise endures forever.

The Blessings of the Just

Blessed the man who fears the LORD, who greatly delights in his commands.<sup>o</sup> <sup>2</sup> His descendants shall be mighty in the
land,
a generation of the upright will be blessed.
<sup>3</sup> Wealth and riches shall be in his house;
his righteousness* shall endure forever.

upright;<sup>P</sup> gracious, compassionate, and righteous.

<sup>5</sup>It is good for the man gracious in lending,
who conducts his affairs with justice.

<sup>6</sup>For he shall never be shaken;
the righteous shall be remembered
forever.<sup>Q</sup>

<sup>7</sup>He shall not fear an ill report;
his heart is steadfast, trusting the
LORD.

<sup>8</sup>His heart is tranquil, without fear,
till at last he looks down on his foes.

<sup>9</sup>Lavishly he gives to the poor;
his righteousness shall endure forever;<sup>R</sup>
his horn* shall be exalted in honor.

<sup>10</sup>The wicked sees and is angry;
gnashes his teeth and wastes away;
the desire of the wicked come to
nothing.

Praise of God's Care for the Poor

<sup>1</sup>Hallelujah!

I

Praise, you servants of the LORD,
praise the name of the LORD.<sup>S</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Blessed be the name of the LORD
both now and forever.

<sup>3</sup>From the rising of the sun to its setting<sup>t</sup>
let the name of the LORD be praised.

<sup>4</sup>High above all nations is the LORD;

above the heavens his glory.<sup>u</sup> 5 Who is like the LORD our God,
enthroned on high,
6<sup>v</sup> looking down on heaven and earth?
7 He raises the needy from the dust, lifts the poor from the ash heap,<sup>w</sup> 8 Seats them with princes,
the princes of the people, 9 Gives the childless wife a home,
the joyful mother of children.<sup>x</sup>
Hallelujah!

The Lord's Wonders at the Exodus

1 When Israel came forth from Egypt,
the house of Jacob from an alien people,
2 Judah became God's sanctuary, Israel, God's domain.<sup>y</sup> 3* The sea saw and fled;
the Jordan turned back.<sup>z</sup> 4 The mountains skipped like rams;
the hills, like lambs.<sup>a</sup>
5 Why was it, sea, that you fled?
Jordan, that you turned back?
6 Mountains, that you skipped like rams?
You hills, like lambs?
7 Tremble, earth, before the Lord,<sup>b</sup>
before the God of Jacob, 8* Who turned the rock into pools of water, flint into a flowing spring.<sup>c</sup>

The Greatness of the True God

I

<sup>1</sup>Not to us, LORD, not to us but to your name give glory because of your mercy and faithfulness.<sup>d</sup>

“Where is their God?”<sup>*e</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Our God is in heaven and does whatever he wills.<sup>f</sup>

II

<sup>4</sup>Their idols are silver and gold,<sup>g</sup>
the work of human hands.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>5</sup>They have mouths but do not speak,
eyes but do not see.

<sup>6</sup>They have ears but do not hear,
noses but do not smell.

<sup>7</sup>They have hands but do not feel,
feet but do not walk;
they produce no sound from their throats.

<sup>8</sup>Their makers will be like them,
and anyone who trusts in them.

III

<sup>9*</sup>The house of Israel trusts in the LORD,<sup>i</sup> who is their help and shield.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>10</sup>The house of Aaron trusts in the LORD,
who is their help and shield.

<sup>11</sup>Those who fear the LORD trust in the LORD,
who is their help and shield.

<sup>12</sup>The LORD remembers us and will bless us, will bless the house of Israel,
will bless the house of Aaron,

<sup>13</sup>Will bless those who fear the LORD,
small and great alike.

<sup>14</sup>May the LORD increase your number,
yours and your descendants.

- 15 May you be blessed by the LORD,
maker of heaven and earth.
- 16* The heavens belong to the LORD, but he has given the earth to the children of Adam.<sup>k</sup>
- 17* The dead do not praise the LORD,
not all those go down into silence.<sup>l</sup>
- 18 It is we who bless the LORD,
both now and forever.
Hallelujah!

Thanksgiving to God Who Saves from Death

I

- 1 I love the LORD, who listened to my voice in supplication,
- 2 Who turned an ear to me
on the day I called.
- 3 I was caught by the cords of death; <sup>*m</sup>
the snares of Sheol had seized me;
I felt agony and dread.
- 4 Then I called on the name of the LORD,
“O LORD, save my life!”

II

- 5 Gracious is the LORD and righteous;
yes, our God is merciful.<sup>n</sup>
- 6 The LORD protects the simple;
I was helpless, but he saved me.
- 7 Return, my soul, to your rest;
the LORD has been very good to you.<sup>o</sup>
- 8 For my soul has been freed from death,
my eyes from tears, my feet from stumbling.<sup>p</sup>
- 9 I shall walk before the LORD

in the land of the living.<sup>*q</sup>

III

10* I kept faith, even when I said,

“I am greatly afflicted!”<sup>r</sup>

11 I said in my alarm,

“All men are liars!”<sup>s</sup>

12 How can I repay the LORD
for all the great good done for me?

13 I will raise the cup of salvation*
and call on the name of the LORD.

14 I will pay my vows to the LORD
in the presence of all his people.

15* Dear in the eyes of the LORD is the death of his devoted.<sup>t</sup>

16 LORD, I am your servant, your servant, the child of your maidservant;<sup>u</sup>
you have loosed my bonds.

17 I will offer a sacrifice of praise and call on the name of the LORD.<sup>v</sup>

18 I will pay my vows to the LORD<sup>w</sup>
in the presence of all his people,

19 In the courts of the house of the LORD,
in your midst, O Jerusalem.
Hallelujah!

Hymn of Thanksgiving

I

<sup>1</sup>Give thanks to the LORD, for he is good,<sup>y</sup>
his mercy endures forever.

<sup>3</sup>Let the house of Aaron say,
his mercy endures forever.

<sup>4</sup>Let those who fear the LORD say,<sup>z</sup>
his mercy endures forever.

II

<sup>5</sup>In danger I called on the LORD;
the LORD answered me and set me
free.

<sup>6</sup>The LORD is with me; I am not afraid;
what can mortals do against me?<sup>a</sup>

<sup>7</sup>The LORD is with me as my helper;
I shall look in triumph on my foes.

<sup>8</sup>Better to take refuge in the LORD<sup>b</sup>
than to put one's trust in mortals.

<sup>9</sup>Better to take refuge in the LORD
than to put one's trust in princes.

III

<sup>10</sup>All the nations surrounded me;
in the LORD's name I cut them off.

<sup>11</sup>They surrounded me on every side;
in the LORD's name I cut them off.

<sup>12</sup>They surrounded me like bees;<sup>c</sup>
they burned up like fire among thorns;
in the LORD's name I cut them off.

<sup>13</sup>I was hard pressed and falling,
but the LORD came to my help.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>14</sup>The LORD, my strength and might, has become my savior.<sup>e</sup>

- <sup>15</sup>The joyful shout of deliverance
is heard in the tents of the righteous:
“The LORD’s right hand works valiantly;
<sup>16</sup>the LORD’s right hand is raised;
the LORD’s right hand works
valiantly.”
<sup>17</sup>I shall not die but live and declare the deeds of the LORD.
<sup>18</sup>The LORD chastised me harshly,
but did not hand me over to death.

- <sup>19</sup>Open the gates of righteousness;
I will enter and thank the LORD.<sup>f</sup> <sup>20</sup>This is the LORD’s own gate,
through it the righteous enter.
<sup>21</sup>I thank you for you answered me;
you have been my savior.
<sup>22*</sup>The stone the builders rejected has become the cornerstone.<sup>g</sup> <sup>23</sup>By the LORD has this been done;
it is wonderful in our eyes.
<sup>24</sup>This is the day the LORD has made;
let us rejoice in it and be glad.
<sup>25</sup>LORD, grant salvation!*
LORD, grant good fortune!

- <sup>26</sup>Blessed is he who comes in the name of the LORD.<sup>h</sup>
We bless you from the house of the LORD.
<sup>27</sup>The LORD is God and has enlightened us.
Join in procession with leafy branches
up to the horns of the altar.

VII

- <sup>28</sup>You are my God, I give you thanks;
my God, I offer you praise.
<sup>29</sup>Give thanks to the LORD, for he is good,
his mercy endures forever.

A Prayer to God, the Lawgiver

<sup>1</sup>Blessed those whose way is blameless, who walk by the law of the LORD.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Blessed those who keep his
testimonies,
who seek him with all their heart.<sup>j</sup>

they walk in his ways.

<sup>4</sup>You have given them the command to observe your precepts with care.

<sup>5</sup>May my ways be firm
in the observance of your statutes!

<sup>6</sup>Then I will not be ashamed to ponder all your commandments.

<sup>7</sup>I will praise you with sincere heart
as I study your righteous judgments.

<sup>8</sup>I will observe your statutes;
do not leave me all alone.

<sup>9</sup>How can the young keep his way without fault?
Only by observing your words.

<sup>10</sup>With all my heart I seek you;
do not let me stray from your
commandments.

<sup>11</sup>In my heart I treasure your promise, that I may not sin against you.

<sup>12</sup>Blessed are you, O LORD; teach me your statutes.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>13</sup>With my lips I recite
all the judgments you have spoken.

<sup>14</sup>I find joy in the way of your testimonies more than in all riches.

15 I will ponder your precepts and consider your paths.

16 In your statutes I take delight;
I will never forget your word.

GIMEL

17 Be kind to your servant that I may live,
that I may keep your word.

18 Open my eyes to see clearly the wonders of your law.

19 I am a sojourner in the land; <sup>**l*</sup> do not hide your commandments from
me.

20 At all times my soul is stirred with longing for your judgments.

21 With a curse you rebuke the proud who stray from your commandments.

22 Free me from disgrace and contempt,
for I keep your testimonies.

23 Though princes meet and talk against me, your servant meditates on your statutes.

24 Your testimonies are my delight;
they are my counselors.

DALETH

25 My soul clings to the dust; <sup>m</sup>
give me life in accord with your word.

26 I disclosed my ways and you answered me;
teach me your statutes.

27 Make me understand the way of your
precepts;
I will ponder your wondrous deeds.

28 My soul is depressed;
lift me up according to your word.

29 Lead me from the way of deceit;
favor me with your law.

30 The way of loyalty I have chosen;
I have kept your judgments.

31 I cling to your testimonies, LORD;
do not let me come to shame.

32 I will run the way of your commandments,
for you will broaden my heart.

HE

33 LORD, teach me the way of your statutes;
I shall keep them with care.<sup>n</sup>

34 Give me understanding to keep your law,
to observe it with all my heart.

35 Lead me in the path of your commandments,<sup>o</sup>
for that is my delight.

36 Direct my heart toward your testimonies and away from gain.

37 Avert my eyes from what is worthless;
by your way give me life.

38 For your servant, fulfill your promise made to those who fear you.

39 Turn away from me the taunts I dread,
for your judgments are good.

40 See how I long for your precepts;
in your righteousness give me life.

WAW

41 Let your mercy come to me, LORD, salvation in accord with your promise.

42 Let me answer my taunters with a word,
for I trust in your word.

43 Do not take the word of truth from my
mouth,
for in your judgments is my hope.

44 I will keep your law always,
for all time and forever.

45 I will walk freely in an open space
because I cherish your precepts.

46 I will speak openly of your testimonies without fear even before kings.

47 I delight in your commandments,
which I dearly love.

48* I lift up my hands to your
commandments;
I study your statutes, which I love.

ZAYIN

49 Remember your word to your servant
by which you give me hope.

50 This is my comfort in affliction,
your promise that gives me life.

51 Though the arrogant utterly scorn me,
I do not turn from your law.

52 When I recite your judgments of old
I am comforted, LORD.

53 Rage seizes me because of the wicked;
they forsake your law.

54 Your statutes become my songs
wherever I make my home.

55 Even at night I remember your name in observance of your law, LORD.

56 This is my good fortune,
for I have kept your precepts.

HETH

57 My portion is the LORD;
I promise to observe your words.

58 I entreat you with all my heart:
have mercy on me in accord with your promise.

59 I have examined my ways and turned my steps to your testimonies.

60 I am prompt, I do not hesitate
in observing your commandments.

61 Though the snares of the wicked surround me,
your law I do not forget.

62 At midnight I rise to praise you because of your righteous judgments.

63 I am the friend of all who fear you,
of all who observe your precepts.

64 The earth, LORD, is filled with your mercy;<sup>P</sup>
teach me your statutes.

TETH

- 65 You have treated your servant well,
according to your word, O LORD.
- 66 Teach me wisdom and knowledge,
for in your commandments I trust.
- 67 Before I was afflicted I went astray,
but now I hold to your promise.
- 68 You are good and do what is good;
teach me your statutes.
- 69 The arrogant smear me with lies,
but I keep your precepts with all my heart.
- 70 Their hearts are gross and fat;<sup>q</sup>
as for me, your law is my delight.
- 71 It was good for me to be afflicted,
in order to learn your statutes.
- 72 The law of your mouth is more precious
to me
than heaps of silver and gold.
- YODH
- 73 Your hands made me and fashioned me;
give me understanding to learn your
commandments.
- 74 Those who fear you rejoice to see me,
because I hope in your word.
- 75 I know, LORD, that your judgments are
righteous;
though you afflict me, you are faithful.
- 76 May your mercy comfort me in accord with your promise to your
servant.
- 77 Show me compassion that I may live,
for your law is my delight.
- 78 Shame the proud for leading me astray
with falsehood,
that I may study your testimonies.
- 79 Let those who fear you turn to me,
those who acknowledge your
testimonies.
- 80 May I be wholehearted toward your
statutes,

that I may not be put to shame.

KAPH

81 My soul longs for your salvation;

I put my hope in your word.<sup>r</sup>

82 My eyes long to see your promise.<sup>s</sup>

When will you comfort me?

83 I am like a wineskin shriveled by smoke,<sup>t</sup>
but I have not forgotten your statutes.

84 How long can your servant survive?
When will your judgment doom my
foes?

85 The arrogant have dug pits for me;
defying your law.

86 All your commandments are steadfast.
Help me! I am pursued without cause.

87 They have almost put an end to me on
earth,
but I do not forsake your precepts.

88 In your mercy give me life,
to observe the testimonies of your mouth.

LAMEDH

89* Your word, LORD, stands forever;<sup>u</sup>
it is firm as the heavens.

90 Through all generations your truth
endures;
fixed to stand firm like the earth.

91 By your judgments they stand firm to
this day,
for all things are your servants.

92 Had your law not been my delight,
I would have perished in my affliction.

93 I will never forget your precepts;
through them you give me life.

94 I am yours; save me,
for I cherish your precepts.

95 The wicked hope to destroy me, but I seek to understand your
testimonies.

96 I have seen the limits of all perfection,

but your commandment is without bounds.

MEM

97 How I love your law, LORD!*

I study it all day long.

98 Your commandment makes me wiser than my foes,
as it is forever with me.

99 I have more insight than all my teachers,
because I ponder your testimonies.

100 I have more understanding than my
elders,

because I keep your precepts.<sup>v</sup>

101 I keep my steps from every evil path,
that I may observe your word.

102 From your judgments I do not turn,
for you have instructed me.

103 How sweet to my tongue is your promise, sweeter than honey to my mouth!<sup>w</sup>

104 Through your precepts I gain
understanding;
therefore I hate all false ways.

NUN

105 Your word is a lamp for my feet, a light for my path.<sup>x</sup>

106 I make a solemn vow
to observe your righteous judgments.

107 I am very much afflicted, LORD;
give me life in accord with your word.

108 Accept my freely offered praise;<sup>y</sup>
LORD, teach me your judgments.

109 My life is always at risk,
but I do not forget your law.

110 The wicked have set snares for me,
but from your precepts I do not stray.

111 Your testimonies are my heritage forever;
they are the joy of my heart.

112 My heart is set on fulfilling your statutes;
they are my reward forever.

SAMEKH

113 I hate every hypocrite;
your law I love.

114 You are my refuge and shield;
in your word I hope.

115 Depart from me, you wicked,<sup>z</sup> that I may keep the commandments of my God.

116 Sustain me by your promise that I may live;
do not disappoint me in my hope.

117 Strengthen me that I may be safe,
ever to contemplate your statutes.

118 You reject all who stray from your statutes,
for vain is their deceit.

119 Like dross you regard all the wicked on
earth;
therefore I love your testimonies.

120 My flesh shudders with dread of you;
I fear your judgments.

AYIN

121 I have fulfilled your righteous judgment;
do not abandon me to my oppressors.

122 Guarantee your servant's welfare;
do not let the arrogant oppress me.

123 My eyes long to see your salvation and the promise of your righteousness.

124 Act with mercy toward your servant;
teach me your statutes.

125 I am your servant; give me discernment that I may know your testimonies.

126 It is time for the LORD to act;
they have disobeyed your law.

127 Truly I love your commandments more than gold, more than the finest
gold.

128 Thus, I follow all your precepts;
every wrong way I hate.

PE

129 Wonderful are your testimonies;

therefore I keep them.

130 The revelation of your words sheds
light,
gives understanding to the simple.

131 I sigh with open mouth,
yearning for your commandments.

132 Turn to me and be gracious,<sup>a</sup> according to your judgment for those who love your name.

133 Steady my feet in accord with your
promise;
do not let iniquity lead me.

134 Free me from human oppression,
that I may observe your precepts.

135 Let your face shine upon your servant;
teach me your statutes.

136 My eyes shed streams of tears
because your law is not observed.

SADHE

137 You are righteous, LORD, and just are your judgments.<sup>b</sup>

138 You have given your testimonies in righteousness
and in surpassing faithfulness.

139 I am consumed with rage,
because my foes forget your words.

140 Your servant loves your promise;
it has been proved by fire.

141 Though belittled and despised,
I do not forget your precepts.

142 Your justice is forever right,
your law true.

143 Though distress and anguish come
upon me,
your commandments are my delight.

144 Your testimonies are forever righteous;
give me understanding that I may live.

QOPH

145 I call with all my heart, O LORD;
answer me that I may keep your

statutes.

146 I call to you to save me that I may observe your testimonies.

147 I rise before dawn and cry out;
I put my hope in your words.

148 My eyes greet the night watches
as I meditate on your promise.<sup>c</sup>

149 Hear my voice in your mercy, O LORD;
by your judgment give me life.

150 Malicious persecutors draw near me;
they are far from your law.

151 You are near, O LORD;
reliable are all your commandments.

152 Long have I known from your testimonies that you have established them forever.

RESH

153 Look at my affliction and rescue me,
for I have not forgotten your law.

154 Take up my cause and redeem me;<sup>d</sup> for the sake of your promise give me
life.

155 Salvation is far from sinners because they do not cherish your
statutes.

156 Your compassion is great, O LORD;
in accord with your judgments, give me life.

157 Though my persecutors and foes are many,
I do not turn from your testimonies.

158 I view the faithless with loathing<sup>e</sup> because they do not heed your
promise.

159 See how I love your precepts, LORD;
in your mercy give me life.

160 Your every word is enduring;
all your righteous judgments are
forever.

SHIN

161 Princes persecute me without reason,
but my heart reveres only your word.

162 I rejoice at your promise,
 as one who has found rich spoil.
 163 Falsehood I hate and abhor;
 your law I love.
 164 Seven times a day I praise you because your judgments are righteous.
 165 Lovers of your law have much peace;<sup>f</sup>
 for them there is no stumbling block.
 166 I look for your salvation, LORD,
 and I fulfill your commandments.
 167 I observe your testimonies;
 I love them very much.
 168 I observe your precepts and testimonies;
 all my ways are before you.
 TAW
 169 Let my cry come before you, LORD;<sup>g</sup> in keeping with your word, give me
 understanding.
 170 Let my prayer come before you;
 rescue me according to your promise.
 171 May my lips pour forth your praise,
 because you teach me your statutes.
 172 May my tongue sing of your promise, for all your commandments are
 righteous.
 173 Keep your hand ready to help me,
 for I have chosen your precepts.
 174 I long for your salvation, LORD;
 your law is my delight.
 175 Let my soul live to praise you;
 may your judgments give me help.
 176 I have wandered like a lost sheep;
 seek out your servant,
 for I do not forget your commandments.<sup>h</sup>

Prayer of a Returned Exile

The LORD answered me

when I called in my distress:<sup>i</sup>

<sup>2</sup>LORD, deliver my soul from lying lips, from a treacherous tongue.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>3</sup>What will he inflict on you,
O treacherous tongue,
and what more besides?*

<sup>4</sup>A warrior's arrows
sharpened with coals of brush wood!<sup>*k</sup>

<sup>5*</sup>Alas, I am a foreigner in Meshech,
I live among the tents of Kedar!

<sup>6</sup>Too long do I live
among those who hate peace.

<sup>7</sup>When I speak of peace, they are for war.<sup>l</sup>

The Lord My Guardian

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents.

I raise my eyes toward the mountains.*

From whence shall come my help?<sup>m</sup>

<sup>2</sup>My help comes from the LORD,
the maker of heaven and earth.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>3</sup>He will not allow your foot to slip;<sup>o</sup>
or your guardian to sleep.

<sup>4</sup>Behold, the guardian of Israel
never slumbers nor sleeps.

<sup>5*</sup>The LORD is your guardian;

the LORD is your shade
at your right hand.<sup>p</sup> 6 By day the sun will not strike you, nor the moon by night.<sup>q</sup> 7 The LORD will guard you from all evil;
he will guard your soul.<sup>r</sup> 8 The LORD will guard your coming and going
both now and forever.<sup>s</sup>

A Pilgrim's Prayer for Jerusalem

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents. Of David.

I

I rejoiced when they said to me,
“Let us go to the house of the LORD.”<sup>t</sup>
2 And now our feet are standing within your gates, Jerusalem.
3 Jerusalem, built as a city, walled round about.<sup>*u</sup> 4 There the tribes go up,
the tribes of the LORD,
As it was decreed for Israel,
to give thanks to the name of the LORD.<sup>v</sup>
5 There are the thrones of justice,
the thrones of the house of David.

II

6 For the peace of Jerusalem pray:
“May those who love you prosper!
7 May peace be within your ramparts, prosperity within your towers.”<sup>w</sup> 8 For the sake of my brothers and friends I
say,

“Peace be with you.”<sup>x</sup>

<sup>9</sup>For the sake of the house of the LORD,
our God,
I pray for your good.

Reliance on the Lord

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents.

To you I raise my eyes,
to you enthroned in heaven.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Yes, like the eyes of servants
on the hand of their masters,
Like the eyes of a maid
on the hand of her mistress,
So our eyes are on the LORD our God,
till we are shown favor.

<sup>3</sup>Show us favor, LORD, show us favor, for we have our fill of contempt.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Our souls are more than sated
with mockery from the insolent,
with contempt from the arrogant.

God, the Rescuer of the People

Had not the LORD been with us,
let Israel say,<sup>a</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Had not the LORD been with us,
when people rose against us,

<sup>3</sup>Then they would have swallowed us alive,<sup>b</sup>

for their fury blazed against us.
4 Then the waters would have engulfed us, the torrent overwhelmed us;<sup>c</sup> 5 then seething water would have drowned us.
6 Blessed is the LORD, who did not leave us
to be torn by their teeth.
7 We escaped with our lives like a bird
from the fowler's snare;
the snare was broken,
and we escaped.
8* Our help is in the name of the LORD,
the maker of heaven and earth.<sup>d</sup>

ISRAEL'S PROTECTOR

Those trusting in the LORD are like Mount Zion,
unshakable, forever enduring.<sup>e</sup>
2 As mountains surround Jerusalem,
the LORD surrounds his people
both now and forever.<sup>f</sup> 3 The scepter of the wicked will not prevail in the land allotted to the just,* Lest the just themselves
turn their hands to evil.
4 Do good, LORD, to the good,
to those who are upright of heart.<sup>g</sup> 5 But those who turn aside to crooked
ways
may the LORD send down with the evildoers.<sup>h</sup>

Peace upon Israel!<sup>i</sup>

The Reversal of Zion's Fortunes

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents.

I

When the LORD restored the captives of Zion,<sup>j</sup>

we thought we were dreaming.

<sup>2</sup>Then our mouths were filled with laughter;

our tongues sang for joy.<sup>k</sup>

Then it was said among the nations,

“The LORD had done great things for
them.”

<sup>3</sup>The LORD has done great things for us;
Oh, how happy we were!

<sup>4</sup>Restore our captives, LORD, like the dry stream beds of the Negeb.*

<sup>5</sup>Those who sow in tears will reap with cries of joy.<sup>l</sup>

carrying sacks of seed,
Will return with cries of joy,
carrying their bundled sheaves.

The Need of God's Blessing

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents. Of Solomon.

I

Unless the LORD build the house,
they labor in vain who build.
Unless the LORD guard the city,
in vain does the guard keep watch.

<sup>2</sup>It is vain for you to rise early and put off your rest at night,
To eat bread earned by hard toil—
all this God gives to his beloved in sleep.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Certainly sons are a gift from the LORD, the fruit of the womb, a reward.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Like arrows in the hand of a warrior
are the sons born in one's youth.

<sup>5</sup>Blessed is the man who has filled his quiver with them.

He will never be shamed
for he will destroy his foes at the gate.*

The Blessed Home of the Just

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents.

I

Blessed are all who fear the LORD,
and who walk in his ways.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>2</sup>What your hands provide you will enjoy;
you will be blessed and prosper:<sup>p</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Your wife will be like a fruitful vine
within your home,
Your children like young olive plants around your table.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Just so will the man be blessed who fears the LORD.

II

<sup>5</sup>May the LORD bless you from Zion;
may you see Jerusalem's prosperity
all the days of your life,<sup>r</sup> <sup>6</sup>and live to see your children's children.<sup>s</sup> Peace upon Israel!<sup>t</sup>

Against Israel's Enemies

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents.

I

Viciously have they attacked me from my youth,
let Israel say now.<sup>u</sup> <sup>2</sup>Viciously have they attacked me from my youth,<sup>v</sup>
yet they have not prevailed
against me.
<sup>3</sup>Upon my back the plowers plowed,
as they traced their long furrows.<sup>w</sup> <sup>4</sup>But the just LORD cut me free from the ropes of the wicked.*

II

<sup>5</sup>May they recoil in disgrace,
all who hate Zion.
<sup>6</sup>May they be like grass on the rooftops*
withered in early growth,<sup>x</sup> <sup>7</sup>Never to fill the reaper's hands, nor the arms of the binders of sheaves,
<sup>8</sup>And with none passing by to call out:
"The blessing of the LORD be upon
you!"*

We bless you in the name of the LORD!”<sup>y</sup>

Prayer for Pardon and Mercy

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents.

I

Out of the depths * I call to you, LORD;

<sup>2</sup>LORD, hear my cry!

May your ears be attentive

to my cry for mercy.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>3</sup>If you, LORD, keep account of sins,

LORD, who can stand?<sup>a</sup>

<sup>4</sup>But with you is forgiveness

and so you are revered.*

II

<sup>5</sup>I wait for the LORD,

my soul waits

and I hope for his word.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>6</sup>My soul looks for the LORD

more than sentinels for daybreak.<sup>c</sup>

More than sentinels for daybreak,

<sup>7</sup>let Israel hope in the LORD,

with him is plenteous

redemption,<sup>d</sup>

LORD, my heart is not proud;
nor are my eyes haughty.
I do not busy myself with great matters,
with things too sublime for me.<sup>f</sup>

The Covenant Between David and God

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents.

I

Remember, O Lord, for David
all his hardships;

<sup>2</sup>How he swore an oath to the Lord, vowed to the Mighty One of Jacob:*

<sup>3</sup>“I will not enter the house where I live,<sup>h</sup>
nor lie on the couch where I sleep;

<sup>4</sup>I will give my eyes no sleep,
my eyelids no rest,

<sup>5</sup>Till I find a place for the Lord,
a dwelling for the Mighty One of Jacob.”

<sup>6</sup>“We have heard of it in Ephrathah;*
we have found it in the fields of Jaar.*

let us worship at his footstool.”<sup>i</sup>

you and your mighty ark.

<sup>9</sup>Your priests will be clothed with justice;
your devout will shout for joy.”

<sup>10</sup>For the sake of David your servant,
do not reject your anointed.

II

<sup>11</sup>The Lord swore an oath to David in truth, he will never turn back from it:<sup>k</sup>

“Your own offspring<sup>l</sup> I will set upon your throne.

<sup>12</sup>If your sons observe my covenant,
and my decrees I shall teach them,
Their sons, in turn,
shall sit forever on your throne.”

<sup>13</sup>Yes, the Lord has chosen Zion, desired it for a dwelling:

<sup>14</sup>“This is my resting place forever;
here I will dwell, for I desire it.

<sup>15</sup>I will bless Zion with provisions;
its poor I will fill with bread.

<sup>16</sup>I will clothe its priests with salvation;
its devout shall shout for joy.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>17</sup>There I will make a horn sprout for David;<sup>*n</sup>
I will set a lamp for my anointed.

<sup>18</sup>His foes I will clothe with shame,
but on him his crown shall shine.”

A Vision of a Blessed Community

How good and how pleasant it is,
when brothers* dwell together as
one!

<sup>2</sup>Like fine oil on the head,<sup>*o</sup>
running down upon the beard,

Upon the beard of Aaron,
upon the collar of his robe.
<sup>3</sup>Like dew* of Hermon* coming down upon the mountains of Zion.<sup>P</sup>

life for evermore!<sup>q</sup>

Exhortation to the Night Watch to Bless God

<sup>1</sup>A song of ascents.

O come, bless the LORD,
all you servants of the LORD*
You who stand in the house of the LORD
throughout the nights.<sup>r</sup> <sup>2</sup>Lift up your hands toward the sanctuary,<sup>s</sup> and bless the LORD.

Praise of God, the Ruler and Benefactor of Israel

<sup>1</sup>Hallelujah!

I

Praise the name of the LORD!
Praise, you servants of the LORD,<sup>u</sup> <sup>2</sup>Who stand in the house of the LORD, in the courts of the house of our God!<sup>v</sup> <sup>3</sup>Praise the LORD, for the LORD is good!
Sing to his name, for it brings joy!
<sup>4</sup>*For the LORD has chosen Jacob for himself,

Israel as his treasured possession.<sup>w</sup>

II

<sup>5</sup>For I know that the LORD is great, that our Lord is greater than all gods.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Whatever the LORD desires
he does in heaven and on earth,
in the seas and all the depths.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>7</sup>It is he who raises storm clouds from the end of the earth,
makes lightning for the rain,
and brings forth wind from his storehouse.<sup>z</sup>

III

<sup>8</sup>He struck down Egypt's firstborn,<sup>a</sup>
of human being and beast alike,

<sup>9</sup>And sent signs and wonders against you,
Egypt,
against Pharaoh and all his servants.

<sup>10</sup>It is he who struck down many nations,<sup>b</sup>
and slew mighty kings—

and Og, king of Bashan,
all the kings of Canaan—

<sup>12</sup>And made their land a heritage,
a heritage for Israel his people.

<sup>13</sup>O LORD, your name is forever, your renown, from generation to generation!<sup>c</sup>

<sup>14</sup>For the LORD defends his people, shows mercy to his servants.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>15</sup>The idols of the nations are silver and gold,<sup>e</sup>
the work of human hands.

<sup>16</sup>They have mouths but do not speak;
they have eyes but do not see;

nor is there breath in their mouths.

<sup>18</sup>Their makers will become like them,
and anyone who trusts in them.

<sup>19</sup>House of Israel, bless the LORD!<sup>f</sup>
House of Aaron, bless the LORD!

<sup>20</sup>House of Levi, bless the LORD!
You who fear the LORD, bless the LORD!

<sup>21</sup>Blessed be the LORD from Zion,
who dwells in Jerusalem!
Hallelujah!

Hymn of Thanksgiving for God's Everlasting Mercy

<sup>1</sup>Praise the LORD, for he is good;<sup>g</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>2</sup>Praise the God of gods;
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>3</sup>Praise the Lord of lords;
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>4</sup>Who alone has done great wonders,<sup>h</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>5</sup>Who skillfully made the heavens,<sup>i</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>6</sup>Who spread the earth upon the waters,<sup>j</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>7</sup>Who made the great lights,
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>8</sup>The sun to rule the day,
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>9</sup>The moon and stars to rule the night,<sup>k</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;

<sup>10</sup>Who struck down the firstborn of Egypt,<sup>l</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;

- 11 And led Israel from their midst,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 12 With mighty hand and outstretched arm,<sup>m</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;
- 13 Who split in two the Red Sea,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 14 And led Israel through its midst,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 15 But swept Pharaoh and his army into the Red Sea,<sup>n</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;
- 16 Who led the people through the desert,<sup>o</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;

IV

- 17 Who struck down great kings,<sup>p</sup>
for his mercy endures forever;
- 18 Slew powerful kings,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 19 Sihon, king of the Amorites,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 20 Og, king of Bashan,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 21 And made their lands a heritage,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 22* A heritage for Israel, his servant,
for his mercy endures forever.

V

- 23 The Lord remembered us in our low estate,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 24 Freed us from our foes,
for his mercy endures forever;
- 25 And gives bread to all flesh,
for his mercy endures forever.

VI

- 26 Praise the God of heaven,
for his mercy endures forever.

Sorrow and Hope in Exile

I

<sup>1</sup>By the rivers of Babylon
there we sat weeping
when we remembered Zion.<sup>q</sup> <sup>2</sup>On the poplars in its midst
we hung up our harps.<sup>r</sup> <sup>3</sup>For there our captors asked us for the words of a song;
Our tormentors, for joy:
“Sing for us a song of Zion!”
<sup>4</sup>But how could we sing a song of the
in a foreign land?

II

<sup>5</sup>If I forget you, Jerusalem, may my right hand forget.<sup>s</sup> <sup>6</sup>May my tongue stick to my palate
if I do not remember you,
If I do not exalt Jerusalem
beyond all my delights.

III

<sup>7</sup>Remember, LORD, against Edom that day at Jerusalem.
They said: “Level it, level it down to its foundations!”<sup>t</sup> <sup>8</sup>Desolate Daughter Babylon, you shall be destroyed,
blessed the one who pays you back
what you have done us!<sup>u</sup> <sup>9*</sup>Blessed the one who seizes your children and smashes them against the rock.<sup>v</sup>

Hymn of a Grateful Heart

<sup>1</sup>Of David.

I

I thank you, Lord, with all my heart;<sup>w</sup> in the presence of the angels* to you I sing.

<sup>2</sup>I bow low toward your holy temple;
I praise your name for your mercy and
faithfulness.

For you have exalted over all your name and your promise.

<sup>3</sup>On the day I cried out, you answered;
you strengthened my spirit.

II

<sup>4</sup>All the kings of earth will praise you,
LORD,
when they hear the words of your
mouth.

<sup>5</sup>They will sing of the ways of the LORD:
“How great is the glory of the LORD!”

<sup>6</sup>The LORD is on high, but cares for the lowly<sup>x</sup>
and knows the proud from afar.

<sup>7</sup>Though I walk in the midst of dangers,
you guard my life when my enemies
rage.

You stretch out your hand;
your right hand saves me.

<sup>8</sup>The LORD is with me to the end.
LORD, your mercy endures forever.
Never forsake the work of your hands!

The All-knowing and Ever-present God

<sup>1</sup>For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

LORD, you have probed me, you know me:

<sup>2</sup>you know when I sit and stand; <sup>*y</sup>
you understand my thoughts from afar.

<sup>3</sup>You sift through my travels and my rest;
with all my ways you are familiar.

<sup>4</sup>Even before a word is on my tongue,
LORD, you know it all.

<sup>5</sup>Behind and before you encircle me and rest your hand upon me.

<sup>6</sup>Such knowledge is too wonderful for me, far too lofty for me to reach. <sup>z</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Where can I go from your spirit?
From your presence, where can I flee?

<sup>8</sup>If I ascend to the heavens, you are there;
if I lie down in Sheol, there you are. <sup>a</sup>

<sup>9</sup>If I take the wings of dawn * and dwell beyond the sea, *

<sup>10</sup>Even there your hand guides me,
your right hand holds me fast.

<sup>11</sup>If I say, "Surely darkness shall hide me, and night shall be my light" * —

<sup>12</sup>Darkness is not dark for you,
and night shines as the day.
Darkness and light are but one. <sup>b</sup>

II

<sup>13</sup>You formed my inmost being;
you knit me in my mother's womb. <sup>c</sup>

<sup>14</sup>I praise you, because I am wonderfully
made;
wonderful are your works!
My very self you know.

<sup>15</sup>My bones are not hidden from you,
When I was being made in secret, * fashioned in the depths of the earth. *

<sup>16</sup>Your eyes saw me unformed;
in your book all are written down; <sup>d</sup>

my days were shaped, before one came to be.

<sup>17</sup>How precious to me are your designs,
O God;
how vast the sum of them!

<sup>18</sup>Were I to count them, they would outnumber the sands;
when I complete them, still you are with me.<sup>e</sup>

O God,
the bloodthirsty depart from me!<sup>f</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Your foes who conspire a plot against you are exalted in vain.

IV

<sup>21</sup>Do I not hate, LORD, those who hate you?
Those who rise against you, do I not loathe?<sup>g</sup>

enemies I count as my own.

<sup>23</sup>Probe me, God, know my heart;
try me, know my thoughts.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>24</sup>See if there is a wicked path in me; lead me along an ancient path.*

Prayer for Deliverance from the Wicked

<sup>2</sup>Deliver me, Lord, from the wicked; preserve me from the violent,<sup>i</sup>

<sup>3</sup>From those who plan evil in their hearts,
who stir up conflicts every day,

<sup>4*</sup>Who sharpen their tongue like a serpent,
venom of asps upon their lips.<sup>j</sup> Selah

<sup>5</sup>Keep me, Lord, from the clutches of the
wicked;
preserve me from the violent,
who plot to trip me up.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>6*</sup>The arrogant have set a trap for me;
they have spread out ropes for a net,
laid snares for me by the wayside. Selah

<sup>7</sup>I say to the Lord: You are my God;<sup>l</sup>
listen, Lord, to the words of my pleas.

you cover my head on the day of armed conflict.

<sup>9</sup>Lord, do not grant the desires of the wicked one;
do not let his plot succeed. Selah

III

<sup>10</sup>Those who surround me raise their heads;
may the mischief they threaten overwhelm them.

<sup>11</sup>Drop burning coals upon them;<sup>m</sup> cast them into the watery pit never more to rise.

<sup>12</sup>Slanderers will not survive on earth;
evil will hunt down the man of violence to overthrow him.

<sup>13</sup>For I know the LORD will take up the cause of the needy,
justice for the poor.

<sup>14</sup>Then the righteous will give thanks to
your name;
the upright will dwell in your presence.<sup>n</sup>

Prayer for Deliverance from the Wicked

LORD, I call to you; hasten to me;
listen to my plea when I call.

<sup>2</sup>Let my prayer be incense* before you;
my uplifted hands* an evening offering.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Set a guard, LORD, before my mouth, keep watch over the door of my lips.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Do not let my heart incline to evil,
to perform deeds in wickedness.
On the delicacies of evildoers
let me not feast.

<sup>5</sup>* Let a righteous person strike me; it is mercy if he reproves me.
Do not withhold oil from my head<sup>q</sup> while my prayer opposes their evil
deeds.

<sup>6</sup>May their leaders be cast over the cliff, so that they hear that my speeches are pleasing.

<sup>7</sup>Like the plowing and breaking up of the
earth,
our bones are strewn at the mouth of Sheol.

<sup>8</sup>For my eyes are upon you, O LORD, my Lord;<sup>r</sup>
in you I take refuge; do not take away
my soul.

<sup>9</sup>Guard me from the trap they have set
for me,
from the snares of evildoers.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Let the wicked fall into their own nets, while only I pass over them safely.

A Prayer in Time of Trouble

with my own voice I beseech the
LORD.

<sup>3</sup>Before him I pour out my complaint, tell of my distress in front of him.

<sup>4</sup>When my spirit is faint within me,<sup>t</sup>
you know my path.<sup>u</sup>

As I go along this path,
they have hidden a trap for me.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>5</sup>I look to my right hand to see<sup>w</sup>
that there is no one willing to acknowledge me.

My escape has perished;
no one cares for me.

<sup>6</sup>I cry out to you, LORD,
I say, You are my refuge,<sup>x</sup>
my portion in the land of the living.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Listen to my cry for help, for I am brought very low.<sup>z</sup>

Rescue me from my pursuers,
for they are too strong for me.

<sup>8</sup>Lead my soul from prison,
that I may give thanks to your name.

Then the righteous shall gather around me*
because you have been good to me.

A Prayer in Distress

LORD, hear my prayer;
in your faithfulness listen to my pleading;

answer me in your righteousness.

<sup>2</sup>Do not enter into judgment with your
servant;
before you no one can be just.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>3</sup>The enemy has pursued my soul;
he has crushed my life to the ground.<sup>b</sup>
He has made me dwell in darkness
like those long dead.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>4</sup>My spirit is faint within me;
my heart despairs.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>5</sup>I remember the days of old;
I ponder all your deeds;
the works of your hands I recall.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>6</sup>I stretch out my hands toward you, my soul to you like a parched land.<sup>f</sup> Selah

<sup>7</sup>Hasten to answer me, LORD;
for my spirit fails me.
Do not hide your face from me, lest I become like those descending to the pit.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>8</sup>In the morning let me hear of your
mercy,
for in you I trust.
Show me the path I should walk,
for I entrust my life to you.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Rescue me, LORD, from my foes,
for I seek refuge in you.

<sup>10</sup>Teach me to do your will,
for you are my God.
May your kind spirit guide me
on ground that is level.

<sup>11</sup>For your name's sake, LORD, give me
life;
in your righteousness lead my soul out of distress.

<sup>12</sup>In your mercy put an end to my foes;
all those who are oppressing my soul,
for I am your servant.<sup>i</sup>

A Prayer for Victory and Prosperity

<sup>1</sup>Of David.

I

*Blessed be the LORD, my rock, who trains my hands for battle,
my fingers for war;

<sup>2</sup>My safeguard and my fortress,
my stronghold, my deliverer,
My shield, in whom I take refuge,
who subdues peoples under me.

II

<sup>3*</sup>LORD, what is man that you take notice
of him;

the son of man, that you think of him?<sup>j</sup>

<sup>4*</sup>Man is but a breath,
his days are like a passing shadow.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>5*</sup>LORD, incline your heavens and come down;
touch the mountains and make them smoke.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Flash forth lightning and scatter my foes;
shoot your arrows and rout them.

<sup>7</sup>Reach out your hand from on high;
deliver me from the many waters;
rescue me from the hands of foreign
foes.

<sup>8</sup>Their mouths speak untruth;
their right hands are raised in lying oaths.*

<sup>9</sup>O God, a new song I will sing to you;
on a ten-stringed lyre I will play for you.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>10</sup>You give victory to kings;
you delivered David your servant.<sup>n</sup>

From the menacing sword <sup>11</sup>deliver me;
rescue me from the hands of foreign
foes.

Their mouths speak untruth;
their right hands are raised in lying oaths.

<sup>12</sup>May our sons be like plants<sup>o</sup>
well nurtured from their youth,
Our daughters, like carved columns,
shapely as those of the temple.

<sup>13</sup>May our barns be full with every kind of store.
May our sheep increase by thousands,
by tens of thousands in our fields;
may our oxen be well fattened.

<sup>14</sup>May there be no breach in the walls,
no exile, no outcry in our streets.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Blessed the people so fortunate; blessed the people whose God is the LORD.<sup>q</sup>

The Greatness and Goodness of God

<sup>1</sup>Praise. Of David.

I will extol you, my God and king;
I will bless your name forever and ever.

<sup>2</sup>Every day I will bless you;
I will praise your name forever and ever.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Great is the LORD and worthy of much praise,<sup>s</sup> whose grandeur is beyond
understanding.

<sup>4</sup>One generation praises your deeds to the next

and proclaims your mighty works.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>5</sup>They speak of the splendor of your majestic glory,

tell of your wonderful deeds.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>6</sup>They speak of the power of your awesome acts

and recount your great deeds.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>They celebrate your abounding goodness
and joyfully sing of your justice.

<sup>8</sup>The LORD is gracious and merciful, slow to anger and abounding in mercy.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>9</sup>The LORD is good to all, compassionate toward all your works.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>10</sup>All your works give you thanks, LORD and your faithful bless you.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>11</sup>They speak of the glory of your reign
and tell of your mighty works,

<sup>12</sup>Making known to the sons of men your mighty acts,
the majestic glory of your rule.

<sup>13</sup>Your reign is a reign for all ages, your dominion for all generations.<sup>z</sup>

The LORD is trustworthy in all his words,
and loving in all his works.

<sup>14</sup>The LORD supports all who are falling and raises up all who are bowed down.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>15</sup>The eyes of all look hopefully to you;
you give them their food in due season.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>16</sup>You open wide your hand
and satisfy the desire of every living thing.

<sup>17</sup>The LORD is just in all his ways, merciful in all his works.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>18</sup>The LORD is near to all who call upon him, to all who call upon him in truth.<sup>d</sup> 19 He fulfills the desire of those who fear

him;
he hears their cry and saves them.<sup>e</sup> 20 The LORD watches over all who love him, but all the wicked he destroys.<sup>f</sup> 21 My mouth will speak the praises of the
LORD;
all flesh will bless his holy name
forever and ever.

Trust in God the Creator and Redeemer

<sup>2</sup>Praise the LORD, my soul;
I will praise the LORD all my life,
sing praise to my God while I live.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Put no trust in princes, in children of Adam powerless to save.<sup>h</sup> <sup>4</sup>Who breathing his last, returns to the
earth;
that day all his planning comes to nothing.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Blessed the one whose help is the God of Jacob,
whose hope is in the LORD, his God, <sup>6</sup>The maker of heaven and earth, the seas and all that is in them,<sup>j</sup>
Who keeps faith forever, <sup>7</sup>secures justice for the oppressed,<sup>k</sup> who gives bread to the hungry.

The LORD sets prisoners free;<sup>l</sup>
    <sup>8</sup>the LORD gives sight to the blind.
The LORD raises up those who are bowed down;<sup>m</sup>
    the LORD loves the righteous.
<sup>9</sup>The LORD protects the resident alien, comes to the aid of the orphan and the widow,<sup>n</sup>
    but thwarts the way of the wicked.
<sup>10</sup>The LORD shall reign forever, your God, Zion, through all generations!<sup>o</sup>

God's Word Restores Jerusalem

<sup>1</sup>Hallelujah!

I

How good to sing praise to our God;
    how pleasant to give fitting praise.<sup>p</sup> <sup>2</sup>The LORD rebuilds Jerusalem, and gathers the dispersed of Israel,<sup>q</sup> <sup>3</sup>Healing the brokenhearted, and binding up their wounds.<sup>r</sup> <sup>4</sup>He numbers the stars, and gives to all of them their names.<sup>s</sup> <sup>5</sup>Great is our Lord, vast in power, with wisdom beyond measure.<sup>t</sup> <sup>6</sup>The LORD gives aid to the poor,
    but casts the wicked to the ground.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Sing to the LORD with thanksgiving;
    with the lyre make music to our God,<sup>v</sup>

8* Who covers the heavens with clouds, provides rain for the earth,
makes grass sprout on the mountains,<sup>w</sup> 9 Who gives animals their food and young ravens what they cry for.<sup>x</sup> 10* He takes no delight in the strength of horses,
no pleasure in the runner's stride.<sup>y</sup> 11 Rather the LORD takes pleasure in those
who fear him,
those who put their hope in his mercy.

III

12 Glorify the LORD, Jerusalem;
Zion, offer praise to your God, 13 For he has strengthened the bars of your gates,
blessed your children within you.<sup>z</sup> 14 He brings peace to your borders,
and satisfies you with finest wheat.<sup>a</sup> 15* He sends his command to earth;
his word runs swiftly!<sup>b</sup> 16 Thus he makes the snow like wool, and spreads the frost like ash;<sup>c</sup>
17 He disperses hail like crumbs.
Who can withstand his cold?
18 Yet when again he issues his command, it melts them;
he raises his winds and the waters flow.
19 He proclaims his word to Jacob, his statutes and laws to Israel.<sup>d</sup> 20 He has not done this for any other nation;
of such laws they know nothing.
Hallelujah!

All Creation Summoned to Praise

<sup>1</sup>Hallelujah!

I

Praise the LORD from the heavens;
praise him in the heights.

<sup>2</sup>Praise him, all you his angels;
give praise, all you his hosts.<sup>e</sup>

praise him, all shining stars.

<sup>4</sup>Praise him, highest heavens,*
you waters above the heavens.

<sup>5</sup>Let them all praise the LORD's name;
for he commanded and they were created,<sup>f</sup>

set an order that will never change.

II

<sup>7</sup>Praise the LORD from the earth, you sea monsters and all the deeps of the sea;<sup>g</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Lightning and hail, snow and thick clouds, storm wind that fulfills his command;

<sup>9</sup>Mountains and all hills, fruit trees and all cedars;<sup>h</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Animals wild and tame, creatures that crawl and birds that fly;<sup>i</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Kings of the earth and all peoples,
princes and all who govern on earth;

<sup>12</sup>Young men and women too,
old and young alike.

<sup>13</sup>Let them all praise the LORD's name, for his name alone is exalted,
His majesty above earth and heaven.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>14*</sup>He has lifted high the horn of his
people;
to the praise of all his faithful,
the Israelites, the people near to him.

Hallelujah!

Praise God with Song and Sword

<sup>1</sup>Hallelujah!

Sing to the LORD a new song,
his praise in the assembly of the faithful.<sup>k</sup>

the people of Zion rejoice in their king.

<sup>3</sup>Let them praise his name in dance, make music with tambourine and lyre.<sup>*l</sup>

<sup>4</sup>For the LORD takes delight in his people, honors the poor with victory.

<sup>5</sup>Let the faithful rejoice in their glory, cry out for joy on their couches,*

<sup>6</sup>With the praise of God in their mouths,
and a two-edged sword in their hands,<sup>m</sup>

<sup>7</sup>To bring retribution on the nations, punishment on the peoples,<sup>n</sup>

<sup>8</sup>To bind their kings in shackles,
their nobles in chains of iron,

<sup>9</sup>To execute the judgments decreed for
them—

such is the glory* of all God's faithful.

Hallelujah!

Final Doxology

<sup>1</sup>Hallelujah!

Praise God in his holy sanctuary;<sup>*o</sup> give praise in the mighty dome of heaven.

<sup>2</sup>Give praise for his mighty deeds,<sup>p</sup>
praise him for his great majesty.

<sup>3</sup>Give praise with blasts upon the horn,<sup>q</sup> praise him with harp and lyre.

<sup>4</sup>Give praise with tambourines and dance, praise him with strings and pipes.<sup>r</sup>

praise him with sounding cymbals.

<sup>6</sup>Let everything that has breath give praise to the LORD!<sup>s</sup>
Hallelujah!

Psalm 1 A preface to the whole Book of Psalms, contrasting with striking similes the destiny of the good and the wicked. The Psalm views life as activity, as choosing either the good or the bad. Each “way” brings its inevitable consequences. The wise through their good actions will experience rootedness and life, and the wicked, rootlessness and death.

1:1 The way: a common biblical term for manner of living or moral conduct (Ps 32:8; 101:2, 6; Prv 2:20; 1 Kgs 8:36).

1:2 The law of the LORD: either the Torah, the first five books of the Bible, or, more probably, divine teaching or instruction.

1:4 The wicked: those who by their actions distance themselves from God’s life-giving presence.

Psalm 2 A royal Psalm. To rebellious kings (Ps 2:1–3) God responds vigorously (Ps 2:4–6). A speaker proclaims the divine decree (in the legal adoption language of the day), making the Israelite king the earthly representative of God (Ps 2:7–9) and warning kings to obey (Ps 2:10–11). The Psalm has a messianic meaning for the Church; the New Testament understands it of Christ (Acts 4:25–27; 13:33; Heb 1:5).

2:2 Anointed: in Hebrew mashiah, “anointed”; in Greek christos, whence English Messiah and Christ. In Israel kings (Jgs 9:8; 1 Sm 9:16; 16:12–13) and high priests (Lv 8:12; Nm 3:3) received the power of their office through anointing.

Psalm 3 An individual lament complaining of enemies who deny that God will come to the rescue (Ps 3:2–3). Despite such taunts the psalmist hopes for God’s protection even in sleep (Ps 3:4–7). The Psalm prays for an end to the enemies’ power to speak maliciously (Ps 3:8) and closes peacefully with an expression of trust (Ps 3:9).

3:1 The superscription, added later, relates the Psalm to an incident in the life of David.

3:3, 3:5, 3:9 Selah: the term is generally considered a direction to the cantor or musicians but its exact meaning is not known. It occurs seventy-one times in thirty-nine Psalms.

Psalm 4 An individual lament emphasizing trust in God. The petition is based upon the psalmist's vivid experience of God as savior (Ps 4:2). That experience of God is the basis for the warning to the wicked: revere God who intervenes on the side of the faithful (Ps 4:3–6). The faithful psalmist exemplifies the blessings given to the just (Ps 4:7–8).

4:1 For the leader: many Psalm headings contain this rubric. Its exact meaning is unknown but may signify that such Psalms once stood together in a collection of “the choirmaster,” cf. 1 Chr 15:21.

4:3 Love what is worthless ... lies: these expressions probably refer to false gods worshiped by those the psalmist is addressing.

4:5 Tremble: be moved deeply with fear for failing to worship the true God. The Greek translation understood the emotion to be anger, and it is so cited in Eph 4:26. Weep bitterly ... wail: weeping within one's heart and wailing upon one's bed denote sincere repentance because these actions are not done in public or with the community but in the privacy of one's heart and one's home. The same idiom is found in Hos 7:14.

4:9 In peace I will ... fall asleep: the last verse repeats two themes in the Psalm. One is the security of one who trusts in the true God; the other is the interior peace of those who sincerely repent (“on [their] beds”), whose sleep is not disturbed by a guilty conscience.

Psalm 5 A lament contrasting the security of the house of God (Ps 5:8–9, 12–13) with the danger of the company of evildoers (Ps 5:5–7, 10–11). The psalmist therefore prays that God will hear (Ps 5:2–4) and grant the protection and joy of the Temple.

5:8 Mercy: used to translate the Hebrew word, hesed. This term speaks to a relationship between persons. It is manifested in concrete actions to persons with some need or desire. The one who offers hesed has the ability to respond to that need of the other person. Other possible ways to translate hesed include “steadfast love” and “loving kindness.”

5:10 Their throat: their speech brings harm to their hearers (cf. Jer 5:16). The verse mentions four parts of the body, each a source of evil to the innocent.

Psalm 6 The first of the seven Penitential Psalms (Ps 6, 32, 38, 51, 102, 130, 143), a designation dating from the seventh century a.d. for Psalms suitable to express repentance. The psalmist does not, as in many laments, claim to be innocent but appeals to God's mercy (Ps 6:5). Sin here, as often in the Bible, is both the sinful act and its injurious consequences; here it is physical sickness (Ps 6:3–4, 7–8) and the attacks of enemies (Ps 6:8, 9, 11). The psalmist prays that the effects of personal and social sin be taken away.

6:1 Upon the eighth: apparently a musical notation, now lost.

6:4 How long?: elliptical for “How long will it be before you answer my prayer?” cf. Ps 13:2–3.

6:6 A motive for God to preserve the psalmist from death: in the shadowy world of the dead no one offers you praise. Sheol is the biblical term for the underworld where the insubstantial souls of dead human beings dwelt. It was similar to the Hades of Greek and Latin literature. In the second century B.C., biblical books begin to speak positively of life with God after death (Dn 12:1–3; Wis 3).

Psalm 7 An individual lament. The psalmist flees to God's presence in the sanctuary for justice and protection (Ps 7:2–3) and takes an oath that only the innocent can swear (Ps 7:4–6). The innocent psalmist can thus hope for the just God's protection (Ps 7:7–14) and be confident that the actions of the wicked will come back upon their own heads (Ps 7:15–17). The justice of God leads the psalmist to praise (Ps 7:18).

7:4 Have done this: in the accusation the enemies have made against the psalmist.

7:12 Powerful and patient: the inclusion of these words is drawn from the Septuagint tradition concerning this verse.

Psalm 8 While marvelling at the limitless grandeur of God (Ps 8:2–3), the psalmist is struck first by the smallness of human beings in creation (Ps 8:4–5), and then by the royal dignity and power that God has graciously bestowed upon them (Ps 8:6–9).

8:1 Upon the gittith: probably the title of the melody to which the Psalm was to be sung or a musical instrument.

8:3 With the mouths of babes and infants: the psalmist realizes that his attempts to praise such an awesome God are hopelessly inadequate and amount to little more than the sounds made by infants. Established a bulwark: an allusion to lost myth telling how God built a fortress for himself in the heavens in primordial times in his battle with the powers of chaos. This “bulwark” is the firmament. Enemy and avenger: probably cosmic enemies. The primeval powers of watery chaos are often personified in poetic texts (Ps 74:13–14; 89:11; Jb 9:13; 26:12–13; Is 51:9).

8:5 Man ... a son of man: the emphasis is on the fragility and mortality of human beings to whom God has given great dignity.

8:6 Little less than a god: Hebrew ‘elohim, the ordinary word for “God” or “the gods” or members of the heavenly court. The Greek version translated ‘elohim by “angel, messenger”; several ancient and modern versions so translate. The meaning seems to be that God created human beings almost at the level of the beings in the heavenly world. Heb 2:9, translating “for a little while,” finds the eminent fulfillment of this verse in Jesus Christ, who was humbled before being glorified, cf. also 1 Cor 15:27 where St. Paul applies to Christ the closing words of Ps 8:7.

Psalms 9–10 Ps 9 and Ps 10 in the Hebrew text have been transmitted as separate poems but they actually form a single acrostic poem and are so transmitted in the Greek and Latin tradition. Each verse of the two Psalms begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet (though several letters have no corresponding stanza). The Psalm states loosely connected themes: the rescue of the helpless poor from their enemies, God’s worldwide judgment and rule over the nations, the psalmist’s own concern for rescue (Ps 9:14–15).

9:1 Muth Labben: probably the melodic accompaniment of the Psalm, now lost.

9:15 Daughter Zion: an ancient Near Eastern city could sometimes be personified as a woman or a queen, the spouse of the god of the city.

9:17 The LORD is revealed in making judgments: God has so made the universe that the wicked are punished by the very actions they perform. Selah: see note on Ps 3:3.

Psalm 11 A song of trust. Though friends counsel flight to the mountain country (a traditional hideout) to escape trouble (Ps 11:1–3), the innocent psalmist reaffirms confidence in God, who protects those who seek asylum in the Temple (Ps 11:4–7).

11:3 Foundations: usually understood of public order, cf. Ps 82:5.

11:6 Their allotted cup: the cup that God gives people to drink is a common figure for their destiny, cf. Ps 16:5; 75:9; Mt 20:22; 26:39; Rev 14:10.

Psalm 12 A lament. The psalmist, thrown into a world where lying and violent people persecute the just (Ps 12:2–3), prays that the wicked be punished (Ps 12:4–5). The prayer is not simply for vengeance but arises from a desire to see God’s justice appear on earth. Ps 12:6 preserves the word of assurance spoken by the priest to the lamenter; it is not usually transmitted in such Psalms. In Ps 12:7–8 the psalmist affirms the intention to live by the word of assurance.

12:7 Acrucible: lit., “in a crucible in the ground.” The crucible was placed in the ground for support.

Psalm 13 A typical lament, in which the psalmist feels forgotten by God (Ps 13:2–3)—note the force of the repetition of “How long.” The references to enemies may suggest some have wished evil on the psalmist. The heartfelt prayer (Ps 13:4–5) passes on a statement of trust (Ps 13:6a), intended to reinforce the prayer, and a vow to thank God when deliverance has come (Ps 13:6b).

Psalm 14 The lament (duplicated in Ps 53) depicts the world as consisting of two types of people: “the fool” (equals the wicked, Ps 14:1–3) and “the company of the just” (Ps 14:4–6; also called “my people,” and “the poor”). The wicked persecute the just, but the Psalm expresses the hope that God will punish the wicked and reward the good.

14:7 Jacob ... Israel ... his people: the righteous poor are identified with God’s people.

Psalm 15 The Psalm records a liturgical scrutiny at the entrance to the Temple court (cf. Ps 24:3–6; Is 33:14b–16). The Israelite wishing to be admitted had to ask the Temple official what conduct was appropriate to God’s precincts. Note the emphasis on virtues relating to one’s neighbor.

15:1 Your tent: the Temple could be referred to as “tent” (Ps 61:5; Is 33:20), a reference to the tent of the wilderness period and the tent of David (2 Sm 6:17; 7:2), predecessors of the Temple. Holy mountain: a venerable designation of the divine abode (Ps 2:6; 3:5; 43:3; 48:2, etc.).

15:5 Lends no money at interest: lending money in the Old Testament was often seen as assistance to the poor in their distress, not as an investment; making money off the poor by charging interest was thus forbidden (Ex 22:24; Lv 25:36–37; Dt 23:20).

Psalm 16 In the first section, the psalmist rejects the futile worship of false gods (Ps 16:2–5), preferring Israel’s God (Ps 16:1), the giver of the land (Ps 16:6). The second section reflects on the wise and life-giving presence of God (Ps 16:7–11).

16:1 Miktam: a term occurring six times in Psalm superscriptions, always with “David.” Its meaning is unknown.

16:4 Take their names: to use the gods’ names in oaths and hence to affirm them as one’s own gods.

16:6 Pleasant places were measured out for me: the psalmist is pleased with the plot of land measured out to the family, which was to be passed on to succeeding generations (“my inheritance”).

16:10 Nor let your devout one see the pit: Hebrew shahath means here the pit, a synonym for Sheol, the underworld. The Greek translation derives the word here and elsewhere from the verb shahath, “to be corrupt.” On the basis of the Greek, Acts 2:25–32; 13:35–37 apply the verse to Christ’s resurrection, “Nor will you suffer your holy one to see corruption.”

Psalm 17 A lament of an individual unjustly attacked. Confident of being found innocent, the psalmist cries out for God’s just judgment (Ps 17:1–5) and requests divine help against enemies (Ps 17:6–9a). Those ravenous lions (Ps 17:9b–12) should be punished (Ps 17:13–14). The Psalm ends with a serene statement of praise (Ps 17:15). The Hebrew text of Ps 17:3–4, 14 is uncertain.

17:8 Apple of your eye ... shadow of your wings: images of God’s special care, cf. Dt 32:10; Prv 7:2; Is 49:2.

17:10–12, 14 An extended metaphor: the enemies are lions.

Psalm 18 A royal thanksgiving for a military victory, duplicated in 2 Sm 22. Thanksgiving Psalms are in essence reports of divine rescue. The Psalm has two parallel reports of rescue, the first told from a heavenly perspective (Ps 18:5–20), and the second from an earthly perspective (Ps 18:36–46). The first report adapts old mythic language of a cosmic battle between sea and rainstorm in order to depict God’s rescue of the Israelite king from his enemies. Each report has a short hymnic introduction (Ps 18:2–4, 32–36) and conclusion (Ps 18:21–31, 47–50).

18:3 My saving horn: my strong savior. The horn referred to is the weapon of a bull and the symbol of fertility, cf. 1 Sm 2:10; Ps 132:17; Lk 1:69.

18:6 Cords: hunting imagery, the cords of a snare.

18:8–16 God appears in the storm, which in Palestine comes from the west. The introduction to the theophany (Ps 18:8–9) is probably a description of a violent, hot, and dry east-wind storm. In the fall transition period from the rainless summer to the rainy winter such storms regularly precede the rains, cf. Ex 14:21–22.

18:11 Cherub: a winged creature, derived from myth, in the service of the deity (Gn 3:24; Ex 25:18–20; 37:6–9). Cherubim were the throne bearers of the deity (Ps 80:2; 99:1; 1 Kgs 6:23–28; 8:6–8).

18:15 Arrows: lightning.

18:35 Bow of bronze: hyperbole for a bow difficult to bend and therefore capable of propelling an arrow with great force.

Psalm 19 The heavenly elements of the world, now beautifully arranged, bespeak the power and wisdom of their creator (Ps 19:2–7). The creator’s wisdom is available to human beings in the law (Ps 19:8–11), toward which the psalmist prays to be open (Ps 19:12–14). The themes of light and speech unify the poem.

19:4 No speech, no words: the regular functioning of the heavens and the alternation of day and night inform human beings without words of the creator’s power and wisdom.

19:5 The sun: in other religious literature the sun is a judge and lawgiver since it sees all in its daily course; Ps 19:5b–7 form a transition to the law in Ps 19:8–11. The six synonyms for God’s revelation (Ps 19:8–11) are applied to the sun in comparable literature.

19:12 Warned: the Hebrew verb means both to shine and to warn, cf. Dn 12:3.

Psalm 20 The people pray for the king before battle. The people ask for divine help (Ps 20:2–6) and express confidence that such help will be given (Ps 20:7–10). A solemn assurance of divine help may well have been given between the two sections in the liturgy, something like the promises of Ps 12:6; 21:9–13. The final verse (Ps 20:10) echoes the opening verse.

20:4 Remember: God’s remembering implies readiness to act, cf. Gn 8:1; Ex 2:24.

Psalm 21 The first part of this royal Psalm is a thanksgiving (Ps 21:2–8), and the second is a promise that the king will triumph over his enemies (Ps 21:9–13). The king’s confident prayer (Ps 21:3–5) and trust in God (Ps 21:8) enable him to receive the divine gifts of vitality, peace, and military success. Ps 21:14 reprises Ps 21:2. When kings ceased in Israel after the sixth century B.C., the Psalm was sung of a future Davidic king.

Psalm 22 A lament unusual in structure and in intensity of feeling. The psalmist’s present distress is contrasted with God’s past mercy in Ps 22:2–12. In Ps 22:13–22 enemies surround the psalmist. The last third is an invitation to praise God (Ps 22:23–27), becoming a universal chorus of praise (Ps 22:28–31). The Psalm is important in the New Testament. Its opening words occur on the lips of the crucified Jesus (Mk 15:34; Mt 27:46), and several other verses are quoted, or at least alluded to, in the accounts of Jesus’ passion (Mt 27:35, 43; Jn 19:24).

22:7 I am a worm, not a man: the psalmist’s sense of isolation and dehumanization, an important motif of Ps 22, is vividly portrayed here.

22:13–14 Bulls: the enemies of the psalmist are also portrayed in less-than-human form, as wild animals (cf. Ps 22:17, 21–22). Bashan: a grazing land northeast of the Sea of Galilee, famed for its cattle, cf. Dt 32:14; Ez 39:18; Am 4:1.

22:16 The dust of death: the netherworld, the domain of the dead.

22:23 In the assembly I will praise you: the person who offered a thanksgiving sacrifice in the Temple recounted to the other worshipers the favor received from God and invited them to share in the sacrificial banquet. The final section (Ps 22:24–32) may be a summary or a citation of the psalmist’s poem of praise.

22:25 Turn away: lit., “hides his face from me,” an important metaphor for God withdrawing from someone, e.g., Mi 3:4; Is 8:17; Ps 27:9; 69:18; 88:15.

22:27 The poor: originally the poor, who were dependent on God; the term (‘anawim) came to include the religious sense of “humble, pious, devout.”

22:30 Hebrew unclear. The translation assumes that all on earth (Ps 22:27–28) and under the earth (Ps 22:29) will worship God.

Psalm 23 God’s loving care for the psalmist is portrayed under the figures of a shepherd for the flock (Ps 23:1–4) and a host’s generosity toward a guest (Ps 23:5–6). The imagery of both sections is drawn from traditions of the exodus (Is 40:11; 49:10; Jer 31:10).

23:1 My shepherd: God as good shepherd is common in both the Old Testament and the New Testament (Ez 34:11–16; Jn 10:11–18).

23:5 You set a table before me: this expression occurs in an exodus context in Ps 78:19. In front of my enemies: my enemies see that I am God’s friend and guest. Oil: a perfumed ointment made from olive oil, used especially at banquets (Ps 104:15; Mt 26:7; Lk 7:37, 46; Jn 12:2).

23:6 Goodness and mercy: the blessings of God’s covenant with Israel.

Psalm 24 The Psalm apparently accompanied a ceremony of the entry of God (invisibly enthroned upon the ark), followed by the people, into the Temple. The Temple commemorated the creation of the world (Ps 24:1–2). The people had to affirm their fidelity before being admitted into the sanctuary (Ps 24:3–6; cf. Ps 15). A choir identifies the approaching God and invites the very Temple gates to bow down in obeisance (Ps 24:7–10).

24:4–5 Lit., “the one whose hands are clean.” The singular is used for the entire class of worshipers.

24:7, 9 Lift up your heads, O gates ... you ancient portals: the literal meaning would involve disassembly of the gates, since the portcullis (a gate that moves up and down) was unknown in the ancient world. Extra-biblical parallels might also suggest a full personification of the circle of gate towers: they are like a council of elders, bowed down and anxious, awaiting the return of the army and the great warrior gone to battle.

Psalm 25 A lament. Each verse begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. Such acrostic Psalms are often a series of statements only loosely connected. The psalmist mixes ardent pleas (Ps 25:1–2, 16–22) with expressions of confidence in God who forgives and guides.

25:22 A final verse beginning with the Hebrew letter pe is added to the normal twenty-two-letter alphabet. Thus the letters aleph, lamed, and pe open the first, middle (Ps 25:11), and last lines of the Psalm. Together, they spell aleph, the first letter of the alphabet, from a Hebrew root that means “to learn.”

Psalm 26 Like a priest washing before approaching the altar (Ex 30:17–21), the psalmist seeks God’s protection upon entering the Temple. Ps 26:1–3, matched by Ps 26:11–12, remind God of past integrity while asking for purification; Ps 26:4–5, matched by Ps 26:9–10, pray for inclusion among the just; Ps 26:6–8, the center of the poem, express the joy in God at the heart of all ritual.

26:6 I will wash my hands: the washing of hands was a liturgical act (Ex 30:19, 21; 40:31–32), symbolic of inner as well as outer cleanness, cf. Is 1:16.

26:12 On level ground: in safety, where there is no danger of tripping and falling. In assemblies: at the Temple. Having walked around the altar, the symbol of God’s presence, the psalmist blesses God.

Psalm 27 Tradition has handed down the two sections of the Psalm (Ps 27:1–6; 7–14) as one Psalm, though each part could be understood as complete in itself. Asserting boundless hope that God will bring rescue (Ps 27:1–3), the psalmist longs for the presence of God in the Temple, protection from all enemies (Ps 27:4–6). In part B there is a clear shift in tone (Ps 27:7–12); the climax of the poem comes with “I believe” (Ps 27:13), echoing “I trust” (Ps 27:3).

27:2 To devour my flesh: the psalmist’s enemies are rapacious beasts (Ps 7:3; 17:12; 22:14, 17).

27:8 Seek his face: to commune with God in the Temple. The idiom is derived from the practice of journeying to sacred places, cf. Hos 5:15; 2 Sm 21:1; Ps 24:6.

27:13 In the land of the living: or “in the land of life,” an epithet of the Jerusalem Temple (Ps 52:7; 116:9; Is 38:11), where the faithful had access to the life-giving presence of God.

Psalm 28 A lament asking that the psalmist, who has taken refuge in the Temple (Ps 28:2), not be punished with the wicked, who are headed inevitably toward destruction (Ps 28:1, 3–5). The statement of praise is exceptionally lengthy and vigorous (Ps 28:6–7). The Psalm ends with a prayer (Ps 28:8–9).

28:2 Your holy place: the innermost part of the Temple, the holy of holies, containing the ark, cf. 1 Kgs 6:16, 19–23; 8:6–8.

28:6 The psalmist shifts to fervent thanksgiving, probably responding to a priestly or prophetic oracle in Ps 28:5cd (not usually transmitted) assuring the worshiper that the prayer has been heard.

28:8 Your people ... your anointed: salvation is more than individual, affecting all the people and their God-given leader.

Psalm 29 The hymn invites the members of the heavenly court to acknowledge God's supremacy by ascribing glory and might to God alone (Ps 29:1–2a, 9b). Divine glory and might are dramatically visible in the storm (Ps 29:3–9a). The storm apparently comes from the Mediterranean onto the coast of Syria-Palestine and then moves inland. In Ps 29:10 the divine beings acclaim God's eternal kingship. The Psalm concludes with a prayer that God will impart the power just displayed to the Israelite king and through the king to Israel.

29:1 Sons of God: members of the heavenly court who served Israel's God in a variety of capacities.

29:3 The voice of the Lord: the sevenfold repetition of the phrase imitates the sound of crashing thunder and may allude to God's primordial slaying of Leviathan, the seven-headed sea monster of Canaanite mythology.

29:6 Sirion: the Phoenician name for Mount Hermon, cf. Dt 3:9.

29:9b–10 Having witnessed God's supreme power (Ps 29:3–9a), the gods acknowledge the glory that befits the king of the divine and human world.

29:10 The flood: God defeated the primordial waters and made them part of the universe, cf. Ps 89:10–13; 93:3–4.

29:11 His people: God's people, Israel.

Psalm 30 An individual thanksgiving in four parts: praise and thanks for deliverance and restoration (Ps 30:2–4); an invitation to others to join in (Ps 30:5–6); a flashback to the time before deliverance (Ps 30:7–11); a return to praise and thanks (Ps 30:12). Two sets of images recur: 1) going down, death, silence; 2) coming up, life, praising. God has delivered the psalmist from one state to the other.

30:1 For the dedication of the Temple: a later adaptation of the Psalm to celebrate the purification of the Temple in 164 B.C. during the Maccabean Revolt.

30:3 Healed: for God as healer, see also Ps 103:3; 107:20; Hos 6:1; 7:1; 11:3; 14:5.

30:4 Sheol ... pit: the shadowy underworld residence of the spirits of the dead, here a metaphor for near-death.

30:7 Complacent: untroubled existence is often seen as a source of temptation to forget God, cf. Dt 8:10–18; Hos 13:6; Prv 30:9.

30:10 In the stillness of Sheol no one gives you praise; let me live and be among your worshipers, cf. Ps 6:6; 88:11–13; 115:17; Is 38:18.

Psalm 31 A lament (Ps 31:2–19) with a strong emphasis on trust (Ps 31:4, 6, 15–16), ending with an anticipatory thanksgiving (Ps 31:20–24). As is usual in laments, the affliction is couched in general terms. The psalmist feels overwhelmed by evil people but trusts in the "God of truth" (Ps 31:6).

31:6 Into your hands I commend my spirit: in Lk 23:46 Jesus breathes his last with this Psalm verse. Stephen in Acts 7:59 alludes to these words as he is attacked by enemies. The verse is used as an antiphon in the Divine Office at Compline, the last prayer of the day.

31:13 Like a worn-out tool: a common comparison for something ruined and useless, cf. Is 30:14; Jer 19:11; 22:28.

31:14 Terrors are all around me: a cry used in inescapable danger, cf. Jer 6:25; 20:10; 46:5; 49:29.

Psalm 32 An individual thanksgiving and the second of the seven Penitential Psalms (cf. Ps 6). The opening declaration—the forgiven are blessed (Ps 32:1–2)—arises from the psalmist’s own experience. At one time the psalmist was stubborn and closed, a victim of sin’s power (Ps 32:3–4), and then became open to the forgiving God (Ps 32:5–7). Sin here, as often in the Bible, is not only the personal act of rebellion against God but also the consequences of that act—frustration and waning of vitality. Having been rescued, the psalmist can teach others the joys of justice and the folly of sin (Ps 32:8–11).

32:3 I kept silent: did not confess the sin before God.

32:6 Flood waters: the untamed waters surrounding the earth, a metaphor for danger.

Psalm 33 A hymn in which the just are invited (Ps 33:1–3) to praise God, who by a mere word (Ps 33:4–5) created the three-tiered universe of the heavens, the cosmic waters, and the earth (Ps 33:6–9). Human words, in contrast, effect nothing (Ps 33:10–11). The greatness of human beings consists in God’s choosing them as a special people and their faithful response (Ps 33:12–22).

33:6 All their host: the stars of the sky are commonly viewed as a vast army, e.g., Neh 9:6; Is 40:26; 45:12; Jer 33:22.

33:7 The waters ... as a mound: ancients sometimes attributed the power keeping the seas from overwhelming land to a primordial victory of the storm-god over personified Sea.

Psalm 34 A thanksgiving in acrostic form, each line beginning with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. In this Psalm one letter is missing and two are in reverse order. The psalmist, fresh from the experience of being rescued (Ps 34:5,7), can teach the “poor,” those who are defenseless, to trust in God alone (Ps 34:4, 12). God will make them powerful (Ps 34:5–11) and give them protection (Ps 34:12–22).

34:1 Abimelech: a scribal error for Achish. In 1 Sm 21:13–16, David feigned madness before Achish, not Abimelech.

34:12 Children: the customary term for students in wisdom literature.

Psalm 35 A lament of a person betrayed by friends. The psalmist prays that the evildoers be publicly exposed as unjust (Ps 35:1–8), and gives thanks in anticipation of vindication (Ps 35:9–10). Old friends are the enemies (Ps 35:11–16). May their punishment come quickly (Ps 35:17–21)! The last part (Ps 35:22–26) echoes the opening in praying for the destruction of the psalmist’s persecutors. The Psalm may appear vindictive, but one must keep in mind that the psalmist is praying for public redress now of a public injustice. There is at this time no belief in an afterlife in which justice will be redressed.

35:1–6 The mixture of judicial, martial, and hunting images shows that the language is figurative. The actual injustice is false accusation of serious crimes (Ps 35:11, 15, 20–21). The psalmist seeks lost honor through a trial before God.

35:13, 15–17 The Hebrew is obscure.

35:25 Aha! Our soul!: an ancient idiomatic expression meaning that we have attained what we wanted.

Psalm 36 A Psalm with elements of wisdom (Ps 36:2–5), the hymn (Ps 36:6–10), and the lament (Ps 36:11–13). The rule of sin over the wicked (Ps 36:2–5) is contrasted with the rule of divine love and mercy over God’s friends (Ps 36:6–10). The Psalm ends with a prayer that God’s guidance never cease (Ps 36:11–12).

36:3 Hated: punished by God.

36:6–7 God actively controls the entire world.

36:8 The shadow of your wings: metaphor for divine protection. It probably refers to the winged cherubim in the holy of holies in the Temple, cf. 1 Kgs 6:23–28, 32; 2 Chr 3:10–13; Ez 1:4–9.

Psalm 37 The Psalm responds to the problem of evil, which the Old Testament often expresses as a question: why do the wicked prosper and the good suffer? The Psalm answers that the situation is only temporary. God will reverse things, rewarding the good and punishing the wicked here on earth. The perspective is concrete and earthbound: people's very actions place them among the ranks of the good or wicked. Each group or "way" has its own inherent dynamism—eventual frustration for the wicked, eventual reward for the just. The Psalm is an acrostic, i.e., each section begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. Each section has its own imagery and logic.

37:3 The land: the promised land, Israel, which became for later interpreters a type or figure of heaven, cf. Heb 11:9–10, 13–16. The New Testament Beatitudes (Mt 5:3–12; Lk 6:20–26) have been influenced by the Psalm, especially their total reversal of the present and their interpretation of the happy future as possession of the land.

Psalm 38 In this lament, one of the Penitential Psalms (cf. Ps 6), the psalmist acknowledges the sin that has brought physical and mental sickness and social ostracism. There is no one to turn to for help; only God can undo the past and restore the psalmist.

Psalm 39 The lament of a mortally ill person who at first had resolved to remain silently submissive (Ps 39:2–4). But the grief was too much and now the psalmist laments the brevity and vanity of life (Ps 39:5–7), yet remaining hopeful (Ps 39:8–10). The psalmist continues to express both acceptance of the illness and hope for healing in Ps 39:11–13.

Psalm 40 A thanksgiving (Ps 40:2–13) has been combined with a lament (Ps 40:14–17) that appears also in Ps 70. The psalmist describes the rescue in spatial terms—being raised up from the swampy underworld to firm earth where one can praise God (Ps 40:2–4). All who trust God will experience like protection (Ps 40:5–6)! The Psalm stipulates the precise mode of thanksgiving: not animal sacrifice but open and enthusiastic proclamation of the salvation just experienced (Ps 40:7–11). A prayer for protection concludes (Ps 40:12–17).

40:4 A new song: a song in response to the new action of God (cf. Ps 33:3; 96:1; 144:9; 149:1; Is 42:10). Giving thanks is not purely a human response but is itself a divine gift.

40:7–9 Obedience is better than sacrifice (cf. 1 Sm 15:22; Is 1:10–20; Hos 6:6; Am 5:22–25; Mi 6:6–8; Acts 7:42–43 [quoting Am 5:25–26]). Heb 10:5–9 quotes the somewhat different Greek version and interprets it as Christ's self-oblation.

Psalm 41 A thanksgiving for rescue from illness (Ps 41:4, 5, 9). Many people, even friends, have interpreted the illness as a divine punishment for sin and have ostracized the psalmist (Ps 41:5–11). The healing shows the return of God's favor and rebukes the psalmist's detractors (Ps 41:12–13).

41:2 Blessed the one concerned for the poor: cf. Ps 32:1–2; 34:9; 40:5; 65:5. The psalmist's statement about God's love of the poor is based on the experience of being rescued (Ps 41:1–3).

41:4 You turn down his bedding whenever he is ill: the Hebrew is obscure. It suggests ongoing attentive care of the one who is sick.

41:10 Even my trusted friend ... has raised his heel against me: Jn 13:18 cites this verse to characterize Judas as a false friend. Raised his heel against me: an interpretation of the unclear Hebrew, "made great the heel against me."

41:11 That I may repay them: the healing itself is an act of judgment through which God decides for the psalmist and against the false friends. The prayer is not necessarily for strength to punish enemies.

41:14 The doxology, not part of the Psalm, marks the end of the first of the five books of the Psalter, cf. Ps 72:18–20; 89:53; 106:48.

Psalms 42–43 Ps 42–43 form a single lament of three sections, each section ending in an identical refrain (Ps 42:6, 12; 43:5). The psalmist is far from Jerusalem, and longs for the divine presence that Israel experienced in the Temple liturgy. Despite sadness, the psalmist hopes once again to join the worshipping crowds.

42:1 The Korahites: a major guild of Temple singers (2 Chr 20:19) whose name appears in the superscriptions of Ps 42; 44–49; 84–85; 87–88.

42:3 See the face of God: “face” designates a personal presence (Gn 33:10; Ex 10:28–29; 2 Sm 17:11). The expressions “see God/God’s face” occur elsewhere (Ps 11:7; 17:15; cf. Ex 24:10; 33:7–11; Jb 33:26) for the presence of God in the Temple.

42:5 The shrine of the Mighty One: this reading follows the tradition of the Septuagint and the Vulgate.

42:7 From the land of the Jordan: the sources of the Jordan are in the foothills of Mount Hermon in present-day southern Lebanon. Mount Mizar is presumed to be a mountain in the same range.

42:8 Deep calls to deep: to the psalmist, the waters arising in the north are overwhelming and far from God’s presence, like the waters of chaos (Ps 18:5; 69:2–3, 15; Jon 2:3–6).

42:9–10 I will pray ... I will say: in the midst of his depression the psalmist turns to prayer. Despite his situation he trusts the Lord to deliver him from his sorrow so that he may enter the Temple precincts and praise him once again (Ps 43:3–4, 5b).

43:3 Your light and your fidelity: a pair of divine attributes personified as guides for the pilgrimage. As in Ps 42:9 the psalmist prays that these divine attributes lead him back to Jerusalem and ultimately to God’s presence in the Temple.

Psalm 44 In this lament the community reminds God of past favors which it has always acknowledged (Ps 44:2–9). But now God has abandoned Israel to defeat and humiliation (Ps 44:10–17), though the people are not conscious of any sin against the covenant (Ps 44:18–23). They struggle with being God’s special people amid divine silence; yet they continue to pray (Ps 44:24–26).

44:11 You make us retreat: the corollary of Ps 44:3. Defeat, like victory, is God’s doing; neither Israel nor its enemies can claim credit (Ps 44:23).

44:19 Our hearts have not turned back: Israel’s defeat was not caused by its lack of fidelity.

44:20 A place of jackals: following Israel’s defeat and exile (Ps 44:11–12), the land lies desolate, inhabited only by jackals, cf. Is 13:22; Jer 9:10; 10:22. Others take tannim as “sea monster” (cf. Ez 29:3; 32:2) and render: “you crushed us as you did the sea monster.”

Psalm 45 A song for the Davidic king’s marriage to a foreign princess from Tyre in Phoenicia. The court poet sings (Ps 45:2, 18) of God’s choice of the king (Ps 45:3, 8), of his role in establishing divine rule (Ps 45:4–8), and of his splendor as he waits for his bride (Ps 45:9–10). The woman is to forget her own house when she becomes wife to the king (Ps 45:11–13). Her majestic beauty today is a sign of the future prosperity of the royal house (Ps 45:14–17). The Psalm was retained in the collection when there was no reigning king, and came to be applied to the king who was to come, the messiah.

45:7 O God: the king, in courtly language, is called “god,” i.e., more than human, representing God to the people. Heb 1:8–9 applies Ps 45:7–8 to Christ.

45:9 Ivory-paneled palaces: lit., “palaces of ivory.” Ivory paneling and furniture decoration have been found in Samaria and other ancient Near Eastern cities, cf. Am 3:15.

45:10 Ophir’s gold: uncertain location, possibly a region on the coast of southern Arabia or eastern Africa, famous for its gold, cf. 1 Kgs 9:28; 10:11; Jb 22:24.

45:11 Forget your people and your father’s house: the bride should no longer consider herself a daughter of her father’s house, but the wife of the king—the queen.

Psalm 46 A song of confidence in God’s protection of Zion with close parallels to Ps 48. The dominant note in Ps 46 is sounded by the refrain, The Lord of hosts is with us (Ps 46:8, 12). The first strophe (Ps 46:2–4) sings of the security of God’s presence even in utter chaos; the second (Ps 46:5– 8), of divine protection of the city from its enemies; the third (Ps 46:9–11), of God's imposition of imperial peace.

46:1 Alamoth: the melody of the Psalm, now lost.

46:3–4 Figurative ancient Near Eastern language to describe social and political upheavals.

46:5 Jerusalem is not situated on a river. This description derives from mythological descriptions of the divine abode and symbolizes the divine presence as the source of all life (cf. Is 33:21; Ez 47:1–12; Jl 4:18; Zec 14:8; Rev 22:1–2).

46:8 The first line of the refrain is similar in structure and meaning to Isaiah's name for the royal child, Emmanuel, With us is God (Is 7:14; 8:8, 10).

Psalm 47 A hymn calling on the nations to acknowledge the universal rule of Israel's God (Ps 47:2–5) who is enthroned as king over Israel and the nations (Ps 47:6–9).

47:5 Our heritage ... the glory: the land of Israel (cf. Is 58:14), which God has given Israel in an act of sovereignty.

47:6 God has gone up: Christian liturgical tradition has applied the verse to the Ascension of Christ.

Psalm 48 A Zion hymn, praising the holy city as the invincible dwelling place of God. Unconquerable, it is an apt symbol of God who has defeated all enemies. After seven epithets describing the city (Ps 48:2–3), the Psalm describes the victory by the Divine Warrior over hostile kings (Ps 48:4–8). The second half proclaims the dominion of the God of Zion over all the earth (Ps 48:9–12) and invites pilgrims to announce that God is eternally invincible like Zion itself (Ps 48:13–14).

48:1 Korahites: see note on Ps 42:1.

48:3 The heights of Zaphon: the mountain abode of the Canaanite storm-god Baal in comparable texts. To speak of Zion as if it were Zaphon was to claim for Israel's God what Canaanites claimed for Baal. Though topographically speaking Zion is only a hill, viewed religiously it towers over other mountains as the home of the supreme God (cf. Ps 68:16–17).

48:6 When they looked: the kings are stunned by the sight of Zion, touched by divine splendor. The language is that of holy war, in which the enemy panics and flees at the sight of divine glory.

48:8 The ships of Tarshish: large ships, named after the distant land or port of Tarshish, probably ancient Tartessus in southern Spain, although other identifications have been proposed, cf. Is 2:16; 60:9; Jon 1:3.

48:9 What we had heard we have now seen: the glorious things that new pilgrims had heard about the holy city—its beauty and awesomeness—they now see with their own eyes. The seeing here contrasts with the seeing of the hostile kings in Ps 48:6.

48:15 Our God for ever and ever: Israel's God is like Zion in being eternal and invincible. The holy city is therefore a kind of "sacrament" of God.

Psalm 49 The Psalm affirms confidence in God (cf. Ps 23; 27:1–6; 62) in the face of the apparent good fortune of the unjust rich, cf. Ps 37; 73. Reliance on wealth is misplaced (Ps 49:8–10) for it is of no avail in the face of death (Ps 49:18–20). After inviting all to listen to this axiom of faith (Ps 49:2–5), the psalmist depicts the self-delusion of the ungodly (Ps 49:6–13), whose destiny is to die like ignorant beasts (Ps 49:13, 18; cf. Prv 7:21–23). Their wealth should occasion no alarm, for they will come to nought, whereas God will save the just (Ps 49:14–20).

49:1 Korahites: see note on Ps 42:1.

49:5 Riddle: the psalmist's personal solution to the perennial biblical problem of the prosperity of the wicked. Question: parallel in meaning to problem; in wisdom literature it means the mysterious way of how the world works.

49:8 No man can ransom even a brother: an axiom. For the practice of redemption, cf. Jb 6:21–23. A play on the first Hebrew word of Ps 49:8, 16 relates the two verses.

49:16 Will take me: the same Hebrew verb is used of God “taking up” a favored servant: Enoch in Gn 5:24; Elijah in 2 Kgs 2:11–12; the righteous person in Ps 73:24. The verse apparently states the hope that God will rescue the faithful psalmist in the same manner.

Psalm 50 A covenant lawsuit stating that the sacrifice God really wants is the sacrifice of praise accompanied by genuine obedience (cf. Mi 6:1–8). It begins with a theophany and the summoning of the court (Ps 50:1–6). Then in direct address God explains what is required of the faithful (Ps 50:7–15), rebukes the hypocritical worshiper (Ps 50:16–21), and concludes with a threat and a promise (Ps 50:22–23; cf. Is 1:19–20).

Psalm 51 A lament, the most famous of the seven Penitential Psalms, prays for the removal of the personal and social disorders that sin has brought. The poem has two parts of approximately equal length: Ps 51:3–10 and Ps 51:11–19, and a conclusion in Ps 51:20–21. The two parts interlock by repetition of “blot out” in the first verse of each section (Ps 51:3, 11), of “wash (away)” just after the first verse of each section (Ps 51:4) and just before the last verse (Ps 51:9) of the first section, and of “heart,” “God,” and “spirit” in Ps 51:12, 19. The first part (Ps 51:3–10) asks deliverance from sin, not just a past act but its emotional, physical, and social consequences. The second part (Ps 51:11–19) seeks something more profound than wiping the slate clean: nearness to God, living by the spirit of God (Ps 51:12–13), like the relation between God and people described in Jer 31:33–34. Nearness to God brings joy and the authority to teach sinners (Ps 51:15–16). Such proclamation is better than offering sacrifice (Ps 51:17–19). The last two verses express the hope that God’s good will toward those who are cleansed and contrite will prompt him to look favorably on the acts of worship offered in the Jerusalem Temple (Ps 51:19 [20–21]).

51:7 In sin my mother conceived me: lit., “In iniquity was I conceived,” an instance of hyperbole: at no time was the psalmist ever without sin, cf. Ps 88:15, “I am mortally afflicted since youth,” i.e., I have always been afflicted. The verse does not imply that the sexual act of conception is sinful.

51:9 Hyssop: a small bush whose many woody twigs make a natural sprinkler. It was prescribed in the Mosaic law as an instrument for sprinkling sacrificial blood or lustral water for cleansing, cf. Ex 12:22; Lv 14:4; Nm 19:18.

51:18 For you do not desire sacrifice: the mere offering of the ritual sacrifice apart from good dispositions is not acceptable to God, cf. Ps 50.

51:20–21 Most scholars think that these verses were added to the Psalm some time after the destruction of the Temple in 587 B.C. The verses assume that the rebuilt Temple will be an ideal site for national reconciliation.

Psalm 52 A condemnation of the powerful and arrogant (Ps 52:3–6), who bring down upon themselves God’s judgment (Ps 52:7). The just, those who trust in God alone, are gladdened and strengthened by the downfall of their traditional enemies (Ps 52:8–9).

52:10 Like an olive tree: the righteous will flourish in the house of God like a well-watered olive tree, cf. Ps 92:14; 128:3.

Psalm 53 A lament of an individual, duplicated in Ps 14, except that “God” is used for “the Lord,” and Ps 53:6 is different, cf. Ps 14.

Psalm 54 A lament in which the person under attack calls directly upon God for help (Ps 54:3–5). Refusing to despair, the psalmist hopes in God, who is active in history and just (Ps 54:6–7). The Psalm ends with a serene promise to return thanks (Ps 54:8–9).

54:3 By your name: one is present in one’s name, hence God as revealed to human beings.

Psalm 55 The psalmist, betrayed by intimate friends (Ps 55:14–15, 20–21), prays that God punish those oath breakers and thus be acknowledged as the protector of the wronged. The sufferings of the psalmist include both ostracism (Ps 55:4) and mental turmoil (Ps 55:5–6), culminating in the wish to flee society (Ps 55:7–9). The wish for a sudden death for one’s enemies (Ps 55:16) occurs elsewhere in the Psalms; an example of such a death is the earth opening under the wicked Dathan and Abiram (Nm 16:31–32). The psalmist, confident of vindication, exhorts others to a like trust in the God of justice (Ps 55:23). The Psalm is not so much for personal vengeance as for a public vindication of God's righteousness now. There was no belief in an afterlife where such vindication could take place.

Psalm 56 Beset physically (Ps 56:2–3) and psychologically (Ps 56:6–7), the psalmist maintains a firm confidence in God (Ps 56:5, 9–10). Nothing will prevent the psalmist from keeping the vow to give thanks for God's gift of life (Ps 56:13). A refrain (Ps 56:5, 11–12) divides the Psalm in two equal parts.

56:1 Yonath elem rehoqim: Hebrew words probably designating the melody to which the Psalm was to be sung.

56:9 Are my tears not stored in your flask: a unique saying in the Old Testament. The context suggests that the tears are saved because they are precious; God puts a high value on each of the psalmist's troubles.

Psalm 57 Each of the two equal strophes contains a prayer for rescue from enemies, accompanied by joyful trust in God (Ps 57:2–5, 7–11). The refrain prays that God be manifested as saving (Ps 57:6, 12). Ps 108 is nearly identical to part of this Psalm (cf. Ps 57:8–11, Ps 108:2–6).

57:1 Do not destroy: probably the title of the melody to which the Psalm was to be sung.

57:2 The shadow of your wings: probably refers to the wings of the cherubim (powerful winged animals) whose wings spread over the ark in the inner chamber of the Temple (1 Kgs 6:23–28).

57:9 I will wake the dawn: by a bold figure the psalmist imagines the sound of music and singing will waken a new day.

Psalm 58 A lament expressing trust in God's power to dethrone all powers obstructing divine rule of the world. First condemned are "the gods," the powers that were popularly imagined to control human destinies (Ps 58:2–3), then "the wicked," the human instruments of these forces (Ps 58:4–6). The psalmist prays God to prevent them from harming the just (Ps 58:7–10). The manifestation of justice will gladden the just; they will see that their God is with them (Ps 58:11). The Psalm is less concerned with personal vengeance than with public vindication of God's justice now.

58:1 Do not destroy: probably the title of the melody to which the Psalm was to be sung.

58:2 Gods: the Bible sometimes understands pagan gods to be lesser divine beings who are assigned by Israel's God to rule the foreign nations. Here they are accused of injustice, permitting the human judges under their patronage to abuse the righteous, cf. Ps 82.

58:5–6 The image is that of a poisonous snake that is controlled by the voice or piping of its trainer.

58:9 A snail that oozes away: empty shells suggested to ancients that snails melted away as they left a slimy trail.

Psalm 59 A lament in two parts (Ps 59:2–9, 11b–17), each ending in a refrain (Ps 59:10, 18). Both parts alternate prayer for vindication (Ps 59:2–3, 4b–5, 11b–14) with vivid depictions of the psalmist's enemies (Ps 59:4–5a, 7–8, 15–16). The near curse in Ps 59:12–13 is not a crude desire for revenge but a wish that God's just rule over human affairs be recognized now.

59:1 Do not destroy: probably the title of the melody to which the Psalm was to be sung.

59:8 Who is there to hear?: a sample of the enemies' godless reflection. The answer is that God hears their blasphemies.

Psalm 60 The community complains that God has let the enemy win the battle (Ps 60:3–5) and asks for an assurance of victory (Ps 60:6–7). In the oracle God affirms ownership of the land; the invasion of other nations is not permanent and will be reversed ultimately (Ps 60:8–10). With renewed confidence, the community resolves to fight again (Ps 60:11). The opening lament is picked up again (Ps 60:12), but this time with new awareness of God's power and human limitation.

60:7–12 These verses occur again as the second half of Ps 108.

60:8 I will ... apportion ... measure out: God lays claim to these places. The valley of Succoth: probably the lower stretch of the Jabbok valley.

60:9 Judah, my own scepter: an allusion to the Testament of Jacob, Gn 49:10.

60:10 Moab is my washbowl: Moab borders the Dead Sea, hence a metaphor for the country. Upon Edom I cast my sandal: an ancient legal gesture of taking possession of land.

60:11 The fortified city: perhaps Bozrah, the fortified capital of Edom, cf. Is 34:6; 63:1; Am 1:12.

Psalm 61 A lament of the king who feels himself at the brink of death (Ps 61:3) and cries out for the strong and saving presence of God (Ps 61:3b–5). The king cites the prayer being made for him (Ps 61:7–8), and promises to give thanks to God.

61:3 Ends of the earth: “earth” being taken in its occasional meaning “the underworld,” cf. Jon 2:3.

61:8 Send your love and fidelity: as in Ps 43:3 the psalmist asks God to send these two divine attributes like angels to protect the king.

Psalm 62 A song of trust displaying serenity from experiencing God’s power (the refrains of Ps 62:2–3 and Ps 62:6–7) and anger toward unjust enemies (Ps 62:4–5). From the experience of being rescued, the psalmist can teach others to trust in God (Ps 62:9–12).

62:1 ‘Al Jeduthun: apparently the Hebrew name for the melody.

62:10 On a balance they rise: precious objects were weighed by balancing two pans suspended from a beam. The lighter pan rises.

62:12 One thing ... two things: parallelism of numbers for the sake of variation, a common device in Semitic poetry. One should not literally add up the numbers, cf. Am 1:3; Prv 6:16–19; 30:15, 18, 21.

Psalm 63 A Psalm expressing the intimate relationship between God and the worshiper. Separated from God (Ps 63:2), the psalmist longs for the divine life given in the Temple (Ps 63:3–6), which is based on a close relationship with God (Ps 63:7–9). May all my enemies be destroyed and God’s true worshipers continue in giving praise (Ps 63:10–11)!

63:4 For your love is better than life: only here in the Old Testament is anything prized above life—in this case God’s love.

63:12 All who swear by the Lord: to swear by a particular god meant that one was a worshiper of that god (Is 45:23; 48:1; Zep 1:5).

Psalm 64 A lament of a person overwhelmed by the malice of the wicked who are depicted in the Psalms as the enemies of the righteous (Ps 64:2–7). When people see God bringing upon the wicked the evil they intended against others, they will know who is the true ruler of the world (Ps 64:8–10). The final verse is a vow of praise (Ps 64:11).

Psalm 65 The community, aware of its unworthiness (Ps 65:3–4), gives thanks for divine bounty (Ps 65:5), a bounty resulting from God’s creation victory (Ps 65:6–9). At God’s touch the earth comes alive with vegetation and flocks (Ps 65:10–13).

65:2 Vows: the Israelites were accustomed to promising sacrifices in the Temple if their prayers were heard.

65:3 To you all flesh must come: all must have recourse to God’s mercy.

65:6 Awesome deeds: the acts of creating—installing mountains, taming seas, restraining nations (Ps 65:7–8)—that are visible worldwide (Ps 65:6, 9).

65:10–14 Apparently a description of the agricultural year, beginning with the first fall rains that soften the hard sunbaked soil (Ps 65:9–10).

65:10 God’s stream: the fertile waters of the earth derive from God’s fertile waters in the heavenly world.

65:12 Paths: probably the tracks of God’s storm chariot dropping rain upon earth.

Psalm 66 In the first part (Ps 66:1–12), the community praises God for powerful acts for Israel, both in the past (the exodus from Egypt and the entry into the land [Ps 66:6]) and in the present (deliverance from a recent but unspecified calamity [Ps 66:8–12]). In the second part (Ps 66:13–20), an individual from the rescued community fulfills a vow to offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving. As often in thanksgivings, the rescued person steps forward to teach the community what God has done (Ps 66:16–20).

66:5–6 cf. the events described in Ex 14:1–15, 21; Jos 3:11–4:24 and Ps 114.

66:12 You let captors set foot on our neck: lit., “you let men mount our heads.” Conquerors placed their feet on the neck of their enemies as a sign of complete defeat, cf. Jos 10:24. A ceremonial footstool of the Egyptian king Tutankhamen portrays bound and prostrate bodies of enemies ready for the king’s feet on their heads, and one of Tutankhamen’s ceremonial chariots depicts the king as a sphinx standing with paw atop the neck of an enemy.

66:13 Burnt offerings: cf. Lv 1:3–13; 6:1–4; 22:17–20.

Psalm 67 A petition for a bountiful harvest (Ps 67:7), made in the awareness that Israel’s prosperity will persuade the nations to worship its God.

67:2 May God be gracious to us: the people’s petition echoes the blessing pronounced upon them by the priests, cf. Nm 6:22–27.

Psalm 68 The Psalm is extremely difficult because the Hebrew text is badly preserved and the ceremony that it describes is uncertain. The translation assumes the Psalm accompanied the early autumn Feast of Tabernacles (Sukkoth), which included a procession of the tribes (Ps 68:25–28). Israel was being oppressed by a foreign power, perhaps Egypt (Ps 68:31–32)—unless Egypt stands for any oppressor. The Psalm may have been composed from segments of ancient poems, which would explain why the transitions are implied rather than explicitly stated. At any rate, Ps 68:2 is based on Nm 10:35–36, and Ps 68:8–9 are derived from Jgs 5:4–5. The argument develops in nine stanzas (each of three to five poetic lines): 1. confidence that God will destroy Israel’s enemies (Ps 68:2–4); 2. call to praise God as savior (Ps 68:5–7); 3. God’s initial rescue of Israel from Egypt (Ps 68:8), the Sinai encounter (Ps 68:9), and the settlement in Canaan (Ps 68:10–11); 4. the defeat of the Canaanite kings (Ps 68:12–15); 5. the taking of Jerusalem, where Israel’s God will rule the world (Ps 68:16–19); 6. praise for God’s past help and for the future interventions that will be modeled on the ancient exodus-conquest (Ps 68:20–24); 7. procession at the Feast of Tabernacles (Ps 68:25–28); 8. prayer that the defeated enemies bring tribute to the Temple (Ps 68:29–32); 9. invitation for all kingdoms to praise Israel’s God (Ps 68:33–35).

68:2 The opening line alluding to Nm 10:35 makes clear that God’s assistance in the period of the exodus and conquest is the model and assurance of all future divine help.

68:5 Exalt the rider of the clouds: God’s intervention is in the imagery of Canaanite myth in which the storm-god mounted the storm clouds to ride to battle. Such theophanies occur throughout the Psalm: Ps 68:2–3, 8–10, 12–15, 18–19, 22–24, 29–32, 34–35. See Dt 33:26; Ps 18:8–16; Is 19:1.

68:7 While rebels live in the desert: rebels must live in the arid desert, whereas God’s people will live in the well-watered land (Ps 68:8–11).

68:15 Zalmon: generally taken as the name of a mountain where snow is visible in winter, perhaps to be located in the Golan Heights or in the mountains of Bashan or Hauran east of the Sea of Galilee.

68:17 The mountain: Mount Zion, the site of the Temple.

68:23 Even from Bashan ... from the depths of the sea: the heights and the depths, the farthest places where enemies might flee.

68:25–28 Your procession: the procession renews God’s original taking up of residence on Zion, described in Ps 68:16–19.

68:31 The wild beast of the reeds: probably the Nile crocodile, a symbol for Egypt; see Ps 68:32 and Ez 29:2–5.

Psalm 69 A lament complaining of suffering in language both metaphorical (Ps 69:2–3, 15–16, the waters of chaos) and literal (Ps 69:4, 5, 9, 11–13, exhaustion, alienation from family and community, false accusation). In the second part the psalmist prays with special emphasis that the enemies be punished for all to see (Ps 69:23–29). Despite the pain, the psalmist does not lose hope that all be set right, and promises public praise (Ps 69:30–36). The Psalm, which depicts the suffering of the innocent just person vividly, is cited often by the New Testament especially in the passion accounts, e.g., Ps 69:5 in Jn 15:25; Ps 69:22 in Mk 15:23, 36 and parallels and in Jn 19:29. The Psalm prays not so much for personal vengeance as for public vindication of God's justice. There was, at this time, no belief in an afterlife where such vindication could take place. Redress had to take place now, in the sight of all.

69:1 “Lilies”: apparently the name of the melody.

69:2 Waters: the waters of chaos from which God created the world are a common metaphor for extreme distress, cf. Ps 18:5; 42:8; 88:8; Jon 2:3–6.

69:5 What I did not steal: the psalmist, falsely accused of theft, is being forced to make restitution.

69:10 Zeal for your house has consumed me: the psalmist's commitment to God's cause brings only opposition, cf. Jn 2:17. I am scorned by those who scorn you: Rom 15:3 uses the verse as an example of Jesus' unselfishness.

69:31 That I may praise God's name in song: the actual song is cited in Ps 69:33–35, the word “praise” in Ps 69:35 referring back to “praise” in Ps 69:31.

Psalm 70 A lament of a poor and afflicted person (Ps 70:6) who has no resource except God, and who cries out to be saved from the enemy. The Psalm is almost identical to Ps 40:14–17.

Psalm 71 A lament of an old person (Ps 71:9, 18) whose afflictions are interpreted by enemies as a divine judgment (Ps 71:11). The first part of the Psalm pleads for help (Ps 71:1–4) on the basis of a hope learned from a lifetime's experience of God; the second part describes the menace (Ps 71:9–13) yet remains buoyant (Ps 71:14–16); the third develops the theme of hope and praise.

71:7 A portent to many: the afflictions of the sufferer are taken as a manifestation of God's anger, cf. Dt 28:46; Ps 31:12.

Psalm 72 A royal Psalm in which the Israelite king, as the representative of God, is the instrument of divine justice (Ps 72:1–4, 12–14) and blessing (Ps 72:5–7, 15–17) for the whole world. The king is human, giving only what he has received from God. Hence intercession must be made for him. The extravagant language is typical of oriental royal courts.

72:2 The king ... the king's son: the crown prince is the king's son; the prayer envisages the dynasty.

72:8 From sea to sea ... the ends of the earth: the boundaries of the civilized world known at the time: from the Mediterranean Sea (the western sea) to the Persian Gulf (the eastern sea), and from the Euphrates (the river) to the islands and lands of southwestern Europe, “the ends of the earth.” The words may also have a mythic nuance—the earth surrounded by cosmic waters, hence everywhere.

72:10 Tarshish and the islands: the far west (Ps 48:6); Arabia and Seba: the far south (1 Kgs 10:1).

72:14 Their blood: cf. Ps 116:15.

72:16 The translation of the difficult Hebrew is tentative.

72:17 May the tribes of the earth give blessings with his name: an echo of the promise to the ancestors (Gn 12:3; 26:4; 28:14), suggesting that the monarchy in Israel fulfilled the promise to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

72:18–19 A doxology marking the end of Book II of the Psalter.

Psalm 73 The opening verse of this probing poem (cf. Ps 37; 49) is actually the psalmist's hard-won conclusion from personal experience: God is just and good! The psalmist describes near loss of faith (Ps 73:2–3), occasioned by observing the wicked who blasphemed God with seeming impunity (Ps 73:4–12). Feeling abandoned despite personal righteousness, the psalmist could not bear the injustice until an experience of God’s nearness in the Temple made clear how deluded the wicked were. Their sudden destruction shows their impermanence (Ps 73:13–20). The just can thus be confident, for, as the psalmist now knows, their security is from God (Ps 73:1, 23–28).

73:9 They set their mouths against the heavens: in an image probably derived from mythic stories of half-divine giants, the monstrous speech of the wicked is likened to enormous jaws gaping wide, devouring everything in sight.

73:10 The Hebrew is obscure.

73:17 And came to understand their end: the psalmist receives a double revelation in the Temple: 1) the end of the wicked comes unexpectedly (Ps 73:18–20); 2) God is with me.

73:24 And at the end receive me with honor: a perhaps deliberately enigmatic verse. It is understood by some commentators as reception into heavenly glory, hence the traditional translation, “receive me into glory.” The Hebrew verb can indeed refer to mysterious divine elevation of a righteous person into God’s domain: Enoch in Gn 5:24; Elijah in 2 Kgs 2:11–12; the righteous psalmist in Ps 49:16. Personal resurrection in the Old Testament, however, is clearly attested only in the second century B.C. The verse is perhaps best left unspecified as a reference to God’s nearness and protection.

73:28 In the gates of daughter Zion: this reading follows the tradition of the Septuagint and Vulgate.

Psalms 74 A communal lament sung when the enemy invaded the Temple; it would be especially appropriate at the destruction of Jerusalem in 587 B.C. Israel’s God is urged to look upon the ruined sanctuary and remember the congregation who worshiped there (Ps 74:1–11). People and sanctuary are bound together; an attack on Zion is an attack on Israel. In the second half of the poem, the community brings before God the story of their origins—their creation (Ps 74:12–17)—in order to move God to reenact that deed of creation now. Will God allow a lesser power to destroy the divine project (Ps 74:18–23)?

74:1 Forever: the word implies that the disaster is already of long duration, cf. Ps 74:9 and note.

74:9 Even so we have seen no signs ... : ancients often asked prophets to say for how long a divine punishment was to last, cf. 2 Sm 24:13. Here no prophet has arisen to indicate the duration.

74:11 Why hold back ... within your bosom: i.e., idle beneath your cloak.

74:12–17 Comparable Canaanite literature describes the storm-god’s victory over all-encompassing Sea and its allies (dragons and Leviathan) and the subsequent peaceful arrangement of the universe, sometimes through the placement of paired cosmic elements (day and night, sun and moon), cf. Ps 89:12–13. The Psalm apparently equates the enemies attacking the Temple with the destructive cosmic forces already tamed by God. Why then are those forces now raging untamed against your own people?

74:15 Waters: lit., “rivers” (cf. Ps 24:7; Is 50:2) upon which, or from which, in primordial times the earth is created.

Psalms 75 The psalmist gives thanks and rejoices (Ps 75:2, 10) for the direct intervention of God, which is promised in two oracles (Ps 75:3–4, 11). Expecting that divine intervention, the psalmist warns evildoers to repent (Ps 75:5–9).

75:2 You said: supplied for clarity here and in Ps 75:11. The translation assumes in both places that the psalmist is citing an oracle of God.

75:5 Do not raise your horns!: the horn is the symbol of strength; to raise one’s horn is to exalt one’s own power as Ps 75:5 explains.

75:9 A cup: “the cup of God’s wrath” is the punishment inflicted on the wicked, cf. Is 51:17; Jer 25:15–29; 49:12; Ez 23:31–33. Spiced: lit., “a mixed drink”; spices or drugs were added to wine, cf. Prov 9:2, 5.

Psalm 76 A song glorifying Zion, the mountain of Jerusalem where God destroyed Israel's enemies. Zion is thus the appropriate site to celebrate the victory (Ps 76:3–4), a victory described in parallel scenes (Ps 76:5–7, 8–11). Israel is invited to worship its powerful patron deity (Ps 76:12).

76:3 Salem: an ancient name for Jerusalem, used here perhaps on account of its allusion to the Hebrew word for peace, shalom, cf. Gn 14:18; Heb 7:1–3.

76:5 Ancient mountains: conjectural translation of a difficult Hebrew phrase on the basis of Gn 49:26. The mountains are part of the structure of the universe (Ps 89:12–13).

Psalm 77 A community lament in which the speaker (“I”) describes the anguish of Israel at God’s silence when its very existence is at stake (Ps 77:2–11). In response the speaker recites the story of how God brought the people into existence (Ps 77:12–20). The question is thus posed to God: Will you allow the people you created to be destroyed?

77:11 I conclude: lit., “I said.” The psalmist, after pondering the present distress and God’s promises to Israel, has decided that God has forgotten the people.

77:12 I will recall: the verb sometimes means to make present the great deeds of Israel’s past by reciting them, cf. Ps 78:42; 105:5; 106:7.

77:17 The deeps of the sea: Heb. tehom; the same word is used in Gn 1:2, where it alludes to the primeval seas which in ancient Semitic cosmography are tamed by God in creation, cf. Ps 74:12–17; 89:12–13 and notes.

Psalm 78 A recital of history to show that past generations did not respond to God’s gracious deeds and were punished by God making the gift into a punishment. Will Israel fail to appreciate God’s act—the choosing of Zion and of David? The tripartite introduction invites Israel to learn the lessons hidden in its traditions (Ps 78:1–4, 5–7, 8–11); each section ends with the mention of God’s acts. There are two distinct narratives of approximately equal length: the wilderness events (Ps 78:12–39) and the movement from Egypt to Canaan (Ps 78:40–72). The structure of both is parallel: gracious act (Ps 78:12–16, 40–55), rebellion (Ps 78:17–20, 56–58), divine punishment (Ps 78:21–31, 59–64), God’s readiness to forgive and begin anew (Ps 78:32–39, 65–72). While the Psalm has been thought to reflect the reunification program of either King Hezekiah (late eighth century) or King Josiah (late seventh century) in that the Northern Kingdom (Ephraim, Joseph) is especially invited to accept Zion and the Davidic king, a postexilic setting is also possible. Notable is the inclusion of the David-Zion tradition into the history of Israel recounted in the sources of the Pentateuch.

78:2 Parable: Hebrew mashal literally refers to some sort of relationship of comparison and can signify a story whose didactic potential becomes clear in the telling, as here in the retrospective examination of the history of Israel. Mt 13:35 cites the verse to explain Jesus’ use of parables.

78:9 Ephraimite archers: Ephraim was the most important tribe of the Northern Kingdom. Its military defeat (here unspecified) demonstrates its infidelity to God, who otherwise would have protected it.

78:12, 43 Zoan: a city on the arm of the Nile, a former capital of Egypt.

78:23–31 On the manna and the quail, see Ex 16 and Nm 11. Unlike Ex 16, here both manna and quail are instruments of punishment, showing that a divine gift can become deadly because of Israel’s apostasy.

78:25 Bread of the angels: the translation “angels” comports with the supernatural origin of the manna, though the Hebrew lechem ‘abbirim is more literally translated as “bread of the strong ones” or “bread of the mighty.” In the context of the manna event, this phrase cannot possibly mean the Israelites or any human being.

78:35 Remembered: invoked God publicly in worship. Their words were insincere (Ps 78:36).

78:38 God is always ready to forgive and begin anew, as in choosing Zion and David (Ps 78:65–72).

78:43–55 Ex 7–12 records ten plagues. Here there are six divine attacks upon Egypt; the seventh climactic act is God’s bringing Israel to the holy land.

78:58 Provoked him: lit., “made him jealous.”

78:60 Shiloh: an important shrine in the north prior to Jerusalem. Despite its holy status, it was destroyed (Ps 78:60–64; cf. Jer 7:12, 14).

78:68, 70 God’s ultimate offer of mercy to the sinful, helpless people is Zion and the Davidic king.

Psalm 79 A communal lament complaining that the nations have defiled the Temple and murdered the holy people, leaving their corpses unburied (Ps 79:1–4). The occasion is probably the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonian army in 587 B.C. The people ask how long the withdrawal of divine favor will last (Ps 79:5), pray for action now (Ps 79:6–7), and admit that their own sins have brought about the catastrophe (Ps 79:8–9). They seek to persuade God to act for reasons of honor: the nations who do not call upon the Name are running amok (Ps 79:6); the divine honor is compromised (Ps 79:1, 10, 12); God’s own servants suffer (Ps 79:2–4, 11).

Psalm 80 A community lament in time of military defeat. Using the familiar image of Israel as a vineyard, the people complain that God has broken down the wall protecting the once splendid vine brought from Egypt (Ps 80:9–14). They pray that God will again turn to them and use the Davidic king to lead them to victory (Ps 80:15–19).

80:1 Lilies . . . Eduth: the first term is probably the title of the melody to which the Psalm was to be sung; the second is unexplained.

80:6 Both the Septuagint and the Vulgate translate this verse in the first person, i.e., “You have fed us the bread of tears.”

80:9 A vine: a frequent metaphor for Israel, cf. Is 5:1–7; 27:2–5; Jer 2:21; Hos 10:1; Mt 21:33.

80:12 The sea: the Mediterranean. The river: the Euphrates, cf. Gn 15:18; 1 Kgs 5:1. The terms may also have a mythic nuance—the seas that surround the earth; sea and river are sometimes paralleled in poetry.

80:16 The Vulgate and Septuagint use “son of man.”

80:18 The man on your right: the Davidic king who will lead the army in battle.

Psalm 81 At a pilgrimage feast, probably harvest in the fall, the people assemble in the Temple in accord with the Sinai ordinances (Ps 81:2–6). They hear a divine word (mediated by a Temple speaker) telling how God rescued them from slavery in Egypt (Ps 81:7–9), gave them the fundamental commandment of fidelity (Ps 81:9–11), which would bring punishment if they refused to obey (Ps 81:12–13). But if Israel repents, God will be with them once again, bestowing protection and fertility (Ps 81:14–16).

81:4 New moon . . . full moon: the pilgrimage feast of harvest began with a great assembly (Lv 23:24; Nm 29:1), used the new moon as a sign (Nm 29:6), and included trumpets (Lv 23:24).

81:7 I heard a tongue I did not know: a Temple official speaks the word of God (Ps 81:5b–16), which is authoritative and unlike merely human words (cf. Nm 24:4, 16).

81:7 I removed his shoulder from the burden: A reference to the liberation of Israel from slavery in Egypt. The basket: for carrying clay to make bricks, cf. Ex 1:14.

81:8 Meribah: place of rebellion in the wilderness; cf. Ex 17:7; Nm 20:13.

81:10 There shall be no foreign god among you: as in Ps 50 and 95, Israel is challenged to obey the first commandment of fidelity to God after the proclamation of the exodus.

Psalm 82 As in Ps 58, the pagan gods are seen as subordinate divine beings to whom Israel’s God had delegated oversight of the foreign countries in the beginning (Dt 32:8–9). Now God arises in the heavenly assembly (Ps 82:1) to rebuke the unjust “gods” (Ps 82:2–4), who are stripped of divine status and reduced in rank to mortals (Ps 82:5–7). They are accused of misruling the earth by not upholding the poor. A short prayer for universal justice concludes the Psalm (Ps 82:8).

82:5 The gods are blind and unable to declare what is right. Their misrule shakes earth's foundations (cf. Ps 11:3; 75:4), which God made firm in creation (Ps 96:10).

82:6 I declare: "Gods though you be": in Jn 10:34 Jesus uses the verse to prove that those to whom the word of God is addressed can fittingly be called "gods."

82:8 Judge the earth: according to Dt 32:8–9, Israel's God had originally assigned jurisdiction over the foreign nations to the subordinate deities, keeping Israel as a personal possession. Now God will directly take over the rulership of the whole world.

Psalm 83 The community lament complains to God of the nations' attempts to wipe out the name of Israel (Ps 83:1–8). The psalmist sees all Israel's enemies throughout its history united in a conspiracy (Ps 83:2–8). May God destroy the current crop of enemies as the enemies of old were destroyed (Ps 83:9–12), and may they be pursued until they acknowledge the name of Israel's God (Ps 83:13–18).

83:7–9 Apart from the Assyrians, all the nations listed here were neighbors of Israel. The Hagrites are a tribe of the desert regions east of Ammon and Moab (1 Chr 5:10, 19–22). Gebal is the Phoenician city of Byblos or perhaps a mountain region south of the Dead Sea. The descendants of Lot are Moab and Edom (Gn 19:36–38 and Dt 2:9). These nations were never united against Israel in the same period; the Psalm has lumped them all together.

83:10–13 For the historical events, see Jgs 4–8.

83:17 Seek your name: a variant of the more typical phrase "to seek the face of God" (Ps 24:6; 27:8; 105:4). Seeking the face of God refers to the worshiper having recourse to a temple or sanctuary where in non-Jewish contexts a statue embodies the physical presence of the Deity. In Israel's aniconic tradition no visible image or statue can represent God. This understanding is conveyed here concretely by use of the term "your name" rather than the more typical "your face."

Psalm 84 Israelites celebrated three pilgrimage feasts in Jerusalem annually. The Psalm expresses the sentiments of the pilgrims eager to enjoy the divine presence.

84:4 The desire of a restless bird for a secure home is an image of the desire of a pilgrim for the secure house of God, cf. Ps 42:2–3, where the image for the desire of the pilgrim is the thirst of the deer for water.

84:7 Baca valley: Hebrew obscure; probably a valley on the way to Jerusalem.

84:8 Strength to strength: pass through outer and inner wall.

84:10 Our shield ... your anointed: the king had a role in the liturgical celebration. For the king as shield, cf. Ps 89:19.

Psalm 85 A national lament reminding God of past favors and forgiveness (Ps 85:2–4) and begging for forgiveness and grace now (Ps 85:5–8). A speaker represents the people who wait humbly with open hearts (Ps 85:9–10): God will be active on their behalf (Ps 85:11–13). The situation suggests the conditions of Judea during the early postexilic period, the fifth century B.C.; the thoughts are similar to those of postexilic prophets (Hg 1:5–11; 2:6–9).

85:9 The prophet listens to God's revelation, cf. Heb 2:1.

85:11–13 Divine activity is personified as pairs of virtues.

Psalm 86 An individual lament. The psalmist, "poor and oppressed" (Ps 86:1), "devoted" (Ps 86:2), "your servant" (Ps 86:2, 4, 16), "rescued ... from the depths of Sheol" (Ps 86:13), attacked by the ruthless (Ps 86:14), desires only God's protection (Ps 86:1–7, 11–17).

Psalm 87 A song of Zion, like Ps 46; 48; 76; 132.

87:2 The gates: the city itself, a common Hebrew idiom.

87:5–6 The bond between the exile and the holy city was so strong as to override the exile's citizenship of lesser cities.

Psalm 88 A lament in which the psalmist prays for rescue from the alienation of approaching death. Each of the three stanzas begins with a call to God (Ps 88:2, 10, 14) and complains of the death that separates one from God. The tone is persistently grim.

88:4–8 In imagination the psalmist already experiences the alienation of Sheol.

88:11–13 The psalmist seeks to persuade God to act out of concern for divine honor: the shades give you no worship, so keep me alive to offer you praise.

88:12 Perished: lit., “Abaddon,” the deepest part of Sheol.

Psalm 89 The community laments the defeat of the Davidic king, to whom God promised kingship as enduring as the heavens (Ps 89:2–5). The Psalm narrates how God became king of the divine beings (Ps 89:6–9) and how the Davidic king became king of earthly kings (Ps 89:20–38). Since the defeat of the king calls into question God’s promise, the community ardently prays God to be faithful to the original promise to David (Ps 89:39–52).

89:3–5 David’s dynasty is to be as long-lasting as the heavens, a statement reinforced by using the same verbs (establish, stand) both of the divine love and loyalty and of the Davidic dynasty and throne, cf. Ps 89:29–30.

89:7 The sons of the gods: “the holy ones” and “courtiers” of Ps 89:6, 8. These heavenly spirits are members of God’s court.

89:11 Rahab: a mythological sea monster whose name is used in the Bible mainly as a personification of primeval chaos, cf. Jb 9:13; 26:12; Ps 74:13–14; Is 51:9.

89:13 Zaphon and Amanus: two sacred mountains in northern Syria which came to designate the directions of north and south. Tabor: a high hill in the valley of Jezreel in northern Israel. Hermon: a mountain in Lebanon, forming the southern spur of the Anti-Lebanon range.

89:18, 25 Horn: a concrete noun for an abstract quality; horn is a symbol of strength.

89:26 The sea ... the rivers: geographically the limits of the Davidic empire (the Mediterranean and the Euphrates); mythologically, the traditional forces of chaos. See note on Ps 89:11.

89:28 Most High: a divine title, which is here extended to David as God’s own king, cf. Ps 2:7–9; Is 9:5. As God rules over the members of the heavenly council (Ps 89:6–9), so David, God’s surrogate, rules over earthly kings.

89:37–38 Like the sun before me ... like the sky: as enduring as the heavenly lights, cf. Ps 89:2–5 and Ps 72:5, 17.

89:53 The doxology at the end of the third book of the Psalms; it is not part of Ps 89.

Psalm 90 A communal lament that describes only in general terms the cause of the community’s distress. After confidently invoking God (Ps 90:1), the Psalm turns to a complaint contrasting God’s eternity with the brevity of human life (Ps 90:2–6) and sees in human suffering the punishment for sin (Ps 90:7–12). The Psalm concludes with a plea for God’s intervention (Ps 90:13–17).

90:3 Dust: one word of God is enough to return mortals to the dust from which they were created. Human beings were created from earth in Gn 2:7; 3:19.

90:5 You wash them away: the Hebrew of Ps 90:4–5 is unclear.

90:6 It is wilted and withered: the transitory nature of the grass under the scorching sun was proverbial, cf. Ps 129:6; Is 40:6–8.

Psalm 91 A prayer of someone who has taken refuge in the Lord, possibly within the Temple (Ps 91:1–2). The psalmist is confident that God’s presence will protect the people in every dangerous situation (Ps 91:3–13). The final verses are an oracle of salvation promising salvation to those who trust in God (Ps 91:14–16).

91:1 The shelter of the Most High: basically “hiding place” but in the Psalms a designation for the protected Temple precincts, cf. Ps 27:5; 31:21; 61:5. The shade of the Almighty: lit., “the shadow of the wings of the Almighty,” cf. Ps 17:8; 36:8; 57:2; 63:8. Ps 91:4 makes clear that the shadow is an image of the safety afforded by the outstretched wings of the cherubim in the holy of holies.

91:11–12 The words are cited in Lk 4:10–11; Mt 4:6, as Satan tempts Jesus in the desert.

Psalm 92 A hymn of praise and thanks for God's faithful deeds (Ps 92:2–5). The wicked, deluded by their prosperity (Ps 92:6–9), are punished (Ps 92:10), whereas the psalmist has already experienced God's protection (Ps 92:11–15).

92:14 Planted: the just are likened to trees growing in the sacred precincts of the Temple, which is often seen as the source of life and fertility because of God's presence, cf. Ps 36:9, 10; Ez 47:1–12.

Psalm 93 A hymn celebrating the kingship of God, who created the world (Ps 93:1–2) by defeating the sea (Ps 93:3–4). In the ancient myth that is alluded to here, Sea completely covered the land, making it impossible for the human community to live. Sea, or Flood, roars in anger against God, who is personified in the storm. God's utterances or decrees are given authority by the victory over Sea (Ps 93:5).

93:1 The LORD is king: lit., “the LORD reigns.” This Psalm, and Ps 47; 96–99, are sometimes called enthronement Psalms. They may have been used in a special liturgy during which God's ascent to the throne was ritually reenacted. They have also been interpreted eschatologically, pointing to the coming of God as king at the end-time.

Psalm 94 A lament of an individual who is threatened by wicked people. The danger affects the whole community. Calling upon God as judge (Ps 94:1–2), the Psalm complains about oppression of the holy community by people within (Ps 94:3–7). Bold declarations of faith follow: denunciation of evildoers (Ps 94:8–11) and assurance to the just (Ps 94:12–15). The Psalm continues with further lament (Ps 94:16–19) and ends with strong confidence in God's response (Ps 94:20–23).

Psalm 95 Twice the Psalm calls the people to praise and worship God (Ps 95:1–2, 6), the king of all creatures (Ps 95:3–5) and shepherd of the flock (Ps 95:7a, 7b). The last strophe warns the people to be more faithful than were their ancestors in the journey to the promised land (Ps 95:7c–11). This invitation to praise God regularly opens the Church's official prayer, the Liturgy of the Hours.

95:8 Meribah: lit., “contention”; the place where the Israelites quarreled with God. Massah: “testing,” the place where they put God to the trial, cf. Ex 17:7; Nm 20:13.

95:11 My rest: the promised land as in Dt 12:9. Heb 4 applies the verse to the eternal rest of heaven.

Psalm 96 A hymn inviting all humanity to praise the glories of Israel's God (Ps 96:1–3), who is the sole God (Ps 96:4–6). To the just ruler of all belongs worship (Ps 96:7–10); even inanimate creation is to offer praise (Ps 96:11–13). This Psalm has numerous verbal and thematic contacts with Is 40–55, as does Ps 98. Another version of the Psalm is 1 Chr 16:23–33.

96:4 For references to other gods, see comments on Ps 58 and 82.

Psalm 97 The hymn begins with God appearing in a storm, a traditional picture of some ancient Near Eastern gods (Ps 97:1–6); cf. Ps 18:8–16; Mi 1:3–4; Heb 3:3–15. Israel rejoices in the overthrowing of idol worshipers and their gods (Ps 97:7–9) and the rewarding of the faithful righteous (Ps 97:10–12).

97:7 All gods: divine beings thoroughly subordinate to Israel's God. The Greek translates “angels,” an interpretation adopted by Heb 1:6.

Psalm 98 A hymn, similar to Ps 96, extolling God for Israel's victory (Ps 98:1–3). All nations (Ps 98:4–6) and even inanimate nature (Ps 98:7–8) are summoned to welcome God's coming to rule over the world (Ps 98:9).

98:1 Marvelous deeds ... victory: the conquest of all threats to the peaceful existence of Israel, depicted in the Psalms variously as a cosmic force such as sea, or nations bent on Israel's destruction, or evildoers seemingly triumphant. His right hand and holy arm: God is pictured as a powerful warrior.

Psalm 99 A hymn to God as the king whose grandeur is most clearly seen on Mount Zion (Ps 99:2) and in the laws given to Israel (Ps 99:4). Israel is special because of God's word of justice, which was mediated by the revered speakers, Moses, Aaron, and Samuel (Ps 99:6–8). The poem is structured by the threefold statement that God is holy (Ps 99:3, 5, 9) and by the twice-repeated command to praise (Ps 99:5, 9).

99:1 Enthroned on the cherubim: cherubim were composite beings with animal and human features, common in ancient Near Eastern art. Two cherubim were placed on the ark (or box) of the covenant in the holy of holies. Upon them God was believed to dwell invisibly, cf. Ex 25:20–22; 1 Sm 4:4; 2 Sm 6:2; Ps 80:2.

99:5 Footstool: a reference to the ark, cf. 1 Chr 28:2; Ps 132:7.

Psalm 100 A hymn inviting the people to enter the Temple courts with thank offerings for the God who created them.

100:3 Although the people call on all the nations of the world to join in their hymn, they are conscious of being the chosen people of God.

Psalm 101 The king, grateful at being God's chosen (Ps 101:1), promises to be a ruler after God's own heart (Ps 101:2–3), allowing into the royal service only the God-fearing (Ps 101:3–8).

101:2 Within my household: the king promises to make his own household, i.e., the royal court, a model for Israel, banning all officials who abuse their power.

101:6 I look to the faithful of the land: the king seeks companions only among those faithful to God.

101:8 Morning after morning: the morning is the normal time for the administration of justice (2 Sm 15:2; Jer 21:12) and for the arrival of divine aid (Ps 59:17; 143:8; Is 33:2). I clear all the wicked from the land: the king, as God's servant, is responsible for seeing that divine justice is carried out.

Psalm 102 A lament, one of the Penitential Psalms. The psalmist, experiencing psychological and bodily disintegration (Ps 102:4–12), cries out to God (Ps 102:1–3). In the Temple precincts where God has promised to be present, the psalmist recalls God's venerable promises to save the poor (Ps 102:13–23). The final part (Ps 102:24–28) restates the original complaint and prayer, and emphasizes God's eternity.

102:9 They make my name a curse: enemies use the psalmist's name in phrases such as, "May you be as wretched as this person!"

102:20–23 Both Ps 102:20–21 and Ps 102:22–23 depend on Ps 102:19.

102:25 In the midst of my days: when the normal span of life is but half completed, cf. Is 38:10; Jer 17:11.

Psalm 103 The speaker in this hymn begins by praising God for personal benefits (Ps 103:1–5), then moves on to God's mercy toward all the people (Ps 103:6–18). Even sin cannot destroy that mercy (Ps 103:11–13), for the eternal God is well aware of the people's human fragility (Ps 103:14–18). The psalmist invites the heavenly beings to join in praise (Ps 103:19–22).

103:5 Your youth is renewed like the eagle's: because of the eagle's long life it was a symbol of perennial youth and vigor, cf. Is 40:31.

Psalm 104 A hymn praising God who easily and skillfully made rampaging waters and primordial night into a world vibrant with life. The psalmist describes God's splendor in the heavens (Ps 104:1–4), how the chaotic waters were tamed to fertilize and feed the world (Ps 104:5–18), and how primordial night was made into a gentle time of refreshment (Ps 104:19–23). The picture is like Gn 1:1–2: a dark and watery chaos is made dry and lighted so that creatures might live. The psalmist reacts to the beauty of creation with awe (Ps 104:24–34). May sin not deface God's work (Ps 104:35)!

104:3 Your chambers upon the waters: God's heavenly dwelling above the upper waters of the sky, cf. Gn 1:6–7; Ps 29:10.

104:5–9 God places the gigantic disk of the earth securely on its foundation and then, as a warrior, chases away the enveloping waters and confines them under, above, and around the earth.

104:16–18 Even the exotic flora and fauna of the high mountains of the Lebanon range receive adequate water.

104:26 Leviathan: a sea monster symbolizing primeval chaos, cf. Ps 74:14; Is 27:1; Jb 40:25. God does not destroy chaos but makes it part of the created order.

104:29–30 On one level, the spirit (or wind) of God is the fall and winter rains that provide food for all creatures. On another, it is the breath (or spirit) of God that makes beings live.

104:35 Hallelujah: a frequent word in the last third of the Psalter. The word combines the plural imperative of praise (hallelu) with an abbreviated form of the divine name Yah(weh).

Psalm 105 A hymn to God who promised the land of Canaan to the holy people, cf. Ps 78; 106; 136. Israel is invited to praise and seek the presence of God (Ps 105:1–6), who is faithful to the promise of land to the ancestors (Ps 105:7–11). In every phase of the national story—the ancestors in the land of Canaan (Ps 105:12–15), Joseph in Egypt (Ps 105:16–22), Israel in Egypt (Ps 105:23–38), Israel in the desert on the way to Canaan (Ps 105:39–45)—God remained faithful, reiterating the promise of the land to successive servants.

105:14 Kings: Pharaoh and Abimelech of Gerar, cf. Gn 12:17; 20:6–7.

105:15 My anointed ones ... my prophets: the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who were “anointed” in the sense of being consecrated and recipients of God’s revelation.

105:16 The grain that sustained them: lit., every “staff of bread.”

105:23, 27 The land of Ham: a synonym for Egypt, cf. Gn 10:6.

105:27–38 This Psalm and Ps 78:43–51 have an account of the plagues differing in number or in order from Ex 7:14–12:30. Several versions of the exodus story were current.

Psalm 106 Israel is invited to praise the God whose mercy has always tempered judgment of Israel (Ps 106:1–3). The speaker, on behalf of all, seeks solidarity with the people, who can always count on God’s fidelity despite their sin (Ps 106:4–5). Confident of God’s mercy, the speaker invites national repentance (Ps 106:6) by reciting from Israel’s history eight instances of sin, judgment, and forgiveness. The sins are the rebellion at the Red Sea (Ps 106:6–12; see Ex 14–15), the craving for meat in the desert (Ps 106:13–15; see Nm 11), the challenge to Moses’ authority (Ps 106:16–18; see Nm 16), the golden calf episode (Ps 106:19–23; see Ex 32–34), the refusal to take Canaan by the southern route (Ps 106:24–27; see Nm 13–14 and Dt 1–2), the rebellion at Baal-Peor (Ps 106:28–31; see Nm 25:1–10), the anger of Moses (Ps 106:32–33; see Nm 20:1–13), and mingling with the nations (Ps 106:34–47). The last, as suggested by its length and generalized language, may be the sin that invites the repentance of the present generation. The text gives the site of each sin: Egypt (Ps 106:7), the desert (Ps 106:14), the camp (Ps 106:16), Horeb (Ps 106:19), in their tents (Ps 106:25), Baal-Peor (Ps 106:28), the waters of Meribah (Ps 106:32), Canaan (Ps 106:38).

106:20 Their glory: meant as a reference to God.

106:23 Withstood him in the breach: the image is that of Moses standing in a narrow break made in the wall to keep anyone from entering.

106:32 Moses suffered because of them: Moses was not allowed to enter the promised land because of his rash words (Nm 20:12). According to Dt 1:37, Moses was not allowed to cross because of the people’s sin, not his own.

106:37 Demons: Hebrew shedim occurs in parallelism with “gods” in an important inscription from Transjordan and hence can also be translated “the gods.”

106:48 A doxology ending Book IV of the Psalter. It is not part of the Psalm.

Psalm 107 A hymn inviting those who have been rescued by God to give praise (Ps 107:1–3). Four archetypal divine rescues are described, each ending in thanksgiving: from the sterile desert (Ps 107:4–9), from imprisonment in gloom (Ps 107:10–16), from mortal illness (Ps 107:17–22), and from the angry sea (Ps 107:23–32). The number four connotes totality, all the possible varieties of rescue. The same saving activity of God is shown in Israel's history (Ps 107:33–41); whenever the people were endangered God rescued them. The last verses invite people to ponder the persistent saving acts of God (Ps 107:42–43).

107:33–41 God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah in Gn 18–19, which the Psalm sees as the destruction of the wicked inhabitants of Canaan to prepare the way for Israel (Ps 107:33–34). God then led Israel through the desert to give them a fertile land (Ps 107:35–38) and protected them from every danger (Ps 107:39–41).

Psalm 108 A prayer compiled from two other Psalms: Ps 108:2–6 are virtually the same as Ps 57:8–12; Ps 108:7–14 are the same as Ps 60:7–14. An old promise of salvation (Ps 108:8–10) is combined with a confident assurance (Ps 108:2–6, 13) and petition (Ps 108:7, 12–13).

108:8 Holiness: may also be translated as “sanctuary” or as referring to God's heavenly abode.

Psalm 109 A lament notable for the length and vehemence of its prayer against evildoers (Ps 109:6–20); the cry to God (Ps 109:1) and the complaint (Ps 109:22–25) are brief in comparison. The psalmist is apparently the victim of a slander campaign, potentially devastating in a society where reputation and honor are paramount. In the emotional perspective of the Psalm, there are only two types of people: the wicked and their poor victims. The psalmist is a poor victim (Ps 109:22, 31) and by that fact a friend of God and enemy of the wicked. The psalmist seeks vindication not on the basis of personal virtue but because of God's promise to protect the poor.

109:6 An accuser: Hebrew satan, a word occurring in Jb 1–2 and Zec 3:1–2. In the latter passage Satan stands at the right hand of the high priest to bring false accusations against him before God. Here the accuser is human.

109:20 May this be the reward ... from the LORD: the psalmist prays that God ratify the curses of Ps 109:6–19 and bring them upon the wicked.

Psalm 110 A royal Psalm in which a court singer recites three oracles in which God assures the king that his enemies are conquered (Ps 110:1–2), makes the king “son” in traditional adoption language (Ps 110:3), gives priestly status to the king and promises to be with him in future military ventures (Ps 110:4–7).

110:1 The LORD says to my lord: a polite form of address of an inferior to a superior, cf. 1 Sm 25:25; 2 Sm 1:10. The court singer refers to the king. Jesus in the synoptic gospels (Mt 22:41–46 and parallels) takes the psalmist to be David and hence “my lord” refers to the messiah, who must be someone greater than David. Your footstool: in ancient times victorious kings put their feet on the prostrate bodies of their enemies.

110:4 Melchizedek: Melchizedek was the ancient king of Salem (Jerusalem) who blessed Abraham (Gn 14:18–20); like other kings of the time he performed priestly functions. Heb 7 sees in Melchizedek a type of Christ.

110:7 Who drinks from the brook by the wayside: the meaning is uncertain. Some see an allusion to a rite of royal consecration at the Gihon spring (cf. 1 Kgs 1:33, 38). Others find here an image of the divine warrior (or king) pursuing enemies so relentlessly that he does not stop long enough to eat and drink.

Psalm 111 A Temple singer (Ps 111:1) tells how God is revealed in Israel's history (Ps 111:2–10). The deeds reveal God's very self, powerful, merciful, faithful. The poem is an acrostic, each verse beginning with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet.

111:1 In the assembled congregation of the upright: in the Temple, cf. Ps 149:1.

111:5 Food to those who fear him: probably a reference to the manna in the desert, which elsewhere is seen as a type of the Eucharist, cf. Jn 6:31–33, 49–51.

111:10 The fear of the LORD: reverence for God.

Psalm 112 An acrostic poem detailing the blessings received by those who remain close to God by obedience to the commandments. Among their blessings are children (Ps 112:2), wealth that enables them to be magnanimous (Ps 112:3, 5, 9), and virtue by which they encourage others (Ps 112:4). The just person is an affront to the wicked, whose hopes remain unfulfilled (Ps 112:10). The logic resembles Ps 1; 111.

112:3 Righteousness: in the Second Temple period the word acquired the nuance of liberality and almsgiving, cf. Sir 3:30; 7:10; Mt 6:1–4.

112:9 His horn: the symbol for vitality and honor.

Psalm 113 A hymn exhorting the congregation to praise God's name, i.e., the way in which God is present in the world; the name is mentioned three times in Ps 113:1–3. The divine name is especially honored in the Temple (Ps 113:1) but its recognition is not limited by time (Ps 113:2) and space (Ps 113:3), for God is everywhere active (Ps 113:4–5) especially in rescuing the lowly faithful (Ps 113:7–9).

Psalm 114 A hymn celebrating Israel's escape from Egypt, journey through the wilderness, and entry into the promised land, and the miracles of nature that bore witness to God's presence in their midst. In the perspective of the Psalm, the people proceed directly from Egypt into the promised land (Ps 114:1–2). Sea and Jordan, which stood like soldiers barring the people from their land, flee before the mighty God as the earth recoils from the battle (Ps 114:3–4). The poet taunts the natural elements as one taunts defeated enemies (Ps 114:5–6).

114:3–4 Pairs of cosmic elements such as sea and rivers, mountains and hills, are sometimes mentioned in creation accounts. Personified here as warriors, the pairs tremble in fear before the Divine Warrior. The quaking also recalls the divine appearance in the storm at Sinai (Ex 19:16–19) and elsewhere (Jgs 5:4–5; Ps 18:7–15).

114:8 The miracles of giving drink to the people in the arid desert, cf. Ex 17:1–7; Is 41:17–18.

Psalm 115 A response to the enemy taunt, "Where is your God?" This hymn to the glory of Israel's God (Ps 115:1–3) ridicules the lifeless idols of the nations (Ps 115:4–8), expresses in a litany the trust of the various classes of the people in God (Ps 115:9–11), invokes God's blessing on them as they invoke the divine name (Ps 115:12–15), and concludes as it began with praise of God. Ps 135:15–18 similarly mocks the Gentile gods and has a similar litany and hymn (Ps 135:19–21).

115:2 Where is their God?: implies that God cannot help them.

115:9–11 The house of Israel ... the house of Aaron ... those who fear the LORD: the laity of Israelite birth, the priests, and the converts to Judaism, cf. Ps 118:2–4; 135:19–21. In the New Testament likewise "those who fear the Lord" means converts to Judaism (cf. Acts 10:2, 22, 35; 13:16, 26).

115:16 The heavens: the Septuagint reads here "the heaven of heavens" or "the highest heavens," i.e., above the firmament. See note on Ps 148:4.

115:17 See note on Ps 6:5.

Psalm 116 A thanksgiving in which the psalmist responds to divine rescue from mortal danger (Ps 116:3–4) and from near despair (Ps 116:10–11) with vows and Temple sacrifices (Ps 116:13–14, 17–19). The Greek and Latin versions divide the Psalm into two parts: Ps 116:1–9 and Ps 116:10–19, corresponding to its two major divisions.

116:3 The cords of death: death is personified here; it attempts to capture the psalmist with snares and nets, cf. Ps 18:6.

116:9 The land of the living: the phrase elsewhere is an epithet of the Jerusalem Temple (cf. Ps 27:13; 52:5; Is 38:11). Hence the psalmist probably refers to being present to God in the Temple.

116:10 I kept faith, even when I said: even in the days of despair, the psalmist did not lose all hope.

116:13 The cup of salvation: probably the libation of wine poured out in gratitude for rescue, cf. Ex 25:29; Nm 15:5, 7, 10.

116:15 Dear in the eyes of the LORD: the meaning is that the death of God's faithful is grievous to God, not that God is pleased with the death, cf. Ps 72:14. In Wis 3:5–6, God accepts the death of the righteous as a sacrificial burnt offering.

Psalm 117 This shortest of hymns calls on the nations to acknowledge God's supremacy. The supremacy of Israel's God has been demonstrated to them by the people's secure existence, which is owed entirely to God's gracious fidelity.

Psalm 118 A thanksgiving liturgy accompanying a procession of the king and the people into the Temple precincts. After an invocation in the form of a litany (Ps 118:1–4), the psalmist (very likely speaking in the name of the community) describes how the people confidently implored God's help (Ps 118:5–9) when hostile peoples threatened its life (Ps 118:10–14); vividly God's rescue is recounted (Ps 118:15–18). Then follows a possible dialogue at the Temple gates between the priests and the psalmist as the latter enters to offer the thanksgiving sacrifice (Ps 118:19–25). Finally, the priests impart their blessing (Ps 118:26–27), and the psalmist sings in gratitude (Ps 118:28–29).

118:22 The stone the builders rejected: a proverb: what is insignificant to human beings has become great through divine election. The "stone" may originally have meant the foundation stone or capstone of the Temple. The New Testament interpreted the verse as referring to the death and resurrection of Christ (Mt 21:42; Acts 4:11; cf. Is 28:16 and Rom 9:33; 1 Pt 2:7).

118:25 Grant salvation: the Hebrew for this cry has come into English as "Hosanna." This cry and the words in Ps 118:26 were used in the gospels to welcome Jesus entering the Temple on Palm Sunday (Mk 11:9–10).

Psalm 119 This Psalm, the longest by far in the Psalter, praises God for giving such splendid laws and instruction for people to live by. The author glorifies and thanks God for the Torah, prays for protection from sinners enraged by others' fidelity to the law, laments the cost of obedience, delights in the law's consolations, begs for wisdom to understand the precepts, and asks for the rewards of keeping them. Several expected elements do not appear in the Psalm: Mount Sinai with its story of God's revelation and gift to Israel of instruction and commandments, the Temple and other institutions related to revelation and laws (frequent in other Psalms). The Psalm is fascinated with God's word directing and guiding human life. The poem is an acrostic; its twenty-two stanzas (of eight verses each) are in the order of the Hebrew alphabet. Each of the eight verses within a stanza begins with the same letter. Each verse contains one word for "instruction." The translation here given attempts to translate each Hebrew word for "instruction" with the same English word. There are, however, nine words for "instruction," not eight, so the principle of a different word for "instruction" in each verse cannot be maintained with perfect consistency. The nine words for "instruction" in the translation are: law, statute, commandment, precept, testimony, word, judgment, way, and promise.

119:19 A sojourner in the land: like someone without the legal protection of a native inhabitant, the psalmist has a special need for the guidance of God's teaching.

119:48 I lift up my hands to your commandments: to lift up the hands was an ancient gesture of reverence to God. Here the picture is applied to God's law.

119:89–91 God's word creates the world, which manifests that word by its permanence and reliability.

119:97 Lord: the inclusion of "Lord" follows the tradition of the Septuagint and the Vulgate.

Psalm 120 A thanksgiving, reporting divine rescue (Ps 120:1) yet with fervent prayer for further protection against lying attackers (Ps 120:2–4). The psalmist is acutely conscious of living away from God's own land where divine peace prevails (Ps 120:5–7).

120:1 A song of ascents: Ps 120–134 all begin with this superscription. Most probably these fifteen Psalms once formed a collection of Psalms sung when pilgrims went to Jerusalem, since one "ascended" to Jerusalem (1 Kgs 12:28; Ps 24:3; 122:4; Lk 2:42) or to the house of God or to an altar (1 Kgs 12:33; 2 Kgs 23:2; Ps 24:3). Less probable is the explanation that these Psalms were sung by the exiles when they “ascended” to Jerusalem from Babylonia (cf. Ezr 7:9). The idea, found in the Mishnah, that the fifteen steps on which the Levites sang corresponded to these fifteen Psalms (Middot 2:5) must underlie the Vulgate translation canticum graduum, “song of the steps” or “gradual song.”

120:3 More besides: a common curse formula in Hebrew was “May the Lord do such and such evils to you [the evils being specified], and add still more to them,” cf. 1 Sm 3:17; 14:44; 25:22. Here the psalmist is at a loss for a suitable malediction.

120:4 Coals of brush wood: coals made from the stalk of the broom plant burn with intense heat. The psalmist thinks of lighted coals cast at his enemies.

120:5 Meshech was in the far north (Gn 10:2) and Kedar was a tribe of the north Arabian desert (Gn 25:13). The psalmist may be thinking generally of all aliens living among inhospitable peoples.

Psalm 121 A blessing given to someone embarking on a dangerous journey whether a soldier going on a campaign or a pilgrim returning home from the Temple. People look anxiously at the wooded hills. Will God protect them on their journey (Ps 121:1)? The speaker declares that God is not confined to a place or a time (Ps 121:2), that every step is guarded (Ps 121:3–4); night and day (Ps 121:5–6) God watches over their every movement (Ps 121:7–8).

121:1 The mountains: possibly Mount Zion, the site of the Temple and hence of safety, but more probably mountains as a place of dangers, causing anxiety to the psalmist.

121:5–6 The image of shade, a symbol of protection, is apt: God as shade protects from the harmful effects that ancients believed were caused by the sun and moon.

Psalm 122 A song of Zion, sung by pilgrims obeying the law to visit Jerusalem three times on a journey. The singer anticipates joining the procession into the city (Ps 122:1–3). Jerusalem is a place of encounter, where the people praise God (Ps 122:4) and hear the divine justice mediated by the king (Ps 122:5). The very buildings bespeak God’s power (cf. Ps 48:13–15). May the grace of this place transform the people’s lives (Ps 122:6–9)!

122:3 Walled round about: lit., “which is joined to it,” probably referring both to the density of the buildings and to the dense population.

Psalm 123 A lament that begins as a prayer of an individual (Ps 123:1), who expresses by a touching comparison exemplary confidence in God (Ps 123:2). The Psalm ends in prayer that God relieve the people’s humiliation at the hands of the arrogant (Ps 123:3–4).

Psalm 124 A thanksgiving which teaches that Israel’s very existence is owed to God who rescues them. In the first part Israel’s enemies are compared to the mythic sea dragon (Ps 124:2b–3a; cf. Jer 51:34) and Flood (Ps 124:3b–5; cf. Is 51:9–10). The Psalm heightens the malice of human enemies by linking them to the primordial enemies of God’s creation. Israel is a bird freed from the trapper’s snare (Ps 124:6–8)—freed originally from Pharaoh and now from the current danger.

124:8 Our help is in the name: for the idiom, see Ex 18:4.

Psalm 125 In response to exilic anxieties about the ancient promises of restoration, the Psalm expresses confidence that God will surround the people as the mountains surround Zion (Ps 125:1–2). The just will not be contaminated by the wicked (Ps 125:3). May God judge between the two groups (Ps 125:4–5).

125:3 The land allotted to the just: lit., “the lot of the righteous.” The promised land was divided among the tribes of Israel by lot (Nm 26:55; Jos 18). The righteous are the members of the people who are obedient to God. If the domination of the wicked were to continue in the land, even the just would be infected by their evil attitudes.

Psalm 126 A lament probably sung shortly after Israel’s return from exile. The people rejoice that they are in Zion (Ps 126:1–3) but mere presence in the holy city is not enough; they must pray for the prosperity and the fertility of the land (Ps 126:4). The last verses are probably an oracle of promise: the painful work of sowing will be crowned with life (Ps 126:5–6).

126:4 Like the dry stream beds of the Negeb: the psalmist prays for rain in such abundance that the dry riverbeds will run.

Psalm 127 The Psalm puts together two proverbs (Ps 127:1–2, 3–5) on God establishing “houses” or families. The prosperity of human groups is not the work of human beings but the gift of God.

127:5 At the gate: the reference is not to enemies besieging the walls of a city but to adversaries in litigation. Law courts functioned in the open area near the main city gate. The more adult sons a man had, the more forceful he would appear in disputes, cf. Prv 31:23.

Psalm 128 A statement that the ever-reliable God will bless the reverent (Ps 128:1). God’s blessing is concrete: satisfaction and prosperity, a fertile spouse and abundant children (Ps 128:2–4). The perspective is that of the adult male, ordinarily the ruler and representative of the household to the community. The last verses extend the blessing to all the people for generations to come (Ps 128:5–6).

Psalm 129 A Psalm giving thanks for God’s many rescues of Israel over the long course of their history (Ps 129:1–4); the people pray that their oppressors never know the joy of harvest (Ps 129:5–8).

129:4 The ropes of the wicked: usually understood as the rope for yoking animals to the plow. If it is severed, the plowing (cf. Ps 129:3) comes to a halt.

129:6 Like grass on the rooftops: after the spring rains, grass would sprout from the coat of mud with which the flat roofs of simple houses were covered, but when the dry summer began there was no moisture in the thin roof-covering to sustain the grass.

129:8 The blessing of the LORD be upon you: harvesters greeted one another with such blessings, cf. Ru 2:4.

Psalm 130 This lament, a Penitential Psalm, is the De profundis used in liturgical prayers for the faithful departed. In deep sorrow the psalmist cries to God (Ps 130:1–2), asking for mercy (Ps 130:3–4). The psalmist’s trust (Ps 130:5–6) becomes a model for the people (Ps 130:7–8).

130:1 The depths: Sheol here is a metaphor of total misery. Deep anguish makes the psalmist feel “like those descending to the pit” (Ps 143:7).

130:4 And so you are revered: the experience of God’s mercy leads one to a greater sense of God.

Psalm 131 A song of trust, in which the psalmist gives up self-sufficiency (Ps 131:1), like a babe enjoying the comfort of its mother’s lap (Ps 131:2), thus providing a model for Israel’s faith (Ps 131:3).

Psalm 132 A song for a liturgical ceremony in which the ark, the throne of Israel’s God, was carried in procession to the Temple. The singer asks that David’s care for the proper housing of the ark be regarded with favor (Ps 132:1–5), and tells how it was brought to Jerusalem (Ps 132:6–10). There follows God’s promise of favor to the Davidic dynasty (Ps 132:11–12) and to Zion (Ps 132:13–17). The transfer of the ark to the tent in Jerusalem is described in 2 Sm 6.

132:2, 132:5 Mighty One of Jacob: one of the titles of Israel’s God, cf. Gn 49:24; Is 49:26; 60:16.

132:6 Ephrathah: the homeland of David, cf. Ru 4:11. The fields of Jaar: poetic for Kiriath-jearim, a town west of Jerusalem, where the ark remained for several generations, cf. 1 Sm 7:1–2; 2 Sm 6:2; 1 Chr 13:5–6.

132:17 A horn sprout for David: the image of the horn, a symbol of strength, is combined with that of a “sprout,” a term used for the Davidic descendant (cf. Jer 23:5; 33:15; Zec 3:8; 6:12). Early Christians referred the latter designation to Christ as son of David (Lk 1:69).

Psalm 133 A benediction over a peaceful community, most probably the people Israel, but appropriate too for Israelite families (Ps 133:1). The history of Israel, whether of its ancestors in the Book of Genesis or of later periods, was a history of distinct groups struggling to live in unity. Here that unity is declared blessed, like the holy oils upon the priest Aaron or the dew of the rainless summer that waters the crops (Ps 133:2–3).

133:1 Brothers: in biblical Hebrew this word includes both the male and female members of a group united by blood relationships or by shared experiences and values. In this Psalm, the term could be applied most appropriately to the people of Israel, those privileged by God to be his chosen children.

133:2 Oil on the head: oil was used at the consecration of the high priest (Ex 30:22–33).

133:3 Dew: dew was an important source of moisture in the dry climate (Gn 27:28; Hos 14:6).

Hermon: the majestic snow-capped mountain visible in the north of Palestine.

Psalm 134 A brief liturgy exhorting all those who serve in the Jerusalem Temple during the night (cf. Is 30:29) to praise God with words and gestures. Although he is the Creator of the whole universe, God's blessings emanate in a unique way from Zion, the city of Jerusalem.

134:1 Servants of the LORD: priests and Levites, cf. Dt 10:8; Ps 113:1; 135:1; Dn 3:85.

Psalm 135 The hymn begins and ends with an invitation to praise God (Ps 135:1–3, 19–20) for the great act of choosing Israel (Ps 135:4). The story of Israel's emergence as a people is told in Ps 135:5–14; God created and redeemed the people, easily conquering all opposition. God's defeat of hostile powers means that the powers themselves and their images are useless (Ps 135:15–18). The last three verses appear also in Ps 115:4–8.

135:4 Though all nations are God's, Israel has a special status as God's "treasured" people: Ex 19:5; Dt 7:6; 14:2; 26:18; Mal 3:17.

Psalm 136 The hymn praises Israel's God ("the God of gods," Ps 136:2), who has created the world in which Israel lives. The refrain occurring after every line suggests that a speaker and chorus sang the Psalm in antiphonal fashion. A single act of God is described in Ps 136:4–25. God arranges the heavens and the earth as the environment for human community, and then creates the community by freeing them and giving them land. In the final section (Ps 136:23–25) God, who created the people and gave them land, continues to protect and nurture them.

136:22 A heritage for Israel: the land was given to Israel by God to be handed on to future generations.

Psalm 137 A singer refuses to sing the people's sacred songs in an alien land despite demands from Babylonian captors (Ps 137:1–4). The singer swears an oath by what is most dear to a musician—hands and tongue—to exalt Jerusalem always (Ps 137:5–6). The Psalm ends with a prayer that the old enemies of Jerusalem, Edom and Babylon, be destroyed (Ps 137:7–9).

137:9 Blessed the one who seizes your children and smashes them against the rock: the children represent the future generations, and so must be destroyed if the enemy is truly to be eradicated.

Psalm 138 A thanksgiving to God, who came to the rescue of the psalmist. Divine rescue was not the result of the psalmist's virtues but of God's loving fidelity (Ps 138:1–3). The act is not a private transaction but a public act that stirs the surrounding nations to praise God's greatness and care for the people (Ps 138:4–6). The psalmist, having experienced salvation, trusts that God will always be there in moments of danger (Ps 138:7–8).

138:1 In the presence of the angels: heavenly beings who were completely subordinate to Israel's God. The earthly Temple represents the heavenly palace of God.

Psalm 139 A hymnic meditation on God's omnipresence and omniscience. The psalmist is keenly aware of God's all-knowing gaze (Ps 139:1–6), of God's presence in every part of the universe (Ps 139:7–12), and of God's control over the psalmist's very self (Ps 139:13–16). Summing up Ps 139:1–16, 17–18 express wonder. There is only one place hostile to God's rule—wicked people. The psalmist prays to be removed from their company (Ps 139:19–24).

139:2 When I sit and stand: in all my physical movement.

139:9 Take the wings of dawn: go to the extremities of the east. Beyond the sea: uttermost bounds of the west; the sea is the Mediterranean.

139:11 Night shall be my light: night to me is what day is to others.

139:15 The depths of the earth: figurative language for the womb, stressing the hidden and mysterious operations that occur there.

139:24 Lead me along an ancient path: the manner of living of our ancestors, who were faithful to God's will, cf. Jer 6:16.

Psalm 140 A lament seeking rescue from violent and treacherous foes (Ps 140:2–6). The psalmist remains trusting (Ps 140:7–8), vigorously praying that the plans of the wicked recoil upon themselves (Ps 140:9–12). A serene statement of praise ends the Psalm (Ps 140:13). The psalmist is content to be known as one of “the needy,” “the poor,” “the just,” “the upright” (Ps 140:13), a class of people expecting divine protection.

140:4 Similar metaphors for a wicked tongue are used in Ps 52:2; 55:20; 58:3.

140:6 Have set a trap ... have spread out ropes for a net: the same figure, of hunters setting traps, occurs in Ps 9:16; 31:5; 35:7; 64:6, cf. Mt 22:15; Lk 11:54.

Psalm 141 A lament of an individual (Ps 141:1–2) who is keenly aware that only the righteous can worship God properly and who therefore prays to be protected from the doomed wicked (Ps 141:3–10).

141:2 Incense: lit., “smoke,” i.e., the fragrant fumes arising from the altar at the burning of sacrificial animals or of aromatic spices; also used in Rev 5:8 as a symbol of prayer. My uplifted hands: the gesture of supplication, cf. Ps 28:2; 63:5; 88:10; 119:48; 134:2; 143:6.

141:5–7 The Hebrew text is obscure.

Psalm 142 In this lament imploring God for help (Ps 142:2–4), the psalmist tells how enemies have set a trap (Ps 142:4–5), and prays for rescue (Ps 142:6–8). The speaker feels utterly alone (Ps 142:5), exhausted (Ps 142:7), and may even be imprisoned (Ps 142:7). Prison is possibly a metaphor for general distress. The last two verses are the vow of praise, made after receiving an assurance of divine help (Ps 142:7).

142:1 In the cave: cf. 1 Sm 22:1; 24:1–3; Ps 57:1.

142:8 Then the righteous shall gather around me: in the Temple, when the psalmist offers a thanksgiving sacrifice.

Psalm 143 One of the Church's seven Penitential Psalms, this lament is a prayer to be freed from death-dealing enemies. The psalmist addresses God, aware that there is no equality between God and human beings; salvation is a gift (Ps 143:1–2). Victimized by evil people (Ps 143:3–4), the psalmist recites (“remembers”) God's past actions on behalf of the innocent (Ps 143:5–6). The Psalm continues with fervent prayer (Ps 143:7–9) and a strong desire for guidance and protection (Ps 143:10–12).

Psalm 144 The Psalm may reflect a ceremony in which the king, as leader of the army, asked God's help (Ps 144:1–8). In Ps 144:9 the poem shifts abruptly from pleading to thanksgiving, and (except for Ps 144:11) shifts again to prayer for the people. The first section (Ps 144:1–2) is a prayer of thanks for victory; the second (Ps 144:3–7a), a humble acknowledgment of human nothingness and a supplication that God show forth saving power; the third (Ps 144:9–11), a promise of future thanksgiving; the fourth (Ps 144:12–15), a wish for prosperity and peace. A prayer for deliverance from treacherous foes serves as a refrain after the second and third sections (Ps 144:7b–8, 11). Except for its final section, the Psalm is made up almost entirely of verses from other Psalms.

144:1–2 Composed of phrases from Ps 18:3, 35, 47–48.

144:3 Similar to Ps 8:4.

144:4 Composed of phrases from Ps 39:6; 102:12.

144:5–7 Adapted in large part from Ps 18:10, 15, 17; 104:32.

144:8b, 11b Their right hands are raised in lying oaths: the psalmist's enemies give false testimony.

Psalm 145 A hymn in acrostic form; every verse begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. Acrostic poems usually do not develop ideas but consist rather of loosely connected statements. The singer invites all to praise God (Ps 145:1–3, 21). The “works of God” make God present and invite human praise (Ps 145:4–7); they climax in a confession (Ps 145:8–9). God's mighty acts show forth divine kingship (Ps 145:10–20), a major theme in the literature of early Judaism and in Christianity.

Psalm 146 A hymn of someone who has learned there is no other source of strength except the merciful God. Only God, not mortal human beings (Ps 146:3–4), can help vulnerable and oppressed people (Ps 146:5–9). The first of the five hymns that conclude the Psalter.

Psalm 147 The hymn is divided into three sections by the calls to praise in Ps 147:1, 7, 12. The first section praises the powerful creator who restores exiled Judah (Ps 147:1–6); the second section, the creator who provides food to animals and human beings; the third and climactic section exhorts the holy city to recognize it has been re-created and made the place of disclosure for God's word, a word as life-giving as water.

147:8–9 God clothes the fields and feeds the birds, cf. Mt 6:26, 30.

147:10–11 Acknowledging one's dependence upon God rather than claiming self-sufficiency pleases God, cf. Ps 20:8; 33:16–19.

147:15–19 God speaks through the thunder of nature and the word of revealed law, cf. Is 55:10–11. The weather phenomena are well known in Jerusalem: a blizzard of snow and hail followed by a thunderstorm that melts the ice.

Psalm 148 A hymn inviting the beings of heaven (Ps 148:1–6) and of earth (Ps 148:7–14) to praise God. The hymn does not distinguish between inanimate and animate (and rational) nature.

148:4 Highest heavens: lit., “the heavens of the heavens,” i.e., the space above the firmament, where the “upper waters” are stored, cf. Gn 1:6–7; Dt 10:14; 1 Kgs 8:27; Ps 104:3, 13.

148:14 Has lifted high the horn of his people: the horn symbolizes strength, the concrete noun for the abstract. Of all peoples, God has chosen Israel to return praise and thanks in a special way.

Psalm 149 A hymn inviting the people of Israel to celebrate their God in song and festive dance (Ps 149:1–3, 5) because God has chosen them and given them victory (Ps 149:4). The exodus and conquest are the defining acts of Israel; the people must be ready to do again those acts in the future at the divine command (Ps 149:6–9).

149:3 Make music with tambourine and lyre: the verse recalls the great exodus hymn of Ex 15:20.

149:5 On their couches: the people reclined to banquet.

149:9 The glory: what brings honor to the people is their readiness to carry out the divine will, here conceived as punishing injustice done by the nations.

Psalm 150 The Psalm is a closing doxology both for the fifth book of the Psalms (Ps 107–149) and for the Psalter as a whole. Temple musicians and dancers are called to lead all beings on earth and in heaven in praise of God. The Psalm proclaims to whom praise shall be given, and where (Ps 150:1); what praise shall be given, and why (Ps 150:2); how praise shall be given (Ps 150:3–5), and by whom (Ps 150:6).

150:1 His holy sanctuary: God's Temple on earth. The mighty dome of heaven: lit., “[God's] strong vault”; heaven is here imagined as a giant plate separating the inhabited world from the waters of the heavens.

Proverbs is an anthology of collections of sayings and instructions. Many of the sayings and perhaps some instructions were composed in the monarchic period (late eleventh to the early sixth centuries). Editing of the whole book was done in the early postexilic period, in the view of most scholars; at that time chaps. 1–9 would have been added as the introduction. Whether the material originated among royal scribes (as 25:1 seems to suggest) imitating common literary genres, or whether it arose among tribal elders inculcating traditional ways, is disputed. The origin of the material, however, need not be imagined in an either/or scenario. Folk wisdom and observations could surely have been elaborated and re-expressed by learned scribes: “What oft was thought but ne’er so well expressed” (Alexander Pope). There can be no doubt, however, that Proverbs is sophisticated literature by talented writers, winning readers with its compelling portrait of wisdom and inviting them to see life afresh, “wisely,” through its wit, originality, and shrewd observation.

The primary purpose of the book is to teach wisdom, not only to the young and inexperienced (1:2–4) but also to the advanced (1:5–6). Wisdom in the ancient Near East was not theoretical knowledge but practical expertise. Jewelers who cut precious stones were wise; kings who made their dominion peaceful and prosperous were wise. One could be wise in daily life, too, in knowing how to live successfully (having a prosperous household and living a long and healthy life) and without trouble in God’s universe. Ultimately wisdom, or “sound guidance” (1:5), aims at the formation of character.

In the ancient Near East, people assumed that wisdom belonged to the gods, who were wise by reason of their divinity; human beings needed to have wisdom granted them by the gods. Creation accounts of neighboring cultures depict creation in two stages. In the first stage, human beings lived an animal-like existence, without clothes, writing, or kingship (proper governance). Over time, the gods came to realize that such a low grade of existence made the human race inadequate as their servants, so they endowed the race with “wisdom,” which consisted of culture (e.g., kingship) and crafts (e.g., knowledge of farming, ability to weave). Such wisdom elevated the race to a “human” level and made them effective servants of the gods. Furthermore, divine wisdom was mediated to human beings through earthly institutions—the king, scribes (who produced wise writings), and heads of families (fathers, sometimes mothers). These traditional mediators appear in Proverbs: the book is credited to King Solomon, and kings are respectfully mentioned as pillars of society (e.g., 16:12–15); writings are a source of wisdom (1:1–7); the father instructing his son is the major paradigm of teaching. Proverbs differs, however, from other wisdom books in concentrating on wisdom itself, treating it as a virtually independent entity and personifying it as an attractive woman. Other books urge readers to perform wise acts, but Proverbs urges them to seek wisdom itself and portrays wisdom as a woman seeking human beings as disciples and companions.

Chapters 1–9 introduce the book, drawing attention to wisdom itself and its inherent value rather than exhorting to particular wise actions. The chapters personify wisdom as a woman and draw an extended analogy between finding a wife, or founding and maintaining a house(hold), and finding wisdom. The collections following chap. 9 consist largely of independent, two-line sayings, yielding their often indirect or paradoxical meaning only to readers willing to ponder them. To reflect on the sayings is perhaps what chaps. 1–9 mean by living with Wisdom and dwelling in her house.

The Book of Proverbs can make an important contribution to Christians and Jews today. First, it places the pursuit of wisdom over the performance of individual wise acts. To seek wisdom above all things is a fundamental option and a way of life. Second, it portrays the quest as filled with obstacles. There are men and women who offer a substitute for the real thing; discernment is required. Third, the book teaches that acquiring wisdom is both a human task and a divine gift. One can make oneself ready to receive by discipline, but one cannot take so divine a gift. Fourth, wisdom is in the world but it is not obvious to people entirely caught up with daily activities. The instructions and the aphorisms of the book can free the mind to see new things. Christians will see in personified Wisdom aspects of Jesus Christ, who they believe is divine wisdom sent to give human beings true and full life. Yet there is a universal dimension to Proverbs, for in its attention to human experience it creates a link to all people of good will.

The genres and themes of Proverbs continued on in Sirach, Wisdom of Solomon, and the later Pirke Abot (The Sayings of the Fathers), a treatise in the Mishnah, which became the object of commentary in Abot de Rabbi Nathan. The New Testament saw Jesus as a wisdom teacher and employed the tradition of personified wisdom of chaps. 2 and 8 to express his incarnation. The Letter of James is an instruction resembling those in Proverbs. Wisdom traditions influenced the Gospels of Matthew and Luke through a common source (see, e.g., Mt 11:25–27 and Lk 10:21–22, which seem to derive their father-son language, at least in part, from the parental language of Proverbs). The Gospel of John regards Jesus as incarnate wisdom descended from on high to offer human beings life and truth and make disciples of them, a view largely reflected in Proverbs 1–9. In later Judaism, Hebrew ethical wills, in which parents hand on to their children their wisdom, borrowed from the genre of instruction.

The original audience of the instructions and sayings seems to have been male. The father addresses his son, marriage is finding a wife, success often is serving the king or farming effectively. The book itself, however, expands the traditional audience of youths (1:4) to include older, more experienced, people (1:5). It broadens the father-son language by mentioning the mother, and incorporates sayings on human experience generally. The father teaching his son becomes a model for anyone teaching a way of life to another person. The canonical process furthered such inclusiveness, for Proverbs was made part of the Bible that addresses all Israel.

The Book of Proverbs has nine sections:

- I. Title and Introduction (1:1–7)
- II. Instructions of Parents and of Woman Wisdom (1:8–9:18)
- III. First Solomonic Collection of Sayings (10:1–22:16)

- IV. Sayings of the Wise (22:17–24:22)
- V. Further Sayings of the Wise (24:23–34)
- VI. Second Solomonic Collection, Collected Under King Hezekiah
(25:1–29:27)
- VII. Sayings of Agur and Others (30:1–33)
- VIII. Sayings of King Lemuel (31:1–9)
- IX. Poem on the Woman of Worth (31:10–31)

---

Part II is judged by many scholars to contain ten instructions (1:8–19; chap. 2; 3:1–12, 21–35; 4:1–9, 10–19, 20–27; chap. 5; 6:20–35; chap. 7), three wisdom poems (1:20–33; chap. 8; 9:1–6 + 11, 13–18), and two interludes (3:13–20; 6:1–19).

CHAPTER 1

See RG 290–97

*Purpose of the Proverbs of Solomon**

- <sup>1</sup>The proverbs* of Solomon,<sup>a</sup> the son of David,
king of Israel:
- <sup>2</sup>That people may know wisdom and discipline,*
may understand intelligent sayings;
- <sup>3</sup>May receive instruction in wise conduct,
in what is right, just and fair;
- <sup>4</sup>That resourcefulness may be imparted to the naive,*
knowledge and discretion to the young.
- <sup>5</sup>The wise by hearing them will advance
in learning,
the intelligent will gain sound
guidance,
- <sup>6</sup>To comprehend proverb and byword,
the words of the wise and their riddles.
- <sup>7</sup>Fear of the LORD* is the beginning of knowledge;<sup>b</sup>
fools despise wisdom and discipline.

II. Instructions of Parents and of Woman Wisdom

*The Path of the Wicked: Greed and Violence**

- <sup>8</sup>Hear, my son, your father's instruction,
and reject not your mother's teaching;
- <sup>9</sup>A graceful diadem will they be for your head;
a pendant for your neck.

<sup>10</sup>My son, should sinners entice you, <sup>11</sup>do not go if they say, “Come along with us!
Let us lie in wait for blood,
    unprovoked, let us trap the innocent;
<sup>12</sup>Let us swallow them alive, like Sheol, whole, like those who go down to the pit!
<sup>13</sup>All kinds of precious wealth shall we gain,
    we shall fill our houses with booty;
<sup>14</sup>Cast in your lot with us,
    we shall all have one purse!”
<sup>15</sup>My son, do not walk in the way with
    them,
    hold back your foot from their path!
<sup>16</sup>[For their feet run to evil,
    they hasten to shed blood.<sup>c</sup>] <sup>17</sup>In vain a net is spread* right under the eyes of any bird—<sup>18</sup>They lie in wait for their own blood,
    they set a trap for their own lives.
<sup>19</sup>This is the way of everyone greedy for loot:
    it takes away their lives.

Wisdom in Person Gives a Warning*

<sup>20</sup>Wisdom cries aloud in the street, in the open squares she raises her voice;<sup>d</sup> <sup>21</sup>Down the crowded ways she calls out,
    at the city gates she utters her words:
<sup>22</sup>*“How long, you naive ones, will you love naivete,
    <sup>23</sup>How long will you turn away at my reproof?
[The arrogant delight in their arrogance,
    and fools hate knowledge.]
Lo! I will pour out to you my spirit,

I will acquaint you with my words:
24 Because I called and you refused, extended my hand and no one took notice;<sup>e</sup> 25 Because you disdained all my counsel, and my reproof you ignored—
26 I, in my turn, will laugh at your doom;
will mock when terror overtakes you;
27 When terror comes upon you like a storm, and your doom approaches like a
whirlwind;
when distress and anguish befall you.’
28 Then they will call me, but I will not answer;
they will seek me, but will not find me, 29 Because they hated knowledge, and the fear of the LORD they did not choose.
30 They ignored my counsel,
they spurned all my reproof;
31 Well, then, they shall eat the fruit* of their own way,
and with their own devices be glutted.
32 For the straying of the naive kills them,
the smugness of fools destroys them.
33 But whoever obeys me dwells in security,
in peace, without fear of harm.”<sup>f</sup>

CHAPTER 2

The Blessings of Wisdom*

- <sup>1</sup>My son, if you receive my words
and treasure my commands,
- <sup>2</sup>Turning your ear to wisdom,*
inclining your heart to understanding;
- <sup>3</sup>Yes, if you call for intelligence,
and to understanding raise your voice;
- <sup>4</sup>If you seek her like silver,
and like hidden treasures search her out,
- <sup>5</sup>Then will you understand the fear of the LORD;
the knowledge of God you will find;
- <sup>6</sup>For the LORD gives wisdom,
from his mouth come knowledge and understanding;<sup>9</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>He has success in store for the upright,
is the shield of those who walk
honestly,
- <sup>8</sup>Guarding the paths of justice,
protecting the way of his faithful ones,
- <sup>9</sup>Then you will understand what is right and just,
what is fair, every good path;
- <sup>10</sup>For wisdom will enter your heart,
knowledge will be at home in your soul,
- <sup>11</sup>Discretion will watch over you,
understanding will guard you;
- <sup>12*</sup> Saving you from the way of the wicked,
from those whose speech is perverse.
- <sup>13</sup>From those who have left the straight paths
to walk in the ways of darkness,
- <sup>14</sup>Who delight in doing evil
and celebrate perversity;

- 15 Whose ways are crooked,
whose paths are devious;
- 16* Saving you from a stranger,
from a foreign woman with her smooth words,<sup>h</sup>
- 17 One who forsakes the companion of her
youth
and forgets the covenant of her God;
- 18 For her path sinks down to death,
and her footsteps lead to the shades.<sup>* i</sup>
- 19 None who enter there come back,
or gain the paths of life.
- 20 Thus you may walk in the way of the good,
and keep to the paths of the just.
- 21* For the upright will dwell in the land,<sup>j</sup> people of integrity will remain in it;
- 22 But the wicked will be cut off from the
land,
the faithless will be rooted out of it.

CHAPTER 3

See RG 290–97

Confidence in God Leads to Prosperity*

- <sup>1</sup>My son, do not forget* my teaching,
take to heart my commands;
- <sup>2</sup>For many days, and years of life,<sup>k</sup>
and peace, will they bring you.
- <sup>3</sup>Do not let love and fidelity forsake you;
bind them around your neck;
write them on the tablet of your heart.
- <sup>4</sup>Then will you win favor and esteem
before God and human beings.
- <sup>5</sup>Trust in the LORD with all your heart,
on your own intelligence do not rely;
- <sup>6</sup>In all your ways be mindful of him,
and he will make straight your paths.
- <sup>7</sup>Do not be wise in your own eyes,<sup>l</sup> fear the LORD and turn away from evil;
- <sup>8</sup>This will mean health for your flesh
and vigor for your bones.
- <sup>9</sup>Honor the LORD with your wealth,
with first fruits of all your produce;<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Then will your barns be filled with plenty,
with new wine your vats will overflow.
- <sup>11</sup>The discipline of the LORD, my son, do not spurn;<sup>n</sup>
do not disdain his reproof;
- <sup>12*</sup> For whom the LORD loves he reproves,
as a father, the son he favors.<sup>o</sup>

The Benefits of Finding Wisdom*

- <sup>13</sup>Happy the one who finds wisdom,
the one who gains understanding!<sup>p</sup>

- 14 Her profit is better than profit in silver,
and better than gold is her revenue;
- 15 She is more precious than corals,
and no treasure of yours can compare with her.<sup>q</sup>
- 16 Long life is in her right hand,
in her left are riches and honor;
- 17 Her ways are pleasant ways,
and all her paths are peace;
- 18 She is a tree of life* to those who grasp
her,
and those who hold her fast are happy.<sup>r</sup>
- 19 The LORD by wisdom founded the earth, established the heavens by
understanding;
- 20 By his knowledge the depths* are split,
and the clouds drop down dew.

Justice Toward One's Neighbor Brings Blessing*

- 21 My son, do not let these slip from your sight:
hold to deliberation and planning;
- 22 So will they be life to your soul,*
and an adornment for your neck.
- 23 Then you may go your way securely;
your foot will never stumble;
- 24 When you lie down, you will not be afraid,
when you rest, your sleep will be sweet.
- 25 Do not be afraid of sudden terror,
of the ruin of the wicked when it comes;
- 26 For the LORD will be your confidence,
and will keep your foot from the snare.
- 27 Do not withhold any goods from the owner
when it is in your power to act.
- 28 Say not to your neighbor, "Go, come back tomorrow,

and I will give it to you," when all the while you have it.

<sup>29</sup>Do not plot evil against your neighbors,
when they live at peace with you.

<sup>30</sup>Do not contend with someone without cause,
with one who has done you no harm.

<sup>31</sup>Do not envy the violent and choose none of their ways:<sup>s</sup>

<sup>32</sup>To the Lord the devious are an abomination,
but the upright are close to him.

<sup>33</sup>The curse of the Lord is on the house of
the wicked,
but the dwelling of the just he blesses;

<sup>34</sup>Those who scoff, he scoffs at,<sup>t</sup>
but the lowly he favors.

<sup>35</sup>The wise will possess glory,
but fools will bear shame.

The Teacher as Model Disciple*

<sup>1</sup>Hear, O children, a father's instruction, be attentive, that you may gain
understanding!

<sup>2</sup>Yes, excellent advice I give you;
my teaching do not forsake.

<sup>3</sup>When I was my father's child, tender, the darling of my mother,

<sup>4</sup>He taught me and said to me:
“Let your heart hold fast my words:<sup>u</sup>
keep my commands, and live!

<sup>5</sup>Get wisdom,* get understanding!
Do not forget or turn aside from the words of my mouth.

<sup>6</sup>Do not forsake her, and she will preserve
you;
love her, and she will safeguard you;

<sup>7</sup>The beginning of wisdom is: get wisdom;
whatever else you get, get
understanding.

<sup>8</sup>Extol her, and she will exalt you;
she will bring you honors if you embrace her;

<sup>9</sup>She will put on your head a graceful
diadem;
a glorious crown will she bestow on
you.”

The Two Ways*

<sup>10</sup>Hear, my son, and receive my words, and the years of your life shall be many.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>11</sup>On the way of wisdom I direct you,

I lead you on straight paths.

<sup>12</sup>When you walk, your step will not be impeded,
and should you run, you will not stumble.

Hebrew Poetry

MOST READERS NOTICE a particular feature of Hebrew poetry, and one that is particularly prevalent in the Book of Proverbs. This is the use of “parallelism,” or the statement of an idea in two (or more) different ways.

Parallelism can be simple, as in Proverbs 3:12:

For whom the LORD loves he reproves,
and he chastises the son he favors.

Here the idea is simply restated in different words. A second type of parallelism is the antithesis, as in Proverbs 2:21-22:

For the upright will dwell in the land,
the honest will remain in it;
But the wicked will be cut off from the land,
the faithless will be rooted out of it.

The ideas in the first verse are echoed as negatives in the second.

Finally, the restatement of the idea may serve to advance the thought in some way. Proverbs 4:1 says:

Hear, O children, a father’s instruction,
be attentive, that you may gain understanding!

The exhortation to hear is explained in the second line: “you will benefit from paying attention.”

Parallelism seems to have served several functions. It allowed Hebrew poetry to be very terse; if the idea was obscure the first time it was stated, perhaps the second time would make things clearer. In addition, it was a substitute for grammatical links between different parts of a line. Hebrew poetry tends to avoid subordinate clauses, connectives (such as “so that”), and other means of leading the reader on from one line to the next. Instead, the lines seem almost detached from one another. But the parallel structure serves to link lines together, and sometimes leads on to larger units as well. In this way, parallelism unites the structure and the content of much Hebrew poetry.

keep it, for it is your life.

<sup>14*</sup> The path of the wicked do not enter,
nor walk in the way of the evil;

- 15 Shun it, do not cross it,
turn aside from it, pass on.
- 16 For they cannot rest unless they have done evil;
if they do not trip anyone they lose sleep.
- 17 For they eat the bread of wickedness
and drink the wine of violence.
- 18 But the path of the just is like shining light,
that grows in brilliance till perfect day.
- 19 The way of the wicked is like darkness;
they do not know on what they stumble.

With Your Whole Being Heed My Words and Live

- 20 My son, to my words be attentive,
to my sayings incline your ear;
- 21 Let them not slip from your sight,
keep them within your heart;
- 22 For they are life to those who find them,
bringing health to one's whole being.
- 23 With all vigilance guard your heart,
for in it are the sources of life.
- 24 Dishonest mouth put away from you,
deceitful lips put far from you.
- 25 Let your eyes look straight ahead
and your gaze be focused forward.
- 26 Survey the path for your feet,
and all your ways will be sure.
- 27 Turn neither to right nor to left,
keep your foot far from evil.

Warning Against Adultery*

- <sup>1</sup>My son, to my wisdom be attentive,
to understanding incline your ear, <sup>2</sup>That you may act discreetly,
and your lips guard what you know.
<sup>3</sup>Indeed, the lips of the stranger drip honey,
and her mouth is smoother than oil; <sup>4</sup>But in the end she is as bitter as wormwood,
as sharp as a two-edged sword.
<sup>5</sup>Her feet go down to death, her steps reach Sheol;<sup>y</sup> <sup>6</sup>Her paths ramble, you know not where,
lest you see before you the road to life.
<sup>7</sup>So now, children, listen to me,
do not stray from the words of my
mouth.
<sup>8</sup>Keep your way far from her,<sup>z</sup>
do not go near the door of her house, <sup>9</sup>Lest you give your honor* to others,<sup>a</sup>
and your years to a merciless one; <sup>10</sup>Lest outsiders take their fill of your wealth, and your hard-won earnings go to another's house;
<sup>11</sup>And you groan in the end, when your flesh and your body are
consumed;
<sup>12</sup>And you say, “Oh, why did I hate
instruction,
and my heart spurn reproof!
<sup>13</sup>Why did I not listen to the voice of my teachers,
incline my ear to my instructors!

- <sup>14</sup>I am all but ruined,
in the midst of the public assembly!”
- <sup>15</sup>Drink water * from your own cistern, running water from your own well.
- <sup>16</sup>Should your water sources be dispersed abroad,
streams of water in the streets?
- <sup>17</sup>Let them be yours alone,
not shared with outsiders;
- <sup>18</sup>Let your fountain be blessed and have joy of the wife of your youth,
- <sup>19</sup>your lovely hind, your graceful doe. *
Of whose love you will ever have your fill,
and by her ardor always be intoxicated.
- <sup>20</sup>Why then, my son, should you be intoxicated with a stranger,
and embrace another woman?
- <sup>21</sup>Indeed, the ways of each person are plain to the LORD’s sight;
all their paths he surveys; <sup>b</sup>
- <sup>22</sup>By their own iniquities the wicked will be caught,
in the meshes of their own sin they will be held fast;
- <sup>23</sup>They will die from lack of discipline,
lost because of their great folly.

Miscellaneous Proverbs*

Against Going Surety for One's Neighbor

- <sup>1*</sup> My son, if you have become surety to your neighbor,<sup>c</sup>
given your hand in pledge to another, <sup>2</sup>You have been snared by the utterance of your lips,
caught by the words of your mouth;
<sup>3</sup>So do this, my son, to free yourself,
since you have fallen into your neighbor's power:
Go, hurry, rouse your neighbor!
<sup>4</sup>Give no sleep to your eyes,
nor slumber to your eyelids;
<sup>5</sup>Free yourself like a gazelle from the hunter,
or like a bird from the hand of the fowler.

The Ant and the Sluggard at Harvest

- <sup>6*</sup> Go to the ant,<sup>d</sup> O sluggard, study her ways and learn wisdom;
<sup>7</sup>For though she has no chief,
no commander or ruler,
<sup>8</sup>She procures her food in the summer,
stores up her provisions in the harvest.
<sup>9</sup>How long, O sluggard, will you lie there?
when will you rise from your sleep?
<sup>10</sup>A little sleep, a little slumber,
a little folding of the arms to rest—* <sup>11</sup>Then poverty will come upon you like a robber,

and want like a brigand.

The Scoundrel

- 12* Scoundrels, villains, are they who deal in crooked talk.
- 13 Shifty of eye,
feet ever moving,
pointing with fingers,
- 14 They have perversity in their hearts,
always plotting evil,
sowing discord.
- 15 Therefore their doom comes suddenly;
in an instant they are crushed beyond
cure.

What the Lord Rejects

- 16 There are six things the LORD hates,
yes, seven* are an abomination to him;
- 17* Haughty eyes, a lying tongue,
hands that shed innocent blood,
- 18 A heart that plots wicked schemes,
feet that are quick to run to evil,
- 19 The false witness who utters lies,
and the one who sows discord among kindred.

Warning Against Adultery*

- 20 Observe, my son, your father's command,
and do not reject your mother's
teaching;
- 21 Keep them fastened over your heart
always,
tie them around your neck.
- 22 When you lie down they* will watch over

you,
when you wake, they will share your concerns;
wherever you turn, they will guide
you.

<sup>23</sup>For the command is a lamp, and the teaching a light,
and a way to life are the reproofs that
discipline,

<sup>24</sup>Keeping you from another's wife,
from the smooth tongue of the foreign woman.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Do not lust in your heart after her beauty, do not let her captivate you with her glance!<sup>f</sup>

<sup>26</sup>For the price of a harlot
may be scarcely a loaf of bread,
But a married woman
is a trap for your precious life.

<sup>27</sup>* Can a man take embers into his bosom,
and his garments not be burned?

<sup>28</sup>Or can a man walk on live coals,
and his feet not be scorched?

<sup>29</sup>So with him who sleeps with another's wife—
none who touches her shall go unpunished.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>30</sup>Thieves are not despised
if out of hunger they steal to satisfy their appetite.

<sup>31</sup>Yet if caught they must pay back
sevenfold,
yield up all the wealth of their house.

<sup>32</sup>But those who commit adultery have no
sense;
those who do it destroy themselves.

<sup>33</sup>* They will be beaten and disgraced, and their shame will not be wiped
away;

<sup>34</sup>For passion enrages the husband,

he will have no pity on the day of
vengeance;

<sup>35</sup>He will not consider any restitution,
nor be satisfied by your many bribes.

CHAPTER 7

See RG 290–97

The Seduction*

- <sup>1</sup>* My son, keep my words,
and treasure my commands.
- <sup>2</sup> Keep my commands and live,*
and my teaching as the apple of your eye;
- <sup>3</sup> Bind them on your fingers,
write them on the tablet of your heart.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> Say to Wisdom, “You are my sister!”* Call Understanding, “Friend!”
- <sup>5</sup> That they may keep you from a stranger,
from the foreign woman with her smooth words.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> For at the window of my house,
through my lattice I looked out*
- <sup>7</sup> And I saw among the naive,
I observed among the young men,
a youth with no sense,
- <sup>8</sup> Crossing the street near the corner,
then walking toward her house,
- <sup>9</sup> In the twilight, at dusk of day,
in the very dark of night.
- <sup>10</sup> Then the woman comes to meet him, dressed like a harlot, with secret designs.
- <sup>11</sup> She is raucous and unruly,
her feet cannot stay at home;
- <sup>12</sup> Now she is in the streets, now in the open squares,
lurking in ambush at every corner.
- <sup>13</sup> Then she grabs him, kisses him,
and with an impudent look says to him:

14 "I owed peace offerings,
and today I have fulfilled my vows;
15 So I came out to meet you,
to look for you, and I have found you!
16 With coverlets I have spread my couch, with brocaded cloths of Egyptian
linen;
17 I have sprinkled my bed* with myrrh,
with aloes, and with cinnamon.
18 Come, let us drink our fill of love,
until morning, let us feast on love!
19 For my husband is not at home,*
he has gone on a long journey;
20 A bag of money he took with him,
he will not return home till the full moon."
21 She wins him over by repeated urging,
with her smooth lips she leads him astray.* j
22 He follows her impulsively,
like an ox that goes to slaughter;
Like a stag that bounds toward the net,
23 till an arrow pierces its liver;
Like a bird that rushes into a snare,
unaware that his life is at stake.
24 So now, children, listen to me,*
be attentive to the words of my mouth!
25 Do not let your heart turn to her ways,
do not go astray in her paths;
26 For many are those she has struck down
dead,
numerous, those she has slain.
27 Her house is a highway to Sheol, leading down into the chambers of death.<sup>k</sup>

CHAPTER 8

See RG 290–97

The Discourse of Wisdom*

- <sup>1</sup>Does not Wisdom call,
and Understanding raise her voice?<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>On the top of the heights along the road,
at the crossroads she takes her stand;
- <sup>3</sup>By the gates at the approaches of the city,
in the entryways she cries aloud:
- <sup>4</sup>“To you, O people, I call;
my appeal is to you mortals.
- <sup>5</sup>You naive ones, gain prudence,
you fools, gain sense.*
- <sup>6</sup>Listen! for noble things I speak;
my lips proclaim honest words.
- <sup>7</sup>*Indeed, my mouth utters truth,
and my lips abhor wickedness.
- <sup>8</sup>All the words of my mouth are sincere,
none of them wily or crooked;
- <sup>9</sup>All of them are straightforward to the
intelligent,
and right to those who attain
knowledge.
- <sup>10</sup>Take my instruction instead of silver,
and knowledge rather than choice
gold.
- <sup>11</sup>[For Wisdom is better than corals,
and no treasures can compare with her.<sup>m</sup>]
- <sup>12</sup>I, Wisdom, dwell with prudence,
and useful knowledge I have.
- <sup>13</sup>[The fear of the LORD is hatred of evil;]
Pride, arrogance, the evil way,
and the perverse mouth I hate.<sup>n</sup>

14 Mine are counsel and advice;
     Mine is strength; I am understanding.* 15 By me kings reign,
     and rulers enact justice;
 16 By me princes govern,
     and nobles, all the judges of the earth.
 17 Those who love me I also love,
     and those who seek me find me.
 18 With me are riches and honor,<sup>o</sup> wealth that endures, and righteousness.
 19 My fruit is better than gold, even pure
     gold,
     and my yield than choice silver.<sup>p</sup> 20 On the way of righteousness I walk, along the paths of justice, 21 Granting wealth to those who love me,
     and filling their treasuries.
 22 * "The LORD begot me, the beginning of his works,
     the forerunner of his deeds of long ago;<sup>q</sup> 23 From of old I was formed,*
     at the first, before the earth.<sup>r</sup> 24 * When there were no deeps I was brought forth,
     when there were no fountains or springs of water;
 25 Before the mountains were settled into
     place,
     before the hills, I was brought forth;
 26 When the earth and the fields were not yet made,
     nor the first clods of the world.
 27 When he established the heavens, there was I,<sup>s</sup>
     when he marked out the vault over the face of the deep;
 28 When he made firm the skies above,

when he fixed fast the springs of the deep;

<sup>29</sup>When he set for the sea its limit,
so that the waters should not transgress
his command;

When he fixed the foundations of earth,
<sup>30</sup>then was I beside him as artisan; * <sup>t</sup>

I was his delight day by day, playing before him all the while,

<sup>31</sup>Playing over the whole of his earth,
having my delight with human beings.

<sup>32</sup>* Now, children, listen to me;
happy are they who keep my ways.

<sup>33</sup>Listen to instruction and grow wise,
do not reject it!

<sup>34</sup>Happy the one who listens to me, attending daily at my gates,
keeping watch at my doorposts;

<sup>35</sup>For whoever finds me finds life, <sup>u</sup>
and wins favor from the LORD;

<sup>36</sup>But those who pass me by do violence to
themselves;
all who hate me love death.”

The Two Women Invite Passersby to Their Banquets*

Woman Wisdom Issues Her Invitation

- <sup>1</sup>Wisdom has built her house,*
she has set up her seven columns; <sup>2</sup>She has prepared her meat, mixed her
wine,
yes, she has spread her table.
<sup>3</sup>She has sent out her maidservants; she calls*
from the heights out over the city:<sup>v</sup> <sup>4</sup>“Let whoever is naive turn in here;
to any who lack sense I say, <sup>5</sup>Come, eat of my food,
and drink of the wine I have mixed!
<sup>6</sup>Forsake foolishness that you may live;* advance in the way of understanding.”

Miscellaneous Aphorisms

- <sup>7</sup>Whoever corrects the arrogant earns insults;
and whoever reproves the wicked
incurs opprobrium.
<sup>8</sup>Do not reprove the arrogant, lest they hate you;
reprove the wise, and they will love
you.<sup>w</sup>
<sup>9</sup>Instruct the wise, and they become still wiser;
teach the just, and they advance in learning.
<sup>10</sup>The beginning of wisdom is fear of the

LORD,
and knowledge of the Holy One is understanding.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For by me your days will be multiplied and the years of your life increased.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>12</sup>If you are wise, wisdom is to your advantage;
if you are arrogant, you alone shall bear it.

Woman Folly Issues Her Invitation

<sup>13</sup>*Woman Folly is raucous,<sup>z</sup> utterly foolish; she knows nothing.

<sup>14</sup>She sits at the door of her house upon a seat on the city heights,

<sup>15</sup>Calling to passersby
as they go on their way straight ahead:

<sup>16</sup>“Let those who are naive turn in here,
to those who lack sense I say,

and bread taken secretly is pleasing!”*

<sup>18</sup>Little do they know that the shades are
there,
that her guests are in the depths of Sheol!*

III. First Solomonic Collection of Sayings*

CHAPTER 10

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>The Proverbs of Solomon:
A wise son gives his father joy, but a foolish son is a grief to his mother. * a
- <sup>2</sup>Ill-gotten treasures profit nothing, but justice saves from death. * b
- <sup>3</sup>The LORD does not let the just go hungry, but the craving of the wicked he thwarts. *
- <sup>4</sup>The slack hand impoverishes,
but the busy hand brings riches. <sup>c</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>A son who gathers in summer is a credit;
a son who slumbers during harvest, a
disgrace.
- <sup>6</sup>Blessings are for the head of the just;
but the mouth of the wicked conceals
violence. *
- <sup>7</sup>The memory of the just serves as blessing,
but the name of the wicked will rot. *
- <sup>8</sup>A wise heart accepts commands,
but a babbling fool will be overthrown. *
- <sup>9</sup>Whoever walks honestly walks securely,
but one whose ways are crooked will fare badly.
- <sup>10</sup>One who winks at a fault causes trouble,
but one who frankly reproves promotes peace.
- <sup>11</sup>The mouth of the just is a fountain of
life,
but the mouth of the wicked conceals
violence.
- <sup>12</sup>Hatred stirs up disputes,

<sup>d</sup> but love covers all offenses. *

<sup>13</sup>On the lips of the intelligent is found
wisdom,
but a rod for the back of one without sense. *

but the mouth of a fool is imminent
ruin.

<sup>15</sup>The wealth of the rich is their strong city;
the ruin of the poor is their poverty. *

<sup>16</sup>The labor of the just leads to life,
the gains of the wicked, to futility. * <sup>e</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Whoever follows instruction is in the path to life,
but whoever disregards reproof goes astray. <sup>f</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Whoever conceals hatred has lying lips,
and whoever spreads slander is a fool.

<sup>19</sup>Where words are many, sin is not wanting;
but those who restrain their lips do well. <sup>g</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Choice silver is the tongue of the just;
the heart of the wicked is of little worth.

<sup>21</sup>The lips of the just nourish many,
but fools die for want of sense. *

<sup>22</sup>It is the LORD's blessing that brings wealth, <sup>h</sup>
and no effort can substitute for it. *

<sup>23</sup>Crime is the entertainment of the fool;
but wisdom is for the person of
understanding.

<sup>24</sup>What the wicked fear will befall them,
but the desire of the just will be granted.

<sup>25</sup>When the tempest passes, the wicked are
no more;
but the just are established forever.

<sup>26</sup>As vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the
eyes,
are sluggards to those who send them.

<sup>27</sup>Fear of the LORD prolongs life, but the years of the wicked are cut short.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>28</sup>The hope of the just brings joy,
but the expectation of the wicked
perishes.*

<sup>29</sup>The LORD is a stronghold to those who walk honestly,
downfall for evildoers.

<sup>30</sup>The just will never be disturbed, but the wicked will not abide in the
land.

<sup>31</sup>The mouth of the just yields wisdom,
but the perverse tongue will be cut off.

<sup>32</sup>The lips of the just know favor,
but the mouth of the wicked, perversion.*

CHAPTER 11

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>False scales are an abomination to
the LORD,
but an honest weight, his delight. *j
- <sup>2</sup>When pride comes, disgrace comes;
but with the humble is wisdom. *
- <sup>3</sup>The honesty of the upright guides them;
the faithless are ruined by their duplicity.
- <sup>4</sup>Wealth is useless on a day of wrath, *k
but justice saves from death.
- <sup>5</sup>The justice of the honest makes their way straight,
but by their wickedness the wicked
fall. *l
- <sup>6</sup>The justice of the upright saves them, but the faithless are caught in their own intrigue.
- <sup>7</sup>When a person dies, hope is destroyed; <sup>m</sup> expectation pinned on wealth is destroyed. *
- <sup>8</sup>The just are rescued from a tight spot,
but the wicked fall into it instead.
- <sup>9</sup>By a word the impious ruin their neighbors, <sup>n</sup> but through their knowledge the just are rescued. *
- <sup>10</sup>When the just prosper, the city rejoices; <sup>o</sup>
when the wicked perish, there is jubilation.
- <sup>11</sup>Through the blessing of the upright the city is exalted,
but through the mouth of the wicked it is overthrown.

12Whoever reviles a neighbor lacks sense,
but the intelligent keep silent.

13One who slanders reveals secrets,<sup>p</sup> but a trustworthy person keeps a confidence.

14For lack of guidance a people falls;
security lies in many counselors.<sup>q</sup>

15Harm will come to anyone going surety for another,<sup>r</sup> but whoever hates giving pledges is secure.*

16A gracious woman gains esteem,*
and ruthless men gain wealth.

17Kindly people benefit themselves,
but the merciless harm themselves.

18The wicked make empty profits,
but those who sow justice have a sure reward.<sup>s</sup>

19Justice leads toward life,
but pursuit of evil, toward death.

20The crooked in heart are an abomination
to the LORD,
but those who walk blamelessly are his delight.*

21Be assured, the wicked shall not go
unpunished,
but the offspring of the just shall escape.

22Like a golden ring in a swine's snout is a beautiful woman without judgment.*

23The desire of the just ends only in good;
the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

24One person is lavish yet grows still richer;
another is too sparing, yet is the poorer.*

25 Whoever confers benefits will be amply enriched,
and whoever refreshes others will be refreshed.

26 Whoever hoards grain, the people curse,
but blessings are on the head of one who distributes it!

27 Those who seek the good seek favor, but those who pursue evil will have evil come upon them.*

28 Those who trust in their riches will fall, but like green leaves the just will flourish.<sup>t</sup>

29 Those who trouble their household inherit the wind,
and fools become slaves to the wise of
heart.

30 The fruit of justice is a tree of life, and one who takes lives is a sage.*

31 If the just are recompensed on the earth, how much more the wicked and the sinner! <sup>* u</sup>

CHAPTER 12

See RG 290–97

<sup>1</sup>Whoever loves discipline loves
knowledge,
but whoever hates reproof is stupid. * <sup>v</sup>

<sup>2</sup>A good person wins favor from the LORD,
but the schemer he condemns. *

<sup>3</sup>No one is made secure by wickedness, but the root of the just will never be disturbed. *

husband, <sup>w</sup> but a disgraceful one is like rot in his bones. *

<sup>5</sup>The plans of the just are right;
the designs of the wicked are deceit. *

<sup>6</sup>The words of the wicked are a deadly ambush,
but the speech of the upright saves
them. *

<sup>7</sup>Overthrow the wicked and they are no
more,
but the house of the just stands firm.

<sup>8</sup>For their good sense people are praised, *
but the perverse of heart are despised. *

<sup>9</sup>Better to be slighted and have a servant than put on airs and lack bread. <sup>x</sup>

<sup>10</sup>The just take care of their livestock, but the compassion of the wicked is cruel. *

<sup>11</sup>Those who till their own land have food
in plenty,
but those who engage in idle pursuits

lack sense. *y

<sup>12</sup>A wicked person desires the catch of evil
people,
but the root of the righteous will bear fruit. *

<sup>13</sup>By the sin of their lips the wicked are
ensnared,
but the just escape from a tight spot.

<sup>14</sup>From the fruit of their mouths people have their fill of good, <sup>z</sup>
and the works of their hands come back upon them. *

<sup>15</sup>The way of fools is right in their own
eyes,
but those who listen to advice are the
wise.

<sup>16</sup>Fools immediately show their anger,
but the shrewd conceal contempt.

<sup>17</sup>Whoever speaks honestly testifies truly,
but the deceitful make lying witnesses. *a

<sup>18</sup>The babble of some people is like sword thrusts,
but the tongue of the wise is healing.

<sup>19</sup>Truthful lips endure forever, *
the lying tongue, for only a moment.

<sup>20</sup>Deceit is in the heart of those who plot
evil,
but those who counsel peace have joy.

<sup>21</sup>No harm befalls the just,
but the wicked are overwhelmed with misfortune.

<sup>22</sup>Lying lips are an abomination to the LORD, <sup>b</sup>
but those who are truthful, his delight.

<sup>23</sup>The shrewd conceal knowledge, *
but the hearts of fools proclaim folly.

<sup>24</sup>The diligent hand will govern,

but sloth makes for forced labor.<sup>c</sup>

25 Worry weighs down the heart, but a kind word gives it joy.<sup>d</sup>

26 The just act as guides to their neighbors, but the way of the wicked leads them
astray.

27 Sloth does not catch its prey, but the wealth of the diligent is splendid.

28 In the path of justice is life, but the way of abomination leads to death.

CHAPTER 13

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>A wise son loves correction,
but the scoffer heeds no rebuke.*
- <sup>2</sup>From the fruit of the mouth one enjoys good things,<sup>e</sup>
but from the throat of the treacherous comes violence.*
- <sup>3</sup>Those who guard their mouths preserve
themselves;*
those who open wide their lips bring ruin.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>The appetite of the sluggard craves but
has nothing, but the appetite of the diligent is amply satisfied.
- <sup>5</sup>The just hate deceitful words,
but the wicked are odious and disgraceful.
- <sup>6</sup>Justice guards one who walks honestly,
but sin leads the wicked astray.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>One acts rich but has nothing;
another acts poor but has great wealth.*
- <sup>8</sup>People's riches serve as ransom for their
lives,
but the poor do not even hear a threat.*
- <sup>9</sup>The light of the just gives joy,
but the lamp* of the wicked goes out.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>The stupid sow discord by their insolence,
but wisdom is with those who take counsel.
- <sup>11</sup>Wealth won quickly dwindles away,

- but gathered little by little, it grows.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>Hope deferred makes the heart sick,
but a wish fulfilled is a tree of life.*
- <sup>13</sup>Whoever despises the word must pay for it,* but whoever reveres the command will be rewarded.
- <sup>14</sup>The teaching of the wise is a fountain of
life,
turning one from the snares of death.
- <sup>15</sup>Good sense brings favor,
but the way of the faithless is their ruin.*
- <sup>16</sup>The shrewd always act prudently
but the foolish parade folly.*
- <sup>17</sup>A wicked messenger brings on disaster,
but a trustworthy envoy is a healing remedy.
- <sup>18</sup>Poverty and shame befall those who let go of discipline,
but those who hold on to reproof receive honor.*
- <sup>19</sup>Desire fulfilled delights the soul,
but turning from evil is an abomination to fools.
- <sup>20</sup>Walk with the wise and you become
wise,
but the companion of fools fares
badly.<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>21</sup>Misfortune pursues sinners, but the just shall be recompensed with
good.
- <sup>22</sup>The good leave an inheritance to their children's children,
but the wealth of the sinner is stored
up for the just.
- <sup>23</sup>The tillage of the poor yields abundant
food,

but possessions are swept away for lack of justice.*

<sup>24</sup>Whoever spares the rod hates the child, but whoever loves will apply discipline.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>25</sup>When the just eat, their hunger is
appeased;
but the belly of the wicked suffers want.

CHAPTER 14

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>Wisdom builds her house, but Folly tears hers down with her own hands. *
- <sup>2</sup>Those who walk uprightly fear the LORD,
but those who are devious in their ways spurn him.
- <sup>3</sup>In the mouth of the fool is a rod for pride,
but the lips of the wise preserve them.
- <sup>4</sup>Where there are no oxen, the crib is clean;
but abundant crops come through the strength of the bull. *
- <sup>5</sup>A trustworthy witness does not lie,
but one who spouts lies makes a lying witness. * l
- <sup>6</sup>The scoffer seeks wisdom in vain,
but knowledge is easy for the
intelligent.
- <sup>7</sup>Go from the face of the fool;
you get no knowledge from such lips.
- <sup>8</sup>The wisdom of the shrewd enlightens
their way,
but the folly of fools is deceit. *
- <sup>9</sup>The wicked scorn a guilt offering,
but the upright find acceptance.
- <sup>10</sup>The heart knows its own bitterness,
and its joy no stranger shares. *
- <sup>11</sup>The house of the wicked will be destroyed,
but the tent of the upright will flourish. * m
- <sup>12</sup>Sometimes a way seems right,
but the end of it leads to death! n
- <sup>13</sup>Even in laughter the heart may be sad,

- and the end of joy may be sorrow.
- <sup>14</sup>From their own ways turncoats are sated,
from their own actions, the loyal.
- <sup>15</sup>The naive believe everything,
but the shrewd watch their steps.*
- <sup>16</sup>The wise person is cautious and turns
from evil;
the fool is reckless and gets embroiled.
- <sup>17</sup>The quick-tempered make fools of
themselves,
and schemers are hated.
- <sup>18</sup>The simple have folly as an adornment,
but the shrewd wear knowledge as a crown.*
- <sup>19</sup>The malicious bow down before the good,
and the wicked, at the gates of the just.
- <sup>20</sup>Even by their neighbors the poor are despised,
but a rich person's friends are many.<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>21</sup>Whoever despises the hungry comes up short,
but happy the one who is kind to the
poor!*
- <sup>22</sup>Do not those who plan evil go astray?
But those who plan good win steadfast loyalty.
- <sup>23</sup>In all labor there is profit,
but mere talk tends only to loss.
- <sup>24</sup>The crown of the wise is wealth;
the diadem of fools is folly.
- <sup>25</sup>The truthful witness saves lives,
but whoever utters lies is a betrayer.
- <sup>26</sup>The fear of the LORD is a strong defense,
a refuge even for one's children.
- <sup>27</sup>The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life,
turning one from the snares of death.
- <sup>28</sup>A multitude of subjects is the glory of the king;
but if his people are few, a prince is ruined.

<sup>29</sup>Long-suffering results in great wisdom;

a short temper raises folly high. * p

<sup>30</sup>A tranquil mind gives life to the body,

but jealousy rots the bones.

<sup>31</sup>Those who oppress the poor revile their

Maker,

but those who are kind to the needy

honor him. <sup>q</sup>

<sup>32</sup>The wicked are overthrown by their

wickedness,

but the just find a refuge in their

integrity.

<sup>33</sup>Wisdom can remain silent in the discerning heart,

but among fools she must make herself

<sup>34</sup>Justice exalts a nation,

but sin is a people's disgrace. *

<sup>35</sup>The king favors the skillful servant,

but the shameless one incurs his wrath.

CHAPTER 15

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1*</sup> A mild answer turns back wrath,<sup>s</sup>
but a harsh word stirs up anger.*
- <sup>2</sup> The tongue of the wise pours out
knowledge,
but the mouth of fools spews folly.
- <sup>3</sup> The eyes of the LORD are in every place, keeping watch on the evil and the good.
- <sup>4</sup> A soothing tongue is a tree of life,
but a perverse one breaks the spirit.
- <sup>5</sup> The fool spurns a father's instruction,
but whoever heeds reproof is prudent.<sup>* t</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> In the house of the just there are ample resources,
but the harvest of the wicked is in peril.
- <sup>7</sup> The lips of the wise spread knowledge,*
but the heart of fools is not steadfast.
- <sup>8</sup> The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD,<sup>u</sup> but the prayer of the upright is his delight.
- <sup>9</sup> The way of the wicked is an abomination
to the LORD,
but he loves one who pursues justice.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>10</sup> Discipline seems bad to those going
astray;
one who hates reproof will die.*
- <sup>11</sup> Sheol and Abaddon* lie open before the LORD;
how much more the hearts of mortals!
- <sup>12</sup> Scoffers do not love reproof;

- to the wise they will not go.
- <sup>13</sup>A glad heart lights up the face,
but an anguished heart breaks the spirit.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>The discerning heart seeks knowledge,
but the mouth of fools feeds on folly.*
- <sup>15</sup>All the days of the poor are evil,
but a good heart is a continual feast.*
- <sup>16</sup>* Better a little with fear of the LORD
than a great fortune with anxiety.
- <sup>17</sup> Better a dish of herbs where love is than a fatted ox and hatred with it.
- <sup>18</sup> The ill-tempered stir up strife,<sup>x</sup>
but the patient settle disputes.
- <sup>19</sup> The way of the sluggard is like a thorn
hedge,
but the path of the diligent is a highway.
- <sup>20</sup> A wise son gives his father joy,
but a fool despises his mother.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>21</sup> Folly is joy* to the senseless, but the person of understanding goes
the straight way.
- <sup>22</sup> Plans fail when there is no counsel,
but they succeed when advisers are many.<sup>* z</sup>
- <sup>23</sup> One has joy from an apt response;
a word in season, how good it is!<sup>* a</sup>
- <sup>24</sup> The path of life leads upward for the prudent,
turning them from Sheol below.*
- <sup>25</sup> The LORD pulls down the house of the proud,
but preserves intact the widow's
landmark.
- <sup>26</sup> The schemes of the wicked are an abomination to the LORD,<sup>b</sup>

- but gracious words are pure.*
- 27 The greedy tear down their own house,
but those who hate bribes will live.*
- 28 The heart of the just ponders a response,
but the mouth of the wicked spews
evil.
- 29 The LORD is far from the wicked,
but hears the prayer of the just.
- 30 A cheerful glance brings joy to the heart;
good news invigorates the bones.
- 31 The ear that listens to salutary reproof<sup>c</sup>
is at home among the wise.*
- 32 Those who disregard discipline hate
themselves,
but those who heed reproof acquire
understanding.
- 33 The fear of the LORD is training for
wisdom,
and humility goes before honors.<sup>d</sup>

CHAPTER 16

<sup>1</sup>Plans are made in human hearts, but from the LORD comes the tongue's
response.*

<sup>2</sup>All one's ways are pure* in one's own
eyes,
but the measurer of motives is the LORD.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Entrust your works to the LORD,
and your plans will succeed.

<sup>4</sup>The LORD has made everything for a purpose,
even the wicked for the evil day.*

<sup>5</sup>Every proud heart* is an abomination to the LORD;<sup>f</sup> be assured that none will go
unpunished.

<sup>6</sup>By steadfast loyalty guilt is expiated, and by the fear of the LORD evil is avoided.*

<sup>7</sup>When the LORD is pleased with someone's ways,
he makes even enemies be at peace
with them.

<sup>8</sup>Better a little with justice,
than a large income with injustice.

<sup>9</sup>The human heart plans the way, but the LORD directs the steps.*<sup>g</sup>

<sup>10</sup>An oracle is upon the king's lips, no judgment of his mouth is false.*

<sup>11</sup>Balance and scales belong to the LORD;
every weight in the sack is his concern.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Wrongdoing is an abomination to kings,

- for by justice the throne endures.<sup>i</sup>
- 13 The king takes delight in honest lips,
and whoever speaks what is right he loves.<sup>j</sup>
- 14 The king's wrath is a messenger of
death,<sup>k</sup>
but a wise person can pacify it.
- 15 A king's smile means life,
and his favor is like a rain cloud in spring.*
- 16 How much better to get wisdom than
gold!
To get understanding is preferable to silver.<sup>* l</sup>
- 17 The path of the upright leads away from
misfortune;
those who attend to their way guard
their lives.*
- 18 Pride goes before disaster,
and a haughty spirit before a fall.
- 19 It is better to be humble with the poor
than to share plunder with the proud.<sup>m</sup>
- 20 Whoever ponders a matter will be successful;
happy the one who trusts in the LORD!
- 21 The wise of heart is esteemed for discernment,
and pleasing speech gains a reputation
for learning.
- 22 Good sense is a fountain of life to those who have it,
but folly is the training of fools.
- 23 The heart of the wise makes for eloquent
speech,
and increases the learning on their lips.
- 24 Pleasing words are a honeycomb, sweet to the taste and invigorating to the bones.

- 25 Sometimes a way seems right,
but the end of it leads to death!<sup>n</sup>
- 26 The appetite of workers works for them,
for their mouths urge them on.<sup>* o</sup>
- 27 Scoundrels are a furnace of evil,
and their lips are like a scorching fire.
- 28 Perverse speech sows discord,
and talebearing separates bosom
friends.<sup>p</sup>
- 29 The violent deceive their neighbors,
and lead them into a way that is not
good.
- 30 Whoever winks an eye plans perversity;
whoever purses the lips does evil.*
- 31 Gray hair is a crown of glory;<sup>q</sup>
it is gained by a life that is just.
- 32 The patient are better than warriors,
and those who rule their temper, better than the conqueror of a city.<sup>r</sup>
- 33 Into the bag the lot is cast,
but from the LORD comes every decision.*

CHAPTER 17

See RG 290–97

<sup>1</sup>Better a dry crust with quiet than a house full of feasting with strife.*

<sup>2</sup>A wise servant will rule over an unworthy son,
and will share the inheritance of the
children.*

<sup>3</sup>The crucible for silver, and the furnace
for gold,
but the tester of hearts is the LORD.

<sup>4</sup>The evildoer gives heed to wicked lips,
the liar, to a mischievous tongue.

<sup>5</sup>Whoever mocks the poor reviles their Maker;
whoever rejoices in their misfortune
will not go unpunished.<sup>S</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Children's children are the crown of the elderly,
and the glory of children is their parentage.

<sup>7</sup>Fine words ill fit a fool;
how much more lying lips, a noble!

<sup>8</sup>A bribe seems a charm to its user;
at every turn it brings success.*

<sup>9</sup>Whoever overlooks an offense fosters
friendship,
but whoever gossips about it separates friends.*

<sup>10</sup>A single reprimand does more for a discerning person

than a hundred lashes for a fool.*

<sup>11</sup>The wicked pursue only rebellion, and a merciless messenger is sent

against them.*

12 Face a bear robbed of her cubs, but never fools in their folly!*

13 If you return evil for good,
evil will not depart from your house.* t

14 The start of strife is like the opening of a dam;
check a quarrel before it bursts forth!

15 Whoever acquits the wicked, u whoever condemns the just—
both are an abomination to the LORD.

16 Of what use is money in the hands of fools
when they have no heart to acquire
wisdom?*

17 A friend is a friend at all times,
and a brother is born for the time of adversity. v

18 Those without sense give their hands in pledge,
becoming surety for their neighbors. w

19 Those who love an offense love a fight; x
those who build their gate high * court disaster.

20 The perverse in heart come to no good,
and the double-tongued fall into trouble.*

21 Whoever conceives a fool has grief;
the father of a numskull has no joy.

22 A joyful heart is the health of the body, but a depressed spirit dries up the bones. y

23 A guilty person takes out a bribe from the pocket,
thus perverting the course of justice.*

24 On the countenance of a discerning person is wisdom,<sup>z</sup> but the eyes of a fool are on the ends

of the earth.*

<sup>25</sup>A foolish son is vexation to his father, and bitter sorrow to her who bore him.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>26</sup>It is wrong to fine an innocent person,
but beyond reason to scourge nobles.

<sup>27</sup>Those who spare their words are truly knowledgeable,
and those who are discreet are intelligent.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>28</sup>Even fools, keeping silent, are considered wise;
if they keep their lips closed,
intelligent.*

CHAPTER 18

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>One who is alienated seeks a pretext,
    with all persistence picks a quarrel.
- <sup>2</sup>Fools take no delight in understanding, but only in displaying what they think.*
- <sup>3</sup>With wickedness comes contempt,
    and with disgrace, scorn.
- <sup>4</sup>The words of one's mouth are deep
    waters,
    the spring of wisdom, a running brook.* <sup>c</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>It is not good to favor the guilty,
    nor to reject the claim of the just.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>The lips of fools walk into a fight, and their mouths are asking for a beating.*
- <sup>7</sup>The mouths of fools are their ruin;
    their lips are a deadly snare.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>The words of a talebearer are like dainty
    morsels:
    they sink into one's inmost being.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>Those slack in their work
    are kin to the destroyer.
- <sup>10</sup>* The name of the LORD is a strong tower;
    the just run to it and are safe.
- <sup>11</sup>The wealth of the rich is their strong city;<sup>g</sup>
    they fancy it a high wall.
- <sup>12</sup>Before disaster the heart is haughty,<sup>h</sup>
    but before honor is humility.
- <sup>13</sup>Whoever answers before listening,<sup>i</sup> theirs is folly and shame.*

- 14 One's spirit supports one when ill,
but a broken spirit who can bear? *
- 15 The heart of the intelligent acquires
knowledge,
and the ear of the wise seeks
knowledge. *
- 16 Gifts clear the way for people,
winning access to the great. j
- 17 Those who plead the case first seem to be in the right;
then the opponent comes and cross-examines
them. *
- 18 The lot puts an end to disputes,
and decides a controversy between the mighty. *
- 19 A brother offended is more unyielding
than a stronghold;
such strife is more daunting than castle
gates. *
- 20 With the fruit of one's mouth one's belly
is filled, with the produce of one's lips one is sated. * k
- 21 Death and life are in the power of the tongue; l
those who choose one shall eat its fruit. *
- 22 To find a wife is to find happiness,
a favor granted by the LORD. m
- 23 The poor implore,
but the rich answer harshly.
- 24 There are friends who bring ruin,
but there are true friends more loyal
than a brother. n

CHAPTER 19

See RG 254–62

- <sup>1</sup>Better to be poor and walk in
integrity
than rich and crooked in one's ways.<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Desire without knowledge is not good;
and whoever acts hastily, blunders.*
- <sup>3</sup>Their own folly leads people astray;
in their hearts they rage against the
- <sup>4</sup>Wealth adds many friends,
but the poor are left friendless.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>The false witness will not go unpunished,
and whoever utters lies will not escape.* <sup>q</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>Many curry favor with a noble;
everybody is a friend of a gift giver.
- <sup>7</sup>All the kin of the poor despise them;
how much more do their friends shun
them!*
- <sup>8</sup>Those who gain sense truly love
themselves;
those who preserve understanding will find success.*
- <sup>9</sup>The false witness will not go unpunished,
and whoever utters lies will perish.
- <sup>10</sup>Luxury is not befitting a fool;
much less should a slave rule over princes.
- <sup>11</sup>It is good sense to be slow to anger,
and an honor to overlook an offense.*
- <sup>12</sup>The king's wrath is like the roar of a lion,
but his favor, like dew on the grass.* <sup>r</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>The foolish son is ruin to his father,<sup>s</sup>

and a quarrelsome wife is water constantly dripping.*

14 Home and possessions are an inheritance
from parents,

but a prudent wife is from the LORD.<sup>t</sup>

15 Laziness brings on deep sleep, and the sluggard goes hungry.<sup>u</sup>

16 Those who keep commands keep their
lives,
but those who despise these ways will die.<sup>v</sup>

17 Whoever cares for the poor lends to the LORD,<sup>w</sup>
who will pay back the sum in full.

18 Discipline your son, for there is hope;
but do not be intent on his death.*<sup>x</sup>

19 A wrathful person bears the penalty;
after one rescue, you will have it to do
again.

20 Listen to counsel and receive instruction,
that you may eventually become wise.

21 Many are the plans of the human heart, but it is the decision of the LORD that endures.<sup>y</sup>

22 What is desired of a person is fidelity;
rather be poor than a liar.*

23 The fear of the LORD leads to life;
one eats and sleeps free from any harm.

24 The sluggard buries a hand in the dish;
not even lifting it to the mouth.<sup>z</sup>

25 Beat a scoffer and the naive learn a lesson;
rebuke the intelligent and they gain knowledge.<sup>a</sup>

26 Whoever mistreats a father or drives away a mother,
is a shameless and disgraceful child.*<sup>b</sup>

<sup>27</sup>My son, stop attending to correction; start straying from words of

<sup>28</sup>An unprincipled witness scoffs at justice, and the mouth of the wicked pours out iniquity.

<sup>29</sup>Rods are prepared for scoffers, and blows for the backs of fools.<sup>c</sup>

CHAPTER 20

See RG 290–97

<sup>1</sup>Wine is arrogant, strong drink is riotous;
none who are intoxicated by them are wise. *d

lion; <sup>e</sup>
those who incur his anger forfeit their lives.

<sup>3</sup>A person gains honor by avoiding strife, while every fool starts a quarrel. *

<sup>4</sup>In seedtime sluggards do not plow;
when they look for the harvest, it is not
there.

<sup>5</sup>The intention of the human heart is deep
water,
but the intelligent draw it forth. *f

<sup>6</sup>Many say, “My loyal friend,” but who can find someone worthy of trust?

<sup>7</sup>The just walk in integrity;
happy are their children after them!

<sup>8</sup>A king seated on the throne of judgment
dispels all evil with his glance. *

<sup>9</sup>Who can say, “I have made my heart clean, <sup>g</sup>
I am cleansed of my sin”? *

<sup>10</sup>Varying weights, varying measures, are both an abomination to the LORD. <sup>h</sup>

<sup>11</sup>In their actions even children can playact though their deeds be blameless and right. *

<sup>12</sup>The ear that hears, the eye that sees—

- the LORD has made them both.*
- 13 Do not love sleep lest you be reduced to poverty;
keep your eyes open, have your fill of
food.
- 14 “Bad, bad!” says the buyer,*
then goes away only to boast.
- 15 One can put on gold and abundant
jewels,
but wise lips are the most precious ornament.*
- 16 Take the garment of the one who became surety for a stranger;<sup>i</sup>
if for foreigners, exact the pledge!*
- 17 Bread earned by deceit is sweet, but afterward the mouth is filled with gravel.
- 18 Plans made with advice succeed;
with wise direction wage your war.
- 19 A slanderer reveals secrets;
so have nothing to do with a babbler!
- 20 Those who curse father or mother—their lamp will go out* in the dead of night.<sup>j</sup>
- 21 Possessions greedily guarded at the outset
will not be blessed in the end.*
- 22 Do not say, “I will repay evil!”
Wait for the LORD, who will help you.*<sup>k</sup>
- 23 Varying weights are an abomination to
the LORD,
and false scales are not good.<sup>l</sup>
- 24 Our steps are from the LORD;<sup>m</sup>
how, then, can mortals understand
their way?*
- 25 It is a trap to pledge rashly a sacred gift, and after a vow, then to reflect.*

<sup>26</sup>A wise king winnows the wicked, and threshes them under the cartwheel.*

<sup>27</sup>A lamp from the LORD is human life-breath;
it searches through the inmost being.*

<sup>28</sup>His steadfast loyalty safeguards the king, and he upholds his throne by justice.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>29</sup>The glory of the young is their strength, and the dignity of the old is gray hair.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>30</sup>Evil is cleansed away by bloody lashes,
and a scourging to the inmost being.

CHAPTER 21

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>A king's heart is channeled water in the hand of the LORD; God directs it where he pleases.*
- <sup>2</sup>All your ways may be straight in your own eyes,
but it is the LORD who weighs hearts.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>To do what is right and just<sup>q</sup>
is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice.*
- <sup>4</sup>Haughty eyes and a proud heart—
the lamp of the wicked will fail.*
- <sup>5</sup>The plans of the diligent end in profit,
but those of the hasty end in loss.*
- <sup>6</sup>Trying to get rich by lying is chasing a bubble over deadly snares.
- <sup>7</sup>The violence of the wicked will sweep
them away,
because they refuse to do what is right.
- <sup>8</sup>One's path may be winding and unfamiliar,
but one's conduct is blameless and
right.*
- <sup>9</sup>It is better to dwell in a corner of the
housetop
than in a mansion with a quarrelsome woman.* <sup>r</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>The soul of the wicked desires evil;
their neighbor finds no pity in their
eyes.
- <sup>11</sup>When scoffers are punished the naive
become wise;
when the wise succeed, they gain knowledge.<sup>s</sup>

- 12 The Righteous One appraises the house
of the wicked,
bringing down the wicked to ruin.*
- 13 Those who shut their ears to the cry of the poor
will themselves call out and not be answered.
- 14 A secret gift allays anger,
and a present concealed, violent
wrath.*
- 15 When justice is done it is a joy for the
just,
downfall for evildoers.* t
- 16 Whoever strays from the way of good
sense
will abide in the assembly of the shades.*
- 17 The lover of pleasure will suffer want;
the lover of wine and perfume will never be rich.
- 18 The wicked serve as ransom for the just,
and the faithless for the upright.* u
- 19 It is better to dwell in a wilderness than with a quarrelsome wife and trouble.
- 20 Precious treasure and oil are in the house of the wise,
but the fool consumes them.
- 21 Whoever pursues justice and kindness will find life and honor.*
- 22 The wise person storms the city of the
mighty,
and overthrows the stronghold in which they trust.
- 23 Those who guard mouth and tongue
guard themselves from trouble.* v
- 24 Proud, boastful—scoffer is the name:
those who act with overbearing pride.

25 The desire of sluggards will slay them, for their hands refuse to work.*

26 Some are consumed with avarice all the
day,
but the just give unsparingly.

27 The sacrifice of the wicked is an
abomination,
the more so when they offer it with bad intent.<sup>w</sup>

28 The false witness will perish,<sup>x</sup> but one who listens will give lasting testimony.

29 The face of the wicked hardens, but the upright maintains a straight course.*

30 No wisdom, no understanding,
no counsel prevail against the LORD.

31 The horse is equipped for the day of battle,
but victory is the LORD's.

CHAPTER 22

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>A good name is more desirable
than great riches,
and high esteem, than gold and silver. * y
- <sup>2</sup>Rich and poor have a common bond:
the LORD is the maker of them all. <sup>z</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>The astute see an evil and hide,
while the naive continue on and pay the penalty. * a
- <sup>4</sup>The result of humility and fear of the LORD
is riches, honor and life. *
- <sup>5</sup>Thorns and snares are on the path of the crooked;
those who would safeguard their lives
will avoid them.
- <sup>6</sup>Train the young in the way they should go;
even when old, they will not swerve from it. *
- <sup>7</sup>The rich rule over the poor, and the borrower is the slave of the lender. *
- <sup>8</sup>Those who sow iniquity reap calamity, <sup>b</sup>
and the rod used in anger will fail. *
- <sup>9</sup>The generous will be blessed,
for they share their food with the poor.
- <sup>10</sup>Expel the arrogant and discord goes too;
strife and insult cease.
- <sup>11</sup>The LORD loves the pure of heart; <sup>c</sup>
the person of winning speech has a king for a friend.
- <sup>12</sup>The eyes of the LORD watch over the
knowledgeable,

but he defeats the projects of the
faithless.

<sup>13</sup>The sluggard says, “A lion is outside;<sup>d</sup>
I might be slain in the street.”*

<sup>14</sup>The mouth of the foreign woman is a deep pit;<sup>e</sup> whoever incurs the LORD’s anger will fall into it.

<sup>15</sup>Folly is bound to the heart of a youth,
but the rod of discipline will drive it out.*

<sup>16</sup>Oppressing the poor for enrichment, giving to the rich: both are sheer loss.*

IV. Sayings of the Wise

<sup>17</sup>The Words of the Wise:*

Incline your ear, and hear my words,<sup>f</sup> and let your mind attend to my
teaching;

<sup>18</sup>For it will be well if you hold them within you,
if they all are ready on your lips.

<sup>19</sup>That your trust may be in the LORD,
I make them known to you today—
yes, to you.

<sup>20</sup>Have I not written for you thirty sayings, containing counsels and knowledge,

<sup>21</sup>To teach you truly how to give a dependable report to one who sends you?

<sup>22</sup>Do not rob the poor because they are
poor,
nor crush the needy at the gate;*

<sup>23</sup>For the LORD will defend their cause,<sup>g</sup>
and will plunder those who plunder
them.

<sup>24</sup>Do not be friendly with hotheads,
nor associate with the wrathful,

<sup>25</sup>Lest you learn their ways,

and become ensnared.

<sup>26</sup>Do not be one of those who give their hand in pledge,

those who become surety for debts;<sup>h</sup>

<sup>27</sup>For if you are unable to pay, your bed will be taken from under you.*

<sup>28</sup>Do not remove the ancient landmark* that your ancestors set up.<sup>i</sup>

They will stand in the presence of kings,
but not in the presence of the obscure.

CHAPTER 23

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1*</sup> When you sit down to dine with
a ruler,
mark well the one who is before you;
- <sup>2</sup> Stick the knife in your gullet*
if you have a ravenous appetite.
- <sup>3</sup> Do not desire his delicacies;
it is food that deceives.
- <sup>4</sup> Do not wear yourself out to gain wealth,
cease to be worried about it;
- <sup>5</sup> When your glance flits to it, it is gone!
For assuredly it grows wings,
like the eagle that flies toward heaven.*
- <sup>6*</sup> Do not take food with unwilling hosts,
and do not desire their delicacies;
- <sup>7</sup> For like something stuck in the throat is that food.
“Eat and drink,” they say to you,
but their hearts are not with you;
- <sup>8</sup> The little you have eaten you will vomit up,
and you will have wasted your agreeable words.
- <sup>9</sup> Do not speak in the hearing of fools;
they will despise the wisdom of your words.<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>10</sup> Do not remove the ancient landmark,<sup>k</sup>
nor invade the fields of the fatherless;*
- <sup>11</sup> For their redeemer is strong;
he will defend their cause against you.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>12</sup> Apply your heart to instruction,
and your ear to words of knowledge.
- <sup>13*</sup> Do not withhold discipline from youths;
if you beat them with the rod, they will not die.<sup>m</sup>

- 14 Beat them with the rod,<sup>n</sup>
and you will save them from Sheol.
- 15 My son, if your heart is wise,
my heart also will rejoice;
- 16 And my inmost being will exult,
when your lips speak what is right.
- 17 Do not let your heart envy sinners,<sup>o</sup>
but only those who always fear the
*
LORD;
- 18 For you will surely have a future,
and your hope will not be cut off.<sup>p</sup>
- 19 Hear, my son, and be wise,
and guide your heart in the right way.
- 20 Do not join with wine bibbers, nor with those who glut themselves on meat.
- 21 For drunkards and gluttons come to
poverty,
and lazing about clothes one in rags.
- 22 * Listen to your father who begot you,
do not despise your mother when she is old.
- 23 Buy truth and do not sell:
wisdom, instruction, understanding!
- 24 The father of a just person will exult
greatly;
whoever begets a wise son will rejoice
in him.<sup>q</sup>
- 25 Let your father and mother rejoice;
let her who bore you exult.
- 26 * My son, give me your heart,
and let your eyes keep to my ways,
- 27 For the harlot is a deep pit,
and the foreign woman a narrow well;
- 28 Yes, she lies in wait like a robber,<sup>r</sup>
and increases the number of the faithless.
- 29 * Who scream? Who shout?

Who have strife? Who have anxiety?
Who have wounds for nothing?
Who have bleary eyes?

<sup>30</sup>Whoever linger long over wine, whoever go around quaffing wine.<sup>S</sup>

when it sparkles in the cup.

It goes down smoothly, <sup>32</sup>but in the end it bites like a serpent,
and stings like an adder.

<sup>33</sup>Your eyes behold strange sights,
and your heart utters incoherent
things;

<sup>34</sup>You are like one sleeping on the high seas, sprawled at the top of the mast.

<sup>35</sup>“They struck me, but it did not pain me;
they beat me, but I did not feel it.
When can I get up,

when can I go out and get more?”*

CHAPTER 24

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1*</sup> Do not envy the wicked,
nor desire to be with them;<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> For their hearts plot violence,
and their lips speak of foul play.
- <sup>3</sup> By wisdom a house is built,
by understanding it is established;
- <sup>4</sup> And by knowledge its rooms are filled with every precious and pleasing possession.
- <sup>5</sup> The wise are more powerful than the strong,
and the learned, than the mighty,<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> For by strategy war is waged,
and victory depends on many counselors.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>7*</sup> Wise words are beyond fools' reach,<sup>w</sup>
in the assembly they do not open their
mouth;
- <sup>8</sup> As they calculate how to do evil,
people brand them troublemakers.
- <sup>9</sup> The scheme of a fool gains no
acceptance,
the scoffer is an abomination to the community.
- <sup>10*</sup> Did you fail in a day of adversity,
did your strength fall short?
- <sup>11</sup> Did you fail to rescue those who were being dragged off to death,*
those tottering, those near death, <sup>12</sup> because you said, "We didn't know about it"?
- Surely, the Searcher of hearts knows and will repay all according to their deeds.<sup>x</sup>

- 13* If you eat honey, my son, because it is
good,
if pure honey is sweet to your taste, 14 Such, you must know, is wisdom to your soul.
If you find it, you will have a future,
and your hope will not be cut off.<sup>y</sup>
- 15* Do not lie in wait at the abode of the
just,
do not ravage their dwelling places; 16 Though the just fall seven times, they rise again,
but the wicked stumble from only one mishap.
- 17* Do not rejoice when your enemies fall,
and when they stumble, do not let your heart exult,
18 Lest the LORD see it, be displeased with
you,
and withdraw his wrath from your
enemies.
- 19 Do not be provoked at evildoers,
do not envy the wicked;
20 For the evil have no future,
the lamp of the wicked will be put out.<sup>z</sup>
- 21 My son, fear the LORD and the king;
have nothing to do with those who hate them;
22 For disaster will issue suddenly,
and calamity from them both, who knows when?

V. Further Sayings of the Wise*

- 23 These also are Words of the Wise:
To show partiality in judgment is not good.<sup>a</sup>
- 24 Whoever says to the guilty party, “You

- are innocent,”
will be cursed by nations, scorned by
peoples;
- 25 But those who render just verdicts will fare well,
and on them will come the blessing of prosperity.
- 26 An honest reply—
a kiss on the lips.*
- 27 Complete your outdoor tasks,
and arrange your work in the field;
afterward you can build your house.*
- 28 Do not testify falsely against your neighbor<sup>b</sup>
and so deceive with your lips.
- 29 Do not say, “As they did to me, so will I do to them;<sup>c</sup>
I will repay them according to their
deeds.”*
- 30* I passed by the field of a sluggard,
by the vineyard of one with no sense;
- 31 It was all overgrown with thistles;
its surface was covered with nettles,
and its stone wall broken down.
- 32 As I gazed at it, I reflected;
I saw and learned a lesson:
- 33 A little sleep, a little slumber,<sup>d</sup>
a little folding of the arms to rest—
- 34 Then poverty will come upon you like a robber,
and want like a brigand.

VI. Second Solomonic Collection, Collected under King Hezekiah*

CHAPTER 25

<sup>2*</sup> It is the glory of God to conceal a matter, and the glory of kings to fathom a matter. *

<sup>3</sup> Like the heavens in height, and the earth
in depth,
the heart of kings is unfathomable.

<sup>4*</sup> Remove the dross from silver,
and it comes forth perfectly purified;

<sup>5</sup> Remove the wicked from the presence of the king,
and his throne is made firm through
justice.

<sup>6*</sup> Claim no honor in the king's presence,
nor occupy the place of superiors;

<sup>7</sup> For it is better to be told, "Come up closer!"
than to be humbled before the prince. <sup>f</sup>

<sup>8</sup> What your eyes have seen
do not bring forth too quickly against an opponent;
For what will you do later on when your neighbor puts you to shame?

<sup>9*</sup> Argue your own case with your neighbor,
but the secrets of others do not disclose;

<sup>10</sup> Lest, hearing it, they reproach you,
and your ill repute never ceases.

<sup>11</sup> Golden apples in silver settings are words spoken at the proper time.

<sup>12</sup> A golden earring or a necklace of fine
gold—
one who gives wise reproof to a listening ear.

- <sup>13</sup> Like the coolness of snow in the heat of the harvest
are faithful messengers for those who send them,
lifting the spirits of their masters.
- <sup>14</sup> Clouds and wind but no rain—
the one who boasts of a gift not given.
- <sup>15</sup> By patience is a ruler persuaded,<sup>g</sup>
and a soft tongue can break a bone.
- <sup>16</sup>* If you find honey, eat only what you need,
lest you have your fill and vomit it up.
- <sup>17</sup> Let your foot be seldom in your neighbors' house,
lest they have their fill of you—and
hate you.
- <sup>18</sup> A club, sword, or sharp arrow—
the one who bears false witness against a neighbor.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>19</sup> A bad tooth or an unsteady foot—
a trust betrayed in time of trouble.*
- <sup>20</sup> Like the removal of clothes on a cold
day, or vinegar on soda,
is the one who sings to a troubled
heart.
- <sup>21</sup>* If your enemies are hungry, give them
food to eat,
if thirsty, give something to drink;<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>22</sup> For live coals you will heap on their
heads,
and the LORD will vindicate you.
- <sup>23</sup> The north wind brings rain,
and a backbiting tongue, angry looks.
- <sup>24</sup> It is better to dwell in a corner of the
housetop
than in a mansion with a quarrelsome
wife.*<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>25</sup> Cool water to one faint from thirst
is good news from a far country.

<sup>26</sup>A trampled fountain or a polluted spring—
a just person fallen before the wicked.

<sup>27</sup>To eat too much honey is not good;
nor to seek honor after honor.

<sup>28</sup>A city breached and left defenseless are those who do not control their temper.

CHAPTER 26*

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup> Like snow in summer, like rain in
harvest,
honor for a fool is out of place.*
- <sup>2</sup> Like the sparrow in its flitting, like the swallow in its flight,
a curse uncalled-for never lands.*
- <sup>3</sup> The whip for the horse, the bridle for the ass,
and the rod for the back of fools.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>* Do not answer fools according to their folly,
lest you too become like them.
- <sup>5</sup> Answer fools according to their folly,
lest they become wise in their own
eyes.
- <sup>6</sup> Those who send messages by a fool cut off their feet; they drink down
violence.
- <sup>7</sup>* A proverb in the mouth of a fool
hangs limp, like crippled legs.
- <sup>8</sup> Giving honor to a fool
is like entangling a stone in the sling.
- <sup>9</sup> A thorn stuck in the hand of a drunkard
is a proverb in the mouth of fools.
- <sup>10</sup> An archer wounding all who pass by is anyone who hires a drunken fool.
- <sup>11</sup> As dogs return to their vomit,
so fools repeat their folly.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>12</sup> You see those who are wise in their own
eyes?
There is more hope for fools than for
them.
- <sup>13</sup>* The sluggard says, “There is a lion in
the street,

a lion in the middle of the square!”<sup>m</sup>

14 The door turns on its hinges and sluggards, on their beds.

15 The sluggard buries a hand in the dish, too weary to lift it to the mouth.<sup>n</sup>

16 In their own eyes sluggards are wiser than seven who answer with good
judgment.

17 Whoever meddles in the quarrel of another
is one who grabs a passing dog by the ears.

18 Like a crazed archer scattering firebrands and deadly arrows,

19 Such are those who deceive their
neighbor,
and then say, “I was only joking.”

20* Without wood the fire dies out;
without a talebearer strife subsides.

21 Charcoal for coals, wood for fire—
such are the quarrelsome, enkindling strife.<sup>o</sup>

22 The words of a talebearer are like dainty
morsels:

they sink into one’s inmost being.<sup>* p</sup>

23 Like a glazed finish on earthenware are smooth lips and a wicked heart.*

24 With their lips enemies pretend,
but inwardly they maintain deceit;

25 When they speak graciously, do not trust them,<sup>q</sup>

for seven abominations* are in their hearts.

26 Hatred can be concealed by pretense,
but malice will be revealed in the*
assembly.

<sup>27</sup>Whoever digs a pit falls into it;
and a stone comes back upon the one who rolls it.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>28</sup>The lying tongue is its owner's enemy,
and the flattering mouth works ruin.

CHAPTER 27

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>Do not boast about tomorrow,
for you do not know what any day
may bring forth.
- <sup>2</sup>Let another praise you, not your own
mouth;
a stranger, not your own lips.
- <sup>3</sup>Stone is heavy, and sand a burden,
but a fool's provocation is heavier than both.<sup>S</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Anger is cruel, and wrath overwhelming,
but before jealousy who can stand?*
- <sup>5</sup>*Better is an open rebuke
than a love that remains hidden.
- <sup>6</sup>Trustworthy are the blows of a friend, dangerous, the kisses of an enemy.*
- <sup>7</sup>One who is full spurns honey;
but to the hungry, any bitter thing is sweet.
- <sup>8</sup>Like a bird far from the nest*
so is anyone far from home.
- <sup>9</sup>Perfume and incense bring joy to the
heart,
but by grief the soul is torn asunder.
- <sup>10</sup>Do not give up your own friend and your father's friend;
do not resort to the house of your kindred when trouble strikes.*
- Better a neighbor near than kin far away.
- <sup>11</sup>Be wise, my son, and bring joy to my
heart,
so that I can answer whoever taunts me.*
- <sup>12</sup>The astute see an evil and hide;
the naive continue on and pay the penalty.<sup>t</sup>

13 Take the garment of the one who became surety for a stranger;<sup>u</sup> if for a foreign woman, exact the pledge!*

14 Those who greet their neighbor with a loud voice* in the early morning,
a curse can be laid to their charge.

15 For a persistent leak on a rainy day the match is a quarrelsome wife;<sup>v</sup>

16 Whoever would hide her hides a stormwind
and cannot tell north from south.

17 Iron is sharpened by iron;
one person sharpens another.*

18 Those who tend a fig tree eat its fruit;
so those attentive to their master will be honored.

19 As face mirrors face in water,
so the heart reflects the person.

20 Sheol and Abaddon can never be satisfied;<sup>w</sup>
so the eyes of mortals can never be satisfied.*

21 The crucible for silver, the furnace for
gold,
so you must assay the praise you receive.

22 Though you pound fools with a pestle,
their folly never leaves them.

23* Take good care of your flocks,
give careful attention to your herds;

24 For wealth does not last forever,
nor even a crown from age to age.

25 When the grass comes up and the new growth appears,
and the mountain greens are gathered in,

<sup>26</sup>The lambs will provide you with clothing,
and the goats, the price of a field,

<sup>27</sup>And there will be ample goat's milk for your food,
food for your house, sustenance for your maidens.

CHAPTER 28

See RG 290–97

- <sup>1</sup>The wicked flee though none
pursue;
but the just, like a lion, are confident.
- <sup>2</sup>If a land is rebellious, its princes will be many;
but with an intelligent and wise ruler
there is stability.*
- <sup>3</sup>One who is poor and extorts from the lowly
is a devastating rain that leaves no food.*
- <sup>4</sup>Those who abandon instruction* praise
the wicked,
but those who keep instruction oppose
them.
- <sup>5</sup>The evil understand nothing of justice,* but those who seek the LORD understand everything.
- <sup>6</sup>Better to be poor and walk in integrity than rich and crooked in one's ways.*<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>Whoever heeds instruction is a wise son,
but whoever joins with wastrels disgraces his father.
- <sup>8</sup>Whoever amasses wealth by interest and overcharge*
gathers it for the one who is kind to the
poor.
- <sup>9</sup>Those who turn their ears from hearing instruction,<sup>y</sup>
even their prayer is an abomination.
- <sup>10</sup>Those who mislead the upright into an evil way
will themselves fall into their own pit, but the blameless will attain
prosperity.

- 11 The rich are wise in their own eyes,
but the poor who are intelligent see through them.
- 12 When the just triumph, there is great
glory;
but when the wicked prevail, people
hide.*
- 13 Those who conceal their sins do not prosper,
but those who confess and forsake
them obtain mercy.*
- 14 Happy those who always fear;*
but those who harden their hearts fall into evil.
- 15 A roaring lion or a ravenous bear
is a wicked ruler over a poor people.
- 16 The less prudent the rulers, the more oppressive their deeds.
Those who hate ill-gotten gain prolong their days.
- 17 Though a person burdened with blood guilt is in flight even to the grave,
let no one offer support.
- 18 Whoever walks blamelessly is safe,
but one whose ways are crooked falls
into a pit.
- 19 Those who cultivate their land will have plenty of food,
but those who engage in idle pursuits
will have plenty of want.<sup>z</sup>
- 20 The trustworthy will be richly blessed;
but whoever hastens to be rich will not go unpunished.<sup>a</sup>
- 21 To show partiality is never good.<sup>b</sup>
for even a morsel of bread one may do wrong.*
- 22 Misers hurry toward wealth,
not knowing that want is coming toward them.*

23 Whoever rebukes another wins more favor
than one who flatters with the tongue.

24 Whoever defrauds father or mother and says, "It is no sin,"<sup>c</sup>
is a partner to a brigand.

25 The greedy person stirs up strife, but the one who trusts in the LORD will
prosper.

26 Those who trust in themselves are fools,
but those who walk in wisdom are safe.

27 Those who give to the poor have no lack,<sup>d</sup>
but those who avert their eyes, many curses.

28 When the wicked prevail, people hide;
but at their fall the just abound.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 29

<sup>1</sup>Those stiff-necked in the face of reproof
in an instant will be shattered beyond
*
cure.

<sup>2</sup>When the just flourish, the people
rejoice;
but when the wicked rule, the people
groan. * f

<sup>3</sup>Whoever loves wisdom gives joy to his father,
but whoever consorts with harlots
squanders his wealth.

<sup>4</sup>By justice a king builds up the land;
but one who raises taxes tears it
*
down.

<sup>5</sup>Those who speak flattery to their neighbor
*
cast a net at their feet.

<sup>6</sup>The sin of the wicked is a trap,
but the just run along joyfully. g

<sup>7</sup>The just care for the cause of the poor;
the wicked do not understand such
*
care.

<sup>8</sup>Scoffers enflame the city,
but the wise calm the fury. h

<sup>9</sup>If a wise person disputes with a fool, there is railing and ridicule but no resolution.

<sup>10</sup>The bloodthirsty hate the blameless,
*
but the upright seek his life.

<sup>11</sup>Fools give vent to all their anger;
but the wise, biding their time,
control it. i

- 12 If rulers listen to lying words,
their servants all become wicked.
- 13 The poor and the oppressor meet;<sup>j</sup>
the LORD gives light to the eyes of both.
- 14 If a king is honest for the rights of the
poor,
his throne stands firm forever.<sup>k</sup>
- 15 The rod of correction gives wisdom, but uncontrolled youths disgrace their mothers.<sup>l</sup>
- 16 When the wicked increase, crime
increases;
but the just will behold their downfall.*
- 17 Discipline your children, and they will bring you comfort,
and give delight to your soul.
- 18 Without a vision the people lose restraint;
but happy is the one who follows
instruction.*
- 19 Not by words alone can servants be trained;<sup>m</sup>
for they understand but do not respond.*
- 20 Do you see someone hasty in speech?<sup>n</sup>
There is more hope for a fool!
- 21 If servants are pampered from childhood
they will turn out to be stubborn.
- 22 The ill-tempered stir up strife,
and the hotheaded cause many sins.<sup>o</sup>
- 23 Haughtiness brings humiliation,
but the humble of spirit acquire honor.<sup>* p</sup>
- 24 Partners of a thief hate themselves;
they hear the imprecation but do not testify.*

- <sup>25</sup>Fear of others becomes a snare,
but the one who trusts in the LORD is safe.
- <sup>26</sup>Many curry favor with a ruler,
but it is from the Lord that one receives justice.
- <sup>27</sup>An abomination to the just, the evildoer;
an abomination to the wicked, one whose way is straight.

VII. Sayings of Agur and Others

CHAPTER 30

The pronouncement of mortal man: “I am weary, O God;
I am weary, O God, and I am
exhausted.

<sup>2</sup> I am more brute than human being,
without even human intelligence;

<sup>3*</sup> Neither have I learned wisdom, nor have I the knowledge of the Holy
One.

<sup>4</sup> Who has gone up to heaven and come down again—
who has cupped the wind in the hollow of the hand?

Who has bound up the waters in a cloak—
who has established all the ends of the
earth?

What is that person’s name, or the name
of his son?”*

<sup>5*</sup> Every word of God is tested;<sup>q</sup>
he is a shield to those who take refuge
in him.

<sup>6</sup> Add nothing to his words,<sup>r</sup> lest he reprimand you, and you be proved a liar.

<sup>7*</sup> Two things I ask of you,
do not deny them to me before I die:

<sup>8</sup> Put falsehood and lying far from me,
give me neither poverty nor riches;
provide me only with the food I need;

<sup>9</sup> Lest, being full, I deny you, saying, “Who is the LORD?”

Or, being in want, I steal,
and profane the name of my God.

<sup>10</sup> Do not criticize servants to their master, lest they curse you, and you have to pay the penalty.

11* There are some who curse their fathers, and do not bless their mothers.<sup>S</sup>

12 There are some pure in their own eyes,
yet not cleansed of their filth.

13 There are some—how haughty their
eyes!
how overbearing their glance!

14 There are some—their teeth are swords,
their teeth are knives, Devouring the needy from the earth,
and the poor from the human race.

15* The leech has two daughters:
“Give,” and “Give.”

Three things never get their fill,
four never say, “Enough!”

16 Sheol, a barren womb,<sup>t</sup> land that never gets its fill of water, and fire, which never says, “Enough!”

17 The eye that mocks a father,
or scorns the homage due a mother,
Will be plucked out by brook ravens;
devoured by a brood of vultures.

18* Three things are too wonderful for me,
yes, four I cannot understand:

19 The way of an eagle in the sky,
the way of a serpent upon a rock,
The way of a ship on the high seas,
and the way of a man with a woman.

20 This is the way of an adulterous woman:
she eats, wipes her mouth,
and says, “I have done no wrong.”*

21* Under three things the earth trembles,
yes, under four it cannot bear up:

22 Under a slave who becomes king,
and a fool who is glutton with food;<sup>u</sup>

23 Under an unloved woman who is wed,
and a maidservant who displaces her mistress.

- 24* Four things are among the smallest on
the earth,
and yet are exceedingly wise:
- 25 Ants—a species not strong,
yet they store up their food in the summer;
- 26 Badgers—a species not mighty,
yet they make their home in the
crag;
- 27 Locusts—they have no king,
yet they march forth in formation;
- 28 Lizards—you can catch them with your
hands,
yet they find their way into kings'
palaces.
- 29* Three things are stately in their stride,
yes, four are stately in their carriage:
- 30 The lion, mightiest of beasts,
retreats before nothing;
- 31 The strutting cock, and the he-goat,
and the king at the head of his people.
- 32* If you have foolishly been proud or presumptuous—put your hand on your mouth;
- 33 For as the churning of milk produces curds,
and the pressing of the nose produces
blood,
the churning of anger produces strife.

VIII. Sayings of King Lemuel*

CHAPTER 31

<sup>2</sup>What are you doing, my son!*
what are you doing, son of my
womb;
what are you doing, son of my vows!

<sup>3</sup>Do not give your vigor to women, or your strength* to those who ruin
kings.

<sup>4</sup>It is not for kings, Lemuel,
not for kings to drink wine;
strong drink is not for princes,

<sup>5</sup>Lest in drinking they forget what has been decreed,
and violate the rights of any who are in
need.

<sup>6</sup>Give strong drink to anyone who is perishing,
and wine to the embittered;

<sup>7</sup>When they drink, they will forget their misery,
and think no more of their troubles.

<sup>8</sup>Open your mouth in behalf of the mute,
and for the rights of the destitute;

<sup>9</sup>Open your mouth, judge justly, defend the needy and the poor!

IX. Poem on the Woman of Worth*

<sup>10</sup>Who can find* a woman of worth?<sup>v</sup>
Far beyond jewels is her value.

<sup>11</sup>Her husband trusts her judgment;
he does not lack income.

<sup>12</sup>She brings him profit, not loss,*
all the days of her life.

<sup>13</sup>She seeks out wool and flax

and weaves with skillful hands.

<sup>14</sup>Like a merchant fleet,
she secures her provisions from afar.

<sup>15</sup>She rises while it is still night,
and distributes food to her household,
a portion to her maidservants.

<sup>16</sup>She picks out a field and acquires it;
from her earnings she plants a vineyard.

<sup>17</sup>She girds herself with strength;
she exerts her arms with vigor.

<sup>18</sup>She enjoys the profit from her dealings;
her lamp is never extinguished at night.

<sup>19</sup>She puts her hands to the distaff,
and her fingers ply the spindle.

<sup>20</sup>She reaches out her hands to the poor,
and extends her arms to the needy.

<sup>21</sup>She is not concerned for her household
when it snows—
all her charges are doubly clothed.

<sup>22</sup>She makes her own coverlets;
fine linen and purple are her clothing.

<sup>23</sup>Her husband is prominent at the city gates
as he sits with the elders of the land.

<sup>24</sup>She makes garments and sells them,
and stocks the merchants with belts.

<sup>25</sup>She is clothed with strength and dignity, and laughs at the days to come.

<sup>26</sup>She opens her mouth in wisdom;
kindly instruction is on her tongue.

<sup>27</sup>She watches over the affairs of her household,
and does not eat the bread of idleness.

<sup>28</sup>Her children rise up and call her blessed;
her husband, too, praises her:

<sup>29</sup>“Many are the women of proven worth,
but you have excelled them all.”

<sup>30</sup>Charm is deceptive and beauty fleeting;

the woman who fears the LORD is to be

<sup>31</sup>Acclaim her for the work of her hands,
and let her deeds praise her at the city
gates.

1:1–7 The prologue explains the purpose of the book. The book has a sapiential, ethical, and religious dimension: to bring the inexperienced to knowledge and right conduct, to increase the facility of those already wise for interpreting proverbs, parables and riddles, and to encourage the fulfillment of one's duties to God.

1:1 Proverbs: the Hebrew word mashal is broader than English "proverb," embracing the instructions of chaps. 1–9 and the sayings, observations, and comparisons of chaps. 10–31.

1:2 Discipline: education or formation which dispels ignorance and corrects vice. Note the reprise of v. 2a in v. 7b.

1:4 Naive: immature, inexperienced, sometimes the young, hence easily influenced for good or evil.

1:7 Fear of the LORD: primarily a disposition rather than the emotion of fear; reverential awe and respect toward God combined with obedience to God's will.

1:8–19 A parental warning to a young person leaving home, for them to avoid the company of the greedy and violent. Two ways lie before the hearer, a way that leads to death and a way that leads to life. The trap which the wicked set for the innocent (v. 11) in the end takes away the lives of the wicked themselves (v. 19). This theme will recur especially in chaps. 1–9. A second theme introduced here is that of founding (or managing) a household and choosing a spouse. A third theme is the human obstacles to attaining wisdom. Here (and in 2:12–15 and 4:10–19), the obstacle is men (always in the plural); in 2:16–19; 5:1–6; 6:20–35; chap. 7; 9:13–18, the obstacle to the quest is the "foreign" woman (always in the singular).

1:17 A difficult verse. The most probable interpretation is that no fowler lifts up the net so the bird can see it. The verse might be paraphrased: God does not let those who walk on evil paths see the net that will entrap them. The passive construction ("a net is spread") is sometimes used to express divine activity. Verse 16 is a later attempt to add clarity. It is a quotation from Is 59:7 and is not in the best Greek manuscripts.

1:20–33 Wisdom is personified as in chaps. 8 and 9:1–6. With divine authority she proclaims the moral order, threatening to leave to their own devices those who disregard her invitation. All three speeches of Woman Wisdom have common features: a setting in city streets; an audience of simple or naive people; a competing appeal (chap. 7 is the competing appeal for chap. 8); an invitation to a relationship that brings long life, riches, repute.

The structure of the speeches is: A: setting (vv. 20–21); B: Wisdom's withdrawal, rebuke and announcement (vv. 22–23); reason and rejection I (vv. 24–27); reason and rejection II (vv. 28–31); summary (v. 32); C: the effects of Wisdom's presence (v. 33). Wisdom's opening speech is an extended threat ending with a brief invitation (v. 33). Her second speech is an extended invitation ending with a brief threat (8:36). The surprisingly abrupt and harsh tone of her speech is perhaps to be explained as a response to the arrogant words of the men in the previous scene (1:8–19).

1:22–23 There is textual confusion. Verse 22bc (in the third person) is an addition, interrupting vv. 22a and 23a (in the second person). The addition has been put in brackets, to separate it from the original poem. The original verses do not ask for a change of heart but begin to detail the consequences of disobedience to Wisdom.

1:31 Eat the fruit: sinners are punished by the consequences of their sins. Wisdom's voice echoes that of the parents in vv. 8–19. The parents mediate wisdom in vv. 8–19, but here Wisdom herself speaks.

2:1–22 Chapter 2 is a single poem, an acrostic of twenty-two lines, the number of consonants in the Hebrew alphabet. In vv. 1–11, the letter aleph, the first letter of the alphabet, predominates, and in vv. 12–22, the letter lamed, the first letter of the second half of the alphabet. A single structure runs through the whole: if (aleph) you search... then (aleph) the Lord/Wisdom will grant... saving (lamed) you from the wicked man/woman... thus (lamed) you can walk in the safe way ....

2:2–3 Wisdom ... understanding ... intelligence: various names or aspects of the same gift.

2:12–15 As in 1:8–19, there is an obstacle to the quest for wisdom—deceitful and violent men. Cf. also 4:10–19. They offer a way of life that is opposed to the way of wisdom.

2:16–19 A second obstacle and counter-figure to Wisdom, personified as an attractive woman, is the “stranger,” or “foreigner,” from outside the territory or kinship group, hence inappropriate as a marriage partner. In Proverbs she comes to be identified with Woman Folly, whose deceitful words promise life but lead to death. Woman Folly appears also in chap. 5, 6:20–35, chap. 7 and 9:13–18. Covenant: refers to the vow uttered with divine sanction at the woman's previous marriage, as the parallel verse suggests. She is already married and relations with her would be adulterous.

2:18 Shades: the inhabitants of Sheol.

2:21–22 Verses 21–22 echo the ending of Wisdom's speech in 1:32–33, in which refusing Wisdom's invitation meant death and obedience to her meant life. The same set of ideas is found in Ps 37 (especially vv. 3, 9, 11, 22, 29, 34, and 38): to live on (or inherit) the land and to be uprooted from the land are expressions of divine recompense.

3:1–12 The instruction consists of a series of six four-line exhortations in which the second line of each exhortation mentions a reward or benefit. In the first five exhortations, the teacher promises a reward: long life, a good name, divine protection, health, abundant crops. The last exhortation, vv. 11–12, departs from the command-reward scheme, implying that being a disciple of the Lord does not guarantee unalloyed bliss: one must allow God freedom to “reprove” or educate. The process of education is like that described in chap. 2: the father first invites his son (or disciple) to memorize his teaching (v. 1), then to enter upon a relationship of trust with him (v. 3), and finally to place his trust in God, who takes up the parental task of education (v. 5). Education begun by the parent is brought to full completion by God.

3:1 Do not forget: this word and several others in the section such as “teaching,” “commands,” “years of life,” and the custom of affixing written teaching to one's body, occur also in Deuteronomy. This vocabulary suggests that Proverbs and Deuteronomy had a common origin in the scribal class of Jerusalem. This section (and vv. 21–34) subtly elaborates Dt 6:5–9, “You shall love the LORD with all your heart (v. 5)... Take to heart these words (v. 1)... Recite them when you are at home and when you are away (v. 23)... when you lie down (v. 24)... Bind them (v. 3) on your arm as a sign and let them be a pendant on your forehead” (v. 21).

3:12 One might be tempted to judge the quality of one's relationship to God by one's prosperity. It is an inadequate criterion, for God as a teacher might go counter to student expectations. The discipline of God can involve suffering.

3:13–20 An encomium of Wisdom through the listing of her benefits to the human race and the depiction of her role in creation. Wisdom, or understanding, is more valuable than silver and gold. Its fruit is long life, riches, honor and happiness (vv. 13–18). Even the creation of the universe and its adornment (Gn 1) were not done without wisdom (vv. 19–20). The praise of Wisdom foreshadows the praise of a noble wife in the final poem (31:10–31), even to the singling out of the hands extended in a helpful way toward human beings.

3:18 A tree of life: in the Old Testament this phrase occurs only in Proverbs (11:30; 13:12; 15:4) and Genesis (2:9; 3:22, 24). The origins of the concept are obscure; there is no explicit mention of it in ancient Near Eastern literature, though on ancient seals trees are sometimes identified as trees of life. When the man and the woman were expelled from the garden, the tree of life was put off limits to them, lest they “eat of it and live forever” (Gn 3:22). The quest for wisdom gives access to the previously sequestered tree of life. The tree of life is mentioned also in the apocryphal work 1 Enoch 25:4–5. Rev 2 and 22 mention the tree of life as a source of eternal life.

3:20 Depths: for the Hebrews, the depths enclosed the great subterranean waters; the rain and dew descended from the waters above the firmament; cf. Gn 1:6–10; Jb 26:8, 12; Ps 18:15; 24:2. The cosmogony provides the reason why Wisdom offers such benefits to human beings: the world was created in wisdom so that all who live in accord with wisdom live in tune with the universe.

3:21–35 As in other instructions, the father in vv. 21–26 urges the son to seek wisdom, which in this case means practicing the virtues of “deliberation and planning,” a specification of wisdom. Practicing these virtues brings protection from violence (vv. 22–26) and friendship with God (vv. 32–35). The language is like Ps 91.

Verses 27–35 are arranged according to a clear order. Serving God requires serving one’s neighbor through kindness (vv. 27–28), maintaining peace with the good (vv. 29–31), having no envy of the wicked (v. 31), because the Lord’s friendship and kindness are with the just, not with the wicked. Matching the six exhortations of vv. 1–12, vv. 27–34 contain six prohibitions. The righteous/wicked contrast is progressively developed: in contrast to the wicked, the righteous are in God’s inner circle, their houses are blessed, they deal with a merciful God, and obtain honor.

3:22 Your soul: Heb. nephesh means “throat, esophagus; life; soul.” The meanings are connected. The throat area is the moist, breathing center of the body, which stands for life and for self. The figure of speech is called metonymy, in which one word is substituted for another on the basis of a causal relation, e.g., eye for sight, arm for power, or, as here, “throat area” for life. Proverbs sometimes plays on this concrete meaning of life (e.g., 21:23).

4:1–9 The teacher draws a parallel between his teaching the disciples now and his father’s teaching him in his youth (vv. 3–4): what my father taught me about wisdom is what I am teaching you. The poem implies that the teacher has acquired wisdom and has in fact been protected and honored as his father promised long ago. Thus the teacher has the authority of someone who has been under wisdom’s sway since earliest youth.

There are two sections, a call for attention and introduction of the speaker (vv. 1–3) and the father’s quoting of his own father’s teaching (vv. 4–9). Beginning with v. 5, the father’s words are no longer quoted, wisdom herself becoming the active agent; she becomes the subject, not the object, of the verbs. Three Hebrew verbs are repeated in the two parts, “to forsake” in vv. 2 and 6, “to keep/guard” in vv. 4 and 6, and “to give/bestow” in vv. 2 and 9. Each verb in its first appearance has the father’s words as its object; in its second appearance each verb has wisdom as its subject or object. The teaching process is like that in 2:1–22 and 3:1–12: heeding the words of one's parent puts one in touch with wisdom, who completes the process and bestows her gifts.

4:5, 7 Get wisdom: the same Hebrew word “to get” can mean to acquire merchandise and to acquire a wife (18:22; 31:10); both meanings are in keeping with Proverbs’ metaphors of acquiring wisdom over gold and silver and of acquiring wisdom as a personified woman, a wife.

4:10–19 A central metaphor of the poem is “the way.” The way of wisdom leads directly to life (vv. 10–13); it is a light that grows brighter (v. 18). The wise are bound to shun (vv. 14–17) the dark and violent path of the wicked (v. 19). Singleness of purpose and right conduct proceed from the heart of the wise as from the source of life (vv. 23–26), saving them from destruction on evil paths (4:27; 5:21–23). As in 1:8–19 and 2:12–15, the obstacles to the quest are men and their way. Elsewhere in chaps. 1–9, the obstacle is the foreign woman (2:16–19; chap. 5; 6:20–35; chap. 7; 9:13–18).

4:14–15 One is always free to choose. The righteous may choose to leave their path to walk on the wicked path and the wicked may choose the righteous path.

4:18 Till perfect day: lit., “till the day is established”; this may refer to full daylight or to noonday.

4:20–27 Acquiring wisdom brings life and health. The learning process involves two stages: (1) hearing the teacher’s words and treasuring them in the heart; (2) speaking and acting in accord with the wisdom that one has stored in one’s heart. Seven organs of the body are mentioned: ear, eyes, heart, mouth, lips, eyelids (“gaze,” v. 25), feet. Each of the organs is to be strained to its limit as the disciple puts wisdom into practice. The physical organ stands for the faculty, e.g., the eye for sight, the foot for movement. The figure of speech is called metonymy; one word is substituted for another on the basis of a causal relation.

4:24–27 In vv. 20–21 the faculties of hearing (ear) and seeing (eye) take in the teaching and the heart stores and ponders it, so in the second half of the poem, vv. 24–27, the faculties of speech, sight, and walking enable the disciple to put the teaching into practice.

5:1–23 This is the first of three poems on the forbidden woman, the “stranger” outside the social boundaries (cf. 2:16–19); the other two are 6:20–35 and chap. 7. Understanding and discretion are necessary to avoid adultery, which leads astray and begets bitterness, bloodshed, and death (vv. 1–6). It destroys honor, wastes the years of life, despoils hard-earned wealth, and brings remorse in the end (vv. 7–14). Conjugal fidelity and love bring happiness and security (vv. 15–20). Cf. 6:20–7:27. The structure of the poem consists of a two-line introduction; part one consists of three stanzas of four lines each warning of the forbidden woman’s effect on her lovers (vv. 3–14); part two consists of a stanza of twelve lines exhorting the disciple to marital fidelity (vv. 15–20); and a final stanza of six lines on the perils of the woman (vv. 21–23).

5:3 A metaphorical level is established in the opening description of the forbidden woman: her lips drip honey and her feet lead to death. By her lies, she leads people away from the wisdom that gives life.

5:9 Honor: the words “life” and “wealth” have also been read in this place. A merciless one: the offended husband; cf. 6:34–35.

5:15–16 Water: water may have an erotic meaning as in Sg 4:15, “[You are] a garden fountain, a well of living water.” Eating and drinking can be metaphors expressing the mutuality of love. The wife is the opposite of the adulterous woman; she is not an outsider, not unfeeling, not a destroyer of her husband’s self and goods. The best defense against adultery is appreciating and loving one’s spouse. The best defense against folly is to appreciate and love wisdom.

5:19 Lovely hind... graceful doe: ancient Near Eastern symbols of feminine beauty and charm; cf. Sg 2:7, 9, 17.

6:1–19 Four independent pieces akin to those in 30:1–5, 6–11, 12–15, and 16–19. Some judge the verses to be an ancient addition, but the fact that the pieces differ from the other material in chaps. 1–9 is not a strong argument against their originality. Ancient anthologies did not always have the symmetry of modern collections. An editor may have placed the four pieces in the midst of the three poems on the forbidden woman to shed light on some of their themes. Verses 1–5 warn against getting trapped by one’s words to another person (the Hebrew word for “another” is the same used for the forbidden woman); vv. 6–11 proposes the ant as a model of forethought and diligence; vv. 12–15 describes the reprobate who bears some similarity to the seductive woman, especially as portrayed in chap. 7; vv. 16–19 depicts the typical enemy of God, underscoring the person’s destructive words.

6:1–5 Unlike other instructions that begin with “my son,” this instruction does not urge the hearer to store up the father’s words as a means to wisdom, but only to avoid one practice—going surety for one’s neighbor. The warning is intensified by repetition of “neighbor” and “free yourself,” the mention of bodily organs, and the imagery of hunting. Given your hand in pledge: lit., “struck your hands”; this was probably the legal method for closing a contract. To become surety meant intervening in favor of the insolvent debtor and assuming responsibility for the payment of the debt, either by obtaining it from the debtor or substituting oneself. Proverbs is strongly opposed to the practice (11:15; 17:18; 20:16; 22:26–27; 27:13) apparently because of the danger it poses to the freedom of the one providing surety.

6:6–11 The sluggard or lazybones is a type in Proverbs, like the righteous and the wicked. Sometimes the opposite type to the sluggard is the diligent person. Other extended passages on the sluggard are 24:30–34 and 26:13–16. The malice of the type is not low physical energy but the refusal to act. To describe human types, Proverbs often uses comparisons from the animal world, e.g., 27:8 (bird); 28:1, 15 (lion); 30:18–19 (eagle, snake); 30:24–28 (ant, badger, locust, lizard).

6:10 This verse may be regarded as the sluggard’s reply or as a continuation of the remonstrance.

6:12–15 Proverbs uses types to make the point that certain ways of acting have inherent consequences. The typifying intensifies the picture. All the physical organs—mouth, eyes, feet, fingers—are at the service of evil. Cf. Rom 6:12–13: “Therefore, sin must not reign over your mortal bodies so that you obey their desires. And do not present the parts of your bodies to sin as weapons for wickedness, but present your selves to God as raised from the dead to life and the parts of your bodies to God as weapons of righteousness.”

6:16 Six... seven: this literary pattern ( $n, n + 1$ ) occurs frequently; cf., e.g., Am 1–2; Prv 30:18–19.

6:17–19 The seven vices, symbolized for the most part by bodily organs, are pride, lying, murder, intrigue, readiness to do evil, false witness, and the stirring up of discord.

6:20–35 The second of three instructions on adultery (5:1–23; 6:20–35; and chap. 7). The instructions assume that wisdom will protect one from adultery and its consequences: loss of property and danger to one’s person. In this poem, the father and the mother urge their son to keep their teaching constantly before his eyes. The teaching will light his way and make it a path to life (v. 23). The teaching will preserve him from the adulterous woman who is far more dangerous than a prostitute. Prostitutes may cost one money, but having an affair with someone else’s wife puts one in grave danger. The poem bluntly urges self-interest as a motive to refrain from adultery.

The poem has three parts. I (vv. 20–24, ten lines), in which v. 23 repeats “command” and “teaching” of v. 20 and “keeping” in v. 24 completes the fixed pair initiated by “observe” in v. 20; II (vv. 25–29, ten lines) is a self-contained argument comparing the costs of a liaison with a prostitute and a married woman; III (vv. 30–35, twelve lines) draws conclusions from the comparison of adultery with theft: the latter involves property only but adultery destroys one's name and very self. The best protection against such a woman is heeding parental instruction, which is to be kept vividly before one's eyes like a written tablet.

6:22 They: Heb. has "she." If this verse is not out of place, then the antecedent of "she" is command (v. 20), or perhaps wisdom.

6:27–29 There is a play on three words of similar sound, 'îsh, "man," 'îshshâ, "woman," and 'ēsh, "fire, embers." The question, "Can a man ('îsh) take embers ('ēsh) into his bosom / and his garments not be burned?", has a double meaning. "Into his bosom" has an erotic meaning as in the phrase "wife of one's bosom" (Dt 13:6; 28:54; Sir 9:1). Hence one will destroy one's garments, which symbolize one's public position, by taking fire/another's wife into one's bosom.

6:33–35 The nature of the husband's vengeance is disputed, some believing it is simply a physical beating whereas others hold it is public and involves the death penalty because Lv 20:20 and Dt 22:22 demand the death penalty.

7:1–27 The third and climactic instruction on adultery and seduction is an example story, of the same type as the example story in 24:30–34. By its negative portrayal of the deceitful woman, who speaks in the night to a lone youth, it serves as a foil to trustworthy Wisdom in chap. 8, who speaks in broad daylight to all who pass in the street.

As in 6:20–24, the father warns his son to keep his teaching to protect him from the dangerous forbidden woman. The father's language in 7:4 ("Say to Wisdom, 'You are my sister,' and call Understanding 'Friend' ") sets this admonition apart, however; it is the language of courtship and love. If the son makes Woman Wisdom his companion and lover, she will protect him from the other woman. As in chap. 5, loving the right woman protects the man from the wrong woman.

As motivation, the father in vv. 6–23 tells his son of an incident he once observed while looking out his window—a young man went to the bed of an adulterous woman and wound up dead. As in chap. 5, the realistic details—the purposeful woman, the silent youth, the vow, the perfumed bed—have a metaphorical level. Ultimately the story is about two different kinds of love.

7:1–3 Verses 1–3 are artistically constructed. "Keep" in v. 1a recurs in v. 2a; "commands" in v. 1b recurs in v. 2a; the imperative verb "live" occurs in the very center of the three lines; v. 3, on preserving the teaching upon one's very person, matches vv. 1–2, on preserving the teaching internally by memorizing it.

7:2 Live: here as elsewhere (Gn 20:7; 42:18; 2 Kgs 18:32; Jer 27:12, 17; Ez 18:32), the imperative ("Live!") is uttered against the danger of death, e.g., "Do such and such and you will live (= survive the danger); why should you die?"

7:4 You are my sister: "sister" and "brother" are examples of love language in the ancient Near East, occurring in Egyptian love poetry and Mesopotamian marriage songs. In Sg 4:9, 10, 12; 5:1, the man calls the woman, "my sister, my bride." Intimate friendship with Woman Wisdom saves one from false and dangerous relationships.

7:6–7 I looked out... I saw... : the perspective is unusual. The narrator looks through a window upon the drama in the street.

7:17 Bed: a bed can designate a place of burial in Is 57:2; Ez 32:25; 2 Chr 16:14. Myrrh... aloes: the spices could be used for funerals as for weddings (Jn 19:39). It is possible that the language is ambivalent, speaking of death as it seems to speak of life. As the woman offers the youth a nuptial feast, she is in reality describing his funerary feast.

7:19–20 For my husband is not at home: the woman is calculating. She knows exactly how long her husband will be gone.

7:21 The verbs “to win over” (lit., “to lead astray”) and “to lead off” can be used of leading animals such as a donkey (Nm 22:23) or sheep (Jer 23:2 and 50:17). The animal imagery continues as the youth is compared to an ox, a fallow deer, and a bird in the moment they are slaughtered. None of the animals are aware of their impending death.

7:24–27 The father addresses “children,” a larger audience than his own son; the story is typical, intended for others as an example. The story is a foil to the speech of the other woman in chap. 8.

8:1–36 Chapter 8 is Wisdom’s longest speech in the book. Wisdom is here personified as in 1:20–33. She exalts her grandeur and origin, and invites all (vv. 1–11) to be attentive to her salutary influence in human society (vv. 12–21), for she was privileged to be present at the creation of the world (vv. 22–31). Finally, she promises life and the favor of God to those who are devoted to her, death to those who reject her.

The poem has four sections, each (except the fourth) with two parts of five lines each:

I.	A. vv. 1–5	B. vv. 6–10
II.	A. vv. 12–16	B. vv. 17–21
III.	A. vv. 22–26	B. vv. 27–31
IV.	vv. 32–36

Within chaps. 1–9, chap. 8 is the companion piece to Wisdom’s first speech in 1:20–33. There she spoke harshly, giving a promise only in the last line; here she speaks invitingly, giving a threat only in the last line.

Chapter 8 is the best-known chapter in Proverbs and has profoundly influenced Jewish and Christian thought. The most explicit and lengthy biblical comment is in Sir 24; it too has thirty-five lines in seven five-line stanzas and develops the theme of Wisdom’s intimacy with God and desire to be with human beings. The Gospel of John portrays Jesus in the language of wisdom in Proverbs: Jesus, like Wisdom, calls out to people to listen to him, promises to tell them the truth, seeks disciples, invites them to a banquet, and gives them life. Writers in the patristic period used the language of pre-existent wisdom to express the idea of the pre-existent Word with God.

8:5 Naïve ones... fools: see note on 1:4.

8:7–8 The truth and sincerity of wisdom are absolute because they are of divine origin. They can neither deceive nor tolerate deception. The intelligent understand and accept this. “Straight” and

8:14 What is here predicated of Wisdom is elsewhere attributed to God (Jb 12:13–16).

8:22–31 Wisdom is of divine origin. She is represented as existing before all things (vv. 22–26), when God planned and created the universe, adorning it with beauty and variety, and establishing its wonderful order (vv. 27–30). The purpose of the two cosmogonies (vv. 22–26 and 27–31) is to ground Wisdom’s claims. The first cosmogony emphasizes that she was born before all else (and so deserving of honor) and the second underscores that she was with the Lord during the creation of the universe. The pre-existence of Woman Wisdom with God is developed in Sir 24 and in New Testament hymns to Christ, especially in Jn 1 and Col 1:15–20.

8:23 Formed: since the other verbs of the origin of Wisdom in these verses describe birth, it is likely that the somewhat uncertain verb is to be understood of birth as in Ps 139:13.

8:24–26 Perhaps the formless mass from which God created the heavens and the earth; cf. Gn 1:1–2; 2:4–6.

8:30 Artisan: the translation of the Hebrew word ’āmôn has been controverted since antiquity. There have been three main opinions: (1) artisan; (2) trustworthy (friend); (3) ward, nursling. The most likely explanation is that ’āmôn is artisan, related to Akkadian ummānu, legendary sages and heroes who brought divine gifts and culture to the human race. I was his delight: the chiasmic or ABBA structure of vv. 30–31 unifies the four lines and underscores the analogy between Woman Wisdom’s intimate relation to the Lord and her intimate relation to human beings, i.e., “delight” + “playing” parallels “playing” + “delight.” She is God’s friend and intimate and invites human beings to a similar relationship to God through her.

8:32–36 The final appeal of Woman Wisdom to her disciples is similar to the appeal of the father in 7:24–27.

9:1–6, 13–18 Wisdom and folly are represented as women, each inviting people to her banquet. Wisdom’s banquet symbolizes joy and closeness to God. Unstable and senseless Folly furnishes stolen bread and water of deceit and vice that bring death to her guests. The opposition between wisdom and folly was stated at the beginning of chaps. 1–9 (folly in 1:8–19 and wisdom in 1:20–33) and is maintained throughout, down to this last chapter.

In comparable literature, gods might celebrate their sovereign by building a palace and inviting the other gods to come to a banquet and celebrate with them. Presumably, Woman Wisdom is celebrating her grandeur (just described in chap. 8); her grand house is a symbol of her status as the Lord’s friend. In order to enter the sacred building and take part in the banquet (“eat of my food”), guests must leave aside their old ways (“forsake foolishness”).

Verses 7–12 are unrelated to the two invitations to the banquet. They appear to be based on chap. 1, especially on 1:1–7, 22. The Greek version has added a number of verses after v. 12 and v. 18. In the confusion, 9:11 seems to have been displaced from its original position after 9:6. It has been restored to its original place in the text.

9:1 House: house has a symbolic meaning. Woman Wisdom encourages marital fidelity (2:16–19; 5; 6:20–35; 7), which builds up a household (cf. chap. 5). Some scholars propose that an actual seven-pillared house is referred to, but so far none have been unearthed by archaeologists. Seven may simply connote completeness—a great house.

Some scholars see a connection between the woman's house here and the woman's house in the final poem (31:10–31). In chap. 9, she invites the young man to enter her house and feast, i.e., to marry her. Chapter 31 shows what happens to the man who marries her; he has a house and enjoys “life” understood as consisting of a suitable wife, children, wealth, and honor.

9:3 She calls: i.e., invites; this is done indirectly through her maidservants, but the text could also mean that Wisdom herself publicly proclaims her invitation.

9:6 That you may live: life in Proverbs is this-worldly, consisting in fearing God or doing one's duty toward God, enjoying health and long life, possessing wealth, good reputation, and a family. Such a life cannot be attained without God's help. Hence Wisdom speaks not of life simply but of life with her; the guest is to live in Wisdom's house.

9:13–18 Woman Folly is the mirror image of Woman Wisdom. Both make identical invitations but only one of the offers is trustworthy. Their hearers must discern which is the true offer. She is depicted with traits of the adulterous woman in 2:16–19; chap. 5; 6:20–35; chap. 7. Woman Folly is restless (cf. 7:11), her path leads to the underworld (2:18; 5:5; 7:27), and she is ignorant (5:6). In this final scene, she appears in single combat with her great nemesis, Woman Wisdom. Though the invitations of the two women appear at first hearing to be the same, they differ profoundly. Wisdom demands that her guests reject their ignorance, whereas Woman Folly trades on their ignorance.

9:17 “Stolen water” seems to refer to adultery, for “water” in 5:15–17 refers to the wife's sexuality; “stolen” refers to stealing the sexuality belonging to another's household. “Secret” evokes the furtive meeting of the wife and the youth in chap. 7.

9:18 The banquet chamber of Folly is a tomb from which no one who enters it is released; cf. 7:27. Shades: the Rephaim, the inhabitants of the underworld.

10:1–22:16 The Proverbs of Solomon are a collection of three hundred and seventy-five proverbs on a wide variety of subjects. No overall arrangement is discernible, but there are many clusters of sayings related by vocabulary and theme. One thread running through the whole is the relationship of the “son,” the disciple, to the parents, and its effect upon the house(hold). In chaps. 10–14 almost all the proverbs are antithetical; “the righteous” and “the wicked” (ethical), “the wise” and “the foolish” (sapiential), and “the devout, the pious” and “the irreverent” (religious). Chapters 15–22 have fewer sharp antitheses. The sayings are generally witty, often indirect, and are rich in irony and paradox.

10:1 The opening saying ties the whole collection to the first section, for “son,” “father,” and “mother” evoke the opening line of the first instruction, “Hear, my son, your father's instruction, and reject not your mother's teaching.” The son is the subject of parental exhortation throughout chaps. 1–9. This is the first of many sayings on domestic happiness or unhappiness, between parents and children (e.g., 15:20; 17:21) and between husband and wife (e.g., 12:4; 14:1). Founding or maintaining a household is an important metaphor in the book.

Adult children represented the family (headed by the oldest married male) to the outside world. Foolishness, i.e., malicious ignorance, brought dishonor to the parents and the family.

10:2 Death: untimely, premature, or sorrowful. The word “death” can have other overtones (see Wis 1:15).

10:3 The last of the three introductory sayings in the collection, which emphasize, respectively, the sapiential (v. 1), ethical (v. 2), and religious (v. 3) dimensions of wisdom. In this saying, God will not allow the appetite of the righteous to go unfulfilled. The appetite of hunger is singled out; it stands for all the appetites.

10:6 This saying, like several others in the chapter, plays on the different senses of the verb “to cover.” As in English, “to cover” can mean to fill (as in Is 60:2) and to conceal (as in Jb 16:18). Colon B can be read either “violence fills the mouth (= head) of the wicked” or “the mouth of the wicked conceals violence.” The ambiguity is intentional; the proverb is meant to be read both ways.

10:7 The name of the righteous continues to be used after their death in blessings such as “May you be as blessed as Abraham,” but the wicked, being enemies of God, do not live on in anyone’s memory. Their names rot with their bodies.

10:8 The wise take in instruction from their teachers but those who expel or pour out folly through their words will themselves be expelled.

10:12 Love covers all offenses: a favorite maxim in the New Testament; cf. 1 Cor 13:7; Jas 5:20; 1 Pt 4:8. Cf. also Prv 17:9.

10:13 An unusual juxtaposition of “lips” and “back.” Those who have no wisdom on their lips (words) are fated to feel a punishing rod on their back.

10:15 An observation rather than a moral evaluation of wealth and poverty; but cf. 18:10–11.

10:16 Wages are a metaphor for reward and punishment. The Hebrew word does not mean “sin” here but falling short, a meaning that is frequent in Proverbs. Cf. Rom 6:21: “But what profit did you get then from the things of which you are now ashamed? For the end of those things is death.”

10:21 The wise by their words maintain others in life whereas the foolish cannot keep themselves from sin that leads to premature death.

10:22 Human industry is futile without divine approval; cf. Ps 127:1–2; Mt 6:25–34.

10:28 The thought is elliptical. Joy comes from fulfillment of one’s plans, which the righteous can count on. The opposite of joy thus is not sadness but unfulfillment (“perishes”).

10:32 The word used for “favor” is favor shown by an authority (God or the king), not favor shown by a peer. A righteous person’s words create a climate of favor and acceptance, whereas crooked words will not gain acceptance. In Hebrew as in English, straight and crooked are metaphors for good and wicked.

11:1 The word pair “abomination” and “delight” (= acceptable) to God is common in Proverbs. Originally the language of ritual, the words came to be applied to whatever pleases or displeases God (cf. also 11:20). False weights were a constant problem even though weights were standardized. Cf. 20:23; Hos 12:8; Am 8:5.

11:2 Disgrace is the very opposite of what the proud so ardently want. Those who do not demand their due receive wisdom.

11:4 Cf. note on 10:2. A day of wrath is an unforeseen disaster (even death). Only one’s relationship to God, which makes one righteous, is of any help on such a day.

11:5 In Hebrew as in English, “way” means the course of one’s life; similarly, “straight” and “crooked” are metaphors for morally straightforward and for bad, deviant, perverted.

11:7 An ancient scribe added “wicked” to person in colon A, for the statement that hope ends at death seemed to deny life after death. The saying, however, is not concerned with life after death but with the fact that in the face of death all hopes based on one’s own resources are vain. The aphorism is the climax of the preceding six verses; human resources cannot overcome mortality (cf. Ps 49:13).

11:9 What the wicked express harms others; what the righteous leave unsaid protects. Verses 9–14 are related in theme: the effect of good and bad people, especially their words, on their community.

11:15 Proverbs is opposed to providing surety for another’s loan (see note on 6:1–5) and expresses this view throughout the book.

11:16 Wealth and esteem are good things in Proverbs, but the means for acquiring them are flawed. As precious gifts, they must be granted, not taken. The esteem of others that depends on beauty is as fleeting as beauty itself (cf. 31:30) and the wealth acquired by aggressive behavior lasts only as long as one has physical strength.

11:20 The terminology of ritual (acceptable and unacceptable sacrifice, “abomination” and “delight”) is applied to human conduct as in v. 1. The whole of human life is under divine scrutiny, not just ritual.

11:22 Ear and nose rings were common jewelry for women. A humorous saying on the priority of wisdom over beauty in choosing a wife.

11:24 A paradox: spending leads to more wealth.

11:27 The saying is about seeking one thing and finding another. Striving for good leads to acceptance by God; seeking evil means only that trouble will come. The same Hebrew word means evil and trouble.

11:30 Most translations emend Hebrew “wise person” in colon B on the basis of the Greek and Syriac translations to “violence” (similar in spelling), because the verb “to take a life” is a Hebrew idiom for “to kill” (as also in English). The emendation is unnecessary, however, for the saying deliberately plays on the odd meaning: the one who takes lives is not the violent but the wise person, for the wise have a profound influence upon life. There is a similar wordplay in 29:10.

11:31 The saying is not about life after death; “on the earth” means life in the present world. The meaning is that divine judgment is exercised on all human action, even the best. The thought should strike terror into the hearts of habitual wrongdoers.

12:1 Discipline in Proverbs is both doctrine and training. The path to wisdom includes obedience to teachers and parents, acceptance of the community’s traditions.

12:2 The antithesis is between the good person who, by reason of that goodness, already has divine acceptance, and the wicked person who, despite great effort, gains only condemnation.

12:3 Human beings are described as “made secure” in Jb 21:8; Ps 101:7; 102:29. “Root” in the context means enduring to succeeding generations, as in Mal 3:19 and Jb 8:17.

12:4 In Proverbs a crown is the result and sign of wise conduct. A good wife is a public sign of the husband’s shrewd judgment and divine blessing (crown), whereas a bad wife brings him inner pain (rot in the bones).

12:5 The opposite of “just” is not injustice but “deceit.” The wicked will be deceived in their plans in the sense that their planning will not succeed.

12:6 Words are a favorite theme of Proverbs. The words of the wicked effect harm to others whereas the words of the righteous protect themselves.

12:8 The heart, the seat of intelligence, will eventually be revealed in the actions that people do, either for praise or for blame.

12:10 The righteous are sympathetically aware of the needs of their livestock and prosper from their herd’s good health. The wicked will pay the price for their self-centeredness and cruelty.

12:11 The second line clarifies the first: idleness will give one plenty of nothing. “Lacking sense” is a common phrase for fools.

12:12 A difficult, possibly corrupt saying, but there is no good alternative to the Hebrew text. The wicked desire what the malevolent have captured or killed, but their actions will go for naught because they invite punishment. The righteous, on the other hand, will bear fruit.

12:14 The saying contrasts words and deeds. “Fruit” here is not what one normally eats, as in 1:31; 8:19; 31:16, 31, but the consequences of one’s actions. In the second line the things that issue from one’s hands (one’s deeds) come back to one in recompense or punishment. Prv 13:2a and 18:20 are variants. Cf. Mt 7:17; Gal 6:8.

12:17 What is the rule of thumb for judging legal testimony? Look to the ordinary conduct and daily speech of a witness.

12:19 The saying has a double meaning: lies are quickly found out whereas truthful statements endure; truth-tellers, being favored by God, live long lives, whereas liars invite punishment.

12:23 “Knowledge” here is “what one knows, has in one’s heart,” not knowledge in general. Fools reveal all they have stored in their heart and it naturally turns out to be folly. Revealing and concealing are constant themes in Proverbs.

13:1 Another in the series on the household, this one on the relation of parents and children. See under 10:1. The scoffer in Proverbs condemns discipline and thus can never become wise. Wise adult children advertise to the community what they received from their parents, for children become wise through a dialectical process involving the parents. A foolish adult child witnesses to foolish parents.

13:2 One’s mouth normally eats food from outside, but in the moral life, things are reversed: one eats from the fruit of one’s mouth, i.e., one experiences the consequences of one’s own actions. Since the mouth of the treacherous is filled with violence, one must assume that they will some day endure violence.

13:3 Preserve themselves: in Hebrew, literally to preserve the throat area, the moist breathing center of one’s body, thus “life,” “soul,” or “self.” There is wordplay: if you guard your mouth (= words) you guard your “soul.” Fools, on the other hand, do not guard but open their lips and disaster strikes. A near duplicate is 21:23.

13:7 Appearances can be deceiving; possessions do not always reveal the true state of a person.

13:8 Related to v. 7. Possessions enable the wealthy to pay ransom but the poor are “protected” by lack of possessions: they never hear the threat of the pursuer. Cf. the use of the word “threat” in Is 30:17.

13:9 Light... lamp: symbols of life and prosperity; cf. 4:18–19.

13:12 “Tree of life” occurs in Gn 2–3, Prv 3:18; 11:30; 13:12; 15:4, and Rev 2:7; 22:2, 14, 19. It provides food and healing.

13:13 Must pay for it: lit., “is pledge to it,” i.e., just as one who has pledged or provided surety for another’s loan is obligated to that pledge, so one is not free of a command until one performs it.

13:15 As the behavior of the wise wins them favor that increases their prosperity, like Abigail with David in 1 Sm 25, so the way (= conduct) of the faithless ruins their lives.

13:16 Like 12:23 and 15:2, 3, the saying is about revealing and concealing. The wise reveal their wisdom in their actions whereas fools “parade,” spread out their folly for all to see. The verb is used of vendors spreading their wares and of birds spreading their wings.

13:18 The saying plays on letting go and holding on. Wisdom consists in not rejecting discipline and being open to the comments of others, even if they are reproving comments.

13:23 An observation on the poor. The lands of the poor are as fertile as anyone’s, for nature does not discriminate against them. Their problem is lack of justice, which puts their harvest at risk from unscrupulous human beings.

14:1 The relationship between Wisdom, personified as a woman, and building a house is a constant theme. As elsewhere, the book here warns against the wrong woman and praises the right woman.

14:4 If one has no animals, one does not have the burden of keeping the crib full, but without them one will have no crops to fill the barn. Colon B reverses the sense of colon A and also reverses the consonants of bar (“clean”) to rab (“abundant”).

14:5 On discerning the truthfulness of witnesses; see 12:17.

14:8 Wisdom enables the shrewd to know their path is right but folly leads fools on the wrong path (“deceit”), which calls down retribution.

14:10 The heart in Proverbs is where a person’s sense impressions are stored and reflected upon. It is thus one’s most personal and individual part. One’s sorrows and joys (= the full range of emotions) cannot be shared fully with another. Verse 13 expresses the same individuality of the human person.

14:11 The traditional fixed pair “house” and “tent” is used to express the paradox that a house can be less secure than a tent if there is no justice.

14:15 The naive gullibly rely on others’ words whereas the shrewd watch their own steps.

14:18 The inner quality of a person, simple or wise, will eventually be revealed.

14:21 The paradox is that anyone who spurns the hungry will lack something, but anyone who shows mercy (presumably by giving to the poor) will gain prosperity.

14:29 A series of puns on short and long; lit., “long of nostrils (idiom for “patient”), large in wisdom, / short in breath (idiom for “impatient”), makes folly tall.”

14:33 Wisdom can remain silent in a wise person as a welcome friend. But it must speak out among fools, for the dissonance is so strong.

14:34 The rare noun “disgrace” occurs elsewhere only in Lv 20:17. In measuring the greatness of a nation, one is tempted to consider territory, wealth, history, but the most important criterion is its relationship to God (“justice”).

15:1–7 These verses form a section beginning and ending with the topic of words.

15:1 Paradoxically, where words are concerned soft is powerful and hard is ineffective.

15:5 One becomes wise by keeping and foolish by rejecting. One must accept the tradition of the community.

15:7 “Lips” and “heart” are a fixed pair, in Proverbs signifying, respectively, expression and source. The wise disseminate what they have in their heart, but the wicked are unsound even in the source of their words, their hearts.

15:10 Discipline, always a good thing in Proverbs, seems bad to those deliberately wandering from justice.

15:11 Sheol and Abaddon: terms for the abode of the dead, signifying the profound obscurity which is open nevertheless to the sight and power of God; cf. 27:20.

15:14 The contrasts include heart (organ of reflection) and mouth (organ of expression), and the wise and fools. One type feeds its mind with wisdom and the other feeds its face with folly.

15:15 Good heart does not refer to good intentions but to an instructed mind. Wisdom makes poverty not only bearable but even joyful like the joy of feast days.

15:16–17 The sages favor wealth over poverty—but not at any price; cf. Ps 37:16.

15:21 The word “joy” occurs in the first line of vv. 20, 21, and 23. The state of folly is joy to a fool but the wise person is totally absorbed in keeping on the right or straight road.

15:22 Failure to consult makes it likely a plan will not succeed. The point is nicely made by contrasting the singular number in the first line (“no counsel”) with the plural number in the second line (“many advisers”).

15:23 Conversation is the art of saying the right thing at the right time. It gives pleasure to speaker and hearer alike.

15:24 Death is personified as Sheol, the underworld. “Up” and “down” in Hebrew as in English are metaphors for success and failure (see Dt 28:43). One who stays on the path of life need not fear the punishment that stalks sinners.

15:26 “Pure” here means acceptable. The language of ritual (acceptable or pure) is applied to ordinary human actions. “Gracious words” are words that bring peace to the neighbor.

15:27 The same lesson as the opening scene of Proverbs (1:8–19): one cannot build a house by unjust gain. Injustice will come back upon a house so built.

15:31 To become wise, one must hear and integrate perspectives contrary to one’s own, which means accepting “reproof.” Wisdom does not isolate one but places one in the company of the wise.

16:1 Words, like actions, often produce results different from those which were planned, and this comes under the agency of God.

16:2 “Pure” in a moral sense for human action is found only in Job and Proverbs. As in v. 1, the contrast is between human intent and divine assessment.

16:4 Even the wicked do not lie outside God’s plan.

16:5 Proud heart: lit., “high of heart.” To forget one is a fallible human being is so basic an error that one cannot escape exposure and punishment.

16:6 As v. 5 used the language of worship to express what is acceptable or not to God, so this saying uses similar language to declare that lovingly loyal conduct undoes the effects of sin.

16:9 As in vv. 1–3, the antithesis is between human plans and divine disposal. The saying uses the familiar metaphor of path for the course of life.

16:10 Six sayings on the king and his divine authority begin here, following the series of sayings about the Lord’s governance in 15:33–16:9, in which “LORD” was mentioned nine times.

16:15 The last of six sayings about the king. In the previous verse, royal wrath means death; in this verse royal favor means life. It is significant that royal favor is compared to something not under human control—the clouds preceding the spring rains.

16:16 The point of comparison is the superiority of the pursuit of wisdom and gold, not the relative merits of wealth and wisdom.

16:17 In the metaphor of the two ways, the way of the righteous is protected and the way of the wicked is unprotected. Since the path of the righteous leads therefore away from trouble, one’s task is to stay on it, to “attend to” it.

16:26 The adage puzzled ancient and modern commentators. The meaning seems to state the paradox that a person does not toil to feed the gullet but that the gullet itself “toils” in the sense that it forces the person to work. As often in Proverbs, the sense organ stands for the faculty by metonymy. Cf. Eccl 6:7.

16:30 A restless or twitching eye or lip betrays the condition of the heart (cf. 6:13).

16:33 Dice were given meanings of “yes” or “no” and then cast for their answer. What came out was the decision. Here the saying interprets the sequence of actions: a human being puts the dice in the bag but what emerges from the bag is the Lord’s decision.

17:1 A “better than” saying, stating the circumstances when a dry crust is better than a banquet. Peace and fellowship give joy to a meal, not the richness of the food. For a similar thought, see 15:16 and 16:8.

17:2 Ability is esteemed more highly than ties of blood.

17:8 An observation on the effect of the bribe upon the bribe-giver: it gives an intoxicating feeling of power (“seems”). In v. 23 the evil effects of a bribe are noted.

17:9 A paradox. One finds (love, friend) by concealing (an offense), one loses (a friend) by revealing (a secret). In 10:12 love also covers over a multitude of offenses.

17:10 A wonderful comment on the openness and sensitivity of the wise and the foolish. One type learns from a single word and for the other one hundred blows are not enough.

17:11 The irony is that such people will meet up with what they so energetically pursue—in the form of an unrelenting emissary sent to them.

17:12 Humorous hyperbole. An outraged dangerous beast poses less danger than a fool.

17:13 The paradox is that to pay out evil for good means that the evil will never leave one’s own house.

17:16 The exhortation to acquire or purchase wisdom is common in Proverbs. Fools misunderstand the metaphor, assuming they can buy it with money. Their very misunderstanding shows they have no “heart” = mind, understanding. Money in the hand is no good without such a “heart” to store it in.

17:19 Build their gate high: a symbol of arrogance.

17:20 The saying employs the familiar metaphors of walking = conducting oneself (“fall into trouble”), and of straight and crooked = right and wrong (“perverse,” “double-tongued”).

17:23 A sharp look at the sly withdrawing of a bribe from the pocket and a blunt judgment on its significance.

17:24 Wisdom is visible on the countenance (i.e., mouth, lips, tongue) of the wise person; its ultimate source is the heart. Fools have no such source of wisdom within them, a point that is nicely made by referring to the eye of the fool, roving over the landscape.

17:28 Related to v. 27. Words provide a glimpse into the heart. In the unlikely event that fools, who usually pour out words (15:2), were to say nothing, people would not be able to see their folly and would presume them intelligent. Alas, the saying is contrary to fact.

18:2 One grows in wisdom by listening to others, but fools take delight in expounding the contents of their minds.

18:4 Words express a person’s thoughts (“deep waters”), which in turn become accessible to others. Cf. 20:5a.

18:6 The bold personification of lips and mouth is similar to Ps 73:9, “They set their mouths against the heavens, their tongues roam the earth.” Careless words can lead one into serious trouble.

18:10–11 Contrast this judgment with the observation in 10:15.

18:13 To speak without first listening is characteristic of a fool; cf. 10:14; Sir 11:8.

18:14 The paradox is that something as slight as a column of air offers protection against the encroachment of death. If it is stilled, nothing, no matter how powerful, can substitute for it.

18:15 “Knowledge” here refers to what one knows, not knowledge in itself. The mind acquires and stores it, the ear strains toward it.

18:17 A persuasive speech in court can easily make one forget there is another side to the question. When the other party speaks, people realize they made a premature judgment. The experience at court is a lesson for daily life: there are two sides to every question.

18:18 See note on 16:33.

18:19 The Greek version, followed by several ancient versions, has the opposite meaning: “A brother helped by a brother is like a strong and lofty city; it is strong like a well-founded palace.” The Greek is secondary as is shown by the need to supply the phrase “by a brother”; further, the parallelism is inadequate. The Hebrew is to be preferred.

18:20 Fruit from the earth is our ordinary sustenance, but “the fruit of one’s lips,” i.e., our words, also affect our well-being. If our words and our deeds are right, then we are blessed, our “belly is filled.”

18:21 This enigmatic saying has provoked many interpretations, e.g., judicious speech brings a reward; those who love the tongue in the sense of rattling on must face the consequences of their loquacity. This translation interprets the verb “love” in colon B in its occasional sense of “choose” (e.g., 12:1; 20:13; Dt 4:37) and interprets its pronominal object as referring to both death and life in colon A. Death and life are set before every person (cf. Dt 30:15–20) and we have the power to choose either one by the quality of our deeds. Words (= “the tongue”) are regarded here as the defining actions of human beings.

19:2 When not guided by wisdom, appetite—or desire—is not good. “Running feet” (so the Hebrew) miss the mark, i.e., do not reach their destination.

19:3 One’s own folly destroys one’s life. It is an indication of that folly that one blames God rather than oneself.

19:5 The punishment fits the crime: those who abuse the legal system will be punished by the same system. They will not be acquitted.

19:7 Closely related to vv. 4 and 6. An observation, not without sympathy, on the social isolation of poor people.

19:8 Wisdom benefits the one who practices it.

19:11 The paradox is that one obtains one thing by giving up another.

19:12 An observation on the exercise of royal power. Both images suggest royal attitudes are beyond human control. Colon A is a variant of 20:2a and colon B of 16:15b.

19:13 One of many sayings about domestic happiness. The perspective is male; the two greatest pains to a father is a malicious son and an unsuitable wife. The immediately following saying is on the noble wife, perhaps to make a positive statement about women.

19:18 The pain of disciplining the young cannot be compared with the danger no discipline may bring. The chief reason for disciplining the young is their capacity to change; excluded thereby are revenge and punishment.

19:22 The proverb has been read in two ways: (1) “Desire (greed) is a shame to a person,” which assumes the rare Hebrew word for “shame” is being used; (2) “What is desired in a person is fidelity.” The second interpretation is preferable. The context may be the court: better to forego money (a bribe) than perjure oneself.

19:26 Children who disgrace the family equivalently plunder their father’s wealth and expel their mother from the home.

19:27 The meaning was disputed even in antiquity. The interpretation that most respects the syntax is to take it as ironic advice as in 22:6: to stop (listening) is to go (wandering).

20:1 The cause stands for its effect (wine, drunken behavior). In Proverbs wine is a sign of prosperity and a symbol of feasting (3:10; 4:17; 9:2, 5) but also a potential threat to wisdom as in 20:1; 21:17; 23:29–35.

20:3 The honor that one might seek to gain from fighting comes of itself to the person who refrains from fighting.

20:5 The heart is where human plans are made and stored; they remain “deep water” until words reveal them to others. The wise know how to draw up those waters, i.e., express them. Cf. 18:4.

20:8 The royal throne is established in justice and the king is the agent of that justice.

20:9 A claim to sinlessness can be merely self-deception; see 16:2; cf. also 15:11.

20:11 The verb in colon A can mean either “to make oneself known” or “to play another person” (as in Gn 42:7 and 1 Kgs 14:5, 6). The second meaning makes a better parallel to colon B. The meaning is that if a child can playact, an adult can do so even more. Actions do not always reveal character.

20:12 Human judgments are not ultimate; the Lord expects proper use of these faculties.

20:14 Bartering invites playacting and masking one’s true intent. The truth of words depends on their context.

20:15 Wisdom is said to be preferable to gold in 3:14; 8:10, 19; 16:16. Colon B suggests that the gold and jewelry here are ornaments for the face (cf. Gn 24:53; Ex 3:22; Is 61:10). Wise lips are the most beautiful adornment, for they display the wisdom of the heart.

20:16 The text is not clear. See 27:13. Caution in becoming surety is always advised (cf. 6:1–3), and it is especially advisable with strangers.

20:20 Their lamp will go out: misfortune, even death, awaits them; cf. 13:9; Ex 21:17.

20:21 By definition, an inheritance is not gained by one’s own efforts but is received as a gift. If, when one first receives the inheritance, one drives everyone away, one treats it as if one acquired it by one’s own efforts. In an agricultural society, an inheritance would often be a field that would require God’s blessing to be fertile.

20:22 Appointing oneself an agent of divine retribution is dangerous. Better to wait for God to effect justice. Cf. 24:17–18.

20:24 An indication of the Lord’s inscrutable providence; cf. Jer 10:23; see Prv 21:2; cf. also 14:12.

20:25 This verse cautions against making vows without proper reflection; cf. Dt 23:22–25; Eccl 5:4–5.

20:26 The king is responsible for effecting justice. Judgment is portrayed in agricultural imagery—exposing grain to a current of air so that the chaff is blown away, and passing a wheel over the cereal to break the husk. Winnowing as image for judgment is found throughout the Bible.

20:27 A parallel is drawn between the life-breath that is God's gift (Jb 32:8; 33:2) coursing through the human body (Is 2:22) and the lamp of God, which can be a symbol of divine scrutiny. In Zep 1:12, God declares, "And in that day I will search through Jerusalem with lamps."

21:1 "Channeled water" in Is 32:2 and Prv 5:16 is water that fertilizes arid land. It takes great skill to direct water, whether it be water to fertilize fields or cosmic floods harnessed at creation, for water is powerful and seems to have a mind of its own. It also requires great skill to direct the heart of a king, for it is inscrutable and beyond ordinary human control.

21:3 External rites or sacrifices do not please God unless accompanied by internal worship and right moral conduct; cf. 15:8; 21:27; Is 1:11–15; Am 5:22; Mal 1:12.

21:4 Heart and eyes depict, respectively, the inner and the outer person. "Haughty eyes" peering out from a "proud heart" show a thoroughly arrogant person. How can such a person flourish! Their lamp, which signifies life, will go out.

21:5 The antitheses are diligent and impetuous. The metaphor characterizing each type is taken from the world of commerce. Planning is important; bustle leads to waste.

21:8 One cannot always read others' hearts from their behavior. Unconventional conduct need not indicate evil motives.

21:9 In Proverbs, two great obstacles to a happy household are foolish children and quarrelsome spouses. The nagging wife is also mentioned in 19:13 and 27:15; 25:24 is a duplicate.

21:12 It is difficult to ascertain the subject of the saying. Some hold it is the Lord, the "Righteous One," who is normally the executor of justice in Proverbs. Others believe it is the just person who is the agent of divine justice. "Righteous One" is a title for God in Is 24:16. The best argument for making God the subject of the verb is that elsewhere in Proverbs righteous human beings never do anything to the wicked; only God does.

21:14 Proverbs offers several remedies for anger—a soft word (15:1), patience, and a bribe. The last remedy implies a certain disdain for the disordered passion of anger, for it can be so easily assuaged by a discreetly offered "gift."

21:15 The second line is a duplicate of 10:29b.

21:16 Assembly of the shades: those who dwell in Sheol.

21:18 In this bold paradox, the ransom that protects the righteous is the wicked person who attracts, like a lightning rod, the divine wrath that might have been directed at the righteous.

21:21 The paradox is that one comes upon something other than what one pursued. The way to (long and healthy) life and honor is the vigorous pursuit of virtue.

21:23 Themselves: see note on 13:3. To guard your "self" (lit., "throat," the moist and breathing center of the body, by metonymy, "life"), you must guard your tongue. Speech in Proverbs is the quintessential human activity and often has a meaning broader than speech alone; it can stand for all human activity. Acting rightly is the best way to protect yourself from evil.

21:25 Desire, or appetite, is the impulse toward food and drink (see Ps 42:3) which spurs animals and human beings into action. But sluggards cannot lift hand to mouth; they bury their hand in the dish (19:24), and so their appetite is thwarted.

21:29 The wicked cannot deter the righteous from walking the straight path, i.e., from practicing virtue.

22:1 "Good name" (Heb. shem) and "high esteem" (Heb. chen) are declared to be of more value than great riches. Human beings belong to a community and without the acceptance of that community, which is built on esteem and trust, human life is grievously damaged. Riches are less essential to the human spirit.

22:3 The wise see dangers before they are engulfed by them whereas fools, through dullness or boldness, march right on.

22:4 Humiliation can be an occasion for knowing one's place in God's world. Such knowledge is part of fear (or revering) of the Lord. Revering the Lord brings the blessings of wealth, honor, and long life. The saying is perhaps meant to counter the view that humiliation is an unmixed evil; something good can come of it.

22:6 One of the few exhortations in the collection (cf. 14:7; 16:3; 19:18, 20). "Way" in the first colon has been taken in two different senses: (1) the morally right way, "according to the way one ought to go"; (2) personal aptitude, i.e., the manner of life for which one is destined, as "the way of Egypt" (Is 10:24). Neither interpretation, however, accounts for the pronoun in the Hebrew phrase, lit., "his own way." The most natural solution is to take the whole as ironic advice (like 19:27): yes, go ahead and let the young do exactly what they want; they will become self-willed adults.

22:7 An observation on money and power. One who borrows becomes poor in the sense of indebted, a slave to the lender.

22:8 Agricultural metaphors express the failure of malicious actions. In the first line, bad actions are seeds yielding trouble. In the second line, "the rod" is a flail used to beat grains as in Is 28:27.

22:13 To avoid the effort required for action, the sluggard exaggerates the difficulties that must be overcome.

22:15 Folly is attached to children as the husk is attached to the grain. "Rod" here, as in v. 8, seems to be the flail. Discipline is the process of winnowing away the folly.

22:16 A difficult saying. One possibility is to take it as a seemingly neutral observation on the plight of the poor: taking money from the poor is relatively easy for the powerful but it is dangerous as the poor have the Lord as their defender (24:22–23), who will punish their oppressors. Giving to the rich, perhaps to win their favor by presents and bribes, is equally a waste of money, for the rich will always do what they please in any case.

22:17–24:22 This collection consists of an introduction (22:17–21) urging openness and stating the purpose of the Words and diverse admonitions, aphorisms, and counsels. It is written with faith in the Lord, shrewdness, and a satirical eye. The first part seems aimed at young people intent on a career (22:22–23:11); the second is taken up with the concerns of youth (23:12–35); the third part is interested in the ultimate fate of the good and the wicked (24:1–22). The whole can be described as a guidebook of professional ethics. The aim is to inculcate trust in the Lord and to help readers avoid trouble and advance their careers by living according to wisdom. Its outlook is very practical: avoid bad companions because in time you will take on some of their qualities; do not post bond for others because you yourself will be encumbered; do not promote yourself too aggressively because such promotion is self-defeating; do not abuse sex or alcohol because they will harm you; do not emulate your peers if they are wicked (23:14; 24:1, 19) because such people have no future. Rather, trust the vocation of a sage (22:29–23:9).

The Egyptian Instructions of Amenemope (written ca. 1100 B.C.) was discovered in 1923. Scholars immediately recognized it as a source of Prv 22:17–23:11. The Egyptian work has thirty chapters (cf. Prv 22:20); its preface resembled Prv 22:17–21; its first two admonitions matched the first two in Proverbs (Prv 22:22–25). There are many other resemblances as well, some of which are pointed out in the notes. The instruction of a father to his son (or an administrator to his successor) was a well-known genre in Egypt; seventeen works are extant, spanning the period from 2500 B.C. to the first century A.D. The instructions aimed to help a young person live a happy and prosperous life and avoid mistakes that cause difficulties. They make concrete and pragmatic suggestions rather than hold up abstract ideals. Pragmatic though they were, the instructions were religious; they assumed that the gods implanted an order in the world (Egyptian maat), which is found both in nature and in the human world. Amenemope represents a stage in the development of the Egyptian genre, displaying a new inwardness and quest for serenity while still assuming that the practice of virtue brings worldly success. Proverbs borrows from the Egyptian work with great freedom: it does not, for example, import as such the Egyptian concept of order; it engages the reader with its characteristic wit, irony, and paradox (e.g., 22:26–27; 23:1–3).

22:17–23:35 The maxims warn against: robbing the poor and defenseless (22:22–23), anger (22:24–25), giving surety for debts (22:26–27), advancing oneself by socializing with rulers (23:1–2), anxiety for riches (23:4–5), forcing oneself on a grudging host (23:6–8), intemperance in food and drink (23:19–21, 29–35), and adultery (23:26–28). They exhort to: careful workmanship (22:29), respect for the rights of orphans (23:10–11), correction of the young (23:13–14), filial piety (23:15–16, 22–25), and fear of the Lord (23:17–18).

22:22 At the gate: of the city, where justice was administered and public affairs discussed; cf. Ru 4:1. Cf. also Ps 69:13; 127:5; Prv 24:7; 31:23, 31. The Lord will personally avenge those who have no one to defend them.

22:27 Providing surety for a debtor puts one in danger of having the very basics of one's life suddenly seized.

22:28 Landmark: marks the boundary of property. To remove it is the equivalent of stealing land. A similar warning is contained in 23:10.

23:1–9 Four admonitions for someone aspiring to be a sage: be careful about advancing your career by socializing with the great (vv. 1–3); avoid greed (vv. 4–5); do not force yourself on an unwilling host (vv. 6–8); do not waste your wisdom on those who cannot profit from it (v. 9).

23:2 Stick the knife in your gullet: a metaphor for self-restraint. The usual translation, “Put a knife to your throat,” is misleading, for in English it is a death threat. The exhortation is humorously exaggerated: stick the table-knife in your own gullet rather than take too much food. It assumes that the young courtier is unused to opulent banquets and will be tempted to overindulgence.

23:5 The frustration of covetous intent and elusiveness of wealth are portrayed by the sudden flight of an eagle. Amenemope, chap. 7, has a similar statement: “Do not set your heart on wealth. There is no ignoring Fate and Destiny; / Do not let your heart go straying.” Proverbs imagines covetous intent as a flight of the eyes, whereas Amenemope imagines it as a straying of the heart.

23:6–8 Some humorous advice on not trading on the courtesy of unwilling hosts who, for convention's sake, use the language of welcome. Amenemope, chap. 11, gives similar advice: “Do not intrude on a man in his house, / Enter when you have been called; / He may say ‘Welcome’ with his mouth, / Yet deride you in his thoughts.” “Unwilling,” lit., “evil of eye,” is usually translated “stingy,” but the context suggests unwilling. In v. 8, the unwanted guest vomits up the food, thus destroying the desired good impression. Proverbs regards the uninvited banqueters as thieves who will suffer the consequences of their theft. Amenemope, chap. 11, is relevant: “Do not covet a poor man's goods,... A poor man's goods are a block in the throat, / It makes the gullet vomit.”

23:10 In Israel ownership of property and other legal rights were vested mainly in the father as head of the family; thus the widow and fatherless child were vulnerable, left prey to those who would exploit them.

23:13–14 The young will not die from instructional blows but from their absence, for (premature) death results from uncorrected folly. The sardonic humor means the exhortation is not to be taken literally, as an argument for corporal punishment. The next verses (vv. 15–16) are exceedingly tender toward the young.

23:17 Those whom one admires or associates with exercise enormous influence. Do not join the wicked, who are a doomed group. The warning is repeated in 24:1–2, 19–20.

23:22–23 Father and mother are associated with truth and wisdom. One should no more rid oneself of truth and wisdom than rid oneself of one's parents, who are their source.

23:26–28 The exhortation is a condensed version of chap. 7 with its emotional appeal to “my son” to avoid the forbidden woman (7:1–5), her traps (7:21–23), and her intent to add the youth to her list of victims (7:24–27). As in 23:15, 19, 22, a trustful and affectionate relationship between student and teacher is the basis of teaching. The danger of the woman is expressed in imagery that has sexual overtones (cf. 22:14).

23:29–35 A vivid description of the evil effects, physical and psychological, of drunkenness. The emphasis is on the unwise behavior, the folly, caused by alcohol. Cf. 20:1.

23:35 Drunkards become insensible to bodily and moral harm. Their one desire is to indulge again.

24:1–22 A new section (24:1–14)—on the fates of the wicked and foolish—begins with a warning not to take the foolish as role models. The same admonition is repeated in 23:17–18 and 24:19–20. In 24:1, the verb means “to be jealous, zealous; to emulate.” The motive stated in the other passages—the wicked have no future—is indirectly stated here.

24:7–9 The verses are unclear; most scholars take them as two or even three single sayings, but, taken singly, the verses are banal. They are best taken as a single statement. Just as vv. 3–6 described the advantages of wisdom, so vv. 7–9 describe the disadvantages of its opposite, folly: it alienates one from the community (v. 7), for fools become notorious (v. 8), dooming their plans and ostracizing themselves.

24:10–12 Excuses for not coming to the aid of one's neighbor in serious trouble do not suffice before God, who sees through self-serving excuses.

24:11 Rescue... death: perhaps refers to the legal rescue of those unjustly condemned to death.

24:13–14 God's word is sometimes said to be sweeter than honey, e.g., Ps 119:101–103. Cf. also Ps 19:11; Prv 16:24; Ez 3:3; Sir 24:19–22.

24:15–16 The just will overcome every misfortune that oppresses them. Seven times is an indefinite number.

24:17–18 The admonition is linked to the previous by the words “fall” and “stumble.” Premature public celebration of the downfall of enemies equivalently preempts the retribution that belongs to God.

24:23–34 A little collection between the thirty sayings of 22:17–24:22 and the Hezekiah collection in chaps. 25–29. Its title (v. 23) suggests that editors took it as an appendix. At this point, the Greek edition of Proverbs begins to arrange the later sections of the book in a different order than the Hebrew edition.

An editor has arranged originally separate sayings into two parallel groups.

I.	II.
Conduct in court: (vv. 24–25)	Judges	Witnesses (v. 28)
Speaking, thinking: (v. 26)	Good speech	Bad speech (v. 29)
Wisdom in work: (v. 27)	Positive	Negative (vv. 30–34)

24:26 The kiss is a gesture of respect and affection. The greatest sign of affection and respect for another is to tell that person the truth.

24:27 House: can refer to both the building and the family (cf. 2 Sm 7). In the context established by the placement noted above under 24:23, the saying means that neglect of one's field is a sign that one is not building the house properly. In an agricultural society especially, the concept of household includes fields for animals and crops. On the metaphorical level, one must lay a careful preparation before embarking on a great project. This verse is sometimes interpreted as advocating careful and practical preparation for marriage.

24:29 Retribution is a long and complex process that belongs to the Lord, not to individuals. Cf. vv. 12d, 17–18.

24:30–34 Neglect of one's fields through laziness ruins all plans to build a house (v. 27). This vignette is a teaching story, like those in 7:1–27; Ps 37:35–36.

25:1–29:27 Chaps. 25–29 make up the fifth collection in the book, and the third longest. King Hezekiah reigned in Judah in 715–687 B.C. According to 2 Kgs 18–20 and 2 Chr 29–32, he initiated political and religious reforms after the destruction of the Northern Kingdom in 722 B.C. Such reforms probably included copying and editing sacred literature such as Proverbs. Prv 25:1 is an important piece of evidence about the composition of the book, suggesting this collection was added to an already-existing collection also attributed to Solomon. The older collection is probably 10:1–22:16 (or part of it). By the end of the eighth century B.C., therefore, there existed in Israel two large collections of aphorisms.

Chap. 25 has two general themes: (1) social hierarchy, rank, or position; (2) social conflict and its resolution.

25:1 The servants of Hezekiah: presumably scribes at the court of Hezekiah. Transmitted: lit., “to move, transfer from,” hence “to collect,” and perhaps also to arrange and compose.

25:2–7 The topic is the king—who he is (vv. 2–3) and how one is to behave in his presence (vv. 4–7).

25:2 God and king were closely related in the ancient world and in the Bible. The king had a special responsibility for divine justice. Hence, God would give him special wisdom to search it out.

25:4–5 Wisdom involves virtue as well as knowledge. As in Ps 101 the king cannot tolerate any wickedness in the royal service.

25:6–7 An admonition with a practical motive for putting the teaching into practice. Pragmatic shrewdness suggests that we not promote ourselves but let others do it for us. See Lk 14:7–11.

25:9–10 Another admonition on the use of law courts to settle personal disputes. Speak privately with your opponent lest others' personal business become public and they resent you.

25:16–17 The two admonitions are complementary, expressing nicely the need to restrain the inclination for delightful things, whether for honey or friendship.

25:19 “A time of trouble” defeats all plans (cf. 10:2; 11:4). At such times human resources alone are like a tooth that falls out as one bites or a foot that goes suddenly lame.

25:21–22 A memorable statement of humanity and moderation; such sentiments could be occasionally found even outside the Bible, e.g., “It is better to bless someone than to do harm to one who has insulted you” (Egyptian Papyrus Insinger). Cf. Ex 23:4 and Lv 19:17–18. Human beings should not take it upon themselves to exact vengeance, leaving it rather in God’s hands. This saying has in view an enemy’s vulnerability in time of need, in this case extreme hunger and thirst; such a need should not be an occasion for revenge. The motive for restraining oneself is to allow God’s justice to take its own course, as in 20:22 and 24:17–19. Live coals: either remorse and embarrassment for the harm done, or increased punishment for refusing reconciliation. Cf. Mt 5:44. Rom 12:20 cites the Greek version and interprets it, “Do not be overcome by evil but overcome evil with good.”

25:24 A humorous saying about domestic unhappiness: better to live alone outdoors than indoors with an angry spouse. Prv 21:9 is identical and 21:19 is similar in thought.

25:26 “Spring” is a common metaphor for source. The righteous should be a source of life for others. When they fail, it is as if a spring became foul and its water undrinkable. It is not clear whether the righteous person yielded to a scoundrel out of cowardice or was simply defeated by evil. The latter seems more likely, for other proverbs say the just person will never “fall” (lit., “be moved,” 10:30; 12:3). The fall, even temporary, of a righteous person is a loss of life for others.

25:27 Nor ... honor: the text is uncertain.

26:1–28 Concrete images describe the vices of fools (vv. 1–12), of sluggards (vv. 13–16), of meddlers (vv. 17–19), of talebearers (vv. 20–22), and of flatterers (vv. 23–28).

26:1 There is no fit (“out of place”) between weather and agricultural season.

26:2 The point is the similarity of actions: a hovering bird that never lands, a groundless curse that never “lands.” It hangs in the air posing no threat to anyone.

26:4–5 There is no contradiction between these two proverbs. In their answers, the wise must protect their own interests against fools. Or perhaps the juxtaposition of the two proverbs suggests that no single proverb can resolve every problem in life.

26:7–9 Fools either abuse or are unable to use whatever knowledge they have. A thorn: a proverb is “words spoken at the proper time” (25:11). Fools have no sense of the right time; their statements are like thorns that fasten on clothing randomly.

26:13–16 Each verse mentions the sluggard, whom Proverbs regards with derision. The criticism is not against low energy but failure to act and take responsibility. Proverbs’ ideal is the active person who uses heart, lips, hands, feet to keep to the good path. The verses are examples of the sardonic humor of the book.

26:20–22 The three proverbs have a common theme—the destructive power of slanderous words. Certain words are repeated: wood and fire, talebearer.

26:22 Malicious gossip is compared to delicious food that is swallowed and lodges in the deepest recesses of one’s body. Negative comments are seldom forgotten. Prv 18:8 is a duplicate.

26:23 Heart = what is within, and lips (words) = what is expressed, are compared to an earthenware jar covered with glaze.

26:25 Seven abominations: many evil intentions.

26:26 Hate may be concealed for a time, but it will eventually issue in a deed and become known in the public assembly. There is a play on words: the consonants of the word “hatred” (š’ n) are literally concealed in the word “pretense” (mš’ n).

27:4 Anger generally subsides with time but jealousy coolly calculates and plots revenge.

27:5–6 Verses 5 and 6 are concerned with true friendship. “Better than” sayings often declare one thing superior to another in view of some value, e.g., 15:17, vegetables are better than meat in view of a milieu of love. In v. 5, a rebuke is better than an act of affection in view of discipline that imparts wisdom.

27:6 The present translation is conjectural. The meaning seems to be that a friend’s rebuke can be life-giving and an enemy’s kiss can be deadly (like the kiss of Judas in Mt 26:48).

27:8 The bird symbolizes vulnerability as it flees before danger as in Is 10:14; 16:2; and Ps 11:1. For the importance of place in human life, see Jb 20:8–9. People are defined by their place, but, tragically, war, poverty, or illness can force them from it.

27:10 The adage is about the difference between friends and kin in a crisis. Two admonitions are grounded in one maxim (colon C). The same Hebrew word means both “one who is near” and “friend.” The whole proverb urges the reader to cultivate old family friends and neighbors and not to rely exclusively on kin in times of trouble, for kin may not be there for us.

27:11 A father’s command to a son to be wise, another way of saying that sons or daughters bring joy or shame to their parents.

27:13 See note on 20:16.

27:14 One interpretation takes the proverb as humorous and the other takes it as serious: (1) an overly loud and illtimed greeting (lit., “blessing”) invites the response of a curse rather than a “blessing” (greeting); (2) the loud voice suggests hypocrisy in the greeting.

27:17 Iron sharpens the “face” (panim = surface, edge) of iron, and a human being sharpens the “face” (panim = face, words) of another. Human beings learn from each other and grow in wisdom by conversing.

27:20 Sheol, the underworld abode of the dead, is personified as a force that is never satisfied and always desires more. Cf. Is 5:14 and Hos 13:14. The saying is applicable to modern consumerism.

27:23–27 A little treatise on farming in the form of admonitions. It proposes the advantages of field and flock over other forms of wealth. Herds are the most productive wealth, for their value does not diminish; they are a source of money, clothing, and food. The thought is conservative and traditional but the development is vivid and concrete.

28:2 The first line expresses the paradox that rebellion, far from doing away with rulers, actually multiplies them. The second line is corrupt.

28:3 The reference may be to tax farmers who collected taxes and took a commission. The collectors’ lack of wealth was the cause of their oppression of poor farmers. They are like a rain too violent to allow crops to grow.

28:4 Instruction: torah; the word is used both for the teaching of the wise and the law of Moses.

28:5 Understanding nothing of justice plays on the twofold sense of justice as righteousness and as punishment that comes on the wicked. On the other hand, those who seek the LORD understand everything, i.e., that the Lord punishes the wicked and rewards the righteous (themselves).

28:8 Interest and overcharge were strictly forbidden in the old law among Israelites because it was presumed that the borrower was in distress; cf. Ex 22:25; Lv 25:35–37; Dt 23:20; Ps 15:5; Ez 18:8. Divine providence will take the offender’s wealth; cf. Eccl 2:26.

28:12 People react in opposite ways to the triumph of good and evil. To the triumph of good, they react by public display, public celebration, and to the triumph of evil, by hiding.

28:13 Concealing the faults of another is a good thing in Proverbs (17:9), but concealing one’s own sins is not. Ps 32:1–5 expresses the anguish caused by concealing one’s sins rather than bringing them to light so they can be healed by God.

28:14 Fear is a different verb than in the phrase “to fear (or revere) the Lord.” In its only other biblical occurrence (Is 51:13), the verb means to dread an oppressor. The saying states a paradox:

those who fear in the sense of being cautious are declared happy, whereas those who are fearless will fall into traps they did not “fear.” In short, there is good fear and bad fear.

28:21 Cf. 24:23. Verse 21b warns that even in a light matter one must remain impartial.

28:22 “Bad of eye” is the Hebrew idiom for miserly. Misers fail to see that poverty is hurrying toward them because of their wrong attitude toward wealth. Because misers are “bad of eye,” they do not see the danger.

29:1 The idiom “to stiffen one’s neck” occurs in a context of not heeding a message in Dt 10:16 and 2 Kgs 17:14. To stiffen one’s neck in this sense risks having it broken, as in 1 Sm 4:18.

29:2 Popular response to a just or unjust ruler is expressed in sound—shouts of joy or groans of anguish. “Rejoice” can mean to express one’s joy, i.e., joyous shouts.

29:4 In Hebrew as in English high and low are metaphors for prosperity and depression. A king who is just “causes the land to stand up,” i.e., to be prosperous, and one who makes taxes high brings a country low.

29:5 When one addresses deceptive words to someone’s face, one equivalently throws a net at their feet to snare them.

29:7 As in 12:10 (on care for animals), the righteous care for those who are without a voice and often treated like animals. Colon B has a double meaning: the wicked have no such knowledge (care for the poor) and they have no knowledge (wisdom), for they are fools.

29:10 An enigmatic saying in that “seek one’s life” is a common idiom for killing. The saying probably plays on the idiom, interpreting “to seek the life of another” not as killing but as caring for another (as in 11:30).

29:16 When the wicked grow numerous they sow the seeds of their own destruction, for there is a corresponding increase in offenses calling down divine retribution.

29:18 This much-cited proverb has been interpreted in several different ways. “Vision” and “instruction” mean authoritative guidance for the community. People are demoralized without credible leadership, but any individual heeding traditional instruction can still find happiness. As in 15:15 wisdom enables an individual to surmount days of trouble.

29:19 The give and take of reproving is not possible for servants or slaves. Ancient custom dictated silent acquiescence for them. There is no open and free dialogue, which is part of ancient discipline.

29:23 One’s prideful height brings one down and one’s lowly state brings glory.

29:24 Hate themselves: because they not only incur guilt as accomplices but, by their silence, bring down on themselves the curse invoked on the unknown guilty partner. Such a case is envisioned in Lv 5:1. After a theft, a public proclamation was made, enforced by a curse. No one in a town or city could avoid hearing it. The curse hung over the accomplice. By doing nothing, neither directly stealing nor confessing, accomplices put themselves in serious danger.

30:1–6 Scholars are divided on the original literary unit. Is it vv. 1–3, 1–4, 1–5, or 1–6? The unit is probably vv. 1–6, for a single contrast dominates: human fragility (and ignorance) and divine power (and knowledge). A similar contrast is found in Jb 28; Ps 73; Is 49:1–4. The language of self-abasement is hyperbolic; cf. 2 Sm 9:8; Ps 73:21–22; Jb 25:4–6. Agur: an unknown person. Massaite: from Massa in northern Arabia, elsewhere referred to as an encampment of the Ishmaelites (Gn 25:14). But Heb. massa may not be intended as a place name; it might signify “an oracle,” “a prophecy,” as in Is 15:1; 17:1; etc.

30:3–4 Agur denies he has secret heavenly knowledge. The purpose of the denial is to underline that God directly gives wisdom to those whose conduct pleases him.

30:4 The Hebrew text has the phrase “do you know?” at the end of v. 4, which is supported by the versions. The phrase, however, does not appear in the important Greek manuscripts Vaticanus and Sinaiticus and spoils the sense, for Agur, not God, is the questioner. The phrase seems to be an addition to the Hebrew text, borrowed from Job 38:5, where it also follows a cosmic question.

30:5–6 Verse 5, like the confession of the king in Ps 18:31 (and its parallel, 2 Sm 22:31), expresses total confidence in the one who rescues from death. Agur has refused a word from any other except God and makes an act of trust in God.

30:7–9 A prayer against lying words and for sufficiency of goods, lest reaction to riches or destitution lead to offenses against God.

30:11–14 Perverted people are here classified as unfilial (v. 11), self-righteous (v. 12), proud (v. 13) and rapacious (v. 14).

30:15–16 Here begins a series of numerical sayings; the pattern is  $n, n + 1$ . The slight variation in number (two and three, three and four) is an example of parallelism applied to numbers. The poetic technique is attested even outside the Bible. Two daughters: “Give,” and “Give”: the text is obscure; as the leech (a bloodsucking worm) is insatiable in its desire for blood (v. 15), so are the nether world for victims, the barren womb for offspring, the earth for water, and fire for fuel (v. 16). Sheol: here not so much the place of the dead as a force (death) that eventually draws all the living into it; cf. 27:20; Is 5:14; Hb 2:5. Land ... fire: land (especially the dry land of Palestine) always absorbs more water; fire always requires more fuel.

30:18–19 The soaring flight of the eagle, the mysterious movement upon a rock of the serpent which has no feet, the path of the ship through the trackless deep, and the marvelous attraction between the sexes; there is a mysterious way common to them all.

30:20 This verse portrays the indifference of an adulterous woman who casually dismisses her guilt because it cannot be traced.

30:21–23 Shaking heavens are part of general cosmic upheaval in Is 14:16; Jl 2:10; Am 8:8; Jb 9:6. Disturbances in nature mirror the disturbance of unworthy people attaining what they do not deserve. Glutted with food: someone unworthy ends up with the fulfillment that befits a wise person. Unloved woman: an older woman who, contrary to expectation, finds a husband.

30:24–28 The creatures may be small, but they are wise in knowing how to govern themselves—the definition of wisdom. Badgers: the rock badger is able to live on rocky heights that provide security from its enemies. Locusts: though vulnerable individually their huge swarms are impossible to deflect.

30:29–31 Four beings with an imperiousness visible in their walk. Only the lion is described in detail; the reader is expected to transpose its qualities to the others.

30:32–33 The same Hebrew verb, “to churn, shake,” is applied to milk, the nose (sometimes a symbol of anger), and wrath. In each case something is eventually produced by the constant agitation. The wise make peace and avoid strife, for strife eventually harms those who provoke it.

31:1–9 Though mothers are sources of wisdom in Proverbs (1:8; 6:20), the mother of Lemuel is special in being queen mother, which was an important position in the palace. Queen mothers played an important role in ancient palace life because of their longevity, knowledge of palace politics, and loyalty to their sons; they were in a good position to offer him sound counsel. The language of the poem contains Aramaisms, a sign of its non-Israelite origin.

The first section, vv. 3–5, warns against abuse of sex and alcohol (wine, strong drink) lest the king forget the poor. The second section, vv. 6–9, urges the use of alcohol (strong drink, wine) so that the downtrodden poor can forget their poverty. The real subject of the poem is justice for the poor.

31:1 Massa: see note on 30:1–6.

31:2 My son: in the Septuagint, “my son, my firstborn.”

31:3 The Hebrew word here translated “strength” normally means “ways,” but the context and a cognate language support “authority” or “strength” here.

31:10–31 An acrostic poem of twenty-two lines; each line begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. As with many other acrostic poems in the Bible, the unity of the poem is largely extrinsic, coming not from the narrative logic but from the familiar sequence of letters. The topic is the ideal woman described through her activity as a wife. Some have suggested that the traditional hymn extolling the great deeds of a warrior has been transposed to extol a heroic wife; the focus is on her exploits. She runs a household distinguished by abundant food and clothing for all within, by its trade (import of raw materials and export of finished products), and by the renown of its head, her husband, in the community. At v. 28, the voice is no longer that of the narrator but of her children and husband as they praise her. The purpose of the poem has been interpreted variously: an encomium to offset the sometimes negative portrayal of women in the book, or, more symbolically (and more likely), a portrait of a household ruled by Woman Wisdom and a disciple of Woman Wisdom, i.e., he now has a worthy wife and children, a great household, renown in the community.

31:10 Who can find ... ? in 20:6 and Eccl 8:1 the question implies that finding such a person is well-nigh impossible.

31:12 Profit, not loss: a commercial metaphor.

31:14 Like a merchant fleet: she has her eye on the far horizon, like the ship of a merchant ready to bring supplies into her larder. It is the only simile (“like”) in the poem.

31:17 The metaphor of clothing oneself is used to show the woman’s readiness. One can gird on weapons of war and might and splendor (Ps 69:7; Is 52:9).

31:18 Her lamp is never extinguished at night: indicates abundance of productive work and its accompanying prosperity; cf. 20:20; Jb 18:6.

31:19 The wife weaves linen cloth from flax and wool from fleece, which she cultivated according to v. 13. Distaff: staff for holding the flax, tow, or wool, which in spinning was drawn out and twisted into yarn or thread by the spindle or round stick.

31:23 The husband is mentioned for the first time since vv. 10–12 but as “her husband.” He will not be mentioned again until v. 28, where he praises her.

31:25 Laughs at the days to come: anticipates the future with joy, free of anxiety.

31:27 Watches over: Hebrew sopiyyâ, perhaps a pun on the Greek sophia (= wisdom). Bread of idleness: she does not eat from the table of others but from her own labors.

31:30 The true charm of this woman is her religious spirit, for she fears the Lord; cf. note on 1:7.

The Book of Ecclesiastes

The Hebrew name of this book and of its author, Qoheleth, is actually a title, and it perhaps means “assembler” (of students, listeners) or “collector” (of wisdom sayings). The book’s more common name, Ecclesiastes, is an approximate translation into Greek of this Hebrew word. The book comprises an extended reflective essay employing autobiographical narrative, proverbs, parables, and allegories. An almost unrelenting skepticism characterizes the tone or outlook. The issues with which the author deals and the questions he raises are aimed at those who would claim any absolute values in this life, including possessions, fame, success, or pleasure. Wisdom itself is challenged, but folly is condemned.

The refrain which begins and ends the book, “Vanity of vanities” (1:1; 12:8), recurs at key points throughout. The Hebrew word, hebel (“vanity”), has the sense of “emptiness, futility, absurdity”: “I have seen all things that are done under the sun, and behold, all is vanity and a chase after wind” (1:14; 2:11, 17, 26; etc.). Everything in human life is subject to change, to qualification, to loss: “What profit have we from all the toil which we toil at under the sun?” (1:3). The answer is in the negative: No absolute profit or gain is possible. Even if some temporary profit or gain is achieved, it will ultimately be cancelled out by death, the great leveller (2:14–15; 3:19–20). Wisdom has some advantage over foolishness, but even wisdom’s advantage is only a temporary and qualified one.

Many would locate Ecclesiastes in the third century B.C., when Judea was under the oppressive domination of Hellenistic kings from Egypt. These kings were highly efficient in their ruthless exploitation of the land and people (4:1; 5:7). The average Jew would have felt a sense of powerlessness and inability to change things for the better. For Qoheleth, God seems remote and uncommunicative, and we cannot hope to understand, much less influence, God's activity in the world (3:11; 8:16–17).

The book's honest and blunt appraisal of the human condition provides a healthy corrective to the occasionally excessive self-assurance of other wisdom writers. Its radical skepticism is somewhat tempered by the resigned conclusions to rejoice in whatever gifts God may give (2:24; 3:12–13, 22; 5:17–18; 8:15; 9:7–9; 11:9).

The Book of Ecclesiastes is divided as follows:

- I. Qoheleth's Investigation of Life (1:12–6:9)
  - II. Qoheleth's Conclusions (6:10–12:14)
    - A. No One Can Find Out the Best Way of Acting (7:1–8:17)
    - B. No One Knows the Future (9:1–12:14)

CHAPTER 1

See RG 298–302

<sup>1</sup>The words of David’s son, Qoheleth, king in Jerusalem: * <sup>a</sup>

vanity of vanities! All things are vanity! <sup>b</sup>

Vanity of Human Toil

<sup>3</sup>What profit have we from all the toil which we toil at under the sun? * <sup>c</sup>

<sup>4</sup>One generation departs and another generation comes,
but the world forever stays.

<sup>5</sup>The sun rises and the sun sets;
then it presses on to the place where it rises.

<sup>6</sup>Shifting south, then north,
back and forth shifts the wind,
constantly shifting its course.

<sup>7</sup>All rivers flow to the sea,
yet never does the sea become full.
To the place where they flow,
the rivers continue to flow.

<sup>8</sup>All things are wearisome, *
too wearisome for words.
The eye is not satisfied by seeing nor has the ear enough of hearing. <sup>d</sup>

<sup>9</sup>What has been, that will be; what has been done, that will be done.
Nothing is new under the sun! <sup>e</sup> <sup>10</sup>Even the thing of which we say, “See, this is new!” has already existed in the ages that preceded us. <sup>f</sup> <sup>11</sup>There is no remembrance of past generations; <sup>g</sup> nor will future generations be remembered by those who come after them. *

I. Qoheleth’s Investigation of Life

Twofold Introduction. <sup>12</sup>I, Qoheleth, was king over Israel in Jerusalem, <sup>13</sup>and I applied my mind to search and investigate in wisdom all things that are done under the sun.<sup>h</sup>

A bad business God has given to human beings to be busied with.

<sup>14</sup>I have seen all things that are done under the sun, and behold, all is vanity and a chase after wind.* <sup>i</sup>

<sup>15</sup>What is crooked cannot be made straight, and you cannot count what is not
there.*

<sup>16j</sup> Though I said to myself, “See, I have greatly increased my wisdom beyond all who were before me in Jerusalem, and my mind has broad experience of wisdom and knowledge,” <sup>17</sup>yet when I applied my mind to know wisdom and knowledge, madness and folly, I learned that this also is a chase after wind.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>18</sup>For in much wisdom there is much sorrow;
whoever increases knowledge increases grief.*

CHAPTER 2

See RG 298–302

Study of Pleasure-seeking. <sup>1</sup>I said in my heart, * “Come, now, let me try you with pleasure and the enjoyment of good things.” See, this too was vanity.

<sup>3</sup>Guided by wisdom, * I probed with my mind how to beguile my senses with wine and take up folly, until I should understand what is good for human beings to do under the heavens during the limited days of their lives.

<sup>4</sup>I undertook great works; I built myself houses and planted vineyards; <sup>5</sup>I made gardens and parks, and in them set out fruit trees of all sorts. <sup>6</sup>And I constructed for myself reservoirs to water a flourishing woodland. <sup>7</sup>I acquired male and female slaves, and had slaves who were born in my house. I also owned vast herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, more than all who had been before me in Jerusalem. <sup>8</sup>I amassed for myself silver and gold, and the treasures of kings and provinces. I provided for myself male and female singers and delights of men, many women. * <sup>9</sup>I accumulated much more than all others before me in Jerusalem; my wisdom, too, stayed with me. <sup>10</sup>Nothing that my eyes desired did I deny them, nor did I deprive myself of any joy; rather, my heart rejoiced in the fruit of all my toil. This was my share for all my toil. <sup>11</sup> But when I turned to all the works that my hands had wrought, and to the fruit of the toil for which I had toiled so much, see! all was vanity and a chase after wind. There is no profit under the sun. <sup>12</sup>What about one who succeeds a king? He can do only what has already been done. *

Study of Wisdom and Folly. I went on to the consideration of wisdom, madness and folly. <sup>13</sup>And I saw that wisdom has as much profit over folly as light has over darkness.

Yet I knew that the same lot befalls both. * <sup>m</sup> <sup>15</sup>So I said in my heart, if the fool’s lot is to befall me also, why should I be wise? Where is the profit? And in my heart I decided that this too is vanity. <sup>16n</sup> The wise person will have no more abiding remembrance than the fool; for in days to come both will have been forgotten. How is it that the wise person dies * like the fool!

<sup>17</sup>Therefore I detested life, since for me the work that is done under the sun is bad; for all is vanity and a chase after wind.

Study of the Fruits of Toil To Others the Profits. <sup>18</sup>And I detested all the fruits of my toil under the sun, because I must leave them to the one who is to come after me. <sup>19</sup>And who knows whether that one will be wise or a fool? Yet that one will take control of all the fruits of my toil and wisdom under the sun. This also is vanity. <sup>20</sup>So my heart turned to despair over all the fruits of my toil under the sun. <sup>21</sup>For here is one who has toiled with wisdom and knowledge and skill, and that one's legacy must be left to another who has not toiled for it. This also is vanity and a great evil. <sup>22</sup><sup>o</sup> For what profit comes to mortals from all the toil and anxiety of heart with which they toil under the sun? <sup>23</sup>Every day sorrow and grief are their occupation; even at night their hearts are not at rest. This also is vanity.

CHAPTER 3

See RG 298–302

No One Can Determine the Right Time to Act

<sup>1*</sup> There is an appointed time for everything,
and a time for every affair under the
heavens.

<sup>2</sup> A time to give birth, and a time to die;
a time to plant, and a time to uproot
the plant.

<sup>3</sup> A time to kill, and a time to heal;
a time to tear down, and a time to build.

<sup>4</sup> A time to weep, and a time to laugh;
a time to mourn, and a time to dance.

<sup>5</sup> A time to scatter stones, and a time to gather them;
a time to embrace, and a time to be far from embraces.

<sup>6</sup> A time to seek, and a time to lose;
a time to keep, and a time to cast away.

<sup>7</sup> A time to rend, and a time to sew;
a time to be silent, and a time to speak.

<sup>8</sup> A time to love, and a time to hate;
a time of war, and a time of peace.

<sup>9r</sup> What profit have workers from their toil? <sup>10</sup>I have seen the business that God has given to mortals to be busied about. <sup>11s</sup> God has made everything appropriate to its time, but has put the timeless* into their hearts so they cannot find out, from beginning to end, the work which God has done. <sup>12t</sup> I recognized that there is nothing better than to rejoice and to do well during life. <sup>13</sup>Moreover, that all can eat and drink and enjoy the good of all their toil—this is a gift of God. <sup>14</sup>I recognized that whatever God does will endure forever; there is no adding to it, or taking from it. Thus has God done that he may be revered. <sup>15* u</sup> What now is has already been; what is to be, already is: God retrieves what has gone by.

The Problem of Retribution. <sup>16v</sup> And still under the sun in the judgment place I saw wickedness, and wickedness also in the seat of justice. <sup>17w</sup> I said in my heart, both the just and the wicked God will judge, since a time is set for every affair and for every work. * <sup>18</sup> I said in my heart: As for human beings, it is God's way of testing them and of showing that they are in themselves like beasts. <sup>19</sup> For the lot of mortals and the lot of beasts is the same lot: The one dies as well as the other. Both have the same life breath. Human beings have no advantage over beasts, but all is vanity. <sup>20x</sup> Both go to the same place; both were made from the dust, and to the dust they both return. <sup>21</sup> Who knows * if the life breath of mortals goes upward and the life breath of beasts goes earthward? <sup>22y</sup> And I saw that there is nothing better for mortals than to rejoice in their work; for this is their lot. Who will let them see what is to come after them?<sup>z</sup>

See RG 298–302

Vanity of Toil. <sup>1</sup>Again I saw all the oppressions that take place under the sun: the tears of the victims with none to comfort* them! From the hand of their oppressors comes violence, and there is none to comfort them!<sup>a</sup> <sup>2</sup>And those now dead, I declared more fortunate in death than are the living to be still alive.<sup>b</sup> <sup>3</sup>And better off than both is the yet unborn, who has not seen the wicked work that is done under the sun. <sup>4</sup>Then I saw that all toil and skillful work is the rivalry of one person with another. This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

<sup>5</sup>“Fools fold their arms and consume their own flesh”—*

<sup>6</sup>Better is one handful with tranquility than two with toil and a chase after wind!

Companions and Successors. <sup>7</sup>Again I saw this vanity under the sun: <sup>8</sup>those all alone with no companion, with neither child nor sibling—with no end to all their toil, and no satisfaction from riches. For whom do I toil and deprive myself of good things? This also is vanity and a bad business. <sup>9</sup>Two are better than one: They get a good wage for their toil. <sup>10</sup>If the one falls, the other will help the fallen one. But woe to the solitary person! If that one should fall, there is no other to help. <sup>11</sup>So also, if two sleep together, they keep each other warm. How can one alone keep warm? <sup>12</sup>Where one alone may be overcome, two together can resist. A three-ply cord* is not easily broken.

<sup>13</sup>* Better is a poor but wise youth than an old but foolish king who no longer knows caution; <sup>14</sup>for from a prison house he came forth to reign; despite his kingship he was born poor. <sup>15</sup>I saw all the living, those who move about under the sun, with the second youth who will succeed him.* <sup>16</sup>There is no end to all this people, to all who were before them; yet the later generations will not have joy in him. This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

Vanity of Many Words. <sup>17c</sup> Guard your step when you go to the house of God. * Draw near for obedience, rather than for the fools' offering of sacrifice; for they know not how to keep from doing evil.

CHAPTER 5

See RG 298–302

<sup>1*</sup> Be not hasty in your utterance and let not your heart be quick to utter a promise in God's presence. God is in heaven and you are on earth; therefore let your words be few.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>2</sup>As dreams come along with many cares, so a fool's voice along with a multitude of words.

<sup>3e</sup> When you make a vow to God, delay not its fulfillment. For God has no pleasure in fools; fulfill what you have vowed. <sup>4</sup>It is better not to make a vow than make it and not fulfill it. <sup>5</sup>Let not your utterances make you guilty, and say not before his representative, "It was a mistake." Why should God be angered by your words and destroy the works of your hands? <sup>6f</sup> Despite many dreams, futilities, and a multitude of words, fear God!

Gain and Loss of Goods. <sup>7g</sup> If you see oppression of the poor, and violation of rights and justice in the realm, do not be astonished by the fact, for the high official has another higher than he watching him and above these are others higher still—. <sup>8</sup>But profitable for a land in such circumstances is a king concerned about cultivation.*

<sup>9h</sup> The covetous are never satisfied with money, nor lovers of wealth with their gain; so this too is vanity. <sup>10</sup>Where there are great riches, there are also many to devour them. Of what use are they to the owner except as a feast for the eyes alone? <sup>11</sup>Sleep is sweet to the laborer, whether there is little or much to eat; but the abundance of the rich allows them no sleep.

<sup>12</sup>This is a grievous evil which I have seen under the sun: riches hoarded by their owners to their own hurt. <sup>13</sup>Should the riches be lost through some misfortune, they may have offspring when they have no means. <sup>14i</sup> As they came forth from their mother's womb, so again shall they return, naked as they came, having nothing from their toil to bring with them. <sup>15</sup>This too is a grievous evil, that they go just as they came. What then does it profit them to toil for the wind? <sup>16</sup>All their days they eat in gloom with great vexation, sickness and resentment.

<sup>17j</sup> Here is what I see as good: It is appropriate to eat and drink and prosper from all the toil one toils at under the sun during the limited days of life God gives us; for this is our lot. <sup>18</sup>Those to whom God gives riches and property, and grants power to partake of them, so that they receive their lot and find joy in the fruits of their toil: This is a gift from God. <sup>19</sup>For they will hardly dwell on the shortness of life, because God lets them busy themselves with the joy of their heart.*

CHAPTER 6

See RG 298–302

Limited Worth of Enjoyment. <sup>1</sup>There is another evil I have seen under the sun, and it weighs heavily upon humankind: <sup>2k</sup> There is one to whom God gives riches and property and honor, and who lacks nothing the heart could desire; yet God does not grant the power to partake of them, but a stranger devours them. This is vanity and a dire plague. <sup>3</sup>Should one have a hundred children and live many years, no matter to what great age, still if one has not the full benefit of those goods, I proclaim that the child born dead, even if left unburied, is more fortunate. <sup>4l</sup> Though it came in vain and goes into darkness and its name is enveloped in darkness, <sup>5</sup>though it has not seen the sun or known anything, yet the dead child has more peace. <sup>6</sup>Should such a one live twice a thousand years and not enjoy those goods, do not both go to the same place?*

<sup>7</sup>All human toil is for the mouth,* yet the appetite is never satisfied. <sup>8</sup>What profit have the wise compared to fools, or what profit have the lowly in knowing how to conduct themselves in life? <sup>9</sup>“What the eyes see is better than what the desires wander after.”* This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

II. Qoheleth's Conclusions

<sup>10</sup>Whatever is, was long ago given its name, and human nature is known; mortals cannot contend in judgment with One who is stronger.* <sup>11</sup>For the more words, the more vanity; what profit is there for anyone? <sup>12m</sup> For who knows what is good for mortals in life, the limited days of their vain life, spent like a shadow? Because who can tell them what will come afterward under the sun?<sup>n</sup>

A. No One Can Find Out the Best Way of Acting

CHAPTER 7

See RG 298–302

Critique of Sages on the Day of Adversity

- <sup>1</sup>A good name is better than good ointment,*
and the day of death than the day of birth.<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>It is better to go to the house of mourning
than to the house of feasting,
For that is the end of every mortal,
and the living should take it to heart.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>Sorrow is better than laughter;
when the face is sad, the heart grows
wise.
- <sup>4</sup>The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning,
but the heart of fools is in the house of merriment.
- <sup>5</sup>It is better to listen to the rebuke of the Wise
than to listen to the song of fools;
- <sup>6</sup>For as the crackling of thorns under a pot,
so is the fool's laughter.
This also is vanity.
- <sup>7</sup>Extortion can make a fool out of the
wise,
and a bribe corrupts the heart.
- <sup>8</sup>Better is the end of a thing than its
beginning;
better is a patient spirit than a lofty one.
- <sup>9</sup>Do not let anger upset your spirit,
for anger lodges in the bosom of a fool.
- <sup>10</sup>Do not say: How is it that former times were better than these? For it is not out of wisdom that you ask about this.

<sup>11</sup>Wisdom is as good as an inheritance
and profitable to those who see the sun.

<sup>12*</sup>For the protection of wisdom is as the protection of money; and knowledge is profitable because wisdom gives life to those who possess it.

<sup>13</sup>Consider the work of God. Who can make straight what God has made crooked?<sup>q</sup> <sup>14</sup>On a good day enjoy good things, and on an evil day consider: Both the one and the other God has made, so that no one may find the least fault with him.

Critique of Sages on Justice and Wickedness. <sup>15*</sup> I have seen all manner of things in my vain days: the just perishing in their justice, and the wicked living long in their wickedness. <sup>16</sup>“Be not just to excess, and be not overwise. Why work your own ruin? <sup>17</sup>Be not wicked to excess, and be not foolish. Why should you die before your time?” <sup>18</sup>It is good to hold to this rule, and not to let that one go; but the one who fears God will succeed with both.

<sup>19</sup>Wisdom is a better defense for the wise than ten princes in the city, <sup>20r</sup> yet there is no one on earth so just as to do good and never sin. <sup>21</sup>Do not give your heart to every word that is spoken; you may hear your servant cursing you, <sup>22</sup>for your heart knows that you have many times cursed others.

<sup>23</sup>All these things I probed in wisdom. I said, “I will acquire wisdom”; but it was far beyond me. <sup>24</sup>What exists is far-reaching; it is deep, very deep: * Who can find it out? <sup>25*</sup> <sup>s</sup> I turned my heart toward knowledge; I sought and pursued wisdom and its design, and I recognized that wickedness is foolishness and folly is madness.

Critique of Advice on Women. <sup>26t</sup> More bitter than death I find the woman* who is a hunter’s trap, whose heart is a snare, whose hands are prison bonds. The one who pleases God will be delivered from her, but the one who displeases will be entrapped by her. <sup>27</sup>See, this have I found, says Qoheleth, adding one to one to find the sum. <sup>28</sup>What my soul still seeks and has yet to find is this: “One man out of a thousand have I found, but a woman among them all I have not found.” <sup>29</sup>But this alone I have found: God made humankind honest, but they have pursued many designs.

CHAPTER 8

See RG 298–302

Critique of Advice to Heed Authority

<sup>1*</sup>Who is like the wise person, and who knows the explanation of
things?

Wisdom illumines the face
and transforms a grim countenance.

The Problem of Retribution. <sup>10</sup>Meanwhile I saw the wicked buried. They would come and go from the holy place. But those were forgotten in the city who had acted justly. This also is vanity.* <sup>11</sup>Because the sentence against an evil deed is not promptly executed, the human heart is filled with the desire to commit evil— <sup>12*</sup> because the sinner does evil a hundred times and survives. Though indeed I know that it shall be well with those who fear God, for their reverence toward him; <sup>13</sup>and that it shall not be well with the wicked, who shall not prolong their shadowy days, for their lack of reverence toward God.

<sup>14</sup>This is a vanity that occurs on earth: There are those who are just but are treated as though they had done evil, and those who are wicked but are treated as though they had done justly. This, too, I say is vanity. <sup>15<sup>x</sup></sup>

Therefore I praised joy, because there is nothing better for mortals under the sun than to eat and to drink and to be joyful; this will accompany them in their toil through the limited days of life God gives them under the sun.

<sup>16</sup>I applied my heart to know wisdom and to see the business that is done on earth, though neither by day nor by night do one's eyes see sleep, <sup>17y</sup> and I saw all the work of God: No mortal can find out the work that is done under the sun. However much mortals may toil in searching, no one finds it out; and even if the wise claim to know, they are unable to find it out.

B. No One Knows the Future

CHAPTER 9

See RG 298–302

<sup>1</sup>All this I have kept in my heart and all this I examined: The just, the wise, and their deeds are in the hand of God. Love from hatred* mortals cannot tell; both are before them. <sup>2z</sup> Everything is the same for everybody: the same lot for the just and the wicked, for the good, for the clean and the unclean, for the one who offers sacrifice and the one who does not. As it is for the good, so it is for the sinner; as it is for the one who takes an oath, so it is for the one who fears an oath. <sup>3</sup>Among all the things that are done under the sun, this is the worst, that there is one lot for all. Hence the hearts of human beings are filled with evil, and madness is in their hearts during life; and afterward—to the dead!

<sup>4</sup>For whoever is chosen among all the living has hope: “A live dog* is better off than a dead lion.” <sup>5a</sup> For the living know that they are to die, but the dead no longer know anything. There is no further recompense for them, because all memory of them is lost. <sup>6</sup>For them, love and hatred and rivalry have long since perished. Never again will they have part in anything that is done under the sun.

The Time of Misfortune Is Not Known. <sup>11</sup>Again I saw under the sun that the race is not won by the swift, nor the battle by the valiant, nor a livelihood by the wise, nor riches by the shrewd, nor favor by the experts; for a time of misfortune comes to all alike. <sup>12</sup>Human beings no more know their own time than fish taken in the fatal net or birds trapped in the snare; like these, mortals are caught when an evil time suddenly falls upon them.

The Uncertain Future and the Sages. <sup>13</sup>On the other hand I saw this wise deed under the sun, which I thought magnificent. <sup>14</sup>Against a small city with few inhabitants advanced a mighty king, who surrounded it and threw up great siegeworks about it. <sup>15</sup>But in the city lived a man who, though poor, was wise, and he delivered it through his wisdom. Yet no one remembered this poor man. <sup>16c</sup> Though I had said, “Wisdom is better than force,” yet the wisdom of the poor man is despised and his words go unheeded.

<sup>17</sup>The quiet words of the wise are better than the shout of a ruler of fools.
Heeded

<sup>18</sup>Wisdom is better than weapons of war,
but one bungler destroys much good.

CHAPTER 10

See RG 298–302

<sup>1</sup>Dead flies corrupt and spoil the perfumer's oil;
more weighty than wisdom or wealth
is a little folly!*

<sup>2</sup>The wise heart turns to the right;
the foolish heart to the left.*

<sup>4</sup>Should the anger of a ruler burst upon you, do not yield your place; for calmness* abates great offenses.

and whoever breaks through a wall, a snake may bite.

<sup>9</sup>Whoever quarries stones may be hurt by
them,
and whoever chops wood* is in danger
from it.

<sup>10</sup>If the ax becomes dull, and the blade is not sharpened, then effort must be increased. But the advantage of wisdom is success.

<sup>11</sup>If the snake bites before it is charmed, then there is no advantage in a charmer.*

<sup>12</sup>Words from the mouth of the wise win
favor,
but the lips of fools consume them.

<sup>13e</sup>The beginning of their words is folly,

and the end of their talk is utter madness;
<sup>14</sup>yet fools multiply words.
No one knows what is to come,
for who can tell anyone what will be?<sup>f</sup> <sup>15</sup>The toil of fools wearies them, so they do not know even the way to town.

No One Knows What Evil Will Come

<sup>16</sup>Woe to you, O land, whose king is a youth,*
and whose princes feast in the morning!
<sup>17</sup>Happy are you, O land, whose king is of noble birth,
and whose princes dine at the right
time—
for vigor* and not in drinking bouts.
<sup>18</sup>Because of laziness, the rafters sag;
when hands are slack, the house leaks.
<sup>19</sup>A feast is made for merriment
and wine gives joy to the living,
but money answers* for everything.
<sup>20</sup>Even in your thoughts do not curse the
king,
nor in the privacy of your bedroom
curse the rich;
For the birds of the air may carry your
voice,
a winged creature* may tell what you
say.

CHAPTER 11

See RG 298–302

<sup>1*</sup>Send forth your bread upon the face of the waters;
after a long time you may find it
again.

<sup>2</sup>Make seven, or even eight portions;
you know not what misfortune may come upon the earth.

No One Knows What Good Will Come

<sup>3*</sup>When the clouds are full,
they pour out rain upon the earth.
Whether a tree falls to the south or to the north,
wherever it falls, there shall it lie.

<sup>4</sup>One who pays heed to the wind will never sow,
and one who watches the clouds will never reap.

<sup>5</sup>Just as you do not know how the life breath
enters the human frame in the mother's womb,
So you do not know the work of God,
who is working in everything.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>6</sup>In the morning sow your seed, and at evening do not let your hand be idle:
For you do not know which of the two will be successful,
or whether both alike will turn out well.

Poem on Youth and Old Age. <sup>7*</sup>Light is sweet! and it is pleasant for the eyes to see the sun. <sup>8</sup>However many years mortals may live, let them, as they enjoy them all, remember that the days of darkness will be many. All that is to come is vanity.

<sup>9</sup>Rejoice, O youth, while you are young and let your heart be glad in the days of your youth.

Follow the ways of your heart,
the vision of your eyes;
Yet understand regarding all this that God will bring you to judgment.

<sup>10</sup>Banish misery from your heart and remove pain from your body, for youth and black hair are fleeting.*

CHAPTER 12

See RG 298–302

- <sup>1*</sup> Remember your Creator in the days of your youth,
before the evil days come
And the years approach of which you will say,
“I have no pleasure in them”;
- <sup>2</sup> Before the sun is darkened and the light and the moon and the stars
and the clouds return after the rain;
- <sup>3*</sup> When the guardians of the house
tremble,
and the strong men are bent;
When the women who grind are idle
because they are few,
and those who look through the windows grow blind;
- <sup>4</sup> When the doors to the street are shut,
and the sound of the mill is low;
When one rises at the call of a bird,
and all the daughters of song are quiet;
- <sup>5</sup> When one is afraid of heights,
and perils in the street;
When the almond tree blooms,
and the locust grows sluggish
and the caper berry is without effect, Because mortals go to their lasting home,
and mourners go about the streets;
- <sup>6*</sup> Before the silver cord is snapped
and the golden bowl is broken,
And the pitcher is shattered at the spring,
and the pulley is broken at the well,
- <sup>7</sup> And the dust returns to the earth as it once was,
and the life breath returns to God who gave it. <sup>* h</sup>
- <sup>8</sup> Vanity of vanities, says Qoheleth,

all things are vanity!<sup>i</sup>

Epilogue. <sup>9*</sup> Besides being wise, Qoheleth taught the people knowledge, and weighed, scrutinized and arranged many proverbs. <sup>10</sup> Qoheleth sought to find appropriate sayings, and to write down true sayings with precision. <sup>11</sup> The sayings of the wise are like goads; like fixed spikes are the collected sayings given by one shepherd. * <sup>12j</sup> As to more than these, * my son, beware. Of the making of many books there is no end, and in much study there is weariness for the flesh.

<sup>13*</sup> <sup>k</sup> The last word, when all is heard: Fear God and keep his commandments, for this concerns all humankind; <sup>14l</sup> because God will bring to judgment every work, with all its hidden qualities, whether good or bad.

1:1 David's son ... king in Jerusalem: the intent of the author is to identify himself with Solomon. This is a literary device, by which the author hopes to commend his work to the public under the name of Israel's most famous sage (see 1 Kgs 5:9–14).

1:2 Vanity of vanities: a Hebrew superlative expressing the supreme degree of futility and emptiness.

1:3 Under the sun: used throughout this book to signify “on the earth.”

1:8 All things are wearisome: or, “All speech is wearisome.”

1:11 Movement in nature and human activity appears to result in change and progress. The author argues that this change and progress are an illusion: “Nothing is new under the sun.”

1:14 A chase after wind: an image of futile activity, like an attempt to corral the winds; cf. Hos 12:2. The ancient versions understood “affliction, dissipation of the spirit.” This phrase concludes sections of the text as far as 6:9.

1:15 You cannot count what is not there: perhaps originally a commercial metaphor alluding to loss or deficit in the accounts ledger.

1:18 Sorrow ... grief: these terms refer not just to a store of knowledge or to psychological or emotional pain. Corporal punishment, sometimes quite harsh, was also employed frequently by parents and teachers.

2:1–11 The author here assumes the role of Solomon who, as king, would have had the wealth and resources at his disposal to acquire wisdom and engage in pleasurable pursuits. Verses 4–8 in particular, with their description of abundant wealth and physical gratifications, parallel the descriptions in 1 Kgs 4–11 of the extravagances of Solomon's reign.

2:3 Guided by wisdom: using all the means money can buy, the author sets out on a deliberate search to discover if pleasure constitutes true happiness.

2:8 Many women: the final phrase of this verse is difficult to translate. One word, shiddah, which appears here in both singular and plural, is found nowhere else in the Hebrew Bible. A suggested meaning is “woman” or “concubine,” as it is interpreted here: “many women.” The rest of the section (2:1–12) seems to be a description of Solomon's kingdom, and the “many women” would represent his huge harem (1 Kgs 11:1–3). In rabbinic Hebrew the word comes to mean “chest” or “coffer.”

2:12 What ... been done: the verse is difficult and elliptical. The words “He can do only” have been added for clarity. The two halves of the verse have been reversed. The author argues that it is useless to repeat the royal experiment described in vv. 1–11. The results would only be the same.

2:14 Yet I knew ... befalls both: the author quotes a traditional saying upholding the advantages of wisdom, but then qualifies it. Nothing, not even wisdom itself, can give someone absolute control over their destiny and therefore guarantee any advantage.

2:16 The wise person dies: death, until now only alluded to (vv. 14–15), takes center stage and will constantly appear in the author's reflections through the remainder of the book.

2:24–26 The author is not advocating unrestrained indulgence. Rather he counsels acceptance of the good things God chooses to give. This is the first of seven similar conclusions that Qoheleth provides; see 3:12–13, 22; 5:17–18; 8:15; 9:7–9; 11:9.

2:26 According to 7:15 and 9:1–3, God does not make an objective, evidential, moral distinction between saint and sinner. God “gives” as God pleases.

3:1–8 The fourteen pairs of opposites describe various human activities. The poem affirms that God has determined the appropriate moment or “time” for each. Human beings cannot know that moment; further, the wider course of events and purposes fixed by God are beyond them as well.

3:11 The timeless: others translate “eternity,” “the world,” or “darkness.” The author credits God with keeping human beings ignorant about God's “work”—present and future.

3:15 The verse is difficult. Literally it reads “and God seeks out what was pursued.” It appears to be a variation of the theme in 1:9, “There is nothing new under the sun.”

3:17 A time is set ... work: another possible reading would see this verse referring to a judgment in or after death: “a time for every affair and for every work there” (that is, in death or in Sheol).

3:21 Who knows: the author presumes a negative answer: “No one knows.” In place of speculation on impossible questions, the author counsels enjoyment of what is possible (cf. v. 22; but see also 2:10–11).

4:1 Oppressions ... victims ... none to comfort: the author obviously feels deeply about the plight of the oppressed, but he seems to feel powerless to do anything. The repetition of “none to comfort” is purposeful, and emphatic.

4:5 Consume their own flesh: an enigmatic statement. In the context of vv. 4 and 6 it seems to warn that those who refuse to work for the necessities of life will suffer hunger and impair their bodily health. But the verse could also be intended for the industrious: Even the lazy may manage to have “their own flesh,” that is, have sufficient food to eat.

4:12 A three-ply cord: an ancient proverb known centuries before biblical times. The progression (“two together ... three-ply”) seems to imply, “If two are good, three are even better.”

4:13–16 This passage deals with kingship and succession, but is obscure.

4:15 The king is no sooner dead than the people transfer their allegiance to his successor.

4:17 The house of God: the Temple in Jerusalem. Obedience ... sacrifice: the Temple was the place not only for sacrifice but also for instruction in the Law. Sacrifice without obedience was unacceptable; cf. 1 Sm 15:22; Hos 6:6.

5:1–6 Further counsels on prudence and circumspection in fulfilling one's religious obligations. It is not the multitude of words but one's sincerity that counts in the acknowledgment of God's sovereignty (v. 1), especially through obedience (4:17) and reverence (v. 6).

5:8 A king concerned about cultivation: the Hebrew text is ambiguous and obscure. The author does not criticize the oppression he describes in v. 7. Now perhaps he expresses the hope that the king would use his power to upbuild agriculture in order to alleviate the hunger and suffering of the poor and oppressed.

5:19 The joys of life, though temporary and never assured, keep one from dwelling on the ills which afflict humanity.

6:3 Even a large family and exceptionally long life cannot compensate for the absence of good things and the joy which they bring.

6:6 Same place: the grave; cf. 3:20; 12:7.

6:7 The mouth: symbolic of human desires.

6:9 Compare the English proverb, “A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.” However, it could also mean, “The seeing of the eyes is better than the wandering of the desire,” with the emphasis on the actions of seeing and desiring. Seeing is a way of possessing whereas desire, by definition, can remain frustrated and unfulfilled.

6:10–11 One who is stronger is, of course, God. The more vanity: contending with God is futile.

7:1 Ointment: a good name can be affirmed only with death, when one is normally anointed. The author dialogues in this section (vv. 1–14) with traditional wisdom, alternately affirming or countering its assertions. The real value of traditional wisdom lies in its ability to provoke one to thought and reflection, and not to absolve one from such activity.

7:12 St. Jerome’s translation of v. 12b gives an edge to wisdom over money: “But learning and wisdom excel in this, that they bestow life on the one who possesses them.”

7:15–24 The author continues both to affirm and to counter traditional wisdom. He affirms a certain validity to wisdom, but challenges complacency and mindless optimism. His sense of life’s uncertainty and insecurity finds expression, for example, in the irony evident when v. 16 is read in the light of vv. 20–24: How can one be “excessively” just or wise, when justice and wisdom may be out of reach to begin with? The only sure thing is to “fear God” (v. 18).

7:24 Far-reaching ... deep: the spatial metaphor here emphasizes wisdom’s inaccessibility, a frequent theme in wisdom literature; cf. Jb 28; Prv 30:1–4; Sir 24:28–29; Bar 3:14–23.

7:25–29 The emphasis is on the devious designs of human beings in general, reflecting the viewpoint of Genesis.

7:26 More bitter than death ... the woman: warnings against the scheming, adulterous woman are common in ancient wisdom (e.g., Prv 2:16–19, etc.).

8:1–4 The author continues to quote traditional wisdom but then to counter and qualify it. He concedes wisdom’s advantages (v. 1), but then describes the subservience and sometimes demeaning demands required of the sage in the court of the king (vv. 2–4).

8:5–9 The wise exhibit keen insight about human nature and the course of events (vv. 5–6a). Yet their knowledge and wisdom confront certain limits, such as the mystery of evil and the time and inevitability of death (vv. 6b–9).

8:10 This difficult verse seems to contrast the wicked, who die enjoying a good reputation as pious individuals, and the just, who are quietly forgotten.

8:12–17 The author admits that traditional wisdom affirms the long life and success of the just and the short unhappy life of the wicked (vv. 12b–13). But he points out clear exceptions: the wicked who live long, and the just who suffer for no apparent reason (v. 14). His puzzlement and frustration prompt a twofold response: acceptance of whatever joy God chooses to give each day, and honest acknowledgment that no one can discover “the work of God” (cf. 3:11; 7:13; 11:5).

9:1–3 Love from hatred ... everything is the same: God seems to bestow divine favor or disfavor (love or hatred) indiscriminately on the just and wicked alike. More ominously, the arbitrariness and inevitability of death and adversity confront every human being, whether good or bad.

9:4–6 A live dog ... no further recompense: human reason and experience persuaded Qoheleth that death with its finality and annihilating power cruelly negates the supreme value—life, and with it, all possibilities (cf. v. 10). Faith in eternal life has its foundation only in hope and trust in God’s promise and in God’s love.

9:7–10 Go, eat your bread ... enjoy life: the author confesses his inability to imprison God in a fixed and predictable way of acting. Thus he ponders a practical and pragmatic solution: Seize whatever opportunity one has to find joy, if God grants it.

10:1 Dead flies ... a little folly: wisdom is vulnerable to even the smallest amount of folly. The collection of proverbs and sayings in chaps. 10 and 11 demonstrates the author's sharp insight and strengthens his credentials as a sage. It thus adds weight to his critique of the wisdom tradition's tendencies to self-assurance and naive optimism.

10:3 Calls everyone a fool: or, "tells everyone that he (himself) is a fool."

10:4 Calmness: a frequent motif of wisdom; silence and reserve characterize the wise, while boisterousness and impetuosity identify the fool.

10:6–7 A fool ... the rich ... slaves ... princes: another wisdom motif: astonishment at the reversal of the usual order in the world and in human affairs.

10:8–9 A pit ... a wall ... stones ... wood: popular sayings reflecting the need for caution and alertness against the unexpected. Snakes could find a home in the stone walls of ancient Palestine; cf. Am 5:19.

10:10–11 Ax ... success ... snake ... charmer: possession of the proper skill (a form of "wisdom") can ensure success, as in the case of a sharpened ax; but one must use it before it is too late (v. 11). Cf. Sir 12:13.

10:16 A youth: thus too young and inexperienced to govern effectively. Feast in the morning: either concluding a whole night of revelry or beginning a new round of merrymaking.

10:17 For vigor: or, "with self-control, restraint."

10:19 Money answers: a stark reminder that such a life requires money. It could also be an affirmation of the power of wealth: "Money conquers all."

10:20 Birds of the air ... winged creature: a common motif in ancient literature, and a vivid reminder of the need for caution in dealing with the rich and powerful.

11:1–2 These two sayings can be understood against a commercial background. They acknowledge the uncertainty and risk such activity involves. At the same time they encourage action and a spirit of adventure. The first (v. 1) speaks of trade and overseas investment: Export your grain ("bread") to foreign markets and you may be surprised at the substantial profits. The second (v. 2) encourages diversification of investment (seven, or even eight shipments of grain) to insure against heavy losses.

11:3–6 Verses 3, 4, and 6 expand on the theme of uncertainty and human inability to assess accurately every situation. Verse 4, however, comments on the disadvantages of too much caution: Only those willing to risk will enjoy success. But only the Creator knows the mystery of the "work of God" (v. 5).

11:7–10 The concluding part of the book opens with a final bittersweet homage to life and an enthusiastic encouragement to rejoice in its gifts while they are within grasp.

11:10 Fleeting: lit., "vanity."

12:1–7 The homage to life of 11:7–10 is deliberately balanced by the sombre yet shimmering radiance of this poem on old age and death. The poem's enigmatic imagery has often been interpreted allegorically, especially in vv. 3–5. Above all it seeks to evoke an atmosphere as well as an attitude toward death and old age.

12:3–5 An allegorical reading of these verses sees references to the human body—"guardians": the arms; "strong men": the legs; "women who grind": the teeth; "those who look": the eyes; "the doors": the lips; "daughters of song": the voice; "the almond tree blooms": resembling the white hair of old age; "the locust ... sluggish": the stiffness in movement of the aged; "the caper berry": a stimulant for appetite.

12:6 The golden bowl suspended by the silver cord is a symbol of life; the snapping of the cord and the breaking of the bowl, a symbol of death. The pitcher ... the pulley: another pair of metaphors for life and its ending.

12:7 Death is portrayed in terms of the description of creation in Gn 2:7; the body corrupts in the grave, and the life breath (lit., “spirit”), or gift of life, returns to God who had breathed upon what he had formed.

12:9 A disciple briefly describes and praises the master’s skill and reputation as a sage.

12:11 One shepherd: perhaps referring to the book’s author, who gathers or “shepherds” together its contents. God could also be “the one shepherd,” the ultimate depository and source of true wisdom.

12:12 As to more than these: the words seem to refer to the writings of Ecclesiastes and other sages. They are adequate and sufficient; any more involves exhaustive labor.

12:13–14 These words reaffirm traditional wisdom doctrine such as fear of God and faithful obedience, perhaps lest some of the more extreme statements of the author be misunderstood. Although the epilogue has been interpreted as a criticism of the book’s author, it is really a summary that betrays the unruffled spirit of later sages, who were not shocked by Qoheleth’s statements. They honored him as a hakam or sage (v. 9), even as they preserved his statements about the futility of life (v. 8), and the mystery of divine judgment (8:17; 11:5).

The Song of Songs

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8

See RG 303–07

The Song of Songs (or Canticle of Canticles) is an exquisite collection of love lyrics, arranged to tell a dramatic tale of mutual desire and courtship. It presents an inspired portrayal of ideal human love, a resounding affirmation of the goodness of human sexuality that is applicable to the sacredness and the depth of married union.

Although the poem is attributed to Solomon in the traditional title (1:1), the language and style of the work, among other considerations, suggest a time after the end of the Babylonian exile (538 B.C.) when an unknown poet collected extant love poems, perhaps composing new material, and arranged the whole into the masterpiece we have before us. Some scholars argue the possibility of female authorship for at least portions of the Song.

The structure of the Song is difficult to analyze; this translation regards it as a lyric dialogue, with dramatic movement and interest. In both form and content, sections of the Song bear great similarity to the secular love songs of ancient Egypt and the “Sacred Marriage” cult songs of Mesopotamia which celebrate the union between divine partners.

While the lovers in the Song are clearly human figures, both Jewish and Christian traditions across the centuries have adopted “allegorical” interpretations. The Song is seen as a beautiful picture of the ideal Israel, the chosen people whom the Lord leads by degrees to a greater understanding and closer union in the bond of perfect love. Such readings of the Song build on Israel’s covenant tradition. Isaiah (Is 5:1–7; 54:4–8; 62:5), Jeremiah (Jer 2:2, 3, 32), and Ezekiel (Ez 16; 23) all characterize the covenant between the Lord and Israel as a marriage. Hosea the prophet sees the idolatry of Israel in the adultery of Gomer (Hos 1–3). He also represents the Lord speaking to Israel's heart (Hos 2:16) and changing her into a new spiritual people, purified by the Babylonian captivity and betrothed anew to her divine Lover "in justice and uprightness, in love and mercy" (Hos 2:21). Similar imagery has also been used frequently in Jewish mystical texts. The Song offers a welcome corrective to negative applications of the theological metaphor of the marriage/covenant in some prophetic texts. It frequently proclaims a joyous reciprocity between the lovers and highlights the active role of the female partner, now a pure figure to be cherished rather than an adulterous woman to be punished and abused. See also Is 62:3–5.

Christian tradition has followed Israel's example in using marriage as an image for the relationship with God. This image is found extensively in the New Testament (Mt 9:15; 25:1–13; Jn 3:29; 2 Cor 11:2; Eph 5:23–32; Rev 19:7–9; 21:9–11). Thus the Song has been read as a sublime portrayal and praise of this mutual love of the Lord and his people. Christian writers have interpreted the Song in terms of the union between Christ and the Church and of the union between Christ and the individual soul, particularly in the writings of Origen and St. Bernard.

<sup>1</sup>The Song of Songs, * which is Solomon's.

The Woman Speaks of Her Lover

W<sup>2*</sup>a Let him kiss me with kisses of his
mouth,

for your love is better than wine, *

<sup>3</sup>better than the fragrance of your perfumes. *

Your name is a flowing perfume—
therefore young women love you.

4b Draw me after you! Let us run! *

The king has brought me to his bed
chambers.

Let us exult and rejoice in you;
let us celebrate your love: it is beyond wine!

Rightly do they love you!

Love's Boast

W<sup>5</sup>I am black and beautiful,

Daughters of Jerusalem * —

Like the tents of Qedar,
like the curtains of Solomon.

<sup>6</sup>Do not stare at me because I am so black, *

because the sun has burned me.

The sons of my mother were angry
with me;

they charged me with the care of the vineyards:

my own vineyard I did not take care of.

Love's Inquiry

W<sup>7</sup>Tell me, you whom my soul loves,
    where you shepherd,* where you give rest at midday.
Why should I be like one wandering
    after the flocks of your companions?
M<sup>8</sup>If you do not know,
    most beautiful among women,
Follow the tracks of the flock and pasture your lambs*
    near the shepherds' tents.

Love's Vision

M<sup>9</sup>To a mare among Pharaoh's chariotry*
    I compare you, my friend:
10Your cheeks lovely in pendants,
    your neck in jewels.
11We will make pendants of gold for
    you,
    and ornaments of silver.

How Near Is Love!

W<sup>12</sup>While the king was upon his couch, my spikenard* gave forth its fragrance.
13My lover* is to me a sachet of myrrh;
    between my breasts he lies.
14My lover is to me a cluster of henna*
    from the vineyards of En-gedi.
M<sup>15c</sup>How beautiful you are, my friend,
    how beautiful! your eyes are doves!*
W<sup>16</sup>How beautiful you are, my lover—
    handsome indeed!
Verdant indeed is our couch;* <sup>17</sup>the beams of our house are cedars,
    our rafters, cypresses.

CHAPTER 2

W<sup>1</sup>I am a flower of Sharon,*
a lily of the valleys.
M<sup>2</sup>Like a lily among thorns,
so is my friend among women.
W<sup>3</sup>Like an apple tree among the trees of the woods,
so is my lover among men.
In his shadow* I delight to sit,
and his fruit is sweet to my taste.
4d He brought me to the banquet hall*
and his glance at me signaled love.
5e Strengthen me with raisin cakes,* refresh me with apples,
for I am sick with love.
6f His left hand is under my head
and his right arm embraces me.
7g I adjure you, Daughters of Jerusalem,*
by the gazelles and the does of the
field,
Do not awaken, or stir up love
until it is ready.

Her Lover's Visit Remembered

W<sup>8</sup>The sound of my lover! here he comes* springing across the mountains,
leaping across the hills.
9 My lover is like a gazelle*
or a young stag.
See! He is standing behind our wall, gazing through the windows,
peering through the lattices.
10 My lover speaks and says to me,

M“Arise, my friend, my beautiful one,
and come!

<sup>11</sup>For see, the winter is past,
the rains are over and gone.

<sup>12</sup>The flowers appear on the earth,
the time of pruning the vines has
come,
and the song of the turtledove is heard in our land.

<sup>13</sup>The fig tree puts forth its figs,
and the vines, in bloom, give forth
fragrance.

Arise, my friend, my beautiful one,
and come!

<sup>14</sup>My dove in the clefts of the rock,*
in the secret recesses of the cliff, Let me see your face,
let me hear your voice,
For your voice is sweet,
and your face is lovely.”

W<sup>15</sup>Catch us the foxes,* the little foxes that damage the vineyards; for our vineyards are in bloom!

<sup>16h</sup>My lover belongs to me and I to him;
he feeds among the lilies.

<sup>17i</sup>Until the day grows cool* and the shadows flee,
roam, my lover,
Like a gazelle or a young stag
upon the rugged mountains.

CHAPTER 3

See RG 303–07

Loss and Discovery

W<sup>1j</sup> On my bed at night I sought him* whom my soul loves—
I sought him but I did not find him.

2“Let me rise then and go about the city,*
through the streets and squares;
Let me seek him whom my soul
loves.”

I sought him but I did not find him.

3The watchmen found me, as they made their rounds in the
city:
“Him whom my soul loves—have you seen him?”

4k Hardly had I left them when I found him whom my soul loves.*

I held him and would not let him go until I had brought him to my mother’s house,
to the chamber of her who conceived me.

5l I adjure you, Daughters of Jerusalem,
by the gazelles and the does of the
field,

Do not awaken or stir up love
until it is ready.

Solomon’s Wedding Procession

D<sup>6m</sup> Who is this coming up from the desert,*
like columns of smoke Perfumed with myrrh and

frankincense,
with all kinds of exotic powders?
<sup>7</sup>See! it is the litter of Solomon;
sixty valiant men surround it,
of the valiant men of Israel:
<sup>8</sup>All of them expert with the sword,
skilled in battle,
Each with his sword at his side
against the terrors* of the night.
<sup>9</sup>King Solomon made himself an enclosed litter
of wood from Lebanon.
<sup>10</sup>He made its columns of silver,
its roof of gold,
Its seat of purple cloth,
its interior lovingly fitted.* Daughters of Jerusalem, <sup>11</sup>go out and look upon King Solomon
In the crown with which his mother has crowned him
on the day of his marriage,
on the day of the joy of his heart.

CHAPTER 4

See RG 303–07

The Beauty of the Woman

M<sup>1n o</sup> How beautiful you are, my friend, how beautiful you are!

Your eyes are doves
behind your veil.

Your hair is like a flock of goats
streaming down Mount Gilead.*

<sup>2</sup>Your teeth* are like a flock of ewes to be shorn,
that come up from the washing,
All of them big with twins,
none of them barren.

<sup>3</sup>Like a scarlet strand, your lips,
and your mouth—lovely!

Like pomegranate* halves, your cheeks
behind your veil.

<sup>4p</sup> Like a tower of David, your neck,
built in courses,
A thousand shields hanging upon it,
all the armor of warriors.*

<sup>5q</sup> Your breasts are like two fawns,
twins of a gazelle
feeding among the lilies.

<sup>6r</sup> Until the day grows cool
and the shadows flee,
I shall go to the mountain of myrrh,
to the hill of frankincense.*

<sup>7</sup> You are beautiful in every way, my friend,
there is no flaw in you!*

<sup>8</sup> With me from Lebanon, my bride!
With me from Lebanon, come!
Descend from the peak of Amana,

from the peak of Senir and Hermon,*
From the lairs of lions,
from the leopards' heights.
9<sup>s</sup> You have ravished my heart, my sister,* my bride;
you have ravished my heart with
one glance of your eyes,
with one bead of your necklace.
10<sup>t</sup> How beautiful is your love,
my sister, my bride,
How much better is your love than
wine,
and the fragrance of your perfumes
than any spice!
11 Your lips drip honey,* my bride, honey and milk are under your
tongue;
And the fragrance of your garments
is like the fragrance of Lebanon.

The Lover's Garden

M<sup>12u</sup> A garden enclosed, my sister, my bride,
a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed!* 13 Your branches are a grove of pomegranates,
with fruits of choicest yield:
Henna with spikenard,
14 spikenard and saffron,
Sweet cane and cinnamon,
with all kinds of frankincense;
Myrrh and aloes,
with all the finest spices;* 15 A garden fountain, a well of living
water,
streams flowing from Lebanon.
16 Awake,* north wind!
Come, south wind!
Blow upon my garden
that its perfumes may spread abroad.

WLet my lover come to his garden and eat its fruits of choicest yield.

CHAPTER 5

See RG 303–07

M<sup>1v</sup> I have come to my garden, my sister, my bride;
I gather my myrrh with my spices,
I eat my honeycomb with my honey,
I drink my wine with my milk.
D? Eat, friends; drink!
Drink deeply, lovers! *

A Fruitless Search

W<sup>2w</sup> I was sleeping, but my heart was awake. *
The sound of my lover knocking!
“Open to me, my sister, my friend,
my dove, my perfect one!
For my head is wet with dew,
my hair, with the moisture of the night.”
<sup>3</sup> I have taken off my robe, *
am I then to put it on?
I have bathed my feet,
am I then to soil them?
<sup>4</sup> My lover put his hand in through the opening:
my innermost being * trembled
because of him.
<sup>5</sup> I rose to open for my lover,
my hands dripping myrrh:
My fingers, flowing myrrh
upon the handles of the lock.
<sup>6</sup> I opened for my lover—
but my lover had turned and gone!
At his leaving, my soul sank.
I sought him, but I did not find him;
I called out after him, but he did not answer me. *

<sup>7</sup>The watchmen* found me,
as they made their rounds in the
city;
They beat me, they wounded me,
they tore off my mantle,
the watchmen of the walls.
<sup>8x</sup> I adjure you, Daughters of Jerusalem,
if you find my lover
What shall you tell him?
that I am sick with love.

The Lost Lover Described

<sup>D9</sup>How does your lover differ from any other lover,
most beautiful among women?
How does your lover differ from any other,
that you adjure us so?
<sup>w10</sup>My lover is radiant and ruddy;* outstanding among thousands.
<sup>11</sup>His head is gold, pure gold,
his hair like palm fronds,
as black as a raven.
<sup>12</sup>His eyes are like doves
beside streams of water, Bathing in milk,
sitting* by brimming pools.
<sup>13</sup>His cheeks are like beds of spices
yielding aromatic scents;
his lips are lilies
that drip flowing myrrh.
<sup>14</sup>His arms are rods of gold adorned with gems;
His loins, a work of ivory
covered with sapphires.
<sup>15</sup>His legs, pillars of alabaster,
resting on golden pedestals.
His appearance, like the Lebanon,
imposing as the cedars.
<sup>16</sup>His mouth is sweetness itself;

he is delightful in every way.
Such is my lover, and such my friend,
Daughters of Jerusalem!

CHAPTER 6

The Lost Lover Found

D<sup>1</sup>Where has your lover gone,
    most beautiful among women?
Where has your lover withdrawn
    that we may seek him with you? *
W<sup>2y</sup> My lover has come down to his garden, *
    to the beds of spices,
To feed in the gardens
    and to gather lilies.
3z I belong to my lover, and my lover belongs to me;
    he feeds among the lilies.

The Beauty of the Woman

M<sup>4</sup>Beautiful as Tirzah are you, my friend; * fair as Jerusalem,
    fearsome as celestial visions!
5a Turn your eyes away from me,
    for they stir me up.
Your hair is like a flock of goats
    streaming down from Gilead.
6b Your teeth are like a flock of ewes
    that come up from the washing,
All of them big with twins,
    none of them barren.
<sup>7</sup>Like pomegranate halves,
    your cheeks behind your veil.
<sup>8</sup>Sixty are the queens, eighty the concubines,
    and young women without number—

<sup>9</sup>One alone * is my dove, my perfect
one,
her mother's special one,
favorite of the one who bore her.
Daughters see her and call her happy, queens and concubines, and they praise her:
<sup>10c</sup> "Who * is this that comes forth like the dawn,
beautiful as the white moon, pure as
the blazing sun,
fearsome as celestial visions?"

Love's Meeting

<sup>W11d</sup> To the walnut grove * I went down, to see the young growth of the valley;
To see if the vines were in bloom,
if the pomegranates had blossomed.
<sup>12</sup> Before I knew it, my desire had made
me
the blessed one of the prince's people. *

CHAPTER 7

See RG 303–07

The Beauty of the Beloved

D?<sup>1</sup> Turn, turn, O Shulammite! *
turn, turn that we may gaze upon
you!

W How can you gaze upon the Shulammite
as at the dance of the two camps?

M<sup>2</sup> How beautiful are your feet in sandals, *

O noble daughter!

Your curving thighs like jewels,
the product of skilled hands.

<sup>3</sup> Your valley, * a round bowl that should never lack mixed wine.

Your belly, a mound of wheat,
encircled with lilies.

<sup>4e</sup> Your breasts are like two fawns,
twins of a gazelle.

<sup>5f</sup> Your neck like a tower of ivory;
your eyes, pools in Heshbon
by the gate of Bath-rabbim.

Your nose like the tower of Lebanon that looks toward Damascus. *

<sup>6</sup> Your head rises upon you like Carmel; *
your hair is like purple;
a king is caught in its locks.

Love's Desires

<sup>7</sup> How beautiful you are, how fair,
my love, daughter of delights!

<sup>8</sup> Your very form resembles a datepalm, *
and your breasts, clusters.

<sup>9</sup>I thought, "Let me climb the datepalm!

Let me take hold of its branches!

Let your breasts be like clusters of the vine

and the fragrance of your breath like apples,

<sup>10</sup>And your mouth like the best wine—

What flows down smoothly for my lover,

gliding* over my lips and teeth.

his yearning is for me.

<sup>12</sup>Come, my lover! Let us go out to the fields,

let us pass the night among the henna.

<sup>13</sup><sup>h</sup> Let us go early to the vineyards, and see

if the vines are in bloom,

If the buds have opened,

if the pomegranates have blossomed;

There will I give you my love.

<sup>14</sup>The mandrakes* give forth fragrance,

and over our doors are all choice
fruits;

Fruits both fresh and dried, my lover,

have I kept in store for you.

CHAPTER 8

See RG 303–07

<sup>1</sup>Would that you were a brother
to me,
nursed at my mother's breasts!
If I met you out of doors, I would kiss
you
and none would despise me.

<sup>2i</sup> I would lead you, bring you to my mother's house,
where you would teach me,
Where I would give you to drink spiced wine, my pomegranate*
juice.

<sup>3j</sup> His left hand is under my head,
and his right arm embraces me.

<sup>4k</sup> I adjure you, Daughters of Jerusalem,
do not awaken or stir up love
until it is ready!

The Return from the Desert

D?<sup>5l</sup> Who is this coming up from the desert,
leaning upon her lover?
*W*Beneath the apple tree I awakened
you;
there your mother conceived you;
there she who bore you conceived.

True Love

<sup>6</sup>Set me as a seal* upon your heart,
as a seal upon your arm;
For Love is strong as Death,
longing is fierce as Sheol.
Its arrows are arrows of fire,
flames of the divine.

<sup>7m</sup> Deep waters* cannot quench love,
nor rivers sweep it away.
Were one to offer all the wealth of his house for love,
he would be utterly despised.

An Answer to the Brothers

<sup>8</sup>W*“We have a little sister;
she has no breasts as yet.
What shall we do for our sister
on the day she is spoken for?
<sup>9</sup>If she is a wall,
we will build upon her a silver
turret;
But if she is a door,
we will board her up with cedar planks.”
<sup>10</sup>I am a wall,*
and my breasts are like towers.
I became in his eyes
as one who brings peace.

A Boast

<sup>11</sup>M* Solomon had a vineyard at Baalhamon;
he gave over the vineyard to caretakers.
For its fruit one would have to pay a thousand silver pieces.
<sup>12</sup>My vineyard is at my own disposal;
the thousand pieces are for you, Solomon,
and two hundred for the caretakers
of its fruit.

The Lovers' Yearnings

<sup>13</sup>M* You who dwell in the gardens, my companions are listening for your voice—

let me hear it!

W<sup>14n</sup> Swiftly, my lover,
be like a gazelle or a young stag
upon the mountains of spices.

1:1 Song of Songs: in Hebrew and Aramaic the idiom “the X of Xs” denotes the superlative (e.g., “king of kings” = “the highest king”; cf. Dt 10:17; Eccl 1:2; 12:8; Ezr 7:12; Dn 2:37). The ascription of authorship to Solomon is traditional. The heading may also mean “for Solomon” or “about Solomon.”

1:2–8:14 This translation augments the canonical text of the Song with the letters W, M, and D, placed in the margin, to indicate which of the characters in the Song is speaking: the woman, the man, or the “Daughters of Jerusalem.” This interpretive gloss follows an early Christian scribal practice, attested in some Septuagint manuscripts from the first half of the first millennium A.D.

1:2–7 The woman and her female chorus address the man, here viewed as king and shepherd (both are familiar metaphors for God; cf. Ps 23:1; Is 40:11; Jn 10:1–16). There is a wordplay between “kiss” (Hebrew nashaq) and “drink” (shaqah), anticipating 8:1–2. The change from third person (“let him kiss ...”) to second person (“... for your love ...”) is not uncommon in the Song and elsewhere (1:4; 2:4; etc.; Ps 23:1–3, 4–5, 6; etc.) and reflects the woman’s move from interior monologue to direct address to her partner.

1:3 Your perfumes: shemen (perfume) is a play on shem (name).

1:4 Another change, but from second to third person (cf. 1:2). The “king” metaphor recurs in 1:12; 3:5–11; 7:6. Let us exult: perhaps she is addressing young women, calling on them to join in the praise of her lover.

1:5 Daughters of Jerusalem: the woman contrasts herself with the elite city women, who act as her female “chorus” (5:9; 6:1). Qedar: a Syrian desert region whose name suggests darkness; tents were often made of black goat hair. Curtains: tent coverings, or tapestries. Solomon: it could also be read Salma, a region close to Qedar.

1:6 So black: tanned from working outdoors in her brothers’ vineyards, unlike the city women she addresses. My own vineyard: perhaps the woman herself; see 8:8–10 for her relationship to her brothers.

1:7 Shepherd: a common metaphor for kings. Here and elsewhere in the Song (3:1; 5:8; 6:1), the woman expresses her desire to be in the company of her lover. The search for the lover and her failure to find him create a degree of tension. Only at the end (8:5–14) do the lovers finally possess each other.

1:8 Pasture your lambs: both the woman and the man act as shepherds in the Song.

1:9–11 The man compares the woman’s beauty to the rich adornment of the royal chariot of Pharaoh. My friend: a special feminine form of the word “friend,” appearing only in the Song (1:15; 2:2, 10, 13; 4:1, 7; 5:2; 6:4) and used to express endearment and equality in love. Cf. Hos 3:1 for the use of the masculine form of the term in a context with sexual overtones.

1:12 Spikenard: a precious perfumed ointment from India; in 4:13–14, a metaphor for the woman herself.

1:13 My lover: the woman’s favorite term for her partner (used twenty-seven times). Myrrh: an aromatic resin of balsam or roses used in cosmetics, incense, and medicines.

1:14 Henna: a plant which bears white scented flowers, used in cosmetics and medicines. Engedi: a Judean desert oasis overlooking the Dead Sea.

1:15 Doves: doves are pictured in the ancient world as messengers of love.

1:16–17 Continuing the royal metaphor, the meeting place of the lovers, a shepherd's hut of green branches, becomes a palace with beams of cedar and rafters of cypress when adorned with their love.

2:1 Flower of Sharon: probably the narcissus, which grows in the fertile Plain of Sharon lying between Mount Carmel and Jaffa on the Mediterranean coast. Lily: the lotus plant.

2:3 Shadow: suggestive of protection (cf. Jgs 9:15; Ez 17:23; Ps 17:8; 121:5) and, here, of the woman's joy in the presence of her lover.

2:4–6 The banquet hall: the sweet things of the table, the embrace of the woman and man, express the richness of their affection and the intimacy of their love.

2:5 Raisin cakes: perhaps pastries used in the worship of the fertility goddess (cf. Hos 3:1; Jer 7:18; 44:19). Apples: this is the common translation of a fruit that cannot be identified (cf. 2:3; 8:5); it appears frequently in Sumerian love poetry associated with the worship of the goddess Inanna. Sick: love-sickness is a popular motif in ancient love poetry.

2:7 Cf. 3:5; 5:8; 8:4. By the gazelles and the does: perhaps a mitigated invocation of the divinity based on the assonance in Hebrew of the names of these animals with terms for God.

2:8–13 In this sudden change of scene, the woman describes a rendezvous and pictures her lover hastening toward her dwelling until his voice is heard calling her to him.

2:9 Gazelle: a frequent motif in ancient poems from Mesopotamia.

2:14 The woman is addressed as though she were a dove in a mountain cleft out of sight and reach.

2:15 A snatch of song in answer to the request of 2:14; cf. 8:13–14. Foxes: they threaten to disturb the security of vineyards. The vineyards are women sought after by young lovers, i.e., foxes.

2:17 Grows cool: in the evening when the sun is going down. Cf. Gn 3:8. Rugged: Hebrew obscure; some interpret it as a geographical name; others, in the sense of spices (cf. 8:14); still others, of sacrifice (Gn 15:10); the image probably refers here to the woman herself.

3:1–5 See the parallel in 5:2–8.

3:2 The motif of seeking/finding here and elsewhere is used by later Christian and Jewish mystics to speak of the soul's search for the divine.

3:4 Whom my soul loves: the fourfold repetition of this phrase in vv. 1–4 highlights the depth of the woman's emotion and desire. Mother's house: cf. 8:2; a place of safety and intimacy, one which implicitly signifies approval of the lovers' relationship.

3:6–11 This may be an independent poem. In context it portrays the lover as King Solomon, escorted by sixty armed men, coming in royal procession to meet a bride.

3:8 Terrors: cf. Ps 91:5; perhaps bandits lying in wait, unidentified dangers lurking in darkness.

3:10 Lovingly fitted: translation uncertain. The phrase "Daughters of Jerusalem" is read here with the following verse.

4:1 This section (vv. 1–7) begins a wasf, a traditional poetic form describing the physical attributes of one's partner in terms of the natural world (cf. 5:10–16; 6:5b–7; 7:1–7). Veil: women of the region customarily veiled their faces for some occasions (cf. 4:3; 6:7; Gn 24:65–67; 38:14–19).

4:2 Teeth: praised for whiteness and evenness.

4:3 Pomegranate: a fruit with a firm skin and deep red color. The woman's cheek (or perhaps her brow) is compared, in roundness and tint, to a half-pomegranate.

4:4 The ornaments about her neck are compared to the trophies and armaments on the city walls. Cf. 1 Kgs 10:10; 14:26–28; Ez 27:10.

4:6 Mountain of myrrh ... hill of frankincense: spoken figuratively of the woman; cf. 8:14.

4:7 Cf. the description of the church in Eph 5:27.

4:8 Amana ... Senir and Hermon: these rugged heights symbolize obstacles that would separate the lovers; cf. 2:14.

4:9 Sister: a term of endearment; brother-sister language forms part of the conventional language of love used in this canticle, the Book of Tobit, and elsewhere in poetry from Egypt, Mesopotamia, and Syro-Palestine.

4:11 Honey: sweet words (cf. Prv 5:3) or perhaps kisses (1:2–3). Honey and milk: familiar descriptions for the fertile promised land (Ex 3:8, 17; Lv 20:24; Nm 13:27; Dt 6:3).

4:12 Garden enclosed ... fountain sealed: reserved for the lover alone. Cf. Prv 5:15–19 for similar images used to describe fruitful, committed relationship.

4:14 These plants are all known for their sweet fragrance.

4:16 Awake: the same verb is used of love in 3:5. The woman may be the speaker of 16a, as it is she who issues the invitation of 16b. His garden: the woman herself.

5:1 Eat ... lovers: the translation and meaning are uncertain.

5:2–8 An experience of anticipation and loss similar to that in 3:1–5. The lover's abrupt appearance resembles that in 2:8–9.

5:3 Robe: knee-length undergarment worn by men and women. Am I then ... ?: the woman's refusal is a form of gentle teasing; that she does not really reject her lover is shown by her actions in vv. 5–6. See 1:7–8; 2:14–15, for other teasing interchanges.

5:4 My innermost being: lit., “innards.” In Gn 25:23; Is 49:1; Ps 71:6, the word appears to carry the meaning of “womb.”

5:6 The motif of the locked-out lover is common in classical Greek and Latin poetry.

5:7 The watchmen: they do not know the reason for the woman's appearance in the city streets; cf. 3:2–4.

5:10–11 In answer to the question of 5:9 the woman sings her lover's praises (vv. 10–16). Ruddy: also used of David (1 Sm 16:12; 17:42). Gold: indicates how precious the lover is. Palm fronds: his thick, luxuriant growth of hair.

5:12 Sitting ... : the translation of this line is uncertain; it may continue the metaphor of the lover's eyes, or refer to another part of his anatomy (e.g., teeth) which has been omitted from the text.

6:1 The Daughters of Jerusalem are won by this description of the lover and offer their aid in seeking him (cf. 5:6, 9).

6:2–3 The woman implies here that she had never really lost her lover, for he has come down to his garden (cf. 2:16; 4:5). Feed ... lilies: the imagery here evokes both a shepherd pasturing his flocks and erotic play between the lovers (2:16; 4:5, 12, 16).

6:4–9 The man again celebrates the woman's beauty. Tirzah: probably meaning “pleasant”; it was the early capital of the Northern Kingdom of Israel (1 Kgs 16). Celestial visions: the meaning is uncertain. Military images may be implied here, i.e., the “heavenly hosts” who fight along with God on Israel's behalf (cf. Jgs 5:20), or perhaps a reference to the awesome goddesses of the region who combined aspects of both fertility and war.

6:9 One alone: the incomparability of the woman is a favorite motif in love poetry.

6:10 “Who ... “: the speakers may be the women of vv. 8–9. Moon ... sun: lit., “the white” and “the hot,” respectively (cf. Is 24:23; 30:26). Fearsome: see note on 6:4–9.

6:11 Walnut grove: also a site of activity in a wedding hymn of the Syrian moon goddess Nikkal (cf. the woman compared to the moon in v. 10).

6:12 The text is obscure in Hebrew and in the ancient versions. The Vulgate reads: “I did not know; my soul disturbed me because of the chariots of Aminadab.” Based on a parallel in Jgs 5:24, “chariots” is here emended to “blessed one.”

7:1 Shulammitte: the woman is so designated because she is considered to be from Shulam (or Shunem) in the plain of Esdraelon (cf. 1 Kgs 1:3), or because the name may mean “the peaceful one,” and thus recall the name of Solomon. Turn: she is asked to face the speaker(s). How ... : she refuses to be regarded as a spectacle (“the dance of the two camps” is unknown). Some interpret the episode as an invitation to her to dance.

7:2–6 Another description of the woman’s charms. Sandals: the woman’s sandaled foot was apparently considered quite seductive (Jdt 16:9). Noble: a possible connection to the enigmatic “prince” of 6:12. Curving ... jewels: the meaning of these Hebrew words is not certain. Wine and wheat suggest fertility.

7:3 Valley: lit., navel; a discreet allusion to her sex.

7:5 The comparison emphasizes the stateliness of her neck, and the clarity of her eyes. Bath-rabbim: a proper name which occurs only here; there was a city of Rabbah northeast of Heshbon in Transjordan. Cf. Jer 49:3.

7:6 Carmel: a prominent set of cliffs overlooking the Mediterranean.

7:8–9 Date-palm: a figure of stateliness. The lover is eager to enjoy the possession of his beloved.

7:10 Gliding: the beloved interrupts her partner’s compliment by referring to the intoxication of their union. The translation rests on an emendation of the enigmatic “the lips of the sleepers.”

7:11–14 The woman’s answer assures him of her love, and invites him to return with her to the rural delights associated with their love (cf. also 6:11–12). Yearning: used only here and in Gn 3:16; 4:7. The dependency and subordination of woman to man presented as a consequence of sin in the Genesis story is here transcended in the mutuality of true love.

7:14 Mandrakes: herbs believed to have power to arouse love and promote fertility; cf. Gn 30:14–16.

8:2 Wine ... pomegranate: sexual connotations are implied, since the root “drink” (shaqah) is a wordplay on “kiss” (nashaq) in v. 1; cf. 1:2.

8:5 Awakened you: the speakers in this verse are difficult to identify. Someone (the poet? Daughters?) hails the couple in v. 5a. According to the Masoretic vocalization, the woman is the speaker in v. 5b.

8:6 Seal: this could be worn bound to the arm, as here, or suspended at the neck, or as a ring (Jer 22:24). It was used for identification and signatures. Strong ... fierce: in human experience, Death and Sheol are inevitable, unrelenting; in the end they always triumph. Love, which is just as certain of its victory, matches its strength against the natural enemies of life; waters cannot extinguish it nor floods carry it away. It is more priceless than all riches. Flames of the divine: the Hebrew is difficult: the short form (–Yah) of the divine name Yhwh found here may associate love with the Lord, or it may be acting as a superlative—i.e., god-sized flames.

8:7 Deep waters: often used to designate chaos (Ps 93:4; 144:7; Is 17:12–13; Hb 3:15). The fires of love cannot be extinguished, even by waters of chaos. Wealth: love cannot be bought.

8:8–9 The woman quotes the course of action her elder brothers had decided on. While she is yet immature, they will shelter her in view of eventual marriage. Wall ... door: if she is virtuous, she will be honored; if she is not, she will be kept under strict vigilance. Silver turret: a precious ornament.

8:10 In reply to the officious and meddling attitude of the brothers, she answers with their terms: she is mature (“wall,” “towers”). Brings peace: or, “finds peace.”

8:11–12 These enigmatic verses have been variously interpreted, depending on who is taken to be the speaker. In v. 11, if the woman, she boasts that she is a vineyard of great value. If the man, he boasts over his possession of her.

8:13–14 As in 2:14, her lover asks for a word or a song and she replies in words similar to those found in 2:17.

See RG 308–12

The Book of Wisdom was written about fifty years before the coming of Christ. Its author, whose name is not known to us, was probably a member of the Jewish community at Alexandria, in Egypt. He wrote in Greek, in a style patterned on that of Hebrew verse. At times he speaks in the person of Solomon, placing his teachings on the lips of the wise king of Hebrew tradition in order to emphasize their value. His profound knowledge of the earlier Old Testament writings is reflected in almost every line of the book, and marks him, like Ben Sira, as an outstanding representative of religious devotion and learning among the sages of postexilic Judaism.

The primary purpose of the author was the edification of his co-religionists in a time when they had experienced suffering and oppression, in part at least at the hands of apostate fellow Jews. To convey his message he made use of the most popular religious themes of his time, namely the splendor and worth of divine wisdom (6:22–11:1), the glorious events of the exodus (11:2–16; 12:23–27; 15:18–19:22), God's mercy (11:17–12:22), the folly of idolatry (13:1–15:17), and the manner in which God's justice operates in rewarding or punishing the individual (1:1–6:21). The first ten chapters in particular provide background for the teaching of Jesus and for some New Testament theology about Jesus. Many passages from this section of the book, notably 3:1–8, are used by the church in the liturgy.

The principal divisions of the Book of Wisdom are:

- I. The Reward of Righteousness (1:1–6:21).
- II. Praise of Wisdom by Solomon (6:22–11:1).
- III. Special Providence of God During the Exodus (11:2–16; 12:23–27; 15:18–19:22) with digressions on God's mercy (11:17–12:22) and on the folly and shame of idolatry (13:1–15:17).

I. The Reward of Righteousness*

CHAPTER 1

See RG 309–10

Exhortation to Righteousness, the Key to Life

<sup>1</sup>Love righteousness, * you who judge the earth; <sup>a</sup>
think of the LORD in goodness,
and seek him in integrity of heart; <sup>b</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Because he is found by those who do not test him,
and manifests himself to those who do not disbelieve him. <sup>c</sup>

<sup>3</sup>For perverse counsels separate people from God,
and his power, put to the proof,
rebukes the foolhardy; <sup>d</sup>

<sup>4*</sup>Because into a soul that plots evil wisdom does not enter,
nor does she dwell in a body under debt of sin. <sup>e</sup>

<sup>5</sup>For the holy spirit of discipline * flees
deceit
and withdraws from senseless counsels
and is rebuked when unrighteousness occurs. <sup>f</sup>

yet she does not acquit blasphemous
lips;
Because God is the witness of the inmost
self <sup>g</sup>
and the sure observer of the heart and the listener to the tongue. <sup>h</sup>

<sup>7</sup>For the spirit of the LORD fills the world, <sup>i</sup>
is all-embracing, and knows whatever is said.

<sup>8</sup>Therefore those who utter wicked things will not go unnoticed,

nor will chastising condemnation pass
them by.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>9</sup>For the devices of the wicked shall be scrutinized,
and the sound of their words shall reach the LORD,
for the chastisement of their transgressions;

<sup>10</sup>Because a jealous ear hearkens to everything,<sup>k</sup>
and discordant grumblings are not secret.

<sup>11</sup>Therefore guard against profitless grumbling,
and from calumny* withhold your
tongues;

For a stealthy utterance will not go
unpunished,
and a lying mouth destroys the soul.

<sup>12</sup>Do not court death* by your erring way of life,
nor draw to yourselves destruction by the works of your hands.

<sup>13</sup>Because God did not make death,<sup>l</sup> nor does he rejoice in the destruction of the living.

<sup>14</sup>For he fashioned all things that they might have being,
and the creatures of the world are wholesome;

There is not a destructive drug among them
nor any domain of Hades* on earth,

<sup>15</sup>For righteousness is undying.<sup>* m</sup>

The Wicked Reject Immortality and Righteousness Alike

<sup>16</sup>It was the wicked who with hands and words invited death,
considered it a friend, and pined for it,

and made a covenant with it,
Because they deserve to be allied with it.<sup>n</sup>

CHAPTER 2

See RG 309–10

<sup>1</sup>For, not thinking rightly, they said among themselves:*

“Brief and troubled is our lifetime;<sup>o</sup>
there is no remedy for our dying,
nor is anyone known to have come back from Hades.

<sup>2</sup>For by mere chance were we born,
and hereafter we shall be as though we had not been;
Because the breath in our nostrils is smoke,
and reason a spark from the beating of
our hearts,

<sup>3</sup>And when this is quenched, our body will be ashes
and our spirit will be poured abroad
like empty air.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Even our name will be forgotten in time,
and no one will recall our deeds.
So our life will pass away like the traces of a cloud,
and will be dispersed like a mist Pursued by the sun’s rays
and overpowered by its heat.

<sup>5</sup>For our lifetime is the passing of a shadow;
and our dying cannot be deferred
because it is fixed with a seal; and no one returns.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Come, therefore, let us enjoy the good things that are here,
and make use of creation with youthful zest.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Let us have our fill of costly wine and
perfumes,
and let no springtime blossom pass us
by;

- <sup>8</sup>let us crown ourselves with rosebuds
before they wither.
- <sup>9</sup>Let no meadow be free from our wantonness;
everywhere let us leave tokens of our
merriment,
for this is our portion, and this our lot.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Let us oppress the righteous poor;
let us neither spare the widow nor revere the aged for hair grown white with time.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>But let our strength be our norm of
righteousness;
for weakness proves itself useless.
- <sup>12*</sup> Let us lie in wait for the righteous one,
because he is annoying to us;
he opposes our actions,
Reproaches us for transgressions of the law*
and charges us with violations of our training.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>He professes to have knowledge of God and styles himself a child of the LORD.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>To us he is the censure of our thoughts;
merely to see him is a hardship for us,<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>15</sup>Because his life is not like that of others,
and different are his ways.
- <sup>16</sup>He judges us debased;
he holds aloof from our paths as from things impure.
He calls blest the destiny of the righteous and boasts that God is his Father.<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>17</sup>Let us see whether his words be true;
let us find out what will happen to him
in the end.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>18</sup>For if the righteous one is the son of God, God will help him and deliver him from the hand of his foes.<sup>z</sup>

19 With violence and torture let us put him
to the test
that we may have proof of his gentleness
and try his patience.

20 Let us condemn him to a shameful death;
for according to his own words, God
will take care of him.”<sup>a</sup>

21 These were their thoughts, but they erred;
for their wickedness blinded them,<sup>b</sup>

22* And they did not know the hidden counsels of God;
neither did they count on a recompense for holiness
nor discern the innocent souls’ reward.<sup>c</sup>

23 For God formed us to be imperishable;
the image of his own nature he made us.<sup>d</sup>

24 But by the envy* of the devil, death
entered the world,
and they who are allied with him
experience it.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 3

See RG 309–10

The Hidden Counsels of God*

*A. On Suffering**

<sup>1</sup>The souls of the righteous are in the hand of God,<sup>f</sup>
and no torment shall touch them.

<sup>2</sup>They seemed, in the view of the foolish,
to be dead;
and their passing away was thought an affliction

<sup>3</sup>and their going forth from us, utter destruction.

But they are in peace.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>4</sup>For if to others, indeed, they seem punished,
yet is their hope full of immortality;

<sup>5</sup>Chastised a little, they shall be greatly
blessed,
because God tried them
and found them worthy of himself.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>6</sup>As gold in the furnace, he proved them, and as sacrificial offerings* he took them to himself.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>7</sup>In the time of their judgment* they shall shine
and dart about as sparks through stubble;<sup>j</sup>

<sup>8</sup>They shall judge nations and rule over
peoples,
and the LORD shall be their King forever.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Those who trust in him shall understand truth,
and the faithful shall abide with him in love:

Because grace and mercy are with his holy ones,<sup>l</sup>
and his care is with the elect.
<sup>10</sup>But the wicked shall receive a punishment to match their thoughts,* since they neglected righteousness and forsook the LORD.
<sup>11</sup>For those who despise wisdom and instruction are doomed.<sup>m</sup> Vain is their hope, fruitless their labors, and worthless their works.<sup>n</sup> <sup>12</sup>Their wives are foolish and their children
wicked,
accursed their brood.<sup>o</sup>

B. On Childlessness*

<sup>13</sup>Yes, blessed is she who, childless and undefiled,
never knew transgression of the marriage bed;
for she shall bear fruit at the judgment of souls.* <sup>14</sup>So also the eunuch whose hand wrought
no misdeed,
who held no wicked thoughts against
the LORD —
For he shall be given fidelity's choice reward*
and a more gratifying heritage in the LORD's temple.<sup>p</sup> <sup>15</sup>For the fruit of noble struggles is a glorious one;
and unfailing is the root of understanding.<sup>* q</sup> <sup>16</sup>But the children of adulterers* will remain without issue,
and the progeny of an unlawful bed

will disappear.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>17</sup>For should they attain long life, they will be held in no esteem,
and dishonored will their old age be in
the end;

<sup>18</sup>Should they die abruptly, they will have no hope
nor comfort in the day of scrutiny;

<sup>19</sup>for dire is the end of the wicked generation.<sup>s</sup>

CHAPTER 4

See RG 309–10

- <sup>1</sup>Better is childlessness with virtue;
for immortal is the memory of virtue, acknowledged both by God and human beings.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>When it is present people imitate it,
and they long for it when it is gone;
Forever it marches crowned in triumph,
victorious in unsullied deeds of valor.
- <sup>3</sup>But the numerous progeny of the wicked
shall be of no avail;
their spurious offshoots shall not strike
deep root
nor take firm hold.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>For even though their branches flourish
for a time,
they are unsteady and shall be rocked
by the wind
and, by the violence of the winds, uprooted;<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>Their twigs shall be broken off untimely,
their fruit useless, unripe for eating,
fit for nothing.
- <sup>6</sup>For children born of lawless unions give evidence of the wickedness of their parents, when they are examined.

C. On Early Death*

- <sup>7</sup>But the righteous one, though he die
early, shall be at rest.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>For the age that is honorable comes not with the passing of time,<sup>x</sup> nor can it be measured in terms of years.

<sup>9</sup>Rather, understanding passes for gray hair,
and an unsullied life is the attainment of old age.

<sup>10*</sup>The one who pleased God was loved,<sup>y</sup> living among sinners, was transported—

<sup>11</sup>Snatched away, lest wickedness pervert his mind
or deceit beguile his soul;<sup>z</sup>

<sup>12</sup>For the witchery of paltry things obscures what is right and the whirl of desire transforms the innocent mind.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Having become perfect in a short while,
he reached the fullness of a long career;

<sup>14</sup>for his soul was pleasing to the LORD, therefore he sped him out of the midst of wickedness.<sup>b</sup>

But the people saw and did not understand,
nor did they take that consideration
into account.*

<sup>16</sup>Yes, the righteous one who has died will condemn
the sinful who live;
And youth, swiftly completed, will condemn
the many years of the unrighteous who have grown old.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>17</sup>For they will see the death of the wise
one
and will not understand what the LORD intended,
or why he kept him safe.

<sup>18</sup>They will see, and hold him in contempt;
but the LORD will laugh them to scorn.<sup>d</sup>

19 And they shall afterward become dishonored corpses<sup>e</sup> and an unceasing mockery among the dead.
For he shall strike them down speechless
and prostrate<sup>f</sup>
and rock them to their foundations;
They shall be utterly laid waste and shall be in grief
and their memory shall perish.

The Judgment of the Wicked

20 Fearful shall they come, at the counting up of their sins,
and their lawless deeds shall convict
them to their face.

CHAPTER 5

See RG 309–10

<sup>1*</sup>Then shall the righteous one with great assurance confront<sup>g</sup> his oppressors who set at nought his labors.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Seeing this, the wicked shall be shaken
with dreadful fear,
and be amazed at the unexpected
salvation.

<sup>3</sup>They shall say among themselves, rueful
and groaning through anguish of spirit:

“This is the one whom once we held as a laughingstock
and as a type for mockery,

<sup>4</sup>fools that we were!
His life we accounted madness,
and death dishonored.

<sup>5</sup>See how he is accounted among the heavenly beings;*
how his lot is with the holy ones!<sup>i</sup>

<sup>6</sup>We, then, have strayed from the way of truth,<sup>j</sup>
and the light of righteousness did not shine for us,
and the sun did not rise for us.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>7</sup>We were entangled in the thorns of mischief and of ruin;
we journeyed through trackless deserts,
but the way of the LORD we never knew.

<sup>8</sup>What did our pride avail us?
What have wealth and its boastfulness afforded us?<sup>l</sup>

<sup>9</sup>All of them passed like a shadow and like a fleeting rumor;<sup>m</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Like a ship traversing the heaving water:
when it has passed, no trace can be found,
no path of its keel in the waves.

<sup>11</sup>Or like a bird flying through the air;
no evidence of its course is to be found—

But the fluid air, lashed by the beating of pinions,
and cleft by the rushing force
Of speeding wings, is traversed;
and afterward no mark of passage can be found in it.

<sup>12</sup>Or as, when an arrow has been shot at a mark,
the parted air straightway flows
together again
so that none discerns the way it went—

<sup>13</sup>Even so, once born, we abruptly came to nought
and held no sign of virtue to display, but were consumed in our wickedness.”<sup>n</sup>

<sup>14*</sup>Yes, the hope of the wicked is like chaff borne by the wind,
and like fine, storm-driven snow;
Like smoke scattered by the wind, and like the passing memory of the nomad camping for a single day.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>15</sup>But the righteous live forever,
and in the LORD is their recompense, and the thought of them is with the Most High.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Therefore shall they receive the splendid
crown,
the beautiful diadem, from the hand of
the LORD,
For he will shelter them with his right
hand,
and protect them with his arm.<sup>q</sup>

17 He shall take his zeal for armor<sup>r</sup>
and arm creation to requite the enemy,

18 Shall put on righteousness for a breastplate,
wear sure judgment for a helmet,

19 Shall take invincible holiness for a shield,<sup>s</sup>

20 and sharpen his sudden anger for a sword.

The universe will war with him against the foolhardy;

21 Well-aimed bolts of lightning will go forth and from the clouds will leap to the mark as from a well-drawn bow;<sup>t</sup>

22 and as from a sling, wrathful hailstones shall be hurled.

The waters of the sea will be enraged and flooding rivers will overwhelm them;<sup>u</sup>

23 A mighty wind will confront them
and winnow them like a tempest;

Thus lawlessness will lay waste the whole earth
and evildoing overturn the thrones of the mighty.<sup>v</sup>

CHAPTER 6

See RG 309–11

Exhortation to Seek Wisdom*

<sup>1</sup>Hear, therefore, kings, and understand;<sup>w</sup> learn, you magistrates* of the earth's expanse!

<sup>2</sup>Give ear, you who have power over multitudes
and lord it over throngs of peoples!

<sup>3</sup>Because authority was given you by the Lord
and sovereignty by the Most High,
who shall probe your works and scrutinize your counsels!<sup>x</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Because, though you were ministers of his kingdom, you did not judge
rightly,
and did not keep the law,*
nor walk according to the will of God,

<sup>5</sup>Terribly and swiftly he shall come against you,
because severe judgment awaits the
exalted—

<sup>6</sup>For the lowly may be pardoned out of Mercy<sup>y</sup>
but the mighty shall be mightily put to the test.

<sup>7</sup>For the Ruler of all shows no partiality, nor does he fear greatness,<sup>z</sup> Because he himself made the great as well as the small,
and provides for all alike;

<sup>8</sup>but for those in power a rigorous scrutiny impends.

<sup>9</sup>To you, therefore, O princes, are my words addressed<sup>a</sup> that you may learn wisdom and that you may not fall away.

10 For those who keep the holy precepts hallowed will be found holy,
and those learned in them will have ready a response.*

11 Desire therefore my words;
long for them and you will be instructed.

12 Resplendent and unfading is Wisdom, and she is readily perceived by those who love her,
and found by those who seek her.<sup>b</sup>

13 She hastens to make herself known to those who desire her;<sup>c</sup>

14 one who watches for her at dawn will not be disappointed,
for she will be found sitting at the gate.

15 For setting your heart on her is the perfection of prudence, and whoever keeps vigil for her is quickly free from care;

16 Because she makes her rounds, seeking those worthy of her,
and graciously appears to them on the
way,
and goes to meet them with full attention.<sup>d</sup>

17* For the first step toward Wisdom is an earnest desire for discipline;<sup>e</sup>

18 then, care for discipline is love of her;
love means the keeping of her laws;
To observe her laws is the basis for incorruptibility;

19 and incorruptibility makes one close to
God;

20 thus the desire for Wisdom leads to a kingdom.

<sup>21</sup>If, then, you find pleasure in throne and scepter, you princes of peoples, honor Wisdom, that you may reign as kings forever.

II. Praise of Wisdom by Solomon*

Introduction

<sup>22</sup>Now what wisdom is, and how she came to be I shall proclaim;
and I shall conceal no secrets from you,
But from the very beginning I shall search out
and bring to light knowledge of her;
I shall not diverge from the truth.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>23</sup>Neither shall I admit consuming jealousy
to my company,
because that can have no fellowship
with Wisdom.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>24</sup>A multitude of the wise is the safety of the world,
and a prudent king, the stability of the people;<sup>h</sup>

<sup>25</sup>so take instruction from my words, to your profit.

CHAPTER 7

See RG 310–11

Solomon Is Like All Others

- <sup>1</sup>I too am a mortal, the same as all the rest,<sup>i</sup>
and a descendant of the first one formed of earth.*
And in my mother's womb I was molded into flesh <sup>2</sup>in a ten-month period*—body and
blood,
from the seed of a man, and the pleasure that accompanies marriage.
<sup>3</sup>And I too, when born, inhaled the common air,
and fell upon the kindred earth;
wailing, I uttered that first sound
common to all.
<sup>4</sup>In swaddling clothes and with constant care I was nurtured.
<sup>5</sup>For no king has any different origin or birth;
<sup>6</sup>one is the entry into life for all,
and in one same way they leave it.<sup>j</sup>

Solomon Prayed and Wisdom and Riches Came to Him

- <sup>7</sup>Therefore I prayed, and prudence was given me;
I pleaded and the spirit of Wisdom
came to me.<sup>k</sup>
<sup>8</sup>I preferred her to scepter and throne,<sup>l</sup>
And deemed riches nothing in comparison with her, <sup>9</sup>nor did I liken any priceless gem to

her;
Because all gold, in view of her, is a bit
of sand,
and before her, silver is to be accounted mire.
<sup>10</sup>Beyond health and beauty I loved her,
And I chose to have her rather than the
light,
because her radiance never ceases. <sup>m</sup> <sup>11</sup>Yet all good things together came to me with her, <sup>n</sup>
and countless riches at her hands; <sup>12</sup>I rejoiced in them all, because Wisdom is their leader,
though I had not known that she is their mother. <sup>* o</sup>

Solomon Prays for Help to Speak Worthily of Wisdom

<sup>13</sup>Sincerely I learned about her, and ungrudgingly do I share—
her riches I do not hide away; <sup>p</sup> <sup>14</sup>For she is an unfailing treasure;
those who gain this treasure win the friendship of God,
being commended by the gifts that come from her discipline. * <sup>15</sup>Now God grant I speak suitably and value these endowments at their
worth:
For he is the guide of Wisdom
and the director of the wise.
<sup>16</sup>For both we and our words are in his
hand,
as well as all prudence and knowledge of crafts. <sup>q</sup> <sup>17*</sup>For he gave me sound knowledge of what exists,
that I might know the structure of the universe and the force of its elements,

<sup>18</sup>The beginning and the end and the midpoint of times,
the changes in the sun's course and the variations of the seasons,
<sup>19</sup>Cycles of years, positions of stars, <sup>20</sup>natures of living things, tempers of beasts,
Powers of the winds and thoughts of
human beings,
uses of plants and virtues of roots—
<sup>21</sup>Whatever is hidden or plain I learned, <sup>22</sup>for Wisdom, the artisan of all, taught me.<sup>r</sup>

Nature and Incomparable Dignity of Wisdom

* For in her is a spirit intelligent, holy, unique, Manifold, subtle, agile,
clear, unstained, certain,
Never harmful, loving the good, keen,<sup>s</sup> <sup>23</sup>unhampered, beneficent, kindly,
Firm, secure, tranquil,
all-powerful, all-seeing,
And pervading all spirits,
though they be intelligent, pure and very subtle.

<sup>24</sup>For Wisdom is mobile beyond all motion,
and she penetrates and pervades all things by reason of her purity.<sup>t</sup> <sup>25</sup>* For she is a breath of the might of God and a pure emanation of the glory of the Almighty;
therefore nothing defiled can enter into
her.

<sup>26</sup>For she is the reflection of eternal light, the spotless mirror of the power of

God,
the image of his goodness.<sup>u</sup>

27 Although she is one, she can do all
things,
and she renews everything while herself perduring;
Passing into holy souls from age to age,
she produces friends of God and prophets.<sup>v</sup>

28 For God loves nothing so much as the one who dwells with Wisdom.

29 For she is fairer than the sun<sup>w</sup> and surpasses every constellation of the stars.

Compared to light, she is found more radiant;

30 though night supplants light, wickedness does not prevail over Wisdom.

CHAPTER 8

See RG 310–11

<sup>1</sup>Indeed, she spans the world from end to end mightily
and governs all things well.<sup>x</sup>

Wisdom, the Source of Blessings

<sup>2</sup>Her I loved and sought after from my
youth;
I sought to take her for my bride*
and was enamored of her beauty.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>3</sup>She adds to nobility the splendor of companionship with God;
even the Ruler of all loved her.

<sup>4</sup>For she leads into the understanding of God,
and chooses his works.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>5</sup>If riches are desirable in life, what is richer than Wisdom, who produces all things?<sup>a</sup>

<sup>6</sup>And if prudence is at work,<sup>b</sup>
who in the world is a better artisan than she?

<sup>7</sup>Or if one loves righteousness,
whose works are virtues,
She teaches moderation and
prudence,
righteousness and fortitude,*
and nothing in life is more useful than these.

<sup>8</sup>Or again, if one yearns for wide experience,
she knows the things of old, and infers
the things to come.
She understands the turns of phrases and
the solutions of riddles;

signs and wonders she knows in advance
and the outcome of times and ages.<sup>c</sup>

Wisdom as Solomon's Counselor and Comfort

<sup>9</sup>So I determined to take her to live with
me,
knowing that she would be my counselor while all was well,
and my comfort in care and grief.

<sup>10</sup>Because of her I have glory among the multitudes,<sup>d</sup> and esteem from the elders, though I am but a youth.

<sup>11</sup>I shall become keen in judgment,
and shall be a marvel before rulers.

<sup>12</sup>They will wait while I am silent and listen when I speak;
and when I shall speak the more,
they will put their hands upon their mouths.*

<sup>13</sup>Because of her I shall have immortality and leave to those after me an everlasting memory.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>14</sup>I shall govern peoples, and nations will be my subjects—<sup>f</sup>

<sup>15</sup>tyrannical princes, hearing of me, will be afraid;
in the assembly I shall appear noble,
and in war courageous.

<sup>16</sup>Entering my house, I shall take my repose beside her;

For association with her involves no
bitterness
and living with her no grief,
but rather joy and gladness.<sup>g</sup>

Wisdom Is a Gift of God

<sup>17</sup> Reflecting on these things, and considering in my heart
That immortality lies in kinship with Wisdom,<sup>h</sup>

<sup>18</sup> great delight in love of her,
and unfailing riches in the works of her hands;
And that in associating with her there is
prudence,
and fair renown in sharing her discourses,
I went about seeking to take her for my own.

<sup>19*</sup> Now, I was a well-favored child,
and I came by a noble nature;
<sup>20</sup> or rather, being noble, I attained an unblemished body.

<sup>21</sup> And knowing that I could not otherwise possess her unless God gave it—and this, too, was prudence, to know whose gift she is—

I went to the LORD and besought him,<sup>i</sup>
and said with all my heart:

CHAPTER 9

See RG 310–11

Solomon's Prayer*

<sup>1*</sup> God of my ancestors, Lord of mercy,<sup>j</sup>
you who have made all things by your word<sup>k</sup>

<sup>2</sup> And in your wisdom have established humankind
to rule the creatures produced by you,<sup>l</sup>

<sup>3</sup> And to govern the world in holiness and
righteousness,
and to render judgment in integrity of heart.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Give me Wisdom, the consort at your
throne,
and do not reject me from among your children;<sup>n</sup>

<sup>5</sup> For I am your servant, the child of your maidservant,
a man weak and short-lived and lacking in comprehension of judgment and of laws.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Indeed, though one be perfect among
mortals,
if Wisdom, who comes from you, be lacking,
that one will count for nothing.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>7</sup> You have chosen me king over your
people
and magistrate over your sons and daughters.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>8</sup> You have bid me build a temple on your holy mountain
and an altar in the city that is your dwelling place,

a copy of the holy tabernacle which you had established from of old.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Now with you is Wisdom, who knows your works
and was present when you made the world;

Who understands what is pleasing in your eyes
and what is conformable with your commands.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Send her forth from your holy heavens and from your glorious throne dispatch
her
That she may be with me and work with
me,
that I may know what is pleasing to you.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For she knows and understands all things, and will guide me prudently in my affairs
and safeguard me by her glory;<sup>u</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Thus my deeds will be acceptable, and I will judge your people justly and be worthy of my father's throne.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>13</sup>For who knows God's counsel, or who can conceive what the Lord intends?<sup>w</sup>

<sup>14</sup>For the deliberations of mortals are timid,
and uncertain our plans.

<sup>15*</sup>For the corruptible body burdens the
soul
and the earthly tent weighs down the mind with its many concerns.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Scarcely can we guess the things on
earth,
and only with difficulty grasp what is
at hand;
but things in heaven, who can search
them out?<sup>y</sup>

17 Or who can know your counsel, unless you give Wisdom
and send your holy spirit from on high?<sup>z</sup>

18* Thus were the paths of those on earth
made straight,
and people learned what pleases you,
and were saved by Wisdom.<sup>a</sup>

Wisdom Preserves Her Followers

- <sup>1</sup>She preserved the first-formed father* of the world<sup>b</sup>
when he alone had been created;<sup>c</sup>
And she raised him up from his fall, <sup>2</sup>and gave him power to rule all things.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>But when an unrighteous man* withdrew from her in his anger,
he perished through his fratricidal wrath.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>When on his account the earth was flooded, Wisdom again saved it, piloting the righteous man* on frailest
wood.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>She, when the nations were sunk in universal wickedness,
knew the righteous man,* kept him
blameless before God,
and preserved him resolute against pity for his child.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>She rescued a righteous man* from among the wicked who were being destroyed,<sup>h</sup>
when he fled as fire descended upon the Pentapolis—
- <sup>7</sup>Where as a testimony to its wickedness,
even yet there remain a smoking desert,
Plants bearing fruit that never ripens,
and the tomb of a disbelieving soul,* a standing pillar of salt.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>For those who forsook Wisdom
not only were deprived of knowledge of the good,

But also left the world a memorial of their folly,
so that they could not even be hidden
in their fall.

<sup>9</sup>But Wisdom rescued from tribulations those who served her.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>10</sup>She, when a righteous man* fled from his brother's anger,<sup>k</sup>
guided him in right ways, Showed him the kingdom of God
and gave him knowledge of holy things;
She prospered him in his labors and made abundant the fruit of his works,

<sup>11</sup>Stood by him against the greed of his defrauders,
and enriched him;<sup>l</sup>

<sup>12</sup>She preserved him from foes,
and secured him against ambush,
And she gave him the prize for his hard struggle
that he might know that devotion to God* is mightier than all else.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>13</sup>She did not abandon a righteous man* when he was sold,<sup>n</sup>
but rescued him from sin.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>14</sup>She went down with him into the dungeon,
and did not desert him in his bonds,
Until she brought him the scepter of royalty
and authority over his oppressors, Proved false those who had defamed
him,
and gave him eternal glory.

<sup>15</sup>The holy people and their blameless descendants—it was she who rescued them from the nation that oppressed them.<sup>p</sup>

16 She entered the soul of the Lord's servant,*
and withstood fearsome kings with signs and wonders;<sup>q</sup>

17 she gave the holy ones the reward of their labors,<sup>r</sup> Conducted them by a wondrous road, became a shelter for them by day
a starry flame by night.

18 She took them across the Red Sea and brought them through the deep waters.

19 Their enemies she overwhelmed, and churned them up* from the bottom of the depths.

20 Therefore the righteous despoiled the
wicked;
and they sang of your holy name,
Lord,
and praised in unison your conquering
hand,<sup>s</sup>

21 Because Wisdom opened the mouths of the mute,
and gave ready speech to infants.<sup>t</sup>

CHAPTER 11

See RG 310–12

<sup>1</sup>She prospered their affairs through the holy prophet.<sup>u</sup>
III. Special Providence of God
During the Exodus*

Introduction

<sup>2</sup>They journeyed through the uninhabited
desert,
and in lonely places they pitched their tents;<sup>v</sup> <sup>3</sup>they withstood enemies and warded off their foes.<sup>w</sup> <sup>4</sup>When they thirsted, they called upon you,
and water was given them from the sheer rock,
a quenching of their thirst from the hard stone.
<sup>5</sup>For by the things through which their foes were punished
they in their need were benefited.<sup>x</sup>

First Example: Water Punishes the Egyptians and Benefits the Israelites

<sup>6</sup>Instead of a river's* perennial source, troubled with impure blood<sup>y</sup> <sup>7</sup>as a rebuke to the decree for the slaying of infants,
You gave them abundant water beyond
their hope,
<sup>8</sup>after you had shown by the thirst they experienced
how you punished their adversaries.
<sup>9</sup>For when they had been tried, though only mildly chastised,<sup>z</sup>

they recognized how the wicked, condemned in anger, were being tormented.

10 You tested your own people,
admonishing them as a father;
but as a stern king you probed and condemned the wicked.

11 Those near and far were equally afflicted:<sup>a</sup> 12 for a twofold grief* took hold of them<sup>b</sup> and a groaning at the remembrance of the ones who had departed.

13 For when they heard that the cause of their own torments
was a benefit to these others, they recognized the Lord.

14 For though they had mocked and rejected him who had been cast out and abandoned long ago,
in the final outcome, they marveled at
him,
since their thirst proved unlike that of the righteous.<sup>c</sup>

Second Example: Animals Punish the Egyptians and Benefit the Israelites

15 In return for their senseless, wicked
thoughts,
which misled them into worshiping dumb* serpents and worthless
insects,
You sent upon them swarms of dumb creatures for vengeance;<sup>d</sup> 16 that they might recognize that one is punished by the very things through which one sins.<sup>e</sup>

Digression on God's Mercy

17 For not without means was your almighty hand,<sup>f</sup> that had fashioned the universe from formless matter,* to send upon them many bears or fierce lions,

18 Or newly created, wrathful, unknown
beasts
breathing forth fiery breath,
Or pouring out roaring smoke,
or flashing terrible sparks from their
eyes.

19 Not only could these attack and completely destroy them;
even their frightful appearance itself
could slay.

20 Even without these, they could have been killed at a single blast, pursued by justice
and winnowed by your mighty spirit.
But you have disposed all things by measure and number and weight.<sup>g</sup>

21 For great strength is always present with
you;
who can resist the might of your arm?<sup>h</sup>

22 Indeed, before you the whole universe is like a grain from a balance,* or a drop of morning dew come down upon the earth.<sup>i</sup>

23* But you have mercy on all, because you can do all things;
and you overlook sins for the sake of repentance.<sup>j</sup>

24 For you love all things that are and loathe nothing that you have
made;
for you would not fashion what you hate.<sup>k</sup>

25 How could a thing remain, unless you willed it;
or be preserved, had it not been called forth by you?<sup>l</sup>

26 But you spare all things, because they are
yours,

O Ruler and Lover of souls,<sup>m</sup>
for your imperishable spirit is in all things!<sup>n</sup>

CHAPTER 12

See RG 311–12

<sup>2</sup>Therefore you rebuke offenders little by little,
warn them, and remind them of the sins they are committing,
that they may abandon their wickedness
    and believe in you, Lord!

<sup>3</sup>For truly, the ancient inhabitants of your holy land,<sup>o</sup>

<sup>4</sup>whom you hated for deeds most odious—
works of sorcery and impious
    sacrifices;

<sup>5</sup>These merciless murderers of children, devourers of human flesh,*
    and initiates engaged in a blood ritual, <sup>6</sup>and parents who took with their own hands defenseless lives,<sup>p</sup>

You willed to destroy by the hands of our ancestors,

<sup>7</sup>that the land that is dearest of all to
    you might receive a worthy colony of God's servants.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>8</sup>But even these you spared, since they were but mortals
    and sent wasps as forerunners of your army
that they might exterminate them by degrees.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Not that you were without power to have the wicked vanquished in battle
    by the righteous,
or wiped out at once by terrible beasts
    or by one decisive word;<sup>s</sup>

10 But condemning them by degrees, you gave them space for repentance.
You were not unaware that their origins were wicked
and their malice ingrained,<sup>t</sup>
And that their dispositions would never change;
11 for they were a people accursed from the beginning.
Neither out of fear for anyone
did you grant release from their sins.<sup>u</sup> 12 For who can say to you, "What have you done?"
or who can oppose your decree?
Or when peoples perish, who can challenge you, their maker;
or who can come into your presence to vindicate the unrighteous?<sup>v</sup> 13 For neither is there any god besides you who have the care of all,
that you need show you have not unjustly condemned;<sup>w</sup> 14 Nor can any king or prince confront you on behalf of those you have punished.<sup>x</sup> 15 But as you are righteous, you govern all things righteously;
you regard it as unworthy of your power
to punish one who has incurred no blame.<sup>y</sup> 16 For your might is the source of
righteousness;
your mastery over all things makes you lenient to all.<sup>z</sup> 17 For you show your might when the perfection of your power is disbelieved;
and in those who know you, you

rebuke insolence.* <sup>a</sup>

<sup>18</sup>But though you are master of might, you judge with clemency,
and with much lenience you govern us;
for power, whenever you will, attends
you.

<sup>19</sup>You taught your people, by these deeds, <sup>b</sup> that those who are righteous must be kind;
And you gave your children reason to hope
that you would allow them to repent
for their sins.

<sup>20</sup>For these were enemies of your servants,
doomed to death;
yet, while you punished them with such solicitude and indulgence, granting time and opportunity to abandon wickedness,

<sup>21</sup>With what exactitude you judged your
children,
to whose ancestors you gave the sworn covenants of goodly promises! <sup>c</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Therefore to give us a lesson you punish our enemies with measured deliberation
so that we may think earnestly of your goodness when we judge,
and, when being judged, we may look for mercy.

Second Example Resumed

<sup>23</sup>Hence those unrighteous who lived a life of folly,
you tormented through their own abominations. <sup>d</sup>

<sup>24</sup>For they went far astray in the paths of error,
taking for gods the worthless and disgusting among beasts,

being deceived like senseless infants.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Therefore as though upon unreasoning
children,
you sent your judgment on them as a mockery;<sup>f</sup>

<sup>26</sup>But they who took no heed of a punishment which was but child's play were to experience a condemnation worthy of God.

<sup>27</sup>For by the things through which they suffered distress,
being tortured by the very things they deemed gods,
They saw and recognized the true God whom formerly they had refused to know;
with this, their final condemnation*
came upon them.<sup>g</sup>

CHAPTER 13

See RG 311–12

Digression on False Worship

A. Nature Worship*

<sup>1</sup>Foolish by nature were all who were in ignorance of God,
and who from the good things seen did not succeed in knowing the one who is,*
and from studying the works did not discern the artisan;<sup>h</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Instead either fire, or wind, or the swift
air,
or the circuit of the stars, or the mighty
water,
or the luminaries of heaven, the governors* of the world, they considered gods.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Now if out of joy in their beauty they thought them gods,
let them know how far more excellent
is the Lord than these;
for the original source of beauty fashioned them.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Or if they were struck by their might and energy,
let them realize from these things how much more powerful is the one who made them.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>5</sup>For from the greatness and the beauty of created things
their original author, by analogy, is seen.

<sup>6</sup>But yet, for these the blame is less;*
For they have gone astray perhaps, though they seek God and wish to find

him.

<sup>7</sup>For they search busily among his works,
but are distracted by what they see,
because the things seen are fair.

<sup>8</sup>But again, not even these are pardonable.

<sup>9</sup>For if they so far succeeded in knowledge that they could speculate about the
world,
how did they not more quickly find its
Lord?

B. Idolatry*

<sup>10</sup>But wretched are they, and in dead things are their hopes,
who termed gods things made by human hands:
Gold and silver, the product of art, and images of beasts,
or useless stone, the work of an ancient hand.<sup>l</sup>

The Carpenter and Wooden Idols

<sup>11</sup>A carpenter may cut down a suitable tree<sup>m</sup> and skillfully scrape off all its bark,
And deftly plying his art produce something fit for daily use,<sup>n</sup>

<sup>12</sup>And use the scraps from his handiwork
in preparing his food, and have his fill;

<sup>13</sup>Then the good-for-nothing refuse from these remnants,
crooked wood grown full of knots,
he takes and carves to occupy his spare time.<sup>o</sup>

This wood he models with mindless skill, and patterns it on the image of a human being

<sup>14</sup>or makes it resemble some worthless beast.

When he has daubed it with red and crimsoned its surface with red stain,
and daubed over every blemish in it,<sup>p</sup> 15 He makes a fitting shrine for it and puts it on the wall, fastening it with a nail.<sup>q</sup> 16 Thus he provides for it lest it fall down,
knowing that it cannot help itself;
for, truly, it is an image and needs help.<sup>r</sup> 17 But when he prays about his goods or marriage or children,<sup>s</sup>
he is not ashamed to address the thing
without a soul.
For vigor he invokes the powerless;
18 for life he entreats the dead;
For aid he beseeches the wholly incompetent;
for travel, something that cannot even
walk;
19 For profit in business and success with his hands
he asks power of a thing with hands utterly powerless.

CHAPTER 14

See RG 311–12

- <sup>1</sup>Again, one preparing for a voyage
and about to traverse the wild waves
cries out to wood more unsound than the boat that bears him.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>For the urge for profits devised this latter,
and Wisdom the artisan produced it.
- <sup>3*</sup>But your providence, O Father! guides
it,
for you have furnished even in the sea
a road,
and through the waves a steady path,<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Showing that you can save from any danger,
so that even one without skill may embark.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>But you will that the products of your Wisdom be not idle;
therefore people trust their lives even
to most frail wood,
and were safe crossing the waves on a raft.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>For of old, when the proud giants were being destroyed,
the hope of the universe, who took refuge on a raft,* left to the world a future for the human family, under the guidance of your hand.
- <sup>7</sup>For blest is the wood through which righteousness comes about;
- <sup>8</sup>but the handmade idol is accursed, and
its maker as well:
he for having produced it, and the corruptible thing, because it was termed a god.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Equally odious to God are the evildoer
and the evil deed;

<sup>10</sup>and the thing made will be punished with its maker.

<sup>11</sup>Therefore upon even the idols of the nations shall a judgment come, since they became abominable among God's works,

Snares for human souls

and a trap for the feet of the senseless.<sup>y</sup>

The Origin and Evils of Idolatry

<sup>12</sup>For the source of wantonness is the devising of idols;

and their invention, a corruption of life.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>13</sup>For in the beginning they were not, nor can they ever continue;<sup>a</sup>

<sup>14</sup>for from human emptiness they came into the world,
and therefore a sudden end is devised
for them.

<sup>15*</sup>For a father, afflicted with untimely
mourning,
made an image of the child so quickly
taken from him,

And now honored as a god what once
was dead

and handed down to his household mysteries and sacrifices.

<sup>16</sup>Then, in the course of time, the impious practice gained strength and was observed as law,

and graven things were worshiped by royal decrees.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>17</sup>People who lived so far away that they could not honor him in his presence copied the appearance of the distant

king
And made a public image of him they wished to honor,
out of zeal to flatter the absent one as though present.

18 And to promote this observance among those to whom it was strange, the artisan's ambition provided a stimulus.

19 For he, perhaps in his determination to please the ruler,
labored over the likeness * to the best of his skill;<sup>c</sup>

20 And the masses, drawn by the charm of the workmanship,
soon took as an object of worship the one who shortly before was honored as a human being.<sup>d</sup>

21 And this became a snare for the world, that people enslaved to either grief or tyranny
conferred the incommunicable Name
on stones and wood.

22 Then it was not enough for them to err in their knowledge of God;<sup>e</sup> but even though they live in a great war resulting from ignorance,
they call such evils peace.<sup>f</sup>

23 For while they practice either child sacrifices or occult mysteries,
or frenzied carousing in exotic rites,<sup>g</sup>

24 They no longer respect either lives or purity of marriage;
but they either waylay and kill each other, or aggrieve each other by adultery.

25 And all is confusion—blood and murder, theft and guile,<sup>h</sup> corruption, faithlessness, turmoil,
perjury,

- <sup>26</sup>Disturbance of good people, neglect of gratitude,
besmirching of souls, unnatural lust, disorder in marriage, adultery and shamelessness.
- <sup>27</sup>For the worship of infamous idols
is the reason and source and extreme of all evil.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>28</sup>For they either go mad with enjoyment,
or prophesy lies,
or live lawlessly or lightly perjure
themselves.<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>29</sup>For as their trust is in lifeless idols, they expect no harm when they have sworn falsely.
- <sup>30</sup>But on both counts justice shall overtake
them:
because they thought perversely of God by devoting themselves to idols,<sup>k</sup>
and because they deliberately swore false oaths, despising piety.*
- <sup>31</sup>For it is not the might of those by whom they swear,
but the just retribution of sinners,
that ever follows upon the transgression of the wicked.*

CHAPTER 15

See RG 311–12

- <sup>1*</sup>But you, our God, are good and true,
slow to anger, and governing all with mercy.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>For even if we sin, we are yours, and know your might;
but we will not sin, knowing that we belong to you.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>For to know you well is complete
righteousness,
and to know your might is the root of immortality.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>For the evil creation of human fancy did not deceive us,
nor the fruitless labor of painters,<sup>o</sup>
A form smeared with varied colors, <sup>5</sup>the sight of which arouses yearning in a fool,
till he longs for the inanimate form of a dead image.
- <sup>6</sup>Lovers of evil things, and worthy of such hopes are they who make them and long for them and worship them.<sup>p</sup>

The Potter's Clay Idols

- <sup>7</sup>For the potter, laboriously working the soft earth,
molds for our service each single article:
He fashions out of the same clay
both the vessels that serve for clean purposes
and their opposites, all alike;
As to what shall be the use of each vessel

of either class

the worker in clay is the judge.<sup>q</sup>

8* With misspent toil he molds a meaningless god from the selfsame clay,
    though he himself shortly before was made from the earth,
And is soon to go whence he was taken,
    when the life that was lent him is demanded back.<sup>r</sup>

9 But his concern is not that he is to die
    nor that his span of life is brief; Rather, he vies with goldsmiths and silversmiths
    and emulates molders of bronze,
    and takes pride in fashioning
    counterfeits.<sup>s</sup>

10 Ashes his heart is! * more worthless than earth is his hope,<sup>t</sup>
    more ignoble than clay his life;

11 Because he knew not the one who fashioned him,
    and breathed into him a quickening
    soul,
    and infused a vital spirit.<sup>u</sup>

12 Instead, he esteemed our life a mere game,
    and our span of life a holiday for gain;
“For one must,” says he, “make a profit in every way, be it even from evil.”<sup>v</sup>

13 For more than anyone else he knows that he is sinning,
    when out of earthen stuff he creates fragile vessels and idols alike.

14 But most stupid of all and worse than senseless in mind,
    are the enemies of your people who enslaved them.<sup>w</sup>

15 For they esteemed all the idols of the nations as gods,

which cannot use their eyes to see,
nor nostrils to breathe the air,
Nor ears to hear,
nor fingers on their hands for feeling;
even their feet are useless to walk with.<sup>x</sup>

16 For it was a mere human being who made them;<sup>y</sup>
one living on borrowed breath who fashioned them.
For no one is able to fashion a god like
himself;

17 he is mortal, and what he makes with lawless hands is dead.
For he is better than the things he worships;
he at least lives, but never his idols.

Second Example Resumed

18* Besides, they worship the most loathsome beasts—<sup>z</sup>
as regards stupidity, these are worse than the rest,*

19 For beasts are neither good-looking nor desirable;
they have escaped both the approval of God and his blessing.<sup>a</sup>

CHAPTER 16

See RG 311–12

- <sup>1</sup>Therefore they* were fittingly punished by similar creatures, and were tormented by a swarm of insects.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Instead of this punishment, you benefited
your people
with a novel dish, the delight they craved,
by providing quail for their food,<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>So that those others, when they desired
food,
should lose their appetite even for necessities,
since the creatures sent to plague them
were so loathsome,
While these, after a brief period of privation,
partook of a novel dish.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>For inexorable want had to come upon
those oppressors;
but these needed only to be shown how their enemies were being tormented.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>For when the dire venom of beasts came upon them<sup>f</sup>
and they were dying from the bite of crooked serpents,
your anger endured not to the end.
- <sup>6</sup>But as a warning, for a short time they were terrorized,
though they had a sign* of salvation, to remind them of the precept of your law.
- <sup>7</sup>For the one who turned toward it was saved,

- not by what was seen,
but by you, the savior of all.
- <sup>8</sup>By this also you convinced our foes that you are the one who delivers from all evil.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>For the bites of locusts and of flies slew
them,
and no remedy was found to save their
lives
because they deserved to be punished
by such means;<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>But not even the fangs of poisonous
reptiles overcame your children, for your mercy came forth and healed
them.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>For as a reminder of your injunctions,
they were stung,
and swiftly they were saved,
Lest they should fall into deep forgetfulness
and become unresponsive to your beneficence.<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>For indeed, neither herb nor application
cured them,
but your all-healing word, O Lord!<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>13*</sup>For you have dominion over life and death;<sup>l</sup>
you lead down to the gates of Hades
and lead back.
- <sup>14</sup>Human beings, however, may kill another with malice,
but they cannot bring back the departed spirit,
or release the soul that death has confined.
- <sup>15</sup>Your hand no one can escape.

Third Example: A Rain of Manna for Israel Instead of the Plague of Storms

16 For the wicked who refused to know you were punished by the might of your arm,

Were pursued by unusual rains and hailstorms and unremitting
downpours,
and were consumed by fire.<sup>m</sup>

17 For against all expectation, in water which quenches everything,
the fire grew more active;
For the universe fights on behalf of the righteous.<sup>n</sup>

18 Then the flame was tempered<sup>o</sup>
so that the beasts that were sent upon the wicked might not be burnt up,
but that these might see and know that they were struck by the judgment
of God;

19 And again, even in the water, fire blazed beyond its strength
so as to consume the produce of the wicked land.

20 Instead of this, you nourished your people with food of angels* and furnished them bread from heaven, ready to hand, untoiledfor, endowed with all delights and conforming to every taste.<sup>p</sup>

21 For this substance of yours revealed your sweetness toward your
children,
and serving the desire of the one who received it,
was changed to whatever flavor each one wished.<sup>q</sup>

22 Yet snow and ice* withstood fire and were not melted,
so that they might know that their enemies' fruits
Were consumed by a fire that blazed in the hail

and flashed lightning in the rain.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>23</sup>But this fire, again, in order that the righteous might be nourished, forgot even its proper strength;<sup>s</sup>

<sup>24</sup>For your creation, serving you, its
maker,
grows tense for punishment against
the wicked,
but is relaxed in benefit for those who trust in you.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Therefore at that very time, transformed
in all sorts of ways,
it was serving your all-nourishing
bounty
according to what they needed and
desired;

<sup>26</sup>That your children whom you loved might learn, O LORD,
that it is not the various kinds of fruits
that nourish,
but your word that preserves those who believe you!<sup>u</sup>

<sup>27</sup>For what was not destroyed by fire, melted when merely warmed by a momentary sunbeam;<sup>v</sup>

<sup>28</sup>To make known that one must give you
thanks before sunrise,
and turn to you at daybreak.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>29</sup>For the hope of the ungrateful melts like a wintry frost
and runs off like useless
water.<sup>x</sup>

CHAPTER 17

See RG 311–12

Fourth Example: Darkness Afflicts the Egyptians, While the Israelites Have Light*

<sup>1</sup>For great are your judgments, and hard to describe;

therefore the unruly souls went astray.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>2</sup>For when the lawless thought to enslave
the holy nation,
they themselves lay shackled with darkness, fettered by the long
night,
confined beneath their own roofs as exiles from the eternal

providence.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>3</sup>For they, who supposed their secret sins were hid<sup>a</sup>
under the dark veil of oblivion,
Were scattered in fearful trembling,
terrified by apparitions.

<sup>4</sup>For not even their inner chambers kept them unafraid,
for crashing sounds on all sides
terrified them,
and mute phantoms with somber looks appeared.

<sup>5</sup>No fire had force enough to give light, nor did the flaming brilliance of the stars
succeed in lighting up that gloomy night.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>6</sup>But only intermittent, fearful fires
flashed through upon them;
And in their terror they thought beholding these was worse than the times when that sight was no longer to be seen.<sup>c</sup>

7 And mockeries of their magic art * failed, and there was a humiliating refutation
of their vaunted shrewdness. <sup>d</sup>

8 For they who undertook to banish fears and terrors from the sick soul themselves sickened with ridiculous
fear.

9 For even though no monstrous thing frightened them,
they shook at the passing of insects
and the hissing of reptiles, <sup>e</sup>

10 And perished trembling, reluctant to face even the air that they could nowhere escape.

11 For wickedness, of its nature cowardly,
testifies in its own condemnation,
and because of a distressed conscience, always magnifies misfortunes. <sup>f</sup>

12 For fear is nought but the surrender of the helps that come from reason; 13 and the more one's expectation is of itself uncertain,
the more one makes of not knowing
the cause that brings on torment.

14 So they, during that night, powerless
though it was,
since it had come upon them from the recesses of a powerless * Hades,
while all sleeping the same sleep,

15 Were partly smitten by fearsome apparitions
and partly stricken by their souls'
surrender;
for fear overwhelmed them, sudden and unexpected. <sup>g</sup>

16 Thus, then, whoever was there fell into that prison without bars and was kept confined. <sup>h</sup>

17 For whether one was a farmer, or a shepherd,

or a worker at tasks in the wasteland, Taken unawares, each served out the inescapable sentence;
<sup>18</sup>for all were bound by the one bond of darkness.<sup>i</sup>

And were it only the whistling wind, or the melodious song of birds in the spreading branches,
Or the steady sound of rushing water,
<sup>19</sup>or the rude crash of overthrown rocks,
Or the unseen gallop of bounding animals,
or the roaring cry of the fiercest beasts,
Or an echo resounding from the hollow
of the hills—
these sounds, inspiring terror,
paralyzed them.

<sup>20</sup>For the whole world shone with brilliant light<sup>j</sup>
and continued its works without interruption;

<sup>21</sup>But over them alone was spread oppressive night,
an image of the darkness* that was about to come upon them.
Yet they were more a burden to themselves than was the darkness.

CHAPTER 18

See RG 311–12

- <sup>1</sup>But your holy ones had very great
light;
And those others, who heard their voices
but did not see their forms, counted them blest for not having suffered;
- <sup>2</sup>And because they who formerly had been wronged did not harm them, they thanked them,
and because of the difference between them, * pleaded with them.
- <sup>3</sup>Instead of this, you furnished the flaming pillar,
a guide on the unknown way,
and the mild sun for an honorable migration.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>4*</sup>For they deserved to be deprived of light and imprisoned by darkness,
they had kept your children confined,
through whom the imperishable light of the law was to be given to the world.<sup>l</sup>

Fifth Example: Death of the Egyptian Firstborn; the Israelites Are Spared

- <sup>5</sup>When they determined to put to death the infants of the holy ones,
and when a single boy * had been cast
forth and then saved,
As a reproof you carried off a multitude of their children
and made them perish all at once in the mighty water.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>That night was known beforehand to our
ancestors,

so that, with sure knowledge of the oaths in which they put their faith, they might have courage.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>7</sup>The expectation of your people was the salvation of the righteous and the destruction of their foes.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>8</sup>For by the same means with which you punished our adversaries, you glorified us whom you had summoned.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>9</sup>For in secret the holy children of the good were offering sacrifice and carried out with one mind the divine institution,*

So that your holy ones should share alike
the same blessings and dangers,
once they had sung the ancestral hymns of praise.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>10</sup>But the discordant cry of their enemies echoed back,
and the piteous wail of mourning for children was borne to them.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>11</sup>And the slave was smitten with the same retribution as the master;
even the commoner suffered the same as the king.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>12</sup>And all alike by one common form of death
had countless dead;
For the living were not even sufficient
for the burial,
since at a single instant their most valued offspring had been destroyed.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>13</sup>For though they disbelieved at every turn
on account of sorceries,
at the destruction of the firstborn they acknowledged that this people*
was God's son.<sup>u</sup>

14* For when peaceful stillness encompassed everything and the night in its swift course was half spent,
15 Your all-powerful word from heaven's royal throne
    leapt into the doomed land,<sup>v</sup> 16 a fierce warrior bearing the sharp sword of your inexorable decree,
And alighted, and filled every place with
    death,
    and touched heaven, while standing
    upon the earth.<sup>w</sup> 17 Then, at once, visions in horrible dreams perturbed them<sup>x</sup>
    and unexpected fears assailed them;
18 And cast half-dead, one here, another
    there,
    they revealed why they were dying.
19 For the dreams that disturbed them had proclaimed this beforehand, lest they perish unaware of why they endured such evil.

20 The trial of death touched even the
    righteous,
    and in the desert a plague struck the multitude;
Yet not for long did the anger last.<sup>y</sup> 21 For the blameless man* hastened to be their champion,
    bearing the weapon of his special office,
    prayer and the propitiation of incense;
He withstood the wrath and put a stop to the calamity,
    showing that he was your servant.
22 He overcame the bitterness not by bodily strength, not by force of arms;
But by word he overcame the smiter,* recalling the sworn covenants with their ancestors.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>23</sup>For when corpses had already fallen one on another in heaps,
he stood in the midst and checked the
anger,
and cut off its way to the living.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>24</sup>For on his full-length robe was the whole
world,
and ancestral glories were carved on
the four rows of stones,
and your grandeur* was on the crown
upon his head.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>25</sup>To these the destroyer yielded, these he feared;
for this sole trial of anger sufficed.<sup>c</sup>

CHAPTER 19

See RG 311–12

- <sup>1</sup>But merciless wrath assailed the wicked until the end, for God knew beforehand what they were yet to do.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>That though they themselves had agreed to the departure
and had anxiously sent them on their
way,
they would regret it and pursue them.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>For while they were still engaged in funeral rites
and mourning at the burials of the dead,
They adopted another senseless plan:
those whom they had driven out with entreaties
they now pursued as fugitives.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>For a compulsion appropriate to this ending drew them on,
and made them forget what had befallen them,
That they might complete the torments of their punishment, <sup>5</sup>and your people might experience a glorious* journey
while those others met an extraordinary death.
- <sup>6*</sup>For all creation, in its several kinds,
was being made over anew,
serving your commands, that your children might be preserved unharméd.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>The cloud overshadowed their camp;
and out of what had been water, dry land was seen emerging:
Out of the Red Sea an unimpeded road,
and a grassy plain out of the mighty flood.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Over this crossed the whole nation
sheltered by your hand,
and they beheld stupendous wonders.

<sup>9</sup>For they ranged about like horses,
and leapt like lambs,
praising you, LORD, their deliverer.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>10</sup>For they were still mindful of what had happened in their sojourn:
how instead of the young of animals
the land brought forth gnats,
and instead of fishes the river swarmed with countless frogs.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>11</sup>And later they saw also a new kind of bird<sup>k</sup>
when, prompted by desire, they asked for pleasant foods;

<sup>12</sup>For to appease them quail came to them from the sea.

<sup>13</sup>And the punishments came upon the sinners
not without forewarnings from the violence of the thunderbolts.

For they justly suffered for their own misdeeds,
since they treated their guests with the more grievous* hatred.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>14</sup>For those others* did not receive unfamiliar visitors,<sup>m</sup> but these were enslaving beneficent guests.

<sup>15</sup>And not that only; but what punishment was to be theirs* since they received strangers unwillingly!

<sup>16</sup>Yet these,* after welcoming them with festivities,
oppressed with awful toils
those who had shared with them the same rights.<sup>n</sup>

17 And they were struck with blindness,*
as those others had been at the doors of the righteous man—
When, surrounded by yawning darkness,
each sought the entrance of his own door.<sup>o</sup>

18 For the elements, in ever-changing harmony,
like strings of the harp, produce new melody,
while the flow of music steadily persists.

And this can be perceived exactly from a review of what took place.

19 For land creatures were changed into water creatures,
and those that swam went over on
land.

20 Fire in water maintained its own strength,<sup>p</sup>
and water forgot its quenching nature;

21 Flames, by contrast, neither consumed
the flesh
of the perishable animals that went about in them,
nor melted the icelike, quick-melting
kind of ambrosial food.

22 For every way, LORD! you magnified and glorified your people;
unfailing, you stood by them in every time and circumstance.<sup>q</sup>

1:1–6:21 The reward is the gift of immortality, to the righteous (1:15; 3:1–3), but not to the wicked (5:1–13). Contrasts between these two groups dominate chaps. 1–5. The philosophy of the wicked and their persecution of the righteous are dramatically presented in 1:16–2:24. New light is shed on the suffering of the righteous (3:1–9), childlessness (3:13–15), and premature death (4:7–16)—in contrast to the fate of the wicked (3:10–12, 16–19; 4:3–6, 17–20).

1:1 Righteousness: not merely the cardinal virtue of justice (cf. 8:7), but the universal moral quality which is the application of wisdom to moral conduct. You who judge: “judges” and “kings” (cf. 6:1) are addressed in accordance with the literary customs of the times and with the putative Solomonic authorship, but the real audience is the Jewish community.

1:4 In these verses personified Wisdom is identified with the spirit of the Lord; so also in 9:17.

1:5 Discipline: here and elsewhere, another name for Wisdom.

1:11 Calumny: speech against God and divine providence is meant.

1:12 Death: as will become clear, the author is not speaking of physical death but of spiritual death, the eternal separation from God.

1:14 Hades: the Greek term for the Hebrew Sheol, the dwelling place of the dead.

1:15 Undying: immortality is not seen as an innate quality of the soul but as a gift of God to the righteous.

2:1–20 In this speech the wicked deny survival after death and indeed invite death by their evil deeds.

2:12–5:23 From 2:12 to 5:23 the author draws heavily on Is 52–62, setting forth his teaching in a series of characters or types taken from Isaiah and embellished with additional details from other texts. The description of the “righteous one” in 2:12–20 seems to undergird the New Testament passion narrative.

2:12 Law: the law of Moses; “training” has the same meaning.

2:22 This verse announces the subject of the next section.

2:24 Envy: perhaps because Adam was in the image of God or because Adam had control over all creation. Devil: the first biblical text to equate the serpent of Gn 3 with the devil.

3:1–4:19 The central section of chaps. 1–6. The author begins by stating that immortality is the reward of the righteous, and then in the light of that belief comments on three points of the traditional discussion of the problem of retribution (suffering, childlessness, early death) each of which was often seen as a divine punishment.

3:1–12 The author affirms that, for the righteous, sufferings are not punishments but purification and opportunities to show fidelity, whereas for the wicked suffering is truly a punishment.

3:6 Offerings: the image is that of the burnt offering, in which the victim is completely consumed by fire.

3:7 Judgment: the Greek episkopē is God’s loving judgment of those who have been faithful to him; the same word is used in 14:11 for the punishment of the wicked at God’s judgment. Cf. also v. 13.

3:10 To match their thoughts: a fate as empty as that which they describe in 2:1–5.

3:13–4:6 The true fruit of life is not children but virtue which leads to immortality. The many children of the wicked will be a disappointing fruit.

3:13 See vv. 7–9.

3:14 Fidelity’s choice reward: cf. Is 56:1–8. More gratifying: better than sons and daughters; cf. Is 56:5.

3:15 Root of understanding: the root that is understanding (wisdom).

3:16 Adulterers: understood here as a type of sinners in general; cf. Is 57:3–5.

4:7–19 Early death is not a punishment for the righteous because genuine old age is the attainment of perfection and early death is a preservation from corruption. The old age and death of the wicked, however, will not be honorable.

4:10–11 There are allusions here to Enoch (Gn 5:21–24), who was young by patriarchal standards, and to Lot (Gn 19:10–11; 2 Pt 2:7–8). Cf. also Is 57:1–2.

4:14 Verse 15 is omitted because it repeats the last two lines of 3:9.

5:1–13 In contrast to their speech in chap. 2 the wicked now regret their assessment of life and righteousness.

5:5 Heavenly beings: lit., “sons of God.” These are the holy ones, members of the heavenly court, among whom the righteous are to be found. A bodily resurrection does not seem to be envisioned.

5:14–23 A picture of the reward of the righteous which develops into an apocalyptic description of the divine warrior’s destruction of evil. The author utilizes Is 59–62.

6:1–21 The first part of the book closes with an exhortation comparable to 1:1–15, and it leads into “Solomon’s” personal comments on wisdom in chaps. 7–9.

6:1 Kings ... magistrates: note the inclusion with v. 21 (“kings”). The address to earthly powers is in accord with the opening (1:1), but the true audience remains the Jewish community.

6:4 Law: that of Moses; cf. 2:12; 6:10.

6:10 Response: a suitable plea before the great Judge. Cf. Prv 22:21; Jb 31:14; Hb 2:1; Sir 8:9.

6:17–20 This type of reasoning approximates the rhetorical sorites, a series of statements in which the predicate of each becomes the subject of the next. Cf. Rom 5:3–5.

6:22–9:18 In these verses the author identifies with Solomon (without mentioning that name anywhere), and praises the beauty of Wisdom, describing how he sought her out. Thus the readers of the book can find a model in their search for Wisdom.

7:1 First one formed of earth: Adam. The author omits throughout the book the proper names of the characters in sacred history of whom he speaks; see especially chap. 10.

7:2 In a ten-month period: ten lunar months.

7:12 Mother: lit., “she who begets.” Although Wisdom herself is begotten of God (Prv 8:22–24), she is here the one who brings into being.

7:14 Discipline: cf. note on 1:5.

7:17–22a Wisdom teaches not only righteousness and friendship with God but also sound knowledge of the world, the universe, plants, animals and human beings. See also 1 Kgs 5:9–14; these specialties reflect Hellenistic culture.

7:22b–23 The twenty-one ( $7 \times 3$ ) attributes of the spirit in Wisdom reflect the influence of contemporary philosophy, especially the Stoa, but the personification rests also on Prv 8:22–31 and Sir 24.

7:25–26 Five strong metaphors underline the origins and closeness of Wisdom with God. See the use of this language in Heb 1:3; Col 1:15.

8:2 I loved ... my bride: the erotic quality in the pursuit of and living with Woman Wisdom, who is the Lord’s consort (9:4) and loved by him, continues throughout this chapter (vv. 16, 18). It is reflected already in Prv 4:5–9; 7:4–5. See also Sir 15:2–5; 51:13–21.

8:7 Moderation ... fortitude: known also as the cardinal virtues, and recognized in Greek philosophy (Plato).

8:12 Hands upon their mouths: a sign of respect for unanswerable wisdom; cf. Jb 40:4.

8:19–20 Here the author mentions first bodily, then spiritual, excellence. To make it plain that the latter is the governing factor in the harmonious development of the human person, he then reverses the order. The Platonic doctrine of the pre-existence of the soul is often read into these lines, but such an anthropology does not seem to be the intent of the author (cf. 7:1–6). Verse 20 appears to rule out any misunderstanding of v. 19. Verse 21 emphasizes that he did not bring talent to his “birth”; his wisdom is the gift of God.

9:1–18 The author presents his version of Solomon’s prayer (1 Kgs 3:6–9; 2 Chr 1:8–10).

9:1–2 The author identifies Wisdom with the word of God just as he again identifies Wisdom with the spirit of God in v. 17. All three are alternate ways of expressing God’s activity in relationship with the world and its inhabitants.

9:15–17 Although the expressions v. in 15 draw on the language of Plato concerning the human condition, the conclusion is very biblical: God remains a mystery (Jb 38–39; Eccl 8:17; Is 40:12–14; Rom 11:33–34). The plight of humankind is clearly one of ignorance, unless the “holy spirit” is sent from God.

9:18 An announcement of the next section.

10:1–21 This chapter prepares for the following section (Wis 11:2–19:22) on the history of Israel in the exodus, by reviewing the dealings of Wisdom with the patriarchs. It has a parallel in Sir 44–50;

cf. also Wis 18:9.

10:1–2 Adam.

10:3 Cain.

10:4 Noah.

10:5 Abraham.

10:6 Lot. Pentapolis: the five cities, including Sodom; cf. Gn 14:2.

10:7 Disbelieving soul: Lot's wife; cf. Gn 19:26.

10:10–12 Jacob.

10:12 Devotion to God: in the Greek this signifies “piety” or “religion,” and is the equivalent of the Hebrew “fear of the Lord”; cf. Prv 1:7.

10:13–14 Joseph.

10:16 Moses.

10:19 Churned them up: casting their bodies on the shore.

11:2–19:22 Few verses in chaps. 11–19 can be fully understood without consulting the passages in the Pentateuch which are indicated in the cross-references. The theme of this part of the book is expressed in v. 5 and is illustrated in the following chapters by five examples drawn from Exodus events.

11:6–8 River: the Nile; the contrast is between the first plague of Egypt (Ex 7:17–24) and the water drawn from the rock in Horeb (Ex 17:5–7; Nm 20:8–11).

11:12 Twofold grief: the double distress described in vv. 13–14.

11:15 Dumb: that is, irrational.

11:17 Formless matter: a Greek philosophical concept is used to interpret the chaos of Gn 1:2.

11:22 Grain from a balance: a tiny particle used for weighing on sensitive scales.

11:23 The combination of divine mercy and power is an unusual paradox, but cf. 12:15–18; Ps 62:12–13; Sir 2:18. The main emphasis is on a creating that is motivated by love; the divine “imperishable spirit” (either Wisdom as in 1:4, 7, or perhaps the breath of life as in Gn 2:7) is in everything (12:1).

12:5 The horrible crimes here attributed to the Canaanites (cf. also 14:23) were not unheard of in the ancient world.

12:17 The brunt of divine anger and justice is borne by those who know God but defy divine authority and might. Cf. 1:2; 15:2, but also 12:27; 18:13.

12:27 Condemnation: the death of Egyptian firstborn and the destruction of their army in the sea.

13:1–9 The author holds a relatively benign view of the efforts of the philosophers to come to know God from various natural phenomena. This is not a question of proving the existence of God in scholastic style. The author thinks that the beauty and might of the world should have pointed by analogy (v. 5) to the Maker. Instead, those “in ignorance of God” remained fixed on the elements (v. 2, three named, along with the stars). His Greek counterparts are not totally blameless; they should have gone further and acknowledged the creator of nature's wonders (vv. 4–5). Cf. Rom 1:18–23; Acts 17:27–28.

13:1 One who is: this follows the Greek translation of the sacred name for God in Hebrew; cf. Ex 3:14.

13:2 Governors: the sun and moon (cf. Gn 1:16).

13:6 The blame is less: the greater blame is incurred by those mentioned in v. 10; 15:14–16.

13:10–19 The second digression is an example of the polemic against idolatry (cf. Is 44:9–20; Jer 10:3–9; Ps 135:15–18). Whether the idols be of wood or clay, they were made by human beings and have become the source of evil.

14:3–6 The wooden ship mentioned in vv. 1–2 prompts a short meditation on the providence of God, who in fact has watched over boats in their dangerous courses. The wood as described in v. 7 became a favorite patristic type for the wood of the cross.

14:6 Noah.

14:15–21 The author develops two examples of idolatry: cult of the dead, and cult of the king.

14:19 Likeness: he made this more flattering than the reality.

14:30 Piety: the sanctity of oaths.

14:31 Perjury is a form of deceit which calls for punishment even though it be practiced in the name of a lifeless idol.

15:1–3 As often before (11:26; 12:2; 14:3–6), the author addresses God directly, so that chaps. 11–19 can be conceived as a more or less continuous prayer (cf. 11:7 and 19:22). This is the living God who is in stark contrast to the deadness of the idols that have been discussed. The merciful God (cf. Ex 34:6) is the source of immortality (1:15) for the community.

15:8–9 The author matches the irony of his words about the carpenter in 13:15–19 with this description of the potter's vain work.

15:10 Ashes his heart is!: the words of this cry are taken from Is 44:20 (the Septuagint).

15:18–19 The author here returns (11:15; 12:23–27) to the main theme of chaps. 11–19, which was interrupted by the digression of 13:1–15:17.

15:18 Worse than the rest: this may mean that the creatures worshiped by the Egyptians (e.g., crocodiles, serpents, scarabs, etc.) were less intelligent than the general run of beasts.

16:1 They: the Egyptian idolaters, who are punished according to the principle laid down in 11:5, 15–16.

16:6 Sign: the brazen serpent, as related in Numbers 21, but the author deliberately avoids any misunderstanding by addressing the Lord as responsible for the healing, since he is “the savior of all” (v. 7; see also vv. 12 and 26 for the role of the “word” of God).

16:13–14 The author recognizes the power of the Lord over life and death, as expressed in 1 Sm 2:6; Tb 13:2. The traditional imagery of Sheol (gates and confinement) colors the passage.

16:20 Food of angels: the famous phrase (cf. the hymn “Panis Angelicus”) is taken from Ps 78:24 as rendered by the Septuagint. The “bread from heaven” (cf. Ex 16:4; Ps 105:40) with its marvelous “sweetness” becomes a type of the “bread come down from heaven” in Jn 6:32–51, and plays a large role in later Christian devotion.

16:22 Snow and ice: the manna; cf. v. 27; 19:21.

17:1–18:4 The description of the darkness of the ninth plague is a very creative development of Ex 10:21–29. It betrays a wide knowledge of contemporary thought. For the first and only time in the Septuagint the Greek word for “conscience” occurs, in 17:11. There is no Hebrew word that is equivalent; the idea is expressed indirectly. The horrendous darkness is illumined by “fires” (v. 6), i.e., lightnings that only contributed to the terror.

17:7 Magic art: the Egyptian magicians who were successful at first (Ex 7:11, 22) and then failed (Ex 8:14; 9:11) are now powerless against the darkness and the phantoms and are totally discredited.

17:14 Powerless: Hades (or Sheol), i.e., the nether world, is often portrayed in the Old Testament as a hostile power, since all must die (Ps 49:8–13), but it has no power against God.

17:21 Darkness: of Hades or Sheol; see note on 16:13–14.

18:2 The difference between them: God's distinctive manner of treating the Israelites and the Egyptians according to their respective deeds. Pleaded: perhaps, for their departure.

18:4 The discussion of physical light climaxes with a reference to the “imperishable light” of the torah.

18:5 Single boy: Moses.

18:9 Divine institution: the Passover. Ancestral hymns of praise: possibly the Hallel psalms, the psalms sung at the end of the Passover meal; cf. Mt 26:30; Mk 14:26.

18:13 People: the Israelites (cf. Ex 4:22).

18:14–16 These verses attribute to the personified “word” the actions of the Lord mentioned in Ex 12:13–17 (note the role of the “destroyer” in Ex 12:23 and compare Wis 18:22, 25).

18:21 Blameless man: Aaron, acting according to his office of high priest and intercessor (cf. Nm 17:9–15; Ex 28:15–21, 31–38).

18:22 Smiter: the destroying angel; cf. v. 25.

18:24 Glories ... grandeur: the name of God and the names of the tribes were inscribed on the high priest’s apparel.

19:5 Glorious: more precisely, “wondrous,” but the word reflects “glorified” in 18:8 and 19:22.

19:6 The cooperation of creation in Israel’s deliverance (vv. 7–12) under the direction of the Lord is a favorite theme; cf. 16:24–25.

19:13 More grievous: than that of the people of Sodom (Gn 19) with whom the Egyptians are compared.

19:14 Others: the people of Sodom refused to receive strangers. Beneficent: because of the services rendered by Joseph.

19:15 Theirs: the people of Sodom.

19:16 These: the Egyptians.

19:17 Blindness: the plague of darkness. Righteous man: Lot (Gn 19:11).

The Wisdom of Ben Sira derives its title from the author, “Yeshua [Jesus], son of Eleazar, son of Sira” (50:27). This seems to be the earliest title of the book. The designation “Liber Ecclesiasticus,” meaning “Church Book,” appended to some Greek and Latin manuscripts, is perhaps due to the extensive use the church made of this book in presenting moral teaching to catechumens and to the faithful. The title “Sirach” comes from the Greek form of the author’s name.

The author, a sage who lived in Jerusalem, was thoroughly imbued with love for the wisdom tradition, and also for the law, priesthood, Temple, and divine worship. As a wise and experienced observer of life he addressed himself to his contemporaries with the motive of helping them to maintain religious faith and integrity through study of the books sacred to the Jewish tradition.

The book contains numerous well-crafted maxims, grouped by affinity, and dealing with a variety of subjects such as the individual, the family, and the community in their relations with one another and with God. It treats of friendship, education, poverty and wealth, laws, religious worship, and many other matters that reflect the religious and social customs of the time.

Written in Hebrew in the early years of the second century B.C., the book was finished by ca.175. The text was translated into Greek by the author’s grandson after 117 B.C. He also wrote a foreword which contains valuable information about the book, its author, and himself as translator. Until the close of the nineteenth century the Wisdom of Ben Sira was known to Christians in translations, of which the Greek rendering was the most important. From it the Latin version was made. Between 1896 and 1900, again in 1931, and several times since 1956, incomplete manuscripts were discovered, so that more than two thirds of the book in Hebrew is available; these Hebrew texts agree substantially with the Greek. One such text, from Masada, is pre-Christian in date. The New American Bible provides a critical translation based on the evidence of all the ancient texts.

Though not included in the Jewish Bible after the first century A.D., nor, therefore, accepted by Protestants, the Wisdom of Ben Sira has been recognized by the Catholic Church as inspired and canonical. The Foreword, though not properly part of the book, is always included with it because of its antiquity and importance.

The contents of the Wisdom of Ben Sira are of a discursive nature, not easily divided into separate parts. Chapters 1–43 deal largely with moral instruction; 44:1–50:24 contain a eulogy of the heroes of Israel. There are two appendixes in which the author expresses his gratitude to God (51:1–12), and invites the unschooled to acquire true wisdom (51:13–30).

FOREWORD

Inasmuch as many and great truths have been given to us through the Law, the prophets, and the authors who followed them,* for which the instruction and wisdom of Israel merit praise, it is the duty of those who read the scriptures not only to become knowledgeable themselves but also to use their love of learning in speech and in writing to help others less familiar. So my grandfather Jesus, who had long devoted himself to the study of the law, the prophets, and the rest of the books of our ancestors, and had acquired great familiarity with them, was moved to write something himself regarding instruction and wisdom. He did this so that those who love learning might, by accepting what he had written, make even greater progress in living according to the Law.

You are invited therefore to read it with good will and attention, with indulgence for any failure on our part, despite earnest efforts, in the interpretation of particular passages. For words spoken originally in Hebrew do not have the same effect when they are translated into another language. That is true not only of this book but of the Law itself, the prophecies, and the rest of the books, which differ no little when they are read in the original.

I arrived in Egypt in the thirty-eighth year of the reign of King Euergetes, and while there, I had access to no little learning. I therefore considered it my duty to devote some diligence and industry to the translation of this book. During this time I applied my skill for many sleepless hours to complete the book and publish it for those living abroad who wish to acquire learning and are disposed to live their lives according to the Law.

The Wisdom of Ben Sira

CHAPTER 1

See RG 312–15

God's Gift of Wisdom*

- <sup>1</sup>All wisdom* is from the Lord
and remains with him forever.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>The sands of the sea, the drops of rain,
the days of eternity—who can count
them?
- <sup>3</sup>Heaven's height, earth's extent,
the abyss and wisdom—who can explore them?
- <sup>4</sup>Before all other things wisdom was created;
and prudent understanding, from eternity.†
- <sup>6</sup>The root of wisdom—to whom has it been revealed?
Her subtleties—who knows them?<sup>† b</sup>
- <sup>8*</sup>There is but one, wise and truly awesome,
seated upon his throne—the Lord.
- <sup>9</sup>It is he who created her,
saw her and measured her,<sup>c</sup>
Poured her forth upon all his works, <sup>10</sup>upon every living thing according to his bounty,
lavished her upon those who love him.

Fear of the Lord Is Wisdom*

- <sup>11</sup>The fear of the Lord* is glory and exultation,
gladness and a festive crown.
- <sup>12</sup>The fear of the Lord rejoices the heart, giving gladness, joy, and long life.†

<sup>13</sup>Those who fear the Lord will be happy at
the end,
even on the day of death they will be
blessed.

<sup>14</sup>The beginning of wisdom is to fear the Lord;
she is created with the faithful in the womb.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>15</sup>With the godly she was created from of
old,
and with their descendants she will keep faith.

<sup>16</sup>The fullness of wisdom is to fear the Lord;
she inebriates them with her fruits.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Their entire house she fills with choice
foods,
their granaries with her produce.

<sup>18</sup>The crown of wisdom is the fear of the Lord,
flowering with peace and perfect
health.†

<sup>19</sup>Knowledge and full understanding she rains down;
she heightens the glory of those who possess her.

<sup>20</sup>The root of wisdom is to fear the Lord;
her branches are long life.

<sup>21</sup>The fear of the Lord drives away sins;
where it abides it turns back all anger.

<sup>22</sup>Unjust anger can never be justified;
anger pulls a person to utter ruin.

<sup>23*</sup>Until the right time, the patient remain calm,
then cheerfulness comes back to them.

<sup>24</sup>Until the right time they hold back their words;
then the lips of many will tell of their good sense.

<sup>25</sup>Among wisdom's treasures is the model for knowledge;
but godliness is an abomination to the sinner.

<sup>26</sup>If you desire wisdom, keep the
commandments,
and the Lord will bestow her upon
you;

<sup>27</sup>For the fear of the Lord is wisdom and
discipline;
faithfulness and humility are his
delight.

<sup>28</sup>Do not disobey the fear of the Lord,* do not approach it with duplicity of heart.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>29</sup>Do not be a hypocrite before others;
over your lips keep watch.

<sup>30</sup>Do not exalt yourself lest you fall
and bring dishonor upon yourself;

For then the Lord will reveal your secrets and cast you down in the midst of the assembly.

Because you did not approach the fear of
the Lord,
and your heart was full of deceit.

CHAPTER 2

See RG 312–15

Trust in God

<sup>1</sup>My child, when you come to serve the Lord,*

prepare yourself for trials.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Be sincere of heart and steadfast, and do not be impetuous in time of adversity.

<sup>3</sup>Cling to him, do not leave him,
that you may prosper in your last days.

<sup>4</sup>Accept whatever happens to you;
in periods of humiliation be patient.

<sup>5</sup>For in fire gold is tested, and the chosen, in the crucible of humiliation.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Trust in God, and he will help you;
make your ways straight and hope in
him.

<sup>7</sup>You that fear the Lord, wait for his
mercy,
do not stray lest you fall.

<sup>8</sup>You that fear the Lord, trust in him,
and your reward will not be lost.

<sup>9</sup>You that fear the Lord, hope for good
things,
for lasting joy and mercy.

<sup>10</sup>Consider the generations long past and
see:
has anyone trusted in the Lord and
been disappointed?
Has anyone persevered in his fear and been forsaken?
has anyone called upon him and been ignored?<sup>i</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For the Lord is compassionate and merciful;
forgives sins and saves in time of
trouble.

<sup>12</sup>Woe to timid hearts and drooping hands,*
to the sinner who walks a double path!

<sup>13</sup>Woe to the faint of heart! For they do not trust,
and therefore have no shelter!

<sup>14</sup>Woe to you that have lost hope!
what will you do at the Lord's visitation?

<sup>15</sup>Those who fear the Lord do not disobey
his words;
those who love him keep his ways.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Those who fear the Lord seek to please
him;
those who love him are filled with his law.

<sup>17</sup>Those who fear the Lord prepare their hearts
and humble themselves before him.

<sup>18</sup>Let us fall into the hands of the Lord
and not into the hands of mortals,
For equal to his majesty is his mercy;
and equal to his name are his works.<sup>k</sup>

CHAPTER 3

See RG 312–15

Responsibilities to Parents*

<sup>1</sup>Children, listen to me, your father;
act accordingly, that you may be safe.

<sup>2</sup>For the Lord sets a father in honor over his children
and confirms a mother's authority over her sons.

<sup>3</sup>Those who honor their father atone for
sins;

<sup>4</sup>they store up riches who respect their mother.

<sup>5</sup>Those who honor their father will have joy in their own children,
and when they pray they are heard.

<sup>6</sup>Those who respect their father will live a long life;
those who obey the Lord honor their
mother.

<sup>7</sup>Those who fear the Lord honor their
father,
and serve their parents as masters.

<sup>8</sup>In word and deed honor your father,
that all blessings may come to you.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>9</sup>A father's blessing gives a person firm
roots,
but a mother's curse uproots the growing plant.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Do not glory in your father's disgrace,
for that is no glory to you!

<sup>11</sup>A father's glory is glory also for oneself;
they multiply sin who demean their mother.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>12</sup>My son, be steadfast in honoring your

- father;
do not grieve him as long as he lives.<sup>O</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>Even if his mind fails, be considerate of
him;
do not revile him because you are in your prime.
- <sup>14</sup>Kindness to a father will not be forgotten;
it will serve as a sin offering—it will take lasting root.
- <sup>15</sup>In time of trouble it will be recalled to your advantage,
like warmth upon frost it will melt away your sins.
- <sup>16</sup>Those who neglect their father are like blasphemers;
those who provoke their mother are accursed by their Creator.<sup>P</sup>

Humility****

- <sup>17</sup>My son, conduct your affairs with
humility,
and you will be loved more than a giver of gifts.
- <sup>18</sup>Humble yourself the more, the greater
you are,
and you will find mercy in the sight of God.<sup>† q</sup>
- <sup>20</sup>For great is the power of the Lord;
by the humble he is glorified.
- <sup>21</sup>What is too sublime for you, do not seek;
do not reach into things that are hidden from you.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>22</sup>What is committed to you, pay heed to;
what is hidden is not your concern.
- <sup>23</sup>In matters that are beyond you do not meddle,
when you have been shown more than you can understand.
- <sup>24</sup>Indeed, many are the conceits of human beings;

evil imaginations lead them astray.

Docility*

<sup>25</sup>Without the pupil of the eye, light is missing;
without knowledge, wisdom is
missing.

<sup>26</sup>A stubborn heart will fare badly in the end;
those who love danger will perish in it.

<sup>27</sup>A stubborn heart will have many a hurt;
adding sin to sin is madness.

<sup>28</sup>When the proud are afflicted, there is no
cure;
for they are offshoots of an evil plant.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>29</sup>The mind of the wise appreciates
proverbs,
and the ear that listens to wisdom
rejoices.

Alms for the Poor

<sup>30</sup>As water quenches a flaming fire, so almsgiving atones for sins.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>31</sup>The kindness people have done crosses their paths later on;
should they stumble, they will find support.

CHAPTER 4

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>My child, do not mock the life of
the poor;
do not keep needy eyes* waiting.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Do not grieve the hungry,
nor anger the needy.
- <sup>3</sup>Do not aggravate a heart already angry,
nor delay giving to the needy.
- <sup>4</sup>A beggar's request do not reject;
do not turn your face away from the
poor.
- <sup>5</sup>From the needy do not turn your eyes;
do not give them reason to curse
you.
- <sup>6</sup>If in their pain they cry out bitterly, their Rock will hear the sound of their cry.

Social Conduct

- <sup>7</sup>Endear yourself to the assembly;
before the city's ruler bow your head.
- <sup>8</sup>Give a hearing to the poor,
and return their greeting with deference;
- <sup>9</sup>Deliver the oppressed from their oppressors;<sup>v</sup> right judgment should not be repugnant to you.
- <sup>10</sup>Be like a father to orphans,
and take the place of a husband to widows.
- Then God will call you his child, and he will be merciful to you and deliver you from the pit.

The Rewards of Wisdom****

- <sup>11</sup>Wisdom teaches her children and admonishes all who can understand her.
- <sup>12</sup>Those who love her love life;
those who seek her out win the LORD's
favor.
- <sup>13</sup>Those who hold her fast will attain glory,
and they shall abide in the blessing of
the LORD.
- <sup>14</sup>Those who serve her serve the Holy One;
those who love her the Lord loves.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>15</sup>“Whoever obeys me will judge nations;
whoever listens to me will dwell in my inmost chambers.
- <sup>16</sup>If they remain faithful, they will possess me;
their descendants too will inherit me.
- <sup>17</sup>“I will walk with them in disguise,
and at first I will test them with trials.
Fear and dread I will bring upon them and I will discipline them with my constraints.
- When their hearts are fully with me, <sup>18</sup>then I will set them again on the straight path
and reveal my secrets to them.
- <sup>19</sup>But if they turn away from me, I will abandon them
and deliver them over to robbers.”

Sincerity and Justice****

- <sup>20</sup>My son, watch for the right time; fear
what is evil;
do not bring shame upon yourself.
- <sup>21</sup>There is a shame heavy with guilt,
and a shame that brings glory and respect.

<sup>22</sup>Show no favoritism to your own discredit;
let no one intimidate you to your own
downfall.

<sup>23</sup>Do not refrain from speaking at the proper time,
and do not hide your wisdom;

<sup>24</sup>For wisdom becomes known through
speech,
and knowledge through the tongue's
response.

<sup>25</sup>Never speak against the truth,
but of your own ignorance be ashamed.

<sup>26</sup>Do not be ashamed to acknowledge your
sins,
and do not struggle against a rushing
stream.

<sup>27</sup>Do not abase yourself before a fool;
do not refuse to do so before rulers.

<sup>28</sup>Even to the death, fight for what is right, and the LORD will do battle for you.

<sup>29</sup>Do not be haughty in your speech, or lazy and slack in your deeds.

<sup>30</sup>Do not be like a lion at home,
or sly and suspicious with your servants.

<sup>31</sup>Do not let your hand be open to receive,
but clenched when it is time to give.

CHAPTER 5

See RG 312–15

Against Presumption*

- <sup>1</sup>Do not rely on your wealth,
or say, “I have the power.”<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Do not rely on your strength
in following the desires of your heart.
- <sup>3</sup>Do not say, “Who can prevail against
me?”
for the LORD will exact punishment.
- <sup>4</sup>Do not say, “I have sinned, yet what has happened to me?”
for the LORD is slow to anger!
- <sup>5</sup>Do not be so confident of forgiveness
that you add sin upon sin.
- <sup>6</sup>Do not say, “His mercy is great;
my many sins he will forgive.”
For mercy and anger alike are with him;
his wrath comes to rest on the wicked.
- <sup>7</sup>Do not delay turning back to the LORD,
do not put it off day after day.
For suddenly his wrath will come forth;
at the time of vengeance, you will perish.
- <sup>8</sup>Do not rely on deceitful wealth,
for it will be no help on the day of wrath.<sup>y</sup>

Use and Abuse of the Tongue*

- <sup>9</sup>Do not winnow in every wind,
nor walk in every path.*
- <sup>10</sup>Be steadfast regarding your knowledge,
and let your speech be consistent.
- <sup>11</sup>Be swift to hear,

but slow to answer.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>12</sup>If you can, answer your neighbor;
if not, place your hand over your
mouth!

<sup>13</sup>Honor and dishonor through speaking!
The tongue can be your downfall.

<sup>14</sup>Do not be called double-tongued;
and with your tongue do not slander a
neighbor.

For shame has been created for the thief,
and sore disgrace for the double-tongued.

<sup>15</sup>In little or in much, do not act corruptly;

CHAPTER 6

<sup>1</sup>Do not be a foe instead of a
friend.
A bad name, disgrace, and dishonor you will inherit.
Thus the wicked, the double-tongued!*

Unruly Passions

<sup>2</sup>Do not fall into the grip of your passion,<sup>a</sup> lest like fire it consume your strength.
<sup>3</sup>It will eat your leaves and destroy your
fruits,
and you will be left like a dry tree.
<sup>4</sup>For fierce passion destroys its owner and makes him the sport of his enemies.

True Friendship*

<sup>5</sup>Pleasant speech multiplies friends,
and gracious lips, friendly greetings.
<sup>6</sup>Let those who are friendly to you be
many,
but one in a thousand your confidant.
<sup>7</sup>When you gain friends, gain them through testing,<sup>b</sup>
and do not be quick to trust them.
<sup>8</sup>For there are friends when it suits them, but they will not be around in time of
trouble.
<sup>9</sup>Another is a friend who turns into an enemy,
and tells of the quarrel to your
disgrace.
<sup>10</sup>Others are friends, table companions,

but they cannot be found in time of affliction.

<sup>11</sup>When things go well, they are your other self,
and lord it over your servants.

<sup>12</sup>If disaster comes upon you, they turn
against you
and hide themselves.

<sup>13</sup>Stay away from your enemies,
and be on guard with your friends.

<sup>14</sup>Faithful friends are a sturdy shelter;
whoever finds one finds a treasure.

<sup>15</sup>Faithful friends are beyond price,
no amount can balance their worth.

<sup>16</sup>Faithful friends are life-saving medicine;
those who fear God will find them.

<sup>17</sup>Those who fear the Lord enjoy stable
friendship,
for as they are, so will their neighbors be.

Blessings of Wisdom*

<sup>18</sup>My child, from your youth choose
discipline;
and when you have gray hair you will find wisdom.

<sup>19</sup>As though plowing and sowing, draw close to her;
then wait for her bountiful crops.
For in cultivating her you will work but little,
and soon you will eat her fruit.

<sup>20</sup>She is rough ground to the fool!
The stupid cannot abide her.

<sup>21</sup>She will be like a burdensome stone to
them,
and they will not delay in casting her
aside.

she is not accessible to many.

<sup>23</sup>Listen, my child, and take my advice;
do not refuse my counsel.

<sup>24</sup>Put your feet into her fetters,
and your neck under her yoke.

<sup>25</sup>Bend your shoulders and carry her and do not be irked at her bonds.

<sup>26</sup>With all your soul draw close to her;
and with all your strength keep her
ways.

<sup>27</sup>Inquire and search, seek and find;
when you get hold of her, do not let her go.

<sup>28</sup>Thus at last you will find rest in her,
and she will become your joy.

<sup>29</sup>Her fetters will be a place of strength;
her snare, a robe of spun gold.

<sup>30</sup>Her yoke will be a gold ornament;<sup>c</sup>
her bonds, a purple cord.

<sup>31</sup>You will wear her as a robe of glory,
and bear her as a splendid crown.

<sup>32</sup>If you wish, my son, you can be wise;
if you apply yourself, you can be shrewd.

<sup>33</sup>If you are willing to listen, you can learn;
if you pay attention, you can be instructed.

<sup>34</sup>Stand in the company of the elders;
stay close to whoever is wise.

<sup>35</sup>Be eager to hear every discourse;
let no insightful saying escape you.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>36</sup>If you see the intelligent, seek them out;
let your feet wear away their doorsteps!

<sup>37</sup>Reflect on the law of the Most High,
and let his commandments be your constant study.

Then he will enlighten your mind,

and make you wise as you desire.<sup>e</sup>

*Conduct Toward God and Neighbor**

- <sup>1</sup>Do no evil, and evil will not overtake
you;*
- <sup>2</sup>avoid wickedness, and it will turn away from you.
- <sup>3</sup>Do not sow in the furrows of injustice,
lest you harvest it sevenfold.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Do not seek from God authority
or from the king a place of honor.
- <sup>5</sup>Do not parade your righteousness before
the LORD,
and before the king do not flaunt your wisdom.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>Do not seek to become a judge
if you do not have the strength to root out crime,
Lest you show fear in the presence of the prominent
and mar your integrity.
- <sup>7</sup>Do not be guilty of any evil before the city court
or disgrace yourself before the assembly.
- <sup>8</sup>Do not plot to repeat a sin;
even for one, you will not go
unpunished.
- <sup>9</sup>Do not say, “He will appreciate my many gifts;
the Most High God will accept my offerings.”<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Do not be impatient in prayer
or neglect almsgiving.
- <sup>11</sup>Do not ridicule the embittered;
Remember: there is One who exalts

and humbles.*

<sup>12</sup>Do not plot mischief against your relative or against your friend and companion.

<sup>13</sup>Refuse to tell lie after lie,
for it never results in good.

<sup>14</sup>Do not babble in the assembly of the elders
or repeat the words of your prayer.*<sup>i</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Do not hate hard work; work was assigned by God.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Do not esteem yourself more than your compatriots;
remember, his wrath will not delay.

<sup>17</sup>More and more, humble your pride;
what awaits mortals is worms.*<sup>k</sup>

Duties of Family Life, Religion and Charity****

<sup>18</sup>Do not barter a friend for money, or a true brother for the gold of Ophir.*

<sup>19</sup>Do not reject a sensible wife;
a gracious wife is more precious than pearls.

<sup>20</sup>Do not mistreat a servant who works faithfully,
or laborers who devote themselves to their task.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Love wise servants as yourself;
do not refuse them freedom.*

<sup>22</sup>Do you have livestock? Look after them;
if they are dependable, keep them.

<sup>23</sup>Do you have sons? Correct them and cure their stubbornness* in their early youth.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Do you have daughters? Keep them chaste,
and do not be indulgent to them.<sup>n</sup>

- <sup>25</sup>Give your daughter in marriage, and a worry comes to an end;
but give her to a sensible man.
- <sup>26</sup>Do you have a wife? Do not mistreat her,
but do not trust the wife you hate.
- <sup>27</sup>With your whole heart honor your father;
your mother's birth pangs do not forget. <sup>o</sup>
- <sup>28</sup>Remember, of these parents you were
born;
what can you give them for all they gave you?
- <sup>29</sup>With all your soul fear God
and revere his priests.
- <sup>30</sup>With all your strength love your Maker
and do not neglect his ministers.
- <sup>31</sup>Honor God and respect the priest;
give him his portion as you have been commanded: <sup>p</sup>
- First fruits and contributions, his portion of victims and holy offerings. *
- <sup>32</sup>To the poor also extend your hand,
that your blessing may be complete.
- <sup>33</sup>Give your gift to all the living,
and do not withhold your kindness
from the dead. *
- <sup>34</sup>Do not avoid those who weep,
but mourn with those who mourn. <sup>q</sup>
- <sup>35</sup>Do not hesitate to visit the sick, because for such things you will be loved. <sup>r</sup>
- <sup>36</sup>In whatever you do, remember your last
days,
and you will never sin. *

CHAPTER 8

See RG 312–15

Prudence in Dealing with Others*

<sup>1</sup>Do not contend with the mighty,
lest you fall into their power.

<sup>2</sup>Do not quarrel with the rich, lest they pay out the price of your
downfall.

For gold has unsettled many,
and wealth perverts the character of princes.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Do not quarrel with loud-mouths, or heap wood upon their fire.<sup>*t</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Do not associate with the senseless, lest your ancestors be insulted.

<sup>5</sup>Do not reproach one who turns away from sin;<sup>u</sup>
remember, we all are guilty.*

<sup>6</sup>Do not insult one who is old,
for some of us will also grow old.

<sup>7</sup>Do not rejoice when someone dies;
remember, we are all to be gathered in.

<sup>8</sup>Do not neglect the discourse of the wise,<sup>v</sup>
but busy yourself with their proverbs;
For in this way you will acquire the training
to stand in the presence of princes.

<sup>9</sup>Do not reject the tradition of the elders which they have heard from their
ancestors;

For from it you will learn how to answer when the need arises.

<sup>10</sup>Do not kindle the coals of sinners, lest you be burned in their flaming
fire.

<sup>11</sup>Do not give ground before scoundrels;
it will set them in ambush against
you.*

<sup>12</sup>Do not lend to one more powerful than
yourself;
or if you lend, count it as lost.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Do not give collateral beyond your means;
consider any collateral a debt you must pay.

<sup>14</sup>Do not go to court against a judge,
for the case will be settled in his favor.

<sup>15</sup>Do not travel with the ruthless lest they weigh you down with calamity;

For they will only go their own way,
and through their folly you will also
perish.

<sup>16</sup>Do not defy the quick-tempered,
or ride with them through the desert.

For bloodshed is nothing to them;
when there is no one to help, they will destroy you.

<sup>17</sup>Do not take counsel with simpletons,
for they cannot keep a confidence.

<sup>18</sup>Before a stranger do nothing that should be kept secret,
for you do not know what it will produce later on.* x

<sup>19</sup>Open your heart to no one,
do not banish your happiness.

CHAPTER 9

See RG 312–15

Advice Concerning Women*

<sup>1</sup>Do not be jealous of the wife of your bosom,
lest you teach her to do evil against

<sup>2</sup>Do not give a woman power over you to trample on your dignity.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Do not go near a strange woman, lest you fall into her snares.

<sup>4</sup>Do not dally with a singer,
lest you be captivated by her charms.

<sup>5</sup>Do not entertain any thoughts about a virgin,
lest you be enmeshed in damages for her.*

<sup>6</sup>Do not give yourself to a prostitute lest you lose your inheritance.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Do not look around the streets of the city
or wander through its squares.

<sup>8</sup>Avert your eyes from a shapely woman;
do not gaze upon beauty that is not
yours;

Through woman's beauty many have been ruined,
for love of it burns like fire.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Never recline at table with a married
woman,
or drink intoxicants with her,
Lest your heart be drawn to her and you go down in blood* to the grave.

Choice of Friends*

- <sup>10</sup>Do not abandon old friends;
new ones cannot equal them.
A new friend is like new wine—
when it has aged, you drink it with pleasure.
- <sup>11</sup>Do not envy the wicked
for you do not know when their day will come.
- <sup>12</sup>Do not delight in the pleasures of the ungodly;
remember, they will not die
unpunished.
- <sup>13</sup>Keep away from those who have power
to kill,
and you will not be filled with the dread of death.
But if you come near them, do not offend
them,
lest they take away your life.
Know that you are stepping among snares
and walking over a net.
- <sup>14</sup>As best you can, answer your neighbor,
and associate with the wise.
- <sup>15</sup>With the learned exchange ideas;
and let all your conversation be about the law of the Most High.
- <sup>16</sup>Take the righteous for your table
companions;
and let your glory be in the fear of God.

Concerning Rulers *

- <sup>17</sup>Work by skilled hands will earn praise;
but the people's leader is proved wise
by his words.
- <sup>18</sup>Loud mouths are feared in their city,
and whoever is reckless in speech is hated.

CHAPTER 10

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>A wise magistrate gives stability to
his people,
and government by the intelligent is well ordered.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>As the people's judge, so the officials;<sup>c</sup>
as the head of a city, so the inhabitants.
- <sup>3</sup>A reckless king destroys his people,
but a city grows through the intelligence of its princes.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Sovereignty over the earth is in the hand
of God,
who appoints the right person for the right time.
- <sup>5</sup>Sovereignty over everyone is in the hand
of God,
who imparts his majesty to the ruler.

The Sin of Pride

- <sup>6</sup>No matter what the wrong, never harm
your neighbor
or go the way of arrogance.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>Odious to the Lord and to mortals is pride,
and for both oppression is a crime.
- <sup>8</sup>Sovereignty is transferred from one people to another
because of the lawlessness of the proud.
- <sup>9</sup>Why are dust and ashes proud?*
Even during life the body decays.
- <sup>10</sup>A slight illness—the doctor jests;
a king today—tomorrow he is dead.
- <sup>11</sup>When a people die,
they inherit corruption and worms,
gnats and maggots.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>12</sup>The beginning of pride is stubbornness
in withdrawing the heart from one's Maker.

<sup>13</sup>For sin is a reservoir of insolence,
a source which runs over with vice;
Because of it God sends unheard-of afflictions
and strikes people with utter ruin.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>14</sup>God overturns the thrones of the proud and enthrones the lowly in their place.

<sup>15</sup>God plucks up the roots of the proud,
and plants the lowly in their place.

<sup>16</sup>The Lord lays waste the lands of the
nations,
and destroys them to the very foundations of the earth.

<sup>17</sup>He removes them from the earth,
destroying them,
erasing their memory from the world.

<sup>18</sup>Insolence does not befit mortals, nor impudent anger those born of women.

True Glory*

<sup>19</sup>Whose offspring can be honorable?
Human offspring.

Those who fear the LORD are honorable offspring.

Whose offspring can be disgraceful?
Human offspring.

Those who transgress the commandment are disgraceful
offspring.

<sup>20</sup>Among relatives their leader is honored;
but whoever fears God is honored
among God's people.†

<sup>22</sup>Resident alien, stranger, foreigner, pauper—
their glory is the fear of the LORD.

23 It is not right to despise anyone wise but
poor,
nor proper to honor the lawless.<sup>h</sup>

24 The prince, the ruler, the judge are in honor;
but none is greater than the one who fears God.

25 When the free serve a wise slave, the wise will not complain.<sup>i</sup>

26 Do not flaunt your wisdom in managing your affairs,
or boast in your time of need.

27 Better the worker who has goods in plenty
than the boaster who has no food.<sup>j</sup>

28 My son, with humility have self-esteem;
and give yourself the esteem you deserve.

29 Who will acquit those who condemn
themselves?
Who will honor those who disgrace
themselves?

30 The poor are honored for their wisdom;
the rich are honored for their wealth.

31 Honored in poverty, how much more so in wealth!
Disgraced in wealth, in poverty how much the more!

CHAPTER 11

See RG 312–15

<sup>1</sup>The wisdom of the poor lifts their head high
and sets them among princes.

<sup>2</sup>Do not praise anyone for good looks;
or despise anyone because of appearance.

<sup>3</sup>The bee is least among winged creatures,
but it reaps the choicest of harvests.

<sup>4</sup>Do not mock the one who wears only a loin-cloth,
or scoff at a person's bitter day.
For strange are the deeds of the LORD,
hidden from mortals his work.*

<sup>5</sup>Many are the oppressed who rise to the
throne;
some that none would consider wear a crown.*

<sup>6</sup>Many are the exalted who fall into utter
disgrace,
many the honored who are given into the power of the few.

Moderation and Patience*

<sup>7</sup>Before investigating, do not find fault;
examine first, then criticize.

<sup>8</sup>Before listening, do not say a word, interrupt no one in the midst of speaking.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Do not dispute about what is not your concern;
in the quarrels of the arrogant do not take part.

<sup>10</sup>My son, why increase your anxiety,

since whoever is greedy for wealth
will not be blameless?
Even if you chase after it, you will never overtake it;
and by fleeing you will not escape.

11 One may work and struggle and drive, and fall short all the same.<sup>l</sup>

12 Others go their way broken-down drifters,
with little strength and great misery—
Yet the eye of the LORD looks favorably
upon them,
shaking them free of the stinking mire.

13 He lifts up their heads and exalts them to the amazement of the many.

14* Good and evil, life and death,<sup>m</sup> poverty and riches—all are from the LORD.†

17 The Lord's gift remains with the devout;
his favor brings lasting success.

18 Some become rich through a miser's life,
and this is their allotted reward:

19 When they say: "I have found rest,<sup>n</sup>
now I will feast on my goods," They do not know how long it will be till they die and leave them to others.*

20 My child, stand by your agreement and attend to it,
grow old while doing your work.

21 Do not marvel at the works of a sinner, but trust in the LORD and wait for his
light;
For it is easy in the eyes of the LORD suddenly, in an instant, to make the poor rich.

22 God's blessing is the lot of the
righteous,
and in due time their hope bears fruit.

23 Do not say: "What do I need?
What further benefits can be mine?"

- <sup>24</sup>Do not say: "I am self-sufficient.
What harm can come to me now?"
- <sup>25</sup>The day of prosperity makes one forget
adversity;
the day of adversity makes one forget prosperity.<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>26</sup>For it is easy for the Lord on the day of death*
to repay mortals according to their conduct.
- <sup>27</sup>A time of affliction brings forgetfulness
of past delights;
at the end of life one's deeds are revealed.
- <sup>28</sup>Call none happy before death,
for how they end, they are known.

Care in Choosing Friends

- <sup>29</sup>Not everyone should be brought into your house,
for many are the snares of the crafty.
- <sup>30</sup>Like a decoy partridge in a cage, so is the heart of the proud,
and like a spy they will pick out the weak spots.
- <sup>31</sup>For they lie in wait to turn good into evil,
and to praiseworthy deeds they attach blame.
- <sup>32</sup>One spark kindles many coals;
a sinner lies in wait for blood.
- <sup>33</sup>Beware of scoundrels, for they breed
only evil,
and they may give you a lasting stain.
- <sup>34</sup>Admit strangers into your home, and they will stir up trouble and make you a stranger to your own family.

CHAPTER 12

See RG 312–15

<sup>1</sup>If you do good, know for whom you are doing it,*
and your kindness will have its effect.

<sup>2</sup>Do good to the righteous and reward will be yours,
if not from them, from the LORD.<sup>P</sup>

<sup>3</sup>No good comes to those who give comfort to the wicked,
nor is it an act of mercy that they do.

<sup>5</sup>refresh the downtrodden but give nothing to the proud.

No arms for combat should you give
them,
lest they use these against you;
Twofold evil you will obtain for every good deed you do for them.

<sup>6</sup>For God also hates sinners, and takes vengeance on evildoers.*

<sup>8</sup>In prosperity we cannot know our friends;*
in adversity an enemy will not remain concealed.<sup>Q</sup>

<sup>9</sup>When one is successful even an enemy is friendly;
but in adversity even a friend disappears.<sup>R</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Never trust your enemies, for their wickedness is like corrosion
in bronze.

<sup>11</sup>Even though they act deferentially and peaceably toward you,
take care to be on your guard against them.<sup>S</sup>

Treat them as those who reveal secrets,*

and be certain that in the end there will still be envy.

<sup>12</sup>Do not let them stand near you, lest they push you aside and take your
place.

Do not let them sit at your right hand,
or they will demand your seat,
And in the end you will appreciate my advice,
when you groan with regret, as I warned.

<sup>13</sup>Who pities a snake charmer when he is bitten,*
or anyone who goes near a wild beast?

<sup>14</sup>So it is with the companion of the proud,
who is involved in their sins:

<sup>15</sup>While you stand firm, they make no move;
but if you slip, they cannot hold back.

<sup>16</sup>With their lips enemies speak sweetly, but in their heart they scheme to plunge you into the abyss.

Though enemies have tears in their eyes, given the chance, they will never have enough of your blood.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>17</sup>If evil comes upon you, you will find them at hand;
pretending to help, they will trip you up,

<sup>18</sup>Then they will shake their heads and clap their hands
and hiss repeatedly, and show their true faces.

CHAPTER 13

See RG 312–15

*Caution Regarding Associates**

<sup>1</sup>Touch pitch and you blacken your hand;
associate with scoundrels and you learn their ways.

<sup>2</sup>Do not lift a weight too heavy for you,
or associate with anyone wealthier
than you.

How can the clay pot go with the metal cauldron?

When they knock together, the pot will be smashed:

<sup>3</sup>The rich do wrong and boast of it,
while the poor are wronged and beg forgiveness.

<sup>4</sup>As long as the rich can use you they will enslave you,
but when you are down and out they will abandon you.

<sup>5</sup>As long as you have anything they will live with you,
but they will drain you dry without remorse.

<sup>6</sup>When they need you they will deceive
you
and smile at you and raise your hopes;
they will speak kindly to you and say,
“What do you need?”

<sup>7</sup>They will embarrass you at their dinner parties,
and finally laugh at you.

Afterwards, when they see you, they will pass you by,
and shake their heads at you.

<sup>8</sup>Be on guard: do not act too boldly;
do not be like those who lack sense.

- <sup>9</sup>When the influential draw near, keep your distance;
then they will urge you all the more.
- <sup>10</sup>Do not draw too close, lest you be rebuffed,
but do not keep too far away lest you
be regarded as an enemy.
- <sup>11</sup>Do not venture to be free with them,
do not trust their many words;
For by prolonged talk they will test you,
and though smiling they will probe
you.
- <sup>12</sup>Mercilessly they will make you a
laughingstock,
and will not refrain from injury or
chains.
- <sup>13</sup>Be on your guard and take care
never to accompany lawless people.†
- <sup>15</sup>Every living thing loves its own kind,
and we all love someone like ourselves.
- <sup>16</sup>Every living being keeps close to its own
kind;
and people associate with their own
kind.
- <sup>17</sup>Is a wolf ever allied with a lamb?
So the sinner with the righteous.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>18</sup>Can there be peace between the hyena
and the dog?
Or peace between the rich and the poor?*
- <sup>19</sup>Wild donkeys of the desert are lion's prey;
likewise the poor are feeding grounds
for the rich.
- <sup>20</sup>Humility is an abomination to the proud;
and the poor are an abomination to the rich.
- <sup>21</sup>When the rich stumble they are supported by friends;
when the poor trip they are pushed

down by friends.

<sup>22</sup>When the rich speak they have many supporters;
though what they say is repugnant, it wins approval.

When the poor speak people say, "Come,
come, speak up!"
though they are talking sense, they get no hearing.

<sup>23</sup>When the rich speak all are silent,
their wisdom people extol to the clouds.
When the poor speak people say: "Who is that?"
If they stumble, people knock them down.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Wealth is good where there is no sin;* but poverty is evil by the standards of the proud.

<sup>25</sup>The heart changes one's face, either for good or for evil.<sup>w</sup>

withdrawn and perplexed is the toiling
schemer.

CHAPTER 14

See RG 312–15

<sup>1*</sup>Happy those whose mouth causes them no grief,
those who are not stung by remorse for sin.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Happy are those whose conscience does not reproach them,
those who have not lost hope.

The Use of Wealth

<sup>3</sup>Wealth is not appropriate for the mean-spirited;*
to misers, what use is gold?

<sup>4</sup>What they deny themselves they collect for someone else,
and strangers will live sumptuously on their possessions.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>5</sup>To whom will they be generous that are stingy with themselves
and do not enjoy what is their own?

<sup>6</sup>None are worse than those who are
stingy with themselves;
they punish their own avarice.

<sup>7</sup>If ever they do good, it is by mistake;
in the end they reveal their meanness.

<sup>8</sup>Misers are evil people,
they turn away and disregard others.

<sup>9</sup>The greedy see their share as not enough;
greedy injustice dries up the soul.

<sup>10</sup>The eye of the miserly is rapacious for
food,
but there is none of it on their own
table.

<sup>11*</sup>My son, if you have the means, treat yourself well,

- and enjoy life as best you can.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>Remember that death does not delay,
and you have not been told the grave's appointed time.
- <sup>13</sup>Before you die, be good to your friends;
give them a share in what you possess.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>Do not deprive yourself of good things
now
or let a choice portion escape you.
- <sup>15</sup>Will you not leave your riches to others,
and your earnings to be divided by lot?
- <sup>16</sup>Give and take, treat yourself well,
for in Sheol there are no joys to seek.
- <sup>17</sup>All flesh grows old like a garment;
the age-old law is: everyone must die.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>18</sup>As with the leaves growing on a luxuriant tree—
one falls off and another sprouts—
So with the generations of flesh and
blood:
one dies and another flourishes.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>19</sup>All human deeds surely perish;
the works they do follow after them.

The Search for Wisdom and Her Blessings*

- <sup>20</sup>Happy those who meditate on Wisdom,
and fix their gaze on knowledge;<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>21</sup>Who ponder her ways in their heart,
and understand her paths;
- <sup>22</sup>Who pursue her like a scout,
and watch at her entry way;
- <sup>23</sup>Who peep through her windows,
and listen at her doors;
- <sup>24</sup>Who encamp near her house
and fasten their tent pegs next to her
walls;
- <sup>25</sup>Who pitch their tent beside her,

and dwell in a good place; *

26* Who build their nest in her leaves,
and lodge in her branches;

27 Who take refuge from the heat in her shade
and dwell in her home.

CHAPTER 15

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>Whoever fears the LORD will do
this;
whoever is practiced in the Law will come to Wisdom.
- <sup>2</sup>She will meet him like a mother;
like a young bride she will receive
him,
- <sup>3*</sup>She will feed him with the bread of
learning,
and give him the water of understanding to drink.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>He will lean upon her and not fall;
he will trust in her and not be put to shame.
- <sup>5</sup>She will exalt him above his neighbors,
and in the assembly she will make him eloquent.
- <sup>6</sup>Joy and gladness he will find,
and an everlasting name he will inherit.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>The worthless will not attain her,
and the haughty will not behold her.
- <sup>8</sup>She is far from the impious;
liars never think of her.
- <sup>9*</sup>Praise is unseemly on the lips of
sinners,
for it has not been allotted to them by
God.
- <sup>10</sup>But praise is uttered by the mouth of the
wise,
and its rightful owner teaches it.
- <sup>11</sup>Do not say: “It was God’s doing that I fell away,”
for what he hates he does not do.

Free Will*

<sup>12</sup>Do not say: "He himself has led me
astray,"

for he has no need of the wicked.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Abominable wickedness the LORD hates and he does not let it happen to those who fear him.

<sup>14</sup>God in the beginning created human beings
and made them subject to their own free choice.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>15</sup>If you choose, you can keep the
commandments;
loyalty is doing the will of God.

<sup>16</sup>Set before you are fire and water;
to whatever you choose, stretch out
your hand.

<sup>17</sup>Before everyone are life and death, whichever they choose will be given

<sup>18</sup>Immense is the wisdom of the LORD;
mighty in power, he sees all things.

<sup>19</sup>The eyes of God behold his works, and he understands every human deed.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>20</sup>He never commands anyone to sin, nor shows leniency toward deceivers.*

CHAPTER 16

See RG 312–15

God's Punishment of Sinners*

- <sup>1</sup>Do not yearn for worthless children,
or rejoice in wicked offspring.
- <sup>2</sup>Even if they be many, do not rejoice in
them
if they do not have fear of the LORD.
- <sup>3</sup>Do not count on long life for them,<sup>k</sup>
or have any hope for their future.
For one can be better than a thousand;
rather die childless than have impious
children!
- <sup>4</sup>Through one wise person a city can be peopled;
but through a clan of rebels it becomes
desolate.
- <sup>5</sup>Many such things my eye has seen,
and even more than these my ear has heard.
- <sup>6</sup>Against a sinful band fire is kindled,<sup>l</sup>
upon a godless people wrath blazes.*
- <sup>7</sup>He did not forgive the princes of old*
who rebelled long ago in their might.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>He did not spare the neighbors of Lot,* <sup>n</sup> abominable in their pride.
- <sup>9</sup>He did not spare the doomed people,* dispossessed because of their sin;
- <sup>10</sup>Nor the six hundred thousand foot soldiers,* <sup>o</sup> sent to their graves for the arrogance of their hearts.
- <sup>11</sup>Had there been but one stiff-necked*
person,
it would be a wonder had he gone
unpunished.

For mercy and anger alike are with him;
he remits and forgives, but also pours out wrath.

<sup>12</sup>Great as his mercy is his punishment;
he judges people, each according to their deeds.

<sup>13</sup>Criminals do not escape with their plunder;
the hope of the righteous, God never leaves unfulfilled.

<sup>14</sup>Whoever does good has a reward;
each receives according to their deeds.†

<sup>17</sup>Do not say: “I am hidden from God;
and on high who remembers me?
Among so many people I am unknown;
what am I in the world of spirits?

<sup>18</sup>Look, the heavens and the highest
heavens,
the abyss and the earth tremble at his visitation.

<sup>19</sup>The roots of the mountains and the earth’s foundations—
at his mere glance they quiver and quake.

<sup>20</sup>Of me, therefore, he will take no notice;
with my ways who will be concerned?

<sup>21</sup>If I sin, no eye will see me;
if all in secret I act deceitfully, who is to know?<sup>P</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Who tells him about just deeds?
What can I expect for doing my duty?”

<sup>23</sup>Such the thoughts of the senseless;
only the foolish entertain them.

Divine Wisdom Seen in Creation*

<sup>24</sup>Listen to me, my son, and take my advice,
and apply your mind to my words,

25 While I pour out my spirit by measure and impart knowledge with care.

26 When at the first God created his works and, as he made them, assigned their tasks,<sup>q</sup>

27 He arranged for all time what they were
to do,
their domains from generation to
generation.

They were not to go hungry or grow
weary,
or ever cease from their tasks.

28 Never does a single one crowd its
neighbor,
or do any ever disobey his word.

29 Then the Lord looked upon the earth, and filled it with his blessings.<sup>r</sup>

30 Its surface he covered with every kind of living creature
which must return into it again.

CHAPTER 17

See RG 312–15

Creation of Human Beings

<sup>1</sup>The Lord created human beings from the
earth,

and makes them return to earth again.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>2</sup>A limited number of days he gave them,<sup>t</sup> but granted them authority over everything on earth.

<sup>3</sup>He endowed them with strength like his own,
and made them in his image.

<sup>4</sup>He put fear of them in all flesh,
and gave them dominion over beasts
and birds.†

<sup>6</sup>Discernment, tongues, and eyes, ears, and a mind for thinking he gave
them.

<sup>7</sup>With knowledge and understanding he filled them;
good and evil he showed them.

<sup>8</sup>He put fear of him into their hearts to show them the grandeur of his works,

<sup>9</sup>That they might describe the wonders of his deeds

<sup>11</sup>He set before them knowledge,
and allotted to them the law of life.

<sup>12</sup>An everlasting covenant he made with
them,
and his commandments* he revealed to
them.

<sup>13</sup>His majestic glory their eyes beheld,
his glorious voice their ears heard.

<sup>14</sup>He said to them, “Avoid all evil”;

to each of them he gave precepts about their neighbor.

15 Their ways are ever known to him,
they cannot be hidden from his eyes.†

17 Over every nation he appointed a ruler,*
but Israel is the Lord's own portion.<sup>† u</sup>

19 All their works are clear as the sun to him,
and his eyes are ever upon their ways.

20 Their iniquities cannot be hidden from
him;
all their sins are before the Lord.†

22 Human goodness is like a signet ring
with God,
and virtue he keeps like the apple of his eye.

23 Later he will rise up and repay them,
requiting each one as they deserve.<sup>v</sup>

Appeal for a Return to God*

24 But to the penitent he provides a way back
and encourages those who are losing
hope!

25 Turn back to the Lord and give up your
sins,
pray before him and make your offenses few.

26 Turn again to the Most High and away
from iniquity,
and hate intensely what he loathes.

27* Who in Sheol can glorify the Most High<sup>w</sup>
in place of the living who offer their
praise?

28 The dead can no more give praise than those who have never lived;
they who are alive and well glorify the
Lord.

<sup>29</sup>How great is the mercy of the Lord, and his forgiveness for those who return to him!

<sup>30</sup>For not everything is within human reach,
since human beings are not immortal.

<sup>31</sup>Is anything brighter than the sun? Yet it can be eclipsed.

How worthless* then the thoughts of flesh and blood!

<sup>32</sup>God holds accountable the hosts of highest heaven,
while all mortals are dust and ashes.

CHAPTER 18

See RG 312–15

The Divine Power and Mercy*

- <sup>1</sup>He who lives forever created the whole universe;
<sup>2</sup>the LORD alone is just.†
- <sup>4</sup>To whom has he given power to describe
his works,
and who can search out his mighty
deeds?
- <sup>5</sup>Who can measure his majestic power,
or fully recount his mercies?
- <sup>6</sup>No one can lessen, increase,
or fathom the wonders of the Lord.
- <sup>7</sup>When mortals finish, they are only
beginning,
and when they stop they are still bewildered.
- <sup>8</sup>What are mortals? What are they worth?
What is good in them, and what is evil?
- <sup>9</sup>The number of their days seems great
if it reaches a hundred years.<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Like a drop of water from the sea and a grain of sand,
so are these few years among the days
of eternity.
- <sup>11</sup>That is why the Lord is patient with them and pours out his mercy on them.
- <sup>12</sup>He sees and understands that their death
is wretched,
and so he forgives them all the more.
- <sup>13</sup>Their compassion is for their neighbor,
but the Lord's compassion reaches all
flesh,
Reproving, admonishing, teaching,
and turning them back, as a shepherd

his flock.<sup>y</sup>

- 14 He has compassion on those who accept
his discipline,
who are eager for his precepts.

The Need for Prudence

- 15 My child, add no reproach to your charity,* or spoil any gift by harsh words.

- 16 Does not the dew give relief from the scorching heat?
So a word can be better than a gift.

- 17 Indeed does not a word count more than a good gift?
But both are offered by a kind person.

- 18 The fool is ungracious and abusive,
and a grudging gift makes the eyes
smart.<sup>z</sup>

- 19 Before you speak, learn;
before you get sick, prepare the cure.

- 20 Before you are judged, examine yourself,
and at the time of scrutiny you will have forgiveness.

- 21 Before you fall ill, humble yourself;
and when you have sinned, show
repentance.*

- Do not delay forsaking your sins;
do not neglect to do so until you are in distress.

- 22 Let nothing prevent the prompt payment
of your vows;
do not wait until death to fulfill them.<sup>a</sup>

- 23 Before making a vow prepare yourself;
do not be like one who puts the Lord
to the test.

- 24 Think of wrath on the day of death,
the time of vengeance when he will hide his face.<sup>b</sup>

25 Think of the time of hunger in the time of
plenty,
poverty and need in the day of wealth.<sup>c</sup>

26 Between morning and evening there is a change of time;
before the Lord all things are fleeting.

27 The wise are discreet in all things;
where sin is rife they keep themselves
from wrongdoing.

28 Every wise person teaches wisdom,*
and those who know her declare her
praise;

29 Those skilled in words become wise
themselves,
and pour forth apt proverbs.

Self-Control*

30 Do not let your passions be your guide,<sup>d</sup>
but keep your desires in check.

31 If you allow yourself to satisfy your passions,
they will make you the laughingstock
of your enemies.

32 Take no pleasure in too much luxury
which brings on poverty redoubled.

33 Do not become a glutton and a drunkard
with nothing in your purse.

CHAPTER 19

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>Whoever does this grows no richer;
those who waste the little they have
will be stripped bare.
- <sup>2</sup>Wine and women make the heart lustful,
and the companion of prostitutes becomes reckless.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>Rottenness and worms will possess
him,
and the reckless will be snatched away.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Whoever trusts others too quickly has a shallow mind,
and those who sin wrong themselves.

The Proper Use of Speech*

- <sup>5</sup>Whoever gloats over evil will be destroyed,
- <sup>6</sup>and whoever repeats gossip has no
sense.
- <sup>7</sup>Never repeat gossip,
and no one will reproach you.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>Tell nothing to friend or foe;
and unless it be a sin for you, do not reveal a thing.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>For someone may have heard you and watched you,
and in time come to hate you.
- <sup>10</sup>Let anything you hear die with you;
never fear, it will not make you burst!
- <sup>11</sup>Having heard something, the fool goes into labor,
like a woman giving birth to a child.
- <sup>12</sup>Like an arrow stuck in a fool's thigh,
so is gossip in the belly of a fool.
- <sup>13</sup>Admonish your friend—he may not have

- done it;
and if he did, that he may not do it again.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>Admonish your neighbor—he may not have said it;
and if he did, that he may not say it
again.
- <sup>15</sup>Admonish your friend—often it may be slander;
do not believe every story.
- <sup>16</sup>Then, too, a person can slip and not mean it;
who has not sinned with his tongue?<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>17</sup>Admonish your neighbor before you break with him;
and give due place to the Law of the Most High.<sup>† k</sup>

How to Recognize True Wisdom****

- <sup>20</sup>All wisdom is fear of the LORD;
and in all wisdom, the observance of the Law.<sup>† l</sup>
- <sup>22</sup>The knowledge of wickedness is not
wisdom,
nor is there prudence in the counsel of sinners.
- <sup>23</sup>There is a shrewdness that is detestable,
while the fool may be free from sin.
- <sup>24</sup>Better are the God-fearing who have little understanding than those of great intelligence who violate the Law.
- <sup>25</sup>There is a shrewdness keen but dishonest,
and there are those who are duplicitous
to win a judgment.
- <sup>26</sup>There is the villain bowed in grief,
but full of deceit within.
- <sup>27</sup>He hides his face and pretends not to hear,

but when not observed, he will take advantage of you:

<sup>28</sup>Even if his lack of strength keeps him
from sinning,
when he finds the right time he will do harm.

<sup>29</sup>People are known by their appearance;
the sensible are recognized as such when first met.

<sup>30</sup>One's attire, hearty laughter, and gait proclaim him for what he is.

CHAPTER 20

See RG 312–15

Conduct of the Wise and the Foolish

- <sup>1</sup>There is an admonition that is untimely,*
but the silent person is the wise one.
- <sup>2</sup>It is much better to admonish than to lose one's temper;
- <sup>3</sup>one who admits a fault will be kept
from disgrace.
- <sup>4</sup>Like a eunuch lusting to violate a young
woman
is the one who does right under compulsion.*
- <sup>5</sup>One is silent and is thought wise;
another, for being talkative, is disliked.
- <sup>6</sup>One is silent, having nothing to say;
another is silent, biding his time.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>The wise remain silent till the right time
comes,
but a boasting fool misses the proper
time.
- <sup>8</sup>Whoever talks too much is detested;
whoever pretends to authority is hated.
- <sup>9</sup>There is the misfortune that brings success;*
and there is the gain that turns into loss.
- <sup>10</sup>There is the gift that profits you nothing,
and there is the gift that must be paid back double.
- <sup>11</sup>There is the loss for the sake of glory,
and there is the one who rises above
humble circumstances.
- <sup>12</sup>There is one who buys much for little,
but pays for it seven times over.

13 The wise make themselves beloved by a few words,
but the courtesies of fools are wasted.

14 A gift from a fool will do you no good,
for in his eyes this one gift is equal to
many.

15 He gives little, criticizes often,
and opens his mouth like a town crier.
He lends today and asks for it tomorrow;
such a person is hateful.

16 A fool says, "I have no friends nor thanks for my generosity."
Those who eat his bread have a mocking
tongue.

17 How many will ridicule him, and how often!

18 A slip on the floor is better than a slip of the tongue;
in like manner the downfall of the wicked comes quickly.

19 A coarse person, an untimely story;
the ignorant are always ready to offer
it.

20 A proverb spoken by a fool is unwelcome,
for he does not tell it at the proper
time.

21 There is a person whose poverty prevents him from sinning,
but when he takes his rest he has no regrets.

22 There is a person who is destroyed
through shame,
and ruined by foolish posturing.

23 There is one who promises a friend out of shame,
and so makes an enemy needlessly.

24 A lie is a foul blot in a person, yet it is always on the lips of the ignorant.

<sup>25</sup>A thief is better than an inveterate liar,
yet both will suffer ruin.

<sup>26</sup>A liar's way leads to dishonor,
and his shame remains ever with him.

<sup>27</sup>The wise gain promotion with few words,*
the prudent please the great.

<sup>28</sup>Those who work the land have abundant crops,
and those who please the great are pardoned their faults.

<sup>29</sup>Favors and gifts blind the eyes;
like a muzzle over the mouth they silence reproofs.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>30</sup>Hidden wisdom and unseen treasure—
what value has either?

<sup>31</sup>Better are those who hide their folly than those who hide their wisdom.†

CHAPTER 21

See RG 312–15

Dangers from Sin*

<sup>1</sup>My child, if you have sinned, do so no
more,
and for your past sins pray to be forgiven.

<sup>2</sup>Flee from sin as from a serpent
that will bite you if you go near it;
Its teeth, lion's teeth,
destroying human lives.

<sup>3</sup>All lawlessness is like a two-edged
sword;
when it cuts, there is no healing.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Panic and pride wipe out wealth;
so too the house of the proud is uprooted.

<sup>5</sup>Prayer from the lips of the poor is heard
at once,
and justice is quickly granted them.

<sup>6</sup>Whoever hates correction walks the sinner's path,<sup>p</sup> but whoever fears the Lord repents in his heart.

<sup>7</sup>Glib speakers are widely known,
but when they slip the sensible
perceive it.

<sup>8</sup>Those who build their houses with someone else's money are like those who collect stones for their funeral mounds.

<sup>9</sup>A band of criminals is like a bundle of tow;
they will end in a flaming fire.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>10</sup>The path of sinners is smooth stones, but its end is the pit of Sheol.*

*The Wise and Foolish: A Contrast**

<sup>11</sup>Those who keep the Law control their
thoughts;
perfect fear of the Lord is wisdom.

<sup>12</sup>One who is not clever can never be taught,
but there is a cleverness filled with bitterness.

<sup>13</sup>The knowledge of the wise wells up like a flood,
and their counsel like a living spring.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>14</sup>A fool's mind is like a broken jar:
it cannot hold any knowledge at all.

<sup>15</sup>When the intelligent hear a wise saying,
they praise it and add to it.
The wanton hear it with distaste
and cast it behind their back.

<sup>16</sup>A fool's chatter is like a load on a journey,
but delight is to be found on the lips of the intelligent.

<sup>17</sup>The views of the prudent are sought in an
assembly,
and their words are taken to heart.

<sup>18</sup>Like a house in ruins is wisdom to a fool;
to the stupid, knowledge is incomprehensible chatter.

<sup>19</sup>To the senseless, education is fetters on the feet,
like manacles on the right hand.

<sup>20</sup>Fools raise their voice in laughter,
but the prudent at most smile quietly.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Like a gold ornament is education to the
wise,
like a bracelet on the right arm.

<sup>22</sup>A fool steps boldly into a house, while the well-bred are slow to make an entrance.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>23</sup>A boor peeps through the doorway of a
house,
but the educated stay outside.

<sup>24</sup>It is rude for one to listen at a door;
the discreet person would be overwhelmed by the disgrace.

<sup>25</sup>The lips of the arrogant talk of what is not their concern,
but the discreet carefully weigh their
words.

<sup>26</sup>The mind of fools is in their mouths, but the mouth of the wise is in their mind.*

<sup>27</sup>When the godless curse their adversary,*
they really curse themselves.

<sup>28</sup>Slanderers sully themselves,
and are hated by their neighbors.

CHAPTER 22

See RG 312–15

On Laziness and Foolishness

- <sup>1*</sup>The sluggard is like a filthy stone;* everyone hisses at his disgrace.
- <sup>2</sup>The sluggard is like a lump of dung;
whoever touches it shakes it off the
hands.
- <sup>3</sup>An undisciplined child is a disgrace to its
father;
if it be a daughter, she brings him to poverty.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>A thoughtful daughter obtains a husband
of her own;
a shameless one is her father's grief.
- <sup>5</sup>A hussy shames her father and her husband;
she is despised by both.
- <sup>6</sup>Like music at the time of mourning is illtimed talk,* but lashes and discipline are at all times wisdom.†
- <sup>9</sup>Teaching a fool is like gluing a broken
pot,<sup>v</sup>
or rousing another from deep sleep.
- <sup>10</sup>Whoever talks with a fool talks to someone asleep;
when it is over, he says, "What was that?"
- <sup>11</sup>Weep over the dead, for their light has gone out;
weep over the fool, for sense has left
him.
Weep but less bitterly over the dead, for they are at rest;

worse than death is the life of a fool.

<sup>12</sup>Mourning for the dead, seven days—<sup>w</sup>
but for the wicked fool, a whole lifetime.

<sup>13</sup>Do not talk much with the stupid,
or visit the unintelligent.
Beware of them lest you have trouble and be spattered when they shake themselves off.

Avoid them and you will find rest and not be wearied by their lack of sense.

<sup>14</sup>What is heavier than lead?
What is its name but “Fool”?

<sup>15</sup>Sand, salt, and an iron weight are easier to bear than the stupid person.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>16</sup>A wooden beam firmly bonded into a building*
is not loosened by an earthquake;
So the mind firmly resolved after careful
deliberation
will not be afraid at any time.

<sup>17</sup>The mind solidly backed by intelligent thought is like a stucco decoration on a smooth wall.

<sup>18</sup>Small stones lying on an open height
will not remain when the wind blows;
So a timid mind based on foolish plans
cannot stand up to fear of any kind.

The Preservation of Friendship*

<sup>19</sup>Whoever jabs the eye brings tears;
whoever pierces the heart bares its feelings.

<sup>20</sup>Whoever throws a stone at birds drives
them away;
whoever insults a friend breaks up the

friendship.

<sup>21</sup>Should you draw a sword against a friend,
do not despair, for it can be undone.

<sup>22</sup>Should you open your mouth against a friend,
do not worry, for you can be reconciled.

But a contemptuous insult, a confidence
broken,
or a treacherous attack will drive any friend away.

<sup>23</sup>Win your neighbor's trust while he is poor, so that you may rejoice with him in his prosperity.

In time of trouble remain true to him, so that you may share in his inheritance when it comes.

<sup>24</sup>The billowing smoke of a furnace precedes the fire,
so insults precede bloodshed.

<sup>25</sup>I am not ashamed to shelter a friend, and I will not hide from him.

<sup>26</sup>But if harm should come to me because
of him,
all who hear of it will beware of him.

Prayer*

<sup>27</sup>Who will set a guard over my mouth,
an effective seal on my lips,
That I may not fail through them,
and my tongue may not destroy me?<sup>y</sup>

CHAPTER 23

See RG 312–15

<sup>1</sup>Lord, Father and Master of my life,*
do not abandon me to their designs,
do not let me fall because of them!

<sup>2</sup>Who will apply the lash to my thoughts,
and to my mind the rod of discipline,
That my failings may not be spared
or the sins of my heart overlooked?

<sup>3</sup>Otherwise my failings may increase,
and my sins be multiplied;
And I fall before my adversaries,
and my enemy rejoice over me?

<sup>4</sup>Lord, Father and God of my life,
do not give me haughty eyes;
<sup>5</sup>remove evil desire from my heart.

<sup>6</sup>Let neither gluttony nor lust overcome me;
do not give me up to shameless desires.<sup>z</sup>

Proper Use of the Tongue*

<sup>7</sup>Listen, my children, to instruction
concerning the mouth,
for whoever keeps it will not be
ensnared.

<sup>8</sup>Through the lips the sinner is caught;
by them the reviler and the arrogant
are tripped up.

<sup>9</sup>Do not accustom your mouth to oaths, or habitually utter the Holy Name.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Just as a servant constantly under scrutiny
will not be without bruises,
So one who swears continually by the Holy Name
will never remain free from sin.

<sup>11</sup>Those who swear many oaths heap up offenses;
and the scourge will never be far from their houses.

If they swear in error, guilt is incurred;
if they neglect their obligation, the sin
is doubly great.<sup>b</sup>

If they swear without reason they cannot be declared innocent,
for their households will be filled with calamities.

<sup>12</sup>There are words comparable to death;
may they never be heard in the inheritance of Jacob.

To the devout all such words are foreign;
they do not wallow in sin.

<sup>13</sup>Do not accustom your mouth to coarse talk,
for it involves sinful speech.

<sup>14</sup>Keep your father and mother in mind when you sit among the mighty,<sup>c</sup>

Lest you forget yourself in their presence and disgrace your upbringing.

Then you will wish you had never been
born
and will curse the day of your birth.

<sup>15</sup>Those accustomed to using abusive language
will never acquire discipline as long as they live.

Sins of the Flesh*

<sup>16</sup>Two types of people multiply sins,
and a third* draws down wrath:
Burning passion is like a blazing fire,
not to be quenched till it burns itself
out;

One unchaste with his kindred never stops until fire breaks forth.

<sup>17</sup>To the unchaste all bread is sweet;
he is never through till he dies.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>18</sup>The man who dishonors his marriage bed
says to himself, "Who can see me?
Darkness surrounds me, walls hide me,
no one sees me. Who can stop me from sinning?"<sup>e</sup>

He is not mindful of the Most High, <sup>19</sup>fearing only human eyes.
He does not realize that the eyes of the Lord,
    ten thousand times brighter than the sun,
Observe every step taken
    and peer into hidden corners.
<sup>20</sup>The one who knows all things before they exist
    still knows them all after they are
    made.
<sup>21</sup>Such a man will be denounced in the streets of the city;<sup>f</sup> and where he least suspects it, he will be apprehended.

<sup>22</sup>So it is with the woman unfaithful to her husband,
    who offers him an heir by another man.
<sup>23</sup>First of all, she has disobeyed the law of
    the Most High;
    second, she has wronged her husband;
Third, through her wanton adultery
    she has brought forth children by another man.
<sup>24</sup>Such a woman will be dragged before the assembly,*
    and her punishment will extend to her
    children.
<sup>25</sup>Her children will not take root;
    her branches will not bring forth fruit.
<sup>26</sup>She will leave behind an accursed memory;
    her disgrace will never be blotted out.

<sup>27</sup>Thus all who dwell on the earth shall
    know,
    all who remain in the world shall
    understand,
That nothing is better than the fear of the Lord,

nothing sweeter than obeying the commandments of the Lord.<sup>g†</sup>

CHAPTER 24

See RG 312–15

Praise of Wisdom

<sup>1</sup>Wisdom sings her own praises,* among her own people she proclaims
her glory.

<sup>2</sup>In the assembly of the Most High she opens her mouth,
in the presence of his host she tells of
her glory:

<sup>3</sup>“From the mouth of the Most High I came forth,<sup>h</sup>
and covered the earth like a mist.

<sup>4</sup>In the heights of heaven I dwelt,
and my throne was in a pillar of cloud.

<sup>5</sup>The vault of heaven I compassed alone,
and walked through the deep abyss.

<sup>6</sup>Over waves of the sea, over all the land, over every people and nation I held sway.

<sup>7</sup>Among all these I sought a resting place.
In whose inheritance should I abide?

<sup>8</sup>“Then the Creator of all gave me his command,
and my Creator chose the spot for my tent.

He said, ‘In Jacob make your dwelling,
in Israel your inheritance.’

<sup>9</sup>Before all ages, from the beginning, he created me,
and through all ages I shall not cease
to be.

<sup>10</sup>In the holy tent I ministered before him,
and so I was established in Zion.

<sup>11</sup>In the city he loves as he loves me, he gave me rest;

in Jerusalem, my domain.

<sup>12</sup>I struck root among the glorious people, in the portion of the Lord, his heritage.

<sup>13</sup>“Like a cedar in Lebanon I grew tall,
like a cypress on Mount Hermon;

<sup>14</sup>I grew tall like a palm tree in Engedi,
like rosebushes in Jericho;

Like a fair olive tree in the field,
like a plane tree beside water I grew tall.

<sup>15</sup>Like cinnamon and fragrant cane,
like precious myrrh I gave forth
perfume;

Like galbanum and onycha and mastic,<sup>i</sup>
like the odor of incense in the holy

<sup>16</sup>“I spread out my branches like a terebinth,
my branches so glorious and so graceful.

<sup>17</sup>I bud forth delights like a vine;
my blossoms are glorious and rich
fruit.†

<sup>19</sup>Come to me, all who desire me, and be filled with my fruits.*

<sup>20</sup>You will remember me as sweeter than honey,
better to have than the honeycomb.

<sup>21</sup>Those who eat of me will hunger still,* those who drink of me will thirst for more.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Whoever obeys me will not be put to
shame,
and those who serve me will never go
astray.”

<sup>23</sup>All this is the book of the covenant of the Most High God,<sup>k</sup>

the Law which Moses commanded us*
as a heritage for the community of Jacob.†

<sup>25</sup>It overflows, like the Pishon, with wisdom,<sup>l</sup>
and like the Tigris at the time of first fruits.

<sup>26</sup>It runs over, like the Euphrates, with
understanding,
and like the Jordan at harvest time.

<sup>27</sup>It floods like the Nile with instruction,
like the Gihon* at vintage time.

<sup>28</sup>The first human being never finished comprehending wisdom,
nor will the last succeed in fathoming
her.

<sup>29</sup>For deeper than the sea are her thoughts,
and her counsels, than the great abyss.

<sup>30</sup>Now I, like a stream from a river,* and like water channeling into a garden—

<sup>31</sup>I said, “I will water my plants,
I will drench my flower beds.”

Then suddenly this stream of mine became a river,
and this river of mine became a sea.

<sup>32</sup>Again I will make my teachings shine forth like the dawn;
I will spread their brightness afar off.

<sup>33</sup>Again I will pour out instruction like prophecy
and bestow it on generations yet to come.

CHAPTER 25

See RG 312–15

Those Who Are Worthy of Praise

<sup>1*</sup>With three things I am delighted, for they are pleasing to the Lord and to
human beings:

Harmony among relatives, friendship
among neighbors,
and a wife and a husband living happily together.

<sup>2</sup>Three kinds of people I hate,
and I loathe their manner of life:
A proud pauper, a rich liar,
and a lecherous old fool.

<sup>3</sup>In your youth you did not gather.
How will you find anything in your old age?

<sup>4</sup>How appropriate is sound judgment in the gray-haired,
and good counsel in the elderly!

<sup>5</sup>How appropriate is wisdom in the aged, understanding and counsel in the venerable!

<sup>6</sup>The crown of the elderly, wide
experience;
their glory, the fear of the Lord.

<sup>7</sup>There are nine who come to mind as blessed,
a tenth whom my tongue proclaims: *
The man who finds joy in his children, and the one who lives to see the downfall of his enemies.

<sup>8</sup>Happy the man who lives with a sensible
woman,
and the one who does not plow with an ox and a donkey combined. *

Happy the one who does not sin with the
tongue,
who does not serve an inferior.
<sup>9</sup>Happy the one who finds a friend, who speaks to attentive ears.
<sup>10</sup>How great is the one who finds wisdom,
but none is greater than the one who
fears the Lord.
<sup>11</sup>Fear of the Lord surpasses all else.
To whom can we compare the one who has it?†

Wicked and Virtuous Women*

<sup>13</sup>Any wound, but not a wound of the heart!
Any wickedness, but not the wickedness of a woman!
<sup>14</sup>Any suffering, but not suffering from one's foes!
Any vengeance, but not the vengeance
of one's enemies!
<sup>15</sup>There is no poison worse than that of a serpent,
no venom greater than that of a
woman.
<sup>16</sup>I would rather live with a dragon or a lion
than live with a wicked woman.<sup>m</sup> <sup>17</sup>A woman's wicked disposition changes
her appearance,
and makes her face as dark as a bear.
<sup>18</sup>When her husband sits among his neighbors,
a bitter sigh escapes him unawares.
<sup>19</sup>There is hardly an evil like that in a
woman;
may she fall to the lot of the sinner!
<sup>20</sup>Like a sandy hill to aged feet
is a garrulous wife to a quiet husband.

<sup>21</sup>Do not be enticed by a woman's beauty,
or be greedy for her wealth.

<sup>22</sup>Harsh is the slavery and great the shame
when a wife supports her husband.

<sup>23</sup>Depressed mind, gloomy face,
and a wounded heart—a wicked
woman.

Drooping hands and quaking knees,
any wife who does not make her husband happy.

<sup>24</sup>With a woman sin had a beginning, and because of her we all die.*

<sup>25</sup>Allow water no outlet,
and no boldness of speech to a wicked
woman.

<sup>26</sup>If she does not go along as you direct,
cut her away from you.

CHAPTER 26

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>Happy the husband of a good wife;*
the number of his days will be doubled.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>A loyal wife brings joy to her husband,
and he will finish his years in peace.
- <sup>3</sup>A good wife is a generous gift bestowed upon him who fears the Lord.<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Whether rich or poor, his heart is content,
a smile ever on his face.
- <sup>5</sup>There are three things I dread,
and a fourth which terrifies me:
Public slander, the gathering of a mob, and false accusation—all harder to bear than death.
- <sup>6</sup>A wife jealous of another wife is heartache and mourning;*
everyone feels the lash of her tongue.
- <sup>7</sup>A wicked wife is a chafing yoke;
taking hold of her is like grasping a scorpion.
- <sup>8</sup>A drunken wife arouses great anger,
for she does not hide her shame.
- <sup>9</sup>By her haughty stare and her eyelids
an unchaste wife can be recognized.
- <sup>10</sup>Keep a strict watch over an unruly wife,
lest, finding an opportunity, she use it;<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>Watch out for her impudent eye,
and do not be surprised if she betrays
you:
- <sup>12</sup>As a thirsty traveler opens his mouth
and drinks from any water nearby,
So she sits down before every tent peg
and opens her quiver for every arrow.

13 A gracious wife delights her husband;
her thoughtfulness puts flesh on his bones.

14 A silent wife is a gift from the Lord;
nothing is worth more than her self-discipline.

15 A modest wife is a supreme blessing;
no scales can weigh the worth of her chastity.

16 The sun rising in the Lord's heavens—
the beauty of a good wife in her well-ordered home.

17 The light which shines above the holy lampstand—*
a beautiful face on a stately figure.

18 Golden columns on silver bases—
so her shapely legs and steady feet.†

Dangers to Integrity and Friendship

28* Two things bring grief to my heart,
and a third arouses my anger:
The wealthy reduced to want,
the intelligent held in contempt,
And those who pass from righteousness
to sin—
the Lord prepares them for the sword.<sup>q</sup>

29 A merchant can hardly keep from wrongdoing,
nor can a shopkeeper stay free from sin;

CHAPTER 27

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>For the sake of profit many sin,
and the struggle for wealth blinds the eyes.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>A stake will be driven between fitted
stones—
sin will be wedged in between buying and selling.
- <sup>3</sup>Unless one holds fast to the fear of the Lord,
with sudden swiftness will one's house
be thrown down.
- <sup>4</sup>When a sieve is shaken, the husks appear;
so do people's faults when they speak.*
- <sup>5</sup>The furnace tests the potter's vessels;
the test of a person is in conversation.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>The fruit of a tree shows the care it has had;
so speech discloses the bent of a person's heart.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>Praise no one before he speaks,
for it is then that people are tested.
- <sup>8</sup>If you strive after justice, you will attain it,
and wear it like a splendid robe.
- <sup>9</sup>Birds nest with their own kind,
and honesty comes to those who work
at it.
- <sup>10</sup>A lion lies in wait for prey,
so does sin for evildoers.
- <sup>11</sup>The conversation of the godly is always
wisdom,
but the fool changes like the moon.
- <sup>12</sup>Limit the time you spend among the

- stupid,
but frequent the company of the thoughtful.
- 13 The conversation of fools is offensive,
and their laughter is wanton sin.
- 14 Their oath-filled talk makes the hair
stand on end,
and their brawls make one stop the
ears.
- 15 The wrangling of the proud ends in
bloodshed,
and their cursing is painful to hear.<sup>u</sup>
- 16 Whoever betrays a secret destroys confidence,*
and will never find a congenial friend.<sup>v</sup>
- 17 Cherish your friend, keep faith with him;
but if you betray his secrets, do not go
after him;
- 18 For as one might kill another,
you have killed your neighbor's
friendship.
- 19 Like a bird released from your hand,
you have let your friend go and cannot recapture him.
- 20 Do not go after him, for he is far away,
and has escaped like a gazelle from a snare.
- 21 For a wound can be bandaged, and an insult forgiven,
but whoever betrays secrets does hopeless damage.<sup>w</sup>

Malice, Anger and Vengeance

- 22 Whoever has shifty eyes plots mischief and those who know him will keep their distance;
- 23 In your presence he uses honeyed talk,
and admires your words,

But later he changes his tone
and twists the words to your ruin.<sup>x</sup> 24 I have hated many things but not as much as him,
and the Lord hates him as well.<sup>y</sup> 25 A stone falls back on the head of the one who throws it high,<sup>z</sup> and a treacherous blow causes many wounds.
26 Whoever digs a pit falls into it, and whoever lays a snare is caught in it.* 27 The evil anyone does will recoil on him without knowing how it came upon him.
28 Mockery and abuse will befall the arrogant,
and vengeance lies in wait for them
like a lion.
29 Those who rejoice in the downfall of the godly will be caught in a snare,
and pain will consume them before they die.
30 Wrath and anger, these also are
abominations,
yet a sinner holds on to them.

CHAPTER 28

See RG 312–15

<sup>1</sup>The vengeful will face the Lord's
    vengeance;
    indeed he remembers their sins in detail.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Forgive your neighbor the wrong done to
    you;
    then when you pray, your own sins
    will be forgiven.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Does anyone nourish anger against another and expect healing from the LORD?<sup>c</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Can one refuse mercy to a sinner like oneself,
    yet seek pardon for one's own sins?

<sup>5</sup>If a mere mortal cherishes wrath,
    who will forgive his sins?

<sup>6</sup>Remember your last days and set enmity
    aside;
    remember death and decay, and cease
    from sin!<sup>d</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Remember the commandments and do not be angry with your neighbor;
    remember the covenant of the Most High, and overlook faults.

<sup>8</sup>Avoid strife and your sins will be fewer,
    for the hot-tempered kindle strife;

<sup>9</sup>The sinner disrupts friendships and sows discord among those who are at peace.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>10</sup>The more the wood, the greater the fire,<sup>f</sup>
    the more the cruelty, the fiercer the strife;
The greater the strength, the sterner the
    anger,
    the greater the wealth, the greater the
    wrath.

<sup>11</sup>Pitch and resin make fire flare up,
and a hasty quarrel provokes bloodshed.

The Evil Tongue*

<sup>12</sup>If you blow on a spark, it turns into flame,
if you spit on it, it dies out;
yet both you do with your mouth!

<sup>13</sup>Cursed be gossips and the
double-tongued,
for they destroy the peace of many.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>14</sup>A meddlesome tongue subverts many,
and makes them refugees among
peoples.

It destroys strong cities,
and overthrows the houses of the great.

<sup>15</sup>A meddlesome tongue drives virtuous
women from their homes,
and robs them of the fruit of their toil.

<sup>16</sup>Whoever heed it will find no rest,
nor will they dwell in peace.

<sup>17</sup>A blow from a whip raises a welt,
but a blow from the tongue will break
bones.

<sup>18</sup>Many have fallen by the edge of the
sword,
but not as many as by the tongue.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Happy the one who is sheltered from it,
and has not endured its wrath;
Who has not borne its yoke
nor been bound with its chains.

<sup>20</sup>For its yoke is a yoke of iron,
and its chains are chains of bronze;

<sup>21</sup>The death it inflicts is an evil death,
even Sheol is preferable to it.

<sup>22</sup>It will have no power over the godly,
nor will they be burned in its flame.

<sup>23</sup>But those who forsake the Lord will fall victim to it,
as it burns among them unquenchably;

It will hurl itself against them like a lion,
and like a leopard, it will tear them to pieces.

<sup>24</sup>As you fence in your property with thorns,
so make a door and a bolt for your mouth. i

<sup>25</sup>As you lock up your silver and gold, so make balances and scales for your
words.

<sup>26</sup>Take care not to slip by your tongue
and fall victim to one lying in ambush.

CHAPTER 29

See RG 312–15

*Loans, Alms and Surety**

<sup>1</sup>The merciful lend to their neighbor, by holding out a helping hand, they keep the commandments.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Lend to your neighbor in his time of
need,
and pay back your neighbor in time.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Keep your promise and be honest with
him,
and at all times you will find what you
need.

<sup>4</sup>Many borrowers ask for a loan and cause trouble for those who help
them.

<sup>5</sup>Till he gets a loan, he kisses the lender's
hand
and speaks softly of his creditor's
money,

But at time of payment, delays, makes excuses, and finds fault with the timing.

<sup>6</sup>If he can pay, the lender will recover barely half,
and will consider that a windfall.

If he cannot pay, the lender is cheated of his money
and acquires an enemy at no extra charge;

With curses and insults the borrower will repay,
and instead of honor will repay with abuse.

<sup>7</sup>Many refuse to lend, not out of meanness,
but from fear of being cheated
needlessly.

- <sup>8</sup>But with those in humble circumstances
be patient;
do not keep them waiting for your alms.
- <sup>9</sup>Because of the commandment, help the
poor,
and in their need, do not send them away empty-handed.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Lose your money for relative or friend;
do not hide it under a stone to rot.
- <sup>11</sup>Dispose of your treasure according to the commandments of the Most High,
and that will profit you more than the gold.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>12*</sup>Store up almsgiving in your treasury,
and it will save you from every evil.
- <sup>13</sup>Better than a mighty shield and a sturdy spear
it will fight for you against the enemy.
- <sup>14*</sup>A good person will be surety for a
neighbor,
but whoever has lost a sense of shame
will fail him.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>15</sup>Do not forget the kindness of your backer,
for he has given his very life for you.
- <sup>16</sup>A sinner will turn the favor of a pledge
into misfortune,
- <sup>17</sup>and the ungrateful will abandon his rescuer.
- <sup>18</sup>Going surety has ruined many who were prosperous
and tossed them about like waves of the sea;<sup>o</sup>
- It has exiled the prominent and sent them wandering through foreign lands.
- <sup>19</sup>The sinner will come to grief through surety,

and whoever undertakes too much will fall into lawsuits.

<sup>20</sup>Help your neighbor according to your means,
but take care lest you fall yourself.

Frugality and Its Rewards****

<sup>21</sup>Life's prime needs are water, bread, and clothing,

and also a house for decent privacy.<sup>P</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Better is the life of the poor under the shadow of their own roof
than sumptuous banquets among strangers.<sup>Q</sup>

<sup>23</sup>Whether little or much, be content with what you have:
then you will hear no reproach as a parasite.

<sup>24</sup>It is a miserable life to go from house to house,
for where you are a guest you dare not open your mouth.

<sup>25</sup>You will entertain and provide drink without being thanked;
besides, you will hear these bitter words:

<sup>26</sup>"Come here, you parasite, set the table,
let me eat the food you have there!

<sup>27</sup>Go away, you parasite, for one more worthy;
for my relative's visit I need the room!"

<sup>28</sup>Painful things to a sensitive person are rebuke as a parasite and insults from creditors.

The Training of Children*

<sup>1</sup>Whoever loves a son will chastise him
often,
that he may be his joy when he grows up.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Whoever disciplines a son will benefit from him,
and boast of him among acquaintances.

<sup>3</sup>Whoever educates a son will make his enemy jealous,
and rejoice in him among his friends.

<sup>4</sup>At the father's death, he will seem not
dead,
for he leaves after him one like himself,

<sup>5</sup>Whom he looked upon through life with
joy,
and in death, without regret.

<sup>6</sup>Against his enemies he has left an avenger,
and one to repay his friends with kindness.

<sup>7</sup>Whoever spoils a son will have wounds
to bandage,
and will suffer heartache at every cry.

<sup>8</sup>An untamed horse turns out stubborn;
and a son left to himself grows up unruly.

<sup>9</sup>Pamper a child and he will be a terror for
you,
indulge him, and he will bring you
grief.

<sup>10</sup>Do not laugh with him lest you share sorrow with him,

and in the end you will gnash your teeth.

<sup>11</sup>Do not give him his own way in his youth,
and do not ignore his follies.

<sup>12</sup>Bow down his head in his youth, beat his sides while he is still young,
Lest he become stubborn and disobey
you,

and leave you disconsolate.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Discipline your son and make heavy his yoke,
lest you be offended by his
shamelessness.

Health and Cheerfulness*

<sup>14</sup>Better the poor in vigorous health than the rich with bodily ills.

<sup>15</sup>I would rather have bodily health than any gold,
and contentment of spirit than pearls.

<sup>16</sup>No riches are greater than a healthy body;
and no happiness than a joyful heart.

<sup>17</sup>Better is death than a wretched life,<sup>t</sup> everlasting sleep than constant illness.

<sup>18</sup>Good things set before one who cannot eat
are like food offerings placed before a tomb.<sup>* u</sup>

<sup>19</sup>What good is an offering to an idol
that can neither eat nor smell?

So it is with the one being punished by
the Lord,

<sup>20</sup>who groans at what his eyes behold.

<sup>21</sup>Do not give in to sadness, or torment yourself deliberately.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Gladness of heart is the very life of a
person,
and cheerfulness prolongs his days.

<sup>23</sup>Distract yourself and renew your courage,

drive resentment far away from you;
For grief has killed many,<sup>w</sup> and nothing is to be gained from resentment.
<sup>24</sup>Envy and anger shorten one's days,
and anxiety brings on premature old age.
<sup>25</sup>Those who are cheerful and merry at
table
benefit from their food.*<sup>x</sup>

CHAPTER 31

See RG 312–15

The Proper Attitude Toward Riches*

- <sup>1</sup>Wakefulness over wealth wastes away
the flesh,
and anxiety over it drives away sleep.
- <sup>2</sup>Wakeful anxiety banishes slumber;
more than a serious illness it disturbs repose.
- <sup>3</sup>The rich labor to pile up wealth,
and if they rest, it is to enjoy pleasure;
- <sup>4</sup>The poor labor for a meager living,
and if they ever rest, they become needy.
- <sup>5</sup>The lover of gold will not be free from sin;
whoever pursues money will be led astray by it.
- <sup>6</sup>Many have come to ruin for the sake of
gold,
yet destruction lay before their very eyes;<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>It is a stumbling block for fools;
any simpleton will be ensnared by it.
- <sup>8</sup>Happy the rich person found without
fault,
who does not turn aside after wealth.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>Who is he, that we may praise him?
For he has done wonders among his
people.
- <sup>10</sup>Who has been tested by gold and been found perfect?
Let it be for him his glory;
Who could have sinned but did not,
and could have done evil but did not?
- <sup>11</sup>So his good fortune is secure,

and the assembly will recount his praises.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Are you seated at the table of the great?
Bring to it no greedy gullet,
Nor say, "How much food there is here!"

<sup>13</sup>Remember that the greedy eye is evil.
What has been created more greedy than the eye?

Therefore, it weeps for any cause.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Recognize that your neighbor feels as you do,
and keep in mind everything you dislike.

<sup>14</sup>Toward what he looks at, do not put out a
hand;
nor reach for the same dish when he does.

<sup>16</sup>Eat, like anyone else, what is set before
you,
but do not eat greedily, lest you be
despised.

<sup>17</sup>Be the first to stop, as befits good manners;
and do not gorge yourself, lest you give offense.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>18</sup>If there are many with you at table, do not be the first to stretch out your
hand.

<sup>19</sup>Does not a little suffice for a well-bred
person?
When he lies down, he does not wheeze.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Moderate eating ensures sound slumber and a clear mind on rising the next day.

The distress of sleeplessness and of nausea
and colic are with the glutton!

<sup>21</sup>Should you have eaten too much,

get up to vomit* and you will have relief.

<sup>22</sup>Listen to me, my child, and do not scorn
me;

later you will find my advice good.

In whatever you do, be moderate,
and no sickness will befall you.

<sup>23</sup>People bless one who is generous with
food,
and this testimony to his goodness is lasting.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>24</sup>The city complains about one who is stingy with food,
and this testimony to his stinginess is lasting.

<sup>25</sup>Let not wine be the proof of your strength, for wine has been the ruin of many.

<sup>26</sup>As the furnace tests the work of the smith,
so does wine the hearts of the insolent.

<sup>27</sup>Wine is very life to anyone,
if taken in moderation.

Does anyone really live who lacks the
wine
which from the beginning was created for joy?<sup>f</sup>

<sup>28</sup>Joy of heart, good cheer, and delight is wine enough, drunk at the proper
time.

<sup>29</sup>Headache, bitterness, and disgrace is wine drunk amid anger and strife.

<sup>30</sup>Wine in excess is a snare for the fool;
it lessens strength and multiplies
wounds.

<sup>31</sup>Do not wrangle with your neighbor when wine is served,
nor despise him while he is having a good time;

Say no harsh words to him
nor distress him by making demands.

CHAPTER 32

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>If you are chosen to preside at a dinner, do not be puffed up,
but with the guests be as one of them;
Take care of them first and then sit down; <sup>2</sup>see to their needs, and then take your
place,
To share in their joy
and receive a wreath for a job well done.
- <sup>3</sup>You who are older, it is your right to speak,
but temper your knowledge and do not interrupt the singing.
- <sup>4</sup>Where there is entertainment, do not pour out discourse,
and do not display your wisdom at the wrong time.
- <sup>5</sup>Like a seal of carnelian in a setting of
gold:
a concert of music at a banquet of
wine.
- <sup>6</sup>A seal of emerald in a work of gold:
the melody of music with delicious
wine.
- <sup>7</sup>Speak, young man, only when necessary,<sup>g</sup>
when they have asked you more than once.
- <sup>8</sup>Be brief, say much in few words;
be knowledgeable and yet quiet.
- <sup>9</sup>When among elders do not be forward,
and with officials do not be too insistent.
- <sup>10</sup>The lightning that flashes before a hailstorm:
the esteem that shines on modesty.
- <sup>11</sup>Leave in good time and do not be the

- last;
go home quickly without delay.
- <sup>12</sup>There enjoy doing as you wish,
but do not sin through words of pride.
- <sup>13</sup>Above all, bless your Maker,
who showers his favors upon you.

The Providence of God

- <sup>14</sup>Whoever seeks God must accept
discipline;*
and whoever resorts to him obtains an answer.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>15</sup>Whoever seeks the law will master it, but the hypocrite will be ensnared by it.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>16</sup>Whoever fears the Lord will understand
what is right,
and out of obscurity he will draw forth
a course of action.<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>17</sup>The lawless turn aside warnings
and distort the law to suit their purpose.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>18</sup>The sensible will not neglect direction;
the proud and insolent are deterred by no fear.
- <sup>19</sup>Do nothing without deliberation;
then once you have acted, have no regrets.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>20</sup>Do not go on a way set with snares,
and do not stumble on the same thing twice.
- <sup>21</sup>Do not trust the road, because of bandits;
<sup>22</sup>be careful on your paths.
- <sup>23</sup>Whatever you do, be on your guard,
for whoever does so keeps the
commandments.
- <sup>24</sup>Whoever keeps the law preserves himself;

and whoever trusts in the Lord shall not be put to shame.

CHAPTER 33

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>No evil can harm the one who fears
the Lord;
through trials, again and again he is rescued.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Whoever hates the law is without wisdom,
and is tossed about like a boat in a storm.
- <sup>3</sup>The prudent trust in the word of the LORD,
and the law is dependable for them as a divine oracle.*
- <sup>4</sup>Prepare your words and then you will be listened to;
draw upon your training, and give your answer.
- <sup>5</sup>Like the wheel of a cart is the mind of a fool,
and his thoughts like a turning axle.
- <sup>6</sup>A mocking friend is like a stallion that neighs, no matter who the rider may be.
- <sup>7*</sup>Why is one day more important than
another,
when the same sun lights up every day
of the year?
- <sup>8</sup>By the LORD's knowledge they are kept distinct;
and he designates the seasons and feasts.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>Some he exalts and sanctifies,
and others he lists as ordinary days.<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Likewise, all people are of clay,
and from earth humankind was formed;<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>In the fullness of his knowledge the Lord

- distinguished them,
and he designated their different ways.
- <sup>12</sup>Some he blessed and exalted,
and some he sanctified and drew to
himself.
Others he cursed and brought low,
and expelled them from their place.
- <sup>13</sup>Like clay in the hands of a potter,
to be molded according to his
pleasure,
So are people in the hands of their Maker,
to be dealt with as he decides.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>As evil contrasts with good, and death
with life,
so are sinners in contrast with the godly.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>15</sup>See now all the works of the Most High:
they come in pairs, one the opposite of the other.
- <sup>16</sup>Now I am the last to keep vigil,*
like a gleaner following the grapepickers;
- <sup>17</sup>Since by the Lord's blessing I have made progress
till like a grape-picker I have filled my wine press,
- <sup>18</sup>Consider that not for myself only have I labored,
but for all who seek instruction.

Property and Servants*

- <sup>19</sup>Listen to me, leaders of the people;
rulers of the congregation, pay heed!<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>20a</sup>Let neither son nor wife, neither brother
nor friend,
have power over you as long as you
live.
- <sup>21</sup>While breath of life is still in you,
let no one take your place.
- <sup>20b</sup>Do not give your wealth to another,
lest you must plead for support

yourself.

<sup>22</sup>Far better that your children plead with
you
than that you should look for a handout from them.

<sup>23</sup>Keep control over all your affairs;
bring no stain on your honor.

<sup>24</sup>When your few days reach their limit, at the time of death distribute your inheritance.

<sup>25</sup>Fodder and whip and loads for a donkey;
food, correction and work for a slave.

<sup>26</sup>Make a slave work, and he will look for rest;
let his hands be idle and he will seek to be free.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>27</sup>The yoke and harness will bow the neck;
and for a wicked slave, punishment in the stocks.

<sup>28</sup>Force him to work that he be not idle,
<sup>29</sup>for idleness teaches much mischief.

<sup>30</sup>Put him to work, as is fitting for him;
and if he does not obey, load him with
chains.

But never lord it over any human being,
and do nothing unjust.

<sup>31</sup>If you have but one slave, treat him like
yourself,
for you have acquired him with your life's blood;

If you have but one slave, deal with him
as a brother,
for you need him as you need your life.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>32</sup>If you mistreat him and he runs away, <sup>33</sup>in what direction will you look for
him?

CHAPTER 34

See RG 312–15

Trust in the Lord and Not in Dreams*

- <sup>1</sup>Empty and false are the hopes of the senseless,
    and dreams give wings to fools.
- <sup>2</sup>Like one grasping at shadows or chasing
    the wind,
    so anyone who believes in dreams.
- <sup>3</sup>What is seen in dreams is a reflection,
    the likeness of a face looking at itself.
- <sup>4</sup>How can the unclean produce what is clean?
    How can the false produce what is true?<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>Divination, omens, and dreams are unreal;
    what you already expect, the mind
    fantasizes.
- <sup>6</sup>Unless they are specially sent by the Most High,
    do not fix your heart on them.
- <sup>7</sup>For dreams have led many astray,
    and those who put their hope in them
    have perished.
- <sup>8</sup>Without such deceptions the Law will be fulfilled,
    and in the mouth of the faithful is complete wisdom.
- <sup>9</sup>A much-traveled person knows many
    things;
    and one with much experience speaks
    sense.
- <sup>10</sup>An inexperienced person knows little, <sup>11</sup>whereas with travel one adds to resourcefulness.

- <sup>12</sup>I have seen much in my travels,
and learned more than I could ever
say.
- <sup>13</sup>Often I was in danger of death,
but by these experiences I was
saved.
- <sup>14</sup>Living is the spirit of those who fear the Lord,
<sup>15</sup>for their hope is in their savior.
- <sup>16</sup>Whoever fear the Lord are afraid of
nothing
and are never discouraged, for he is their hope.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>17</sup>Happy the soul that fears the Lord!
- <sup>18</sup>In whom does he trust, and who is his
support?
- <sup>19</sup>The eyes of the Lord are upon those who love him;
he is their mighty shield and strong
support,
A shelter from the heat, a shade from the noonday sun,
a guard against stumbling, a help
against falling.<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>20</sup>He lifts up spirits, brings a sparkle to the
eyes,
gives health and life and blessing.

True Worship of God*

- <sup>21</sup>Ill-gotten goods offered in sacrifice are tainted.
- <sup>22</sup>Presents from the lawless do not win
God's favor.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>23</sup>The Most High is not pleased with the gifts of the godless, nor for their many sacrifices does he forgive their sins.
- <sup>24</sup>One who slays a son in his father's presence—
whoever offers sacrifice from the holdings of the poor.

<sup>25</sup>The bread of charity is life itself for the needy;<sup>z</sup>
whoever withholds it is a murderer.

<sup>26</sup>To take away a neighbor's living is to commit murder;

<sup>27</sup>to deny a laborer wages is to shed
blood.

<sup>28</sup>If one builds up and another tears down,
what do they gain but trouble?

<sup>29</sup>If one prays and another curses,
whose voice will God hear?

<sup>30</sup>If one again touches a corpse after bathing,

what does he gain by the purification?<sup>a</sup>

<sup>31</sup>So one who fasts for sins,
but goes and commits them again:

Who will hear his prayer,
what is gained by mortification?

CHAPTER 35*

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>To keep the law is to make many offerings;<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>whoever observes the commandments
sacrifices a peace offering.
- <sup>3</sup>By works of charity one offers fine
flour,*
- <sup>4</sup>and one who gives alms presents a sacrifice of praise.
- <sup>5</sup>To refrain from evil pleases the Lord,
and to avoid injustice is atonement.
- <sup>6</sup>Do not appear before the Lord empty-handed,
- <sup>7</sup>for all that you offer is in fulfillment of the precepts.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>The offering of the just enriches the altar:
a sweet odor before the Most High.
- <sup>9</sup>The sacrifice of the just is accepted,
never to be forgotten.
- <sup>10</sup>With a generous spirit pay homage to the Lord,
and do not spare your freewill gifts.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>With each contribution show a cheerful countenance,
and pay your tithes in a spirit of joy.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>Give to the Most High as he has given to
you,
generously, according to your means.
- <sup>13</sup>For he is a God who always repays
and will give back to you sevenfold.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>But offer no bribes; these he does not accept!
- <sup>15</sup>Do not trust in sacrifice of the fruits of extortion,<sup>g</sup>

 For he is a God of justice,
 who shows no partiality.<sup>h</sup> <sup>16</sup>He shows no partiality to the weak but hears the grievance of the oppressed.*
<sup>17</sup>He does not forsake the cry of the orphan,<sup>i</sup> nor the widow when she pours out her complaint.
<sup>18</sup>Do not the tears that stream down her cheek
<sup>19</sup>cry out against the one that causes them to fall?
<sup>20</sup>Those who serve God to please him are accepted;
 their petition reaches the clouds.
<sup>21</sup>The prayer of the lowly pierces the clouds;
 it does not rest till it reaches its goal;
 Nor will it withdraw till the Most High responds,
<sup>22</sup>judges justly and affirms the right.<sup>j</sup>
 God indeed will not delay,
 and like a warrior, will not be still<sup>k</sup>
 Till he breaks the backs of the merciless <sup>23</sup>and wreaks vengeance upon the nations;
 Till he destroys the scepter of the proud,
 and cuts off the staff of the wicked;
<sup>24</sup>Till he requites everyone according to
 their deeds,
 and repays them according to their
 thoughts;
<sup>25</sup>Till he defends the cause of his people,
 and makes them glad by his salvation.
<sup>26</sup>Welcome is his mercy in time of distress
 as rain clouds in time of drought.

CHAPTER 36

See RG 312–15

A Prayer for God's People*

<sup>2</sup>and put all the nations in dread of you!
<sup>3</sup>Raise your hand against the foreign
people,
that they may see your mighty deeds.
<sup>4</sup>As you have used us to show them your holiness,*
so now use them to show us your
glory.
<sup>5</sup>Thus they will know, as we know, that there is no God but you.

<sup>7</sup>show forth the splendor of your right hand and arm.

<sup>8</sup>Rouse your anger, pour out wrath;
<sup>9</sup>humble the enemy, scatter the foe.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Hasten the ending, appoint the time,
and let people proclaim your mighty
deeds.

<sup>11</sup>Let raging fire consume the fugitive,
and your people's oppressors meet
destruction.

<sup>12</sup>Crush the heads of the hostile rulers who say, "There is no one besides me."

<sup>13</sup>Gather all the tribes of Jacob,* <sup>16</sup>that they may inherit the land as in days of old.

<sup>17</sup>Show mercy to the people called by your
name:
Israel, whom you named your firstborn.<sup>m</sup>

18 Take pity on your holy city:
Jerusalem, your dwelling place.<sup>n</sup>

19 Fill Zion with your majesty,
your temple with your glory.

20 Give evidence of your deeds of old;
fulfill the prophecies spoken in your
name.

21 Reward those who have hoped in you,
and let your prophets be proved true.

22 Hear the prayer of your servants, according to your good will toward
your people.

Thus all the ends of the earth will know that you are the eternal God.

Choice of Associates*

23 The throat can swallow any food, yet some foods are more agreeable than others.

24 The palate tests delicacies put forward as
gifts,
so does a keen mind test deceitful
tidbits.

25 One with a tortuous heart brings about
grief,
but an experienced person can turn the tables on him.

26 A woman will accept any man as
husband,
but one woman will be preferable to
another.

27 A woman's beauty makes her husband's face light up,
for it surpasses all else that delights
the eye.<sup>o</sup>

28 And if, besides, her speech is soothing,
her husband's lot is beyond that of mortal men.

29 A wife is her husband's richest treasure,
a help like himself and a staunch support.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>30</sup>A vineyard with no hedge will be overrun;
and a man with no wife becomes a homeless wanderer.

<sup>31</sup>Who will trust an armed band
that shifts from city to city?
Or a man who has no nest,
who lodges wherever night overtakes
him?<sup>q</sup>

CHAPTER 37

See RG 312–15

<sup>1</sup>Every friend declares friendship, but there are friends who are friends in name only.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Is it not a sorrow unto death
when your other self becomes your enemy?

<sup>3</sup>“Alas, my companion! Why were you created
to fill the earth with deceit?”

<sup>4</sup>A harmful friend will look to your table,
but in time of trouble he stands aloof.

<sup>5</sup>A good friend will fight with you against the foe,
and against your enemies he will hold up your shield.

<sup>6</sup>Do not forget your comrade during the battle,
and do not neglect him when you distribute your spoils.

<sup>7</sup>Every counselor points out a way,
but some counsel ways of their own.

<sup>8</sup>Watch out when one offers advice;
find out first of all what he wants.
For he also may be thinking of himself—
Why should the opportunity fall to him?

<sup>9</sup>He may tell you how good your way will be,
and then stand by to see you impoverished.

<sup>10</sup>Seek no advice from your father-in-law,
and from one who is envious of you,
keep your intentions hidden.

<sup>11</sup>Seek no advice from a woman about her rival,
from a coward about war,
from a merchant about business,

from a buyer about value,
from a miser about generosity,
from a cruel person about well-being,
from a worthless worker about his work,
from a seasonal laborer about the
harvest,
from an idle slave about a great task—
pay no attention to any advice they give.

<sup>12</sup>Instead, associate with a religious person, who you know keeps the
commandments;

Who is like-minded with yourself
and will grieve for you if you fall.

<sup>13</sup>Then, too, heed your own heart's counsel;
for there is nothing you can depend on
more.

<sup>14</sup>The heart can reveal your situation better than seven sentinels on a tower.

<sup>15</sup>Then with all this, pray to God
to make your steps firm in the true path.

Wisdom and Temperance

<sup>16</sup>A word is the source of every deed; * a thought, of every act. <sup>s</sup>

<sup>17</sup>The root of all conduct is the heart;

<sup>18</sup>four branches it shoots forth:
Good and evil, death and life,
and their absolute mistress is the tongue. <sup>t</sup>

<sup>19</sup>One may be wise and benefit many,
yet appear foolish to himself.

<sup>20</sup>One may be wise, but if his words are rejected,
he will be deprived of all enjoyment. *

<sup>22</sup>When one is wise to his own advantage, the fruits of knowledge are seen in his own person.

- <sup>23</sup>When one is wise to the advantage of
people,
the fruits of knowledge are lasting. <sup>u</sup>
- <sup>24</sup>One wise for himself has full enjoyment,
and all who see him praise him.
- <sup>25</sup>The days of one's life are numbered,
but the life of Israel, days without
number.
- <sup>26</sup>One wise among the people wins a heritage of glory,
and his name lives on and on. <sup>v</sup>
- <sup>27</sup>My son, while you are well, govern your appetite, *
and see that you do not allow it what is bad for you.
- <sup>28</sup>For not everything is good for everyone,
nor is everything suited to every taste. <sup>w</sup>
- <sup>29</sup>Do not go to excess with any enjoyment, <sup>x</sup>
neither become a glutton for choice
foods;
- <sup>30</sup>For sickness comes with overeating,
and gluttony brings on nausea.
- <sup>31</sup>Through lack of self-control many have died,
but the abstemious one prolongs life.

CHAPTER 38

See RG 312–15

Sickness and Death

<sup>1</sup>Make friends with the doctor, for he is essential to you;* God has also established him in his profession.

<sup>2</sup>From God the doctor has wisdom,
and from the king he receives sustenance.

<sup>3</sup>Knowledge makes the doctor distinguished,
and gives access to those in authority.

<sup>4</sup>God makes the earth yield healing herbs
which the prudent should not neglect;

<sup>5</sup>Was not the water sweetened by a twig,
so that all might learn his power?<sup>y</sup>

<sup>6</sup>He endows people with knowledge,
to glory in his mighty works,

<sup>7</sup>Through which the doctor eases pain, <sup>8</sup>and the druggist prepares his medicines.

Thus God's work continues without cease
in its efficacy on the surface of the
earth.

<sup>9</sup>My son, when you are ill, do not delay, but pray to God, for it is he who heals.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Flee wickedness and purify your hands;
cleanse your heart of every sin.

<sup>11</sup>Offer your sweet-smelling oblation and
memorial,
a generous offering according to your means.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Then give the doctor his place

- lest he leave; you need him too, 13 For there are times when recovery is in his hands.
- 14 He too prays to God
That his diagnosis may be correct and his treatment bring about a cure.
- 15 Whoever is a sinner before his Maker
will be defiant toward the doctor.
- 16 My son, shed tears for one who is dead*
with wailing and bitter lament;
As is only proper, prepare the body,
and do not absent yourself from the burial.
- 17 Weeping bitterly, mourning fully,
pay your tribute of sorrow, as deserved:
A day or two, to prevent gossip;
then compose yourself after your grief.
- 18 For grief can bring on death,
and heartache can sap one's strength.<sup>b</sup>
- 19 When a person is carried away, sorrow is
over;
and the life of the poor one is grievous
to the heart.
- 20 Do not turn your thoughts to him again;
cease to recall him; think rather of the end.<sup>c</sup>
- 21 Do not recall him, for there is no hope of his return;
you do him no good, and you harm
yourself.<sup>d</sup>
- 22 Remember that his fate will also be yours;
for him it was yesterday, for you today.<sup>e</sup>
- 23 With the dead at rest, let memory cease;
be consoled, once the spirit has gone.

Vocations of the Skilled Worker and the Scribe*

- 24 The scribe's wisdom increases wisdom;

whoever is free from toil can become
wise.

<sup>25</sup>How can one become learned who guides
the plow,
and thrills in wielding the goad like a lance,

Who guides the ox and urges on the bullock,
and whose every concern is for cattle?

<sup>26</sup>His concern is to plow furrows, and he is careful to fatten the livestock.

<sup>27</sup>So with every engraver and designer
who, laboring night and day, Fashions carved seals,
and whose concern is to vary the pattern.

His determination is to produce a lifelike impression,
and he is careful to finish the work.

<sup>28</sup>So too the smith sitting by the anvil, intent on the iron he forges.
The flame from the fire sears his flesh,
yet he toils away in the furnace heat.
The clang of the hammer deafens his ears;
his eyes are on the object he is shaping.
His determination is to finish the work,
and he is careful to perfect it in detail.

<sup>29</sup>So also the potter sitting at his labor, revolving the wheel with his feet.
He is always concerned for his products,
and turns them out in quantity.

<sup>30</sup>With his hands he molds the clay,
and with his feet softens it.
His determination is to complete the glazing,
and he is careful to fire the kiln.

<sup>31</sup>All these are skilled with their hands,
each one an expert at his own work;

<sup>32</sup>Without them no city could be lived in,
and wherever they stay, they do not go

hungry.

But they are not sought out for the council of the people,

<sup>33</sup>nor are they prominent in the assembly.

They do not sit on the judge's bench,
nor can they understand law and
justice.

They cannot expound discipline or
judgment,

nor are they found among the rulers.

<sup>34</sup>Yet they maintain the fabric of the world, and their concern is for exercise of their skill.

CHAPTER 39

See RG 312–15

How different the person who devotes himself
to the study of the law of the Most High!

<sup>1</sup>He explores the wisdom of all the ancients
and is occupied with the prophecies;

<sup>2</sup>He preserves the discourses of the famous,
and goes to the heart of involved
sayings;

<sup>3</sup>He seeks out the hidden meaning of
proverbs,
and is busied with the enigmas found in parables.

<sup>4</sup>He is in attendance on the great,
and appears before rulers.

He travels among the peoples of foreign lands
to test what is good and evil among
people.

<sup>5</sup>His care is to rise early to seek the Lord his Maker,
to petition the Most High,
To open his mouth in prayer,
to ask pardon for his sins.

<sup>6</sup>If it pleases the Lord Almighty, he will be filled with the spirit of
understanding;

He will pour forth his words of wisdom
and in prayer give praise to the Lord.

<sup>7</sup>He will direct his knowledge and his counsel,
as he meditates upon God's mysteries.

<sup>8</sup>He will show the wisdom of what he has learned and glory in the Law of the Lord's
covenant.

<sup>9</sup>Many will praise his understanding;
his name can never be blotted out;
Unfading will be his memory,
through all generations his name will live;<sup>f</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Peoples will speak of his wisdom, and the assembly will declare his
praise.

<sup>11</sup>While he lives he is one out of a thousand,
and when he dies he leaves a good
name.

Praise of God the Creator*

<sup>12</sup>Once more I will set forth my theme to shine like the moon in its fullness!

<sup>13</sup>Listen to me, my faithful children: open up your petals,
like roses planted near running waters;

<sup>14</sup>Send up the sweet odor of incense, break forth in blossoms like the lily.
Raise your voices in a chorus of praise;
bless the Lord for all his works!

<sup>15</sup>Proclaim the greatness of his name,
loudly sing his praises,
With music on the harp and all stringed instruments;
sing out with joy as you proclaim:

<sup>16</sup>The works of God are all of them good;
he supplies for every need in its own
time.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>17</sup>At his word the waters become still as in
a flask;
he had but to speak and the reservoirs
were made.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>18</sup>He has but to command and his will is
done;
nothing can limit his saving action.

<sup>19</sup>The works of all humankind are present
to him;

nothing is hidden from his eyes.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>20</sup>His gaze spans all the ages:
is there any limit to his saving action?
To him, nothing is small or insignificant, and nothing too wonderful or hard for
him.

<sup>21</sup>No cause then to say: "What is the purpose of this?"
Everything is chosen to satisfy a need.

<sup>22</sup>His blessing overflows like the Nile;
like the Euphrates it enriches the surface of the earth.

<sup>23</sup>Even so, his wrath dispossesses the nations and turns fertile land into a salt marsh.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>24</sup>For the virtuous his paths are level,
to the haughty they are clogged with
stones.

<sup>25</sup>Good things for the good he provided from the beginning,
but for the wicked good things and bad.

<sup>26</sup>Chief of all needs for human life
are water and fire, iron and salt,
The heart of the wheat, milk and honey,
the blood of the grape, and oil, and clothing.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>27</sup>For the good all these are good,
but for the wicked they turn out evil.

<sup>28</sup>There are stormwinds created to punish;
in their fury they can dislodge
mountains.

In a time of destruction they hurl their force
and calm the anger of their Maker.

<sup>29</sup>Fire and hail, famine and disease:
these too were created for punishment.

<sup>30</sup>Ravenous beasts, scorpions, vipers,
and the avenging sword to exterminate
the wicked:

All these were created to meet a need,
and are kept in his storehouse for the proper time.

<sup>31</sup>When he commands them, they rejoice, in their assigned tasks they do not disobey his command.

<sup>32</sup>That is why from the first I took my stand,
and wrote down as my theme:

<sup>33</sup>The works of God are all of them good;
he supplies for every need in its own
time.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>34</sup>There is no cause then to say: “This is not as good as that”;
for each shows its worth at the proper
time.

<sup>35</sup>So now with full heart and voice proclaim and bless his name!

CHAPTER 40

See RG 312–15

Joys and Miseries of Life

<sup>1</sup>A great anxiety has God allotted,* and a heavy yoke, to the children of Adam,<sup>m</sup>
From the day they leave their mother's
womb
until the day they return to the mother of all the living.*

<sup>2</sup>Troubled thoughts and fear of heart are theirs
and anxious foreboding until death.

<sup>3</sup>Whether one sits on a lofty throne
or grovels in dust and ashes,

<sup>4</sup>Whether one wears a splendid crown or is clothed in the coarsest of garments—

<sup>5</sup>There is wrath and envy, trouble and dread,
terror of death, fury and strife.

Even when one lies on his bed to rest,
his cares disturb his sleep at night.

<sup>6</sup>So short is his rest it seems like none,
till in his dreams he struggles as he did
by day,

Troubled by the visions of his mind,
like a fugitive fleeing from the pursuer.

<sup>7</sup>As he reaches safety, he wakes up, astonished that there was nothing to fear.

<sup>8</sup>To all flesh, human being and beast,
but for sinners seven times more,

<sup>9</sup>Come plague and bloodshed, fiery heat and drought,

plunder and ruin, famine and death.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>10</sup>For the wicked evil was created,

and because of them destruction
hastens.

<sup>11</sup>All that is of earth returns to earth, and what is from above returns above.*

<sup>12</sup>All that comes from bribes or injustice will be wiped out,
but loyalty remains forever.

<sup>13</sup>Wealth from injustice is like a flooding wadi,
like a mighty stream with lightning
and thunder,

<sup>14</sup>Which, in its rising, rolls along the
stones,
but suddenly, once and for all, comes to an end.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>15</sup>The offshoot of violence will not flourish,
for the root of the godless is on sheer rock.

<sup>16</sup>They are like reeds on riverbanks, withered before all other plants;

<sup>17</sup>But goodness, like eternity, will never be cut off,
and righteousness endures forever.

<sup>18</sup>Wealth or wages can make life sweet,*
but better than either, finding a treasure.

<sup>19</sup>A child or a city will preserve one's
name,
but better than either, finding wisdom.

Cattle and orchards make a person
flourish;
but better than either, a devoted wife.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Wine and strong drink delight the soul,
but better than either, love of friends.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Flute and harp offer sweet melody,
but better than either, a pure tongue.

<sup>22</sup>Grace and beauty delight the eye, but better than either, the produce of the field.

- <sup>23</sup>A friend and a neighbor are timely guides,
but better than either, a sensible wife.
- <sup>24</sup>Relatives and helpers for times of stress;
but better than either, charity that rescues.
- <sup>25</sup>Gold and silver make one's way secure,
but better than either, sound judgment.
- <sup>26</sup>Wealth and vigor make the heart exult,
but better than either, fear of God.
- In the fear of the Lord there is no want;
whoever has it need seek no other
support.
- <sup>27</sup>The fear of God is a paradise of
blessings;
its canopy is over all that is glorious.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>28</sup>My son, do not live the life of a beggar;* better to die than to beg.
- <sup>29</sup>When one has to look to a stranger's
table,
life is not worth living.
The delicacies offered bring revulsion of spirit,
and to the intelligent, inward torture.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>30</sup>In the mouth of the shameless begging is
sweet,
but within him it burns like fire.

CHAPTER 41

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>O death! How bitter is the thought of you*
for the one at peace in his home,
For the one who is serene and always
successful,
who can still enjoy life's pleasures.
- <sup>2</sup>O death! How welcome is your sentence to the weak, failing in strength, Stumbling and tripping on everything,
with sight gone and hope lost.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>Do not fear death's decree for you;
remember, it embraces those before you and those to come.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>This decree for all flesh is from God;
why then should you reject a law of
the Most High?
Whether one has lived a thousand years,
a hundred, or ten,
in Sheol there are no arguments about
life.
- <sup>5</sup>The children of sinners are a reprobate line,<sup>v</sup>
and witless offspring are in the homes
of the wicked.
- <sup>6</sup>The inheritance of children of sinners
will perish,
and on their offspring will be perpetual
disgrace.
- <sup>7</sup>Children curse their wicked father,
for they suffer disgrace because of
him.
- <sup>8</sup>Woe to you, O wicked people, who forsake the Law of the Most High.
- <sup>9</sup>If you have children, calamity will be

theirs;
 and if you beget them, it will be only
 for groaning.
 When you stumble, there is lasting joy;
 and when you die, you become a curse.
 10 All that is nought returns to nought,
 so too the godless—from void to void.<sup>w</sup> 11 The human body is a fleeting thing, but a virtuous name will never be annihilated.<sup>x</sup> 12 Have respect for your name, for it will stand by you
 more than thousands of precious treasures.<sup>y</sup> 13 The good things of life last a number of
 days,
 but a good name, for days without
 number.

True and False Shame*

14b Hidden wisdom and concealed treasure,
 of what value is either?
 15 Better is the person who hides his folly than the one who hides his wisdom.
 14a My children, listen to instruction about
 shame;
 16a judge of disgrace according to my rules, 16b Not every kind of shame is shameful, nor is every kind of disgrace to be recognized.
 17 Before father and mother be ashamed of immorality,
 before prince and ruler, of falsehood;
 18 Before master and mistress, of deceit;
 before the public assembly, of crime;
 Before associate and friend, of disloyalty, 19 and in the place where you settle, of theft.

Be ashamed of breaking an oath or a
covenant,
and of stretching your elbow at dinner;
Of refusing to give when asked,
<sup>21</sup>of rebuffing your own relatives;
Of defrauding another of his appointed share,
<sup>20a</sup>of failing to return a greeting;
<sup>21c</sup>Of gazing at a man's wife, <sup>20b</sup>of entertaining thoughts about another woman;<sup>z</sup> <sup>22</sup>Of trifling with a servant girl you have,
of violating her bed;
Of using harsh words with friends,
of following up your gifts with insults;<sup>a</sup>

CHAPTER 42

See RG 312–15

<sup>1</sup>Of repeating what you hear, of betraying any secret.<sup>b</sup>
Be ashamed of the right things, and you will find favor in the sight of all.

But of these things do not be ashamed,
lest you sin to save face:<sup>c</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Of the Law of the Most High and his
precepts,
or of justice that acquits the ungodly;

<sup>3</sup>Of sharing the expenses of a business or
a journey,
of dividing an inheritance or property;

<sup>4</sup>Of accuracy of scales and balances, of tested measures and weights;<sup>d</sup>

Of acquiring much or little, <sup>5</sup>of bargaining in dealing with a merchant;

Of constant training of children,
of beating the sides of a wicked servant;<sup>e</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Of a seal to keep a foolish wife at home,
of a key where there are many hands;

<sup>7</sup>Of numbering every deposit, of recording all that is taken in and given out;

<sup>8</sup>Of chastisement for the silly and the foolish,
for the aged and infirm answering for wanton conduct.

Thus you will be truly refined and recognized by all as discreet.

*A Father's Care for His Daughter**

<sup>9</sup>A daughter is a treasure that keeps her father wakeful,
and worry over her drives away
sleep.<sup>f</sup>

Lest in her youth she remain unmarried, or when she is married, lest she be childless;

<sup>10</sup>While unmarried, lest she be defiled, or in her husband's house, lest she prove unfaithful;

Lest she become pregnant in her father's
house,
or be sterile in that of her husband.

<sup>11</sup>My son, keep a close watch on your daughter,
lest she make you a laughingstock for your enemies,

A byword in the city and the assembly of the people,
an object of derision in public gatherings.<sup>g</sup>

See that there is no lattice in her room,
or spot that overlooks the approaches to the house.

<sup>12</sup>Do not let her reveal her beauty to any male,<sup>h</sup>
or spend her time with married
women;

<sup>13</sup>For just as moths come from garments, so a woman's wickedness comes from a woman.

<sup>14</sup>Better a man's harshness than a woman's indulgence,
a frightened daughter than any
disgrace.

The Works of God in Nature*

<sup>15</sup>Now will I recall God's works;
what I have seen, I will describe.

By the LORD's word his works were brought into being;

he accepts the one who does his will.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>16</sup>As the shining sun is clear to all,
so the glory of the LORD fills all his
works;
<sup>17</sup>Yet even God's holy ones must fail in recounting the wonders of the
LORD,
Though God has given his hosts the strength
to stand firm before his glory.
<sup>18</sup>He searches out the abyss and penetrates
the heart;
their secrets he understands.
For the Most High possesses all
knowledge,
and sees from of old the things that are
to come.
<sup>19</sup>He makes known the past and the future,
and reveals the deepest secrets.
<sup>20</sup>He lacks no understanding;
no single thing escapes him.<sup>j</sup> <sup>21</sup>He regulates the mighty deeds of his
wisdom;
he is from all eternity one and the same,
With nothing added, nothing taken away;
no need of a counselor for him!<sup>k</sup> <sup>22</sup>How beautiful are all his works, delightful to gaze upon and a joy to behold!
<sup>23</sup>Everything lives and abides forever;
and to meet each need all things are preserved.
<sup>24</sup>All of them differ, one from another,
yet none of them has he made in vain;
<sup>25</sup>For each in turn, as it comes, is good;
can one ever see enough of their splendor?<sup>l</sup>

CHAPTER 43

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>The beauty of the celestial height
and the pure firmament,<sup>m</sup> heaven itself manifests its glory.
- <sup>2</sup>The sun at its rising shines at its fullest,
a wonderful instrument, the work of
the Most High!
- <sup>3</sup>At noon it scorches the earth,
and who can bear its fiery heat?
- <sup>4</sup>Like a blazing furnace of solid metal,
the sun's rays set the mountains aflame;
Its fiery tongue consumes the world;
the eyes are burned by its fire.
- <sup>5</sup>Great indeed is the LORD who made it,
at whose orders it urges on its steeds.
- <sup>6</sup>It is the moon that marks the changing
seasons,
governing the times, their lasting sign.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>By it we know the sacred seasons and pilgrimage feasts,
a light which wanes in its course:
- <sup>8</sup>The new moon like its name* renews itself;
how wondrous it is when it changes:
A military signal for the waterskins on
high,
it paves the firmament with its brilliance,
- <sup>9</sup>The beauty of the heavens and the glory
of the stars,
a shining ornament in the heights of God.<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>By the Lord's command the moon keeps
its appointed place,
and does not fade as the stars keep watch.

- <sup>11</sup>Behold the rainbow! Then bless its Maker,
for majestic indeed is its splendor;<sup>P</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>It spans the heavens with its glory,
the hand of God has stretched it out in
power.
- <sup>13</sup>His rebuke marks out the path for the hail,
and makes the flashes of his judgment
shine forth.
- <sup>14</sup>For his own purposes he opens the storehouse
and makes the rain clouds fly like vultures.
- <sup>15</sup>His might gives the clouds their strength,
and breaks off the hailstones.
- <sup>16</sup>The thunder of his voice makes the earth
writhe;
by his power he shakes the mountains.
- <sup>17</sup>A word from him drives on the south
wind,
whirlwind, hurricane, and stormwind.
He makes the snow fly like birds;
it settles down like swarms of locusts.
- <sup>18</sup>Its shining whiteness blinds the eyes,
the mind marvels at its steady fall.
- <sup>19</sup>He scatters frost like salt;
it shines like blossoms on the thornbush.
- <sup>20</sup>He sends cold northern blasts that harden the ponds like solid
ground,
Spreads a crust over every body of water,
and clothes each pool with a coat of armor.
- <sup>21</sup>When mountain growth is scorched by heat,
and flowering plains as by fire,
- <sup>22</sup>The dripping clouds restore them all,
and the scattered dew enriches the parched land.

<sup>23</sup>His is the plan that calms the deep,
and plants the islands in the sea.

<sup>24</sup>Those who go down to the sea recount its extent,
and when we hear them we are thunderstruck;<sup>q</sup>

<sup>25</sup>In it are his creatures, stupendous, amazing,
all kinds of life, and the monsters of the deep.

<sup>26</sup>For him each messenger succeeds, and at his bidding accomplishes his will.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>27</sup>More than this we need not add;
let the last word be, he is the all!*

<sup>28</sup>Let us praise him the more, since we cannot fathom him,
for greater is he than all his works;

<sup>29</sup>Awesome indeed is the LORD,
and wonderful his power.

<sup>30</sup>Lift up your voices to glorify the LORD
as much as you can, for there is still
more.

Extol him with renewed strength,
do not grow weary, for you cannot fathom him.

<sup>31</sup>For who has seen him and can describe
him?

Who can praise him as he is?<sup>s</sup>

<sup>32</sup>Beyond these, many things lie hidden;
only a few of his works have I seen.

<sup>33</sup>It is the LORD who has made all things;
to those who fear him he gives wisdom.<sup>t</sup>

Praise of Israel's Great Ancestors*

- <sup>1</sup>I will now praise the godly,
our ancestors, in their own time,*
- <sup>2</sup>The abounding glory of the Most High's
portion,
his own part, since the days of old.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>Subduers of the land in kingly fashion,
renowned for their might,
Counselors in their prudence,
seers of all things in prophecy,<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Resolute princes of the flock,
lawgivers and their rules,
Sages skilled in composition,
authors of sharp proverbs,
- <sup>5</sup>Composers of melodious psalms,
writers of lyric poems;
- <sup>6</sup>Stalwart, solidly established,
at peace in their own estates—
- <sup>7</sup>All these were glorious in their time, illustrious in their day.
- <sup>8</sup>Some of them left behind a name
so that people recount their praises.
- <sup>9</sup>Of others no memory remains,
for when they perished, they perished,
As if they had never lived,
they and their children after them.
- <sup>10</sup>Yet these also were godly;
their virtues have not been forgotten.
- <sup>11</sup>Their wealth remains in their families,
their heritage with their descendants.
- <sup>12</sup>Through God's covenant their family
endures,
and their offspring for their sake.
- <sup>13</sup>And for all time their progeny will endure,

their glory will never be blotted out;
14 Their bodies are buried in peace,
but their name lives on and on.<sup>w</sup> 15 At gatherings their wisdom is retold, and the assembly proclaims their praises.

The Early Ancestors

16 [ENOCH* walked with the LORD and was taken,<sup>x</sup>
that succeeding generations might learn by his example.]

17 NOAH, found just and perfect, renewed the race in the time of devastation.<sup>y</sup>

Because of his worth there were survivors,
and with a sign to him the deluge
ended.

18 A lasting covenant was made with him,
that never again would all flesh be destroyed.

19 ABRAHAM, father of many peoples, kept his glory without stain.<sup>z</sup>

20 He observed the Most High's command,
and entered into a covenant with him;

In his own flesh he incised the ordinance,*

and when tested was found loyal.<sup>a</sup>

21 For this reason, God promised him with an oath
to bless the nations through his descendants,

To make him numerous as grains of dust,
and to exalt his posterity like the stars,

Giving them an inheritance from sea to

sea,

and from the River* to the ends of the

earth.

<sup>22</sup>For ISAAC, too, he renewed the same
promise

because of Abraham, his father.

The covenant with all his forebears was confirmed,

<sup>23</sup>and the blessing rested upon the head of ISRAEL. b

God acknowledged him as the firstborn,
and gave him his inheritance.

He fixed the boundaries for his tribes
and their division into twelve.

Praise of Moses, Aaron, and Phinehas

- <sup>1</sup>From him came the man* who would win the favor of all the living:<sup>c</sup>
Dear to God and human beings,
MOSES, whose memory is a blessing.
- <sup>2</sup>God made him like the angels in honor,
and strengthened him with fearful powers.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>At his words God performed signs and sustained him in the king's
presence.
He gave him the commandments for his
people,
and revealed to him his glory.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Because of his trustworthiness and meekness
God selected him from all flesh;<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>He let him hear his voice,
and led him into the cloud,
Where he handed over the
commandments,
the law of life and understanding,*
That he might teach his precepts to Jacob,
his judgments and decrees to Israel.
- <sup>6</sup>He also raised up, like Moses in holiness,*
his brother AARON, of the tribe of Levi.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>He made his office perpetual
and bestowed on him priesthood for
his people;
He established him in honor and crowned him with lofty majesty.

<sup>8</sup>He clothed him in splendid garments, and adorned him with glorious vestments:
Breeches, tunic, and robe
<sup>9</sup>with pomegranates at the hem
And a rustle of bells round about,
whose pleasing sound at each step Would make him heard within the sanctuary,
a reminder for the people;
<sup>10</sup>The sacred vestments of gold, violet,
and crimson, worked with embroidery;
The breastpiece for decision, the ephod
and cincture
<sup>11</sup>with scarlet yarn, the work of the weaver;
Precious stones with seal engravings in golden settings, the work of the jeweler,
To commemorate in incised letters
each of the tribes of Israel;
<sup>12</sup>On his turban a diadem of gold,
its plate engraved with the sacred inscription—
Majestic, glorious, renowned for
splendor,
a delight to the eyes, supremely
beautiful.
<sup>13</sup>Before him, no one had been adorned with these,
nor may they ever be worn by any
other
Except his sons and them alone, generation after generation, for all
time.
<sup>14</sup>His grain offering is wholly burnt as an established offering twice each
day;
<sup>15</sup>For Moses ordained him
and anointed him with the holy oil,
In a lasting covenant with him and his family,
as permanent as the heavens,

That he should serve God in the priesthood
and bless the people in his name.

<sup>16</sup>He chose him from all the living to sacrifice burnt offerings and choice portions,

To burn incense, sweet odor as a
memorial,
and to atone for the people of Israel.

<sup>17</sup>He gave to him the laws, and authority to prescribe and to judge:

To teach precepts to the people,
and judgments to the Israelites.

<sup>18</sup>Strangers rose in anger against him, grew jealous of him in the desert—
The followers of Dathan and Abiram, and the band of Korah in their defiance.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>19</sup>When the Lord saw this he became angry, and destroyed them in his burning
wrath.

He brought against them a marvel,
and consumed them in flaming fire.

<sup>20</sup>Then he increased the glory of Aaron<sup>i</sup> and bestowed upon him his inheritance:

The sacred offerings he allotted to him,
with the showbread* as his portion;

<sup>21</sup>The oblations of the LORD are his food,
a gift to him and his descendants.

<sup>22</sup>But he holds no land among the people
nor shares with them their heritage;
For the LORD himself is his portion and inheritance
among the Israelites.

<sup>23</sup>PHINEHAS too, the son of Eleazar,
was the courageous third of his line
When, zealous for the God of all,
he met the crisis of his people<sup>j</sup>
And, at the prompting of his noble heart, atoned for the children of Israel.

<sup>24</sup>Therefore, on him also God conferred the
right,
in a covenant of friendship, to provide for the sanctuary,
So that he and his descendants should possess the high priesthood
forever.

<sup>25</sup>For even his covenant with David,
the son of Jesse of the tribe of Judah,
Was an individual heritage through one son alone;<sup>k</sup> but the heritage of Aaron is for all his descendants.

So now bless * the LORD
who has crowned you with glory!

<sup>26</sup>May he grant you wisdom of heart
to govern his people in justice, Lest the benefits you confer should be forgotten,
or your authority, throughout all time.

CHAPTER 46

See RG 312–15

Joshua, Caleb, the Judges, and Samuel

<sup>1</sup>Valiant warrior was Joshua, * son of Nun, aide to Moses in the prophetic office,
Formed to be, as his name implies,
the great savior of God's chosen ones,
To punish the enemy
and to give to Israel their heritage.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>2</sup>What glory was his when he raised his
hand,
to brandish his sword against the city!<sup>m</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Who could withstand him when he fought the battles of the LORD?*

<sup>4</sup>Was it not by that same hand the sun stopped,
so that one day became two?<sup>n</sup>

<sup>5</sup>He called upon the Most High God when his enemies beset him on all sides,

And God Most High answered him
with hailstones of tremendous power,

<sup>6</sup>That rained down upon the hostile army
till on the slope he destroyed the foe;
That all the doomed nations might know
the LORD was watching over his people's battles.

He was indeed a devoted follower of God

<sup>7</sup>and showed himself loyal in Moses'
lifetime.

He and CALEB, * son of Jephunneh,
when they opposed the rebel assembly, Averted God's anger from the people and suppressed the wicked complaint.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Because of this, these two alone were spared

from the six hundred thousand infantry,
To lead the people into their heritage,
the land flowing with milk and honey.<sup>P</sup>

<sup>9</sup>The strength God gave to Caleb remained with him even in old age Till he won his way onto the summits of
the land;

his family too received a heritage,<sup>Q</sup> <sup>10</sup>That all the offspring of Jacob might
know
how good it is to be a devoted follower
of the LORD.

<sup>11</sup>The JUDGES, * each one of them, whose hearts were not deceived,
Who did not abandon God—
may their memory be ever blessed!<sup>R</sup>

<sup>12</sup>May their bones flourish with new life
where they lie,
and their names receive fresh luster in
their children!

<sup>13</sup>Beloved of his people, dear to his Maker, pledged in a vow from his mother's
womb,

As one consecrated to the Lord in the prophetic office,
was SAMUEL, the judge who offered
sacrifice.

At God's word he established the kingdom
and anointed princes to rule the people.<sup>S</sup>

<sup>14</sup>By the law of the LORD he judged the congregation,
and visited the encampments of Jacob.

<sup>15</sup>As a trustworthy prophet he was sought
out
and his words proved him to be a true
seer.

<sup>16</sup>He, too, called upon the mighty Lord when his enemies pressed him on every side,

and offered up a suckling lamb.<sup>t</sup> 17 Then the LORD thundered from heaven, and the tremendous roar of his voice
was heard.<sup>u</sup> 18 He brought low the rulers of the enemy and destroyed all the lords of the Philistines.
19 When Samuel neared the end of life,
he testified before the LORD and his anointed prince,
“No bribe or secret gift have I taken from anyone!”
and no one could accuse him.<sup>v</sup> 20 Even after death his guidance was sought;
he made known to the king his fate.
From the grave he spoke in prophecy
to put an end to wickedness.<sup>w</sup>

CHAPTER 47

See RG 312–15

Nathan, David, and Solomon

- <sup>1</sup>After him came NATHAN*
who served in David's presence.<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Like the choice fat of sacred offerings,
so was DAVID in Israel.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>He played with lions as though they were young goats,
and with bears, like lambs of the flock.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>As a youth he struck down the giant
and wiped out the people's disgrace;
His hand let fly the slingstone that shattered the pride of Goliath.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>For he had called upon the Most High
God,
who gave strength to his right arm
To defeat the skilled warrior and establish the might of his people.
- <sup>6</sup>Therefore the women sang his praises and honored him for "the tens of thousands."
When he received the royal crown, he battled<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>and subdued the enemy on every side.
He campaigned against the hostile
Philistines
and shattered their power till our own day.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>With his every deed he offered thanks to God Most High, in words of praise.
With his whole heart he loved his Maker
- <sup>9</sup>and daily had his praises sung;
- <sup>10</sup>He added beauty to the feasts
and solemnized the seasons of each year

9b With string music before the altar, providing sweet melody for the psalms<sup>d</sup>

10b So that when the Holy Name was praised, before daybreak the sanctuary would resound.

11 The LORD forgave him his sins
and exalted his strength forever;
He conferred on him the rights of royalty
and established his throne in Israel.<sup>e</sup>

12 Because of his merits he had as successor*
a wise son, who lived in security:<sup>f</sup>

13 SOLOMON reigned during an era of peace,
for God brought rest to all his borders.
He built a house to the name of God,
and established a lasting sanctuary.<sup>g</sup>

14 How wise you were when you were
young,
overflowing with instruction, like the Nile in flood!<sup>h</sup>

15 Your understanding covered the whole
earth,
and, like a sea, filled it with
knowledge.

16 Your fame reached distant coasts, and you were beloved for your peaceful reign.

17 With song and proverb and riddle,
and with your answers, you astounded
the nations.

18 You were called by that glorious name which was conferred upon Israel.* Gold you gathered like so much iron;
you heaped up silver as though it were lead.

19 But you abandoned yourself to women and gave them dominion over your body.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>20</sup>You brought a stain upon your glory,
shame upon your marriage bed,
Wrath upon your descendants,
and groaning upon your deathbed.

<sup>21</sup>Thus two governments came into being,
when in Ephraim kingship was usurped.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>22</sup>But God does not withdraw his mercy, nor permit even one of his promises to fail.

He does not uproot the posterity of the chosen,
nor destroy the offspring of his friends.
So he gave to Jacob a remnant,
to David a root from his own family.<sup>k</sup>

Rehoboam and Jeroboam

<sup>23</sup>Solomon finally slept with his ancestors,
and left behind him one of his sons,

Broad* in folly, narrow in sense,
whose policy made the people rebel.
Then arose the one who should not be remembered,

the sinner who led Israel into sin,<sup>l</sup>
Who brought ruin to Ephraim

<sup>24</sup>and caused them to be exiled from their land.

Elijah and Elisha

<sup>25</sup>Their sinfulness grew more and more,
and they gave themselves to every evil*

CHAPTER 48

See RG 312–15

- <sup>1</sup>Until like fire a prophet appeared,
his words a flaming furnace.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>The staff of life, their bread, he shattered, and in his zeal he made them few in number.
- <sup>3</sup>By God's word he shut up the heavens and three times brought down fire.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>How awesome are you, ELIJAH!
Whose glory is equal to yours?
- <sup>5</sup>You brought a dead body back to life from Sheol, by the will of the LORD.<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>You sent kings down to destruction, and nobles, from their beds of sickness.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>You heard threats at Sinai,
at Horeb avenging judgments.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>You anointed the agent of these punishments,
the prophet to succeed in your place.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>You were taken aloft in a whirlwind,
in a chariot with fiery horses.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>You are destined, it is written, in time to
come
to put an end to wrath before the day
of the LORD,
To turn back the hearts of parents toward
their children,
and to re-establish the tribes of Israel.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>Blessed is the one who shall have seen
you before he dies!*
- <sup>12</sup>When Elijah was enveloped in the
whirlwind,

ELISHA was filled with his spirit;*
He worked twice as many marvels,<sup>u</sup> and every utterance of his mouth was wonderful.

During his lifetime he feared no one,
nor was anyone able to intimidate his will.

<sup>13</sup>Nothing was beyond his power;<sup>v</sup> and from where he lay buried, his body prophesied.*

<sup>14</sup>In life he performed wonders,
and after death, marvelous deeds.

<sup>15</sup>Despite all this the people did not repent,
nor did they give up their sins,
Until they were uprooted from their land and scattered all over the earth.

Judah

But Judah remained, a tiny people, with its ruler from the house of David.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Some of them did what was right,
but others were extremely sinful.

*Hezekiah and Isaiah**

<sup>17</sup>HEZEKIAH fortified his city and had water brought into it;<sup>x</sup>
With bronze tools he cut through the rocks
and dammed up a mountain site for water.*

<sup>18</sup>During his reign Sennacherib led an invasion
and sent his adjutant;
He shook his fist at Zion
and blasphemed God in his pride.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>19</sup>The people's hearts melted within them, and they were in anguish like that of childbirth.

<sup>20</sup>But they called upon the Most High God
and lifted up their hands to him;
He heard the prayer they uttered,

and saved them through ISAIAH.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>21</sup>God struck the camp of the Assyrians and routed them with a plague.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>22</sup>For Hezekiah did what was right
and held fast to the paths of David,
As ordered by the illustrious prophet
Isaiah, who saw truth in visions.

<sup>23</sup>In his lifetime he turned back the sun and prolonged the life of the king.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>24</sup>By his powerful spirit he looked into the future<sup>c</sup>
and consoled the mourners of Zion;

<sup>25</sup>He foretold what would happen till the end of time,
hidden things yet to be fulfilled.

CHAPTER 49

See RG 312–15

*Josiah and the Prophets**

<sup>1</sup>The name JOSIAH is like blended incense, made lasting by a skilled perfumer.<sup>d</sup> Precious is his memory, like honey to the taste,
like music at a banquet.

<sup>2</sup>For he grieved over our betrayals,
and destroyed the abominable idols.

<sup>3</sup>He kept his heart fixed on God,
and in times of lawlessness practiced virtue.

<sup>4</sup>Except for David, Hezekiah, and Josiah,
they all were wicked;
They abandoned the Law of the Most High,
these kings of Judah, right to the very
end.

<sup>5</sup>So he gave over their power to others,
their glory to a foreign nation

<sup>6</sup>Who burned the holy city
and left its streets desolate,

<sup>7</sup>As foretold by JEREMIAH.<sup>e</sup> They mistreated him
who even in the womb had been made a prophet,
To root out, pull down, and destroy,
and then to build and to plant.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>8</sup>EZEKIEL beheld a vision and described the different creatures of the chariot;<sup>g</sup>

<sup>9</sup>He also referred to Job, who always persevered in the right path.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Then, too, the TWELVE PROPHETS—

may their bones flourish with new life
where they lie!—
They gave new strength to Jacob and saved him with steadfast hope.

The Heroes After the Exile

<sup>11</sup>How to extol ZERUBBABEL?*
He was like a signet ring on the right hand,<sup>i</sup>

<sup>12</sup>And Jeshua, Jozadak's son?
In their time they rebuilt the altar
And erected the holy temple, destined for everlasting glory.

<sup>13</sup>Exalted be the memory of NEHEMIAH!
He rebuilt our ruined walls,
Restored our shattered defenses,
and set up gates and bars.<sup>j</sup>

The Earliest Patriarchs

<sup>14</sup>Few on earth have been created like ENOCH;*
he also was taken up bodily.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Was ever a man born like JOSEPH?
Even his dead body was provided for.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Glorious, too, were SHEM and SETH and ENOSH;
but beyond that of any living being
was the splendor of ADAM.<sup>m</sup>

CHAPTER 50

See RG 312–15

Simeon, Son of Jochanan

- <sup>1</sup>Greatest of his family, the glory of his
people,
was SIMEON the priest, son of Jochanan,* In whose time the house of God was renovated,
in whose days the temple was reinforced.
- <sup>2</sup>In his time also the retaining wall was built
with powerful turrets for the temple precincts.
- <sup>3</sup>In his time the reservoir was dug,
a pool as vast as the sea.
- <sup>4</sup>He protected the people against brigands and strengthened the city against the enemy.
- <sup>5</sup>How splendid he was as he looked out from the tent,
as he came from behind the veil!
- <sup>6</sup>Like a star shining among the clouds,
like the full moon at the festal season;
- <sup>7</sup>Like sun shining upon the temple of the King,
like a rainbow appearing in the cloudy
sky;
- <sup>8</sup>Like blossoms on the branches in springtime,
like a lily by running waters;
Like a green shoot on Lebanon in
summer,
<sup>9</sup>like the fire of incense at sacrifice;
Like a vessel of hammered gold, studded with all kinds of precious
stones;

<sup>10</sup>Like a luxuriant olive tree heavy with
fruit,
a plant with branches abounding in oil;

<sup>11</sup>Wearing his glorious robes,
and vested in sublime magnificence,<sup>n</sup>
As he ascended the glorious altar and lent majesty to the court of the sanctuary.

<sup>12</sup>When he received the portions from the priests
while he stood before the sacrificial
wood,

His sons stood round him like a garland,
like young cedars on Lebanon;
And like poplars by the brook they surrounded him,

<sup>13</sup>all the sons of Aaron in their glory,
With the offerings to the Lord in their
hands,
in the presence of the whole assembly
of Israel.

<sup>14</sup>Once he had completed the service at the altar
and arranged the sacrificial hearth for
the Most High,

<sup>15</sup>And had stretched forth his hand for the cup,
to offer blood of the grape,
And poured it out at the foot of the altar,
a sweet-smelling odor to God the Most High,<sup>o</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Then the sons of Aaron would sound a blast,
the priests, on their trumpets of beaten
metal;

A blast to resound mightily
as a reminder before the Most High.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>17</sup>All the people with one accord would fall with face to the ground
In adoration before the Most High,
before the Holy One of Israel.

<sup>18</sup>Then hymns would re-echo, and over the throng sweet strains of praise resound.
<sup>19</sup>All the people of the land would shout
 for joy,
 praying to the Merciful One,
 As the high priest completed the service at the altar
 by presenting to God the fitting
 sacrifice.
<sup>20</sup>Then coming down he would raise his
 hands
 over all the congregation of Israel;
 The blessing of the LORD would be upon his lips,
 the name of the LORD would be his glory.<sup>q</sup> <sup>21</sup>The people would again fall down to receive the blessing of the Most High.
<sup>22</sup>And now, bless the God of all,*
 who has done wonders on earth;
 Who fosters growth from the womb,
 fashioning it according to his will!
<sup>23</sup>May he grant you a wise heart
 and abide with you in peace;
<sup>24</sup>May his goodness toward Simeon last
 forever;
 may he fulfill for him the covenant
 with Phinehas
 So that it may not be abrogated for him or his descendants while the heavens
 last.

Epilogue

<sup>25</sup>My whole being loathes two nations, the third is not even a people:* <sup>26</sup>The inhabitants of Seir* and Philistia, and the foolish people who dwell in Shechem.<sup>r</sup> <sup>27</sup>Wise instruction, appropriate

proverbs, *

I have written in this book—
I, Yeshua Ben Eleazar Ben Sira—
as they poured forth from my heart's
understanding.

<sup>28</sup>Happy those who meditate upon these
things;
wise those who take them to heart!

<sup>29</sup>If they put them into practice, they can cope with anything,
for the fear of the LORD is their lamp.

CHAPTER 51

See RG 312–15

A Prayer of Thanksgiving

<sup>1</sup>I give you thanks, LORD and King,*
I praise you, God my savior!

I declare your name, refuge of my life,<sup>s</sup> <sup>2</sup>because you have ransomed my life
from death;

You held back my body from the pit,
and delivered my foot from the power of Sheol.<sup>t</sup>

You have preserved me from the scourge
of the slanderous tongue,
and from the lips of those who went over to falsehood.

You were with me against those who rise
up against me;

<sup>3</sup>You have rescued me according to your abundant mercy<sup>u</sup>

From the snare of those who look for my
downfall,
and from the power of those who seek
my life.

From many dangers you have saved me,

<sup>4</sup>from flames that beset me on every side,<sup>v</sup>

From the midst of fire till there was not a whiff of it,*

<sup>5</sup>from the deep belly of Sheol,
From deceiving lips and painters of lies,

<sup>6</sup>from the arrows of a treacherous
tongue.

I was at the point of death,
my life was nearing the depths of Sheol;<sup>w</sup>

<sup>7</sup>I turned every way, but there was no one
to help;
I looked for support but there was none.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Then I remembered the mercies of the LORD,
his acts of kindness through ages past;
For he saves those who take refuge in
him,
and rescues them from every evil.

<sup>9</sup>So I raised my voice from the grave;
from the gates of Sheol I cried for help.

<sup>10</sup>I called out: Lord, you are my Father,
my champion, my savior!
Do not abandon me in time of trouble,
in the midst of storms and dangers.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>11</sup>I will always praise your name and remember you in prayer!
Then the LORD heard my voice,
and listened to my appeal.

<sup>12</sup>He saved me from every evil
and preserved me in time of trouble.
For this reason I thank and praise him;
I bless the name of the LORD.*

Ben Sira's Pursuit of Wisdom

<sup>13*</sup>When I was young and innocent,
I sought wisdom.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>14</sup>She came to me in her beauty,
and until the end I will cultivate her.

<sup>15</sup>As the blossoms yielded to ripening
grapes,
the heart's joy,
My feet kept to the level path because from earliest youth I was familiar with her.

<sup>16</sup>In the short time I paid heed,

I met with great instruction.

<sup>17</sup>Since in this way I have profited,
I will give my Teacher grateful
praise.

<sup>18</sup>I resolved to tread her paths;
I have been jealous for the good and will not turn back.

<sup>19</sup>I burned with desire for her,
never relenting.

I became preoccupied with her,
never weary of extolling her.

I spread out my hands to the heavens
and I came to know her secrets.

<sup>20</sup>For her I purified my hands;
in cleanness I attained to her.

At first acquaintance with her, I gained
understanding

such that I will never forsake her.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>21</sup>My whole being was stirred to seek her;
therefore I have made her my prize
possession.

<sup>22</sup>The LORD has rewarded me with lips,
with a tongue for praising him.

<sup>23</sup>Come aside to me, you untutored, and take up lodging in the house of instruction; <sup>* b</sup>

<sup>24</sup>How long will you deprive yourself of wisdom's food,
how long endure such bitter thirst?

<sup>25</sup>I open my mouth and speak of her:
gain wisdom for yourselves at no cost.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>26</sup>Take her yoke upon your neck;
that your mind may receive her
teaching.

For she is close to those who seek her,
and the one who is in earnest finds her.<sup>d</sup>

- <sup>27</sup>See for yourselves! I have labored only a little,
but have found much.
- <sup>28</sup>Acquire but a little instruction,
and you will win silver and gold
through her.
- <sup>29</sup>May your soul rejoice in God's mercy;
do not be ashamed to give him praise.
- <sup>30</sup>Work at your tasks in due season,
and in his own time God will give you your reward.<sup>e</sup>

Foreword The Law, the prophets, and the authors who followed them: an indication of the eventual tripartite division of the Hebrew Scriptures: Law (torah), Prophets (nebi'im), and Writings (ketubim), shortened in the acronym Tanak. Thirty-eighth ... Euergetes: 132 B.C. The reference is to Ptolemy VII, Physkon Euergetes II (170–163; 145–117 B.C.).

1:1–10 This brief poem serves as an introduction to the book. The Lord is the source and preserver of all wisdom, which he pours out upon all. See Jb 28:20–28; Prv 2:6; 8:22–31; Wis 7:25–27.

1:1 Wisdom: throughout the book Ben Sira describes in great detail just what wisdom is: sometimes divine (1:6, 8), sometimes a synonym for God's law (24:22–23). Ben Sira makes clear that all wisdom comes from God.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 5:

The wellspring of wisdom is the word of God in the
heights,
and its runlets are the ageless commandments.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 7:

An understanding of wisdom—to whom has this been disclosed;
her resourcefulness, who has known?

1:8–10 In contrast to Jb 28, wisdom is not only with God, but given to all, especially Israel; see Bar 3:9; 4:4.

1:11–30 This is one of several poems of 22 bicola, or poetic lines, corresponding to the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet. Ben Sira uses the expression “fear of the Lord” twelve times and the noun “wisdom” seven times to emphasize the connection between the two ideas. He describes the blessings that come to those who fear the Lord, i.e., those who practice true religion by loving and serving God and keeping the Law (2:7–10, 15–17; 4:11–16; see Dt 6:1–5, 24). Such blessings recur throughout the book.

1:11 Fear of the Lord: Ben Sira identifies wisdom with the fear of the Lord (vv. 26–27).

† Other ancient texts read as v. 12cd:

Fear of the Lord is the Lord's gift;

also for love he makes firm paths.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 18cd:

Both are gifts of God toward peace;
splendor opens out for those who love him.

1:23–24 Ben Sira pays close attention to kaîros, the right time, occurring some sixty times in his book.

1:28–30 Attempting to serve the Lord with duplicity of heart is hypocrisy and self-exaltation, deserving of public disgrace.

2:1–11 Serving the Lord is not without its trials (v. 1); but no matter what happens, the genuine believer will remain sincere, steadfast, and faithful (vv. 2–3). Misfortune and humiliation are means of purification to prove one's worth (vv. 4–5). Ben Sira believed that patience and unwavering trust in God are ultimately rewarded with the benefits of God's mercy and of lasting joy (vv. 6–11).

2:12–18 A stern warning to those who compromise their faith in time of affliction; they fail in courage and trust and therefore have no security (vv. 12–14). But those who fear the Lord through obedience, reverence, love, and humility find his "mercy equal to his majesty" (vv. 15–18).

3:1–16 Besides the virtues that must characterize our conduct toward God, special duties are enjoined, such as honor and respect toward parents, with corresponding blessings (vv. 1–9). By showing such respect especially to old and infirm parents (vv. 10–13), the sins of children are pardoned (vv. 14–15). Failure to honor father and mother is blasphemy and merits a curse from God (v. 16). Cf. Ex 20:12; Eph 6:2–3.

3:17–24 Humility gives you a true estimate of yourself (vv. 17–20; cf. 10:28), so that you will do what should be done, and avoid what is beyond your understanding and strength (vv. 21–23). Intellectual pride, however, leads you astray (v. 24). Ben Sira is perhaps warning his students against the perils of Greek philosophy.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 19:

Many are lofty and famous,
but to the humble he reveals his plan.

3:25–29 The antidote for stubbornness is to be found in the search for knowledge and wisdom.

4:1 Needy eyes: when the poor look for help; cf. 18:18.

4:11–19 The Hebrew text in vv. 15–19 presents wisdom speaking in the first person, as in chap. 24. The precious fruits of wisdom—life, favor, glory, blessings, God's love—arouse desire for her (vv. 11–14). Her disciples are like ministers (v. 14) and judges (v. 15), whose descendants have her for their heritage (v. 16). They enjoy happiness and learn her secrets after surviving her tests (vv. 17–18). Those who fail her are abandoned to destruction (v. 19).

4:20–31 The student of wisdom is warned about interior trials of discipline and external dangers to sincerity and justice, namely evil, human respect (vv. 20–22), compromise of liberty in speech and action (vv. 23–25), false shame (v. 26). The student must fight for the truth (vv. 25, 28), avoiding cynicism and laziness (v. 29), and inconsistency (v. 30).

5:1–8 The vices of the rich are pride and independence (vv. 1–2), presumption (v. 3), false security (vv. 4–6), and impenitence (v. 7), which cannot escape the divine wrath (vv. 7–8). Cf. Prv 18:23; 19:1; 28:6.

5:9–6:1 Proper use of the tongue requires constancy in speech (v. 10), prudence (vv. 11–12), good judgment (v. 13), charity (5:15; 6:1); detraction, calumny (v. 14), and double-talk bring shame and disgrace (5:14; 6:1).

5:9 The metaphors indicate careless behavior.

6:1 Thus ... double-tongued!: people will say this against those disgraced by lying and double-talk.

6:5–17 One of several poems Ben Sira wrote on friendship; see also 9:10–16; 12:8–18; 13:1–23; 19:13–17; 22:19–26; 27:16–21. True friends are discerned not by prosperity (v. 11), but through the trials of adversity: distress, quarrels (v. 9), sorrow (v. 10) and misfortune (v. 12). Such friends are rare, a gift from God (vv. 14–17).

6:18–37 The various figures in each of the eight stanzas urge the search for wisdom through patience (vv. 18–19), persistence (vv. 20–22), docility and perseverance (vv. 23–28). Wisdom bestows rich rewards (vv. 29–31) on those who apply themselves and learn from the wise (vv. 32–36). Although one must strive for wisdom, it is God who grants it (v. 37). Cf. 4:11–19.

6:22 Discipline: musar (in the sense of wisdom) is a perfect homonym for musar, “removed, withdrawn”; thus the path of discipline is not accessible to many.

7:1–17 In the conduct of social relations wisdom forbids evil and injustice (vv. 1–3), pride (vv. 5, 15–17), ambition and partiality (vv. 4, 6), public disorder (v. 7), presumption and impatience toward God (vv. 9–10), ridicule (v. 11), mischief and deceit toward one’s neighbor (vv. 8, 12–13). See the several wisdom poems in Prv 1–9.

7:1 There is a play on “evil” which means both moral wrong and material calamity.

7:11 One who exalts and humbles: God; cf. 1 Sm 2:7; Ps 75:8; Lk 1:52.

7:14 Repeat ... prayer: brevity of speech is a wisdom ideal; toward superiors and God it is a sign of respect; cf. Eccl 5:1; Mt 6:7.

7:17 Worms: i.e., corruption; the Septuagint adds “fire.”

7:18–36 Respect and appreciation, justice and kindness should characterize relations toward members of the household (vv. 18–28), God and the priests (vv. 29–31), the poor and afflicted, the living and the dead (vv. 32–35).

7:18 Ophir: the port, at present unidentified, to which the ships of Solomon sailed and from which they brought back gold and silver; cf. note on Ps 45:10.

7:21 After six years of service a Hebrew slave was entitled to freedom; cf. Ex 21:2; Dt 15:12–15.

7:23 Cure their stubbornness: keep them from rebellious pride; so with the Greek. Cf. 30:1–13. The Hebrew text, probably not original here, reads: “Choose wives for them while they are young.”

7:31 First fruits ... holy offerings: cf. Ex 29:27; Lv 7:31–34; Nm 18:8–20; Dt 18:1–5.

7:33 This seems to refer to the observances ordained toward the dead, that is, proper mourning and burial. Cf. 2 Sm 21:12–14; Tb 1:17–18; 12:12.

7:36 Never sin: because the last days of the sinner, it was presumed, would be troubled.

8:1–19 The prudent will be circumspect, avoiding conflict with the powerful, the rich and insolent, the impious, the irascible, and judges (vv. 1–3, 10–12, 14, 16). They will not associate with the undisciplined (v. 4) or the ruthless (v. 15), with fools or strangers (vv. 17–19), but with the wise and the elders of the people (vv. 8–9). Caution is a recurring theme in Ben Sira.

8:3 One should avoid increasing the ire of those who are hotheaded; cf. vv. 10, 16.

8:5 We all are guilty: cf. 1 Kgs 8:46; 2 Chr 6:36; Jb 25:4; Eccl 7:20; Rom 3:9–10; 5:12; 1 Jn 1:8.

8:11 Giving in to the wicked only encourages them to take advantage.

8:18 To keep a secret, or a confidence, is a major concern of Ben Sira; cf. 1:30; 22:22; 27:16–21; 37:10; 42:1.

9:1–9 Ben Sira writes about women only from the androcentric viewpoint of his culture. Cf. 25:13–26:27.

9:1 Jealousy may lead to suspicion and may prompt a wife to those actions her husband fears.

9:5 Cf. Ex 22:15–16; Dt 22:28–29; Jb 31:1. Cf. note on Ex 22:16.

9:9 In blood: perhaps refers to blood revenge; cf. Lv 20:10.

9:10–16 The second of Ben Sira's poems on friendship; cf. note on 6:5–17. In choosing friends, adherence to the law of the Lord should serve as a guide (v. 15). Associate with true friends (v. 10), with the righteous and the learned (vv. 14–16); avoid the company of the mighty and of sinners (vv. 11–13). Cf. 8:1–19.

9:17–10:5 Public office as conducted justly or unjustly benefits or destroys the people, according to the axiom, "as the prince, so the people." God, however, has sovereignty over both.

10:9–10 The general implication is that a slight illness today may be followed by death tomorrow. The uncertainty of life leaves no room for pride.

935

10:19–11:6 Genuine honor comes not from one's place in society but from fear of the Lord and a true estimate of oneself. The Lord exalts the lowly and oppressed; transgressors of the commandment merit dishonor and disgrace.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 21:

The beginning of acceptance is the fear of the Lord;
the beginning of rejection, effrontery and pride.

11:4 The implication is similar to Eccl 7:13; 8:17: the mysterious work of God.

11:5 Cf. 1 Sm 2:8; Ps 75:8; 105:17–22; Lk 1:52.

11:7–28 Discretion should regulate conduct toward others (vv. 7–9); as regards personal interests, one should avoid solicitude for the passing external benefits of life and property (vv. 10–14, 18–19, 21, 23–25) and cultivate the lasting inward gifts of wisdom, virtue (vv. 20, 22), and patience (vv. 25–28).

11:14 In mysterious ways God ultimately governs the lives of men and women.

† Other ancient texts read as vv. 15–16:

<sup>15</sup> Wisdom and understanding and knowledge of the Law,
love and virtuous paths, are from the Lord.

<sup>16</sup> Error and darkness were formed with sinners from their birth,
and evil grows old with those who exult in evil.

11:19 Cf. the parable of the rich man, Lk 12:16–21.

11:26–28 Ben Sira thought that divine retribution took place only in the present life, and even at the end of life; cf. 9:12; 14:16–17.

12:1 The import of this verse is brought out in vv. 4–5.

12:6 Verse 7 is a variant of verse 4 and is omitted.

12:8–18 Adversity distinguishes friends from enemies; to trust the latter or permit them intimacy is to invite disaster. Cf. note on 6:5–17.

12:11 Ben Sira has harsh words for those who reveal secrets; see also 8:18; 27:16–21; 42:1; Prv 11:13; 20:19.

12:13 For v. 13a, see especially Eccl 10:11.

13:1–14:2 By means of various images, most of them unfavorable to the rich, Ben Sira indicates the practical impossibility of genuine and sincere companionship between the poor and the rich. He lays down a principle of associating with equals (13:6–19).

† Other ancient texts read as v. 14:

If you hear these things in your sleep, wake up!

With your whole life, love the Lord
and call on him for your salvation.

13:18 The hostility between the dogs which guard the flocks (Jb 30:1) and the rapacious hyenas (Jer 12:9) is proverbial in Palestine.

13:24 Ben Sira allows that the rich can be virtuous—but with difficulty; cf. 31:1–11.

14:1–2 A clear conscience, the result of honoring personal commitments and responsibilities, brings contentment and peace.

14:3–10 Ben Sira offers a case study about the miserable life of the “small-hearted” (Heb. leb qaṭan) to verify vv. 1–2. They are evil because they do not use their wealth properly to benefit themselves or others. While they are never satisfied that they have enough, they ignore their own needs and hospitality itself, feeding on the generosity of others, in order to protect their own resources. Ironically, after their death, strangers, with no obligation to keep their memory alive, enjoy their wealth.

14:11–19 Three realities govern Ben Sira’s attitude toward a proper use of wealth: the inevitability and uncertainty of death, the ephemeral nature of human accomplishments, the lack of reward or punishment after death. He advises generous enjoyment of God’s gift of wealth before death.

14:20–15:10 This poem charts the growing intimacy between those seeking Wisdom and Wisdom herself. They move from static reflection to playful pursuit, from camping outside the walls of her house to nesting inside her leafy shade. Ben Sira portrays Wisdom as both mother and bride, a feminine figure who is the fullness of womanhood according to his androcentric society.

14:25 In a good place: i.e., where Wisdom dwells.

14:26–27 The shift in imagery creates a more intimate relationship. Those seeking Wisdom dwell within her as a bird nests within a leafy tree.

15:3–6 In this role reversal Woman Wisdom teaches, nourishes, supports, and protects the vulnerable man. For similar imagery cf. Prv 8:4–21, 34–35; 9:1–5; 31:10–31.

15:9–10 There is an intimate association between wisdom and praise of the Lord.

15:11–20 Here Ben Sira links freedom of the will with human responsibility. God, who sees everything, is neither the cause nor the occasion of sin. We have the power to choose our behavior and we are responsible for both the good and the evil we do (vv. 15–17).

15:20 Deceivers: those who hold the Lord responsible for their sins.

16:1–23 One child who does God’s will is a greater blessing than many sinful offspring (vv. 1–4), for history and experience show that God punishes sin (vv. 5–10). God judges everyone according to their deeds (vv. 11–14); no one can hide from God or escape retribution at his hand (vv. 17–23).

16:6 For Korah and his band (v. 6a), see 45:18–19; Nm 16:1–35; Ps 106:18; for the disgruntled Israelites (v. 6b), Ps 78:21–22.

16:7 The princes of old: e.g., the mighty destroyed in the flood (Gn 6:1–4; Wis 14:6; Bar 3:26–28), as well as the king of Babylon (Is 14:4–21) and Nebuchadnezzar (Dn 4:7–30).

16:8 Neighbors of Lot: the people of Sodom and Gomorrah, condemned elsewhere for their sexual violence (Gn 19:24–25) and failure at hospitality (Ez 16:49–50).

16:9 Doomed people: the Canaanite tribes whose aberrant religious practices, at least in Israelite opinion, caused their downfall: Ex 23:23–24, 27–33; 33:2; 34:11–16; Dt 7:1–2; Wis 12:3–7.

16:10 Six hundred thousand foot soldiers: the number given for those rescued by Moses, who murmured against the Lord in the wilderness and died there: 46:1, 7–8; Nm 11:20; 14:1–12, 22–24, 29, 36–38; 26:65; Dt 1:35–38.

16:11 Stiff-necked: sinful Israelites; cf. Ex 32:9; 33:3, 5. Not even one Israelite would have gone unpunished for insolence or pride.

† Other ancient texts read as vv. 15–16:

15 The Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh so that he did not recognize him
whose acts were manifest under the heavens;

16 His mercy was seen by all his creatures, and his light and his darkness he apportioned to
humankind.

16:24–17:23 In harmony with Gn 1–2, the author describes God’s wisdom in creating the universe and everything in it (vv. 24–30), endowing human beings with a moral nature, with wisdom, knowledge, and freedom of will (cf. 15:14) according to his own image (17:1–3, 7). Now they can govern the earth (vv. 3–4), praise God’s name (vv. 9–10), obey his law (vv. 11–14), and render to him an account of their deeds (v. 23). Cf. Ps 19; 104.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 5:

They received the use of the Lord’s five faculties;
of mind, the sixth, he granted them a share,
as also of speech, the seventh, the interpreter of his actions.

17:12 An everlasting covenant ... his commandments: God made several covenants, e.g., Gn 9:8–17; 15:17–21; 17:1–22, entered into with humankind, especially on Mount Sinai, where the people saw God’s glory and heard his voice (v. 13; cf. Ex 19:16–24:18).

† Other ancient texts read as v. 16:

Their ways are directed toward evils from their youth,
and they are unable to make their hearts flesh
rather than stone.

17:17 Ruler: this may refer to civil officials or to heavenly beings placed over nations as guardians; see note on Dt 32:8, and the cross-references.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 18:

Israel, as his firstborn, he cares for with chastisement;
the light of his love he shares with him without neglect.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 21:

But the Lord, being good and knowing how they are formed,
neither neglected them nor ceased to spare them.

17:24–32 Ben Sira opens this poem with a prophetic summons to repent, urging sinners to give up their sins and to pray for forgiveness (vv. 24–26, 29). Ben Sira reflects the belief of his day that there was no life after death (vv. 27–28, 30; see note on 11:26–28). Cf. Ez 18:23, 30–32; 33:11–16. See note on Ps 6:6.

17:27–28 True life consists in praise of God; this is not possible in Sheol.

17:31 Worthless: cf. Gn 6:5. Though moral fault is not excluded, the thought here is the inability to understand the designs of God. Cf. Wis 9:14–18.

18:1–14 Not only are God’s justice and power beyond human understanding (vv. 1–7), his mercy also is boundless and surpasses all human compassion (vv. 8–14); he pities human frailty and mortality.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 3:

He controls the world within the span of his hand,
and everything obeys his will;
For he in his might is the King of all, separating what is holy among them from what is profane.

18:15–27 The practice of charity, especially almsgiving, is an art which avoids every offense to another (vv. 15–18). Prudence directs the changing circumstances of daily life in view of the time of scrutiny (i.e., the day of reckoning, or death, v. 24).

18:21 Sickness was often viewed as a punishment for sin; hence, the need for repentance. Cf. 38:9–10; Jb 15:20–24.

18:28–29 A general statement on the teaching of wisdom, serving either as a conclusion to the preceding section or as an introduction to the following one.

18:30–19:4 Inordinate gratification of the senses makes people unreasonable, slaves of passion, the laughingstock of their enemies, and it leads to an untimely death.

19:5–17 An excellent commentary on bearing false witness (Ex 20:16; Dt 5:20). Ben Sira speaks harshly about calumny, rash judgment, and detraction (vv. 5–7), and urges discreet silence (vv. 8–12). Justice requires that an accused neighbor be given a hearing, and charity urges fraternal correction; both together fulfill the law of the Most High (vv. 13–17); cf. Mt 7:1–2; 18:15–16.

† Other ancient texts read as vv. 18–19:

<sup>18</sup> Fear of the Lord is the beginning of acceptance;
and wisdom from him obtains love.

<sup>19</sup> Knowledge of the Lord’s commandments is life-giving instruction;
those who do what pleases him will harvest the fruit of the tree of immortality.

19:20–30 True wisdom is contrasted with a dishonest shrewdness.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 21:

The slave who says to his master, “What pleases you
I will not do”—
even if he does it later, provokes the one who feeds
him.

20:1–8 The wise know the proper times for speech and silence, that is, the occasions when the most benefit can be gained from them. On the ambiguity of silences, see Prv 17:27–28.

20:4 Force can prevent an external act of sin or compel a good deed, but it does not eliminate the internal sin or desire of wrongdoing.

20:9–17 In a series of paradoxes the author indicates how much true and lasting values differ from apparent ones.

20:18–26 The ill-timed speech brings disaster (vv. 18–20); human respect may lead to rash promises and enmity (vv. 22–23); lies bring dishonor and lasting disgrace (vv. 24–26).

20:27–31 Through prudent speech the wise gain honor and esteem among the great (vv. 27–28). They must beware, however, of accepting bribes, lest they share in evil through silence when they should reprove (vv. 29–31).

† Other ancient texts read as v. 32:

It is better to await the inevitable while serving the Lord
than to be the ungoverned helmsman for the careening of one's life.

21:1–10 Under various figures, the consequences of sin are described as destructive of wealth, and even of life, deserving of death (vv. 2–4, 6a, 8–10). Fear of the Lord motivates repentance (vv. 5, 6b).

21:10 The path of sinners ... Sheol: Ben Sira refers to the death that awaits unrepentant sinners; see notes on 11:26–28; 17:24–32.

21:11–28 The mind of the wise is a fountain of knowledge (vv. 13, 15); their will is trained to keep the Law (v. 11); their words are gracious, valued, carefully weighed, sincere (vv. 16–17, 25–26); their conduct is respectful, cultured and restrained (vv. 20, 22–24). The mind of the foolish is devoid of knowledge and impenetrable to it (vv. 12, 14, 18–19); their will rejects it (v. 15); their talk is burdensome (v. 16), their laughter unrestrained (v. 20), their conversation shallow and meddlesome (vv. 25–26); their conduct is bold and rude (vv. 22–24); their abuse of others redounds on themselves (vv. 27–28).

21:26 A clever play on words.

21:27 Curse their adversary: the curse of the godless often recoils on their own head; cf. Gn 27:29; Nm 24:9.

22:1–15 To Ben Sira, a lazy person and an unruly child are a cause of shame and disgrace; everyone wishes to be rid of them (vv. 1–5). Speaking with a wicked fool is as senseless as talking with someone who is asleep or dead (v. 10). The fool is an intolerable burden that merits a lifetime of mourning (v. 12). Seven days was the usual mourning period. Cf. Gn 50:10; Jdt 16:24.

22:1 Stone: used then and even today for wiping oneself after a bowel movement.

22:6 As a joyful song is out of place among mourners so a rebuke may be insufficient when corporal punishment is called for.

† Other ancient texts read as vv. 7–8:

<sup>7</sup> Children whose upbringing leads to a wholesome life veil over the lowly origins of their parents.

<sup>8</sup> Children whose pride is in scornful misconduct
besmirch the nobility of their own family.

22:16–18 A prudent mind firmly resolved is undisturbed by violent and conflicting thoughts, whereas a foolish person is tossed about by the winds of fear, like small stones whipped about by high winds.

22:19–26 Disputes and violence weaken friendship, and disloyalty and abuse of confidence destroy it utterly (vv. 19–22, 24, 26); but kindness to a poor person in time of poverty and adversity builds up friendship and merits a share in his prosperity and inheritance (vv. 23, 25).

22:27–23:6 Ben Sira implores the divine assistance to preserve him through stern discipline from sins of the tongue (22:27; 23:1), from ignorance of mind and weakness of will (vv. 2–3), and from inclinations of the senses and the flesh, lest he fall into the hands of his enemies or become a prey of shameful desires (vv. 4–6).

23:1–6 Lord, Father and Master of my life: these words express the tender personal relationship Ben Sira experiences with God, and introduce his prayer for divine assistance and providence in avoiding sins of pride and lust.

23:7–15 A warning against sins of the tongue through misuse of the sacred Name, against thoughtless swearing (vv. 7–11), blasphemy (v. 12), coarse talk (vv. 13–14), and abusive language (v. 15).

23:16–27 Ben Sira treats sexual sins and their consequences. Lust destroys its victims (vv. 16–17, 22–26). A false sense of security aggravates the adulterer's inevitable fate (vv. 18–21).

23:16 Two types ... a third: a numerical proverb, as in 25:1–2, 7–11; 26:5–6, 28; 50:25–26; Prv 6:16–19; 30:15b–16, 18–19, 21–23, 29–31. Ben Sira condemns three kinds of sexual sin: incest (v. 16), fornication (v. 17), and adultery (vv. 18–26).

23:24–25 The judgment of the assembly determined the illegitimacy of children born of adultery or incest and excluded them from the “community of the Lord” (Dt 23:3). Cf. Wis 3:16–19; 4:3–6.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 28:

It is a great glory to follow after God,
and for you to be received by him is length of days.

24:1–29 Wisdom speaks in the first person, describing her origin, her dwelling place in Israel, and the reward she gives her followers. As in Proverbs 8, Wisdom is personified as coming from God, yet distinct from him. This description is reflected in the Johannine logos, or Word (Jn 1:1–14). It is used extensively in the Roman liturgy.

24:15 These substances, associated with worship, are mentioned in Ex 30:23–28, 34–35 as the ingredients of the anointing oil and the sacred incense. Israel was a priestly nation (Ex 19:6; Is 61:6).

† Other ancient texts read as v. 18:

I am the mother of fair love, of reverence,
of knowledge, and of holy hope;
To all my children I give
to be everlasting: to those named by Him.

24:19 Mt 11:28–30 contains a similar invitation.

24:21 The paradox of wisdom is that, far from being satiated, those who partake of her will always desire more.

24:23 Ben Sira now identifies Wisdom and the law of Moses; see also Bar 4:1.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 24:

Do not grow weary of striving with the Lord's help,
but cling to him that he may reinforce you.
The Lord Almighty alone is God,
and apart from him there is no savior.

24:27 Gihon: understood by some to have been a name for the Nile; cf. Gn 2:13.

24:30–33 Ben Sira again speaks about himself. He had at first drawn a small portion of the water of wisdom for his own private benefit, but finding it so useful, he soon began to let others share in this boon by teaching them the lessons of wisdom. Like the words of the prophets, Ben Sira's instruction is valuable for all generations (v. 33). The comparison to prophecy is bold and unique.

25:1–2 A numerical saying in threes.

25:7–11 A numerical proverb (9 + 1), in which the tenth element, “the one who fears the Lord,” is the most important.

25:8 An ox and a donkey combined: the reference is to a man married to two incompatible women (cf. 37:11a); the imagery derives from Dt 22:10.

† Other ancient texts read as v. 12:

Fear of the Lord is the beginning of loving him,
and fidelity is the beginning of clinging to him.

25:13–26 The harsh statements Ben Sira makes about women reflect the kind of instruction young Jewish males were exposed to in the early second century B.C. His patriarchal perspective is as unfair as it is one-sided.

25:24 Ben Sira refers to the story of the first sin in Gn 3:1–6. Cf. 2 Cor 11:3 and 1 Tm 2:14. St. Paul, however, singles out Adam; cf. Rom 5:12–19; 1 Cor 15:22.

26:1–4, 13–18 A good wife is as a gift from God, bringing joy and peace, happiness and contentment to her husband (vv. 1–4) through her thoughtfulness, reserve, modesty and chastity, beauty, grace, and virtue (vv. 13–18).

26:6–12 A repetition of the thought expressed in 25:13–26.

26:17–18 The lampstand and the columns were located in the holy place of the ancient tabernacle (Ex 25:31–40; 26:32).

† Other ancient texts read as vv. 19–27:

- 19 My child, keep intact the bloom of your youth,
and do not give your strength to strangers.
- 20 Seek out a fertile field from all the land,
and sow it with your own seed, confident in your fine stock.
- 21 So shall your offspring prosper,
and grow great, confident in their good descent.
- 22 A woman for hire is regarded as spittle,
but a married woman is a deadly snare for her lovers.
- 23 A godless wife will be given to the lawless man as his
portion,
but a godly wife will be given to the man who
fears the Lord.
- 24 A shameless woman wears out reproach,
but a virtuous daughter will be modest even before her husband.
- 25 A headstrong wife is regarded as a bitch,
but the one with a sense of shame fears the Lord.
- 26 The wife who honors her husband will seem wise to everyone,
but if she dishonors him in her pride, she will be known to everyone as ungodly.
- Happy is the husband of a good wife,
for the number of his years will be doubled.
- 27 A loud-mouthed and garrulous wife will be regarded as a trumpet sounding the charge,
And every person who lives like this will spend his life in the anarchy of war.

26:28–27:15 From proper conduct in family life, Ben Sira proceeds to social morality, warning especially against injustice in business (26:29–27:3), and perversity of speech in daily life (27:4–7). The pursuit of justice in these matters is all the more meritorious as it is difficult (27:8–10). The discourses of the godly are marked with wisdom, but the conversations of the wicked with offense, swearing, cursing, quarrels, and even bloodshed (27:11–15).

27:4–7, 11–15 The importance of effective speech is a favorite wisdom topic; e.g., cf. 20:1–8, 18–20; 22:27–23:15.

27:16–28:11 Betrayal of confidence through indiscretion destroys friendship and does irreparable harm (27:16–21); cf. 22:22. False friendship based on hypocrisy and deceit is hateful to Ben Sira and, he adds, to God as well (27:22–24); it soon becomes a victim of its own treachery (27:25–27). The same fate awaits the malicious and vengeful (27:28–28:1). They can obtain mercy and forgiveness only by first forgiving their neighbor, being mindful of death and of the commandments of the Most High (28:2–7). And they must avoid quarrels and strife (28:8–11).

27:26 This expresses a popular idea of act and consequence; an evil (or good) deed is repaid by an evil (or good) result. The frequent metaphor is the digging of a hole for another to fall into; cf. Prv 26:27; Ps 7:14; 9:16; Eccl 10:8.

28:12–26 Further treatment of sins of the tongue and the havoc that results; cf. 5:9–6:1; 19:5–17; 20:18–26; 23:7–15. Gossips and the double-tongued destroy domestic peace (vv. 12–16). The whip, the sword, chains, even Sheol, are not so cruel as the suffering inflicted by an evil tongue (vv. 17–21). Not the godly but those who forsake the Lord are victims of their evil tongues (vv. 22–23). Therefore, guard your mouth and tongue as you would guard treasure against an enemy (vv. 24–26).

29:1–20 Some practical maxims concerning the use of wealth. Give to the poor (vv. 8–9), lend to a needy neighbor, but repay when a loan falls due lest the lender's burden be increased (vv. 1–5) and his kindness abused (vv. 6–7); through charity build up defense against evil (vv. 10–13). Help your neighbor according to your means, but take care not to fall (v. 20), for the shameless play false and bring their protectors and themselves to misfortune and ruin (vv. 14–19).

29:12–13 In Ben Sira's day, almsgiving and righteousness were practically identified.

29:14–17 Ben Sira is more lenient on going surety than earlier sages; cf. Prv 6:1–5.

29:21–28 Those who provide their own basic needs of food, clothing and dwelling, and are content with what they have, preserve their freedom and self-respect (vv. 21–23). But if they live as guests, even among the rich, they expose themselves to insult and rebuke (vv. 24–28).

30:1–13 Sound discipline (which would include physical beating) and careful education of children correct self-indulgence and stubbornness, prevent remorse and humiliation, and bring to parents lasting joy and delight, prestige among friends, jealousy of enemies, perpetuation and vindication of themselves through their offspring (vv. 1–6). Lack of discipline and overindulgence of children bring sorrow and disappointment, terror and grief (vv. 7–13).

30:14–25 Health of mind and body and joy of heart Ben Sira judges to be more precious than wealth (vv. 14–16), whereas bitterness, constant illness, and affliction are more difficult to bear than death (vv. 17–20). Sadness, resentment, anxiety, envy, and anger shorten days; they should be dispelled by cheerfulness and gladness of heart, which help to prolong one's days (vv. 21–25).

30:18 The saying ridicules the practice of putting food and drink on the tombs of the dead. 30:25(27) Because of the dislocation of the Greek text, the numbering of this verse follows Ziegler's edition. There are no verses 25–26.

31:1–11 Solicitude for acquiring wealth and anxiety over preserving it disturb repose and easily lead to sin and ruin (vv. 1–7). Cf. Mt 6:25–34. The rich who have not sinned or been seduced by wealth are worthy of highest praise (vv. 8–11).

31:12–32:13 Whoever observes etiquette at table avoids greed and selfishness (31:12–13), is considerate of a neighbor's likes and dislikes and is generous toward him (31:15, 14, 23, 24), observes proper manners (31:16–18), is moderate in eating and drinking (31:19–20, 25–30). A good host is solicitous for the guests (32:1–2), provides conversation and diversion (32:3–6), is modest in speech (32:7, 8, 10), is respectful of elders (32:9), polite in comportment and grateful to God for his favors (32:11–13).

31:21 Get up to vomit: the practice of induced vomiting, well-known among Romans, and less well-known among the Jews, seems to be referred to here.

32:14–33:4 God is shown to reveal himself through the discipline of his law, a clear and safe plan of life for the pious. Direction and deliberation are aids in following it (32:14–16, 18–24; 33:1, 3–4). Sinners and hypocrites, hating the law or distorting it, fail in wisdom and are devoid of security (32:15b, 17, 18b; 33:2).

33:3 Oracle: as the answer given through the Urim and Thummim to the high priest is true, so the law proves itself true to those who obey it. Cf. Ex 28:30; Nm 27:21.

33:7–15 An important doctrine of Ben Sira is his view of the polarities in creation and history; cf. v. 15; 42:24. Contrasts observable in the physical universe as well as in the moral order serve the purposes of divine wisdom (vv. 5–9). All creatures are like clay in the hands of their Maker—the fool and the wise, the sinner and the just (vv. 10–15). This does not imply that some are created to be sinners: God is not the author of wickedness. Divine determinism and human freedom are a mysterious mix.

33:16–18 Ben Sira refers to himself as the most recent of the biblical writers who have endeavored to present true wisdom to their readers.

33:19–33 Public officials should reject every influence that would restrict their freedom in the management of their affairs. They must make their own household subservient to them rather than be subservient to it (vv. 19–24). Slaves are to be given food and work and correction but never to be treated unjustly (vv. 25–30). Great care should be taken of good slaves (vv. 31–33).

34:1–20 Confidence placed in dreams, divinations, and omens is false because these are devoid of reality (vv. 1–8). True confidence is founded on knowledge and experience (vv. 9–13), and above all on the fear of the Lord, with its accompanying blessings of divine assistance and protection (vv. 14–20).

34:21–31 To be acts of true religion, sacrifice and penance must be accompanied by the proper moral dispositions. To offer to God goods taken from the poor (vv. 21–27), or to practice penance without interior reform, is a mockery, worthless in the sight of God (vv. 28–31). Cf. Mt 15:4–7; Mk 7:9–13.

35:1–26 Keeping the commandments of the law and avoiding injustice constitute sacrifice pleasing and acceptable to God (vv. 1–5). Offerings also should be made to him, cheerfully and generously; these he repays sevenfold (vv. 6–13). Extortion from widows and orphans is injustice, and God will hear their cries (vv. 14–22a). Punishing the proud and the merciless and coming to the aid of the distressed, he requites everyone according to their deeds (vv. 22b–26).

35:3 Fine flour, together with oil and frankincense, was a prescribed offering to God; cf. Lv 2:1–3.

35:16 Cf. Lv 19:15; Dt 1:17. The divine impartiality is paradoxical, for it is tilted toward the poor.

36:1–22 A prayer that God hasten the day for the gathering of the tribes of Israel, and Zion once more be filled with the divine glory. All the earth will then know that the Lord is the eternal God.

36:4 Show ... holiness: this cultic language is used to indicate God's liberation of his people; cf. Ez 20:41; 28:25.

36:13 This verse marks the end of a major dislocation in the Greek text of Sirach (which is followed here) at the head of chap. 33. The verse numbers 1–13 come from the placement of these verses in Greek. Verse 13 here is the first half of a bicolon, the matching half of which is numbered in the Greek 36:16b. Thus although the numbering for vv. 14–15 is not used, none of the text is missing.

36:23–37:15 In the choice of wife, friend, or associate, experience is a discernor of character (36:23–26). Beauty and soothing speech make a woman desirable as wife (36:27–28). The good wife becomes her husband’s richest treasure, his help in establishing his household (36:29–31). Good friends fight for comrades and share the spoils with them (37:5–6); false friends deceive and abandon in time of need (37:1–4). A true counselor and associate should be sought among those who keep the commandments, not among those who break them and seek their own advantage (37:7–12). In all things one should pray to God for light and follow conscience (37:13–15).

37:16–26 Thoughts determine action. Wisdom is the source of good and life; folly, of evil and death (vv. 16–18). If the fruits of a person’s wisdom benefit himself, he may be praised in his own lifetime; if they benefit others, the praise endures after him, in their lives (vv. 19–26).

37:20 Verse 21 appears only in Greek, but not in the Hebrew, which is the basis for the translation here.

37:27–31 Temperance and self-control should govern appetite for food, which is intended not to destroy but to preserve life.

38:1–15 The profession of medicine comes from God, who makes the earth yield healing herbs and gives the physician knowledge of their power (vv. 1–8). In illness the sick should cleanse their soul from sin and petition God for help through an offering of sacrifice; the physician, too, does well to invoke God that he may understand the illness and apply the proper remedy (vv. 9–14). The sinner, in contrast, defies both his Maker and the doctor (v. 15).

38:16–23 A period of mourning for the deceased and care for their burial are proper (vv. 16–17). But grief should not be excessive, for it cannot help the dead, who will not return, and may do harm to the living. The mourner should be realistic (vv. 18–23).

38:24–39:11 Ben Sira has a balanced view of the various vocations of skilled laborers—the farmer, engraver, smith and potter—but the profession of scribe is more excellent (38:24–34). He studies and meditates on the law of the Most High, seeks him in prayer of thanksgiving, petition and repentance for sin (39:1, 5, 7), explores the wisdom of the past and present, travels abroad to observe the conduct of many peoples, and attends rulers and great men. Through the spirit of understanding granted by God, he will show forth his wisdom to the glory of God’s law, gaining renown for generations to come (39:2–4, 6–11).

39:12–35 Ben Sira invites his disciples to join him in joyfully proclaiming his favorite theme: The works of God are all good; God supplies for every need in its own time (vv. 12–16, 32–35). The sage describes God’s omniscience, supreme power and wisdom, whereby all created things, good in themselves, are ever present to him, obey him, and fulfill their intended purpose (vv. 17–21), bringing blessing to the virtuous, but evil and punishment to the wicked who misuse them (vv. 22–31). Cf. similar hymns of praise, 36:1–22; 42:15–43:33.

40:1–17 The former idyllic description of the universe is contrasted with the picture of the evils afflicting humanity. Every person, high or low, is burdened from birth to death with fears, anxieties, and troubles, by day and often by night, the time appointed for rest (vv. 1–7). For sinners, the suffering is much greater (vv. 8–10). What they gained by violence and injustice is quickly destroyed; but righteousness will prevail (vv. 14–17).

40:1 Mother of all the living: the earth from which human beings were taken. Cf. Gn 2:7; 3:19–20; Jb 1:21; Ps 139:15.

40:11 All that is of earth ... returns above: a reference to bodily mortality and to the divine origin of life. Cf. 41:10; Gn 2:7; 3:19; Jb 34:14–15; Ps 104:29–30; 146:4; Eccl 12:7. The Greek and the Latin render the second half of the verse: “all waters shall return to the sea.”

40:18–27 Of the many treasures making life sweet, such as children, friends, music, vigor, the best are called true married love, wisdom, and above all, fear of God; cf. 25:6–11.

40:28–30 Among the Jews, begging was considered degrading to human dignity; it was agreeable only to the shameless, who had lost their sense of honor. Cf. 29:22–23.

41:1–13 Whether death seems bitter to one who enjoys peace, success, and pleasure, or welcome to one who is weak and in despair, it comes to all and must be accepted as the will of God (vv. 1–4). The human body passes away (v. 11). Sinners as well as their offspring pass away as if they had never been (vv. 5–10). Only the good name of the virtuous endures (vv. 11–13).

41:14–42:8 Ben Sira illustrates the subject of true and false shame with numerous and detailed examples of wrongdoing (41:14–22) and virtue (42:1–8), following the norm of the commandments.

42:9–14 Ben Sira considers a daughter to be a source of anxiety to her father, lest she fail to marry, or be defiled, or lest, marrying, she be childless, prove unfaithful, or find herself sterile (vv. 9–10). He is advised to keep a close watch on her and on her companions, lest he suffer on her account among the people (vv. 11–12). The exhortations, which take into account only a father's concern, are quite unflattering to young women. The concluding statements (vv. 13–14) show the limitations of Ben Sira's perspective in the male-oriented society of his day.

42:15–43:33 These verses comprise another hymn; cf. 16:24–18:14. In them Ben Sira contemplates God's power, beauty, and goodness as manifested in the mighty work of creating and preserving the universe (42:15–17, 22–25; 43:1–26), his omniscience (42:18–20), perfect wisdom and eternity (42:21). The conclusion is a fervent hymn of praise (43:27–31).

43:8 Like its name: there is a play in the Hebrew text on the words for moon and renewal. Waterskins: clouds as source of rain.

43:27 The all: the perfections reflected in creation are found in a transcendent way in God, who alone is their source.

44:1–50:24 As in the previous section God's glory shone forth in the works of nature, so in these chapters it is revealed through the history of God's people as seen in the lives of their ancestors, prophets, priests, and rulers. The example of these great people, whose virtues are recalled here, constitutes a high point of Ben Sira's teaching.

44:1–15 The reader is here introduced to those people of Israel, later mentioned by name, who through various achievements and beneficial social activities have acquired great renown (vv. 1–8, 14–15); and also to those who, though forgotten, endure through the fruit of their virtues and through their families because of God's covenant with them (vv. 9–15).

44:16 Enoch: because of his friendship with God and his unusual disappearance from the earth, this prophet's renown was great among the chosen people, particularly in the two centuries just before the coming of Christ; cf. Gn 5:21–24; Heb 11:5. The present verse is an expansion of the original text; cf. 49:14.

44:20 In his own flesh ... ordinance: the covenant of circumcision; cf. Gn 17:10–14. And when tested ... loyal: Abraham's willingness to sacrifice his son Isaac at the Lord's command; cf. Gn 22:1–12.

44:21 The River: the Euphrates; cf. Gn 2:14.

44:23(end)–45:5 Moses manifested God's power through marvels (vv. 1–3), God's authority through the commandments and the Law (v. 5), and God's mercy through the intimacy granted him by the Lord for his own faithfulness and meekness (v. 4).

45:5 On God's intimacy with Moses, see Ex 33:11; Nm 12:8; Dt 34:10.

45:6–25 Ben Sira here expresses his reverence and esteem for the priesthood of the old covenant. He recalls God's choice of Aaron and his sons for this sublime office (vv. 6–7), and describes in detail the beauty of the high priest's vestments (vv. 8–13). He relates the ordination of Aaron at the hands of Moses (v. 15), and describes the priestly functions, namely, offering sacrifice to God (v. 16), and blessing (v. 15), teaching, governing, and judging the people (v. 17); the inheritance of the high priest (vv. 20–22); the punishment of those who were jealous of Aaron (vv. 18–19); and the confirmation of the covenant of the priesthood with Aaron's descendants through Phinehas (vv. 23–25).

45:20 Showbread: cf. note on Ex 25:29–30.

45:25–26 So now bless: Ben Sira addresses the whole line of high priests, especially Simon II; cf. 50:1.

46:1–6 Joshua: whose name means “the Lord is savior” (v. 1), was the instrument through which God delivered his people in marvelous ways (vv. 2–6) by destroying their enemies, whose land he gave to the Israelites as a heritage (v. 1).

46:3 The battles of the Lord: cf. Jos 6–11.

46:7–10 Caleb: with Joshua he advised Moses to enter Canaan despite the counsel of their companion scouts and the rebellion of the people. He led the next generation of Israelites into the promised land. He received a portion of land which he himself had conquered; cf. Jos 15:13–14.

46:11–20 Of the judges praised and blessed for their fidelity to God in opposing idolatry, Samuel was the greatest (vv. 11–13, 19). He was judge, prophet, and priest. Through his sacrificial offering he obtained victory over the Philistines. He established the kingdom, anointed kings (vv. 13–18), and even after his death foretold the king’s fate (v. 20).

47:1–11 An idealized portrait of David; cf. 1 Chronicles

47:12–24 The standard view of Solomon is echoed by Ben Sira, but he affirms the divine promise (v. 22) to David’s line.

47:18 Cf. 2 Sm 12:25, where Solomon is called Jedidiah, “beloved of the Lord.” A similar term is used of Israel in Jer 11:15.

47:23 Broad: the name Rehoboam means “the people is broad, or expansive,” that is, widespread. The sinner: Jeroboam; cf. 1 Kgs 12:1, 20, 26–32.

47:25–48:11 The prophetic ministry of Elijah amid widespread idolatry is here described as a judgment by fire (48:1). Through his preaching, marvels, and acts of vengeance against God’s enemies, he succeeded for a time in restoring faith in and worship of the Lord (vv. 2–8). His mysterious departure from this life gave rise to the belief that he did not die but would return before the day of the Lord. Cf. Mal 3:23–24; Mt 17:9–13.

48:11 Verse 11b is not extant in the Hebrew; it is represented in the Greek tradition by “for we too shall certainly live.” But this can hardly be the original reading.

48:12–16 Elisha continued Elijah’s work (vv. 12–14), but the obstinacy of the people eventually brought on the destruction of the kingdom of Israel and the dispersion of its subjects. Judah, however, survived under the rule of Davidic kings, both good and bad (vv. 15–16).

48:13 The reference in v. 13b seems to be to 2 Kgs 13:21 where it is related that a dead man, thrown into Elisha’s grave, came back to life.

48:17–25 The fidelity of King Hezekiah (vv. 17, 22), the zeal of the prophet Isaiah, and the prayer of the people (v. 20) were effective. The Assyrian oppressors under Sennacherib withdrew (vv. 18–19, 21). The king’s life was prolonged. The people were consoled by Isaiah’s words about the future (vv. 23–25); the “consolations” refer to Is 40–66.

48:17 The reference is to the famous Siloam tunnel in present-day Jerusalem.

49:1–10 Ben Sira’s praise of King Josiah (vv. 1–3) and of the prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel and the minor prophets (vv. 7–10) derives from their spirit of fidelity to the Lord and his Law (vv. 4–6, 10).

49:11–13 The rebuilding of the Temple and the repair of the walls of the Holy City led to a restoration of religious worship and civil authority.

49:14–16 The patriarchs here mentioned were glorious because of their spirit of religion, i.e., their profound reverence for God and obedience to him. The splendor of Adam: suggests his direct origin from God (Gn 1:26–27; 2:7).

50:1–21 Son of Jochanan: Simeon II, in whose time as high priest (219–196 b.c.) great works were accomplished for the benefit of public worship and welfare (vv. 1–4). Ben Sira, a contemporary, describes detailed liturgical action, perhaps pertaining to the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur, cf. Lv 16).

50:22–24 Ben Sira urges the reader to praise and bless God for his wondrous works and then invokes a blessing on all that they may enjoy peace and gladness of heart and the abiding goodness of the Most High.

50:25 Not even a people: the Samaritans.

50:26 Seir: Mount Seir in the territory of the Edomites. Shechem: a city in Samaria.

50:27 This colophon may have been the original ending of the book. It is unusual for a biblical writer to append his name.

51:1–30 This chapter contains two appendixes: a prayer (vv. 1–12) and an autobiographical poem praising wisdom (vv. 13–30).

51:4 So complete is the deliverance from fire that even the smell of smoke cannot be detected. Cf. Dn 3:27.

51:12 After this verse the Hebrew text gives the litany of praise contained below. It is similar to Ps 136. Though not found in any versions, and therefore of doubtful authenticity, the litany seems from internal evidence to go back to the time of Ben Sira.

Give praise to the Lord, for he is good, for God's love endures forever;

Give praise to the God of glory, for God's love
endures forever;

Give praise to the Guardian of Israel, for God's love
endures forever;

Give praise to the creator of all things, for God's love
endures forever;

Give praise to the redeemer of Israel, for God's love
endures forever;

Give praise to God who gathers the dispersed of Israel, for God's love endures forever;

Give praise to God who builds the city and sanctuary,
for God's love endures forever;

Give praise to God who makes a horn sprout forth for the house of David, for God's love endures
forever;

Give praise to God who has chosen the sons of Zadok
as priests, for God's love endures forever;

Give praise to the Shield of Abraham, for God's love
endures forever;

Give praise to the Rock of Isaac, for God's love
endures forever;

Give praise to the Mighty One of Jacob, for God's
love endures forever;

Give praise to God who has chosen Zion, for God's
love endures forever;

Give praise to the King, the king of kings, for God's love endures forever.

He has lifted up the horn of his people! Let this be his praise from all the faithful,

From Israel, the people near to him. Hallelujah! (Cf.
Ps 148:14.)

51:13–30 A Hebrew manuscript from Qumran demonstrates the acrostic style of vv. 13–20. This is an elegant twenty-three-line alphabetic acrostic hymn that describes Ben Sira's relationship to wisdom: (a) his approach to wisdom through prayer, persistent study, and instruction (vv. 13–17); (b) his purification from sin, his enlightenment, and ardent desire to possess wisdom (vv. 18–22). Ben Sira concludes with an urgent invitation to his students to receive instruction in wisdom from him, and to live by it, because wisdom gives herself to those who seek her (vv. 23–26); and for their labor, God will reward them in his own time (vv. 27–30). Cf. Mt 11:28; Eccl 12:14.

51:23 House of instruction: this may be a metaphor for Ben Sira's teaching.

THE PROPHETIC BOOKS

See RG 316–409

The prophetic books bear the names of the four major and twelve minor prophets, in addition to Lamentations and Baruch. The terms “major” and “minor” refer to the length of the respective compositions and not to their relative importance. Jonah is a story about a prophet rather than a collection of prophetic pronouncements. In the Hebrew Bible, Lamentations and Daniel are listed among the Writings (Hagiographa), not among the prophetic books. The former contains a series of laments over the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians. The latter is considered to be a prophetic book, though it consists of a collection of six edifying diaspora tales (chaps. 1–6) and four apocalyptic visions about the end time (chaps. 7–12). Baruch is not included in the Hebrew canon, but is in the Septuagint or Old Greek version of the Bible, and the Church has from the beginning acknowledged its sacred and inspired character.

The prophetic books contain a deposit of prophetic preaching, and several of them in addition are filled out with narrative about prophets (e.g., Is 7; 36–39; Jer 26–29; 36–45; Am 7:10–17). In ancient Israel a prophet was understood to be an intermediary between God and the community, someone called to proclaim the word of God. Prophets received such communications through various means, including visions and dreams, often in a state of transformed consciousness, and transmitted them to the people as God’s messengers through oracular utterances, sermons, writings, and symbolic actions.

It would be misleading to think of these works as books in our sense of the term. While some prophecies originated as written material, prophetic activity more commonly took the form of public speaking. Prophetic discourse addressed to different audiences in different situations would, typically, be committed first to memory, then to writing, often by the prophet’s followers, sometimes by the prophet himself (e.g., Is 8:1–4, 16;

Jer 36:1–2; Hb 2:2). Small compilations of such pronouncements and discourses would be put together, arranged according to subject matter (e.g., pronouncements against foreign nations), audience (e.g., Jeremiah to King Zedekiah, Jer 21:1–24:10), chronological sequence (e.g., in Ezekiel generally), or by verbal association (e.g., catchwords). These units would be circulated, edited, expanded and interpreted as the need arose to bring out the contemporary relevance of older prophecies, and eventually integrated into larger collections. The titles would have been added at a later date, in some instances centuries after the time of the prophet in question.

The office of the prophet came about as the result of a direct call from God. Unlike that of the priest, the prophetic function was not hereditary and did not correspond to a fixed office. In Israel as elsewhere in the ancient Near East and Levant, there were, however, prophets (nebi'im in Hebrew) who were employed in temples and at royal courts, and some of the canonical prophets may have started out as “professionals” of this kind. Prophecy also differed from priesthood in ancient Israel in that there were both male and female prophets. Though none of the prophetic books is named for a female prophet, Miriam (Ex 15:20) and Deborah (Jgs 4:4) played important roles at the beginning of Israel’s history and Huldah (2Kgs 22:14) toward the end. The Bible gives great importance to the call or commissioning of the prophet, which was often accompanied by visionary or other extraordinary experiences (e.g., Jer 23:21–22; Ez 1–2). In these accounts the prophetic intermediary can be represented as a messenger commissioned by the Lord as king (e.g., Micaiah in 1Kgs 22:19–23, and Isaiah in Is 6:1–13), and therefore prophetic speech is often introduced with the form used in the delivery of a message: “thus says the Lord” or some similar formula. Sometimes the prophetic calling could be expected to involve struggle, persecution, and suffering.

While prophetic messages sometimes bore on the future, their primary concern was with contemporary events in the public sphere of social life and politics, national and international. They focus on public morality, the treatment of the poor and disadvantaged, and the abuse of power, especially of the judicial system. They pass judgment in the strongest terms on the moral conduct of rulers and the ruling class, in the belief that a society that does not practice justice and righteousness will not survive. With equal rigor, they also condemn a religious formalism that would legitimate such a society (e.g., Is 1:10–17; Jer 7:1–15; Am 5:21–24). They view international affairs, the rise and fall of the great empires, in the light of their own passionate belief in the God of Israel and the destiny of Israel. The prophets never take political and military power as absolutes. They do not preach a new morality. They are radicals only in the sense of a radical commitment to and interpretation of the religious, legal, and moral traditions inherited from Israel's past.

Prophetic speech is not, however, confined to judgment and condemnation. The prophets also exhort, cajole, encourage; they announce salvation and a good prognosis for the future. Sometimes present realities and situations shade off into, or are taken up into, a panorama of a more distant future. In many instances, too, prophetic pronouncements are developed by a cumulative and incremental editorial process into a more inclusive and total vision of a final salvation and a final judgment, with or without the presence of a messianic figure. This process is particularly evident throughout the Book of Isaiah, and played an important part in the self-understanding of early Christian churches and their interpretation of the person and mission of Jesus. For early Christianity, therefore, prophetic texts were used to describe the new reality of Christ and the church (e.g., Mt 1:23; Acts 2:14–21; Gal 4:27).

Isaiah, one of the greatest of the prophets, appeared at a critical moment in Israel's history. The Northern Kingdom collapsed, under the hammerlike blows of Assyria, in 722/721B.C., and in 701 Jerusalem itself saw the army of Sennacherib drawn up before its walls. In the year that Uzziah, king of Judah, died (742), Isaiah received his call to the prophetic office in the Temple of Jerusalem. Close attention should be given to chap. 6, where this divine summons to be the ambassador of the Most High is circumstantially described.

The vision of the Lord enthroned in glory stamps an indelible character on Isaiah's ministry and provides a key to the understanding of his message. The majesty, holiness and glory of the Lord took possession of his spirit and, at the same time, he gained a new awareness of human pettiness and sinfulness. The enormous abyss between God's sovereign holiness and human sinfulness overwhelmed the prophet. Only the purifying coal of the seraphim could cleanse his lips and prepare him for acceptance of the call: "Here I am, send me!"

The ministry of Isaiah extended from the death of Uzziah in 742B.C. to Sennacherib's siege of Jerusalem in 701B.C., and it may have continued even longer, until after the death of Hezekiah in 687B.C. Later legend (the Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah) claims that Hezekiah's son, Manasseh, executed Isaiah by having him sawed in two; cf. Heb 11:37. During this long ministry, the prophet returned again and again to the same themes, and there are indications that he may have sometimes re-edited his older prophecies to fit new occasions. There is no evidence that the present arrangement of the oracles in the book reflects a chronological order. Indeed, it appears that there were originally separate smaller collections of oracles (note especially chaps. 6–12), each with its own logic for ordering, that were preserved fairly intact as blocks when the material was finally put together as a single literary work.

Isaiah's oracles cluster around several key historical events of the late eighth century: the Syro-Ephraimite War (735–732B.C.), the accession of Hezekiah (715B.C.), the revolt of Ashdod (714–711B.C.), the death of Sargon (705B.C.), and the revolt against Sennacherib (705–701B.C.). In 738B.C., with the Assyrian defeat of Calno/Calneh (Is 10:9; Am 6:2), the anti-Assyrian league, of which Judah may have been the ringleader, collapsed, and both Israel and the Arameans of Damascus paid tribute to Assyria. By 735B.C., however, Rezin of Damascus had created a new anti-Assyrian league, and when Ahaz refused to join, the league attempted to remove Ahaz from the throne of Judah. The resulting Syro-Ephraimite War was the original occasion for many of Isaiah's oracles (cf. chaps. 7–8), in which he tried to reassure Ahaz of God's protection and dissuade him from seeking protection by an alliance with Assyria. Ahaz refused Isaiah's message, however.

When Hezekiah came to the throne in 715B.C., Isaiah appears to have put great hopes in this new scion of David, and he undoubtedly supported the religious reform that Hezekiah undertook. But the old intrigues began again, and the king was sorely tempted to join with neighboring states in an alliance sponsored by Egypt against Assyria. Isaiah succeeded in keeping Hezekiah out of Ashdod's abortive revolt against Assyria, but when Sargon died in 705B.C., with both Egypt and Babylon encouraging revolt, Hezekiah was won over to the pro-Egyptian party. Isaiah denounced this "covenant with death" (28:15, 18), and again summoned Judah to faith in the Lord as the only hope. But it was too late; the revolt had already begun. Assyria acted quickly and its army, after ravaging Judah, laid siege to Jerusalem (701). "I shut up Hezekiah like a bird in his cage," boasts the famous inscription of Sennacherib. The city was spared but at the cost of paying a huge indemnity to Assyria. Isaiah may have lived and prophesied for another dozen years after 701. There is material in the book that may plausibly be associated with Sennacherib's campaign against Babylon and its Arabian allies in 694–689B.C.

For Isaiah, the vision of God's majesty was so overwhelming that military and political power faded into insignificance. He constantly called his people back to a reliance on God's promises and away from vain attempts to find security in human plans and intrigues. This vision also led him to insist on the ethical behavior that was required of human beings who wished to live in the presence of such a holy God. Isaiah couched this message in oracles of singular poetic beauty and power, oracles in which surprising shifts in syntax, audacious puns, and double- or triple-entendre are a constant feature.

The complete Book of Isaiah is an anthology of poems composed chiefly by the great prophet, but also by disciples, some of whom came many years after Isaiah. In 1–39 most of the oracles come from Isaiah and reflect the situation in eighth-century Judah. Sections such as the Apocalypse of Isaiah (24–27), the oracles against Babylon (13–14), and probably the poems of 34–35 were written by followers deeply influenced by the prophet, in some cases reusing earlier Isaianic material; cf., e.g., 27:2–8 with 5:1–7.

Chapters 40–55 (Second Isaiah, or Deutero-Isaiah) are generally attributed to an anonymous poet who prophesied toward the end of the Babylonian exile. From this section come the great oracles known as the Servant Songs, which are reflected in the New Testament understanding of the passion and glorification of Christ. Chapters 56–66 (Third Isaiah, or Trito-Isaiah) contain oracles from the postexilic period and were composed by writers imbued with the spirit of Isaiah who continued his work.

The principal divisions of the Book of Isaiah are the following:

I. Isaiah 1–39

- A. Indictment of Israel and Judah (1:1–5:30)
- B. The Book of Emmanuel (6:1–12:6)
- C. Oracles Against the Foreign Nations (13:1–23:18)
- D. Apocalypse of Isaiah (24:1–27:13)
- E. The Lord Alone, Israel's and Judah's Salvation (28:1–33:24)
- F. The Lord, Zion's Avenger (34:1–35:10)
- G. Historical Appendix (36:1–39:8)

II. Isaiah 40–55

- A. The Lord's Glory in Israel's Liberation (40:1–48:22)
  - B. Expiation of Sin, Spiritual Liberation of Israel (49:1–55:13)
- III. Isaiah 56–66

A. Indictment of Israel and Judah

CHAPTER 1

See RG 321–31

Accusation and Appeal

<sup>2</sup> * Hear, O heavens, and listen, O earth,
for the LORD speaks:
Sons have I raised and reared,
but they have rebelled against me!<sup>a</sup>

<sup>3</sup> An ox knows its owner,
and an ass, * its master's manger;
But Israel does not know,
my people has not understood.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Ah! * Sinful nation, people laden with wickedness,
evil offspring, corrupt children!
They have forsaken the LORD,
spurned the Holy One of Israel,
apostatized,<sup>c</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Why * would you yet be struck,
that you continue to rebel?
The whole head is sick,
the whole heart faint.

<sup>6</sup> From the sole of the foot to the head
there is no sound spot in it;
Just bruise and welt and oozing wound,
not drained, or bandaged,
or eased with salve.

<sup>7</sup> Your country is waste,
your cities burnt with fire;
Your land—before your eyes
strangers devour it,
a waste, like the devastation of Sodom.<sup>* d</sup>

<sup>8</sup> And daughter Zion * is left

- like a hut in a vineyard,
Like a shed in a melon patch,
like a city blockaded.
- 9 If the LORD of hosts * had not left us a small remnant,
We would have become as Sodom,
would have resembled Gomorrah. <sup>e</sup>
- 10 * Hear the word of the LORD, princes of Sodom!
Listen to the instruction of our God,
people of Gomorrah!
- 11 What do I care for the multitude of your sacrifices?
says the LORD.
I have had enough of whole-burnt rams
and fat of fatlings;
In the blood of calves, lambs, and goats
I find no pleasure. <sup>f</sup>
- 12 When you come to appear before me,
who asks these things of you?
- 13 Trample my courts no more!
To bring offerings is useless;
incense is an abomination to me.
New moon and sabbath, calling assemblies—
festive convocations with wickedness—
these I cannot bear. <sup>g</sup>
- 14 Your new moons and festivals I detest; <sup>h</sup>
they weigh me down, I tire of the load.
- 15 When you spread out your hands,
I will close my eyes to you;
Though you pray the more,
I will not listen.
Your hands are full of blood! <sup>* i</sup>
- 16 Wash yourselves clean!
Put away your misdeeds from before my
eyes;
cease doing evil;
- 17 learn to do good.

Make justice your aim: redress the wronged,
hear the orphan's plea, defend the widow.<sup>j</sup>

- 18 Come now, let us set things right,*
says the LORD:
Though your sins be like scarlet,
they may become white as snow;
Though they be red like crimson,
they may become white as wool.<sup>k</sup>
- 19 If you are willing, and obey,
you shall eat the good things of the
land;
- 20 But if you refuse and resist,
you shall be eaten by the sword:
for the mouth of the LORD has spoken!

The Purification of Jerusalem

- 21 How she has become a prostitute,
the faithful city,* so upright!
Justice used to lodge within her,
but now, murderers.<sup>l</sup>
- 22 Your silver is turned to dross,
your wine is mixed with water.
- 23 Your princes are rebels
and comrades of thieves;
Each one of them loves a bribe
and looks for gifts.
The fatherless they do not defend,
the widow's plea does not reach them.<sup>m</sup>
- 24 Now, therefore, says the Lord,
the LORD of hosts, the Mighty One of Israel:
Ah! I will take vengeance on my foes and fully repay my enemies!<sup>n</sup>
- 25 I will turn my hand against you,
and refine your dross in the furnace,

- removing all your alloy.
- 26 I will restore your judges * as at first,
and your counselors as in the
beginning;
After that you shall be called
city of justice, faithful city.<sup>o</sup>
- 27* Zion shall be redeemed by justice,
and her repentant ones by
righteousness.
- 28 Rebels and sinners together shall be crushed,
those who desert the LORD shall be
consumed.

Judgment on the Sacred Groves

- 29 * You shall be ashamed of the terebinths
which you desired,
and blush on account of the gardens
which you chose.
- 30 You shall become like a terebinth whose leaves wither,
like a garden that has no water.
- 31 The strong tree shall turn to tinder,
and the one who tends it shall become
a spark;
Both of them shall burn together,
and there shall be none to quench them.

CHAPTER 2

See RG 321–31

Zion, the Royal City of God

- <sup>2</sup> * In days to come,
The mountain of the LORD's house shall be established as the highest mountain
and raised above the hills.
All nations shall stream toward it.<sup>P</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Many peoples shall come and say:
“Come, let us go up to the LORD's
mountain,
to the house of the God of Jacob,
That he may instruct us in his ways,
and we may walk in his paths.”<sup>Q</sup>
For from Zion shall go forth instruction, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.
- <sup>4</sup> * He shall judge between the nations,
and set terms for many peoples.
They shall beat their swords into plowshares
and their spears into pruning hooks;<sup>r</sup>
One nation shall not raise the sword against another,
nor shall they train for war again.<sup>S</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> * House of Jacob, come,
let us walk in the light of the LORD!

The Lord's Day of Judgment on Pride

- <sup>6</sup> You have abandoned your people,
the house of Jacob!
Because they are filled with diviners,

- and soothsayers, like the Philistines;
with foreigners they clasp hands.<sup>t</sup>
- 7 Their land is full of silver and gold,
there is no end to their treasures;
Their land is full of horses,
there is no end to their chariots.
- 8 Their land is full of idols;
they bow down to the works of their
hands,
what their fingers have made.<sup>u</sup>
- 9 So all shall be abased,
each one brought low.*
Do not pardon them!
- 10 Get behind the rocks, hide in the dust,
From the terror of the LORD
and the splendor of his majesty!
- 11 The eyes of human pride shall be lowered,
the arrogance of mortals shall be abased,
and the LORD alone will be exalted, on that day.*
- 12 For the LORD of hosts will have his day
against all that is proud and arrogant, against all that is high, and it will be brought low;
- 13 Yes, against all the cedars of Lebanon*
and against all the oaks of Bashan,
- 14 Against all the lofty mountains
and all the high hills,
- 15 Against every lofty tower
and every fortified wall,
- 16 Against all the ships of Tarshish
and all stately vessels.
- 17 Then human pride shall be abased,
the arrogance of mortals brought low,
And the LORD alone will be exalted on
that day.
- 18 The idols will vanish completely.

19 People will go into caves in the rocks
and into holes in the earth,
At the terror of the LORD
and the splendor of his majesty,
as he rises to overawe the earth.

20 On that day people shall throw to moles
and bats
their idols of silver and their idols of
gold
which they made for themselves to worship.

21 And they shall go into caverns in the rocks
and into crevices in the cliffs,
At the terror of the LORD
and the splendor of his majesty,
as he rises to overawe the earth.

22 * As for you, stop worrying about mortals,
in whose nostrils is but a breath;
for of what worth are they?

Judgment on Jerusalem and Judah

- 1 * The Lord, the of hosts, will take away from Jerusalem and from Judah Support and staff—
all support of bread,
all support of water:<sup>v</sup>
- 2 Hero and warrior,
judge and prophet, diviner and elder,
- 3 The captain of fifty and the nobleman, counselor, skilled magician, and expert charmer.
- 4 I will place boys as their princes;
the fickle will govern them,<sup>w</sup>
- 5 And the people will oppress one another,
yes, each one the neighbor.
The child will be insolent toward the elder,
and the base toward the honorable.<sup>x</sup>
- 6 When anyone seizes a brother
in their father's house, saying, “You have clothes! Be our ruler, and take in hand this ruin!”—
- 7 He will cry out in that day:
“I cannot be a healer,<sup>y</sup> when there is neither bread nor clothing in my own house!
You will not make me a ruler of the
people!”
- 8 Jerusalem has stumbled, Judah has fallen;
for their speech and deeds affront the
LORD,
a provocation in the sight of his majesty.
- 9 Their very look bears witness against
them;<sup>z</sup>

- they boast of their sin like Sodom,<sup>a</sup>
 They do not hide it.
 Woe to them!
 They deal out evil to themselves.
- 10 Happy the just, for it will go well with
 them,
 the fruit of their works they will eat.
- 11 Woe to the wicked! It will go ill with them, with the work of their hands they will be repaid.
- 12 My people—infants oppress them,
 women rule over them!
 My people, your leaders deceive you,<sup>b</sup> they confuse the paths you should follow.
- 13 * The LORD rises to accuse, stands to try his people.
- 14 The Lord enters into judgment
 with the people's elders and princes:
 You, you who have devoured the vineyard;
 the loot wrested from the poor is in your houses.
- 15 What do you mean by crushing my people,
 and grinding down the faces of the
 poor?
 says the Lord, the God of hosts.

*The Haughty Women of Zion**

- 16 The LORD said:<sup>c</sup>
 Because the daughters of Zion are haughty,
 and walk with necks outstretched,
 Ogling and mincing as they go,
 their anklets tinkling with every step,
- 17 The Lord shall cover the scalps of Zion's daughters with scabs,
 and the LORD shall lay bare their heads.*<sup>d</sup>

<sup>24</sup> Instead of perfume there will be stench,
instead of a girdle, a rope,
And instead of elaborate coiffure,
baldness;
instead of a rich gown, a sackcloth
skirt.
Then, instead of beauty, shame.

<sup>25</sup> Your men will fall by the sword, and your champions, * in war;<sup>e</sup>

<sup>26</sup> Her gates will lament and mourn,
as the city sits desolate on the ground.<sup>f</sup>

CHAPTER 4

See RG 321–31

<sup>1</sup>Seven women will take hold of one man*
on that day, saying:

“We will eat our own food
and wear our own clothing;
Only let your name be given us,
put an end to our disgrace!”

Jerusalem Purified

<sup>2</sup> *On that day,
The branch* of the LORD will be beauty
and glory,
and the fruit of the land will be honor
and splendor
for the survivors of Israel.

<sup>3</sup> Everyone who remains in Zion,
everyone left in Jerusalem
Will be called holy:
everyone inscribed for life* in Jerusalem.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>4</sup> When the Lord washes away
the filth of the daughters of Zion,
And purges Jerusalem’s blood from her
midst
with a blast of judgment, a searing blast,<sup>h</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Then will the LORD create,
over the whole site of Mount Zion
and over her place of assembly,
A smoking cloud by day and a light of flaming fire by night.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>6</sup> For over all, his glory will be shelter and protection:
shade from the parching heat of day,
refuge and cover from storm and rain.<sup>j</sup>

CHAPTER 5

See RG 321–31

*The Song of the Vineyard**

- <sup>1</sup> Now let me sing of my friend,
    my beloved's song about his vineyard.
My friend had a vineyard
    on a fertile hillside;
- <sup>2</sup> He spaded it, cleared it of stones,
    and planted the choicest vines;
Within it he built a watchtower,
    and hewed out a wine press.
Then he waited for the crop of grapes,
    but it yielded rotten grapes.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Now, inhabitants of Jerusalem, people of Judah,
    judge between me and my vineyard:
- <sup>4</sup> What more could be done for my vineyard
    that I did not do?<sup>l</sup>
Why, when I waited for the crop of grapes,
    did it yield rotten grapes?
- <sup>5</sup> Now, I will let you know what I am going to do to my vineyard:
Take away its hedge, give it to grazing, break through its wall, let it be trampled!*
- <sup>6</sup> Yes, I will make it a ruin:
    it shall not be pruned or hoed,
    but will be overgrown with thorns and briers;
I will command the clouds
    not to rain upon it.
- <sup>7</sup> The vineyard of the LORD of hosts is the house of Israel,
    the people of Judah, his cherished plant;
He waited for judgment, but see,
    bloodshed!

for justice, but hark, the outcry!*

*Oracles of Reproach**

- 8 * Ah! Those who join house to house, who connect field with field,
Until no space remains, and you alone dwell
in the midst of the land!<sup>m</sup>
- 9 In my hearing the LORD of hosts has sworn.<sup>n</sup>
Many houses shall be in ruins, houses large and fine, with nobody living there.<sup>o</sup>
- 10 Ten acres of vineyard
shall yield but one bath,*
And a homer of seed
shall yield but an ephah.
- 11 * Ah! Those who rise early in the morning
in pursuit of strong drink, lingering late
inflamed by wine,
- 12 Banqueting on wine with harp and lyre,
timbrel and flute,<sup>p</sup>
But the deed of the LORD they do not regard,
the work of his hands they do not see!<sup>q</sup>
- 13 Therefore my people go into exile
for lack of understanding,<sup>r</sup>
Its nobles starving,
its masses parched with thirst.
- 14 Therefore Sheol enlarges its throat and opens its mouth beyond measure;<sup>s</sup> Down into it go nobility and masses, tumult and revelry.
- 15 All shall be abased, each one brought

- low,
and the eyes of the haughty lowered,<sup>t</sup>
- 16 But the LORD of hosts shall be exalted by
judgment,
by justice the Holy God shown holy.<sup>u</sup>
- 17 Lambs shall graze as at pasture,
young goats shall eat in the ruins of the rich.
- 18 Ah! Those who tug at guilt with cords of perversity,
and at sin as if with cart ropes!
- 19 * Who say, "Let him make haste, let him speed his work, that we may see it;
On with the plan of the Holy One of Israel!
let it come to pass, that we may know it!"<sup>v</sup>
- 20 Ah! Those who call evil good, and good
evil,
who change darkness to light, and
light into darkness,
who change bitter to sweet, and sweet into bitter!<sup>w</sup>
- 21 Ah! Those who are wise in their own
eyes,
prudent in their own view!<sup>x</sup>
- 22 Ah! Those who are champions at drinking wine, masters at mixing drink!
- 23 Those who acquit the guilty for bribes,
and deprive the innocent of justice!<sup>y</sup>
- 24 Therefore, as the tongue of fire licks up
stubble,
as dry grass shrivels in the flame,
Their root shall rot
and their blossom scatter like dust;
For they have rejected the instruction of the LORD of hosts,

and scorned the word of the Holy One
of Israel.

25 * Therefore the wrath of the LORD blazes
against his people,
he stretches out his hand to strike
them;

The mountains quake,<sup>z</sup> their corpses shall be like refuse in the streets.

For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
his hand is still outstretched.

Invasion*

26 He will raise a signal to a far-off nation, and whistle for it from the ends of the earth.<sup>a</sup>

Then speedily and promptly they will
come.

27 None among them is weary, none
stumbles,
none will slumber, none will sleep.
None with waist belt loose,
none with sandal thong broken.

28 Their arrows are sharp,
and all their bows are bent,
The hooves of their horses like flint,
and their chariot wheels like the
whirlwind.

29 They roar like the lion,
like young lions, they roar;
They growl and seize the prey,
they carry it off and none can rescue.

30 They will growl over it, on that day,
like the growling of the sea,
Look to the land—
darkness closing in,
the light dark with clouds!<sup>b</sup>

The Sending of Isaiah. <sup>1</sup>In the year King Uzziah died, *I saw the Lord seated on a high and lofty throne, <sup>c</sup>with the train of his garment filling the temple. <sup>2</sup>Seraphim *were stationed above; each of them had six wings: with two they covered their faces, with two they covered their feet, and with two they hovered. <sup>d</sup><sup>3</sup>One cried out to the other:

“Holy, holy, holy *is the LORD of hosts!
All the earth is filled with his glory!”

<sup>5</sup>Then I said, “Woe is me, I am doomed!” *For I am a man of unclean lips, living among a people of unclean lips, <sup>f</sup>and my eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts!” <sup>6</sup>Then one of the seraphim flew to me, holding an ember which he had taken with tongs from the altar.

<sup>7</sup>He touched my mouth with it. “See,” he said, “now that this has touched your lips, *your wickedness is removed, your sin purged.” <sup>g</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Then I heard the voice of the Lord saying, “Whom shall I send? Who will go for us?” “Here I am,” I said; “send me!” <sup>9</sup>*And he replied: Go and say to this people:

Listen carefully, but do not understand!

Look intently, but do not perceive! <sup>h</sup>

<sup>10</sup> Make the heart of this people sluggish, dull their ears and close their eyes;
Lest they see with their eyes, and hear
with their ears,
and their heart understand,
and they turn and be healed. <sup>i</sup>

<sup>11</sup> “How long, O Lord?” I asked. And he replied:

* Until the cities are desolate,
without inhabitants,
Houses, without people,
and the land is a desolate waste.

<sup>12</sup> Until the LORD sends the people far
away,
and great is the desolation in the midst of the land.

- 13 If there remain a tenth part in it,
then this in turn shall be laid waste;
As with a terebinth or an oak whose trunk remains when its leaves have fallen. <sup>**j*</sup>
Holy offspring is the trunk.

The Syro-Ephraimite War*

Crisis in Judah. <sup>1</sup>In the days of Ahaz, * king of Judah, son of Jotham, son of Uzziah, Rezin, king of Aram, and Pekah, king of Israel, son of Remaliah, went up to attack Jerusalem, but they were not able to conquer it. <sup>k</sup> <sup>2</sup>When word came to the house of David that Aram had allied itself with Ephraim, the heart of the king and heart of the people trembled, as the trees of the forest tremble in the wind.

<sup>3</sup>Then the LORD said to Isaiah: Go out to meet Ahaz, you and your son Shear-jashub, * at the end of the conduit of the upper pool, on the highway to the fuller's field, <sup>4</sup>and say to him: Take care you remain calm and do not fear; do not let your courage fail before these two stumps of smoldering brands, <sup>l</sup> the blazing anger of Rezin and the Arameans and of the son of Remaliah— <sup>5</sup>because Aram, with Ephraim and the son of Remaliah, has planned * evil against you. They say, <sup>6</sup>“Let us go up against Judah, tear it apart, make it our own by force, and appoint the son of Tabeel * king there.”

It shall not stand, it shall not be! <sup>m</sup>

<sup>8</sup> * The head of Aram is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin;

<sup>9</sup> The head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is the son of Remaliah.

Within sixty-five years,
Ephraim shall be crushed, no longer a nation.

Unless your faith is firm,
you shall not be firm! <sup>n</sup>

Emmanuel. <sup>10</sup>Again the LORD spoke to Ahaz: <sup>11</sup>Ask for a sign from the LORD, your God; let it be deep as Sheol, or high as the sky! * <sup>12</sup>But Ahaz answered, “I will not ask! I will not tempt the LORD!” * <sup>13</sup>Then he said: Listen, house of David! Is it not enough that you weary human beings? Must you also weary my God? <sup>14</sup>Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign; * the young woman, pregnant and about to bear a son, shall name him Emmanuel. <sup>15</sup>Curds and honey * he will eat so that he may learn to reject evil and choose good; <sup>16</sup>for before the child learns to reject evil and choose good, the land of those two kings whom you dread shall be deserted.

<sup>17</sup>The LORD shall bring upon you and your people and your father's house such days as have not come since Ephraim seceded * from Judah (the king of Assyria). <sup>18</sup>On that day

The LORD shall whistle for the fly in the farthest streams of Egypt,
and for the bee in the land of Assyria.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>19</sup> All of them shall come and settle in the steep ravines and in the rocky clefts,
on all thornbushes and in all pastures.

<sup>20*</sup> On that day the Lord shall shave with the razor hired from across the River (the king of Assyria) the head, and the hair of the feet; it shall also shave off the beard.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>21</sup> On that day a man shall keep alive a young cow or a couple of sheep, <sup>22</sup>and from their abundant yield of milk he shall eat curds; curds and honey shall be the food of all who are left in the land. <sup>23*</sup> On that day every place where there were a thousand vines worth a thousand pieces of silver shall become briers and thorns. <sup>24</sup> One shall have to go there with bow and arrows, for all the country shall be briers and thorns.<sup>q</sup> <sup>25</sup> But as for all the hills which were hoed with a mattock, for fear of briers and thorns you will not go there; they shall become a place for cattle to roam and sheep to trample.<sup>r</sup>

CHAPTER 8

A Son of Isaiah. <sup>1</sup>The LORD said to me: Take a large tablet, and inscribe on it with an ordinary stylus, * “belonging to Maher-shalal-hash-baz,”<sup>s</sup> <sup>2</sup>and call reliable witnesses * for me, Uriah the priest, and Zechariah, son of Jeberechiah.

<sup>3</sup>Then I went to the prophetess and she conceived and bore a son. The LORD said to me: Name him Maher-shalal-hash-baz, <sup>4</sup>for before the child learns to say, “My father, my mother,” the wealth of Damascus and the spoils of Samaria shall be carried off by the king of Assyria.

The Choice: The Lord or Assyria. <sup>5</sup>Again the Lord spoke to me:

<sup>6</sup> Because this people * has rejected
the waters of Shiloah that flow gently,
And melts with fear at the display of Rezin and Remaliah’s son,

<sup>7</sup> Therefore the Lord is bringing up against
them
the waters of the River, great and
mighty,
the king of Assyria and all his glory.
It shall rise above all its channels,
and overflow all its banks.

<sup>8</sup> It shall roll on into Judah, it shall rage and pass on—
up to the neck it shall reach.<sup>t</sup>
But his outspread wings will fill the width of your land, Emmanuel!

<sup>9</sup> Band together, O peoples, but be shattered!
Give ear, all you distant lands!
Arm yourselves, but be shattered! Arm yourselves, but be shattered!

<sup>10</sup> Form a plan, it shall be thwarted;
make a resolve, it shall not be carried
out,
for “With us is God!”<sup>* u</sup>

Disciples of Isaiah. <sup>11</sup>For thus said the LORD—his hand strong upon me—warning me not to walk in the way of this people:

<sup>12</sup> * Do not call conspiracy what this people calls conspiracy,

nor fear what they fear, nor feel dread.

13 But conspire with the LORD of hosts;
he shall be your fear, he shall be your dread.<sup>v</sup>

14 He shall be a snare,
a stone for injury,
A rock for stumbling
to both the houses of Israel,
A trap and a snare
to those who dwell in Jerusalem;<sup>w</sup>

15 And many among them shall stumble;
fallen and broken;
snared and captured.<sup>x</sup>

16 Bind up my testimony, seal the instruction with my disciples.* 17 I will trust in the LORD, who is hiding his face from the house of Jacob; yes, I will wait for him. 18 Here am I and the children whom the LORD has given me: we are signs* and portents in Israel from the LORD of hosts, who dwells on Mount Zion.<sup>y</sup>

19 And when they say to you, “Inquire of ghosts and soothsayers who chirp and mutter;* <sup>z</sup> should not a people inquire of their gods, consulting the dead on behalf of the living, <sup>20</sup>for instruction and testimony?” Surely, those who speak like this are the ones for whom there is no dawn.*

21 He will pass through it hard-pressed and
hungry,
and when hungry, shall become enraged,
and curse king and gods.

He will look upward,
22 and will gaze at the earth,
But will see only distress and darkness,
oppressive gloom,
murky, without light.*

The Promise of Salvation Under a New Davidic King.* 23 There is no gloom where there had been distress. Where once he degraded the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, now he has glorified the way of the Sea, the land across the Jordan, Galilee of the Nations.*

CHAPTER 9

See RG 321–31

- <sup>1</sup> The people who walked in darkness
have seen a great light;
Upon those who lived in a land of gloom
a light has shone.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> You have brought them abundant joy
and great rejoicing;
They rejoice before you as people rejoice
at harvest,
as they exult when dividing the spoils.
- <sup>3</sup> For the yoke that burdened them,
the pole on their shoulder,
The rod of their taskmaster,
you have smashed, as on the day of Midian.<sup>* b</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> For every boot that tramped in battle,
every cloak rolled in blood,
will be burned as fuel for fire.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> For a child* is born to us, a son is given to us;
upon his shoulder dominion rests.
They name him Wonder-Counselor,
God-Hero,<sup>d</sup>
Father-Forever, Prince of Peace.
- <sup>6</sup> His dominion is vast and forever peaceful, Upon David's throne, and over his
kingdom,
which he confirms and sustains
By judgment and justice,
both now and forever.<sup>e</sup>
The zeal of the LORD of hosts will do
this!

*Judgment on the Northern Kingdom**

- 7 The Lord has sent a word against Jacob,
and it falls upon Israel;
- 8 And all the people know it—Ephraim and those who dwell in Samaria—
those who say in arrogance and pride
of heart,
- 9 “Bricks have fallen,
but we will rebuild with cut stone;
Sycamores have been felled,
but we will replace them with cedars.”<sup>f</sup>
- 10 So the LORD raises up their foes against
them
and stirs up their enemies to action—
- 11 Aram* from the east and the Philistines from the west—
they devour Israel with open mouth.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
and his hand is still outstretched!
- 12 The people do not turn back to the one who struck them,
nor do they seek the LORD of hosts.
- 13 So the LORD cuts off from Israel head
and tail,
palm branch and reed in one day.<sup>g</sup>
- 14 (The elder and the noble are the head,
the prophet who teaches falsehood is the tail.)<sup>h</sup>
- 15 Those who lead this people lead them
astray,
and those who are led are swallowed up.<sup>i</sup>
- 16 That is why the LORD does not spare their
young men,
and their orphans and widows he does not pity;
For they are totally impious and wicked,
and every mouth speaks folly.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
his hand is still outstretched!

- 17 For wickedness burns like fire,
    devouring brier and thorn;
It kindles the forest thickets,
    which go up in columns of smoke.<sup>j</sup>
- 18 At the wrath of the LORD of hosts the land quakes,
    and the people are like fuel for fire;
    no one spares his brother.<sup>k</sup>
- 19 They hack on the right, but remain
    hungry;
    they devour on the left, but are not filled.
    Each devours the flesh of the
    neighbor;
- 20 Manasseh devours Ephraim,* and Ephraim Manasseh,
    together they turn on Judah.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
    his hand is still outstretched!

CHAPTER 10

See RG 321–31

Perversion of Justice

- 1 * Ah! Those who enact unjust statutes, who write oppressive decrees,<sup>l</sup>
- 2 Depriving the needy of judgment,
robbing my people's poor of justice,
Making widows their plunder,
and orphans their prey!<sup>m</sup>
- 3 What will you do on the day of
punishment,
when the storm comes from afar?
To whom will you flee for help?
Where will you leave your wealth,
- 4 Lest it sink beneath the captive or fall beneath the slain?
For all this, his wrath is not turned back,
his hand is still outstretched! *

Judgment on Assyria

- 5 * Ah! Assyria, the rod of my wrath,
the staff I wield in anger.<sup>n</sup>
- 6 Against an impious nation * I send him, and against a people under my wrath I order him
To seize plunder, carry off loot, and to trample them like the mud of
the street.
- 7 But this is not what he intends,
nor does he have this in mind;
Rather, it is in his heart to destroy,
to make an end of not a few nations.
- 8 For he says, "Are not my commanders all
kings?"
- 9 * "Is not Calno like Carchemish,

Or Hamath like Arpad,
or Samaria like Damascus?

<sup>10</sup> Just as my hand reached out to idolatrous kingdoms
that had more images than Jerusalem and Samaria—

<sup>11</sup> Just as I treated Samaria and her idols, shall I not do to Jerusalem and her graven images?”

<sup>12</sup> But when the LORD has brought to an end all his work on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem,

I will punish the utterance
of the king of Assyria’s proud heart, and the boastfulness of his haughty
eyes.

<sup>13</sup> For he says:
“By my own power I have done it,
and by my wisdom, for I am shrewd.
I have moved the boundaries of peoples,
their treasures I have pillaged,
and, like a mighty one, I have brought down the enthroned.

<sup>14</sup> My hand has seized, like a nest,
the wealth of nations.
As one takes eggs left alone,
so I took in all the earth;
No one fluttered a wing,
or opened a mouth, or chirped!”

<sup>15</sup> Will the ax boast against the one who hews with it?
Will the saw exalt itself above the one who wields it?
As if a rod could sway the one who lifts
it,
or a staff could lift the one who is not
wood!

<sup>16</sup> Therefore the Lord, the LORD of hosts, will send leanness among his fat ones,*
And under his glory there will be a kindling
like the kindling of fire.<sup>o</sup>

- 17 The Light of Israel will become a fire,
the Holy One, a flame,
That burns and consumes its briers
and its thorns in a single day.<sup>P</sup>
- 18 And the glory of its forests and orchards
will be consumed, soul and body, and it will be like a sick man who wastes away.
- 19 And the remnant of the trees in his forest
will be so few,
that any child can record them.
- 20 On that day
The remnant of Israel,
the survivors of the house of Jacob,
will no more lean upon the one who struck them;
But they will lean upon the LORD,
the Holy One of Israel, in truth.
- 21 A remnant will return, * the remnant of Jacob,
to the mighty God.
- 22 Though your people, O Israel,
were like the sand of the sea,<sup>Q</sup>
Only a remnant of them will return;
their destruction is decreed,
as overflowing justice demands.<sup>R</sup>

23 For the Lord, the God of hosts, is about to carry out the destruction decreed in the midst of the whole land.<sup>S</sup>

24* Therefore thus says the Lord, the God of hosts: My people, who dwell in Zion, do not fear the Assyrian, though he strikes you with a rod, and raises his staff against you as did the Egyptians.

25 For just a brief moment more, and my wrath shall be over, and my anger shall be set for their destruction. 26 Then the LORD of hosts will raise against them a scourge such as struck Midian at the rock of Oreb;<sup>T</sup> and he will raise his staff over the sea as he did in Egypt.<sup>U</sup> 27 On that day,

His burden shall be taken from your shoulder,
and his yoke shattered from your neck.<sup>V</sup>

The March of an Enemy Army*

- He has come up from Rimmon, 28 he has reached Aiath, passed through Migron,
    at Michmash he has stored his supplies.
- 29 He has crossed the ravine,
    at Geba he has camped for the night.
    Ramah trembles,
    Gibeah of Saul has fled.
- 30 Cry and shriek, Bath-Gallim!
    Hearken, Laishah! Answer her, Anathoth!
- 31 Madmenah is in flight,
    the inhabitants of Gebim seek refuge.
- 32 Even today he will halt at Nob,
    he will shake his fist at the mount of daughter Zion,
    the hill of Jerusalem!
- 33 * Now the Lord, the LORD of hosts, is about to lop off the boughs with terrible violence;
    The tall of stature shall be felled,
    and the lofty ones shall be brought low;
- 34 He shall hack down the forest thickets
    with an ax,
    and Lebanon in its splendor shall fall.

The Ideal Davidic King*

- 1 But a shoot shall sprout from the stump*
of Jesse,
and from his roots a bud shall blossom.<sup>w</sup>
- 2 * The spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him.<sup>x</sup>
a spirit of wisdom and of
understanding,
A spirit of counsel and of strength,
a spirit of knowledge and of fear of the
LORD,
- 3 and his delight shall be the fear of the
LORD.
Not by appearance shall he judge,
nor by hearsay shall he decide,
- 4 But he shall judge the poor with justice,
and decide fairly for the land's afflicted.<sup>y</sup>
He shall strike the ruthless with the rod
of his mouth,
and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked.<sup>z</sup>
- 5 Justice shall be the band around his waist,
and faithfulness a belt upon his hips.<sup>a</sup>
- 6 * Then the wolf shall be a guest of the lamb,
and the leopard shall lie down with the young goat;
The calf and the young lion shall browse
together,
with a little child to guide them.<sup>b</sup>
- 7 The cow and the bear shall graze,
together their young shall lie down;

- the lion shall eat hay like the ox.<sup>c</sup>
- 8 The baby shall play by the viper's den,
and the child lay his hand on the adder's lair.
- 9 They shall not harm or destroy on all my
holy mountain;
for the earth shall be filled with knowledge of the LORD,
as water covers the sea.

Restoration*

- 10 On that day,
The root of Jesse,
set up as a signal for the peoples—
Him the nations will seek out;
his dwelling shall be glorious.<sup>d</sup>
- 11 On that day,
The Lord shall again take it in hand to reclaim the remnant of his people that is left from Assyria and Egypt, Pathros, Ethiopia, and Elam, Shinar, Hamath, and the isles of the sea.<sup>e</sup>
- 12 He shall raise a signal to the nations<sup>f</sup>
and gather the outcasts of Israel;
The dispersed of Judah he shall assemble from the four corners of the earth.
- 13 The envy of Ephraim shall pass away,
and those hostile to Judah shall be cut off;
Ephraim shall not envy Judah,
and Judah shall not be hostile to Ephraim;
- 14 But they shall swoop down on the foothills
of the Philistines to the west,
together they shall plunder the people of the east;* Edom and Moab shall be their possessions,

and the Ammonites their subjects.

15 The LORD shall dry up the tongue* of the Sea of Egypt,
and wave his hand over the Euphrates
with his fierce wind,
And divide it into seven streamlets,
so that it can be crossed in sandals.<sup>g</sup>

16 There shall be a highway for the remnant of his people
that is left from Assyria,
As there was for Israel
when it came up from the land of Egypt.<sup>h</sup>

Song of Thanksgiving*

- <sup>1</sup> On that day, you will say:
I give you thanks, O LORD;
though you have been angry with me,
your anger has abated, and you have consoled me.
- <sup>2</sup> God indeed is my salvation;
I am confident and unafraid.
For the LORD is my strength and my might,
and he has been my salvation.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> With joy you will draw water from the fountains of salvation,<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> And you will say on that day:
give thanks to the LORD, acclaim his
name;
Among the nations make known his
deeds,
proclaim how exalted is his name.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> Sing praise to the LORD for he has done
glorious things;
let this be known throughout all the earth.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> Shout with exultation, City of Zion,
for great in your midst
is the Holy One of Israel!<sup>m</sup>

CHAPTER 13

See RG 321–31

Babylon. *1 An oracle * concerning Babylon; a vision of Isaiah, son of Amoz.

2 Upon the bare mountains set up a signal;

    cry out to them,* Beckon for them to enter the gates of the nobles.<sup>n</sup>

3 I have commanded my consecrated ones,*

    I have summoned my warriors,
    eager and bold to carry out my anger.<sup>o</sup>

4 Listen! the rumble on the mountains:

    that of an immense throng!
    Listen! the noise of kingdoms, nations assembled!

    The LORD of hosts is mustering
    an army for battle.<sup>p</sup>

5 They come from a far-off country,

    and from the end of the heavens,
    The LORD and the instruments of his
    wrath,
    to destroy all the land.

6 Howl, for the day of the LORD * is near;

    as destruction from the Almighty it comes.<sup>q</sup>

7 Therefore all hands fall helpless,<sup>r</sup>

    every human heart melts,

8 and they are terrified,

    Pangs and sorrows take hold of them,
    like a woman in labor they writhe;
    They look aghast at each other,
    their faces aflame.<sup>s</sup>

9 Indeed, the day of the LORD comes,

    cruel, with wrath and burning anger;
    To lay waste the land

    and destroy the sinners within it!<sup>t</sup>

10 The stars of the heavens and their

- constellations
will send forth no light;
The sun will be dark at its rising,
and the moon will not give its light.<sup>u</sup>
- 11 Thus I will punish the world for its evil
and the wicked for their guilt.
I will put an end to the pride of the
arrogant,
the insolence of tyrants I will humble.<sup>v</sup>
- 12 I will make mortals more rare than pure
gold,
human beings, than the gold of Ophir.<sup>* w</sup>
- 13 For this I will make the heavens tremble and the earth shall be shaken from its
place,
At the wrath of the LORD of hosts
on the day of his burning anger.<sup>x</sup>
- 14 Like a hunted gazelle,
or a flock that no one gathers,
They shall turn each to their own people and flee each to their own land.<sup>y</sup>
- 15 Everyone who is taken shall be run through;
and everyone who is caught shall fall
by the sword.
- 16 Their infants shall be dashed to pieces in their sight;
their houses shall be plundered
and their wives ravished.<sup>z</sup>
- 17 I am stirring up against them the Medes,
who think nothing of silver and take no delight in gold.<sup>a</sup>
- 18 With their bows they shall shatter the
young men,
And the fruit of the womb they shall not spare,
nor shall their eye take pity on
children.
- 19 And Babylon, the jewel of kingdoms,
the glory and pride of the Chaldeans,

Shall become like Sodom and Gomorrah, overthrown by God.<sup>b</sup>

20 It shall never be inhabited,
nor dwelt in, from age to age;
Arabians shall not pitch their tents there,
nor shepherds rest their flocks there.<sup>c</sup>

21 But desert demons shall rest there and owls shall fill the houses;
There ostriches shall dwell,
and satyrs* shall dance.<sup>d</sup>

22 Wild dogs shall dwell in its castles,
and jackals in its luxurious palaces.
Its time is near at hand
and its days shall not be prolonged.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 14

See RG 321–31

Restoration of Israel. <sup>1</sup>But the LORD will take pity on Jacob and again choose Israel, and will settle them on their own land; foreigners will join them and attach themselves to the house of Jacob.<sup>f</sup>
<sup>2</sup>The nations will take them and bring them to their place, and the house of Israel will possess them as male and female slaves on the Lord's land; they will take captive their captors and rule over their oppressors.<sup>g</sup>

Downfall of the King of Babylon. <sup>3</sup>On the day when the Lord gives you rest from your sorrow and turmoil, from the hard service with which you served,<sup>h</sup> <sup>4</sup>you will take up this taunt-song* against the king of Babylon:<sup>i</sup>

How the oppressor has come to an end!
how the turmoil has ended!

<sup>5</sup> The LORD has broken the rod of the
wicked,
the staff of the tyrants<sup>j</sup>

<sup>6</sup> That struck the peoples in wrath
with relentless blows;
That ruled the nations in anger,
with boundless persecution.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>7</sup> The whole earth rests peacefully,
song breaks forth;

<sup>8</sup> The very cypresses rejoice over you,
the cedars of Lebanon:
“Now that you are laid to rest,
no one comes to cut us down.”<sup>l</sup>

<sup>9</sup> Below, Sheol is all astir
preparing for your coming;
Awakening the shades to greet you,
all the leaders of the earth;
Making all the kings of the nations rise from their thrones.

<sup>10</sup> All of them speak out
and say to you,
“You too have become weak like us,
you are just like us!

<sup>11</sup> Down to Sheol your pomp is brought,
the sound of your harps.
Maggots are the couch beneath you,

- worms your blanket.”<sup>m</sup>
- 12 How you have fallen from the heavens,
O Morning Star,* son of the dawn!
How you have been cut down to the
earth,
you who conquered nations!<sup>n</sup>
- 13 In your heart you said:
“I will scale the heavens;
Above the stars of God*
I will set up my throne;
I will take my seat on the Mount of Assembly,
on the heights of Zaphon.”<sup>o</sup>
- 14 I will ascend above the tops of the
clouds;
I will be like the Most High!”<sup>p</sup>
- 15 No! Down to Sheol you will be brought to the depths of the pit!<sup>q</sup>
- 16 When they see you they will stare,
pondering over you:
“Is this the man who made the earth
tremble,
who shook kingdoms?
- 17 Who made the world a wilderness,
razed its cities,
and gave captives no release?”
- 18 All the kings of the nations lie in glory,
each in his own tomb;<sup>r</sup>
- 19 But you are cast forth without burial,
like loathsome carrion,
Covered with the slain, with those struck
by the sword,
a trampled corpse,
Going down to the very stones of the pit.<sup>s</sup>
- 20 You will never be together with them
in the grave,
For you have ruined your land,
you have slain your people!
Let him never be named,

that offshoot of evil!
21 Make ready to slaughter his sons for the guilt of their fathers;<sup>t</sup> Lest they rise and possess the earth,
and fill the breadth of the world with cities.*

22 I will rise up against them, says the LORD of hosts, and cut off from Babylon name and remnant, progeny and offspring, says the Lord.<sup>u</sup> 23 I will make it a haunt of hoot owls and a marshland; I will sweep it with the broom of destruction, oracle of the LORD of hosts.

*God's Plan for Assyria**

24 The LORD of hosts has sworn:
As I have resolved,
so shall it be;
As I have planned,
so shall it stand:
25 To break the Assyrian in my land
and trample him on my mountains;
Then his yoke shall be removed from
them,
and his burden from their shoulder.<sup>v</sup> 26 This is the plan proposed for the whole
earth,
and this the hand outstretched over all
the nations.*
27 The LORD of hosts has planned;
who can thwart him?
His hand is stretched out;
who can turn it back?<sup>w</sup>

Philistia. * 28 In the year that King Ahaz died, * there came this oracle:

29 * Do not rejoice, Philistia, not one of you,
that the rod which struck you is broken;
For out of the serpent's root shall come
an adder,
its offspring shall be a flying saraph.
30 In my pastures the poor shall graze,
and the needy lie down in safety;

But I will kill your root with famine
that shall slay even your remnant.

31 Howl, O gate; cry out, O city!

Philistia, all of you melts away!

For there comes a smoke from the north,*
without a straggler in its ranks.

32 What will one answer the messengers of the nations?*

“The LORD has established Zion, and in her the afflicted of his people find refuge.”

Moab*

- <sup>1</sup> Oracle on Moab:
Laid waste in a night,
Ar of Moab is destroyed;
Laid waste in a night,
Kir of Moab is destroyed.
- <sup>2</sup> Daughter Dibon has gone up to the high places to weep;
Over Nebo and over Medeba
Moab is wailing.
Every head is shaved,
every beard sheared off.<sup>* x</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> In the streets they wear sackcloth,
and on the rooftops;
In the squares
everyone wails, streaming with tears.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> Heshbon and Elealeh cry out,
they are heard as far as Jahaz.
At this the loins of Moab tremble,
his soul quivers within him;<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> My heart cries out for Moab,
his fugitives reach Zoar, Eglath-shelishiyah:
The ascent of Luhith
they ascend weeping;
On the way to Horonaim
they utter rending cries;<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> The waters of Nimrim
have become a waste,
The grass is withered,
new growth is gone,
nothing is green.
- <sup>7</sup> So now whatever they have acquired or stored away
they carry across the Wadi of the Poplars.

- 8 The cry has gone round
the territory of Moab;
As far as Eglaim his wailing,
even at Beer-elim his wailing.
- 9 * The waters of Dimon are filled with
blood,
but I will bring still more upon Dimon:
Lions for those who are fleeing from Moab
and for those who remain in the land!

CHAPTER 16

See RG 321–31

- 1 Send them forth, * hugging the earth
like reptiles,
from Sela across the desert,
to the mount of daughter Zion.
- 2 Like flushed birds,
like scattered nestlings,
Are the daughters of Moab
at the fords of the Arnon. * b
- 3 * Offer counsel, take their part;
at high noon make your shade like the
night;
Hide the outcasts,
do not betray the fugitives.
- 4 Let the outcasts of Moab live with you,
be their shelter from the destroyer.
When there is an end to the oppressor,
when destruction has ceased,
and the marauders have vanished from
the land,
- 5 A throne shall be set up in mercy,
and on it shall sit in fidelity,
in David's tent,
A judge upholding right,
prompt to do justice. c
- 6 We have heard of the pride of Moab,
how very proud he is,
Of his haughtiness, pride, and arrogance
that his empty words do not match. d
- 7 * Therefore let Moab wail,
let everyone wail for Moab;
For the raisin cakes * of Kir-hareseth
let them sigh, stricken with grief.
- 8 The terraced slopes of Heshbon
languish,
the vines of Sibmah, Whose clusters once overpowered

the lords of nations,
Reaching as far as Jazer winding through the wilderness,* Whose branches spread forth, crossing over the sea.

9 Therefore I weep with Jazer
for the vines of Sibmah;
I drench you with my tears,
Heshbon and Elealeh;
For on your summer fruits and harvests
the battle cry* has fallen.<sup>e</sup>

10 From the orchards are taken away
joy and gladness,
In the vineyards there is no singing,
no shout of joy;
In the wine presses no one treads grapes,
the vintage shout is stilled.<sup>f</sup>

11 Therefore for Moab
my heart moans like a lyre,
my inmost being for Kir-hareseth.<sup>g</sup>

12 * When Moab wears himself out on the high places,
and enters his sanctuary to pray,
it shall avail him nothing.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>13</sup>* That is the word the LORD spoke against Moab in times past. <sup>14</sup>But now the LORD speaks: In three years, like the years of a hired laborer, the glory of Moab shall be empty despite all its great multitude; and the remnant shall be very small and weak.<sup>i</sup>

CHAPTER 17

Damascus

- <sup>1</sup> Oracle on Damascus:*
See, Damascus shall cease to be a city and become a pile of ruins;<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Her cities shall be forever abandoned,
for flocks to lie in undisturbed.
- <sup>3</sup> The fortress shall vanish from Ephraim*
and dominion from Damascus;
The remnant of Aram shall become like the glory of the Israelites—
oracle of the LORD of hosts.
- <sup>4</sup> On that day
The glory of Jacob shall fade,
and his full body shall grow thin.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> Like the reaper's mere armful of stalks,
when he gathers the standing grain;
Or as when one gleans the ears
in the Valley of Rephaim.*
- <sup>6</sup> * Only gleanings shall be left in it,
as when an olive tree has been beaten—
Two or three olives at the very top, four or five on its most fruitful
branches—
oracle of the LORD, the God of Israel.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> On that day people shall turn to their
maker,
their eyes shall look to the Holy One of Israel.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>8</sup> They shall not turn to the altars, the work
of their hands,
nor shall they look to what their fingers have made:
the asherahs* or the incense stands.

- 9 On that day his strong cities shall be like those abandoned by the Hivites and Amorites
When faced with the Israelites;
and there shall be desolation.<sup>n</sup>
- 10 Truly, you have forgotten the God who saves you,
the Rock, your refuge, you have not remembered.<sup>o</sup> Therefore, though you plant plants for the Pleasant One,* and set out cuttings for a foreign one,<sup>p</sup>
- 11 Though you make them grow the day
you plant them
and make them blossom the morning
you set them out,
The harvest shall disappear on a day of sickness
and incurable pain.
- 12 Ah! the roaring of many peoples—*
a roar like the roar of the seas!
The thundering of nations—
thunder like the thundering of mighty waters!<sup>q</sup>
- 13 * But God shall rebuke them,
and they shall flee far away,
Driven like chaff on the mountains
before a wind,
like tumbleweed before a storm.<sup>r</sup>
- 14 At evening, there is terror,
but before morning, they are gone!
Such is the portion of those who despoil us,
the lot of those who plunder us.<sup>s</sup>

CHAPTER 18

See RG 321–31

Ethiopia

- <sup>1</sup> Ah! Land of buzzing insects,*
beyond the rivers of Ethiopia,<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Sending ambassadors by sea,
in papyrus boats on the waters!
Go, swift messengers,
to a nation tall and bronzed,
To a people dreaded near and far,
a nation strong and conquering,
whose land is washed by rivers.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> * All you who inhabit the world,
who dwell on earth,
When the signal is raised on the mountain, look!
When the trumpet blows, listen!
- <sup>4</sup> For thus says the LORD to me:
I will be quiet, looking on from where I dwell,<sup>v</sup>
Like the shimmering heat in sunshine,
like a cloud of dew at harvest time.
- <sup>5</sup> Before the vintage, when the flowering
has ended,
and the blooms are succeeded by ripening grapes,
Then comes the cutting of branches with pruning hooks,
and the discarding of the lopped-off shoots.
- <sup>6</sup> They shall all be left to the mountain
vultures
and to the beasts of the earth;
The vultures shall summer on them,
all the beasts of the earth shall winter
on them.

<sup>7</sup>Then will gifts be brought to the LORD of hosts—to the place of the name of the LORD of hosts, Mount Zion—from a people tall and bronzed, from a people dreaded near and far, a nation strong and conquering, whose land is washed by rivers. <sup>w</sup>

CHAPTER 19

See RG 321–31

Egypt

- <sup>1</sup> Oracle on Egypt:
See, the LORD is riding on a swift cloud
on his way to Egypt;
The idols of Egypt tremble before him,
the hearts of the Egyptians melt within them.<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> I will stir up Egypt against Egypt:
brother will war against brother, Neighbor against neighbor,
city against city, kingdom against
kingdom.
- <sup>3</sup> The courage of the Egyptians shall ebb
away within them,
and I will bring their counsel to
nought;
They shall consult idols and charmers,
ghosts and clairvoyants.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> I will deliver Egypt
into the power of a cruel master,
A harsh king* who shall rule over them—
oracle of the Lord, the LORD of hosts.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> The waters shall be drained from the sea,
the river shall parch and dry up;<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> Its streams shall become foul,
and the canals of Egypt shall dwindle
and parch.<sup>b</sup> Reeds and rushes shall wither away,
- <sup>7</sup> and bulrushes on the bank of the Nile;<sup>c</sup>
All the sown land along the Nile shall dry up and blow away, and be no
more.
- <sup>8</sup> The fishermen shall mourn and lament,
all who cast hook in the Nile;

Those who spread their nets in the water shall pine away.

9 The linen-workers shall be disappointed,
the combers and weavers shall turn pale;<sup>d</sup>

10 The spinners shall be crushed, all the hired laborers shall be despondent.

11 Utter fools are the princes of Zoan!*
the wisest of Pharaoh's advisers give stupid counsel.
How can you say to Pharaoh,
"I am a descendant of wise men, of ancient kings"?

12 Where then are your wise men?
Let them tell you and make known
What the LORD of hosts has planned against Egypt.<sup>e</sup>

13 The princes of Zoan have become fools, the princes of Memphis have been deceived.
The chiefs of its tribes
have led Egypt astray.<sup>f</sup>

14 The LORD has prepared among them
a spirit of dizziness,
And they have made Egypt stagger in whatever she does,
as a drunkard staggers in his vomit.<sup>g</sup>

15 Egypt shall accomplish nothing—neither head nor tail, palm branch nor reed,* shall accomplish anything.

<sup>16</sup>On that day the Egyptians shall be like women, trembling with fear, because of the LORD of hosts shaking his fist at them.<sup>h</sup> <sup>17</sup>And the land of Judah shall be a terror to the Egyptians. Every time they think of Judah, they shall stand in dread because of the plan the Lord of hosts has in mind for them.

<sup>18</sup>On that day there shall be five cities* in the land of Egypt that speak the language of Canaan and swear by the LORD of hosts; one shall be called "City of the Sun."

<sup>19</sup>On that day there shall be an altar to the LORD at the center of Egypt, and a sacred pillar to the LORD near its boundary.<sup>20</sup> This will be a sign and witness to the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt, so that when they cry out to the LORD because of their oppressors, he will send them a savior to defend and deliver them.<sup>i 21</sup>The LORD shall make himself known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day; they shall offer sacrifices and oblations, make vows to the LORD and fulfill them.<sup>j 22</sup>Although the LORD shall smite Egypt severely, he shall heal them; they shall turn to the LORD and he shall be moved by their entreaty and heal them.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>23</sup>On that day there shall be a highway from Egypt to Assyria; the Assyrians shall enter Egypt, and the Egyptians enter Assyria, and the Egyptians shall worship with the Assyrians.

<sup>24</sup>On that day Israel shall be a third party with Egypt and Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the earth,<sup>l 25</sup>when the LORD of hosts gives this blessing: "Blessed be my people Egypt, and the work of my hands Assyria, and my heritage, Israel."

Isaiah's Warning Against Trust in Egypt and Ethiopia. <sup>1</sup>In the year the general sent by Sargon, king of Assyria, came to Ashdod, * fought against it, and captured it—<sup>2*</sup> at that time the LORD had spoken through Isaiah, the son of Amoz: Go and take off the sackcloth from your waist, and remove the sandals from your feet. This he did, walking naked and barefoot. <sup>m</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then the LORD said: Just as my servant Isaiah has gone naked and barefoot for three years as a sign and portent against Egypt and Ethiopia, <sup>n</sup> <sup>4</sup>so shall the king of Assyria lead away captives from Egypt, and exiles from Ethiopia, young and old, naked and barefoot, with buttocks uncovered, the shame of Egypt. <sup>o</sup> <sup>5</sup>They shall be dismayed and ashamed because of Ethiopia, their hope, and because of Egypt, their boast. <sup>p</sup> <sup>6</sup>The inhabitants of this coastland shall say on that day, “See what has happened to those we hoped in, to whom we fled for help and deliverance from the king of Assyria! What escape is there for us now?” <sup>q</sup>

Fall of Babylon*

- <sup>1</sup> Oracle on the wastelands by the sea:*
Like whirlwinds sweeping through the Negeb,
it comes from the desert,
from the fearful land.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Aharsh vision has been announced to me:
“The traitor betrays,
the despoiler spoils.<sup>s</sup>
Go up, O Elam; besiege, O Media;* put an end to all its groaning!”<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Therefore my loins are filled with anguish,
pangs have seized me like those of a woman in labor;
I am too bewildered to hear,
too dismayed to look.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> My mind reels,
shuddering assails me;
The twilight I yearned for he has turned into dread.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> They set the table,
spread out the rugs;
they eat, they drink.<sup>* w</sup>
Rise up, O princes,
oil the shield!
- <sup>6</sup> For thus my Lord said to me:
Go, station a watchman,
let him tell what he sees.
- <sup>7</sup> If he sees a chariot,
a pair of horses,
Someone riding a donkey,
someone riding a camel,
Then let him pay heed,

- very close heed.
- 8 Then the watchman cried,
“On the watchtower, my Lord,
I stand constantly by day;
And I stay at my post through all the watches of the night.”<sup>x</sup>
- 9 Here he comes—
a single chariot,
a pair of horses—
He calls out and says, ‘Fallen, fallen is Babylon!
All the images of her gods
are smashed to the ground!’ ”<sup>y</sup>
- 10 To you, who have been threshed,
beaten on my threshing floor,
What I have heard from the LORD of hosts,
The God of Israel,
I have announced to you.”<sup>z</sup>

Dumah

- 11 Oracle on Dumah: *
They call to me from Seir, “Watchman, how much longer the
night?
Watchman, how much longer the
night?”
- 12 The watchman replies, “Morning has come, and again night.
If you will ask, ask; come back
again.”

In the Steppe

- 13 Oracle: in the steppe: *
In the thicket in the steppe you will spend the night,
caravans of Dedanites.
- 14 Meet the thirsty, bring them water,

inhabitants of the land of Tema,
greet the fugitives with bread.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>15</sup> For they have fled from the sword,
from the drawn sword;
From the taut bow,
from the thick of battle.

<sup>16</sup>For thus the LORD has said to me: In another year, like the years of a hired laborer,* all the glory of Kedar shall come to an end. <sup>17</sup>Few of Kedar's stalwart archers shall remain, for the Lord, the God of Israel, has spoken.

CHAPTER 22

See RG 321–31

The Valley of Vision

- <sup>1</sup> Oracle on the Valley of Vision: * <sup>b</sup>
What is the matter with you now, that you have gone up,
all of you, to the housetops,
- <sup>2</sup> * You who were full of noise,
tumultuous city,
exultant town? <sup>c</sup>
Your slain are not slain with the sword, nor killed in battle.
- <sup>3</sup> All your leaders fled away together,
they were captured without use of bow;
All who were found were captured
together,
though they had fled afar off.
- <sup>4</sup> That is why I say: Turn away from me,
let me weep bitterly;
Do not try to comfort me
for the ruin of the daughter of my people. <sup>d</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> It is a day of panic, rout and confusion, from the Lord, the God of hosts, in the Valley of Vision * Walls crash;
a cry for help to the mountains.
- <sup>6</sup> Elam takes up the quiver, Aram mounts the horses and Kir * uncovers the shields.
- <sup>7</sup> Your choice valleys are filled with chariots,
horses are posted at the gates—
- <sup>8</sup> and shelter over Judah is removed. *

On that day you looked to the weapons in the House of the Forest; <sup>9*</sup> you saw that the breaches in the City of David were many; you collected the water of the lower pool. <sup>10</sup> You numbered the houses of Jerusalem, tearing some down to strengthen the wall; <sup>11</sup>you made a reservoir between the two walls for the water of the old pool. But you did not look to the city's Maker, nor consider the one who fashioned it long ago.

<sup>12</sup> On that day the Lord,
the God of hosts, called For weeping and mourning, for shaving the head and wearing sackcloth.

<sup>13</sup> But look! instead, there was celebration
and joy,
slaughtering cattle and butchering
sheep,
Eating meat and drinking wine:
“Eat and drink, for tomorrow we die!”<sup>e</sup>

<sup>14</sup> This message was revealed in my hearing from the LORD of hosts:

This iniquity will not be forgiven you until you die,
says the Lord, the God of hosts.

Shebna and Eliakim

<sup>15</sup> Thus says the Lord, the God of hosts:
Up, go to that official,
Shebna, * master of the palace, <sup>16</sup> * “What have you here? Whom have you here,
that you have hewn for yourself a tomb here,
Hewing a tomb on high,
carving a resting place in the rock?”
<sup>17</sup> The LORD shall hurl you down headlong, mortal man!
He shall grip you firmly,
<sup>18</sup> And roll you up and toss you like a ball into a broad land.
There you will die, there with the chariots you glory in,
you disgrace to your master's house!

- 19 I will thrust you from your office
and pull you down from your station.
- 20 On that day I will summon my servant
Eliakim, * son of Hilkiah; <sup>f</sup>
- 21 I will clothe him with your robe,
gird him with your sash,
confer on him your authority.
He shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem,
and to the house of Judah. <sup>g</sup>
- 22 I will place the key * of the House of David on his shoulder;
what he opens, no one will shut,
what he shuts, no one will open. <sup>h</sup>
- 23 I will fix him as a peg in a firm place,
a seat of honor for his ancestral house;
- 24 On him shall hang all the glory of his ancestral house: * descendants and offspring,
all the little dishes, from bowls to jugs.
- 25 On that day, says the LORD of hosts, the peg fixed in a firm place shall give way, break off and fall, and the weight that hung on it shall be done away with; for the LORD has spoken.

Tyre and Sidon

- 1 * Oracle on Tyre:
Wail, ships of Tarshish,
for your port is destroyed;
From the land of the Kittim *
the news reaches them.<sup>i</sup>
- 2 Silence! you who dwell on the coast,
you merchants of Sidon, Whose messengers crossed the sea
- 3 over the deep waters,
Whose revenue was the grain of Shihor, *
the harvest of the Nile,
you who were the merchant among the nations.<sup>j</sup>
- 4 Be ashamed, Sidon, fortress on the sea,
for the sea * has spoken,
“I have not been in labor, nor given birth,
nor raised young men,
nor reared young women.”
- 5 When the report reaches Egypt
they shall be in anguish at the report about Tyre.
- 6 Pass over to Tarshish, *
wail, you who dwell on the coast!
- 7 Is this your exultant city,
whose origin is from old, Whose feet have taken her
to dwell in distant lands?
- 8 Who has planned such a thing
against Tyre, the bestower of crowns, Whose merchants are princes,
whose traders are the earth’s honored
men?
- 9 The LORD of hosts has planned it,

- to disgrace the height of all beauty,
to degrade all the honored of the earth.<sup>k</sup>
- 10 Cross to your own land,
ship of Tarshish;
the harbor is no more.
- 11 His hand he stretches out over the sea,
he shakes kingdoms;
The LORD commanded the destruction of Canaan's strongholds:<sup>* l</sup>
- 12 Crushed, you shall exult no more,
virgin daughter Sidon.
Arise, pass over to the Kittim,
even there you shall find no rest.<sup>m</sup>
- 13 * Look at the land of the Chaldeans,
the people that has ceased to be.
Assyria founded it for ships,
raised its towers,
Only to tear down its palaces,
and turn it into a ruin.<sup>n</sup>
- 14 Lament, ships of Tarshish,
for your stronghold is destroyed.
- 15 On that day, Tyre shall be forgotten for seventy years,* the lifetime of one king. At the end of seventy years, the song about the prostitute will be Tyre's song:
- 16 Take a harp, go about the city,
forgotten prostitute;
Pluck the strings skillfully, sing many songs,
that you may be remembered.
- 17 At the end of the seventy years the LORD shall visit Tyre. She shall return to her hire and serve as prostitute* with all the world's kingdoms on the face of the earth.<sup>o</sup> 18 But her merchandise and her hire shall be sacred to the LORD. It shall not be stored up or laid away; instead, her merchandise shall belong to those who dwell before the LORD, to eat their fill and clothe themselves in choice attire.

*Judgment upon the World and the Lord's Enthronement on Mount Zion**

- <sup>1</sup> See! The LORD is about to empty the earth and lay it waste;
he will twist its surface,
and scatter its inhabitants.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> People and priest shall fare alike:
servant and master,
Maid and mistress,
buyer and seller,
Lender and borrower,
creditor and debtor.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> The earth shall be utterly laid waste, utterly stripped,
for the LORD has decreed this word.
- <sup>4</sup> The earth mourns and fades,
the world languishes and fades;
both heaven and earth languish.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> The earth is polluted because of its inhabitants,
for they have transgressed laws,
violated statutes,
broken the ancient covenant.<sup>* s</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> Therefore a curse devours the earth,
and its inhabitants pay for their guilt;
Therefore they who dwell on earth have dwindled,
and only a few are left.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> The new wine mourns, the vine
languishes,
all the merry-hearted groan.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>8</sup> Stilled are the cheerful timbrels,
ended the shouts of the jubilant,
stilled the cheerful harp.<sup>v</sup>

- 9 They no longer drink wine and sing;
strong brew is bitter to those who drink it.<sup>w</sup>
- 10 Broken down is the city of chaos,*
every house is shut against entry.<sup>x</sup>
- 11 In the streets they cry out for lack of wine;
all joy has grown dim,
cheer is exiled from the land.<sup>y</sup>
- 12 In the city nothing remains but
desolation,
gates battered into ruins.
- 13 For thus it shall be in the midst of the
earth,
among the peoples,
As when an olive tree has been beaten,
as with a gleaning when the vintage is done.<sup>z</sup>
- 14 These* shall lift up their voice,
they shall sing for joy in the majesty of
the LORD,
they shall shout from the western sea:
- 15 “Therefore, in the east
give glory to the LORD!
In the coastlands of the sea,
to the name of the LORD, the God of Israel!”<sup>a</sup>
- 16 From the end of the earth we hear songs:
“Splendor to the Just One!”
But I said, “I am wasted, wasted away.
Woe is me! The traitors betray;
with treachery have the traitors betrayed!”<sup>b</sup>
- 17 Terror, pit, and trap
for you, inhabitant of the earth!<sup>c</sup>
- 18 One who flees at the sound of terror
will fall into the pit;
One who climbs out of the pit
will be caught in the trap.
For the windows on high are open and the foundations of the earth

shake.<sup>d</sup>

- 19 The earth will burst asunder,
the earth will be shaken apart,
the earth will be convulsed.
- 20 The earth will reel like a drunkard,
sway like a hut;
Its rebellion will weigh it down;
it will fall, never to rise again.”<sup>e</sup>
- 21 On that day the LORD will punish the host of the heavens* in the
heavens,
and the kings of the earth on the earth.
- 22 They will be gathered together
like prisoners into a pit;
They will be shut up in a dungeon,
and after many days they will be punished.<sup>f</sup>
- 23 Then the moon will blush
and the sun be ashamed,<sup>g</sup>
For the LORD of hosts will reign
on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, glorious in the sight of the elders.<sup>* h</sup>

Praise for God's Deliverance and the Celebration in Zion*

- <sup>1</sup> O LORD, you are my God,
I extol you, I praise your name;
For you have carried out your wonderful plans of old,
faithful and true.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> For you have made the city a heap,
the fortified city a ruin,
The castle of the insolent, a city no more,
not ever to be rebuilt.<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Therefore a strong people will honor
you,
ruthless nations will fear you.
- <sup>4</sup> For you have been a refuge to the poor,
a refuge to the needy in their distress;
Shelter from the rain,
shade from the heat.<sup>k</sup>
When the blast of the ruthless was like a winter rain,
- <sup>5</sup> the roar of strangers like heat in the desert,
You subdued the heat with the shade of a cloud,
the rain of the tyrants was vanquished.
- <sup>6</sup> On this mountain* the LORD of hosts will provide for all peoples
A feast of rich food and choice wines, juicy, rich food and pure, choice wines.
- <sup>7</sup> On this mountain he will destroy the veil that veils all peoples,
The web that is woven over all nations.
- <sup>8</sup> He will destroy death forever.
The Lord God will wipe away
the tears from all faces;

The reproach of his people he will remove from the whole earth; for the LORD has spoken.<sup>l</sup>

- 9 On that day it will be said:
“Indeed, this is our God; we looked to him, and he saved us!
This is the LORD to whom we looked;
let us rejoice and be glad that he has saved us!”<sup>m</sup>

Judgment on Moab<sup>***</sup>

- 10 For the hand of the LORD will rest on this
mountain,
but Moab will be trodden down
as straw is trodden down in the mire.<sup>n</sup>
- 11 He will spread out his hands in its midst,
as a swimmer spreads out his hands to swim;
His pride will be brought low
despite his strokes.<sup>o</sup>
- 12 The high-walled fortress he will raze, bringing it low, leveling it to the ground, to the very dust.<sup>p</sup>

CHAPTER 26

See RG 321–31

Judah's Praise and Prayer for Deliverance.* <sup>1</sup>On that day this song shall be sung in the land of Judah:

- “A strong city* have we;
he sets up victory as our walls and ramparts.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Open up the gates
that a righteous nation may enter,
one that keeps faith.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> With firm purpose you maintain peace;
in peace, because of our trust in you.”<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> Trust in the LORD forever!
For the Lord is an eternal Rock.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> He humbles those who dwell on high,
the lofty city he brings down,
Brings it down to the ground,
levels it to the dust.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> The feet of the needy trample on it—
the feet of the poor.
- <sup>7</sup> The way of the just is smooth;
the path of the just you make level.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>8</sup> The course of your judgments, LORD, we await;
your name and your memory are the desire of our souls.
- <sup>9</sup> My soul yearns for you at night,
yes, my spirit within me seeks you at
dawn;
When your judgment comes upon the
earth,
the world's inhabitants learn justice.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>10</sup> The wicked, when spared, do not learn
justice;
in an upright land they act perversely,
and do not see the majesty of the Lord.<sup>x</sup>

- 11 LORD, your hand is raised high,
but they do not perceive it;
Let them be put to shame when they see your zeal for your people:
let the fire prepared for your enemies
consume them.<sup>y</sup>
- 12 LORD, you will decree peace for us,
for you have accomplished all we have done.<sup>z</sup>
- 13 LORD, our God, lords other than you have ruled us;
only because of you can we call upon
your name.
- 14 Dead they are, they cannot live,
shades that cannot rise;
Indeed, you have punished and destroyed
them,
and wiped out all memory of them.
- 15 You have increased the nation, LORD, you have increased the nation, have added to your glory,
you have extended far all the boundaries of the land.<sup>a</sup>
- 16 LORD, oppressed by your punishment,
we cried out in anguish under your discipline.<sup>b</sup>
- 17 As a woman about to give birth
writhes and cries out in pain,
so were we before you, LORD.<sup>c</sup>
- 18 We conceived and writhed in pain,
giving birth only to wind;
Salvation we have not achieved for the
earth,
no inhabitants for the world were born.<sup>d</sup>
- 19 * But your dead shall live, their corpses
shall rise!
Awake and sing, you who lie in the dust!
For your dew is a dew of light, and you cause the land of shades to give birth.<sup>e</sup>

The Lord's Response*

- 20 Go, my people, enter your chambers,
and close the doors behind you;
Hide yourselves for a brief moment,
until the wrath is past.<sup>f</sup>
- 21 See, the LORD goes forth from his place,
to punish the wickedness of the earth's
inhabitants;
The earth will reveal the blood shed
upon it,
and no longer conceal the slain.<sup>g</sup>

CHAPTER 27

See RG 321–31

The Judgment and Deliverance of Israel

- <sup>1</sup> On that day,
The LORD will punish with his sword
that is cruel, great, and strong, Leviathan the fleeing serpent,
Leviathan the coiled serpent;
he will slay the dragon * in the sea. <sup>h</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> * On that day—
The pleasant vineyard, sing about it! <sup>i</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> I, the LORD, am its keeper,
I water it every moment;
Lest anyone harm it,
night and day I guard it. <sup>j</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> I am not angry.
But if I were to find briars and thorns,
In battle I would march against it;
I would burn it all. <sup>k</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> But if it holds fast to my refuge,
it shall have peace with me; <sup>l</sup>
it shall have peace with me.
- <sup>6</sup> In days to come Jacob shall take root, Israel shall sprout and blossom, covering all the world with fruit. <sup>m</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> * Was he smitten as his smiter was smitten?
Was he slain as his slayer was slain?
- <sup>8</sup> Driving out and expelling, he struggled
against it,
carrying it off with his cruel wind on a day of storm. <sup>n</sup>
- <sup>9</sup> This, then, shall be the expiation of Jacob's guilt,
this the result of removing his sin:

He shall pulverize all the stones of the altars
like pieces of chalk;
no asherahs or incense altars shall
stand.

10 For the fortified city shall be desolate,
an abandoned pasture, a forsaken
wilderness;
There calves shall graze, there they shall lie down,
and consume its branches.

11 When its boughs wither, they shall be broken off;
and women shall come to kindle fires
with them.

For this is not an understanding people;
therefore their maker shall not spare
them;
their creator shall not be gracious to them.<sup>o</sup>

12 On that day,
The LORD shall beat out grain from the channel of the Euphrates to the Wadi of Egypt,
and you shall be gleaned* one by one,
children of Israel.

13*On that day,
A great trumpet shall blow,
and the lost in the land of Assyria
and the outcasts in the land of Egypt Shall come and worship the LORD
on the holy mountain, in Jerusalem.<sup>p</sup>

E. The Lord Alone, Israel's and Judah's Salvation

CHAPTER 28

See RG 321–31

The Fate of Samaria*

- <sup>1</sup> Ah! majestic garland
of the drunkards of Ephraim,* Fading blooms of his glorious beauty,
at the head of the fertile valley,
upon those stupefied with wine.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> See, the LORD has a strong one, a mighty
one,*
who, like an onslaught of hail, a destructive storm,
Like a flood of water, great and overflowing,
levels to the ground with violence;<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> With feet that will trample
the majestic garland of the drunkards of Ephraim.
- <sup>4</sup> The fading blooms of his glorious beauty
at the head of the fertile valley
Will be like an early fig before summer:
whoever sees it,
swallows it as soon as it is in hand.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> On that day the LORD of hosts
will be a glorious crown
And a brilliant diadem
for the remnant of his people,
- <sup>6</sup> A spirit of judgment
for the one who sits in judgment,
And strength for those who turn back the battle at the gate.

Against Judah

- <sup>7</sup> But these also stagger from wine
and stumble from strong drink:

Priest and prophet stagger from strong drink,
overpowered by wine;
They are confused by strong drink,
they stagger in their visions,
they totter when giving judgment.<sup>t</sup>

8 Yes, all the tables
are covered with vomit,
with filth, and no place left clean.

9 * “To whom would he impart
knowledge?
To whom would he convey the message?
To those just weaned from milk,
those weaned from the breast?

10 For he says, ‘Command on command, command on
command,
rule on rule, rule on rule,
here a little, there a little!’ ”

11 * Yes, with stammering lips and in a strange language
he will speak to this people,<sup>u</sup>

12 to whom he said:
“This is the resting place,
give rest to the weary;
And this is the place of repose”—
but they refused to hear.<sup>v</sup>

13 So for them the word of the LORD shall be:
“Command on command, command
on command,
Rule on rule, rule on rule,
here a little, there a little!”
So that when they walk, they shall stumble backward,
broken, ensnared, and captured.<sup>w</sup>

14 Therefore, hear the word of the LORD,
you scoffers,
who rule * this people in Jerusalem:<sup>x</sup>

15 You have declared, “We have made a covenant with death,

with Sheol* we have made a pact;
When the raging flood passes through,
it will not reach us;
For we have made lies our refuge,
and in falsehood we have found a hiding place,”—<sup>y</sup>

16 Therefore, thus says the Lord God:

See, I am laying a stone in Zion,*
a stone that has been tested,
A precious cornerstone as a sure foundation;
whoever puts faith in it will not waver.<sup>z</sup>

17 I will make judgment a measuring line, and justice a level.—*
Hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies,
and waters shall flood the hiding place.

18 Your covenant with death shall be canceled
and your pact with Sheol shall not stand.
When the raging flood passes through,
you shall be beaten down by it.<sup>a</sup>

19 Whenever it passes, it shall seize you;
morning after morning it shall pass,
by day and by night.
Sheer terror
to impart the message!

20 For the bed shall be too short to stretch out in,
and the cover too narrow to wrap in.

21 For the LORD shall rise up as on Mount Perazim,
bestir himself as in the Valley of Gibeon,*

To carry out his work—strange his work!
to perform his deed—alien his deed!

22 Now, cease scoffing,
lest your bonds be tightened,
For I have heard a decree of destruction
from the Lord, the GOD of hosts,

for the whole land.<sup>b</sup>

The Parable of the Farmer

- 23 * Give ear and hear my voice,
pay attention and hear my word:
- 24 Is the plowman forever plowing in order
to sow,
always loosening and harrowing the
field?
- 25 When he has leveled the surface,
does he not scatter caraway and sow cumin,* Put in wheat and barley,
with spelt as its border?
- 26 His God has taught him this rule,
he has instructed him.
- 27 For caraway is not threshed with a sledge,
nor does a cartwheel roll over cumin.
But caraway is beaten out with a staff,
and cumin with a rod.
- 28 Grain is crushed for bread, but not forever;
though he thresh it thoroughly,
and drive his cartwheel and horses
over it,
he does not pulverize it.
- 29 This too comes from the LORD of hosts; wonderful is his counsel and great his wisdom.<sup>c</sup>

Judgment and Deliverance of Jerusalem

- <sup>1</sup> Ah! Ariel, Ariel,* city where David encamped!
Let year follow year,
and feast follow feast,<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> But I will bring distress upon Ariel,
and there will be mourning and moaning.
You shall be to me like Ariel:<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> I will encamp like David against you;
I will circle you with outposts and set up siege works against you.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> You shall speak from beneath the earth,
and from the dust below, your words
shall come.
Your voice shall be that of a ghost from
the earth,
and your words shall whisper from the dust.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> The horde of your arrogant shall be like fine dust,
a horde of tyrants like flying chaff.<sup>h</sup>
Then suddenly, in an instant,
- <sup>6</sup> you shall be visited by the LORD of hosts,
With thunder, earthquake, and great noise, whirlwind, storm, and the flame of consuming fire.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> * Then like a dream,
a vision of the night,
Shall be the horde of all the nations
who make war against Ariel:
All the outposts, the siege works
against it,
all who distress it.

8 As when a hungry man dreams he is eating
and awakens with an empty stomach, Or when a thirsty man dreams he is drinking
and awakens faint, his throat parched,
So shall the horde of all the nations be,
who make war against Mount Zion.

Blindness and Perversity

9 * Stupefy yourselves and stay stupid;
blind yourselves and stay blind!
You who are drunk, but not from wine,
who stagger, but not from strong drink!<sup>j</sup>

10 For the LORD has poured out on you a spirit of deep sleep.
He has shut your eyes (the prophets) and covered your heads (the seers).<sup>* k</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For you the vision of all this has become like the words of a sealed scroll. When it is handed to one who can read, with the request, "Read this," the reply is, "I cannot, because it is sealed." <sup>12</sup>When the scroll is handed to one who cannot read, with the request, "Read this," the reply is, "I cannot read."

13 The Lord said:
Since this people draws near with words
only
and honors me with their lips alone,
though their hearts are far from me,
And fear of me has become mere precept of human teaching,<sup>l</sup>

14 Therefore I will again deal with this people
in surprising and wondrous fashion:
The wisdom of the wise shall perish,
the prudence of the prudent shall vanish.<sup>m</sup>

15 Ah! You who would hide a plan too deep for the LORD!
Who work in the dark, saying,
"Who sees us, who knows us?"<sup>n</sup>

- 16 Your perversity is as though the potter
were taken to be the clay:
As though what is made should say of its
maker,
“He did not make me!”
Or the vessel should say of the potter,
“He does not understand.”<sup>O</sup>

Redemption*

- 17 Surely, in a very little while,
Lebanon shall be changed into an orchard,
and the orchard be considered a forest!<sup>P</sup>
- 18 On that day the deaf shall hear
the words of a scroll;
And out of gloom and darkness,
the eyes of the blind shall see.<sup>q</sup>
- 19 The lowly shall again find joy in the LORD,
the poorest rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.<sup>r</sup>
- 20 For the tyrant shall be no more,
the scoffer shall cease to be;
All who are ready for evil shall be cut off,<sup>S</sup>
- 21 those who condemn with a mere word,
Who ensnare the defender at the gate,
and leave the just with an empty claim.<sup>t</sup>
- 22 Therefore thus says the LORD,
the God of the house of Jacob,
who redeemed Abraham:*
No longer shall Jacob be ashamed, no longer shall his face grow pale.<sup>u</sup>
- 23 For when his children see
the work of my hands in his midst,
They shall sanctify my name;
they shall sanctify the Holy One of Jacob,
be in awe of the God of Israel.<sup>v</sup>

24 Those who err in spirit shall acquire
understanding,
those who find fault shall receive
instruction.

*Oracle on the Futility of an Alliance with Egypt**

- <sup>1</sup> Ah! Rebellious children,
oracle of the LORD,
Who carry out a plan that is not mine,
who make an alliance* I did not inspire,
thus adding sin upon sin;<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> They go down to Egypt,
without asking my counsel,*
To seek strength in Pharaoh's protection and take refuge in Egypt's shadow.<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Pharaoh's protection shall become your
shame,
refuge in Egypt's shadow your disgrace.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> When his princes are at Zoan
and his messengers reach Hanes,<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> All shall be ashamed
of a people that gain them nothing, Neither help nor benefit,
but only shame and reproach.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> Oracle on the Beasts of the Negeb.
Through the distressed and troubled land*
of the lioness and roaring lion,
of the viper and flying saraph,
They carry their riches on the backs of donkeys
and their treasures on the humps of camels
To a people good for nothing,
- <sup>7</sup> to Egypt whose help is futile and vain.
Therefore I call her
"Rahab* Sit-still."
- <sup>8</sup> * Now come, write it on a tablet they can keep,

inscribe it on a scroll;
That in time to come it may be an eternal witness.<sup>b</sup>

9 For this is a rebellious people, deceitful children,
Children who refuse to listen to the instruction of the Lord;<sup>c</sup>

10 Who say to the seers, “Do not see”;
to the prophets, * “Do not prophesy
truth for us;
speak smooth things to us, see visions
that deceive!”<sup>d</sup>

11 Turn aside from the way! Get out of the path!
Let us hear no more of the Holy One of Israel!”<sup>e</sup>

12 Therefore, thus says the Holy One of Israel:
Because you reject this word,
And put your trust in oppression and
deceit,
and depend on them,<sup>f</sup>

13 This iniquity of yours shall be like a descending rift Bulging out in a high wall whose crash comes suddenly, in an instant,<sup>g</sup>

14 Crashing like a potter’s jar
smashed beyond rescue,
And among its fragments cannot be found a sherd to scoop fire from the hearth or dip water from the cistern.<sup>h</sup>

15 For thus said the Lord GOD,
the Holy One of Israel:
By waiting and by calm you shall be
saved,
in quiet and in trust shall be your
strength.

- But this you did not will.<sup>i</sup>
- 16 “No,” you said,
“Upon horses we will flee.”
Very well, you shall flee!
“Upon swift steeds we will ride.”
Very well, swift shall be your pursuers!<sup>j</sup>
- 17 A thousand shall tremble at the threat of
one—
if five threaten, you shall flee.
You will then be left like a flagstaff on a mountaintop,
like a flag on a hill.<sup>k</sup>

Zion's Future Deliverance

- 18 Truly, the LORD is waiting to be gracious
to you,
truly, he shall rise to show you mercy;
For the LORD is a God of justice:
happy are all who wait for him!<sup>l</sup>
- 19 Yes, people of Zion, dwelling in Jerusalem,
you shall no longer weep;
He will be most gracious to you when you cry out;
as soon as he hears he will answer you.<sup>m</sup>
- 20 The Lord will give you bread in
adversity
and water in affliction.
No longer will your Teacher* hide
himself,
but with your own eyes you shall see your Teacher,<sup>n</sup>
- 21 And your ears shall hear a word behind
you:
“This is the way; walk in it,”
when you would turn to the right or the left.
- 22 You shall defile your silver-plated idols
and your gold-covered images;

- You shall throw them away like filthy
rags,
you shall say, "Get out!"<sup>o</sup>
- 23 He will give rain for the seed
you sow in the ground,
And the bread that the soil produces
will be rich and abundant.
On that day your cattle will graze
in broad meadows;<sup>p</sup>
- 24 The oxen and the donkeys that till the
ground
will eat silage tossed to them
with shovel and pitchfork.
- 25 Upon every high mountain and lofty hill
there will be streams of running water.
On the day of the great slaughter,
when the towers fall,
- 26 The light of the moon will be like the light of the sun,
and the light of the sun will be seven times greater,
like the light of seven days,
On the day the LORD binds up the wounds of his people and heals the bruises left by his blows.<sup>q</sup>

Divine Judgment on Assyria*

- 27 See, the name of the LORD is coming
from afar,
burning with anger, heavy with threat,
His lips filled with fury,
tongue like a consuming fire,<sup>r</sup>
- 28 Breath like an overflowing torrent
that reaches up to the neck!
He will winnow the nations with a destructive winnowing and bridle the jaws of the peoples to send them astray.<sup>s</sup>
- 29 For you, there will be singing

as on a night when a feast is observed,
And joy of heart
as when one marches along with a flute
Going to the mountain of the LORD,
to the Rock of Israel.

30 The LORD will make his glorious voice
heard,
and reveal his arm coming down
In raging fury and flame of consuming
fire,
in tempest, and rainstorm, and hail.<sup>t</sup>

31 For at the voice of the LORD, Assyria will be shattered,
as he strikes with the rod;

32 And every sweep of the rod of his
punishment,
which the Lord will bring down on
him,
Will be accompanied by timbrels and
lyres,

while he wages war against him.<sup>u</sup>

33 For his tophet* has long been ready,
truly it is prepared for the king;
His firepit made both deep and wide,
with fire and firewood in abundance,
And the breath of the LORD, like a stream of sulfur,
setting it afire.<sup>v</sup>

CHAPTER 31

See RG 321–31

Against the Egyptian Alliance

<sup>1</sup> Ah! Those who go down to Egypt for help,
who rely on horses;
Who put their trust in chariots because of their number,
and in horsemen because of their combined power,
But look not to the Holy One of Israel

nor seek the Lord! <sup>* w</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Yet he too is wise and will bring disaster;
he will not turn from his threats.
He will rise up against the house of the
wicked
and against those who help evildoers. <sup>x</sup>

<sup>3</sup> The Egyptians are human beings, not
God,
their horses flesh, not spirit;
When the Lord stretches forth his hand,
the helper shall stumble, the one helped shall fall,
and both of them shall perish together. <sup>y</sup>

<sup>4</sup> For thus says the LORD to me:
As a lion or its young growling over the prey,
With a band of shepherds
assembled against it,
Is neither dismayed by their shouts
nor cowed by their noise,
So shall the LORD of hosts come down to wage war upon Mount Zion, upon its height. <sup>z</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Like hovering birds, so the Lord of hosts shall shield Jerusalem,
To shield and deliver,
to spare and rescue. <sup>a</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Assyria shall fall by a sword, not wielded
by human being,
no mortal sword shall devour him;
He shall flee before the sword,
and his young men shall be impressed
as laborers.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>9</sup> He shall rush past his crag* in panic, and his princes desert the standard in terror,
Says the LORD who has a fire in Zion
and a furnace in Jerusalem.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 32

See RG 321–31

The Kingdom of Justice

- <sup>1</sup> See, a king will reign justly and princes will rule rightly.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Each of them will be like a shelter from
the wind,
a refuge from the rain.
They will be like streams of water in a dry country,
like the shade of a great rock in a parched land.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> The eyes of those who see will not be closed;
the ears of those who hear will be attentive.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> The hasty of heart shall take thought to
know,
and tongues of stutterers shall speak
readily and clearly.
- <sup>5</sup> No more will the fool be called noble,
nor the deceiver be considered honorable.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> For the fool speaks folly,
his heart plans evil:
Godless actions,
perverse speech against the Lord, Letting the hungry go empty and the thirsty without drink.<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> The deceits of the deceiver are evil,
he plans devious schemes:
To ruin the poor with lies,
and the needy when they plead their case.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>8</sup> But the noble plan noble deeds,
and in noble deeds they persist.

The Women of Jerusalem

- 9 You women so complacent, rise up and hear my voice,
    daughters so confident, give heed to my words.<sup>l</sup>
- 10 In a little more than a year
    your confidence will be shaken;
    For the vintage will fail,
    no fruit harvest will come in.<sup>m</sup>
- 11 Tremble, you who are so complacent!
    Shudder, you who are so confident!
    Strip yourselves bare,
    with only a loincloth for cover.<sup>n</sup>
- 12 Beat your breasts
    for the pleasant fields,
    for the fruitful vine;<sup>o</sup>
- 13 For the soil of my people,
    overgrown with thorns and briers;
    For all the joyful houses,
    the exultant city.<sup>p</sup>
- 14 The castle* will be forsaken,
    the noisy city deserted;
    Citadel and tower will become wasteland
    forever,
    the joy of wild donkeys, the pasture of flocks;<sup>q</sup>
- 15 * Until the spirit from on high
    is poured out on us.
    And the wilderness becomes a garden
    land
    and the garden land seems as common as forest.<sup>r</sup>
- 16 Then judgment will dwell in the
    wilderness
    and justice abide in the garden land.
- 17 The work of justice will be peace;
    the effect of justice, calm and security
    forever.<sup>s</sup>

18 My people will live in peaceful country,
in secure dwellings and quiet resting places.<sup>t</sup>

19 And the forest will come down completely,
the city will be utterly laid low.<sup>* u</sup>

20 Happy are you who sow beside every
stream,
and let the ox and the donkey go freely!<sup>v</sup>

CHAPTER 33

See RG 321–31

Overthrow of Assyria*

- <sup>1</sup> Ah! You destroyer never destroyed, betrayer never betrayed!
When you have finished destroying, you will be destroyed;
when you have stopped betraying, you will be betrayed.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> LORD, be gracious to us; for you we wait.
Be our strength every morning,
our salvation in time of trouble!<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> At the roaring sound, peoples flee;
when you rise in your majesty, nations are scattered.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> Spoil is gathered up as caterpillars gather,
an onrush like the rush of locusts.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> The LORD is exalted, enthroned on high;
he fills Zion with right and justice.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> That which makes her seasons certain,
her wealth, salvation, wisdom, and
knowledge,
is the fear of the LORD, her treasure.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> See, the men of Ariel cry out in the
streets,
the messengers of Shalem* weep bitterly.
- <sup>8</sup> The highways are desolate,
travelers have quit the paths,
Covenants are broken, witnesses spurned;
yet no one gives it a thought.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>9</sup> The country languishes in mourning,
Lebanon withers with shame;
Sharon* is like the Arabah,
Bashan and Carmel are stripped bare.<sup>d</sup>

- 10 Now I will rise up, says the LORD,
now exalt myself,
now lift myself up.<sup>e</sup>
- 11 You conceive dry grass, bring forth
stubble;
my spirit shall consume you like fire.
- 12 The peoples shall be burned to lime,
thorns cut down to burn in fire.<sup>f</sup>
- 13 Hear, you who are far off, what I have
done;
you who are near, acknowledge my
might.
- 14 In Zion sinners are in dread,
trembling grips the impious:
“Who of us can live with consuming fire?
who of us can live with everlasting flames?”<sup>g</sup>
- 15 Whoever walks righteously and speaks
honestly,
who spurns what is gained by oppression,
Who waves off contact with a bribe,
who stops his ears so as not to hear of
bloodshed,
who closes his eyes so as not to look on evil—<sup>h</sup>
- 16 That one shall dwell on the heights,
with fortresses of rock for stronghold,
food and drink in steady supply.
- 17 Your eyes will see a king* in his
splendor,
they will look upon a vast land.<sup>i</sup>
- 18 Your mind will dwell on the terror:
“Where is the one who counted, where the one who weighed?
Where the one who counted the towers?”<sup>j</sup>
- 19 You shall no longer see a defiant people,
a people of speech too obscure to comprehend,

- stammering in a tongue not understood.<sup>k</sup>
- 20 Look to Zion, the city of our festivals;
your eyes shall see Jerusalem
as a quiet abode, a tent not to be struck, Whose pegs will never be pulled up,
nor any of its ropes severed.<sup>l</sup>
- 21 Indeed the LORD in majesty will be there for us
a place of rivers and wide streams
on which no galley may go, where no majestic ship* may pass.<sup>m</sup>
- 22 For the LORD is our judge,
the LORD is our lawgiver,
the LORD is our king;
he it is who will save us.
- 23 The rigging hangs slack;
it cannot hold the mast in place,
nor keep the sail spread out.
Then the blind will divide great spoils and the lame will carry off the loot.<sup>n</sup>
- 24 No one who dwells there will say, "I am sick";
the people who live there will be forgiven their guilt.<sup>o</sup>

Judgment upon Edom

- <sup>1</sup> Come near, nations, and listen;
be attentive, you peoples!
Let the earth and what fills it listen,
the world and all it produces.<sup>P</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> The LORD is angry with all the nations,
enraged against all their host;
He has placed them under the ban,
given them up to slaughter.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Their slain shall be cast out,
their corpses shall send up a stench;
the mountains shall run with their blood.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> All the host of heaven shall rot;
the heavens shall be rolled up like a scroll.
All their host shall wither away,
as the leaf wilts on the vine,
or as the fig withers on the tree.<sup>s</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> When my sword has drunk its fill in the
heavens,
it shall come down upon Edom for
judgment,
upon a people under my ban.<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> The LORD has a sword sated with blood,
greasy with fat,
With the blood of lambs and goats,
with the fat of rams' kidneys;
For the LORD has a sacrifice in Bozrah,
a great slaughter in the land of Edom.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> Wild oxen shall be struck down with fatlings,
and bullocks with bulls;
Their land shall be soaked with blood,
and their soil greasy with fat.

- 8 * For the LORD has a day of vengeance,
a year of requital for the cause of Zion.<sup>v</sup>
- 9 Edom's streams shall be changed into pitch,
its soil into sulfur,
and its land shall become burning pitch;
- 10 Night and day it shall not be quenched,
its smoke shall rise forever.
From generation to generation it shall lie waste,
never again shall anyone pass through it.<sup>w</sup>
- 11 But the desert owl and hoot owl shall possess it,
the screech owl and raven shall dwell
in it.
The LORD will stretch over it the measuring line of chaos,
the plumb line of confusion.<sup>* x</sup>
- 12 Its nobles shall be no more,
nor shall kings be proclaimed there;
all its princes are gone.<sup>y</sup>
- 13 Its castles shall be overgrown with thorns,
its fortresses with thistles and briers.
It shall become an abode for jackals,
a haunt for ostriches.<sup>z</sup>
- 14 Wildcats shall meet with desert beasts,
satyrs* shall call to one another;
There shall the lilith repose,
and find for herself a place to rest.
- 15 There the hoot owl shall nest and lay eggs,
hatch them out and gather them in her shadow;
There shall the kites assemble,
each with its mate.
- 16 Search through the book of the Lord*
and read:
not one of these shall be lacking,
For the mouth of the LORD has ordered it,
and his spirit gathers them there.

17 It is he who casts the lot for them;
his hand measures off* their portions;
They shall possess it forever, and dwell in it from generation to generation.<sup>a</sup>

Israel's Deliverance*

- <sup>1</sup> The wilderness and the parched land will exult;
the Arabah will rejoice and bloom;<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Like the crocus it shall bloom abundantly,
and rejoice with joyful song.
The glory of Lebanon will be given to it,
the splendor of Carmel and Sharon;
They will see the glory of the Lord,
the splendor of our God.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Strengthen hands that are feeble,
make firm knees that are weak,<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> Say to the fearful of heart:
Be strong, do not fear!
Here is your God,
he comes with vindication;
With divine recompense
he comes to save you.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> Then the eyes of the blind shall see,
and the ears of the deaf be opened;<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> Then the lame shall leap like a stag,
and the mute tongue sing for joy.
For waters will burst forth in the
wilderness,
and streams in the Arabah.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> The burning sands will become pools,
and the thirsty ground, springs of water;
The abode where jackals crouch will be a marsh for the reed and papyrus.
- <sup>8</sup> A highway will be there,
called the holy way;
No one unclean may pass over it,
but it will be for his people;

no traveler, not even fools, shall go astray on it.<sup>h</sup>

9 No lion shall be there,
nor any beast of prey approach,
nor be found.

But there the redeemed shall walk,<sup>i</sup>

10 And the ransomed of the Lord shall return,
and enter Zion singing,
crowned with everlasting joy;
They meet with joy and gladness,
sorrow and mourning flee away.<sup>j</sup>

See RG 321–31

Invasion of Sennacherib. <sup>1</sup>In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, Sennacherib, king of Assyria, went up against all the fortified cities of Judah and captured them. <sup>* k</sup> <sup>2</sup>From Lachish the king of Assyria sent his commander with a great army to King Hezekiah in Jerusalem. When he stopped at the conduit of the upper pool, on the highway of the fuller's field, <sup>3</sup>there came out to him the master of the palace, Eliakim, son of Hilkiah, and Shebna the scribe, and the chancellor, Joah, son of Asaph. <sup>4</sup>The commander said to them, "Tell Hezekiah: Thus says the great king, the king of Assyria: On what do you base this trust of yours? <sup>5</sup>Do you think mere words substitute for strategy and might in war? In whom, then, do you place your trust, that you rebel against me? <sup>6</sup>Do you trust in Egypt, that broken reed of a staff which pierces the hand of anyone who leans on it? That is what Pharaoh, king of Egypt, is to all who trust in him. <sup>l</sup> <sup>7</sup>Or do you say to me: It is in the Lord, our God, we trust? Is it not he whose high places and altars Hezekiah has removed, * commanding Judah and Jerusalem, 'Worship before this altar'? <sup>m</sup>

<sup>8</sup>"Now, make a wager with my lord, the king of Assyria: I will give you two thousand horses, if you are able to put riders on them. <sup>9</sup>How then can you turn back even a captain, one of the least servants of my lord, trusting, as you do, in Egypt for chariots and horses? <sup>10</sup>Did I come up to destroy this land without the Lord? The LORD himself said to me, Go up and destroy that land!" <sup>n</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Then Eliakim and Shebna and Joah said to the commander, "Please speak to your servants in Aramaic; we understand it. Do not speak to us in the language of Judah within earshot of the people who are on the wall." *

The Assyrian Empire

<sup>12</sup>But the commander replied, “Was it to your lord and to you that my lord sent me to speak these words? Was it not rather to those sitting on the wall, who, with you, will have to eat their own excrement and drink their own urine?” <sup>13</sup>Then the commander stepped forward and cried out in a loud voice in the language of Judah, “Listen to the words of the great king, the king of Assyria. <sup>14</sup>Thus says the king: Do not let Hezekiah deceive you, for he cannot rescue you. <sup>15</sup>And do not let Hezekiah induce you to trust in the LORD, saying, ‘The LORD will surely rescue us, and this city will not be handed over to the king of Assyria.’ <sup>16</sup>Do not listen to Hezekiah, for thus says the king of Assyria:

Make peace with me
and surrender to me!

Eat, each of you, from your vine,
each from your own fig tree.

Drink water, each from your own well,<sup>o</sup>

<sup>17</sup> until I arrive and take you to a land like your own,
A land of grain and wine,
a land of bread and vineyards.

<sup>22</sup>Then the master of the palace, Eliakim, son of Hilkiyah, Shebna the scribe, and the chancellor Joah, son of Asaph, came to Hezekiah with their garments torn, and reported to him the words of the commander.

CHAPTER 37

See RG 321–31

<sup>1*</sup> When King Hezekiah heard this, he tore his garments, covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD. <sup>2</sup>He sent Eliakim, the master of the palace, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to tell the prophet Isaiah, son of Amoz, <sup>3</sup> “Thus says Hezekiah:

A day of distress and rebuke,
a day of disgrace is this day!
Children are due to come forth,
but the strength to give birth is lacking. <sup>* r</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Perhaps the LORD, your God, will hear the words of the commander, whom his lord, the king of Assyria, sent to taunt the living God, and will rebuke him for the words which the LORD, your God, has heard. So lift up a prayer for the remnant that is here.”

<sup>5</sup>When the servants of King Hezekiah had come to Isaiah, <sup>6</sup>he said to them: “Tell this to your lord: Thus says the LORD: Do not be frightened by the words you have heard, by which the deputies of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me. <sup>5</sup>

<sup>7</sup> I am putting in him such a spirit that when he hears a report
he will return to his land.
I will make him fall by the sword in his land.”

<sup>8</sup>When the commander, on his return, heard that the king of Assyria had withdrawn from Lachish, he found him besieging Libnah. <sup>9</sup>The king of Assyria heard a report: “Tirhakah, * king of Ethiopia, has come out to fight against you.” Again he sent messengers to Hezekiah to say: <sup>10</sup>“Thus shall you say to Hezekiah, king of Judah: Do not let your God in whom you trust deceive you by saying, ‘Jerusalem will not be handed over to the king of Assyria.’ <sup>t</sup> <sup>11</sup>You, certainly, have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all the lands: they put them under the ban! And are you to be delivered? <sup>12</sup>Did the gods of the nations whom my fathers destroyed deliver them—Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, and the Edenites in Telassar? <sup>13</sup>Where are the king of Hamath, the king of Arpad, or a king of the cities Sepharvaim, Hena or Ivvah?”

<sup>14</sup>Hezekiah took the letter from the hand of the messengers and read it; then he went up to the house of the LORD, and spreading it out before the LORD, <sup>15</sup>Hezekiah prayed to the Lord:

<sup>16</sup> “LORD of hosts, God of Israel, enthroned on the cherubim!
You alone are God

over all the kingdoms of the earth.
It is you who made the heavens and the earth.*

17 Incline your ear, LORD, and listen!
open your eyes, LORD, and see!
Hear all the words Sennacherib has sent to taunt the living God.

18 Truly, O LORD,
the kings of Assyria have laid waste
the nations and their lands.

19 They gave their gods to the fire
—they were not gods at all,
but the work of human hands—
Wood and stone, they destroyed them.<sup>u</sup>

20 Therefore, LORD, our God,
save us from this man's power,
That all the kingdoms of the earth may
know
that you alone, LORD, are God."

21* Then Isaiah, son of Amoz, sent this message to Hezekiah: "Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, to whom you have prayed concerning Sennacherib, king of Assyria: I have listened! <sup>22</sup>This is the word the LORD has spoken concerning him:<sup>v</sup>

She despises you, laughs you to scorn,
the virgin daughter Zion;
Behind you she wags her head,
daughter Jerusalem.

23 Whom have you insulted and blasphemed,
at whom have you raised your voice
And lifted up your eyes on high?
At the Holy One of Israel!<sup>w</sup>

24 Through the mouths of your messengers
you have insulted the Lord when you said:

'With my many chariots I went up to the tops of the peaks,
to the recesses of Lebanon,
To cut down its lofty cedars,
its choice cypresses;
I reached the farthest shelter,
the forest ranges.

- 25 I myself dug wells
and drank foreign water;
Drying up all the rivers of Egypt
beneath the soles of my feet.'
- 26 Have you not heard?
A long time ago I prepared it,
from days of old I planned it,
Now I have brought it about:
You are here to reduce fortified cities to heaps of ruins,<sup>x</sup>
- 27 Their people powerless,
dismayed and distraught,
They are plants of the field,
green growth,
thatch on the rooftops,
Grain scorched by the east wind.
- 28 I know when you stand or sit,
when you come or go,
and how you rage against me.
- 29 Because you rage against me and your smugness has reached my
ears,
I will put my hook in your nose
and my bit in your mouth,
And make you leave by the way you came.<sup>y</sup>
- 30 This shall be a sign* for you:
This year you shall eat the aftergrowth,
next year, what grows of itself;
But in the third year, sow and reap,
plant vineyards and eat their fruit!
- 31 The remaining survivors of the house of Judah
shall again strike root below
and bear fruit above.<sup>z</sup>
- 32 For out of Jerusalem shall come a remnant,
and from Mount Zion, survivors.
The zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this.<sup>a</sup>
- 33 Therefore, thus says the LORD about the king of Assyria:

He shall not come as far as this city,
nor shoot there an arrow,
nor confront it with a shield,
Nor cast up a siege-work against it.

34 By the way he came he shall leave,
never coming as far as this city,
oracle of the LORD.

35 I will shield and save this city for my own sake and the sake of David my servant.”<sup>b</sup>

36 Then the angel of the LORD went forth and struck down one hundred and eightyfive thousand in the Assyrian camp. Early the next morning, there they were, all those corpses, dead! <sup>* c</sup> 37 So Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, broke camp, departed, returned home, and stayed in Nineveh.

38 When he was worshiping in the temple of his god Nisroch, his sons Adrammelech and Sharezer struck him down with the sword and fled into the land of Ararat. * His son Esarhaddon reigned in his place.

CHAPTER 38

See RG 321–31

Sickness and Recovery of Hezekiah. <sup>1*</sup> In those days, * when Hezekiah was mortally ill, the prophet Isaiah, son of Amoz, came and said to him: “Thus says the LORD: Put your house in order, for you are about to die; you shall not recover.”<sup>d</sup> <sup>2</sup>Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and prayed to the LORD:

<sup>4</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to Isaiah: <sup>5</sup>Go, tell Hezekiah: * Thus says the LORD, the God of your father David: I have heard your prayer; I have seen your tears. Now I will add fifteen years to your life. <sup>6</sup>I will rescue you and this city from the hand of the king of Assyria; I will be a shield to this city.<sup>f</sup> <sup>7</sup>

This will be the sign for you from the LORD that the LORD will carry out the word he has spoken: <sup>8</sup>See, I will make the shadow cast by the sun on the stairway to the terrace of Ahaz * go back the ten steps it has advanced. So the sun came back the ten steps it had advanced.<sup>g</sup>

Hezekiah’s Hymn of Thanksgiving. <sup>9</sup>The song of Hezekiah, king of Judah, after he had been sick and had recovered from his illness:

- <sup>10</sup> In the noontime of life * I said,
I must depart!
To the gates of Sheol I have been consigned
for the rest of my years.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>11</sup> I said, I shall see the LORD * no more
in the land of the living.
Nor look on any mortals
among those who dwell in the world.
- <sup>12</sup> My dwelling, like a shepherd’s tent,
is struck down and borne away
from me;
You have folded up my life, like a weaver
who severs me from the last thread.<sup>* i</sup>
From morning to night you make an end
of me;
- <sup>13</sup> I cry out even until the dawn.
Like a lion he breaks all my bones;
from morning to night you make an end of me.<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>14</sup> Like a swallow I chirp;

I moan like a dove.
My eyes grow weary looking heavenward:
Lord, I am overwhelmed; go security
for me!

15 * What am I to say or tell him?
He is the one who has done it!
All my sleep has fled,
because of the bitterness of my soul.

16 Those live whom the LORD protects;
yours is the life of my spirit.
You have given me health and restored
my life!

17 Peace in place of bitterness!
You have preserved my life
from the pit of destruction; Behind your back
you cast all my sins.*

18* For it is not Sheol that gives you thanks,
nor death that praises you;
Neither do those who go down into the pit
await your kindness.<sup>k</sup>

19 The living, the living give you thanks,
as I do today.
Parents declare to their children,
O God, your faithfulness.

20 The LORD is there to save us.
We shall play our music
In the house of the LORD
all the days of our life.

21* Then Isaiah said, "Bring a poultice of figs and apply it to the boil for his recovery."

22 Hezekiah asked, "What is the sign that I shall go up to the house of the Lord?"

Embassy from Merodach-baladan. <sup>1</sup>At that time Merodach-baladan,* son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and gifts to Hezekiah, when he heard that he had been sick and had recovered.<sup>l</sup>
<sup>2</sup>Hezekiah was pleased at their coming, and then showed the messengers his treasury, the silver and gold, the spices and perfumed oil, his whole armory, and everything in his storerooms; there was nothing in his house or in all his realm that Hezekiah did not show them.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Then Isaiah the prophet came to King Hezekiah and asked him, “What did these men say to you? Where did they come from?” Hezekiah replied, “They came to me from a distant land, from Babylon.” <sup>4</sup>He asked, “What did they see in your house?” Hezekiah answered, “They saw everything in my house. There is nothing in my storerooms that I did not show them.” <sup>5</sup>Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, “Hear the word of the Lord of hosts: <sup>6</sup>The time is coming when all that is in your house, everything that your ancestors have stored up until this day, shall be carried off to Babylon; * nothing shall be left, says the LORD.<sup>n</sup> <sup>7</sup>Some of your own descendants, your progeny, shall be taken and made attendants in the palace of the king of Babylon.”<sup>o</sup> <sup>8</sup>Hezekiah replied to Isaiah, “The word of the Lord which you have spoken is good.”* For he thought, “There will be peace and stability in my lifetime.”

Promise of Salvation

1 * Comfort, give comfort to my people, says your God.

2 Speak to the heart of Jerusalem, and proclaim to her that her service * has ended,
that her guilt is expiated,
That she has received from the hand of
the LORD
double for all her sins.

3 A voice proclaims: *
In the wilderness prepare the way of the
LORD!
Make straight in the wasteland a highway for our God!<sup>P</sup>

4 Every valley shall be lifted up,
every mountain and hill made low;
The rugged land shall be a plain,
the rough country, a broad valley.

5 Then the glory of the LORD shall be
revealed,
and all flesh shall see it together;
for the mouth of the LORD has spoken.

6 A voice says, “Proclaim!”
I answer, “What shall I proclaim?”
“All flesh is grass, and all their loyalty like the flower of the field.”<sup>Q</sup>

7 The grass withers, the flower wilts,
when the breath of the LORD blows
upon it.”
“Yes, the people is grass!

8 The grass withers, the flower wilts,
but the word of our God stands forever.”

9 Go up onto a high mountain, Zion, herald of good news! *

- Cry out at the top of your voice,
Jerusalem, herald of good news!
Cry out, do not fear!
Say to the cities of Judah:
Here is your God!
- 10 Here comes with power
the Lord God,
who rules by his strong arm;
Here is his reward with him,
his recompense before him.
- 11 Like a shepherd he feeds his flock;
in his arms he gathers the lambs,
Carrying them in his bosom,
leading the ewes with care.<sup>r</sup>

Power of God and the Vanity of Idols

- 12 Who has measured with his palm the
waters,
marked off the heavens with a span,
held in his fingers the dust of the earth,
weighed the mountains in scales
and the hills in a balance?*
- 13 Who has directed the spirit of the LORD,
or instructed him as his counselor?<sup>s</sup>
- 14 Whom did he consult to gain knowledge?
Who taught him the path of judgment,
or showed him the way of
understanding?
- 15 See, the nations count as a drop in the bucket,
as a wisp of cloud on the scales;
the coastlands weigh no more than a speck.*
- 16 Lebanon would not suffice for fuel,*
nor its animals be enough for burnt offerings.
- 17 Before him all the nations are as nought,
as nothing and void he counts them.
- 18 To whom can you liken God?<sup>t</sup>

- With what likeness can you confront
him?
- 19 An idol? An artisan casts it,
the smith plates it with gold,
fits it with silver chains.* <sup>u</sup>
- 20 Is mulberry wood the offering?
A skilled artisan picks out
a wood that will not rot, Seeks to set up for himself
an idol that will not totter.<sup>v</sup>
- 21 Do you not know? Have you not heard?
Was it not told you from the
beginning?
Have you not understood from the founding of the earth?
- 22 The one who is enthroned above the vault of the earth,
its inhabitants like grasshoppers,
Who stretches out the heavens like a veil and spreads them out like a tent to dwell in,<sup>w</sup>
- 23 Who brings princes to nought
and makes the rulers of the earth as
nothing.
- 24 Scarcely are they planted, scarcely sown,
scarcely their stem rooted in the earth,
When he breathes upon them and they
wither,
and the stormwind carries them away
like straw.
- 25 To whom can you liken me as an equal?
says the Holy One.
- 26 Lift up your eyes on high and see who created* these:
He leads out their army and numbers them,
calling them all by name.
By his great might and the strength of his power
not one of them is missing!<sup>x</sup>
- 27 Why, O Jacob, do you say,*

and declare, O Israel, “My way is hidden from the LORD,
and my right is disregarded by my
God”?

- 28 Do you not know?
Have you not heard?
The Lord is God from of old,
creator of the ends of the earth.
He does not faint or grow weary,
and his knowledge is beyond scrutiny.
- 29 He gives power to the faint,
abundant strength to the weak.
- 30 Though young men faint and grow weary,
and youths stagger and fall,
- 31 They that hope in the LORD will renew their strength,
they will soar on eagles' wings;
They will run and not grow weary,
walk and not grow faint.

CHAPTER 41

The Liberator of Israel

- <sup>1</sup> Keep silence before me, O coastlands;*
let the nations renew their strength.
Let them draw near and speak;
let us come together for judgment.
- <sup>2</sup> Who has stirred up from the East the champion of justice,
and summoned him to be his attendant?
To him he delivers nations
and subdues kings;
With his sword he reduces them to dust,
with his bow, to driven straw.
- <sup>3</sup> He pursues them, passing on without loss,
by a path his feet scarcely touch.
- <sup>4</sup> Who has performed these deeds?
Who has called forth the generations
from the beginning?<sup>y</sup>
I, the LORD, am the first,
and at the last* I am he.
- <sup>5</sup> The coastlands see, and fear;
the ends of the earth tremble:
they approach, they come on.
- <sup>6</sup> Each one helps his neighbor,
one says to the other, “Courage!”
- <sup>7</sup> The woodworker encourages the goldsmith,
the one who beats with the hammer,
him who strikes on the anvil, Saying of the soldering, “It is good!”
then fastening it with nails so it will not totter.
- <sup>8</sup> But you, Israel, my servant,<sup>z</sup>
Jacob, whom I have chosen, offspring of Abraham my friend—
- <sup>9</sup> You whom I have taken from the ends of

- the earth
and summoned from its far-off places,
To whom I have said, You are my
servant;
I chose you, I have not rejected you—
- 10 Do not fear: I am with you;
do not be anxious: I am your God.
I will strengthen you, I will help you,
I will uphold you with my victorious right hand.
- 11 Yes, all shall be put to shame and disgrace
who vent their anger against you;
Those shall be as nothing and perish
who offer resistance.
- 12 You shall seek but not find
those who strive against you;
They shall be as nothing at all who do battle with you.
- 13 For I am the LORD, your God,
who grasp your right hand;
It is I who say to you, Do not fear,
I will help you.
- 14 Do not fear, you worm Jacob,
you maggot Israel;
I will help you—oracle of the Lord;
the Holy One of Israel is your redeemer.*
- 15 I will make of you a threshing sledge,
sharp, new, full of teeth,
To thresh the mountains and crush them,
to make the hills like chaff.
- 16 When you winnow them, the wind shall carry them off,
the storm shall scatter them.
But you shall rejoice in the Lord;
in the Holy One of Israel you shall
glory.
- 17 The afflicted and the needy seek water in vain,
their tongues are parched with thirst.
I, the LORD, will answer them;
I, the God of Israel, will not forsake

them.

18 I will open up rivers on the bare heights,
and fountains in the broad valleys;
I will turn the wilderness into a marshland,
and the dry ground into springs of
water.

19 In the wilderness I will plant the cedar,
acacia, myrtle, and olive;
In the wasteland I will set the cypress, together with the plane tree and the pine,

20 That all may see and know,
observe and understand,
That the hand of the LORD has done this,
the Holy One of Israel has created it.

21 Present your case, says the Lord; *
bring forward your arguments, says
the King of Jacob.

22 Let them draw near and foretell to us
what it is that shall happen!

What are the things of long ago?
Tell us, that we may reflect on them
and know their outcome;

Or declare to us the things to come, *

23 tell what is to be in the future,
that we may know that you are gods!
Do something, good or evil,
that will put us in awe and in fear.

24 Why, you are nothing
and your work is nought;
to choose you is an abomination!

25 I have stirred up one from the north, and he comes;
from the east I summon him * by name;
He shall trample the rulers down like mud,
like a potter treading clay.

26 Who announced this from the beginning,
that we might know;
beforehand, that we might say, "True"?
Not one of you foretold it, not one spoke;
not one heard you say,

27 “The first news for Zion: here they come,”
or, “I will give Jerusalem a herald of good news.”

28 When I look, there is not one,
not one of them to give counsel,
to make an answer when I question
them.

29 Ah, all of them are nothing,
their works are nought,
their idols, empty wind!

The Servant of the Lord

- <sup>1</sup> Here is my servant* whom I uphold,
my chosen one with whom I am pleased.
Upon him I have put my spirit;
he shall bring forth justice to the nations.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> He will not cry out, nor shout,
nor make his voice heard in the street.
- <sup>3</sup> A bruised reed* he will not break,
and a dimly burning wick he will not quench.
He will faithfully bring forth justice.
- <sup>4</sup> He will not grow dim or be bruised until he establishes justice on the
earth;
the coastlands* will wait for his
teaching.
- <sup>5</sup> Thus says God, the LORD,
who created the heavens and stretched
them out,
who spread out the earth and its produce,
Who gives breath to its people
and spirit to those who walk on it:
- <sup>6</sup> I, the LORD, have called you for justice,
I have grasped you by the hand;
I formed you, and set you
as a covenant for the people,
a light for the nations,<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> To open the eyes of the blind,
to bring out prisoners from confinement,
and from the dungeon, those who live
in darkness.

- 8 I am the LORD, LORD is my name;
my glory I give to no other,
nor my praise to idols.
- 9 See, the earlier things have come to pass,
new ones I now declare;
Before they spring forth
I announce them to you.

The Lord's Purpose for Israel

- 10 Sing to the LORD a new song,
his praise from the ends of the earth:
Let the sea and what fills it resound,
the coastlands, and those who dwell in
them.
- 11 Let the wilderness and its cities cry out,
the villages where Kedar * dwells;
Let the inhabitants of Sela exult,
and shout from the top of the mountains.
- 12 Let them give glory to the LORD,
and utter his praise in the coastlands.
- 13 The LORD goes forth like a warrior,
like a man of war he stirs up his fury;
He shouts out his battle cry, against his enemies he shows his might:<sup>c</sup>
- 14 For a long time I have kept silent,
I have said nothing, holding myself
back;
Now I cry out like a woman in labor,
gasping and panting.
- 15 * I will lay waste mountains and hills,
all their undergrowth I will dry up;
I will turn the rivers into marshes,
and the marshes I will dry up.<sup>d</sup>
- 16 I will lead the blind on a way they do not
know;
by paths they do not know I will guide
them.

I will turn darkness into light before
them,
and make crooked ways straight.
These are my promises:

I made them, I will not forsake them.<sup>e</sup>

17 They shall be turned back in utter shame
who trust in idols;
Who say to molten images,
“You are our gods.”

18 You deaf ones, listen,*
you blind ones, look and see!

19 Who is blind but my servant,
or deaf like the messenger I send?
Who is blind like the one I restore,
blind like the servant of the Lord?

20 You see many things but do not observe;
ears open, but do not hear.

21 It was the LORD’s will for the sake of his
justice
to make his teaching great and glorious.

22 This is a people* plundered and despoiled,
all of them trapped in holes,
hidden away in prisons.
They are taken as plunder, with no one to rescue them,
as spoil, with no one to say, “Give
back!”

23 Who among you will give ear to this,
listen and pay attention from now on?

24 Who was it that gave Jacob to be despoiled,

Israel to the plunderers?*

Was it not the LORD, against whom we have sinned?

In his ways they refused to walk,
his teaching they would not heed.

25 So he poured out wrath upon them,
his anger, and the fury of battle;
It blazed all around them, yet they did not realize,
it burned them, but they did not take it to heart.

Promises of Redemption and Restoration

- <sup>1</sup> But now, thus says the LORD,
    who created you, Jacob, and formed
    you, Israel:
Do not fear, for I have redeemed you;
    I have called you by name: you are
    mine.
- <sup>2</sup> When you pass through waters, I will be
    with you;
    through rivers, you shall not be swept
    away.
When you walk through fire, you shall not be burned,
    nor will flames consume you.
- <sup>3</sup> For I, the LORD, am your God,
    the Holy One of Israel, your savior.
I give Egypt as ransom for you, Ethiopia and Seba * in exchange for
    you.
- <sup>4</sup> Because you are precious in my eyes
    and honored, and I love you,
I give people in return for you and nations in exchange for your life.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> Fear not, for I am with you;
    from the east I will bring back your
    offspring,
    from the west I will gather you.
- <sup>6</sup> I will say to the north: Give them up!
    and to the south: Do not hold them!
Bring back my sons from afar,
    and my daughters from the ends of the earth:<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> All who are called by my name
    I created for my glory;
    I formed them, made them.

- 8 Lead out the people, blind though they have eyes,
deaf though they have ears.
- 9 Let all the nations gather together, let the peoples assemble!
Who among them could have declared
this,
or announced to us the earlier things?* Let them produce witnesses to prove themselves right,
that one may hear and say, "It is true!"
- 10 You are my witnesses* —oracle of the LORD—
my servant whom I have chosen To know and believe in me
and understand that I am he.
Before me no god was formed,
and after me there shall be none.
- 11 I, I am the LORD;
there is no savior but me.
- 12 It is I who declared, who saved,
who announced, not some strange god
among you;
You are my witnesses—oracle of the LORD.
I am God,
- 13 yes, from eternity I am he;
There is none who can deliver from my
hand:
I act and who can cancel it?<sup>h</sup>
- 14 Thus says the LORD, your redeemer,*
the Holy One of Israel:
For your sake I send to Babylon;
I will bring down all her defenses,
and the Chaldeans shall cry out in lamentation.
- 15 I am the Lord, your Holy One,
the creator of Israel, your King.
- 16 Thus says the LORD,
who opens a way in the sea,
a path in the mighty waters,<sup>i</sup>

- 17 Who leads out chariots and horsemen,
a powerful army,
Till they lie prostrate together, never to rise,
snuffed out, quenched like a wick.<sup>j</sup>
- 18 Remember not * the events of the past,
the things of long ago consider not;
- 19 See, I am doing something new!
Now it springs forth, do you not
perceive it?
In the wilderness I make a way,
in the wasteland, rivers.
- 20 Wild beasts honor me,
jackals and ostriches,
For I put water in the wilderness and rivers in the wasteland
for my chosen people to drink,
- 21 The people whom I formed for myself,
that they might recount my praise.
- 22 Yet you did not call upon me, Jacob,*
for you grew weary of me, Israel.
- 23 You did not bring me sheep for your burnt offerings,
nor honor me with your sacrifices.
I did not exact from you the service of
offerings,
nor weary you for frankincense.<sup>k</sup>
- 24 You did not buy me sweet cane,* nor did you fill me with the fat of your
sacrifices;
Instead, you burdened me with your
sins,
wearied me with your crimes.
- 25 It is I, I, who wipe out,
for my own sake, your offenses;
your sins I remember no more.
- 26 Would you have me remember, have us
come to trial?
Speak up, prove your innocence!
- 27 Your first father * sinned;
your spokesmen rebelled against me

28 Till I repudiated the holy princes, put Jacob under the ban,
exposed Israel to scorn.

CHAPTER 44

See RG 331–35

- <sup>1</sup> Hear then, Jacob, my servant,
Israel, whom I have chosen.
- <sup>2</sup> Thus says the LORD who made you,
your help, who formed you from the
womb:
Do not fear, Jacob, my servant,
Jeshurun, * whom I have chosen.
- <sup>3</sup> I will pour out water upon the thirsty
ground,
streams upon the dry land;
I will pour out my spirit upon your
offspring,
my blessing upon your descendants.
- <sup>4</sup> They shall spring forth amid grass
like poplars beside flowing waters. <sup>l</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> One shall say, “I am the LORD’s,”
another shall be named after Jacob,
And this one shall write on his hand, *
“The LORD’s,”
and receive the name Israel. <sup>m</sup>

The True God and False Gods

- <sup>6</sup> * Thus says the LORD, Israel’s king,
its redeemer, the LORD of hosts:
I am the first, I am the last;
there is no God but me. * <sup>n</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> Who is like me? Let him stand up and declare,
make it evident, and confront me with it.
Who of old announced future events?
Let them foretell to us the things to
come.
- <sup>8</sup> Do not fear or be troubled.
Did I not announce it to you long ago?

I declared it, and you are my witnesses.
Is there any God but me?

There is no other Rock, * I know of none!<sup>O</sup>

9 * Those who fashion idols are all nothing;
their precious works are of no avail.

They are their witnesses: *
they see nothing, know nothing,
and so they are put to shame.<sup>P</sup>

10 Who would fashion a god or cast an idol,
that is of no use?

11 Look, all its company will be shamed;
they are artisans, mere human beings!
They all assemble and stand there,
only to cower in shame.

12 The ironsmith fashions a likeness,
he works it over the coals,
Shaping it with hammers,
working it with his strong arm.
With hunger his strength wanes,
without water, he grows faint.<sup>Q</sup>

13 The woodworker stretches a line,
and marks out a shape with a stylus.
He shapes it with scraping tools,
with a compass measures it off, Making it the copy of a man, *
human display, enthroned in a shrine.

14 He goes out to cut down cedars,
takes a holm tree or an oak.
He picks out for himself trees of the forest,
plants a fir, and the rain makes it grow.

15 It is used for fuel:
with some of the wood he warms
himself,
makes a fire and bakes bread.
Yet he makes a god and worships it,
turns it into an idol and adores it!

16 Half of it he burns in the fire,
on its embers he roasts meat;

- he eats the roast and is full.
 He warms himself and says, "Ah!
 I am warm! I see the flames!"
- 17 The rest of it he makes into a god,
 an image to worship and adore.
 He prays to it and says,
 "Help me! You are my god!"
- 18 They do not know, do not understand;
 their eyes are too clouded to see,
 their minds, to perceive.
- 19 He does not think clearly;
 he lacks the wit and knowledge to say,
 "Half the wood I burned in the fire,
 on its embers I baked bread,
 I roasted meat and ate.
 Shall I turn the rest into an abomination?
 Shall I worship a block of wood?"
- 20 He is chasing ashes! *
 A deluded mind has led him astray;
 He cannot save himself,
 does not say, "This thing in my right hand—is it not a fraud?"
- 21 Remember these things, Jacob,
 Israel, for you are my servant!
 I formed you, a servant to me;
 Israel, you shall never be forgotten by
 me:
- 22 I have brushed away your offenses like a
 cloud,
 your sins like a mist;
 return to me, for I have redeemed you.
- 23 Raise a glad cry, you heavens—the Lord has acted!
 Shout, you depths of the earth.
 Break forth, mountains, into song,
 forest, with all your trees.
 For the Lord has redeemed Jacob, shows his glory through Israel.

Cyrus, Anointed of the Lord, Agent of Israel's Liberation

- 24 Thus says the LORD, your redeemer,
who formed you from the womb:
I am the LORD, who made all things,
who alone stretched out the heavens,
I spread out the earth by myself.<sup>r</sup>
- 25 I bring to nought the omens of babblers,
make fools of diviners,
Turn back the wise
and make their knowledge foolish.
- 26 I confirm the words of my servant,
carry out the plan my messengers announce.
I say to Jerusalem, Be inhabited!
To the cities of Judah, Be rebuilt!
I will raise up their ruins.
- 27 I say to the deep, Be dry!
I will dry up your rivers.<sup>s</sup>
- 28 I say of Cyrus, * My shepherd!
He carries out my every wish,
Saying of Jerusalem, "Let it be rebuilt,"
and of the temple, "Lay its foundations."<sup>t</sup>

CHAPTER 45

See RG 331–35

- <sup>1</sup> Thus says the Lord to his anointed,* Cyrus,
whose right hand I grasp,
Subduing nations before him,
stripping kings of their strength,
Opening doors before him,
leaving the gates unbarred:
- <sup>2</sup> I will go before you
and level the mountains;
Bronze doors* I will shatter,
iron bars I will snap.<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> I will give you treasures of darkness,
riches hidden away,
That you may know I am the Lord,
the God of Israel, who calls you by
name.
- <sup>4</sup> For the sake of Jacob, my servant,
of Israel my chosen one,
I have called you by name, giving you a title, though you do not know me.<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> I am the LORD, there is no other,
there is no God besides me.
It is I who arm you, though you do not know me,
- <sup>6</sup> so that all may know, from the rising
of the sun
to its setting, that there is none besides me.*
I am the LORD, there is no other.
- <sup>7</sup> I form the light, and create the darkness,
I make weal and create woe;*
I, the LORD, do all these things.
- <sup>8</sup> Let justice descend, you heavens, like dew from above,
like gentle rain let the clouds drop it

down.

Let the earth open and salvation bud forth;

let righteousness spring up with them!*

I, the LORD, have created this.<sup>w</sup>

9 Woe to anyone who contends with their Maker;<sup>x</sup>

a potsherd among potsherds of the

earth!*

Shall the clay say to the potter, "What are you doing?"

or, "What you are making has no handles"?

10 Woe to anyone who asks a father, "What are you begetting?"

or a woman, "What are you giving birth to?"

11 Thus says the LORD,

the Holy One of Israel, his maker:

Do you question me about my children,
tell me how to treat the work of my
hands?

12 It was I who made the earth and created the people upon it;

It was my hands that stretched out the
heavens;

I gave the order to all their host.

13 It was I who stirred him* up for justice;
all his ways I make level.

He shall rebuild my city
and let my exiles go free

Without price or payment, says the LORD of hosts.

14 Thus says the LORD:

The earnings of Egypt, the gain of Ethiopia,

and the Sabeans,* tall of stature, Shall come over to you and belong to
you;

they shall follow you, coming in
chains.

Before you they shall bow down,
saying in prayer:

- “With you alone is God; and there is none other,
no other god!<sup>y</sup>
- 15 Truly with you God is hidden,*
the God of Israel, the savior!<sup>z</sup>
- 16 They are put to shame and disgrace, all of them;
they go in disgrace who carve images.
- 17 Israel has been saved by the Lord,
saved forever!
You shall never be put to shame or
disgrace
in any future age.”
- 18 For thus says the LORD,
The creator of the heavens,
who is God,
The designer and maker of the earth
who established it,
Not as an empty waste* did he create it,
but designing it to be lived in:
I am the LORD, and there is no other.
- 19 I have not spoken in secret from some place in the land of
darkness,
I have not said to the descendants of
Jacob,
“Look for me in an empty waste.”
I, the LORD, promise justice,
I declare what is right.
- 20 Come and assemble, gather together,
you fugitives from among the nations!
They are without knowledge who bear wooden idols*
and pray to gods that cannot save.
- 21 Come close and declare;
let them take counsel together:
Who announced this from the beginning,
declared it from of old?
Was it not I, the LORD,
besides whom there is no other God?

There is no just and saving God but me.

- 22 Turn to me and be safe,
all you ends of the earth,
for I am God; there is no other!
- 23 By myself I swear,
uttering my just decree,
a word that will not return:
To me every knee shall bend;
by me every tongue shall swear,<sup>a</sup>
- 24 Saying, “Only in the LORD
are just deeds and power.
Before him in shame shall come
all who vent their anger against him.
- 25 In the LORD all the descendants of Israel shall have vindication and glory.”

CHAPTER 46

See RG 331–35

The Gods of Babylon

- 1 Bel bows down, Nebo* stoops,
their idols set upon beasts and cattle;
They must be borne upon shoulders,
a load for weary animals.
- 2 They stoop and bow down together;
unable to deliver those who bear them,
they too go into captivity.
- 3 Hear me, O house of Jacob,
all the remnant of the house of Israel,
My burden from the womb,
whom I have carried since birth.<sup>b</sup>
- 4 Even to your old age I am he, even when your hair is gray I will carry you;
I have done this, and I will lift you up,
I will carry you to safety.
- 5 To whom would you liken me as an equal,
compare me, as though we were alike?
- 6 There are those who pour out gold from a purse
and weigh out silver on the scales;
They hire a goldsmith to make it into a
god
before which they bow down in worship.
- 7 They lift it to their shoulders to carry;
when they set it down, it stays,
and does not move from the place.
They cry out to it, but it cannot answer;
it delivers no one from distress.
- 8 Remember this and be firm,
take it to heart, you rebels;
- 9 remember the former things, those long ago:

I am God, there is no other;

I am God, there is none like me.

10 At the beginning I declare the outcome;
from of old, things not yet done.

I say that my plan shall stand,
I accomplish my every desire.

11 I summon from the east a bird of prey,* from a distant land, one to carry out my plan.

Yes, I have spoken, I will accomplish it;
I have planned it, and I will do it.

12 Listen to me, you fainthearted,
far from the victory of justice:

13 I am bringing on that victory, it is not far
off,
my salvation shall not tarry;
I will put salvation within Zion,
give to Israel my glory.

CHAPTER 47

See RG 331–35

The Fall of Babylon*

- <sup>1</sup> Come down, sit in the dust,
virgin daughter Babylon;
Sit on the ground, dethroned,
daughter of the Chaldeans.
No longer shall you be called dainty and delicate.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Take the millstone and grind flour,
remove your veil;
Strip off your skirt, bare your legs,
cross through the streams.
- <sup>3</sup> Your nakedness shall be uncovered,
and your shame be seen;
I will take vengeance,
I will yield to no entreaty,
says <sup>4</sup>our redeemer,
Whose name is the LORD of hosts,
the Holy One of Israel.
- <sup>5</sup> Go into darkness and sit in silence,
daughter of the Chaldeans,
No longer shall you be called sovereign mistress of kingdoms.
- <sup>6</sup> Angry at my people,
I profaned my heritage
And gave them into your power;
but you showed them no mercy;
Upon the aged
you laid a very heavy yoke.
- <sup>7</sup> You said, “I shall remain always,
a sovereign mistress forever!”
You did not take these things to heart,
but disregarded their outcome.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>8</sup> Now hear this, voluptuous one,
enthroned securely,
Saying in your heart,

“I, and no one else!”*
I shall never be a widow,
bereft of my children”—<sup>e</sup>

- 9 Both these things shall come to you
suddenly, in a single day:
Complete bereavement and widowhood shall come upon you Despite your many sorceries
and the full power of your spells;*
- 10 Secure in your wickedness,
you said, “No one sees me.”
Your wisdom and your knowledge
led you astray,
And you said in your heart,
“I, and no one else!”
- 11 But upon you shall come an evil
you will not be able to charm away;
Upon you shall fall a disaster
you cannot ward off.
Upon you shall suddenly come a ruin you cannot imagine.
- 12 Keep on with your spells
and your many sorceries,
at which you toiled from your youth.
Perhaps you can prevail,
perhaps you can strike terror!
- 13 You wore yourself out with so many consultations!
Let the astrologers stand forth to save
you,
The stargazers who forecast at each new moon
what would happen to you.
- 14 See, they are like stubble,
fire consumes them;
They cannot deliver themselves
from the spreading flames.
This is no warming ember,
no fire to sit before!
- 15 Thus do your wizards serve you with whom you have toiled from your
youth;

They wander their separate ways,
with none to save you.

CHAPTER 48

See RG 331–35

Exhortations to the Exiles

- <sup>1</sup> Hear this, house of Jacob called by the name Israel,
sprung from the stock of Judah,
You who swear by the name of the LORD and invoke the God of Israel
without sincerity, without justice,
- <sup>2</sup> Though you are named after the holy city
and rely on the God of Israel,
whose name is the Lord of hosts.
- <sup>3</sup> Things of the past I declared long ago,
they went forth from my mouth, I announced them;
then suddenly I took action and they came to be.
- <sup>4</sup> Because I know that you are stubborn and that your neck is an iron sinew
and your forehead bronze,
- <sup>5</sup> I declared them to you of old;
before they took place I informed you,
That you might not say, “My idol did
them,
my statue, my molten image
commanded them.”
- <sup>6</sup> Now that you have heard, look at all this;
must you not admit it?<sup>f</sup>
From now on I announce new things to
you,
hidden events you never knew.
- <sup>7</sup> Now, not from of old, they are created,
before today you did not hear of them,
so that you cannot claim, “I have known them.”
- <sup>8</sup> You never heard, you never knew,
they never reached your ears beforehand.

Yes, I know you are utterly treacherous,
a rebel you were named from the womb.<sup>g</sup>

9 For the sake of my name I restrain my
anger,
for the sake of my renown I hold it back from you,
lest I destroy you.

10 See, I refined you, but not like silver;
I tested you in the furnace of affliction.<sup>h</sup>

11 For my sake, for my own sake, I do this;
why should my name be profaned?
My glory I will not give to another.

12 Listen to me, Jacob,
Israel, whom I called!
I, it is I who am the first,
and am I the last.<sup>i</sup>

13 Yes, my hand laid the foundations of the
earth;
my right hand spread out the
heavens.
When I summon them,
they stand forth at once.<sup>j</sup>

14 All of you assemble and listen:
Who among you declared these
things?

The one the LORD loves* shall do his will against Babylon and the offspring of Chaldea.

15 I myself have spoken, I have summoned
him,
I have brought him, and his way
succeeds!

16 Come near to me and hear this!
From the beginning I did not speak in secret;
At the time it happens, I am there:
“Now the LORD GOD has sent me, and his spirit.”*

- 17 Thus says the LORD, your redeemer,
the Holy One of Israel:
I am the LORD, your God,
teaching you how to prevail,
leading you on the way you should go.
- 18 If only you would attend to my
commandments,
your peace would be like a river,
your vindication like the waves of the
sea,
- 19 Your descendants like the sand,
the offspring of your loins like its grains,
Their name never cut off
or blotted out from my presence.
- 20 Go forth from Babylon, flee from Chaldea!
With shouts of joy declare this,
announce it;
Make it known to the ends of the earth, Say: "The LORD has redeemed his servant Jacob.
- 21 They did not thirst
when he led them through dry lands;
Water from the rock he set flowing for
them;
he cleft the rock, and waters welled forth."<sup>k</sup>
- 22 There is no peace* for the wicked,
says the LORD.

The Servant of the Lord*

- <sup>1</sup> Hear me, coastlands, listen, distant peoples.<sup>l</sup>
Before birth the LORD called me, from my mother's womb he gave me
my name.*
- <sup>2</sup> He made my mouth like a sharp-edged
sword,
concealed me, shielded by his hand.
He made me a sharpened arrow,
in his quiver he hid me.
- <sup>3</sup> He said to me, You are my servant,
in you, Israel,* I show my glory.
- <sup>4</sup> Though I thought I had toiled in vain,
for nothing and for naught spent my
strength,
Yet my right is with the LORD,
my recompense is with my God.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> For now the LORD has spoken who formed me as his servant from the
womb,
That Jacob may be brought back to him
and Israel gathered to him;
I am honored in the sight of the LORD,
and my God is now my strength!
- <sup>6</sup> It is too little, he says, for you to be my
servant,
to raise up the tribes of Jacob,
and restore the survivors of Israel;<sup>n</sup>
I will make you a light to the nations, that my salvation may reach to the ends of the earth.*
- <sup>7</sup> Thus says the LORD,
the redeemer, the Holy One of Israel,

To the one despised, abhorred by the
nations,
the slave of rulers:
When kings see you, they shall stand up,
and princes shall bow down
Because of the LORD who is faithful,
the Holy One of Israel who has chosen you.<sup>o</sup>

The Liberation and Restoration of Zion

- 8 Thus says the LORD:
In a time of favor I answer you,*
on the day of salvation I help you;
I form you and set you
as a covenant for the people,
To restore the land
and allot the devastated heritages,<sup>p</sup>
- 9 To say to the prisoners: Come out!
To those in darkness: Show
yourselves!
Along the roadways they shall find pasture,
on every barren height shall their pastures be.<sup>q</sup>
- 10 They shall not hunger or thirst;
nor shall scorching wind or sun strike
them;
For he who pities them leads them and guides them beside springs of water.<sup>r</sup>
- 11 I will turn all my mountains into roadway,
and make my highways level.<sup>s</sup>
- 12 See, these shall come from afar:
some from the north and the west,
others from the land of Syene.*
- 13 Sing out, heavens, and rejoice, earth,
break forth into song, you mountains,

For the LORD comforts his people and shows mercy to his afflicted.

14 But Zion said, "The LORD has forsaken
me;

my Lord has forgotten me."<sup>t</sup>

15 Can a mother forget her infant, be without tenderness for the child of her womb?

Even should she forget,

I will never forget you.<sup>u</sup>

16 See, upon the palms of my hands I have engraved you;*
your walls are ever before me.

17 Your children hasten—
your levelers, your destroyers
go forth from you;

18 Look about and see,
they are all gathering and coming to
you.

As I live—oracle of the LORD—
you shall don them as jewels,
bedeck yourself like a bride.

19 Though you were waste and desolate, a land of ruins,
Now you shall be too narrow for your
inhabitants,
while those who swallowed you up
will be far away.

20 The children of whom you were bereft shall yet say in your hearing,
"This place is too narrow for me,
make room for me to live in."

21 You shall ask yourself:
"Who has borne me these,
when I was bereft and barren?
Exiled and repudiated,
who has reared them?
I was left all alone;
where then do these come from?"<sup>v</sup>

22 Thus says the Lord GOD:

See, I will lift up my hand to the nations,
and to the peoples raise my signal;
They shall bring your sons in their arms,
your daughters shall be carried on their shoulders.<sup>w</sup>

23 Kings shall be your guardians,
their princesses your nursemaids;
Face to the ground, they shall bow down
before you
and lick the dust at your feet.
Then you shall know that I am the LORD, none who hope in me shall be ashamed.

24 Can plunder be taken from a warrior, or captives rescued from a tyrant?

25 Thus says the LORD:
Yes, captives can be taken from a warrior,
and plunder rescued from a tyrant;
Those who oppose you I will oppose,
and your sons I will save.

26 I will make your oppressors eat their own
flesh,
and they shall be drunk with their own
blood
as though with new wine.

All flesh shall know that I, the Lord, am your savior,
your redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.<sup>x</sup>

CHAPTER 50

See RG 331–35

Salvation Through the Lord's Servant

<sup>1</sup> Thus says the LORD:
Where is the bill of divorce with which I dismissed your mother?*
Or to which of my creditors have I sold you?
It was for your sins you were sold,
for your rebellions your mother was dismissed.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Why was no one there when I came?
Why did no one answer when I called?*
Is my hand too short to ransom?
Have I not the strength to deliver?
See, with my rebuke I dry up the sea,
I turn rivers into wilderness;
Their fish rot for lack of water,
and die of thirst.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>3</sup> I clothe the heavens in black,
and make sackcloth their covering.

<sup>4</sup> * The Lord GOD has given me
a well-trained tongue,
That I might know how to answer the
weary
a word that will waken them.
Morning after morning
he wakens my ear to hear as disciples
do;

<sup>5</sup> The Lord GOD opened my ear;
I did not refuse,
did not turn away.*

<sup>6</sup> I gave my back to those who beat me, my cheeks to those who tore out my beard;*

My face I did not hide
from insults and spitting.<sup>a</sup>

7 The Lord GOD is my help,
therefore I am not disgraced;
Therefore I have set my face like flint, knowing that I shall not be put to shame.<sup>b</sup>

8 He who declares my innocence is near.
Who will oppose me?
Let us appear together.
Who will dispute my right?
Let them confront me.

9 See, the Lord GOD is my help;
who will declare me guilty?
See, they will all wear out like a garment,
consumed by moths.<sup>c</sup>

10 Who among you fears the LORD,*
heeds his servant's voice?
Whoever walk in darkness,
without any light,
Yet trust in the name of the LORD
and rely upon their God!<sup>d</sup>

11 All you who kindle flames
and set flares alight,
Walk by the light of your own fire
and by the flares you have burnt!
This is your fate from my hand:
you shall lie down in a place of torment.

CHAPTER 51

See RG 331–35

Exhortation to Trust in the Lord

- <sup>1</sup> Listen to me, you who pursue justice,
who seek the LORD;
Look to the rock from which you were
hewn,
to the quarry * from which you were taken;<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Look to Abraham, your father,
and to Sarah, who gave you birth;
Though he was but one when I called him,
I blessed him and made him many.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Yes, the LORD shall comfort Zion,
shall comfort all her ruins;
Her wilderness he shall make like Eden,
her wasteland like the garden of the
LORD;
Joy and gladness shall be found in her,
thanksgiving and the sound of song.
- <sup>4</sup> Be attentive to me, my people; *
my nation, give ear to me.
For teaching shall go forth from me,
and my judgment, as light to the peoples.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> I will make my victory come swiftly;
my salvation shall go forth
and my arm shall judge the nations;
In me the coastlands shall hope,
and my arm they shall await.
- <sup>6</sup> Raise your eyes to the heavens,
look at the earth below;
Though the heavens vanish like smoke,
the earth wear out like a garment
and its inhabitants die like flies,
My salvation shall remain forever

- and my victory shall always be firm.*
- 7 Hear me, you who know justice, you people who have my teaching at
heart:
Do not fear the reproach of others;
remain firm at their revilings.
- 8 They shall be like a garment eaten by moths,
like wool consumed by grubs;
But my victory shall remain forever,
my salvation, for all generations.<sup>h</sup>
- 9 Awake, awake, put on strength,
arm of the LORD!
Awake as in the days of old,
in ages long ago!
Was it not you who crushed Rahab,*
you who pierced the dragon?<sup>i</sup>
- 10 Was it not you who dried up the sea,
the waters of the great deep,*
You who made the depths of the sea into
a way
for the redeemed to pass through?
- 11 Those whom the LORD has ransomed will return
and enter Zion singing,
crowned with everlasting joy;
They will meet with joy and gladness,
sorrow and mourning will flee.
- 12 I, it is I who comfort you.
Can you then fear mortals who die,
human beings who are just grass,
- 13 And forget the LORD, your maker,
who stretched out the heavens
and laid the foundations of earth?
All the day you are in constant dread
of the fury of the oppressor
When he prepares himself to destroy;
but where is the oppressor's fury?
- 14 The captives shall soon be released;

- they shall not die and go down into the
pit,
nor shall they want for bread.
- 15 For I am the LORD, your God,
who stirs up the sea so that its waves
roar;
the LORD of hosts by name.<sup>j</sup>
- 16 I have put my words into your mouth,
I covered you, shielded by my hand,
Stretching out the heavens,
laying the foundations of the earth,
saying to Zion: You are my people.

The Cup of the Lord

- 17 Wake up, wake up!
Arise, Jerusalem,
You who drank at the LORD's hand
the cup of his wrath;
Who drained to the dregs
the bowl of staggering!<sup>k</sup>
- 18 She has no one to guide her
of all the children she bore;
She has no one to take her by the hand,
of all the children she reared!—
- 19 Your misfortunes are double;
who is there to grieve with you?
Desolation and destruction, famine and
sword!
Who is there to comfort you?
- 20 Your children lie helpless
at every street corner
like antelopes in a net.
They are filled with the wrath of the Lord,
the rebuke of your God.
- 21 But now, hear this, afflicted one,
drunk, but not with wine,<sup>l</sup>
- 22 Thus says the LORD, your Master,
your God, who defends his people:
See, I am taking from your hand

the cup of staggering;
The bowl of my wrath
you shall no longer drink.

23 I will put it into the hands of your tormentors,
those who said to you, “Bow down, that we may walk over
you.”
So you offered your back like the ground,
like the street for them to walk on.

CHAPTER 52

See RG 331–35

Let Zion Rejoice

- <sup>1</sup> Awake, awake!
Put on your strength, Zion;
Put on your glorious garments,
Jerusalem, holy city.
Never again shall the uncircumcised
or the unclean enter you.
- <sup>2</sup> Arise, shake off the dust,
sit enthroned, Jerusalem;
Loose the bonds from your neck,
captive daughter Zion!
- <sup>3</sup> For thus says the LORD:
For nothing you were sold,
without money you shall be redeemed.
- <sup>4</sup> For thus says the Lord GOD:
To Egypt long ago my people went down,
to sojourn there;
Assyria, too, oppressed them for
nought.
- <sup>5</sup> But now, what am I to do here?
—oracle of the LORD.
My people have been taken away for
nothing;
their rulers mock, oracle of the Lord;
constantly, every day, my name is reviled.
- <sup>6</sup> Therefore my people shall know my
name
on that day, that it is I who speaks:
Here I am!
- <sup>7</sup> How beautiful upon the mountains *
are the feet of the one bringing good news,
Announcing peace, bearing good news,
announcing salvation, saying to Zion,

- “Your God is King!”<sup>m</sup>
- 8 Listen! Your sentinels raise a cry,
together they shout for joy,
For they see directly, before their eyes,
the LORD’s return to Zion.<sup>n</sup>
- 9 Break out together in song,
O ruins of Jerusalem!
For the LORD has comforted his people,
has redeemed Jerusalem.
- 10 The Lord has bared his holy arm
in the sight of all the nations;
All the ends of the earth can see the salvation of our God.
- 11 Depart, depart, go out from there,
touch nothing unclean!
Out from there! * Purify yourselves,
you who carry the vessels of the LORD.
- 12 But not in hurried flight will you go out,
nor leave in headlong haste,
For the LORD goes before you,
and your rear guard is the God of Israel.<sup>o</sup>

*Suffering and Triumph of the Servant of the Lord**

- 13 See, my servant shall prosper,
he shall be raised high and greatly
exalted.
- 14 Even as many were amazed at him—
so marred were his features, beyond that of mortals
his appearance, beyond that of human beings—<sup>p</sup>
- 15 So shall he startle many nations,
kings shall stand speechless;
For those who have not been told shall see,
those who have not heard shall ponder it.<sup>q</sup>

CHAPTER 53

See RG 331–35

- 1 Who would believe what we have heard?*
To whom has the arm of the LORD
been revealed?<sup>r</sup>
- 2 He grew up like a sapling before him,<sup>s</sup>
like a shoot from the parched earth;
He had no majestic bearing to catch our
eye,
no beauty to draw us to him.
- 3 He was spurned and avoided by men,
a man of suffering, knowing pain,
Like one from whom you turn your face, spurned, and we held him in no esteem.<sup>t</sup>
- 4 Yet it was our pain that he bore,
our sufferings he endured.
We thought of him as stricken, struck down by God* and afflicted,<sup>u</sup>
- 5 But he was pierced for our sins,
crushed for our iniquity.
He bore the punishment that makes us
whole,
by his wounds we were healed.<sup>v</sup>
- 6 We had all gone astray like sheep,
all following our own way;
But the LORD laid upon him*
the guilt of us all.<sup>w</sup>
- 7 Though harshly treated, he submitted
and did not open his mouth;
Like a lamb led to slaughter
or a sheep silent before shearers,
he did not open his mouth.<sup>x</sup>
- 8 Seized and condemned, he was taken
away.
Who would have thought any more of

- his destiny?
For he was cut off from the land of the living,
struck for the sins of his people.
- 9 He was given a grave among the wicked,
a burial place with evildoers,
Though he had done no wrong,
nor was deceit found in his mouth.<sup>y</sup>
- 10 But it was the LORD's will to crush him
with pain.
By making his life as a reparation offering,*
he shall see his offspring, shall lengthen his days,
and the LORD's will shall be accomplished through him.
- 11 Because of his anguish he shall see the
light;
because of his knowledge he shall be content;
My servant, the just one, shall justify the
many,
their iniquity he shall bear.
- 12 Therefore I will give him his portion among the many,
and he shall divide the spoils with the
mighty,
Because he surrendered himself to death,
was counted among the transgressors, Bore the sins of many,
and interceded for the transgressors.<sup>z</sup>

CHAPTER 54

See RG 331–35

The New Zion

- <sup>1</sup> Raise a glad cry, you barren one * who never bore a child,
break forth in jubilant song, you who have never been in labor,
For more numerous are the children of the deserted wife
than the children of her who has a
husband,
says the LORD. <sup>a</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Enlarge the space for your tent,
spread out your tent cloths unsparingly;
lengthen your ropes and make firm
your pegs. <sup>b</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> For you shall spread abroad to the right and left;
your descendants shall dispossess the
nations
and shall people the deserted cities. *
- <sup>4</sup> * Do not fear, you shall not be put to
shame;
do not be discouraged, you shall not be disgraced.
For the shame of your youth you shall forget,
the reproach of your widowhood no longer remember.
- <sup>5</sup> For your husband is your Maker;
the LORD of hosts is his name,
Your redeemer, * the Holy One of Israel, called God of all the earth.
- <sup>6</sup> The LORD calls you back, like a wife forsaken and grieved in
spirit,
A wife married in youth and then cast off,

- says your God.<sup>c</sup>
- 7 For a brief moment I abandoned you,
but with great tenderness I will take you back.
- 8 In an outburst of wrath, for a moment
I hid my face from you;
But with enduring love I take pity on you,
says the LORD, your redeemer.
- 9 This is for me like the days of Noah:
As I swore then that the waters of Noah should never again flood the earth,
So I have sworn now not to be angry
with you,
or to rebuke you.<sup>d</sup>
- 10 Though the mountains fall away
and the hills be shaken,
My love shall never fall away from you nor my covenant of peace* be shaken, says the LORD, who has mercy on you.<sup>e</sup>
- 11 O afflicted one,* storm-battered and unconsoled,
I lay your pavements in carnelians,
your foundations in sapphires;<sup>f</sup>
- 12 I will make your battlements of rubies,
your gates of jewels,
and all your walls of precious stones.
- 13 All your children shall be taught by the LORD;
great shall be the peace of your
children.
- 14 In justice shall you be established,
far from oppression, you shall not fear,
from destruction, it cannot come near.
- 15 If there be an attack, it is not my doing;
whoever attacks shall fall before you.
- 16 See, I have created the smith who blows on the burning coals
and forges weapons as his work;
It is I also who have created the destroyer to work havoc.

17 Every weapon fashioned against you shall fail;
every tongue that brings you to trial
you shall prove false.

This is the lot of the servants of the
LORD,
their vindication from me—oracle of
the LORD.

CHAPTER 55

See RG 331–35

An Invitation to Grace

- <sup>1</sup> All you who are thirsty,*
    come to the water!
    You who have no money,
    come, buy grain and eat;
    Come, buy grain without money,
    wine and milk without cost!<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Why spend your money for what is not
    bread;
    your wages for what does not satisfy?
    Only listen to me, and you shall eat well,
    you shall delight in rich fare.
- <sup>3</sup> Pay attention and come to me;
    listen, that you may have life.
    I will make with you an everlasting
    covenant,
    the steadfast loyalty promised to David.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> As I made him a witness to peoples,
    a leader and commander of peoples,
- <sup>5</sup> So shall you summon a nation you knew not,
    and a nation* that knew you not shall
    run to you,
    Because of the LORD, your God,
    the Holy One of Israel, who has glorified you.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> * Seek the LORD while he may be found,
    call upon him while he is near.
- <sup>7</sup> Let the wicked forsake their way,
    and sinners their thoughts;
    Let them turn to the LORD to find mercy;
    to our God, who is generous in forgiving.
- <sup>8</sup> For my thoughts are not your thoughts,

- nor are your ways my ways—oracle of
the LORD.
- 9 For as the heavens are higher than the
earth,
so are my ways higher than your ways,
my thoughts higher than your thoughts.
- 10 * Yet just as from the heavens
the rain and snow come down And do not return there till they have watered the earth,
making it fertile and fruitful, Giving seed to the one who sows
and bread to the one who eats,
- 11 So shall my word be that goes forth from my mouth;
It shall not return to me empty,
but shall do what pleases me,
achieving the end for which I sent it.
- 12 Yes, in joy you shall go forth,
in peace you shall be brought home;
Mountains and hills shall break out in song before you,
all trees of the field shall clap their
hands.
- 13 In place of the thornbush, the cypress
shall grow,
instead of nettles, * the myrtle.
This shall be to the LORD's renown,
as an everlasting sign that shall not fail.

CHAPTER 56

See RG 335–38

*Salvation for the Just**

- 1 * Thus says the LORD:
Observe what is right, do what is just,
for my salvation is about to come,
my justice, about to be revealed.<sup>j</sup>
- 2 Happy is the one who does this,
whoever holds fast to it:
Keeping the sabbath without profaning it, keeping one's hand from doing any evil.<sup>k</sup>

Obligations and Promises to Share in the Covenant

- 3 * The foreigner joined to the Lord
should not say,
“The LORD will surely exclude me
from his people”;
Nor should the eunuch say,
“See, I am a dry tree.”<sup>l</sup>
- 4 For thus says the LORD:
To the eunuchs who keep my sabbaths,
who choose what pleases me,
and who hold fast to my covenant,<sup>m</sup>
- 5 I will give them, in my house and within my walls, a monument and a name* Better than sons and daughters;
an eternal name, which shall not be cut off, will I give them.
- 6 And foreigners who join themselves to
the Lord,
to minister to him,
To love the name of the LORD,
to become his servants—

All who keep the sabbath without profaning it
and hold fast to my covenant,

7* Them I will bring to my holy mountain and make them joyful in my house of prayer;
Their burnt offerings and their sacrifices
will be acceptable on my altar,
For my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples.<sup>n</sup>

8 * Oracle of the LORD GOD,
who gathers the dispersed of Israel—
Others will I gather to them
besides those already gathered.<sup>o</sup>

Unworthy Shepherds*

9 All you beasts of the field,*
come to devour,
all you beasts in the forest!<sup>p</sup>

10 * All the sentinels of Israel are blind,
they are without knowledge;
They are all mute dogs,
unable to bark;
Dreaming, reclining,
loving their sleep.

11 Yes, the dogs have a ravenous appetite;
they never know satiety,
Shepherds who have no understanding;
all have turned their own way,
each one covetous for gain:

12 “Come, let me bring wine;
let us fill ourselves with strong drink,
And tomorrow will be like today,
or even greater.”<sup>q</sup>

CHAPTER 57

See RG 335–38

- <sup>1</sup> The just have perished,
but no one takes it to heart;
The steadfast are swept away,
while no one understands.
Yet the just are taken away from the presence of evil,
- <sup>2</sup> * and enter into peace;
They rest upon their couches,
the sincere, who walk in integrity.<sup>r</sup>

An Idolatrous People*

- <sup>3</sup> But you, draw near,
you children of a sorceress,
offspring of an adulterer and a prostitute!*
- <sup>4</sup> Against whom do you make sport, against whom do you open wide your
mouth,
and stick out your tongue?
Are you not rebellious children,
deceitful offspring—
- <sup>5</sup> You who burn with lust among the oaks,
under every green tree;
You who immolate children in the wadies,
among the clefts of the rocks?<sup>* S</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> Among the smooth stones* of the wadi is your portion,
they, they are your allotment;
Indeed, you poured out a drink offering
to them,
and brought up grain offerings.
With these things, should I be
appeased?
- <sup>7</sup> Upon a towering and lofty mountain

- you set up your bed,
and there you went up to offer sacrifice.<sup>t</sup>
- 8 Behind the door and the doorpost
you set up your symbol.
Yes, deserting me, you carried up your bedding;
and spread it wide.
You entered an agreement with them,
you loved their couch, you gazed upon nakedness.*
- 9 You approached the king* with oil,
and multiplied your perfumes;
You sent your ambassadors far away,
down even to deepest Sheol.
- 10 Though worn out with the length of your
journey,
you never said, "It is hopeless";
You found your strength revived,
and so you did not weaken.
- 11 Whom did you dread and fear,
that you told lies,
And me you did not remember
nor take to heart?
Am I to keep silent and conceal,
while you show no fear of me?
- 12 I will proclaim your justice*
and your works;
but they shall not help you.
- 13* When you cry out,
let your collection of idols save you.
All these the wind shall carry off,
a mere breath shall bear them away;
But whoever takes refuge in me shall inherit the land,
and possess my holy mountain.

The Way to Peace for God's People

- 14 And I say:
Build up, build up, prepare the way,

remove every obstacle from my people's way. * u

- 15 * For thus says the high and lofty One,
the One who dwells forever, whose name is holy:

I dwell in a high and holy place,
but also with the contrite and lowly of
spirit,

To revive the spirit of the lowly,
to revive the heart of the crushed.

- 16 For I will not accuse forever,
nor always be angry;
For without me their spirit fails,
the life breath that I have given. v

- 17 Because of their wicked avarice I grew angry;
I struck them, hiding myself from them in wrath.
But they turned back, following the way
of their own heart. w

- 18 I saw their ways,
but I will heal them.
I will lead them and restore full comfort
to them

and to those who mourn for them, x

- 19 creating words of comfort. *
Peace! Peace to those who are far and near, says the LORD; and I will heal them.

- 20 But the wicked are like the tossing sea
which cannot be still,

Its waters cast up mire and mud. y

- 21 There is no peace for the wicked!
says my God. z

*Reasons for Judgment**

- <sup>1</sup> Cry out full-throated and unsparingly,
lift up your voice like a trumpet blast;
Proclaim to my people their transgression,
to the house of Jacob their sins.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> They seek me day after day,
and desire to know my ways,
Like a nation that has done what is just and not abandoned the judgment of their God;
They ask of me just judgments,
they desire to draw near to God.
- <sup>3</sup> “Why do we fast, but you do not see it?
afflict ourselves, but you take no note?”
See, on your fast day you carry out your own pursuits,
and drive all your laborers.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> See, you fast only to quarrel and fight
and to strike with a wicked fist!
Do not fast as you do today
to make your voice heard on high!
- <sup>5</sup> Is this the manner of fasting I would
choose,
a day to afflict oneself?
To bow one’s head like a reed,
and lie upon sackcloth and ashes?
Is this what you call a fast,
a day acceptable to the LORD?<sup>c</sup>

*Authentic Fasting That Leads to Blessing**

- <sup>6</sup> Is this not, rather, the fast that I choose:
releasing those bound unjustly,
untying the thongs of the yoke;
Setting free the oppressed,

- breaking off every yoke?<sup>d</sup>
- 7 Is it not sharing your bread with the hungry, bringing the afflicted and the homeless
into your house;
Clothing the naked when you see them,
and not turning your back on your own flesh?<sup>e</sup>
- 8 Then your light shall break forth like the
dawn,
and your wound shall quickly be healed;
Your vindication shall go before you,
and the glory of the LORD shall be your rear guard.
- 9 Then you shall call, and the LORD will
answer,
you shall cry for help, and he will say:
“Here I am!”
If you remove the yoke from among you,
the accusing finger, and malicious speech;<sup>f</sup>
- 10 If you lavish your food on the hungry
and satisfy the afflicted;
Then your light shall rise in the darkness,
and your gloom shall become like midday;
- 11 Then the LORD will guide you always
and satisfy your thirst in parched places,
will give strength to your bones
And you shall be like a watered garden,
like a flowing spring whose waters
never fail.<sup>g</sup>
- 12 Your people shall rebuild the ancient ruins;
the foundations from ages past you shall raise up;
“Repairer of the breach,” they shall call
you,
“Restorer of ruined dwellings.”<sup>h</sup>

*Authentic Sabbath Observance That Leads to Blessing**

- 13 If you refrain from trampling the sabbath,
from following your own pursuits on my holy day;
If you call the sabbath a delight,
the LORD's holy day glorious;
If you glorify it by not following your
ways,
seeking your own interests, or pursuing your own affairs—
- 14 Then you shall delight in the LORD, and I will make you ride upon the heights of the earth;
I will nourish you with the heritage of Jacob, your father,
for the mouth of the LORD has spoken.<sup>i</sup>

CHAPTER 59

See RG 335–38

Salvation Delayed

- 1 * No, the hand of the LORD is not too short to save,
nor his ear too dull to hear.<sup>j</sup>
- 2 Rather, it is your crimes
that separate you from your God,
It is your sins that make him hide his face
so that he does not hear you.
- 3 For your hands are defiled with blood,
and your fingers with crime;
Your lips speak falsehood,
and your tongue utters deceit.<sup>k</sup>
- 4 No one brings suit justly,
no one pleads truthfully;
They trust an empty plea and tell lies;
they conceive mischief and bring forth malice.
- 5 * They hatch adders' eggs,
and weave spiders' webs:
Whoever eats the eggs will die,
if one of them is crushed, it will hatch
a viper;<sup>l</sup>
- 6 Their webs cannot serve as clothing,
nor can they cover themselves with their works.
Their works are evil works,
and deeds of violence are in their hands.
- 7 Their feet run to evil,
and they hasten to shed innocent blood;
Their thoughts are thoughts of
wickedness,
violence and destruction are on their highways.<sup>m</sup>
- 8 The way of peace they know not,
and there is no justice on their paths;

Their roads they have made crooked,
no one who walks in them knows
peace.

Acknowledgment of Transgressions

- 9 * That is why judgment is far from us
and justice does not reach us.
We look for light, but there is darkness;
for brightness, and we walk in gloom!<sup>n</sup>
- 10 Like those who are blind we grope along
the wall,
like people without eyes we feel our
way.
We stumble at midday as if at twilight, among the vigorous, we are like the dead.
- 11 Like bears we all growl,
like doves we moan without ceasing.
We cry out for justice, but it is not there;
for salvation, but it is far from us.<sup>o</sup>
- 12 For our transgressions before you are
many,
our sins bear witness against us.
Our transgressions are present to us,
and our crimes we acknowledge:
- 13 Transgressing, and denying the LORD,
turning back from following our God,
Planning fraud and treachery, uttering lying words conceived in the
heart.
- 14 Judgment is turned away,
and justice stands far off;
For truth stumbles in the public square,
and uprightness cannot enter.<sup>p</sup>
- 15 Fidelity is lacking,
and whoever turns from evil is
despoiled.

Divine Intervention

- The LORD saw this, and was aggrieved that there was no justice.
- 16 He saw that there was no one,
was appalled that there was none to intervene;
Then his own arm brought about the victory,
and his justice sustained him.
- 17 He put on justice as his breastplate,
victory as a helmet on his head;
He clothed himself with garments of
vengeance,
wrapped himself in a mantle of zeal.<sup>q</sup>
- 18 According to their deeds he repays his
enemies
and requites his foes with wrath;
to the coastlands he renders recompense.
- 19 Those in the west shall fear the name of
the LORD,
and those in the east, his glory,
Coming like a pent-up stream driven on by the breath of the LORD.
- 20 Then for Zion shall come a redeemer, to those in Jacob who turn from transgression—oracle of the LORD.<sup>r</sup>
- 21 * This is my covenant with them,
which I myself have made, says the
LORD:
My spirit which is upon you and my words that I have put in your mouth
Shall not depart from your mouth,
nor from the mouths of your children
Nor the mouths of your children's children from this time forth and forever, says
the LORD.<sup>s</sup>

CHAPTER 60

See RG 335–38

The Dawning of Divine Glory for Zion

- 1 * Arise! Shine, for your light has come,
the glory of the LORD has dawned upon you.<sup>t</sup>
- 2 Though darkness covers the earth,
and thick clouds, the peoples,
Upon you the LORD will dawn,
and over you his glory will be seen.
- 3 Nations shall walk by your light,
kings by the radiance of your dawning.<sup>u</sup>

The Nations Come to Zion

- 4 Raise your eyes and look about;
they all gather and come to you—
Your sons from afar,
your daughters in the arms of their nurses.<sup>v</sup>
- 5 Then you shall see and be radiant,
your heart shall throb and overflow.
For the riches of the sea shall be poured out before you,
the wealth of nations shall come to you.
- 6 Caravans of camels shall cover you,
dromedaries of Midian and Ephah;
All from Sheba shall come bearing gold and frankincense,
and heralding the praises of the LORD.
- 7 All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered for you,
the rams of Nebaioth shall serve your needs;
They will be acceptable offerings on my
altar,
and I will glorify my glorious house.

- 8 Who are these that fly along like a cloud,
like doves to their cotes?
- 9 The vessels of the coastlands are gathering,
with the ships of Tarshish in the lead,
To bring your children from afar,
their silver and gold with them—
For the name of the LORD, your God, for the Holy One of Israel who has glorified you.

Honor and Service for Zion*

- 10 Foreigners shall rebuild your walls,
their kings shall minister to you;
Though in my wrath I struck you,
yet in my good will I have shown you
mercy.<sup>w</sup>
- 11 Your gates shall stand open constantly;
day and night they shall not be closed
So that they may bring you the wealth of
nations,
with their kings in the vanguard.<sup>x</sup>
- 12 For the nation or kingdom that will not serve you shall perish;
such nations shall be utterly destroyed!<sup>y</sup>
- 13 The glory of Lebanon shall come to
you—
the juniper, the fir, and the cypress all
together—
To bring beauty to my sanctuary, and glory to the place where I stand.<sup>z</sup>
- 14 The children of your oppressors shall
come,
bowing before you;
All those who despised you,
shall bow low at your feet.
They shall call you “City of the LORD,” “Zion of the Holy One of Israel.”

- 15 No longer forsaken and hated,
with no one passing through,
Now I will make you the pride of the ages,
a joy from generation to generation.
- 16 You shall suck the milk of nations,
and be nursed at royal breasts;
And you shall know that I, the LORD, am
your savior,
your redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.
- 17 Instead of bronze I will bring gold,
instead of iron I will bring silver;
Instead of wood, bronze;
instead of stones, iron.
I will appoint peace your governor,
and justice your ruler.<sup>a</sup>
- 18 No longer shall violence be heard of in your land,
or plunder and ruin within your borders.
You shall call your walls "Salvation"
and your gates "Praise."

Eternal Light for Zion

- 19 * No longer shall the sun
be your light by day, Nor shall the brightness of the moon
give you light by night;
Rather, the LORD will be your light
forever,
your God will be your glory.<sup>b</sup>
- 20 No longer will your sun set,
or your moon wane;
For the LORD will be your light forever,
and the days of your grieving will be over.
- 21 Your people will all be just;
for all time they will possess the land;
They are the shoot that I planted,
the work of my hands, that I might be glorified.<sup>c</sup>

22 The least one shall become a clan,
the smallest, a mighty nation;
I, the LORD, will swiftly accomplish
these things when the time comes.<sup>d</sup>

CHAPTER 61

See RG 335–38

The Anointed Bearer of Glad Tidings

- 1 * The spirit of the LORD GOD is upon me, because the LORD has anointed me;
He has sent me to bring good news to the afflicted,
to bind up the brokenhearted,
To proclaim liberty to the captives,
release to the prisoners,<sup>e</sup>
- 2 To announce a year of favor from the
LORD
and a day of vindication by our God;
To comfort all who mourn;<sup>f</sup>
- 3 to place on those who mourn in Zion
a diadem instead of ashes,
To give them oil of gladness instead of
mourning,
a glorious mantle instead of a faint
spirit.

Restoration and Blessing

- They will be called oaks of justice,
the planting of the LORD to show his
glory.
- 4 They shall rebuild the ancient ruins,
the former wastes they shall raise up
And restore the desolate cities, devastations of generation upon generation.<sup>g</sup>
- 5 Strangers shall stand ready to pasture
your flocks,
foreigners shall be your farmers and vinedressers.
- 6 * You yourselves shall be called “Priests
of the LORD,”

“Ministers of our God” you shall be called.
You shall eat the wealth of the nations
and in their riches you will boast.<sup>h</sup> 7 Because their shame was twofold* and disgrace was proclaimed their
portion,
They will possess twofold in their own
land;
everlasting joy shall be theirs.<sup>i</sup>

God’s Word of Promise

8 For I, the LORD, love justice,
I hate robbery and wrongdoing;
I will faithfully give them their recompense,
an everlasting covenant I will make with them.<sup>j</sup> 9 Their offspring shall be renowned among
the nations,
and their descendants in the midst of the peoples;
All who see them shall acknowledge
them:
“They are offspring the LORD has
blessed.”

Thanksgiving for God’s Deliverance

10 * I will rejoice heartily in the LORD,
my being exults in my God;
For he has clothed me with garments of
salvation,
and wrapped me in a robe of justice,
Like a bridegroom adorned with a
diadem,
as a bride adorns herself with her jewels.<sup>k</sup> 11 As the earth brings forth its shoots,
and a garden makes its seeds spring

up,
So will the Lord God make justice spring
up,
and praise before all the nations.

CHAPTER 62

See RG 335–38

A New Name for Zion

- 1 * For Zion's sake I will not be silent, for Jerusalem's sake I will not keep still,
Until her vindication shines forth like the dawn
and her salvation like a burning torch.<sup>l</sup>
- 2 Nations shall behold your vindication,
and all kings your glory;
You shall be called by a new name bestowed by the mouth of the LORD.<sup>m</sup>
- 3 You shall be a glorious crown in the hand
of the Lord,
a royal diadem in the hand of your
God.
- 4 No more shall you be called "Forsaken," nor your land called "Desolate," But you shall be called "My Delight is in
her,"
and your land "Espoused."
For the LORD delights in you, and your land shall be espoused.<sup>n</sup>
- 5 For as a young man marries a virgin,
your Builder shall marry you;
And as a bridegroom rejoices in his bride
so shall your God rejoice in you.
- 6 Upon your walls, Jerusalem,
I have stationed sentinels;
By day and by night,
they shall never be silent.
You who are to remind the LORD,
take no rest,
- 7 And give him no rest,
until he re-establishes Jerusalem
And makes it the praise of the earth.

The Blessings of Salvation for God's People

- 8 * The LORD has sworn by his right hand
and by his mighty arm:
No more will I give your grain
as food to your enemies;
Nor shall foreigners drink the wine,
for which you toiled.<sup>O</sup>
- 9 But those who harvest shall eat,
and praise the LORD;
Those who gather shall drink
in my holy courts.<sup>P</sup>
- 10 * Pass through, pass through the gates,
prepare a way for the people;<sup>Q</sup> Build up, build up the highway, clear it
of stones,
raise up a standard over the nations.
- 11 The LORD has proclaimed
to the ends of the earth:
Say to daughter Zion, “See, your savior comes!
See, his reward is with him,
his recompense before him.”<sup>R</sup>
- 12 They shall be called “The Holy People,”
“The Redeemed of the LORD.”
And you shall be called “Cared For,”
“A City Not Forsaken.”<sup>S</sup>

CHAPTER 63

See RG 335–38

The Divine Warrior*

- <sup>1</sup> Who is this that comes from Edom,
in crimsoned garments, from Bozrah?
Who is this, glorious in his apparel, striding in the greatness of his
strength?
“It is I, I who announce vindication, mighty to save.”<sup>t</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Why is your apparel red,
and your garments like one who treads
the wine press?<sup>u</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> “The wine press I have trodden alone,
and from the peoples no one was with
me.
I trod them in my anger,
and trampled them down in my wrath;
Their blood spurted on my garments,
all my apparel I stained.
- <sup>4</sup> For a day of vindication was in my heart,
my year for redeeming had come.”<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> I looked about, but there was no one to
help,
I was appalled that there was no one to lend support;
So my own arm brought me victory
and my own wrath lent me support.”<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> I trampled down the peoples in my anger,
I made them drunk in my wrath,
and I poured out their blood upon the ground.”

Prayer for the Return of God’s Favor

- <sup>7</sup> * The loving deeds of the LORD I will recall,

the glorious acts of the LORD,
Because of all the LORD has done for us,
the immense goodness to the house of Israel,
Which he has granted according to his mercy
and his many loving deeds.<sup>x</sup>

8 He said: “They are indeed my people, children who are not disloyal.”
So he became their savior

9 in their every affliction.
It was not an envoy or a messenger,
but his presence that saved them.
Because of his love and pity
the LORD redeemed them, Lifting them up and carrying them
all the days of old.<sup>y</sup>

10 But they rebelled
and grieved his holy spirit;
So he turned to become their enemy,
and warred against them.<sup>z</sup>

11 Then they remembered the days of old, of Moses, his servant:

Where is the one who brought up out of the sea
the shepherd of his flock?
Where is the one who placed in their
midst
his holy spirit,<sup>a</sup>

12 Who guided Moses by the hand,
with his glorious arm?
Where is the one who divided the waters
before them—
winning for himself an everlasting renown—

13 Who guided them through the depths,
like horses in open country?

14 As cattle going down into the valley,
they did not stumble.
The spirit of the LORD guided them.

- Thus you led your people,
to make for yourself a glorious name.
- 15 Look down from heaven and regard us
from your holy and glorious palace!
Where is your zealous care and your
might,
your surge of pity?<sup>b</sup>
Your mercy hold not back!
- 16 For you are our father.
Were Abraham not to know us,
nor Israel to acknowledge us,
You, LORD, are our father,
our redeemer you are named from of
old.
- 17 Why do you make us wander, LORD,
from your ways,
and harden our hearts so that we do not fear you?* Return for the sake of your servants,
the tribes of your heritage.
- 18 Why have the wicked invaded your holy
place,
why have our enemies trampled your
sanctuary?
- 19 * Too long have we been like those you do not rule,
on whom your name is not invoked.
Oh, that you would rend the heavens and come down,
with the mountains quaking before
you,<sup>c</sup>

CHAPTER 64

See RG 335–38

- <sup>1</sup> As when brushwood is set ablaze,
or fire makes the water boil!
Then your name would be made known to your enemies
and the nations would tremble before
you,
- <sup>2</sup> While you worked awesome deeds we could not hope for,*
- <sup>3</sup> such as had not been heard of from of
old.
No ear has ever heard, no eye ever seen,
any God but you working such deeds for those who wait for him.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> Would that you might meet us doing
right,
that we might be mindful of you in our
ways!
Indeed, you are angry; we have sinned,
we have acted wickedly.
- <sup>5</sup> We have all become like something unclean,
all our just deeds are like polluted
rags;
We have all withered like leaves,
and our crimes carry us away like the wind.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>6</sup> There are none who call upon your name,
none who rouse themselves to take hold of you;
For you have hidden your face from us
and have delivered us up to our crimes.

A Final Plea

- <sup>7</sup> * Yet, LORD, you are our father;

we are the clay and you our potter:
we are all the work of your hand.

8 Do not be so very angry, LORD,
do not remember our crimes forever;
look upon us, who are all your people!

9 Your holy cities have become a
wilderness;
Zion has become wilderness,
Jerusalem desolation!<sup>f</sup>

10 Our holy and glorious house
in which our ancestors praised you
Has been burned with fire;
all that was dear to us is laid waste.

11 Can you hold back, LORD, after all this?
Can you remain silent, and afflict us so severely?

CHAPTER 65

See RG 335–38

- 1 * I was ready to respond to those who did not ask,
    to be found by those who did not seek
    me.
    I said: Here I am! Here I am!
    To a nation that did not invoke my name.<sup>g</sup>
- 2 I have stretched out my hands all day
    to a rebellious people,
    Who walk in a way that is not good,
    following their own designs;<sup>h</sup>
- 3 A people who provoke me
    continually to my face, Offering sacrifices in gardens and burning incense on bricks,
- 4 Sitting in tombs
    and spending the night in caves, Eating the flesh of pigs,
    with broth of unclean meat in their dishes;
- 5 Crying out, “Hold back,
    do not come near me, lest I render you holy!”*
    These things are smoke in my nostrils,
    a fire that burns all the day.
- 6 See, it stands written before me;
    I will not remain quiet until I have repaid in full
- 7 Your crimes and the crimes of your ancestors as well,
    says the LORD.
    Since they burned incense on the
    mountains,
    and insulted me on the hills,
    I will at once pour out in full measure their recompense into their laps.

Fate of the Just and Unjust in Israel

- 8 * Thus says the LORD:
As when the juice is pressed from a cluster,
and someone says, "Do not destroy it,
for there is still good in it,"
So will I do for the sake of my servants:
I will not destroy them all.
- 9 From Jacob I will bring forth offspring,
from Judah, those who are to possess
my mountains;
My chosen ones shall possess the land,
my servants shall dwell there.
- 10 Sharon shall become a pasture for the flocks,
the Valley of Achor a resting place for the cattle,
for my people who have sought me.<sup>i</sup>
- 11 But you who forsake the LORD,
who forget my holy mountain,
Who spread a table for Fortune and fill cups of mixed wine for Destiny,*
- 12 You I will destine for the sword;
you shall all bow down for slaughter;
Because I called and you did not answer,
I spoke and you did not listen,
But did what is evil in my sight and things I do not delight in, you chose.<sup>j</sup>
- 13 therefore thus says the Lord GOD:
My servants shall eat,
but you shall go hungry;
My servants shall drink,
but you shall be thirsty;
My servants shall rejoice,
but you shall be put to shame;
- 14 My servants shall shout
for joy of heart,
But you shall cry out for grief of heart,
and howl for anguish of spirit.
- 15 You will leave your name for a curse to my chosen ones

when the Lord GOD slays you,
and calls his servants by another name.
16 Whoever invokes a blessing in the land shall bless by the God of truth;* Whoever takes an oath in the land shall swear by the God of truth;
For the hardships of the past shall be forgotten
and hidden from my eyes.

A World Renewed

17 * See, I am creating new heavens
and a new earth;
The former things shall not be remembered
nor come to mind.<sup>k</sup> 18 Instead, shout for joy and be glad forever in what I am creating.
Indeed, I am creating Jerusalem to be a joy
and its people to be a delight;
19 I will rejoice in Jerusalem and exult in my people.
No longer shall the sound of weeping be heard there,
or the sound of crying;
20 No longer shall there be in it an infant who lives but a few days, nor anyone who does not live a full
lifetime;
One who dies at a hundred years shall be considered a youth,
and one who falls short of a hundred
shall be thought accursed.<sup>l</sup> 21 They shall build houses and live in them, they shall plant vineyards and eat their
fruit;
22 They shall not build and others live there;
they shall not plant and others eat.
As the years of a tree, so the years of my

- people;
and my chosen ones shall long enjoy
the work of their hands.
- 23 They shall not toil in vain,
nor beget children for sudden
destruction;
For they shall be a people blessed by the LORD
and their descendants with them.
- 24 Before they call, I will answer;
while they are yet speaking, I will hear.
- 25 * The wolf and the lamb shall pasture
together,
and the lion shall eat hay like the ox—
but the serpent's food shall be dust.<sup>m</sup>
- None shall harm or destroy on all my holy mountain, says the LORD.

CHAPTER 66

See RG 335–38

True and False Worship

- 1 * Thus says the LORD:
The heavens are my throne,
the earth, my footstool.
What house can you build for me?
Where is the place of my rest?<sup>n</sup>
- 2 My hand made all these things
when all of them came to be—oracle
of the LORD.
This is the one whom I approve:
the afflicted one, crushed in spirit,
who trembles at my word.<sup>o</sup>
- 3 * The one slaughtering an ox, striking a man,
sacrificing a lamb, breaking a dog's neck,
Making an offering of pig's blood,
burning incense, honoring an idol—
These have chosen their own ways, and taken pleasure in their own abominations.<sup>p</sup>
- 4 I in turn will choose affliction for them
and bring upon them what they fear.
Because when I called, no one answered,
when I spoke, no one listened.
Because they did what was evil in my
sight,
and things I do not delight in they chose,<sup>q</sup>
- 5 Hear the word of the LORD,
you who tremble at his word!
Your kin who hate you and cast you out because of my name
say,
“May the LORD show his glory,
that we may see your joy”;

- but they shall be put to shame.
- 6 A voice roaring from the city,
a voice from the temple;
The voice of the LORD
rendering recompense to his enemies!<sup>r</sup>

Blessings of Prosperity and Consolation

- 7 * Before she is in labor,
she gives birth;<sup>s</sup>
Before her pangs come upon her,
she delivers a male child.
- 8 Who ever heard of such a thing,
or who ever saw the like?
Can a land be brought forth in one day,
or a nation be born in a single moment?
Yet Zion was scarcely in labor
when she bore her children.
- 9 Shall I bring a mother to the point of birth,
and yet not let her child be born? says
the LORD.
Or shall I who bring to birth
yet close her womb? says your God.
- 10 * Rejoice with Jerusalem and be glad because of her,
all you who love her;
Rejoice with her in her joy,
all you who mourn over her—<sup>t</sup>
- 11 So that you may nurse and be satisfied
from her consoling breast;
That you may drink with delight
at her abundant breasts!
- 12 For thus says the LORD:
I will spread prosperity over her like a river,
like an overflowing torrent,
the wealth of nations.
You shall nurse, carried in her arms,
cradled upon her knees;
- 13 As a mother comforts her child,
so I will comfort you;

in Jerusalem you shall find your comfort.<sup>u</sup>

14 You will see and your heart shall exult, and your bodies shall flourish like the grass;
The LORD's power shall be revealed to his servants,
but to his enemies, his wrath.

15 For see, the LORD will come in fire,
his chariots like the stormwind;
To wreak his anger in burning rage
and his rebuke in fiery flames.

16 For with fire the LORD shall enter into
judgment,
and, with his sword, against all flesh;
Those slain by the LORD shall be many.<sup>v</sup>

17* Those who sanctify and purify themselves to go into the gardens, following one who stands within, eating pig's flesh, abominable things, and mice, shall all together come to an end, with their deeds and purposes— oracle of the LORD.

God Gathers the Nations. 18* I am coming to gather all nations and tongues; they shall come and see my glory.<sup>w</sup> 19 I will place a sign among them; from them I will send survivors to the nations: to Tarshish, Put and Lud, Mosoch, Tubal and Javan, to the distant coastlands which have never heard of my fame, or seen my glory; and they shall proclaim my glory among the nations. 20 They shall bring all your kin from all the nations as an offering to the LORD, on horses and in chariots, in carts, upon mules and dromedaries, to Jerusalem, my holy mountain, says the LORD, just as the Israelites bring their grain offering in a clean vessel to the house of the LORD. 21 Some of these I will take as priests and Levites, says the LORD.

22 Just as the new heavens and the new earth which I am making Shall endure before me—oracle of the LORD—
so shall your descendants and your name endure.<sup>x</sup>

23 From new moon to new moon,
and from sabbath to sabbath,
All flesh shall come to worship
before me, says the LORD.<sup>y</sup>

24 * They shall go out and see the corpses<sup>z</sup>
of the people who rebelled against me;

For their worm shall not die,
their fire shall not be extinguished;
and they shall be an abhorrence to all
flesh.

1:1 The title, or inscription, of the book is an editorial addition to identify the prophet and the circumstances of his ministry. Isaiah: meaning “the salvation of the Lord,” or “the Lord is salvation.” Amoz: not Amos the prophet. Judah: the Southern Kingdom of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin. Uzziah: also called Azariah; cf. 2 Kgs 15:1; 2 Chr 26:1.

1:3 Ox ... ass: Isaiah uses animals proverbial for their stupidity and stubbornness to underline Israel’s failure to respond to God. Israel: a term Isaiah (and other prophets) frequently applies to Judah, especially after the fall of the Northern Kingdom (which Isaiah normally calls Ephraim, as in 7:2, 9, 17; 9:8), but sometimes applies to the entire chosen people, as in 8:14.

1:4 Ah: see note on 5:8–24. Holy One of Israel: a title used frequently in the Book of Isaiah, rarely elsewhere in the Old Testament (see 5:19, 24; 10:20; 12:6; 17:7; 29:19; 30:11, 12, 15; 31:1; 37:23; 41:14, 16, 20; 43:3, 14; 45:11; 47:4; 48:17; 49:7; 54:5; 55:5; 60:9, 14).

1:5–6 The Hebrew expression translated “Why?” may also be translated “Where?” The ambiguity is probably intentional: “Why, O Israel, would you still be beaten, and where on your bruised body do you want the next blow?” The bruised body is a metaphor for the historical disaster that has overtaken Israel (see v. 7) because of its sins.

1:7 Sodom: Sodom and Gomorrah (see vv. 9–10; cf. Gn 19) were proverbial as wicked cities completely overthrown and destroyed by God. Judah, more fortunate, survives at least as a remnant. The devastation of the land and the isolation of Jerusalem suggest the time of Sennacherib’s invasion of 701.

1:8 Daughter Zion: Jerusalem, as isolated as a little hut erected in a field for the shelter of watchmen and laborers.

1:9 LORD of hosts: God, who is the Creator and Ruler of the armies of Israel, the angels, stars, etc.

1:10–17 A powerful indictment of the religious hypocrisy of rulers and others who neglect just judgment and oppress the weaker members, yet believe they can please God with sacrifices and other external forms of worship. The long list of observances suggests the Lord’s tedium with such attempts. Sodom ... Gomorrah: the names are picked up from v. 9, but now to emphasize their wickedness rather than the good fortune of escaping total destruction.

1:15–16 Hands . . . blood: oppression of the poor is likened to violence that bloodies the hands, which explains why the hands spread out in prayer (v. 15) are not regarded by the Lord. This climax of the accusations is followed by positive admonitions for reversing the evil situation.

1:18–20 Let us set things right: the Hebrew word refers to the arbitration of legal disputes (Jb 23:7). God offers to settle his case with Israel on the basis of the change of behavior demanded above. For Israel it is a life or death choice; life in conformity with God’s will or death for continued disobedience.

1:21–28 Faithful city: the phrase, found in v. 21 and v. 28, forms an inclusio which marks off the passage and also suggests three chronological periods: the city’s former ideal state, its present wicked condition (described in vv. 21b–23), and the future ideal conditions intended by God. This will be brought about by a purging judgment directed primarily against the leaders (“judges ... counselors”).

1:26 Judges: the reference must be to royal judges appointed by David and his successors, not to the tribal judges of the Book of Judges, since the “beginning” of Jerusalem as an Israelite city dates only to the time of David. The Davidic era is idealized here; obtaining justice in the historical Jerusalem of David’s time was more problematic (see 2 Sm 15:1–6).

1:27–28 These verses expand the oracle that originally ended at v. 26. The expansion correctly interprets the preceding text as proclaiming a purifying judgment on Zion in which the righteous are saved while the wicked perish. The meaning of “by justice” and “by righteousness” is ambiguous. Do these terms refer to God’s judgment or to the justice and righteousness of Zion’s surviving inhabitants? Is 33:14–16 suggests the latter interpretation.

1:29–31 These verses were secondarily inserted here on the catchword principle; like v. 28 they pronounce judgment on certain parties “together” (v. 31). The terebinths and gardens refer to the sacred groves or asherahs that functioned as idolatrous cultic symbols at the popular shrines or high places (1 Kgs 14:23; 2 Kgs 17:10). Hezekiah cut down these groves during his reform (2 Kgs 18:4); they were a religious issue during Isaiah’s ministry (cf. Is 17:7–11). Isaiah threatens those who cultivate these symbols with the same fate that befalls trees when deprived of water.

2:1 This editorial heading probably introduced the collection of chaps. 2–12, to which chap. 1 with its introduction was added later (see note on 1:2–31).

2:2–22 These verses contain two very important oracles, one on the pilgrimage of nations to Mount Zion (vv. 2–4— completed with an invitation to the “house of Jacob,” v. 5), the other on the day of the Lord (see note on Am 5:18), which was probably composed from at least two earlier pieces. Whereas vv. 6–8 indict Judah for trust in superstitious practices and human resources rather than in the Lord, the following verses are directed against humankind in general and emphasize the effect of the “day of the Lord,” the humbling of human pride. This may be taken as a precondition for the glorious vision of vv. 2–4. This vision of Zion’s glorious future, which is also found in a slightly variant form in Mi 4:1–4, is rooted in the early Zion tradition, cultivated in the royal cult in Jerusalem. It celebrated God’s choice of Jerusalem as the divine dwelling place, along with God’s choice of the Davidic dynasty (Ps 68:16–17; 78:67–72; 132:13–18). Highest mountain: the Zion tradition followed earlier mythological conceptions that associate the abode of deities with very high mountains (Ps 48:2–3). The lifting of Mount Zion is a metaphor for universal recognition of the Lord’s authority.

2:4 Once the nations acknowledge God as sovereign, they go up to Jerusalem to settle their disputes, rather than having recourse to war.

2:5 This verse is added as a conclusion to vv. 2–4; cf. Mi 4:4–5, where a quite different conclusion is provided for the parallel version of this oracle.

2:9 Bowing down to idols will not bring deliverance to Israel, but rather total abasement. Do not pardon them: this line is so abrupt that it is almost certainly an intrusion in the text.

2:11 That day: i.e., the day of the Lord; cf. note on Am 5:18.

2:13 Lebanon: Mount Lebanon in Syria, famed for its cedars. Bashan: the fertile uplands east of the Sea of Galilee.

2:22 The meaning of this verse, certainly a later addition, is not clear. It is not addressed to God but to a plural subject.

3:1–12 These verses suggest deportation, with resulting social upheaval, and thus may date to sometime after Ahaz submitted as vassal to Assyria. The deportation practiced by Assyria, as later by Babylon, exiled the leading elements of society, such as those named in vv. 2–3; cf. 2 Kgs 24:12, 14–16 for a similar list of those exiled by the Babylonians. Denuding society of its leaders opens the way to near anarchy and a situation in which leadership is seized by or thrust upon those unqualified for it (vv. 5–7). The situation has been provoked by sinfully inept leadership (vv. 4, 8–9, 12). Some suggest that vv. 4 and 12 refer to Ahaz, who may have come to the throne at an early age. Verses 10–11 form a wisdom couplet that was inserted later.

3:13–15 The princes and the elders, here accused of despoiling the poor, are the very ones who should be their defenders. Loot: by the Hebrew term (gazela) Isaiah conveys the idea of violent seizure, though 10:1–4 suggests the poor could be plundered by legal means.

3:16–4:1 Here and again in 32:9–14 Isaiah condemns the women of the ruling class for their part in Jerusalem's plight.

3:17 A shaven head is a mark of social disgrace; cf. Nm 5:18.

3:18–23 The long list of women's apparel in these verses suggests luxury and vanity; it contains a number of rare words, and the precise meaning of many of the terms is uncertain.

3:25 Your men ... your champions: the second person feminine singular pronoun here shows that the prophet has shifted his attention from the women of Zion to the personified city of Zion.

4:1 Seven women ... one man: deportation (cf. note on 3:1–12) would result in a disproportion of the sexes and leave the female population without enough male partners. The women are willing to marry, not for support, but to avoid disgrace.

4:2–6 Usually judged a later addition to the oracles of Isaiah. It relieves the threatening tone of the surrounding chaps. 3 and 5.

4:2 Branch: the term (Heb. semah) that is sometimes used of the ideal Davidic king of the future (cf. Jer 23:5; 33:15; Zec 3:8; 6:12). However, the parallel "fruit of the land" does not favor that usage here.

4:3 Inscribed for life: in God's list of the elect; cf. Ex 32:32.

5:1–7 Vineyard: although the term is sometimes used in an erotic context (Sg 1:6; 8:12), "vineyard" or "vine" is used more frequently as a metaphor for God's people (27:2; Ps 80:9, 14, 15; Jer 2:21; 12:10; Ez 17:7; Hos 10:1; Na 2:2). The terms translated "friend" (yadid) and "beloved" (dod) suggest the Lord's favor (Dt 33:12; 2 Sm 12:25; Ps 127:2) and familial background rather than introducing the piece as a "love song," as is sometimes suggested. The prophet disguises the real theme (the people's infidelity) so that the hearers will participate in the unfavorable judgment called for (vv. 3–4). Cf. the reversal of this parable in 27:2–6.

5:5–6 Trampled . . . thorns and briers: this judgment is echoed in the description of the devastated land in 7:23–25.

5:7 Judgment ... bloodshed ... justice ... outcry: in Hebrew there is an impressive play on words: mishpat parallels mispah, sedaqah parallels se'aqah. See also the threefold "waited for" in vv. 2, 4, 7.

5:8–24 These verses contain a series of short oracles introduced by the Hebrew particle hoy ("Ah!"), an emphatic exclamation, sometimes translated "Woe!"

5:8–10 An oracle against land-grabbers (v. 8); they will be impoverished instead of enriched (vv. 9–10).

5:10 Ten acres: a field with ten times the surface area a yoke of oxen could plow in one day. Bath: a liquid measure equal to about twelve gallons. Homer: a dry measure equal to what a donkey can carry, calculated to be about ten bushels. Ephah: a dry measure of about one bushel. So small a harvest is the fruit of the land-grabbers' greed.

5:11–13 An oracle against debauchery and indifference. Strong drink: the Hebrew word shekar means either beer or a type of wine, perhaps date wine, not distilled liquor.

5:19 An indication that some, presumably of the ruling class, scoff at Isaiah's teaching on the Lord's "plan" and "work" (cf. v. 12; 14:26–27; 28:9–14; 30:10–11).

5:25–30 These verses do not suit their present context. Apparently v. 25 was originally the conclusion of the poem of 9:7–20 directed against the Northern Kingdom; cf. the refrain that occurs here and in 9:11, 16, and 20. Verses 26–30 look to an invasion by Assyria and might originally have come immediately after the poem of 9:1–20 plus 5:25. The insertion of chaps. 6–8 may have occasioned the dislocation, as well as that of 10:1–4a, which may have originally belonged with the “reproach” oracles of 5:8–23.

5:26–30 This oracle threatens a future judgment, an invasion of the Assyrian army, God’s instrument for punishing Judah (10:5, 15).

6:1 In the year King Uzziah died: probably 742 B.C., although the chronology of this period is disputed. A high and lofty throne: within the holy of holies of the Jerusalem Temple stood two cherubim, or winged sphinxes, whose outstretched wings served as the divine throne (1 Kgs 6:23–28; Ez 1:4–28; 10:1, 20). The ark of the covenant was God’s footstool (Ps 132:7–8; 1 Chr 28:2), placed under the cherubim (1 Kgs 8:6–7). Temple: the holy place, just in front of the holy of holies.

6:2 Seraphim: the plural of saraph (“to burn”), a term used to designate the “fiery” serpents of the wilderness (Nm 21:8; Dt 8:15), and to refer to “winged” serpents (Is 14:29; 30:6). Here, however, it is used adjectivally of the cherubim, who are not serpent-like, as seen in the fact that they have faces and sexual parts (“feet”). See the adaptation of these figures by Ezekiel (Ez 1:10–12; 10:4–15).

6:3 Holy, holy, holy: these words have been used in Christian liturgy from the earliest times.

6:4 Smoke: reminiscent of the clouds which indicated God’s presence at Mount Sinai (Ex 19:16–19; Dt 4:11) and which filled the tabernacle (Ex 40:34–38) and the Temple (1 Kgs 8:10–11) at their dedication.

6:5 Doomed: there are two roots from which the verb here could be derived; one means “to perish, be doomed,” the other “to become silent,” and given Isaiah’s delight in puns and double entendre, he probably intended to sound both notes. “I am doomed!” is suggested by the popular belief that to see God would lead to one’s death; cf. Gn 32:31; Ex 33:20; Jgs 13:22. “I am struck silent!” is suggested by the emphasis on the lips in vv. 5–6, and such silence is attested elsewhere as the appropriate response to the vision of the Lord in the Temple (Hb 2:20).

6:7 Touched your lips: Isaiah is thus symbolically purified of sin in preparation for his mission as God’s prophet.

6:9–10 Isaiah’s words give evidence that he attempted in every way, through admonition, threat, and promise, to bring the people to conversion (cf. 1:18–20), so it is unlikely that this charge to “harden” is to be understood as Isaiah’s task; more probably it reflects the refusal of the people, more particularly the leaders, who were supposed to “see,” “hear,” and “understand,” a refusal which would then lead to a disastrous outcome (vv. 11–12).

6:11–12 The desolation described would be the result of the sort of deportation practiced by the Assyrians and later by the Babylonians. Isaiah seems to expect this as an eventual consequence of Judah’s submission as vassal to the Assyrians; cf. 3:1–3; 5:13.

6:13 When its leaves have fallen: the meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain, and the text may be corrupt. Holy offspring: part of the phrase is missing from the Septuagint and may be a later addition; it provides a basis for hope for the future.

7:1–8:18 These verses (often termed Isaiah’s “Memoirs”) contain a series of oracles and narratives (some in first person), all closely related to the Syro-Ephraimite war of 735–732 B.C. Several passages feature three children whose symbolic names refer to the Lord’s purposes: Shear-jashub (7:3), Emmanuel (7:10–17; 8:8–10), and Maher-shalal-hashbaz (8:1–4). Judah and its Davidic dynasty should trust God’s promises and not fear the combined armies of Israel and Syria; within a very short time these two enemy states will be destroyed, and David’s dynasty will continue.

7:1 Days of Ahaz: who ruled from 735 to 715 B.C. This attack against Jerusalem by the kings of Aram (Syria) and Israel in 735 B.C. was occasioned by the refusal of Ahaz to enter with them into an anti-Assyrian alliance; cf. 2 Kgs 16.

7:3 Shear-jashub: this name means “a remnant will return” (cf. 10:20–22).

7:5 Planned: the plans of those who plot against Ahaz shall not be accomplished (v. 7). What the Lord plans will unfailingly come to pass, whereas human plans contrary to those of the Lord are doomed to frustration; cf. 8:10; 14:24–27; 19:11–14; 29:15; 30:1. See further the note on 14:24–27.

7:6 Son of Tabeel: a puppet of Jerusalem's enemies. His appointment would interrupt the lawful succession from David.

7:8–9 God had chosen and made a commitment to David's dynasty and his capital city Jerusalem, not to Rezin and his capital Damascus, nor to the son of Remaliah and his capital Samaria (2 Sm 7:12–16; Ps 2:6; 78:68–72; 132:11–18). Within sixty-five years ... nation: this text occurs at the end of v. 8 in the Hebrew. Ahaz would not have been reassured by so distant a promise; the phrase is probably a later addition.

7:11 Deep ... sky: an extraordinary or miraculous sign that would prove God's firm will to save the royal house of David from its oppressors.

7:12 Tempt the LORD: Ahaz prefers to depend upon the might of Assyria rather than the might of God.

7:14 Isaiah's sign seeks to reassure Ahaz that he need not fear the invading armies of Syria and Israel in the light of God's promise to David (2 Sm 7:12–16). The oracle follows a traditional announcement formula by which the birth and sometimes naming of a child is promised to particular individuals (Gn 16:11; Jgs 13:3). The young woman: Hebrew 'almah designates a young woman of marriageable age without specific reference to virginity. The Septuagint translated the Hebrew term as parthenos, which normally does mean virgin, and this translation underlies Mt 1:23. Emmanuel: the name means "with us is God." Since for the Christian the incarnation is the ultimate expression of God's willingness to "be with us," it is understandable that this text was interpreted to refer to the birth of Christ.

7:15–16 Curds and honey: the only diet available to those who are left after the devastation of the land; cf. vv. 21–25.

7:17 Such days as have not come since Ephraim seceded: the days of the kingdom prior to the secession of Ephraim and the other northern tribes (1 Kgs 12). The king of Assyria: the final comment appears to be a later editorial gloss indicating days worse than any since the secession.

7:20 God will use the Assyrians from across the River (the Euphrates) as his instrument ("razor") to inflict disgrace and suffering upon his people. Ahaz paid tribute to the Assyrian king Tiglath-pileser III, who decimated Syria and Israel in his campaigns of 734–732 B.C. (cf. 2 Kgs 16:7–9). The feet: euphemism for sexual parts; cf. Is 6:2.

7:23–25 Cf. note on 5:5–6.

8:1 Ordinary stylus: lit., "stylus of men." Maher-shalal-hash-baz: a symbolic name to be given to another son of Isaiah (v. 3); it means "quick spoils; speedy plunder," and describes what the Assyrians will do to Syria and Israel.

8:2 Reliable witnesses: who would testify that Isaiah had indeed prophesied the future destruction. Uriah the priest: cf. 2 Kgs 16:10.

8:6–8 This people: Judah. Waters of Shiloah: the stream that flows from the Gihon spring into the pool of Shiloah in Jerusalem and provides a sure supply in time of siege; here it symbolizes the divine protection which Judah has rejected by seeking Assyrian support, symbolized by "the River" (i.e., the Euphrates). Ultimately Assyrian power will devastate Judah. His outspread wings: the Lord's wings, a recurring symbol for divine protection (Ps 17:8; 36:8; 57:2; 61:5; 91:4; Ru 2:12). Some understand the image to refer to the sides of the flooding river, but this use of the Hebrew word for "wings" is unparalleled elsewhere in classical Hebrew.

8:10 The plan of Israel's enemies will be thwarted because, as the name "Emmanuel" signifies, "with us is God."

8:12–14 Because Isaiah and his followers resisted the official policy of seeking help from Assyria they were labeled "conspirators"; Isaiah uses the term to express what is really the case, cooperating with the Lord.

8:16 Bind . . . seal . . . with my disciples: because the prophet's message was not well received at the time, he wanted to preserve it until the future had vindicated him as God's true prophet (cf. 30:8– 9).

8:18 Signs: in the meantime, while awaiting the vindication of his message, Isaiah and his children with their symbolic names stood as a reminder of God's message to Israel.

8:19 Chirp and mutter: a mocking reference to necromancers.

8:20 Surely . . . no dawn: reliance on necromancy brings futility.

8:22 Oppressive gloom . . . without light: the meaning of the Hebrew here is quite uncertain.

8:23–9:6 The meaning of 8:23 is somewhat uncertain, for example, whether the expressions translated "once" and "now" refer to times or to individuals, and also whether the verbs speak of degrading and glorifying the territories. If this traditional translation is correct, the passage would seem to promise the former Northern Kingdom of Israel deliverance from the Assyrians and might relate to Hezekiah's program of trying to reincorporate the northern territories into the kingdom of Judah and thus restore the boundaries of the country as it was under David.

8:23 The territories mentioned in this verse are those which the Assyrian king Tiglath-pileser III took from Israel and incorporated into the Assyrian provincial system as a result of the Syro-Ephraimite War of 735–732 B.C. (2 Kgs 15:29). Zebulun . . . Naphtali: regions of the former Northern Kingdom of Israel. The way of the Sea: the area along the Mediterranean coast south of Mount Carmel which became the Assyrian province of Dor. Land across the Jordan: the province of Gilead east of the Jordan. Galilee of the Nations: the territory north of Mount Carmel which was incorporated in the Assyrian province of Megiddo. Galilee apparently had a large non-Israelite population. Mt 4:15–16 cites this verse in the context of the beginning of Jesus' public mission in Galilee.

9:3 Day of Midian: when God used the judge Gideon to deliver these northern territories from Midianite oppression (Jgs 6–7).

9:5 A child: perhaps to be identified with the Emmanuel of 7:14 and 8:8; cf. 11:1–2, 9. This verse may reflect a coronation rather than a birth. Upon his shoulder: the reference may be to a particular act in the ritual in which a symbol of the king's authority was placed on his shoulder (cf. 2 Kgs 11:12; Is 22:22).

9:7–20 + 5:25–30 These verses describe a series of judgments God sent against the Northern Kingdom of Israel because of its sins. Despite the judgments, however, Israel continued to rebel, and God's anger remained unabated, as the recurring refrain emphasizes (9:11, 16, 20). The refrain ties Is 9:7–20 together as a unit, but 9:20 is far too abrupt to be the original conclusion to the oracle. With its series of past judgments and repeated refrain, the oracle resembles Am 4:6–12; by analogy with that model one expects a conclusion in which the prophet turns from the narration of past judgments to the announcement of a future judgment. Is 5:25–30 fits the pattern found in 9:7–20 and provides a suitable and possibly original conclusion for the whole oracle.

9:11 Aram: the Syrian kingdom, with its capital at Damascus.

9:20 Manasseh . . . Ephraim: two of the leading tribes of the Northern Kingdom. The reference is to the civil wars that marked the final decades of the Northern Kingdom (2 Kgs 15:10, 14–16, 25; cf. Hos 7:3–7).

10:1–4 This is another hoy-oracle; cf. note on 5:8–24. It may originally have been part of the collection at 5:8–24.

10:4 For all this . . . outstretched!: this refrain appears to be out of place here; cf. 9:11, 16, 20.

10:5–34 These verses contain a series of oracles directed against Assyria. Verses 5–15 portray Assyria as simply the rod God uses to punish Israel, though Assyria does not realize this. The original conclusion to this unit may be the judgment found in vv. 24–27a, which continues the imagery and motifs found in vv. 5–15. Verses 16–23, because of the quite different imagery and motifs, may originally have been an insertion directed against Aram and Israel at the time of the Syro-Ephraimite War.

10:6 Impious nation: Judah. It was God's intention to use Assyria merely to punish, not to destroy, the nation.

10:9–10 The cities mentioned were all cities captured, some more than once, by the Assyrians in the eighth century B.C. Verse 9 suggests a certain historical order in the fall of these cities, and v. 10 suggests that all of them had fallen before Samaria (cf. Am 6:2). That implies that one should think primarily of events during the reign of Tiglath-pileser III (745–727).

10:16 His fat ones: the strong men of the enemy army.

10:21 A remnant will return: in Hebrew, shear-jashub, an allusion to the name of Isaiah's son, Shear-jashub; cf. 7:3.

10:24 This verse with its reference to Assyria's rod may introduce the original conclusion to vv. 5–15.

10:27b–32 A poetic description of the march of an enemy army from the north, advancing south to the very gates of Jerusalem, where the enemy waves his hand in a gesture of derision against the city. Though Sennacherib's troops took a different route, advancing down the coast and then approaching Jerusalem from the southeast, the arrogant attitude toward God's chosen city was the same. Aiath: the Ai of Jos 7:22–8:29. Migrion: modern Makrun north of Michmash. The ravine: the deep valley between Michmash and Geba (cf. 1 Sm 14:1–5). Ramah ... Gibeah ... Bath-Gallim ... Laishah ... Anathoth ... Madmenah ... Gebim: cities north of Jerusalem threatened by the sudden appearance of this enemy army. Nob: probably to be identified with the present Mount Scopus from where one has a clear view of Jerusalem.

10:33–34 Just when the enemy is about to capture Jerusalem, God intervenes and destroys the hostile army. Cf. 29:1–8; 31:4–9.

11:1–16 Isaiah 11 contains a prophecy of the rise of a new Davidic king who will embody the ancient ideal of Davidic kingship (vv. 1–9), an elaboration of that prophecy in a further description of that king's rule (v. 10), and a prophecy of God's deliverance of the chosen people from exile and cessation of enmities (vv. 11–16).

11:1–9 (10) Here Isaiah looks forward to a new Davidide who will realize the ancient ideals (see Ps 72). The oracle does not seem to have a particular historical person in mind.

11:1 Shoot ... stump: the imagery suggests the bankruptcy of the monarchy as embodied in the historical kings, along with the need for a new beginning, to spring from the very origin from which David and his dynasty arose. Jesse: David's father (cf. 1 Sm 16:1–13).

11:2–3 The source of the traditional names of the gifts of the Holy Spirit. The Septuagint and the Vulgate read "piety" for "fear of the Lord" in its first occurrence, thus listing seven gifts.

11:6–9 This picture of the idyllic harmony of paradise is a dramatic symbol of universal peace and justice under the rule of the new Davidic king. The peace and harmony even among carnivores and their natural prey in this description suggest a paradisiac aspect of the reign of the new king.

11:10–16 This passage, with its reference to God's people in widely scattered lands, is probably from a much later period. God will restore them to their own land. The reconciliation of Ephraim (i.e., the Northern Kingdom) and Judah reverses what Isaiah saw as a disastrous event of the past (cf. 7:17). God's action is likened to a new exodus, analogous to the time God first acquired Israel in bringing them out of the land of Egypt. Pathros: upper Egypt. Elam: east of Babylonia. Shinar: Babylonia. Hamath: on the Orontes River in Syria. Isles: or coastlands, in the Mediterranean.

11:14 People of the east: tribes in the Arabian Desert (cf. Jgs 6:3, 33; 7:12).

11:15 Tongue: perhaps to be identified with the Gulf of Suez.

12:1–6 Israel's thanksgiving to the Lord, expressed in language like that of the Psalms.

13:1–23:18 These chapters, which probably existed at one time as an independent collection, consist primarily of oracles from various sources against foreign nations. While some of the material is Isaianic, in many cases it has been reworked by later editors or writers.

13:1–22 Although attributed to Isaiah (v. 1), this oracle does not reflect conditions of Isaiah's time. Babylon did not achieve imperial status until a century later, after its victory over Assyria in 609 B.C. The mention of the Medes (v. 17) rather than Persia suggests a date prior to 550 B.C., when the Median empire of Astyages fell to Cyrus the Persian. Tension is created in that the attackers are not named until v. 17 and the foe to be attacked until v. 19.

13:1 Oracle: Heb. massa'; used eight more times in this collection.

13:2 To them: the Medes (v. 17), who are being summoned to destroy Babylon. Gates of the nobles: the reference is apparently to the gates of Babylon and involves a wordplay on the city name (Babylon = bab ilani, "gate of the gods").

13:3 Consecrated ones: in the sense that they will wage a "holy war" and carry out God's plan.

13:6–8 Day of the LORD: described often in prophetic writings, it generally signified the coming of the Lord in power and majesty to destroy his enemies. The figures used convey the idea of horror and destruction (Am 5:18–20). The Almighty: Heb. shaddai; there is a play on words between destruction (shod) and Shaddai, a title for God traditionally rendered as "the Almighty" (cf. Gn 17:1; Ex 6:3).

13:12 Ophir: cf. note on Ps 45:10.

13:21 Satyrs: in the popular mind, demons of goatlike form dwelling in ruins, symbols of immorality; cf. Lv 17:7; Is 34:14.

14:2 Possess them: Israel will make slaves of the nations who escort it back to its land.

14:4–21 This taunt-song, a satirical funeral lament, is a beautiful example of classical Hebrew poetry. According to the prose introduction and the prosaic conclusion (vv. 22–23), it is directed against the king of Babylon, though Babylon is mentioned nowhere in the song itself. If the reference to Babylon is accurate, the piece was composed long after the time of Isaiah, for Babylon was not a threat to Judah in the eighth century. Some have argued that Isaiah wrote it at the death of an Assyrian king and the references to Babylon were made by a later editor, but this is far from certain.

14:12 Morning Star: term addressed to the king of Babylon. The Vulgate translates as "Lucifer," a name applied by the church Fathers to Satan. Son of the dawn: Heb., ben shahar, may reflect the name of a pagan deity.

14:13–15 God: not Elohim, the common word for God, but El, the name of the head of the pantheon in Canaanite mythology, a god who was early identified with the Lord in Israelite thought. Mount of Assembly: mountain where the council of the gods met, according to Canaanite mythology. Zaphon: the sacred mountain of Baal, originally the Jebel el-Aqra north of Ugarit, but other mountains have been identified with it, including Mount Zion in Jerusalem (Ps 48:3). The attempt to usurp the place of God (v. 14), coupled with the dramatic reversal ("above the stars of God" to "the depths of the pit") occasioned the interpretation that saw here the rebellion and fall of Satan.

14:21 Cities: if the text is correct, it presumably refers to cities as expressions of human pride, authority, and oppression (cf. Gn 11:1–9; Na 3:1–4).

14:24–27 The motif of God's plan or work is a recurring thread running through Isaiah's oracles. The plans of Judah's enemies will not come to pass (7:5–7; 8:9–10; 10:7), but God's plan for his work of disciplining his own people (5:12, 19; 28:21), and then for punishing the foreign agents God used to administer that discipline (10:12) will come to pass.

14:26 Hand outstretched over all the nations: as it was once outstretched over Israel (9:11, 16, 20; 5:25).

14:28–31 This oracle seems to reflect the political situation soon after the death of Ahaz in 715 B.C., when Ashdod and the other Philistine cities were trying to create a united front to rebel against Assyria. Ahaz had refused to join the rebels in 735 B.C. and remained loyal to Assyria during the rest of his reign, but the Philistines may have had higher hopes for his son Hezekiah. Judah, however, did not join in Ashdod's disastrous revolt in 713–711 B.C. (cf. 20:1).

14:28 The year that King Ahaz died: 715 B.C.

14:29 The occasion for this oracle is usually taken to be the death of an Assyrian king; the Philistines were vassals of Assyria, whereas no victories of Ahaz over the Philistines are recorded. The chronological notice (in the year that King Ahaz died) may be incorrect, for no Assyrian king died around 715, the date usually assigned for the death of Ahaz. Flying saraph: a winged cobra, often portrayed in Egyptian art and on Israelite seals. The Hebrew saraph means “to burn” and perhaps is applied to the cobra because of the burning sensation of its bite.

14:31 Smoke from the north: the dust raised from the approach of the Assyrian army.

14:32 Messengers of the nations: envoys from Philistia, and from Egypt and Ethiopia, the real powers behind the Philistine revolt (20:1–6; cf. 18:1–2).

15:1–16:14 Both the historical situation reflected in this oracle against Moab and the date of composition are uncertain. Variants of the same poem are found in Jer 48, and there are connections with Nm 21:27–30 as well.

15:2 Shaved . . . sheared off: traditional signs of grief.

15:9 There is a play on words between “Dimon” and dam, the Hebrew word for blood.

16:1 Send them forth: the Hebrew text is disturbed; it could also be understood to refer to tribute (a lamb) sent from Moab to Zion, presumably to encourage the king to receive the Moabite refugees.

16:2 The Arnon: principal river of Moab.

16:3–5 Directed to Jerusalem, which should receive the suffering Moabites with mercy, as befits the city of David’s family, who were partly descended from Ruth the Moabite; and cf. 1 Sm 22:3–4. This would be a gracious act on Judah’s part, since its relations with Moab were strained at best.

16:7–14 Moab had been prosperous; now it has become a desert.

16:7 Raisin cakes: masses of dried compressed grapes used as food (cf. 2 Sm 6:19; 1 Chr 16:3; Sg 2:5), and also in the worship of other gods (Hos 3:1).

16:8 Wilderness: i.e., eastward. Sea: i.e., westward.

16:9–10 Battle cry . . . shout of joy: the same Hebrew word (hedad), which normally refers to the joyful shout of those treading the grapes (cf. Jer 25:30), here is used both for the triumphant shout of the enemy (v. 9) and for the vintagers’ shout, which has ceased.

16:12 In vain do the Moabites appeal to their god Chemosh.

16:13–14 A prose application of the preceding poetic oracle against Moab (15:1–16:12); cf. Jer 4:8. Like the years of a hired laborer: the fixed period of time for which the hired laborer contracted his services; cf. Is 21:16.

17:1 Damascus: capital of Aram or Syria, conquered by Tiglath-pileser III at the end of the Syro-Ephraimite War in 732 B.C.

17:3 Ephraim: Israel, leagued with Aram against Judah in the Syro-Ephraimite War. Assyria ravaged and captured most of Israelite territory in 734–733 B.C. Like the glory of the Israelites: the remnant of Aram will be no more impressive than the pitiful remnant of the Northern Kingdom.

17:5 Valley of Rephaim: a fertile plain just to the southwest of Jerusalem (cf. Jos 15:8; 2 Sm 5:18). Since it was near a large population center, the fields there would be thoroughly gleaned by the poor after the harvest, leaving very few ears of grain.

17:6 Olives not easily picked by hand were knocked from the tree by means of a long stick; cf. 24:13.

17:8 Asherahs: see note on Ex 34:13. Incense stands: small altars on which incense was burned; cf. Is 27:9; Lv 26:30.

17:10 The Pleasant One: an epithet for a foreign god of fertility, probably Adonis, in whose honor saplings were planted.

17:12 Many peoples: the hordes that accompanied the invading Assyrians, whom God repels just as he vanquished the primeval waters of chaos; see notes on Jb 3:8; 7:12; Ps 89:11.

17:13–14 The passage seems to evoke the motif of invincibility, part of the early Zion tradition that Jerusalem could not be conquered because God protected it (Ps 48:1–8).

18:1–2 Land of buzzing insects: the region of the Upper Nile where these multiplied with great rapidity. Ethiopia: in Hebrew, Kush. The center of this ancient kingdom corresponds geographically to the modern Sudan, Roman Nubia. Papyrus boats: light and serviceable vessels made of bundles of papyrus stalks and sealed with pitch. Egypt, ruled by a dynasty from Ethiopia, had invited Judah to join a coalition against Assyria, but Isaiah told the ambassadors to return to their own people.

18:3–6 A more general address but probably relating to the same topic. The Lord will not act at once, but later there will be a “harvest” of terrible destruction, probably directed against Assyria (cf. 14:24–27).

19:4 Cruel master . . . harsh king: possibly the Nubian (Ethiopian) Shabaka who gained control of all of Egypt around 712 B.C.

19:11, 13 Zoan, later known as Tanis, and Memphis (Hebrew Noph) were key cities in the Nile Delta.

19:15 Head . . . reed: the leaders and the people; cf. 9:13–14.

19:18 Five cities: colonies of Jews living together and speaking their native language; cf. Jer 43. City of the Sun: the meaning is uncertain, but the reference seems to be to the city known later as Heliopolis.

20:1 Ashdod: a city of Philistia. In 713 B.C., Azuri, the king of Ashdod was deposed by Sargon for plotting rebellion, but the citizens of Ashdod rejected the ruler installed by the Assyrian king and followed a certain Yamani, who in 712 B.C., with the protection of Egypt, attempted to draw Edom, Moab, and Judah into a coalition against Assyria. In 711 B.C., Sargon’s general marched against Ashdod, and Yamani fled to Ethiopia. Ashdod was captured, and a short time later Ethiopia handed Yamani over to the Assyrians for punishment.

20:2–6 Isaiah’s nakedness is a symbolic act to convey the message that Assyria would lead the Egyptians and Ethiopians away as captives. The Judeans and their allies would then realize the folly of having trusted in them. The purpose of the oracle was to dissuade Hezekiah, the Judean king, from being drawn into Ashdod’s anti-Assyrian coalition (14:28–32).

21:1–10 This oracle against Babylon is probably to be dated to the period just before the fall of Babylon to the Persians in 539 B.C. (v. 9).

21:1 Wastelands by the sea: Babylonia. Negeb: the wilderness south of Judah.

21:2 Elam . . . Media: nations which, under the leadership of Cyrus, captured Babylon in 539 B.C. End to all its groaning: those who were captive of Babylon will be freed.

21:5 Babylon is destroyed while its leaders are feasting; cf. Dn 5. Oil the shield: shields were oiled and greased so as to divert blows more easily; cf. 2 Sm 1:21.

21:11–12 Dumah: an oasis in north Arabia (cf. Gn 25:14 and 1 Chr 1:30), may be identified with the north Arabian Adummatu mentioned in Assyrian records of Sennacherib’s campaign against north Arabia. Seir: a site in Edom. The Edomites ask the prophet how much longer they must suffer (“the night” of suffering); he answers ambiguously: “Liberation (“morning”) and further suffering (“night”),” but perhaps they will later receive a more encouraging answer (“ask; come back again”).

21:13–14 In the steppe: the north Arabian steppe where the oases referred to were located. Dedanites: a north Arabian tribe associated with the oasis of Tema; cf. Gn 10:7; 25:3; Jer 25:23.

21:16 Year . . . of a hired laborer: see note on 16:13–14. Kedar: a nomadic tribe in Arabia; cf. 42:11; 60:7; Ps 120:5.

22:1–14 The title “oracle on the valley of vision,” like the other oracle headings in chaps. 13–23, was supplied by an editor and is taken from v. 5. In all probability it relates to the events of 701, the lifting of Sennacherib’s siege of Jerusalem. The death of the Assyrian king Sargon II in 705 occasioned the revolt of many of the vassal nations subject to Assyria, a revolt in which Hezekiah joined, over Isaiah's bitter opposition. The biblical and other data concerning the outcome of this adventure are conflicting and confusing. While 2 Kgs 19 (Is 37) tells of a miraculous deliverance of the city after the siege had been renewed, Assyrian documents and 2 Kgs 18:13–16 report that Sennacherib, Sargon II's successor, devastated Judah (the destruction of 46 cities is mentioned in Assyrian records); Hezekiah had to surrender and paid Sennacherib a heavy indemnity, taken from the Temple treasury and adornments. The inhabitants of Jerusalem apparently took the lifting of the siege as occasion for great rejoicing, a response that Isaiah condemns. They should be mourning the dead and learning that their confidence in allies rather than in the Lord leads to disaster.

22:2–3 The retreat of Judah's soldiers is a further reason that rejoicing is not in order.

22:5 Valley of Vision: frequently identified as the Hinnom Valley, west of Jerusalem.

22:6 Elam . . . Kir: the Assyrian forces presumably included auxiliary troops from various places.

22:8 Shelter over Judah is removed: the reference is obscure; it has been suggested that Judah's protection was Jerusalem itself, and with the fall of the city the country was exposed. House of the Forest: an armory built by Solomon; its columns of wood suggested the trees of a forest; cf. 1 Kgs 7:2; 10:17.

22:9–11 Frenetic efforts made to fortify the city before the impending siege; cf. 2 Kgs 20:20; 2 Chr 32:3–4, 30. Some suggest that the description of these preparations comes from the time of Nebuchadnezzar's assault on Jerusalem in 588. You did not look to the city's Maker: Isaiah here makes the crucial point. Jerusalem's safety lay not in military forces nor in alliances with other nations nor in playing power politics but in the Lord, here presented as the creator and founder of the city. Isaiah may be alluding to the belief that the city was inviolable.

22:15 Shebna: by the time of the siege of Jerusalem in 36:3, Shebna, the scribe, no longer held the office of master of the palace.

22:16 What is probably Shebna's inscribed tomb has been discovered in the village of Silwan on the eastern slope of Jerusalem.

22:20 Eliakim: by the time of the events described in 36:3, Eliakim had replaced Shebna as master of the palace.

22:22 Key: symbol of authority; cf. Mt 16:19; Rev 3:7.

22:24–25 Apparently Eliakim proved to be a disappointment, so an oracle of judgment was added to the originally positive oracle to Eliakim.

23:1–17 This oracle, a satire directed against the Phoenician cities of Tyre and Sidon, is perhaps to be situated at the time of Sennacherib's campaign against the Phoenician cities in 701 B.C., following his subjugation of their Babylonian allies in 703 B.C.

23:1 Kittim: Cyprus. The Hebrew word is derived from the term for the well-known city of Cyprus, Kition. In later centuries the term Kittim is used for the Greeks, the Romans, and other distant peoples.

23:3 Shihor: a synonym for the Nile.

23:4 The sea: here personified, it brings to distant coasts the news that Sidon must disown her children; her people are dispersed.

23:6–7 Tarshish: perhaps Tartessus in Spain. Distant lands: the reference is to the far-flung colonies established by the Phoenicians throughout the Mediterranean, including North Africa, Spain, and Sardinia. Oceangoing vessels were therefore called Tarshish ships.

23:11 Canaan's strongholds: the fortresses of Phoenicia.

23:13 The reference here seems to be to Assyria's subjugation of Babylon in 703 B.C., which left the coastal cities of Phoenicia as well as Judah open to Sennacherib's invasion in 701 B.C. Founded it . . . its palaces . . . turn it: the city of Babylon.

23:15 Seventy years: a conventional expression for a long period of time; cf. Jer 25:11 and 29:10.

23:17–18 Her hire . . . prostitute: the international trade engaged in by Tyre will become a source of wealth to God's people (cf. 45:14; 60:4–14; Zec 14:14).

24:1–27:13 Although it has become traditional to call these chapters “Apocalypse of Isaiah,” and although they do contain some apocalyptic traits, many others are lacking, so that the title is imprecise as a designation. These chapters are not a unified composition and their growth into their present form was a long, complicated process. They echo many themes from chaps. 13–23, “Oracles Against the Foreign Nations,” as well as from earlier parts of Isaiah (e.g., the reversal of the “vineyard song,” 5:1–7, in 27:2–5). Of particular interest is an unnamed city (24:10–13; 25:2; 26:5–6; 27:10–11), a wicked city, doomed to destruction; to the extent that it is identifiable, it may be Babylon, but more generally it symbolizes all forces hostile to God. And it stands in contrast to another city, also unnamed but no doubt to be identified with Jerusalem (26:1–2).

24:1–23 The world is about to be shaken by a devastating judgment that will overthrow both the human and divine enemies of the Lord, who will then reign in glory over his people on Mount Zion.

24:5 Ancient covenant: God's commandments to all humankind (cf. Gn 9:4–6).

24:10 City of chaos: a godless city which appears several times in chaps. 24–27; see note on 24:1–27:13.

24:14 These: the saved.

24:21 Host of the heavens: the stars, which were often regarded as gods; cf. Dt 4:19; Jer 8:2.

24:23 The elders: the tradition in Ex 24:9–11 suggests that this refers to the people of God who are to share in the banquet on Mount Zion (Is 25:6–8).

25:1–9 These verses praise God for carrying out his plan to destroy the enemy and to save the poor of his people in Zion (14:32), and they announce the victory banquet to be celebrated in the Lord's city.

25:6 This mountain: i.e., Jerusalem's mountain, Zion.

25:10–12 Moab: one of Israel's bitterest enemies.

26:1–19 This text is a mixture of praise for the salvation that will take place, a confession of Judah's inability to achieve deliverance on its own, and earnest prayer that God may quickly bring about the longed-for salvation.

26:1 Strong city: Jerusalem, the antithesis of the “city of chaos” (24:10); see note on 24:1–27:13.

26:19 This verse refers not to resurrection of the dead, but to the restoration of the people; cf. Ez 37. The population of Judah was radically reduced by the slaughter and deportations that the historical disasters of the late eighth and seventh centuries B.C. brought upon the country. In this context, a major concern for the future was for an increase in the population, a rebirth of the nation's life.

26:20–21 The time of wrath for Judah would soon be over, and the just punishment of its enemies would begin (cf. Hb 2:1–3).

27:1 Leviathan . . . dragon: the description of Leviathan is almost identical to a passage from a much earlier Ugaritic text. The sea dragon became a symbol of the forces of evil which God vanquishes even as he overcame primeval chaos; cf. notes on 30:7; 51:9–10; Jb 3:8; 7:12; no power can challenge God. Leviathan is even spoken of playfully in Ps 104:26.

27:2–5 This passage mitigates the harsh words on Israel as the Lord's vineyard in 5:1–7; here is given the rain there withheld, though Israel's welfare is still made dependent on fidelity.

27:7–9 Israel was not treated as sternly as were its enemies whom God used to punish it. God did, however, drive Israel from its land, and if it wants to make peace with God, it must change its former cultic practices, destroying its altars and sacred groves (cf. 17:7–11).

27:12 Gleaned: God will harvest his people who have been scattered from Assyria to Egypt. Note the same language of gleaning to describe the remnant of the Northern Kingdom in 17:5–6.

27:13 The remnant of Israel will return to Jerusalem for worship; cf. 11:10–16.

28:1–6 These verses once constituted an independent oracle against the Northern Kingdom, probably originally spoken during the time between its overthrow by Assyria in 732 and its destruction in 722/721. Isaiah has reused them as an introduction to his oracle against Judah (vv. 7–22), because the leaders of Judah were guilty of the same excesses that had once marked Ephraim's leadership.

28:1 Ephraim: the Northern Kingdom. Its capital, Samaria, was built upon a hill, suggestive of a majestic garland adorning a human head. The characterization of the leadership of Ephraim as drunken underscores its inattention to justice and good government (cf. 5:11–13; Am 6:1–6).

28:2 A strong one, a mighty one: Assyria (cf. 8:7–8).

28:9–10 The words of those who ridicule Isaiah. The Hebrew of v. 10, by its very sound, conveys the idea of mocking imitation of what the prophet says, as though he spoke like a stammering child: “sau lasau, sau lasau, kau lakau, kau lakau, ze'er sham, ze'er sham.” But in v. 13 God repeats these words in deadly earnest, putting them in the mouth of the victorious Assyrian army.

28:11 God will answer the mockers and defend Isaiah. Strange language: spoken by the invading army.

28:14 Who rule: there is a play on words; the same expression could also mean, “Proverb makers,” that is, scoffers of this people.

28:15, 18 A covenant with death, with Sheol: an alliance with foreign powers, such as Egypt and Babylon. Have made lies . . . a hiding place: this confidence in human aid will prove to be false and deceitful, incapable of averting the dreaded disaster. Raging flood: the Assyrian invasion; cf. 8:7–8.

28:16 Astone in Zion: the true and sure foundation of salvation, i.e., the presence of God, who had chosen and founded Zion as his city (Ps 78:68–69; Is 14:32) and had chosen the Davidic dynasty to rule over his people (Ps 78:70–72; Is 9:1–6; 11:1–10). Cornerstone: the assurance of salvation, rejected by the people of Judah in the prophet's time, is picked up in Ps 118:22 and later applied to Christ; cf. Mt 21:42; Lk 20:17; Acts 4:11; Rom 9:33; 1 Pt 2:7. Chapters 28–31 alternate between threats of the danger of rebelling against Assyria (with implied trust in Egypt) with assurances of the power and protection of the Lord.

28:17 Line . . . level: instruments used in constructing a building, to keep it true. They are used metaphorically here to refer to the qualities that Zion, the city of God, must manifest, judgment and justice, not bloodshed (Mi 3:10), nor deceit and violence, which would result in a bulging unstable wall doomed to destruction (Is 30:12–14). Cf. 1 Cor 3:10–17.

28:21 Mount Perazim . . . Valley of Gibeon: where David defeated the Philistines; cf. 2 Sm 5:20, 25; 1 Chr 14:11, 16. God's new work will be strange, because instead of fighting for Judah as the Lord did in David's time, God will now fight against Jerusalem (see 29:1–4).

28:23–29 The practical variation of the farmer's work reflects the way God deals with his people, wisely adapted to circumstances; he does not altogether crush them in their weakness.

28:25 Caraway . . . cumin: herbs used in seasoning food. Spelt: a variety of wheat.

29:1–2 Ariel: a poetic name for Jerusalem. It has been variously interpreted to mean “lion of God,” “altar hearth of God” (Ez 43:15–16), “city of God,” or “foundation of God.” In v. 2 the term refers to “altar hearth,” i.e., a place of burning for its people (cf. 30:33; 31:9). God will attack Jerusalem, as David did long ago.

29:7–8 Just when the attackers think their capture of Jerusalem is certain, the Lord will snatch victory from their hands and save the city. The sudden shift from the Lord's attack on the city to its deliverance by him is surprising and unexplained; it may reflect the account related in 37:36.

29:9–16 Despite their show of piety, Judah's leaders refused to accept the prophet's words of assurance. They rejected prophetic advice (cf. 30:10–11), did not consult the prophetic oracle in forming their political plans (30:1–2; 31:1), and tried to hide their plans even from God's prophet (v. 15), who, they thought, simply did not understand military and political reality.

29:10 Prophets . . . seers: interpretive glosses.

29:17–24 The prophet presents the positive aspects of God’s plan in terms of a series of reversals: an end to pride, ignorance, and injustice. Cf. 32:3–5.

29:22 Who redeemed Abraham: perhaps by revealing himself and delivering Abraham from idolatrous worship; cf. Gn 12:1–3; 17:1; Jos 24:2–3.

30:1–17 Several independent oracles against making an alliance with Egypt have been strung together in this chapter: vv. 1–5, vv. 6–7, and vv. 8–17. That these were originally separate oracles is indicated by the fact that the oracle in vv. 6–7 is still introduced by its own heading: Oracle on the Beasts of the Negeb.

30:1 Make an alliance: lit., “pour out a libation,” namely, as part of the ritual of treaty making.

30:2 Without asking my counsel: it was a practice to consult God through the prophets or through the priestly oracle before making a major political decision (1 Sm 23:1–12; 1 Kgs 22:5), but Judah’s leadership, in its concern for security, was apparently trying to keep its plan for a treaty with Egypt secret even from the prophets, thus implicitly from God (29:15).

30:6 Distressed . . . land: the wilderness between Judah and Egypt, through which Judahite messengers had to pass, carrying their tribute to Egypt to buy assistance in the struggle against Assyria. Flying saraph: see notes on 6:2; 14:29.

30:7 Here as elsewhere (cf. Ps 87:4) Egypt is compared to Rahab, the raging, destructive sea monster (cf. Is 51:9; Jb 26:12; Ps 89:11); yet Egypt, when asked for aid by Judah, becomes silent and “sits still.”

30:8 Isaiah will write down his condemnation of the foolish policy pursued so that the truth of his warning of its dire consequences (vv. 12–17) may afterward be recognized.

30:10 Seers . . . prophets: the two terms are synonyms for prophetic figures such as Isaiah (1:1; 2:1; 6:1, 5). There is wordplay between the nouns and their cognate verbs, both of which mean “to see.” The authorities are depicted as forbidding prophets to contradict their secret political and military policies.

30:20 Teacher: God, who in the past made the people blind and deaf through the prophetic message (6:9–10) and who in his anger hid his face from the house of Jacob (8:17), shall in the future help them to understand his teaching clearly (cf. Jer 31:34).

30:27–33 God’s punishment of Assyria. The name of the LORD: here, God himself; cf. Ps 20:2.

30:33 Tophet: a site, near Jerusalem, where children were sacrificed by fire to Molech (2 Kgs 23:10), and where, probably, Ahaz sacrificed his son (2 Kgs 16:3). Here, Isaiah speaks of “his tophet,” the site prepared for burning up the king of Assyria. King: there seems to be a play on words between the Heb. word for king (melek) and the name Molech. This defeat of Assyria becomes the occasion for Israel’s festal rejoicing (v. 32).

31:1 Seek the LORD: a technical expression for seeking a prophetic or priestly oracle, similar to the expression “asking my counsel” in 30:2. The prophet complains that Judah has decided on its policy of alliance with Egypt without first consulting the Lord.

31:9 Crag: the king as the rallying point of the princes. Panic: terror is an element of Israel’s holy war tradition, in which defeat of the enemy is accomplished by the Lord rather than by human means (cf. v. 8).

32:14 The castle: the fortified royal palace in Jerusalem. Citadel: Ophel, the fortified hill, with its stronghold called “the great projecting tower” (Neh 3:27).

32:15–18, 20 Extraordinary peace and prosperity will come to Israel under just rulers.

32:19 Probably from a different context, perhaps after v. 14a.

33:1–24 After an introductory address to Assyria (v. 1), there follows a prayer on behalf of Jerusalem which recalls what God had done in the past (vv. 2–6) and a description of the present situation (vv. 7–9). In response, the Lord announces a judgment on Assyria (vv. 10–12) that will lead to the purification of Jerusalem's inhabitants (vv. 13–16). The text ends with an idealized portrait of the redeemed Jerusalem of the future (vv. 17–24).

33:7 Ariel . . . Shalem: Jerusalem; cf. 29:1; Gn 14:18; Ps 76:3. There is a play on words between “Shalem,” the city name, and shalom, Heb. for “peace.”

33:9 Sharon: the fertile plain near the Mediterranean.

33:17 King: either the ideal Davidic king or God; cf. v. 22.

33:21–23 Galley . . . majestic ship: of a foreign oppressor. Though the broad streams of the future Jerusalem will make it accessible by boat, no foreign invader will succeed in a naval attack on the city, for the Lord will protect it, the enemy fleet will be disabled, and even the weakest inhabitants will gather much plunder from the defeated enemy.

34:1–35:10 These two chapters form a small collection which looks forward to the vindication of Zion, first by defeat of its enemies (chap. 34), then by its restoration (chap. 35). They are generally judged to be later than the time of Isaiah (eighth century), perhaps during the Babylonian exile or thereafter; they are strongly influenced by Deutero-Isaiah (sixth century). In places they reflect themes from other parts of the Isaian collection.

34:8–17 The extreme hostility against Edom in this passage is reflected in a number of other prophetic texts from the seventh and sixth centuries B.C. (cf. e.g., 63:1–6; Jer 49:7–22; Ez 25:12–14). The animus was probably prompted by Edomite infiltration of the southern territories of Judah, especially after the Babylonian conquest of Judah.

34:11 Chaos . . . confusion: tohu . . . bohu in Hebrew, the terms used to describe the primeval chaos in Gn 1:2.

34:14 Satyrs: see note on 13:21. The lilith: a female demon thought to roam about the desert.

34:16 Book of the LORD: a list of God's creatures; cf. Ex 32:32–33; Ps 69:29, “the book of the living”; Ps 139:16, “your book.”

34:17 Casts the lot . . . measures off: an ironic reference to how land might be distributed to new possessors (cf. Jos 14–21; Mi 2:5).

35:1–10 This chapter contains a number of themes similar to those in Deutero-Isaiah (chaps. 40–55), for example, the blossoming of the wilderness (vv. 1–2; cf. 41:18–19), which is now well-irrigated (v. 7; cf. 43:19–20); sight to the blind (vv. 5–6; cf. 42:7, 16); a highway in the wilderness (v. 8; cf. 41:3); and the return of the redeemed/ransomed to Zion (vv. 9–10; cf. 51:11). Nevertheless, it forms a unit with chap. 34 (see note on 34:1–35:10) and reflects, along with that chapter, themes found in chaps. 1–33.

36:1–39:8 Except for 38:9–20 (Hezekiah's prayer of thanksgiving), this historical appendix describing the siege, etc., is paralleled in 2 Kgs 18:13–20:19, which, however, has certain details proper to itself. The events are also reflected in the cuneiform inscriptions of Sennacherib.

36:1 The occasion for this Assyrian attack was Hezekiah's attempt to reject Judah's status as vassal to Assyria, relying on help from Egypt, a course of action condemned by Isaiah (see notes on 28:15, 18; 28:16; 29:7–8; 30:1–17; etc.). 2 Kgs 19:14–16 reports that Hezekiah surrendered to the Assyrians and paid the tribute imposed on him—a report omitted in the Isaiah text.

36:7 The Assyrians assert that Hezekiah's removal of the high places and altars (unofficial sanctuaries) was taken by the Lord as an insult. They declare to Jerusalem's emissaries that the city therefore no longer has a right to the Lord's protection and that they are the ones who truly carry out his will (cf. v. 10).

36:11 The emissaries of King Hezekiah ask that the conversation be carried on in Aramaic, not in Hebrew, for they fear the effect of the Assyrian claims upon the morale of the people.

37:1–35 There appear to be parallel accounts of Hezekiah's appeal and the response received (vv. 1–7 and vv. 14–35): in each, Hezekiah goes to the Temple, refers to the Assyrian boasts (found in 36:15–20; 37:10–14), and receives a favorable response from Isaiah.

37:3 A proverbial expression. In the Bible the pangs of childbirth often typify extreme anguish; cf. 13:8; Jer 6:24; Mi 4:9–10. In this instance there is reference to the desperate situation of Hezekiah from which he would scarcely be able to free himself.

37:9 Tirhakah: may have been general of the Egyptian army in 701 B.C.; later he became Pharaoh, one of the Ethiopian dynasty of Egyptian kings (ca. 690–664 B.C.). Many consider that this account in Isaiah combines features of two originally distinct sieges of Jerusalem by Sennacherib.

37:16 In contrast to the empty boasting of the Assyrians, Hezekiah proclaims the Lord as “God over all the kingdoms of the earth.”

37:21–37 The reversal of Isaiah’s attitude toward Hezekiah’s revolt (see note on 36:1) and a wonderful deliverance after Hezekiah had already submitted and paid tribute raise questions difficult to answer. See note on 22:1–14. Some have postulated that chaps. 36–37 combine accounts of two different Assyrian invasions.

37:30 A sign: sets a time limit. After two years the normal conditions of life will be resumed. See the similar use of time limits as signs in 7:15–16; 8:4; 16:14; and 21:16. You: Hezekiah.

37:36 The destruction of Sennacherib’s army is also recorded by Herodotus, a Greek historian of the fifth century B.C. It was possibly owing to a plague, which the author interprets as God’s activity.

37:38 The violent death of Sennacherib (681 B.C.) is also mentioned in non-biblical sources. It occurred twenty years after his invasion of Judah. Ararat: the land of Urartu in the mountains north of Assyria.

38:1–39:8 The events of this section—sickness and recovery of Hezekiah, embassy of Merodach-baladan—anticipate the rise of Babylon (chaps. 40–66). They occurred prior to the events of 36:1–37:38, which point back to Assyria (1:1–35:10).

38:1 In those days: before the siege of Jerusalem in 701 B.C.

38:5 Since Hezekiah died in 687 B.C., his sickness may have occurred in 702 B.C., that is, fifteen years before.

38:8 Stairway to the terrace of Ahaz: this interpretation is based on a reading of the Hebrew text revised according to the Dead Sea Scroll of Isaiah; cf. 2 Kgs 23:12. Many translate the phrase as “steps of Ahaz” and understand this as referring to a sundial.

38:10 In the noontime of life: long before the end of a full span of life; cf. Ps 55:24; 102:25.

38:11 See the LORD: go to the Temple and take part in its service.

38:12 These two metaphors emphasize the suddenness and finality of death.

38:15–16 The Hebrew text is very problematic and its meaning uncertain.

38:17 Behind your back you cast all my sins: figurative language to express the divine forgiveness of sins, as if God no longer saw or cared about them.

38:18–19 See note on Ps 6:6.

38:21–22 These verses are clearly out of place. Logically they should come after v. 6, as they do in the parallel account in 2 Kgs 20, but the two accounts are not identical, and it appears that the version in Isaiah is abbreviated from that in Kings. If that is so, Is 38:21–22 would be a secondary addition from Kings, inserted by a later reader who thought the account incomplete.

39:1 Merodach-baladan: twice king of Babylon, probably from 721 to 710 B.C., and again for nine months, in 704–703. This visit of his messengers, certainly before 701, was in reality a political one. Babylon hoped to lead an anti-Assyrian confederation composed of neighboring states and wanted Judah to join.

39:6 Because Judah preferred to follow a pro-Babylonian policy, instead of trusting in the Lord, it would later be exiled to Babylon.

39:8 Hezekiah was relieved that the disaster would not occur in his lifetime.

40:1–55:13 Chapters 40–55 are usually designated Second Isaiah (or Deutero-Isaiah) and are believed to have been written by an anonymous prophet toward the end of the Babylonian exile.

Isaiah, who is named frequently in chaps. 1–39, does not appear here; the Assyrians, the great threat during the eighth century, hardly appear; the Judeans are in Babylon, having been taken there by the victorious Babylonians; Cyrus, the Persian king, is named; he will defeat Babylon and release the captives. Second Isaiah, who sees this not as a happy circumstance but as part of God’s age-old plan, exhorts the Judeans to resist the temptations of Babylonian religion and stirs up hopes of an imminent return to Judah, where the Lord will again be acknowledged as King (52:7). Because the prophet proclaimed the triumph of Persia over Babylon, his message would have been considered seditious, and it is very likely for this reason that the collection would have circulated anonymously. At some point it was appended to Is 1–39 and consequently was long considered the work of Isaiah of Jerusalem of the eighth century. But the fact that it is addressed to Judean exiles in Babylon indicates a sixth-century date. Nevertheless, this eloquent prophet in many ways works within the tradition of Isaiah and develops themes found in the earlier chapters, such as the holiness of the Lord (cf. note on 1:4) and his lordship of history. Second Isaiah also develops other Old Testament themes, such as the Lord as Israel’s redeemer or deliverer (cf. Ex 3:8; 6:6; 15:13; 18:8).

40:1 The “voices” of vv. 3, 6 are members of the heavenly court addressing the prophet; then v. 1 can be understood as the Lord addressing them. It is also possible to translate, with the Vulgate, “Comfort, give comfort, O my people” (i.e., the exiles are called to comfort Jerusalem). The juxtaposition of “my people” and “your God” recalls the covenant formula.

40:2 Service: servitude (cf. Jb 7:1) and exile.

40:3–5 A description of the return of the exiles from Babylon to Jerusalem (Zion). The language used here figuratively describes the way the exiles will take. The Lord leads them, so their way lies straight across the wilderness rather than along the well-watered routes usually followed from Mesopotamia to Israel. Mt 3:3 and gospel parallels adapt these verses to the witness of John the Baptizer to Jesus.

40:9 Herald of good news: i.e., of the imminent restoration of the people to their land. This theme of the proclamation of the good news occurs elsewhere in Second Isaiah; cf. also 41:27; 52:7.

40:12 The implicit answer is “the hand of the LORD” (v. 2). Waters . . . heavens . . . earth: together form the universe; cf. Gn 1:1–2. Span: the distance between the extended little finger and the thumb. Fingers: lit., “three fingers” (i.e., thumb, index, and middle).

40:15 Drop . . . wisp of cloud . . . a speck: the smallest constituent parts of the cosmic waters, heavens, and earth mentioned in v. 12.

40:16 Lebanon . . . fuel: the famed cedars would not be enough to keep the fires of sacrifice burning.

40:19 Chains: needed to hold the idol steady when carried in processions; cf. v. 20; Jer 10:4.

40:26 Created: see note on Gn 1:1–2:3. By name: for he is their Creator.

40:27–28 The exiles, here called Jacob-Israel (Gn 32:29), must not give way to discouragement: their Lord is the eternal God.

41:1–4 Earlier prophets had spoken of the Assyrians and Babylonians as the Lord’s instruments for the punishment of Israel’s sins; here the Lord is described as raising up and giving victory to a foreign ruler in order to deliver Israel from the Babylonian exile. The ruler is Cyrus (44:28; 45:1), king of Anshan in Persia, a vassal of the Babylonians. He rebelled against the Babylonian overlords in 556 B.C., and after a series of victories, entered Babylon as victor in 539; the following year he issued a decree which allowed the Jewish captives to return to their homeland (2 Chr 36:22–23; Ezr 1:1–4). For Second Isaiah, the meteoric success of Cyrus was the work of the Lord to accomplish the deliverance promised by earlier prophets.

41:4 The first . . . the last: God as the beginning and end encompasses all reality. The same designation is used in 44:6 and 48:12.

41:14 Redeemer: in Hebrew, go’el, one who frees others from slavery and avenges their sufferings; cf. Lv 25:48; Dt 19:6, 12. Cf. note on Ru 2:20.

41:21–29 This indictment of Babylonian gods is patterned on a legal trial, in which they are challenged to prove power over events of history and so justify their status as gods (vv. 21–24). Israel’s God, on the other hand, has foretold and now brings to pass Israel’s deliverance (vv. 25–27). The accused are unable to respond (vv. 28–29). By such polemics (see also 43:12) the prophet declares that all gods other than the Lord are nonexistent; this implicit claim of monotheism later becomes explicit (see 43:10–11; 45:5–7, 14, 18, 21–22; 46:9; and note on 44:6).

41:22 Things of long ago . . . things to come: there are no predictions attributed to idols that have since been fulfilled. Second Isaiah makes frequent reference to “things of long ago,” sometimes in conjunction with “things to come” or “new things” in connection with the Lord’s activity (cf. 42:9; 43:9, 18; 46:9–10; 48:3–8); both the old things (e.g., creation, exodus) and the new things (release from exile) God brings to pass (cf. 51:9–11), which is why he can declare them beforehand.

41:251 summon him: Cyrus.

42:1–4 Servant: three other passages have been popularly called “servant of the Lord” poems: 49:1–7; 50:4–11; 52:13–53:12. Whether the servant is an individual or a collectivity is not clear (e.g., contrast 49:3 with 49:5). More important is the description of the mission of the servant. In the early Church and throughout Christian tradition, these poems have been applied to Christ; cf. Mt 12:18–21.

42:3 Bruised reed . . . : images to express the gentle manner of the servant’s mission.

42:4 Coastlands: for Israel, the world to the west: the islands and coastal nations of the Mediterranean.

42:11 Kedar: cf. note on 21:16. Sela: Petra, the capital of Edom.

42:15–16 Active once more, God will remove the obstacles that hinder the exiles’ return, and will lead them by new roads to Jerusalem; cf. 40:3–4.

42:18–20 The Lord rebukes his people for their failures, but their role and their mission endure: they remain his servant, his messenger to the nations.

42:22 A people: Israel in exile.

42:24 Plunderers: the Assyrians and Babylonians. We . . . they: the switch from first- to third-person speech, though puzzling, does not obscure the fact that “the people” is meant.

43:3–4 Egypt . . . Ethiopia and Seba: countries which God permitted the Persians to conquer in return for having given Israel its freedom.

43:9 Who among them . . . ?: God, and only God, can foretell the future because it is he who brings it to pass. The argument from prediction is an important theme in Second Isaiah and occurs also in 41:22; 43:10; 44:7–8, 26.

43:10 You are my witnesses: Israel’s role as chosen people now takes a new turn as they are given the active role of bearing witness before humankind to the Lord’s role in history by proclaiming events beforehand and bringing them to pass; see also 44:8. The false gods, on the other hand, cannot produce such witnesses (v. 9; cf. 44:9). I am he: this formula of self-identification, repeated in vv. 13 and 25, is used here to support the assertion that the Lord alone is God; see also 41:4; 46:4; 48:12; 51:12; 52:6. This expression in part may be behind the self-identification formula used by Jesus in John’s gospel (cf. Jn 8:58). Before . . . after: another example of the same assertion, that the Lord alone is God; see also note on 44:6.

43:14–17 The destruction of Babylon is described in language that recalls the drowning of the Egyptian army in the Red Sea (Ex 14–15).

43:18 Remember not: God’s new act of delivering Israel from the Babylonian captivity is presented as so great a marvel as to eclipse even the memory of the exodus from Egypt. This comparison of the return from Babylon to the exodus from Egypt recurs throughout Second Isaiah (cf. 41:17–20; 43:18–21; 48:20–21; 49:8–13; 51:9–11).

43:22–28 The reason for the liberation of the Israelites is not their constancy but rather God’s faithfulness to his promise (cf. 40:6–8).

43:24 Sweet cane: a fragrant substance used in making incense and the sacred anointing oil; cf. Ex 30:23; Jer 6:20.

43:27 First father: Jacob. Spokesmen: leaders, priests, prophets.

44:2 Jeshurun: see note on Dt 32:15; cf. also Dt 33:5, 26.

44:5 Write on his hand: an allusion to the Babylonian custom of tattooing the owner's name on the hand of his slave.

44:6–8 Prediction and fulfillment are here seen as the hallmarks of true divinity. See note on 43:9.

44:6 No god but me: with Second Isaiah, Israel's faith is declared to be explicitly monotheistic. However implicit it may have been, earlier formulas did not exclude the existence of other gods, not even that of the first commandment: "You shall not have other gods besides me" (Ex 20:3). Cf. also note on 41:21–29.

44:8 Rock: place of refuge, a title here used of God; cf., e.g., Dt 32:4, 18; 1 Sm 2:2; Ps 18:3.

44:9–20 A satire on the makers and worshipers of idols.

44:9 Their witnesses: Israel has been called to bear witness to the awesome power of God (cf. 43:10, 12; 44:8), but idol makers cannot testify in support of their creations, for idols cannot act (Dt 4:28; Ps 135:15–18).

44:13 Copy of a man: in the biblical view human beings are made in the image of God; here gods are made in the image of human beings.

44:20 Chasing ashes: an exercise in futility.

44:28 Cyrus: king of Persia (559–529 B.C.); cf. note on 41:1–4.

45:1 Anointed: in Hebrew, mashiah, from which the word "Messiah" is derived; from its Greek translation, Christos, we have the title "Christ." Applied to kings, "anointed" originally referred only to those of Israel, but it is here given to Cyrus because he is the agent of the Lord.

45:2 Bronze doors: those defending the city gates of Babylon.

45:6 The nations will come to know that Israel's God is the only God; cf. also vv. 20–25.

45:7 Create woe: God created and controls all aspects of creation (light and darkness, order and chaos).

45:8 The Vulgate rendering gave a messianic sense to this verse, using "just one" and "savior" in place of "justice" and "salvation," phraseology taken over in the Advent liturgy, e.g., the "Rorate coeli."

45:9 No one may challenge God's freedom of action, exemplified here by the selection of Cyrus as his anointed.

45:13 Him: Cyrus, called by God for the deliverance and restoration of Israel. Justice: the Hebrew word (sedeq) has multiple connotations; here it relates to the saving victory that the Lord will give to Cyrus for the deliverance of his people Israel. This word and others from the same root frequently have this connotation in Second Isaiah, occurring as a parallel term with "deliverance," "salvation," etc. Cf. its use in 41:10 (rendered "victorious") and 51:5 (rendered "victory").

45:14 Egypt . . . Ethiopia . . . Sabeans: the Egyptians and their allies who, when conquered by Cyrus, are seen as acknowledging the God of Israel; cf. 43:3.

45:15 God is hidden: i.e., the one known only to Israel, who cannot be represented by wooden or molten images. The concept of the "Deus absconditus," "the hidden God," becomes an important theme in later theology.

45:18 Empty waste: an allusion to Gn 1:2, where the earth is waste and void; the same Hebrew word, tohu, is used in both passages. Here it points to devastated Judah and Jerusalem, where God wishes to resettle the returning exiles.

45:20 Who bear wooden idols: in their religious processions. Such gods have feet but cannot walk; cf. Ps 115:7; Bar 6:25.

46:1–4 Bel . . . Nebo: gods of Babylon; their complete helplessness is here contrasted with God's omnipotence; whereas they must be carried about, the Lord carries Israel as a parent does a child.

46:11 From the east a bird of prey: Cyrus; cf. 41:2–4.

47:1–15 A taunt-song, mocking Babylon, once queen of the nations, now a mere slave.

47:8, 10 I, and no one else: Babylon is mockingly presented as making the same claim as the Lord (cf. 45:6, 14, 22; 46:9), a claim that events will soon prove to be false and foolish (v. 11).

47:9–13, 15 Babylon was known for its sorcery and astrology.

48:14 The one the LORD loves: the reference is no doubt to Cyrus, who does the Lord's will by overcoming Babylon and releasing Israel from captivity.

48:16 "Now the LORD . . . spirit": said by Cyrus; cf. v. 14.

48:22 No peace: while the good news proclaimed by the prophet is directed to the people as a whole, "peace," which can represent the fullness of God's blessings and which would here include deliverance from exile, is not extended to all regardless of disposition.

49:1–7 The second of the four "servant of the Lord" oracles (cf. note on 42:1–4).

49:1 Gave me my name: designated me for a special task or mission (cf. Jer 1:5).

49:3 Israel: the servant is identified with the people of Israel as their ideal representative; however, vv. 5–6 seem to distinguish the servant from Israel.

49:6 The servant's vocation extends beyond the restoration of Israel in order to bring the knowledge of Israel's God to the rest of the earth; cf. Lk 2:32.

49:8 You: the individual is not named; perhaps Cyrus or the prophet.

49:12 Syene: now called Aswan, at the first cataract of the Nile in southern Egypt.

49:16 Upon the palms . . . you: for continual remembrance; cf. Ex 13:9, 16; Dt 6:6–9.

50:1 Responding to the people's complaint of utter abandonment by God, the prophet asserts that their sins were responsible for their banishment. Since there was no bill of divorce, the bond between the Lord and his people still exists and he has the power to deliver them (v. 2).

50:2 Israel's faith in God is weak; the people do not answer God's call, nor believe promises of deliverance.

50:4–11 The third of the four "servant of the Lord" oracles (cf. note on 42:1–4); in vv. 4–9 the servant speaks; in vv. 10–11 God addresses the people directly.

50:5 The servant, like a well-trained disciple, does not refuse the divine vocation.

50:6 He willingly submits to insults and beatings. Tore out my beard: a grave and painful insult.

50:10–11 The Lord offers a choice to those who walk in darkness: either trust in the true light (v. 10), or walk in their false light and suffer the consequences.

51:1 Rock . . . quarry: your glorious ancestry.

51:4–5 The conversion of the nations.

51:6 While the heavens and the earth appear eternal and changeless, they are not so firm and lasting as God's saving will for Israel.

51:9 Rahab: see note on 30:7. The dragon: see notes on 27:1; Ps 74:12–17.

51:10 Great deep: a reference to the primeval chaos (cf. Gn 1:2; 7:11; 49:25; Jb 28:14; Ps 36:7; Jon 2:4).

52:7–10 God leads the people back from Babylon to Zion, from whose ruined walls sentinels greet the returning exiles.

52:11 From there: from Babylon. Vessels of the LORD: taken to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, now carried back by the exiles returning in procession to Zion; cf. Ezr 1:7.

52:13–53:12 The last of the "servant of the Lord" oracles (see note on 42:1–4). Taken together, these oracles depict a figure of one called by God for a vocation to Israel and the nations (42:4; 49:5–6); the servant's exaltation both opens and closes the passage (52:13; 53:12). The servant responded in fidelity but has suffered opposition (50:4–6). In this fourth oracle the servant is characterized as “a man of suffering” (53:3) and appears to be unjustly put to death (53:8–9). Those who have witnessed his career somehow recognize that he is innocent, has undergone suffering for their sins (53:4–6), and his death is referred to as a reparation offering (see note on 53:10–11). The servant is described in ways that identify him with Israel (which is frequently referred to as “servant” in the context of Second Isaiah—e.g., 41:8, 9; 44:2, 21; 43:4) and is designated as “Israel” in 49:3; yet Israel outside the “servant of the Lord” oracles is not presented as sinless, but rather in exile because of sin (40:2; 42:21–25) and even as servant as deaf and blind (42:18–19). The servant is thus both identified with Israel and distinguished from it. As with the previous servant poems, this chapter helped the followers of Jesus to interpret his suffering, death, and resurrection; see especially the passion narratives.

53:1–10 What we have heard: this fourth servant oracle is introduced by words of the Lord (52:13–15) but is now continued by speakers who are not identified, perhaps those referred to in 52:15, perhaps Israel (cf. “struck for the sins of his people”—v. 8). The Lord is again the speaker in vv. 11–13.

53:4 Struck down by God: the Bible often sees suffering as a punishment for sin (e.g., Ps 6:2; 32:1–5), yet sin sometimes appears to go unpunished and the innocent often suffer (cf. Ps 73; the Book of Job). In the case of the servant, the onlookers initially judge him guilty because of his suffering but, in some way not explained, they come to understand that his sufferings are for the sins of others. One notes the element of surprise, for such vicarious suffering, in the form described here, is without parallel in the Old Testament.

53:6 The LORD laid upon him: the servant’s suffering is no accidental or casual matter, but part of God’s plan; see also v. 10. The bystanders’ speculation of v. 4 is verified, but not in the sense intended by them.

53:10–11 Reparation offering: the Hebrew term ‘asham is used of a particular kind of sacrifice, one that is intended as compensation for that which is due because of guilt. See Lv 5:14–26 and note. Justify: the verb means “to be acquitted,” “declared innocent,” but since the servant bears “their iniquity,” an effective rather than simply legal action is suggested.

54:1 Jerusalem, pictured as a wife who had been barren and deserted, now suddenly finds herself with innumerable children (the returning exiles); cf. Gal 4:27 for an application to a new context.

54:3 Those who had taken advantage of the exile to encroach on Jerusalem’s territory will be driven out, and the returning exiles will repopulate the cities of Judah.

54:4–8 As with some other Old Testament themes, Second Isaiah uses that of Israel as the Lord’s bride in a new manner. Whereas Hosea and Jeremiah had depicted Israel as the Lord’s spouse to emphasize both Israel’s infidelity and the Lord’s continued love (Hos 1–3; Jer 2:2; 3:1–15) and Ezekiel to accuse Israel unsparingly (Ez 16; 23), Second Isaiah speaks only of the love with which the Lord restores the people, speaking tender words with no hint of reproach.

54:5 Redeemer: cf. note on 41:14.

54:10 Covenant of peace: this whole section, vv. 9–17, is given to various assurances of God’s love for Israel and of safety from various possible threats; the phrase sums up both the positive aspects of shalom, which implies a fullness of blessing, and protection from all that might harm. Cf. also 55:3; Nm 25:12; Ez 34:25; 37:26; Mal 2:5.

54:11 Afflicted one: Jerusalem.

55:1–3 The prophet invites all to return, under the figure of a banquet; cf. the covenant banquet in Ex 24:9–11 and wisdom’s banquet in Prv 9:1–6. The Lord’s covenant with David (2 Sm 7) is now to be extended beyond his dynasty.

55:5 The “nation” is Persia under Cyrus, but the perspective is worldwide.

55:6–9 The invitation to seek the Lord is motivated by the mercy of a God whose “ways” are completely mysterious.

55:10–11 The efficacy of the word of God recalls 40:5, 8.

55:13 Thornbush . . . nettles: suggestive of the desert and therefore symbolic of suffering and hardship; cypress . . . myrtle: suggestive of fertile land and therefore symbolic of joy and strength. To the LORD's renown: lit., “to the name of the Lord.”

56:1–8 This poem inaugurates the final section of the Book of Isaiah, often referred to as Third or Trito-Isaiah. While Second or Deutero-Isaiah (Is 40–55) gave numerous references to the hopes of the community of Israel during the Babylonian exile (ca. 587–538 B.C.), Third Isaiah witnesses to the struggles and hoped-for blessings of the postexilic community now back in the homeland of Israel. In this opening poem, the references to “keeping the sabbath” (vv. 2, 4, 6), “holding fast to the covenant” (vv. 4, 6) and “God’s holy mountain” as a house of prayer (v. 7), all tell of the postexilic community that was establishing itself again in the land according to the pattern of God’s word given through the prophet. The poem can be classified as a “prophetic exhortation” in which the prophet gives instruction for those who wish to live according to God’s word and covenant. What is important to note are the conditions placed upon the people of God; while Is 40–55 show an unconditional promise of redemption, these final chapters delineate clear expectations for receiving God’s salvific promises. Both the expectations and the great promises of God will unfold in the succeeding chapters of Third Isaiah.

56:1 This opening verse echoes themes that are well known throughout the Book of Isaiah: justice and right judgment (1:27; 5:7, 16; 9:6; 16:5; 26:9; 28:17; 32:1, 16; 33:5; 42:1, 4, 6; 45:8, 13, 19), salvation and deliverance (12:3; 26:18; 33:2; 45:8, 21; 46:13; 51:5, 6, 8). These themes will be developed also throughout Third Isaiah.

56:3 Eunuchs had originally been excluded from the community of the Lord; cf. Dt 23:2; Neh 13:1–3; Wis 3:14.

56:5 A monument and a name: literally in Hebrew, “a hand and a name”; a memorial inscription to prevent oblivion for one who had no children; cf. 2 Sm 18:18; Neh 7:5; 13:14.

56:7 This verse continues the theme of universalism found in Is 49:6. As Israel was to be “a light to the nations” so that God’s “salvation may reach to the ends of the earth,” so now does that come to pass as foreigners, faithful to the divine commands, are brought to the Temple by God and joined to the covenant community of Israel.

56:8 For the gathering of the dispersed people of Israel, cf. Jer 23:3; 31:8–9; Ez 11:17. Here the Lord not only gathers the displaced of Israel, but also unites other peoples to them. Cf. Is 60:3–10; 66:18–21.

56:9–57:21 This section is made up of two pronouncements of judgment (56:9–57:2; 57:3–13) and an oracle of salvation (57:14–21), each of which ends with a reversal of imagery and language. While there are harsh indictments against the corrupt leaders of Israel (56:9–12), a promise of peace is offered to those who are just (57:1–2). Then the judgment and its subsequent punishment for idolaters (57:3–13a) change to an announcement of reward for those who place their trust in God (57:13c). And the promises of salvation (57:14–19) then shift to a word of warning to the wicked (57:20–21).

56:9 Beasts of the field: foreign nations, which are invited to come and ravage Israel.

56:10–11 These shepherds of Israel are without “knowledge,” a theme developed earlier in the Isaian corpus; cf. 1:3; 6:9–10. Ezekiel 34 has similar condemnatory words against the unfaithful shepherds of Israel.

57:2 Despite their sad fate, the just will ultimately attain peace (most likely in this world); cf. v. 13.

57:3–13 In this courtroom imagery, the idolaters are summoned before the judge (v. 3), their crimes are graphically described (vv. 4–11), their guilt is established, and condemnation is carried out (vv. 12–13b). In contrast to this, v. 13c describes the inheritance of God’s land and holy mountain given to those who place their confidence in God instead of in idols.

57:3 Language of sexual infidelity is often used in a figurative way to describe idolatry. Cf. Ez 16:15–22; Hos 2:4–7; Col 3:5.

57:5 Child sacrifice is also attested in 2 Kgs 23:10; Jer 7:31; Ez 16:20; 20:28, 31; 23:37–39.

57:6 Smooth stones: the Hebrew word for this expression has the same consonants as the word for “portion”; instead of making the Lord their portion (cf. Ps 16:5), the people adored slabs of stone which they took from the streambeds in valleys and set up as idols; cf. Jer 3:9. Therefore, it is implied, they will be swept away as by a sudden torrent of waters carrying them down the rocky-bottomed gorge to destruction and death without burial.

57:8 Nakedness: literally in Hebrew, “hand.” In this context, it may euphemistically refer to a phallus.

57:9 The king: in Hebrew, the word for king is melek, similar in sound to the Canaanite god Molech, to whom children were offered as a sacrifice in pagan ritual. The expression “your ambassadors” could be a figurative expression for the children whose death served as an offering to this deity.

57:12 Justice: here used sarcastically. The activity described in these verses is far from the justice which God demands of those who are aligned with the covenant (cf. 56:1, 4, 6). In the larger context of Third Isaiah and the whole of the Isaian tradition, justice is a key theological motif. The justice to which God calls Israel will eventually come to its fulfillment in an act of divine intervention (cf. 60:21; 61:3c). Until then, the people of God must strive to live in the ways of justice and right judgment (56:1).

57:13 In v. 6, the smooth stones of the valley are the portion which the unfaithful will receive as their due reward (cf. note on v. 6); while in v. 13c, an inheritance of the land and possession of God’s holy mountain will be the portion of the upright.

57:14 The way . . . my people’s way: the language and imagery are reminiscent of 40:1–2, but in this context, when the people have already returned, the physical road through the desert is replaced by the spiritual way that leads to redemption.

57:15 The God of Israel is presented in both a transcendent and an immanent manner. God’s holiness is the transcendent quality; the immanence is shown in the choice of dwelling among the downtrodden and humble.

57:19 Creating words of comfort: lit., “fruit of the lips,” perhaps referring to praise and thanksgiving for the divine healing; cf. Hos 14:3.

58:1–5 The prophet is commanded to condemn the formalism of the people, specifically their hypocritical fasting.

58:6–12 Fasting is not genuine without reforming one’s way of life. A true social morality will ensure prosperity.

58:13–14 Sabbath observance becomes a cornerstone of postexilic piety; cf. 56:2, 4, 6.

59:1–20 This poem brings together a lament of the postexilic community and a harsh word of judgment from the prophet. After the opening rhetorical question, each of the stanzas begins with a reference to the justice and right judgment which are lacking among the people (vv. 4, 9, 14). Toward the end of the poem, God is depicted as a Divine Warrior (vv. 16–20) who is the only one who can intervene in order to bring redemption. This same Divine Warrior imagery is repeated in a similar fashion in 63:1–6.

59:5–6 The eggs signify evil works, doing positive harm; the webs are devices that serve no useful purpose.

59:9–15 The turning point in the poem comes when the people acknowledge their transgressions and describe the horror of their present state. Light is a metaphor for salvation (cf. 9:1; 42:16; 60:1–3, 19–20) and darkness represents sin and disaster.

59:21 This verse makes the transition from chaps. 56–59 to chaps. 60–62. Oracles of judgment yield to oracles about God’s redemptive action.

60:1–9 The light the prophet proclaims to Zion symbolizes the blessing to come to her: the glory of the Lord, the return of her children, the wealth of nations who themselves will walk by her light. The passage is famous from its use in the Latin liturgy for the feast of Epiphany.

60:10–18 The glorious promises for the future continue: the wealth of the nations (vv. 5, 10), tribute from kings, glorification of the Temple, peace and justice (cf. Ps 85:11).

60:19–20 The theme of light is taken up again, but in an apocalyptic vein: the Lord’s radiant presence replaces physical light.

61:1–2 The prophet proclaims that he has been anointed by the Lord to bring good news (cf. 40:9) to the afflicted and to comfort Zion. The background to the “year of favor” is the jubilee year of release from debts (Lv 25:10–11; Is 49:8).

61:6 The bestowal of a new name suggests a new identity and mission. The whole people will be priests (cf. Ex 19:6), even ministering to nations who will serve God’s people.

61:7 Twofold: Israel was punished double for infidelity (40:2); the blessings of its restoration will also be double.

61:10–11 The new life of the restored Zion is expressed in nuptial (cf. also 62:5) and agricultural (cf. v. 3; 60:21) imagery.

62:1–12 As in chap. 60, the prophet addresses Zion, announcing the reversal of her fortune. Several motifs reappear: light and glory (60:1–3, 19–20), tribute of nations (60:11), and especially the marriage (61:10; cf. also 54:5–8).

62:8–9 Peace and prosperity are indicated by the absence of invaders who would live off the land.

62:10–11 The gates of Babylon are to be opened for the exiles to return, led by the Lord, as in 40:3–5, 10.

63:1–6 Two questions are raised at the approach of a majestic figure coming from Edom. It is the Lord, his garments red with the blood from the judgment battle. Edom (its capital Bozrah) plundered Judah after the fall of Jerusalem; cf. 34:5–17. Wine press: here a symbol of a bloody judgment; cf. Lam 1:15; Jl 4:13.

63:7–64:11 This lament of the exilic community recalls God’s protection, and especially the memories of the exodus (vv. 7–14), before begging the Lord to come once more to their aid (63:15–64:3), as they confess their sins (64:4–11). The prayer is marked by God’s “holy spirit” (63:10–11, 14) and fatherhood (63:8, 9, 16; 64:7).

63:17 The hardening of the heart (Ex 4:21; 7:3) serves to explain Israel’s sins—a motif to induce the Lord to relent.

63:19–64:3 A new theophany, like Sinai of old, is invoked so that Israel’s enemies will be humbled by God’s intervention.

64:2 The translation here omits some words repeated in the Hebrew from 63:19 (“would that you would come down, with the mountains trembling before you”).

64:7–11 The motifs of father (63:16) and creator (clay and potter, 29:16; 45:9) are adduced to move the Lord to action in view of the damage done to his “holy cities” and “glorious house.”

65:1–7 These verses serve as a response to the preceding questions about God’s inaction (64:6, 11). It is not God who has been absent, but the people who have walked away from God by idolatrous acts and rituals (vv. 3–4). That is the reason for their punishment (vv. 6–7).

65:5 Render you holy: unclean food is what these people claim has made them sacred! The prophet ridicules them. Sacredness was understood as something communicable (cf. Ex 19:9–15).

65:8 This verse reflects the remnant theology found elsewhere in the Book of Isaiah: 1:8–9; 4:3; 6:11–13; etc.

65:11–12 Destiny: the play on words is found in the Hebrew, in which “destiny” and “destine” are menî and manîthî.

65:16 God of truth: lit., “God of Amen,” i.e., the one who keeps his word.

65:17–18 The new creation (cf. 66:22) is described with apocalyptic exuberance: long life, material prosperity, and so forth. As the former events in 43:18 are to be forgotten, so also the new creation wipes out memory of the first creation.

65:25 The imagery reflects the ideal era described in 11:6–9; see note there.

66:1–2 The Lord rejects the abuses associated with Temple worship in order to emphasize his concern for the sincere worshiper.

66:3–6 The sacrificial abuses listed will only merit punishment. The true worshipers, the downtrodden, are those who “tremble” (vv. 2, 5) at God’s word. Although they are ridiculed by those who reject them (v. 5), the latter will be afflicted with divine punishment; their “choice” will be met by the Lord’s choice (v. 4).

66:7–9 The renewal of Zion is pictured in terms of a miraculous, instantaneous birth, facilitated by God’s intervention.

66:10–16 The poet addresses the children born of Jerusalem, their mother. In v. 13 the metaphor switches to the Lord as mother (cf. 49:15), comforting her charges but destroying the enemies.

66:17 This verse seems to have some connection with 65:2–3.

66:18–21 God summons the neighboring nations to Zion and from among them will send some to far distant lands to proclaim the divine glory. All your kin: Jews in exile. The “gathering of the people and the nations” is an eschatological motif common in the prophetic tradition; cf. 56:8.

66:24 God’s enemies lie dead outside the walls of the New Jerusalem; just as in the past, corpses, filth and refuse lay in the Valley of Hinnom (Gehenna) outside the city; cf. 34:1–4; 2 Kgs 23:10.

The Book of Jeremiah combines history, biography, and prophecy. It portrays a nation in crisis and introduces the reader to an extraordinary person whom the Lord called to prophesy under the trying circumstances of the final days of the kingdom of Judah. Jeremiah was born, perhaps about 650B.C., of a priestly family from the village of Anathoth, two and a half miles northeast of Jerusalem. He was called to his task in the thirteenth year of King Josiah (Jer 1:2). Josiah's reform, begun with enthusiasm and hope, ended with his death on the battlefield of Megiddo (609B.C.) as he attempted to stop the northward march of the Egyptian Pharaoh Neco, who was going to provide assistance to the Assyrians who were in retreat before the Babylonians.

Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, fell in 612b.c., preparing the way for the new colossus, Babylon, which was soon to put an end to the independence of Judah.

The prophet supported the reform of King Josiah (2Kgs 22–23), but after the death of Josiah the old idolatry returned. Jeremiah opposed this as well as royal policy toward Babylon. Arrest, imprisonment, and public disgrace were his lot. In the nation's apostasy Jeremiah saw the sealing of its doom. Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem (598b.c.) and carried King Jehoiachin into exile (Jer 22:24).

During the years 598–587, Jeremiah counseled Zedekiah in the face of bitter opposition. The false prophet Hananiah proclaimed that the yoke of Babylon was broken and a strong pro-Egyptian party in Jerusalem induced Zedekiah to revolt. Nebuchadnezzar took swift vengeance; Jerusalem was destroyed in 587 and its leading citizens sent into exile.

The prophet remained in Jerusalem, but was later forced into Egyptian exile. We do not know the details of his death. The influence of Jeremiah was greater after his death than before. The exiled community read and meditated on the lessons of the prophet; his influence is evident in Ezekiel, some of the psalms, Is 40–66, and Daniel. In the postexilic period, the Book of Jeremiah circulated in various editions.

The book may be divided as follows:

- I. Oracles in the Days of Josiah (1:1–6:30)
- II. Oracles Primarily from the Days of Jehoiakim (7:1–20:18)
- III. Oracles in the Last Years of Jerusalem (21:1–25:38)
- IV. The Temple Sermon (26:1–24; cf. 7:1–15)
- V. Controversies with the False Prophets (27:1–29:32)
- VI. Oracles of the Restoration of Israel and Judah (30:1–35:19)
- VII. Jeremiah and the Fall of Jerusalem (36:1–45:5)
- VIII. Oracles Against the Nations (46:1–51:64)
- IX. Historical Appendix (52:1–34)

CHAPTER 1

Call of Jeremiah

<sup>4</sup>The word of the LORD came to me:

<sup>5</sup>Before I formed you in the womb I knew
you,
before you were born I dedicated you,
a prophet to the nations I appointed
you. * <sup>c</sup>

<sup>6</sup>“Ah, LORD GOD!” I said,
“I do not know how to speak. I am too young!” *

<sup>7</sup>But the LORD answered me,
Do not say, “I am too young.”
To whomever I send you, you shall go;
whatever I command you, you shall
speak.

<sup>8</sup>Do not be afraid of them,
for I am with you to deliver you—
oracle of the LORD.

<sup>9</sup>Then the LORD extended his hand and touched my mouth, saying to me,
See, I place my words in your mouth! <sup>d</sup>

<sup>10</sup> Today I appoint you over nations and over kingdoms,
To uproot and to tear down,
to destroy and to demolish,
to build and to plant.

<sup>11</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: What do you see, Jeremiah? “I see a branch of the almond tree,”* I replied. <sup>12</sup>Then the LORD said to me: You have seen well, for I am watching over my word to carry it out. <sup>13e</sup> A second time the word of the LORD came to me: What do you see? I replied, “I see a boiling kettle whose mouth is tipped away from the north.”*
<sup>14</sup>The LORD said to me, And from the north evil will pour out over all who dwell in the land.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Look, I am summoning
all the kingdoms of the north—oracle
of the LORD—
Each king shall come and set up his throne
in the gateways of Jerusalem, Against all its surrounding walls and against all the cities of Judah.<sup>g</sup> <sup>16</sup>I will pronounce my sentence against them
for all their wickedness in forsaking me,
In burning incense to other gods,
in bowing down to the works of their hands.<sup>h</sup> <sup>17</sup>But you, prepare yourself;
stand up and tell them
all that I command you.
Do not be terrified on account of them,
or I will terrify you before them;
<sup>18</sup>For I am the one who today
makes you a fortified city,
A pillar of iron, a wall of bronze,
against the whole land:
Against Judah’s kings and princes,
its priests and the people of the land.<sup>i</sup> <sup>19</sup>They will fight against you, but not prevail over you,
for I am with you to deliver you—
oracle of the LORD.

Infidelity of Israel. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Go, cry out this message for Jerusalem to hear!

I remember the devotion * of your youth,
how you loved me as a bride,
Following me in the wilderness,
in a land unsown.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Israel was dedicated to the LORD,
the first fruits * of his harvest;
All who ate of it were held guilty,
evil befell them—oracle of the LORD.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Listen to the word of the LORD, house of Jacob!

All you clans of the house of Israel,
<sup>5</sup>thus says the LORD:
What fault did your ancestors find in me
that they withdrew from me, Went after emptiness,
and became empty themselves?<sup>l</sup>

<sup>6</sup>They did not ask, “Where is the LORD who brought us up from the land of Egypt,
Who led us through the wilderness,
through a land of wastes and ravines,
A land of drought and darkness,
a land which no one crosses,
where no one dwells?”<sup>m</sup>

<sup>7</sup>I brought you into the garden land
to eat its fine fruits,
But you entered and defiled my land,
you turned my heritage into an abomination.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>8</sup>The priests did not ask,
“Where is the LORD?”
The experts in the law * did not know me:
the shepherds rebelled against me.

The prophets prophesied by Baal,
and went after useless idols.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Therefore I will again accuse you—
oracle of the LORD—
even your children's children I will accuse.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Cross to the coast of Cyprus and see,
send to Kedar* and carefully inquire:
Where has anything like this been
done?

<sup>11</sup>Does any other nation change its gods?—
even though they are not gods at all!
But my people have changed their glory
for useless things.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Be horrified at this, heavens;
shudder, be appalled—oracle of the
LORD.

<sup>13</sup>Two evils my people have done:
they have forsaken me, the source of living waters;
They have dug themselves cisterns,
broken cisterns that cannot hold water.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Is Israel a slave, a house-born servant?*
Why then has he become plunder?

<sup>15</sup>Against him lions roar,
they raise their voices.
They have turned his land into a waste;
his cities are charred ruins, without an inhabitant.<sup>s</sup>

Tahpanhes
shave the crown of your head.

<sup>17</sup>Has not forsaking the LORD, your God, done this to you?<sup>t</sup>

<sup>18</sup>And now, why go to Egypt,*
to drink the waters of the Nile?
Why go to Assyria,
to drink the waters of the River?

<sup>19</sup>Your own wickedness chastises you,

your own infidelities punish you.
Know then, and see, how evil and bitter is your forsaking the Lord, your God,
And your showing no fear of me,

oracle of the LORD, the GOD of hosts.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Long ago you broke your yoke,<sup>v</sup>
you tore off your bonds.
You said, "I will not serve."
On every high hill, under every green tree,
you sprawled and served as a prostitute.*

<sup>21</sup>But I had planted you as a choice vine,
all pedigreed stock;
How could you turn out so obnoxious to
me,
a spurious vine?<sup>w</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Even if you scour it with lye,
and use much soap,
The stain of your guilt is still before me,
oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>23</sup>How can you say, "I am not defiled,
I have not pursued the Baals"?
Consider your conduct in the Valley,*
recall what you have done:
A skittish young camel,
running back and forth,

<sup>24</sup> a wild donkey bred in the wilderness, Sniffing the wind in her desire—
who can restrain her lust?
None seeking her need tire themselves;
in her time they will find her.

<sup>25</sup>Stop wearing out your feet
and parching your throat!
But you say, "No use! No!
How I love these strangers,
after them I must go."<sup>y</sup>

<sup>26</sup>As the thief is shamed when caught,
so shall the house of Israel be shamed:
They, their kings, their princes,
their priests and their prophets;<sup>z</sup>

27 They say to a piece of wood, “You are my father,”
and to a stone, “You gave me birth.”
They turn their backs to me, not their faces;
yet in their time of trouble they cry out, “Rise up and save us!”

28 Where are the gods you made for yourselves?
Let them rise up!
Will they save you in your time of
trouble?
For as numerous as your cities
are your gods, O Judah!
And as many as the streets of Jerusalem
are the altars you have set up for Baal.<sup>a</sup>

29 Why are you arguing with me?
You have all rebelled against me—
oracle of the LORD.

30 In vain I struck your children;
correction they did not take.
Your sword devoured your prophets like a ravening lion.<sup>b</sup>

31 You people of this generation,
consider the word of the Lord:
Have I become a wilderness to Israel, a land of gloom?
Why then do my people say, “We have moved on,
we will not come to you any more”?

32 Does a young woman forget her jewelry,
a bride her sash?
Yet my people have forgotten me
days without number.<sup>c</sup>

33 How well you pick your way
when seeking love!
In your wickedness,
you have gone by ways unclean!

34 On your clothing is the life-blood of the innocent,
you did not find them committing burglary;

<sup>35</sup>Nonetheless you say, "I am innocent;
at least, his anger is turned away from
me."

Listen! I will judge you on that word of yours, "I have not sinned."

<sup>36</sup>How frivolous you have become in changing your course!
By Egypt you will be shamed,
just as you were shamed by Assyria.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>37</sup>From there too you will go out,
your hands upon your head;
For the Lord has rejected those in whom you trust,
with them you will have no success.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 3

See RG 343–48

- <sup>1</sup>If a man divorces his wife<sup>f</sup>
and she leaves him
and then becomes the wife of another,
Can she return to the first?*
Would not this land be wholly defiled?
But you have played the prostitute with many lovers,
and yet you would return to me!—
oracle of the LORD.
- <sup>2</sup>Raise your eyes to the heights, and look,
where have men not lain with you?
Along the roadways you waited for them
like an Arabian* in the wilderness.
You defiled the land
by your wicked prostitution.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>Therefore the showers were withheld,
the spring rain did not fall.
But because you have a prostitute's brow,
you refused to be ashamed.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>Even now do you not call me, "My
father,
you are the bridegroom of my youth?
- <sup>5</sup>Will he keep his wrath forever,
will he hold his grudge to the end?"
This is what you say; yet you do all the evil you can.

Judah and Israel.<sup>6</sup>The LORD said to me in the days of King Josiah: Do you see what rebellious Israel has done? She has gone up every high mountain, and under every green tree she has played the prostitute.<sup>i</sup> <sup>7</sup>And I thought: After she has done all this, she will return to me. But she did not return. Then, even though that traitor her sister Judah, saw <sup>8</sup>that, in response to all the adulteries rebel Israel had committed, I sent her away and gave her a bill of divorce, nevertheless Judah, the traitor, her sister, was not frightened; she too went off and played the prostitute. <sup>j</sup> <sup>9</sup>With her casual prostitution, she polluted the land, committing adultery with stone and wood.<sup>k</sup> <sup>10</sup>In spite of all this, Judah, the traitor, her sister, did not return to me wholeheartedly, but insincerely—oracle of the LORD.

Restoration of Israel.<sup>11</sup> Then the LORD said to me: Rebel Israel is more just than traitor Judah.<sup>l</sup> <sup>12</sup>Go, proclaim these words toward the north, and say:

Return, rebel Israel—oracle of the LORD—

I will not remain angry with you;

For I am merciful, oracle of the LORD,

I will not keep my anger forever.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Only admit your guilt:

how you have rebelled against the LORD, your God,

How you ran here and there to strangers

under every green tree

and would not listen to my voice—

oracle of the LORD.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Return, rebellious children—oracle of the LORD—*

for I am your master;

I will take you, one from a city, two from a clan,

and bring you to Zion.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>15</sup>I will appoint for you shepherds after my own heart,

who will shepherd you wisely and

prudently.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>16</sup>When you increase in number and are fruitful in the land—

oracle of the LORD—

They will in those days no longer say,

“The ark of the covenant of the Lord!”

They will no longer think of it, or remember it,

or miss it, or make another one.

<sup>17</sup>At that time they will call Jerusalem “the LORD’s throne.” All nations will gather together there to honor the name of the LORD at Jerusalem, and they will no longer stubbornly follow their wicked heart.<sup>q</sup> <sup>18</sup>In those days the house of Judah will walk alongside the house of Israel; together they will come from the land of the north to the land which I gave your ancestors as a heritage.<sup>r</sup>

Conditions for Forgiveness

How I would like to make you my
children!

So I gave you a pleasant land,
the most beautiful heritage among the
nations!

You would call me, “My Father,” I thought,
and you would never turn away from me.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>20</sup>But like a woman faithless to her lover,
thus have you been faithless to me,
house of Israel—oracle of the LORD.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>21</sup>A cry is heard on the heights!
the plaintive weeping of Israel’s
children,
Because they have perverted their way,
they have forgotten the LORD, their
God.

<sup>22</sup>Return, rebellious children!
I will heal your rebellions.
“Here we are! We belong to you, for you are the LORD, our God.”<sup>u</sup>

<sup>23</sup>Deceptive indeed are the hills,
the mountains, clamorous;
Only in the LORD our God is Israel’s salvation.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>24</sup>The shameful thing* has devoured
our ancestors’ worth from our youth,
Their sheep and cattle,
their sons and daughters.

<sup>25</sup>Let us lie down in our shame,
let our disgrace cover us,
for we have sinned against the LORD,
our God,
We and our ancestors, from our youth to
this day;

we did not listen to the voice of the LORD, our God.”<sup>w</sup>

CHAPTER 4

See RG 343–48

<sup>1</sup>If you return, Israel—oracle of the LORD—
return to me.
If you put your detestable things out of my sight,

and do not stray,<sup>x</sup>

<sup>2</sup>And swear, “As the LORD lives,”*
in truth, in judgment, and in justice,
Then the nations shall bless themselves
in him

and in him glory.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>3</sup>For to the people of Judah and Jerusalem,
thus says the LORD:

Till your untilled ground,
and do not sow among thorns.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Be circumcised for the LORD,*
remove the foreskins of your hearts, people of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem;

Or else my anger will break out like fire,
and burn so that no one can quench it,
because of your evil deeds.<sup>a</sup>

The Invasion from the North

<sup>5</sup>Proclaim it in Judah,
in Jerusalem announce it;
Blow the trumpet throughout the land,
call out, “Fill the ranks!”
Say, “Assemble, let us march to the fortified cities.”

<sup>6</sup>Raise the signal—to Zion!
Seek refuge! Don’t stand there!
Disaster I bring from the north,
and great destruction.

<sup>7</sup>Up comes the lion from its lair,
the destroyer of nations has set out,

- has left its place,
To turn your land into a desolation,
your cities into an uninhabited waste.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>So put on sackcloth,
mourn and wail:
“The blazing anger of the LORD has not turned away from us.”<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>In that day—oracle of the LORD—
The king will lose heart, and the princes;
the priests will be horrified,
and the prophets stunned.
- <sup>10</sup>“Ah! Lord God,” they will say,
“You really did deceive* us
When you said: You shall have peace, while the sword was at our very throats.”<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>At that time it will be said
to this people and to Jerusalem,
A scorching wind from the bare heights
comes through the wilderness toward my daughter, the people.*
Not to winnow, not to cleanse,
- <sup>12</sup>a strong wind from there comes at my bidding.
Now I too pronounce sentence upon them.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>See! like storm clouds he advances,
like a whirlwind, his chariots;
Swifter than eagles, his horses:
“Woe to us! we are ruined.”
- <sup>14</sup>Cleanse your heart of evil, Jerusalem,
that you may be saved.
How long will you entertain wicked schemes?
- <sup>15</sup>A voice proclaims it from Dan, announces wickedness from Mount Ephraim:
- <sup>16</sup>“Make this known to the nations,
announce it against Jerusalem:

Besiegers are coming from the distant
land,
shouting their war cry against the cities of Judah.”<sup>f</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Like watchers in the fields they surround
her,
for she has rebelled against me—
oracle of the LORD.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Your conduct, your deeds, have done this
to you;
how bitter is this evil of yours,
how it reaches to your very heart!<sup>h</sup>

<sup>19</sup>My body! my body! how I writhe!*
The walls of my heart!
My heart beats wildly,
I cannot be still;
For I myself have heard the blast of the horn,
the battle cry.

<sup>20</sup>Ruin upon ruin is reported;
the whole land is laid waste.
In an instant my tents are ravaged;
in a flash, my shelters.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>21</sup>How long must I see the signal, hear the blast of the horn!

<sup>22</sup>My people are fools,
they do not know me;
They are senseless children,
without understanding;
They are wise at evil,
but they do not know how to do good.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>23</sup>I looked at the earth—it was waste and void;
at the heavens—their light had gone out!<sup>k</sup>

<sup>24</sup>I looked at the mountains—they were quaking!
All the hills were crumbling!

<sup>25</sup>I looked—there was no one;
even the birds of the air had flown

away!

26 I looked—the garden land was a
wilderness,
with all its cities destroyed
before the LORD, before his blazing anger.<sup>l</sup>

27 For thus says the LORD:
The whole earth shall be waste,
but I will not wholly destroy it.<sup>m</sup>

28 Because of this the earth shall mourn,
the heavens above shall darken;
I have spoken, I will not change my mind,
I have decided, I will not turn back.<sup>n</sup>

29 At the shout of rider and archer
each city takes to flight;
They shrink into the thickets,
they scale the rocks:
All the cities are abandoned,
no one lives in them.

30 You now who are doomed, what are you doing
dressing in purple,
bedecking yourself with gold,
Enlarging your eyes with kohl?
You beautify yourself in vain!
Your lovers reject you,
they seek your life.

31 Yes, I hear the cry, like that of a woman
in labor,
like the anguish of a mother bearing
her first child—
The cry of daughter Zion gasping,
as she stretches out her hands:
“Ah, woe is me! I sink exhausted before my killers!”<sup>o</sup>

CHAPTER 5

See RG 343–48

Universal Corruption

- <sup>1</sup>Roam the streets of Jerusalem,
look about and observe,
Search through her squares,
to find even one Who acts justly
and seeks honesty,
and I will pardon her!
- <sup>2</sup>They say, “As the LORD lives,”
but in fact they swear falsely.
- <sup>3</sup> LORD, do your eyes not search for honesty?
You struck them, but they did not flinch;
you laid them low, but they refused
correction;
They set their faces harder than stone,
and refused to return.<sup>P</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>I thought: These are only the lowly,
they behave foolishly;
For they do not know the way of the
LORD,
the justice of their God.<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>Let me go to the leaders
and speak with them;
For they must know the way of the LORD,
the justice of their God.
But, one and all, they have broken the
yoke,
torn off the harness.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>Therefore, lions from the forest slay
them,
wolves of the desert ravage them,
Leopards keep watch round their cities:
all who come out are torn to pieces,
For their crimes are many,
their rebellions numerous.
- <sup>7</sup>Why should I pardon you?

Your children have forsaken me,
 they swear by gods that are no gods.
 I fed them, but they commit adultery;
 to the prostitute's house they throng.

<sup>8</sup>They are lustful stallions,
 each neighs after the other's wife.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Should I not punish them for this?—
 oracle of the LORD;
 on a nation like this should I not take
 vengeance?

<sup>10</sup>Climb her terraces, and ravage them, destroy them completely.
 Tear away her tendrils,
 they do not belong to the LORD.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For they have openly rebelled against me, both the house of Israel and the house of Judah—
 oracle of the LORD.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>12</sup>They denied the LORD,* saying, "He is nothing,
 No evil shall come to us, neither sword nor famine shall we see."<sup>v</sup>

<sup>13</sup>The prophets are wind,
 and the word is not with them.
 Let it be done to them!"

<sup>14</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD, the God of hosts,
 because you have said this—See! I make my words a fire in your mouth,
 And this people the wood
 that it shall devour!—

<sup>15</sup>Beware! I will bring against you a nation from far away,
 O House of Israel—oracle of the LORD;
 A long-lived nation, an ancient nation,
 a people whose language you do not
 know,
 whose speech you cannot understand.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Their quivers are like open graves;

all of them are warriors.

<sup>17</sup>They will devour your harvest and your
bread,
devour your sons and your daughters,
Devour your sheep and cattle,
devour your vines and fig trees;
With their swords they will beat down
the fortified cities in which you trust.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Yet even in those days—oracle of the LORD—I will not completely destroy you.<sup>y</sup> <sup>19</sup>And when they ask, “Why has the LORD our God done all these things to us?” say to them, “As you have abandoned me to serve foreign gods in your own land, so shall you serve foreigners in a land not your own.”

<sup>20</sup>Announce this to the house of Jacob,
proclaim it in Judah:

<sup>21</sup>Pay attention to this,
you foolish and senseless people,
Who have eyes and do not see,
who have ears and do not hear.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Should you not fear me—oracle of the LORD—
should you not tremble before me?
I made the sandy shore the sea’s limit,
which by eternal decree it may not overstep.
Toss though it may, it is to no avail;
though its billows roar, they cannot overstep.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>23</sup>But this people’s heart is stubborn and rebellious;
they turn and go away,

<sup>24</sup>And do not say in their hearts,
“Let us fear the LORD, our God,
Who gives us rain
early and late, * in its time;
Who watches for us
over the appointed weeks of harvest.”<sup>b</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Your crimes have prevented these things, your sins have turned these blessings

away from you.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>26</sup>For criminals lurk among my people;
like fowlers they set traps,
but it is human beings they catch.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>27</sup>Their houses are as full of treachery
as a bird-cage is of birds;
Therefore they grow powerful and rich,

<sup>28</sup> fat and sleek.
They pass over wicked deeds;
justice they do not defend
By advancing the claim of the orphan or judging the cause of the poor.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>29</sup>Shall I not punish these things?—oracle
of the LORD;
on a nation such as this shall I not take
vengeance?

<sup>30</sup>Something shocking and horrible
has happened in the land:

<sup>31</sup>The prophets prophesy falsely,
and the priests teach on their own authority;
Yet my people like it this way;
what will you do when the end comes?<sup>f</sup>

CHAPTER 6

See RG 343–48

The Enemy at the Gates

- <sup>1</sup>Seek refuge, Benjaminites,
from the midst of Jerusalem!
Blow the trumpet in Tekoa,
raise a signal over Beth-haccherem;
For disaster threatens from the north,
and mighty destruction.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Lovely and delicate daughter Zion, you are ruined!
- <sup>3</sup>Against her, shepherds come with their flocks;*
all around, they pitch their tents
against her;
each one grazes his portion.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>“Prepare for war against her,
Up! let us rush upon her at midday!”
“Woe to us! the day is waning, evening shadows lengthen!”
- <sup>5</sup>“Up! let us rush upon her by night, destroy her palaces!”<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>For thus says the LORD of hosts:
Hew down her trees,
throw up a siege mound against
Jerusalem.
Woe to the city marked for punishment;
there is nothing but oppression within her!<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>As a well keeps its waters fresh,
so she keeps fresh her wickedness.
Violence and destruction resound in her;
ever before me are wounds and blows.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>Be warned, Jerusalem,
or I will be estranged from you,
And I will turn you into a wilderness,
a land where no one dwells.

- 9 Thus says the LORD of hosts:
Glean, glean like a vine
the remnant of Israel;
Pass your hand, like a vintager,
repeatedly over the tendrils.
- 10 To whom shall I speak?
whom shall I warn, and be heard?
See! their ears are uncircumcised,
they cannot pay attention;
See, the word of the LORD has become
for them
an object of scorn, for which they have no taste.<sup>l</sup>
- 11 But the wrath of the LORD brims up within me,
I am weary of holding it in.
I will pour it out upon the child in the street,
upon the young men gathered together.
Yes, husband and wife will be taken,
elder with ancient.<sup>m</sup>
- 12 Their houses will fall to others,
their fields and their wives as well;
For I will stretch forth my hand against those who dwell in the land—
oracle of the LORD.<sup>n</sup>
- 13 Small and great alike, all are greedy for
gain;
prophet and priest, all practice fraud.<sup>o</sup>
- 14 They have treated lightly
the injury to my people:
“Peace, peace!” they say,
though there is no peace.<sup>p</sup>
- 15 They have acted shamefully, committing
abominations,
yet they are not at all ashamed,
they do not know how to blush.
Therefore they will fall among the fallen;
in the time of their punishment they shall stumble,
says the LORD.<sup>q</sup>

- 16 Thus says the Lord:
Stand by the earliest roads,
ask the pathways of old,* “Which is the way to good?” and walk it;
thus you will find rest for yourselves.
But they said, “We will not walk it.”<sup>r</sup>
- 17 I raised up watchmen* for them:
“Pay attention to the sound of the trumpet!”
But they said, “We will not pay attention!”
- 18 Therefore hear, O nations,
and know, O earth,
what I will do with them:
- 19 See, I bring evil upon this people,
the fruit of their own schemes,
Because they did not pay attention to my
words,
because they rejected my law.<sup>s</sup>
- 20 Of what use to me is incense that comes from Sheba,
or sweet cane from far-off lands?
Your burnt offerings find no favor
with me,
your sacrifices do not please me.<sup>t</sup>
- 21 Therefore, thus says the LORD:
See, I will place before this people obstacles to trip them up;
Parents and children alike,
neighbors and friends shall perish.<sup>u</sup>
- 22 Thus says the LORD:
See, a people comes from the land of the
north,
a great nation, rising from the very ends of the earth.<sup>v</sup>
- 23 Bow and javelin they wield;
cruel and pitiless are they.
They sound like the roaring sea
as they ride forth on horses,
Each in his place for battle against you, daughter Zion.

- 24 We hear news of them;
our hands hang helpless,
Anguish takes hold of us,
pangs like a woman in childbirth.<sup>w</sup>
- 25 Do not go out into the field,
do not step into the street,
For the enemy has a sword;
terror on every side!
- 26 Daughter of my people, dress in sackcloth,
roll in the ashes.
Mourn as for an only child
with bitter wailing:
“How suddenly the destroyer comes upon us!”<sup>x</sup>
- 27* A tester for my people I have appointed
you,
to search and test their way.<sup>y</sup>
- 28 Arch-rebels are they all,
dealers in slander,
bronze and iron, all of them,
destroyers they are.
- 29 The bellows are scorched,
the lead is consumed by the fire;
In vain has the refiner refined,
the wicked are not drawn off.
- 30 “Silver rejected” they shall be called,
for the LORD has rejected them.

II. Oracles Primarily from the Days of Jehoiakim

CHAPTER 7

The Temple Sermon. * <sup>1</sup>The word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: <sup>2</sup>Stand at the gate of the house of the LORD and proclaim this message there: Hear the word of the LORD, all you of Judah who enter these gates to worship the LORD! <sup>3</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Reform your ways and your deeds so that I may dwell with you in this place. <sup>z</sup> <sup>4</sup>Do not put your trust in these deceptive words: “The temple of the LORD! The temple of the LORD! The temple of the LORD!” <sup>a</sup> <sup>5</sup>Only if you thoroughly reform your ways and your deeds; if each of you deals justly with your neighbor; <sup>6</sup>if you no longer oppress the alien, * the orphan, and the widow; if you no longer shed innocent blood in this place or follow after other gods to your own harm, <sup>b</sup> <sup>7</sup>only then will I let you continue to dwell in this place, in the land I gave your ancestors long ago and forever. <sup>c</sup>

<sup>8</sup>But look at you! You put your trust in deceptive words to your own loss! <sup>9</sup>Do you think you can steal and murder, commit adultery and perjury, sacrifice to Baal, follow other gods that you do not know, <sup>d</sup> <sup>10</sup>and then come and stand in my presence in this house, which bears my name, and say: “We are safe! We can commit all these abominations again!”? <sup>e</sup> <sup>11</sup>Has this house which bears my name become in your eyes a den of thieves? I have seen it for myself!—oracle of the LORD. <sup>f</sup> <sup>12</sup>Go to my place at Shiloh, * where I made my name dwell in the beginning. See what I did to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel. <sup>g</sup> <sup>13</sup>And now, because you have committed all these deeds—oracle of the LORD—because you did not listen, though I spoke to you untiringly, and because you did not answer, though I called you, <sup>14</sup>I will do to this house, which bears my name, in which you trust, and to the place which I gave you and your ancestors, exactly what I did to Shiloh. <sup>h</sup> <sup>15</sup>I will cast you out of my sight, as I cast away all your kindred, all the offspring of Ephraim. <sup>i</sup>

Abuses in Worship. <sup>16</sup>You, now, must not intercede for this people! Do not raise a cry or prayer in their behalf! <sup>j</sup> Do not press me, for I will not listen to you! <sup>17</sup>Do you not see what they are doing in the cities of Judah, in the streets of Jerusalem? <sup>18</sup>The children gather wood, their fathers light the fire, and the women knead dough to make cakes for the Queen of Heaven, *

while libations are poured out to other gods—all to offend me!<sup>k</sup> <sup>19</sup>Are they really offending me—oracle of the LORD—or rather themselves, to their own disgrace?<sup>l</sup> <sup>20</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD GOD: my anger and my wrath will pour out upon this place, upon human being and beast, upon the trees of the field and the fruits of the earth; it will burn and not be quenched.<sup>m</sup>

on the heights raise a lament;
The LORD has indeed rejected and cast
off
the generation that draws down his
wrath.

<sup>30</sup>The people of Judah have done what is evil in my eyes—oracle of the LORD. They have set up their detestable things in the house which bears my name, thereby defiling it.<sup>s</sup> <sup>31</sup>In the Valley of Ben-hinnom* they go on building the high places of Topheth to sacrifice their sons and daughters by fire, something I never commanded or considered. <sup>32</sup>Be assured! Days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when they will no longer say “Topheth” or “Valley of Ben-hinnom” but “Valley of Slaughter.” For want of space, Topheth will become burial ground.<sup>t</sup> <sup>33</sup>The corpses of this people will be food for the birds of the sky and beasts of the earth, which no one will drive away.<sup>u</sup> <sup>34</sup>I will silence the cry of joy, the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; for the land will be turned to rubble.<sup>v</sup>

CHAPTER 8

See RG 343–48

<sup>1</sup>At that time—oracle of the LORD— the bones of the kings and princes of Judah, the bones of the priests and the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem will be brought out of their graves<sup>w</sup> <sup>2</sup>and spread out before the sun, the moon, and the whole host of heaven,* which they loved and served, which they followed, consulted, and worshiped. They will not be gathered up for burial, but will lie like dung upon the ground.<sup>x</sup>
<sup>3</sup>Death will be preferred to life by all the survivors of this wicked people who remain in any of the places to which I banish them—oracle of the LORD of hosts.

Israel's Conduct Incomprehensible

- <sup>4</sup> Tell them: Thus says the LORD:
When someone falls, do they not rise
again?
if they turn away, do they not turn
back?
- <sup>5</sup>Why then do these people resist
with persistent rebellion?
Why do they cling to deception,
refuse to turn back?<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>I have listened closely:
they speak what is not true;
No one regrets wickedness,
saying, “What have I done?”
Everyone keeps on running their course,
like a horse dashing into battle.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>Even the stork in the sky
knows its seasons;
Turtledove, swift, and thrush
observe the time of their return,
But my people do not know
the order of the LORD.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>How can you say, “We are wise,<sup>b</sup>
we have the law of the LORD”?
See, that has been changed into falsehood

by the lying pen of the scribes!*

<sup>9</sup>The wise are put to shame,
terrified, and trapped;
Since they have rejected the word of the
LORD,
what sort of wisdom do they have?<sup>c</sup>

Shameless in Their Crimes

<sup>10</sup>Therefore, I will give their wives to other
men,
their fields to new owners.
Small and great alike, all are greedy for
gain,
prophet and priest, all practice fraud.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>11</sup>They have treated lightly
the injury to the daughter of my
people:*
“Peace, peace!” they say,
though there is no peace.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>12</sup>They have acted shamefully; they have done abominable things,
yet they are not at all ashamed,
they do not know how to blush.
Hence they shall be among those who fall;
in their time of punishment they shall
stumble,
says the LORD.<sup>f</sup>

Threats of Punishment

<sup>13</sup>I will gather them all in—oracle of the LORD:
no grapes on the vine,
No figs on the fig trees,
foliage withered!
Whatever I have given them is gone.

<sup>14</sup>Why do we remain here?
Let us assemble and flee to the fortified cities,
where we will meet our doom;
For the LORD our God has doomed us,
he has given us poisoned water to drink,

because we have sinned against the

LORD.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>15</sup>We wait for peace to no avail;
for a time of healing, but terror comes instead.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>16</sup>From Dan is heard
the snorting of horses;
The neighing of stallions
shakes the whole land.
They come to devour the land and everything in it,
the city and its inhabitants.

<sup>17</sup>Yes, I will send against you poisonous snakes.
Against them no charm will work
when they bite you—oracle of the LORD.<sup>i</sup>

The Prophet's Grief over the People's Suffering

<sup>18</sup>My joy is gone, grief is upon me,
my heart is sick.

<sup>19</sup>Listen! the cry of the daughter of my
people,
far and wide in the land!
“Is the LORD no longer in Zion,
is her King no longer in her midst?”
Why do they provoke me with their idols,
with their foreign nonentities?<sup>j</sup>

<sup>20</sup>“The harvest is over, the summer ended,
but we have not yet been saved!”

<sup>21</sup>I am broken by the injury of the daughter of my people.
I am in mourning; horror has seized
me.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Is there no balm in Gilead,*
no healer there?
Why does new flesh not grow over the wound of the daughter of my people?<sup>l</sup>

23 Oh, that my head were a spring of water,
my eyes a fountain of tears,
That I might weep day and night over the slain from the daughter of my
people!

CHAPTER 9

See RG 343–48

The Corruption of the People

- <sup>1</sup>Oh, that I had in the wilderness
a travelers' lodging!
That I might leave my people
and depart from them.
They are all adulterers,
a band of traitors.
- <sup>2</sup>They ready their tongues like a drawn bow;
with lying, and not with truth,
they are powerful in the land.
They go from evil to evil,
and me they do not know—oracle of
the LORD.
- <sup>3</sup>Be on your guard, everyone against his
neighbor;
put no trust in any brother.
Every brother imitates Jacob, the supplanter,*
every neighbor is guilty of slander.
- <sup>4</sup>Each one deceives the other,
no one speaks the truth.
They have accustomed their tongues to lying,
they are perverse and cannot repent.<sup>m</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>Violence upon violence,
deceit upon deceit:
They refuse to know me—
oracle of the LORD.
- <sup>6</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts:
I will refine them and test them;
how else should I deal with the daughter of my people?
- <sup>7</sup>A murderous arrow is their tongue,
their mouths utter deceit;
They speak peaceably with their neighbors,

but in their hearts they lay an ambush!<sup>n</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Should I not punish them for these deeds—oracle of the LORD;
on a nation such as this should I not take vengeance?<sup>o</sup>

Dirge over the Ravaged Land

<sup>9</sup>Over the mountains I shall break out in cries of lamentation,
over the pastures in the wilderness, in
a dirge:

They are scorched, and no one crosses
them,

no sound of lowing cattle;

Birds of the air as well as beasts,

all have fled and are gone.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>10</sup>I will turn Jerusalem into a heap of ruins,
a haunt of jackals;

The cities of Judah I will make a waste,

where no one dwells.<sup>q</sup>

To whom has the mouth of the LORD spoken?

Let him declare it!

Why is the land ravaged,

scorched like a wilderness no one crosses?<sup>r</sup>

<sup>12</sup>The LORD said: Because they have abandoned my law, which I set before them, and did not listen to me or follow it, <sup>13</sup>but followed instead their stubborn hearts and the Baals, as their ancestors had taught them,<sup>s</sup>

<sup>14</sup>therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: See now, I will give this people wormwood to eat and poisoned water to drink.<sup>t</sup> <sup>15</sup>I will scatter them among nations whom neither they nor their ancestors have known; I will send the sword to pursue them until I have completely destroyed them.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>16</sup> Thus says the LORD of hosts:

Inquire, and call the wailing women to
come;

summon the most skilled of them.

<sup>17</sup>Let them come quickly
and raise for us a dirge,
That our eyes may run with tears,
our pupils flow with water.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>18</sup>The sound of the dirge is heard from Zion:
We are ruined and greatly ashamed;
We have left the land,
given up our dwellings!

<sup>19</sup>Hear, you women, the word of the LORD, let your ears receive the word of his
mouth.
Teach your daughters a dirge,
and each other a lament:

<sup>20</sup>Death has come up through our windows,
has entered our citadels,
To cut down children in the street,
young people in the squares.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Corpses shall fall
like dung in the open field,
Like sheaves behind the harvester,
with no one to gather them.

True Glory

<sup>22</sup> Thus says the LORD:
Let not the wise boast of his wisdom,
nor the strong boast of his strength,
nor the rich man boast of his riches;

<sup>23</sup>But rather, let those who boast, boast of
this,
that in their prudence they know me,<sup>x</sup>
Know that I, the LORD, act with fidelity, justice, and integrity on earth.
How I take delight in these—oracle of
the LORD.

False Circumcision.<sup>24</sup>See, days are coming— oracle of the LORD—when I will demand an account of all those circumcised in the foreskin:<sup>y</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Egypt and Judah, Edom and the Ammonites, Moab, and those who live in the wilderness and shave their temples.* For all the nations are uncircumcised, even the whole house of Israel is uncircumcised at heart.

CHAPTER 10

See RG 343–48

The Folly of Idolatry.<sup>1</sup>Hear the word the LORD speaks to you, house of Israel. <sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD:

Do not learn the ways of the nations, and have no fear of the signs in the heavens,*

even though the nations fear them.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>3</sup>For the carvings of the nations are nonentities,
wood cut from the forest,

Fashioned by artisans with the adze,<sup>a</sup>

<sup>4</sup> adorned with silver and gold.
With nails and hammers they are fastened,
so they do not fall.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Like a scarecrow in a cucumber field are they,
they cannot speak;
They must be carried about,
for they cannot walk.
Do not fear them, they can do no harm,
neither can they do good.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>6</sup>No one is like you, Lord,
you are great,
great and mighty is your name.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Who would not fear you,
King of the nations,
for it is your due!
Among all the wisest of the nations,
and in all their domains,
there is none like you.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>8</sup>One and all they are stupid and senseless, the instruction from nonentities—only
wood!

<sup>9</sup>Silver plates brought from Tarshish,
and gold from Ophir,
The work of the artisan

and the handiwork of the smelter, Clothed with violet and purple—
all of them the work of skilled workers.

<sup>10</sup>The LORD is truly God,
he is the living God, the eternal King,
Before whose anger the earth quakes,
whose wrath the nations cannot endure.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Thus shall you say of them: The gods that did not make heaven and earth—let these perish from earth and from beneath heaven!<sup>* g</sup>

<sup>12</sup>The one who made the earth by his power, established the world by his wisdom,
and by his skill stretched out the heavens.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>13</sup>When he thunders, the waters in the
heavens roar,
and he brings up clouds from the end
of the earth,
Makes lightning flash in the rain,
and brings forth the wind from his storehouses.

<sup>14</sup>Everyone is too stupid to know;
every artisan is put to shame by his
idol:
He has molded a fraud,
without breath of life.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>15</sup>They are nothing, objects of ridicule;
they will perish in their time of
punishment.

<sup>16</sup>Jacob's portion is nothing like them:
for he is the maker of everything!
Israel is his very own tribe,
LORD of hosts is his name.<sup>j</sup>

Abandonment of Judah

<sup>17</sup>Gather up your bundle from the land,
City living under siege!

<sup>18</sup>For thus says the LORD:
Now, at this time

- I will sling away the inhabitants of the
land;
I will hem them in,
that they may be taken.
- <sup>19</sup>Woe is me! I am undone,
my wound is beyond healing.
Yet I had thought:
if I make light of my sickness, I can
bear it.
- <sup>20</sup>My tent is ruined,
all its cords are severed.
My children have left me, they are no
more:
no one to pitch my tent,
no one to raise its curtains.<sup>k</sup>
- <sup>21</sup>How stupid are the shepherds!
The LORD they have not sought;
For this reason they have failed,
and all their flocks scattered.<sup>l</sup>
- <sup>22</sup>Listen! a rumor! here it comes,
a great commotion from the land of the north:
To make the cities of Judah a desolation,
the haunt of jackals.

Prayer of Jeremiah

- <sup>23</sup>I know, LORD,
that no one chooses their way,
Nor determines their course
nor directs their own step.
- <sup>24</sup>Correct me, Lord, but with equity,
not in anger, lest you diminish me.
- <sup>25</sup>Pour out your wrath on the nations that do not know you,
on the tribes that do not call your name;
For they have utterly devoured Jacob,
and laid waste his home.<sup>m</sup>

CHAPTER 11

See RG 343–48

Plea for Fidelity to the Covenant. <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: <sup>2</sup>Speak to the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, <sup>3</sup>and say to them: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Cursed be anyone who does not observe the words of this covenant,<sup>n</sup> <sup>4</sup>which I commanded your ancestors the day I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, that iron furnace, saying: Listen to my voice and do all that I command you. Then you shall be my people, and I will be your God.<sup>o</sup> <sup>5</sup>Thus I will fulfill the oath I swore to your ancestors, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, the one you have today. “Amen, LORD,” I answered.

<sup>6</sup>Then the LORD said to me: Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem: Hear the words of this covenant and obey them. <sup>7</sup>I warned your ancestors unceasingly from the day I brought them up out of the land of Egypt even to this day: obey my voice. <sup>8</sup>But they did not listen or obey. They each walked in the stubbornness of their evil hearts, till I brought upon them all the threats of this covenant which they had failed to observe as I commanded them.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>9</sup>A conspiracy has been found, the LORD said to me, among the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: <sup>10</sup>They have returned to the crimes of their ancestors who refused to obey my words. They also have followed and served other gods; the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken the covenant I made with their ancestors.<sup>q</sup> <sup>11</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD: See, I am bringing upon them a disaster they cannot escape. Though they cry out to me, I will not listen to them.<sup>r</sup> <sup>12</sup>Then the cities of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem will go and cry out to the gods to whom they have been offering incense. But these gods will give them no help whatever in the time of their disaster.<sup>s</sup>

are your gods, O Judah!
As many as the streets of Jerusalem
are the altars for sacrifice to Baal.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Now, you must not intercede for this people; do not raise on their behalf a cry or prayer! I will not listen when they call to me in the time of their disaster.<sup>u</sup>

Sacrifices of No Avail

<sup>15</sup>What right has my beloved in my house, while she devises her plots?
Can vows and sacred meat turn away
your disaster from you?
Will you still be jubilant

<sup>16</sup> when you hear the great tumult?
The Lord has named you “a spreading olive tree, a pleasure to behold”;
Now he sets fire to it,
its branches burn.

<sup>17</sup>The LORD of hosts who planted you has decreed disaster for you because of the evil done by the house of Israel and by the house of Judah, who provoked me by sacrificing to Baal.<sup>v</sup>

The Plot Against Jeremiah. <sup>18</sup>I knew it because the LORD informed me: at that time you showed me their doings.

<sup>19</sup>Yet I was like a trusting lamb led to slaughter, not knowing that they were hatching plots against me: “Let us destroy the tree in its vigor; let us cut him off from the land of the living, so that his name will no longer be remembered.”<sup>w</sup>

searcher of mind and heart, Let me witness the vengeance you take
on them,
for to you I have entrusted my cause!<sup>x</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD concerning the men of Anathoth who seek your life and say, “Do not prophesy in the name of the LORD; otherwise you shall die by our hand.”<sup>y</sup> <sup>22</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts: I am going to punish them. The young men shall die by the sword; their sons and daughters shall die by famine.<sup>z</sup> <sup>23</sup>None shall be spared among them, for I will bring disaster upon the men of Anathoth, the year of their punishment.<sup>a</sup>

CHAPTER 12

<sup>1</sup>You would be in the right, O LORD,
if I should dispute with you;
even so, I must lay out the case against
you.
Why does the way of the wicked prosper,
why do all the treacherous live in contentment?<sup>b</sup>

<sup>2</sup>You planted them; they have taken root,
they flourish and bear fruit as well.
You are upon their lips,
but far from their thoughts.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>3</sup>LORD, you know me, you see me, you have found that my heart is with you.<sup>d</sup>
Pick them out like sheep for the butcher,
set them apart for the day of slaughter.*

<sup>4</sup>How long must the land mourn,
the grass of the whole countryside
wither?
Because of the wickedness of those who dwell in it
beasts and birds disappear,
for they say, “God does not care about our future.”

<sup>5</sup>If running against men has wearied you,
how will you race against horses?
And if you are safe only on a level
stretch,
what will you do in the jungle of the Jordan?

<sup>6</sup>Your kindred and your father’s house, even they betray you; they have recruited a force against you. Do not believe them, even when they speak fair words to you.<sup>e</sup>

The Lord’s Complaint

<sup>7</sup>I have abandoned my house,
cast off my heritage;
The beloved of my soul I have delivered into the hand of her foes.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>8</sup>My heritage has become for me
like a lion in the thicket;
She has raised her voice against me,
therefore she has incurred my hatred.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>9</sup>My heritage is a prey for hyenas,
is surrounded by vultures;
Come, gather together, all you wild animals,
come and eat!<sup>h</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Many shepherds have ravaged my
vineyard,
have trampled down my heritage;
My delightful portion they have turned into a desert waste.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>11</sup>They have made it a mournful waste, desolate before me,
Desolate, the whole land,
because no one takes it to heart.

<sup>12</sup>Upon every height in the wilderness marauders have appeared.
The LORD has a sword that consumes
the land from end to end:
no peace for any living thing.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>13</sup>They have sown wheat and reaped thorns,
they have tired themselves out for no
purpose;
They are shamed by their harvest,
the burning anger of the LORD.

Judah's Neighbors. <sup>14</sup>Thus says the LORD, against all my evil neighbors* who plunder the heritage I gave my people Israel as their own: See, I will uproot them from their land; the house of Judah I will uproot in their midst.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>15</sup>But after uprooting them, I will have compassion on them again and bring them back, each to their heritage, each to their land.<sup>l</sup> <sup>16</sup>And if they truly learn my people's custom of swearing by my name, "As the LORD

lives,” just as they taught my people to swear by Baal, then they shall be built up in the midst of my people.<sup>m 17</sup> But if they do not obey, I will uproot and destroy that nation entirely—oracle of the LORD.<sup>n</sup>

CHAPTER 13

Judah's Corruption. <sup>*1</sup>The LORD said to me: Go buy yourself a linen loincloth; wear it on your loins, but do not put it in water. <sup>2</sup>I bought the loincloth, as the LORD commanded, and put it on. <sup>3</sup>A second time the word of the LORD came to me thus: <sup>4</sup>Take the loincloth which you bought and are wearing, and go at once to the Perath; hide it there in a cleft of the rock. <sup>5</sup>Obedient to the LORD's command, I went to the Perath and buried the loincloth. <sup>6</sup>After a long time, the LORD said to me: Go now to the Perath and fetch the loincloth which I told you to hide there. <sup>7</sup>So I went to the Perath, looked for the loincloth and took it from the place I had hidden it. But it was rotted, good for nothing! <sup>8</sup>Then the word came to me from the LORD: <sup>9</sup>Thus says the LORD: So also I will allow the pride of Judah to rot, the great pride of Jerusalem. <sup>o</sup> <sup>10</sup>This wicked people who refuse to obey my words, who walk in the stubbornness of their hearts and follow other gods, serving and worshiping them, will be like this loincloth, good for nothing. <sup>p</sup> <sup>11</sup>For, as the loincloth clings to a man's loins, so I made the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah cling to me—oracle of the LORD—to be my people, my fame, my praise, my glory. But they did not listen. <sup>q</sup>

The Broken Wineflask. <sup>12</sup>Now speak to them this word: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Every wineflask should be filled with wine. If they reply, "Do we not know that every wineflask should be filled with wine?" <sup>13</sup>say to them: Thus says the LORD: Beware! I am making all the inhabitants of this land drunk, the kings who sit on David's throne, the priests and prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem. <sup>r</sup> <sup>14</sup>I will smash them against each other, parents and children together—oracle of the LORD—showing no compassion, I will neither spare nor pity, but I will destroy them. <sup>s</sup>

A Last Warning

<sup>15</sup>Listen and give ear, do not be arrogant,
for the LORD speaks.

<sup>16</sup>Give glory to the LORD, your God,
before he brings darkness;
Before your feet stumble
on mountains at twilight;

Before the light you look for turns to
darkness,

changes into black clouds.<sup>t</sup>

- <sup>17</sup>If you do not listen to this in your pride,
I will weep many tears in secret;
My eyes will run with tears
for the LORD's flock, led away to exile.<sup>u</sup>

Exile

- <sup>18</sup>Say to the king and to the queen mother:
come down from your throne;
From your heads
your splendid crowns will fall.<sup>v</sup>

- <sup>19</sup>The cities of the Negeb are besieged,
with no one to relieve them;
Judah is taken into exile—all of it—
in total exile.

Jerusalem's Disgrace

- <sup>20</sup>Lift up your eyes and see those coming in from the north.
Where is the flock entrusted to you,
your splendid sheep?<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>21</sup>What will you say when rulers are appointed over you,
those you taught to be allies?
Will not pains seize you like those of a woman giving birth?<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>22</sup>If you say to yourself:
“Why have these things happened
to me?”
For your great guilt your skirts are stripped away
and you are violated.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>23</sup>Can Ethiopians change their skin,
leopards their spots?
As easily would you be able to do good,
accustomed to evil as you are.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>24</sup>I will scatter them like chaff that flies
on the desert wind.<sup>a</sup>

25 This is your lot, the portion I have measured out to you—
oracle of the LORD.

Because you have forgotten me,
and trusted in deception, <sup>* b</sup>

26 I now will strip away your skirts, so that your shame is visible. <sup>c</sup>

27 Your adulteries, your neighings,
your shameless prostitutions:

On the hills, in the fields

I see your detestable crimes.

Woe to you, Jerusalem! How long will it be

before you are clean? <sup>d</sup>

CHAPTER 14

The Great Drought. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah concerning the drought:<sup>e</sup>

- <sup>2</sup>Judah mourns,
her gates are lifeless;
They are bowed to the ground,
and the outcry of Jerusalem goes up.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>The nobles send their servants for water,
but when they come to the cisterns
They find no water
and return with empty jars.<sup>g</sup> Confounded, despairing, they cover their heads
- <sup>4</sup> because of the ruined soil;
Because there is no rain in the land
the farmers are confounded, they cover their heads.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>Even the doe in the field deserts her
young
because there is no grass.
- <sup>6</sup>The wild donkeys stand on the bare
heights,
gasping for breath like jackals;
Their eyes grow dim;
there is no grass.
- <sup>7</sup>Even though our crimes bear witness against us,
act, LORD, for your name's sake—
Even though our rebellions are many,
and we have sinned against you.<sup>i</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>Hope of Israel, LORD,
our savior in time of need!
Why should you be a stranger in the land,
like a traveler stopping only for a
night?
- <sup>9</sup>Why are you like someone bewildered,

a champion who cannot save?
You are in our midst, LORD,
your name we bear:
do not forsake us!<sup>j</sup>

<sup>10</sup> Thus says the LORD about this people:
They so love to wander
that they cannot restrain their feet.
The LORD takes no pleasure in them;
now he remembers their guilt,
and will punish their sins.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>11</sup> Then the LORD said to me: Do not intercede for the well-being of this people.<sup>l</sup> <sup>12</sup> If they fast, I will not listen to their supplication. If they sacrifice burnt offerings or grain offerings, I will take no pleasure in them. Rather, I will destroy them with the sword, famine, and plague.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>13</sup> “Ah! Lord God,” I replied, “it is the prophets who say to them, ‘You shall not see the sword; famine shall not befall you. Indeed, I will give you lasting peace in this place.’ ”<sup>n</sup>

<sup>14</sup> These prophets utter lies in my name, the LORD said to me: I did not send them; I gave them no command, nor did I speak to them. They prophesy to you lying visions, foolish divination, deceptions from their own imagination.<sup>o</sup> <sup>15</sup> Therefore, thus says the LORD: Concerning the prophets who prophesy in my name, though I did not send them, and who say, “Sword and famine shall not befall this land”: by sword and famine shall these prophets meet their end.<sup>p</sup> <sup>16</sup> The people to whom they prophesy shall be thrown out into the streets of Jerusalem because of famine and the sword. No one shall bury them, their wives, their sons, or their daughters, for I will pour out upon them their own wickedness.<sup>q</sup> <sup>17</sup> Speak to them this word:

Let my eyes stream with tears
night and day, without rest,
Over the great destruction which overwhelms
the virgin daughter of my people,
over her incurable wound.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>18</sup> If I walk out into the field,
look! those slain by the sword;
If I enter the city,

look! victims of famine.
Both prophet and priest ply their trade
in a land they do not know.

<sup>19</sup>Have you really cast Judah off?
Is Zion loathsome to you?
Why have you struck us a blow
that cannot be healed?
We wait for peace, to no avail;
for a time of healing, but terror comes
instead.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>20</sup>We recognize our wickedness, LORD,
the guilt of our ancestors:
we have sinned against you.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Do not reject us, for your name's sake,
do not disgrace your glorious throne.
Remember! Do not break your covenant with us.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Among the idols of the nations are there any that give rain?
Or can the mere heavens send showers?
Is it not you, LORD,
our God, to whom we look?
You alone do all these things.<sup>v</sup>

CHAPTER 15

See RG 343–48

<sup>1</sup>The LORD said to me: Even if Moses and Samuel stood before me, my heart would not turn toward this people. Send them away from me and let them go.<sup>w</sup> <sup>2</sup>If they ask you, “Where should we go?” tell them, Thus says the LORD: Whoever is marked for death, to death; whoever is marked for the sword, to the sword; whoever is marked for famine, to famine; whoever is marked for captivity, to captivity.<sup>x</sup> <sup>3</sup>Four kinds of scourge I have decreed against them—oracle of the LORD—the sword to kill them; dogs to drag them off; the birds of the sky and the beasts of the earth to devour and destroy them.<sup>y</sup> <sup>4</sup>And I will make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth because of what Manasseh, son of Hezekiah, king of Judah, did in Jerusalem.<sup>z</sup>

Scene of Tragedy

- <sup>5</sup>Who will pity you, Jerusalem,
    who will grieve for you?
    Who will stop to ask about your welfare?<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>It is you who have disowned me—oracle
    of the LORD—
    turned your back upon me;
    I stretched out my hand to destroy you,
    because I was weary of relenting.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>I winnowed them with a winnowing fork
    at the gates of the land;
    I have bereaved, destroyed my people;
    they have not turned from their evil ways.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>Their widows were more numerous before me
    than the sands of the sea.
    I brought against the mother of youths
    the destroyer at midday;
    Suddenly I struck her
    with anguish and terror.
- <sup>9</sup>The mother of seven faints away,

breathing out her life;
Her sun sets in full day,
she is ashamed, abashed.
Their survivors I will give to the sword
in the presence of their enemies—
oracle of the LORD.<sup>d</sup>

Jeremiah's Complaint

<sup>10</sup>Woe to me, my mother, that you gave me
birth!
a man of strife and contention to all
the land!
I neither borrow nor lend,
yet everyone curses me.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Tell me, LORD, have I not served you for their good?
Have I not interceded with you in time of misfortune and anguish?<sup>f</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Can one break iron,
iron from the north, and bronze?

<sup>13*</sup> Your wealth and your treasures
I give as plunder, demanding no payment,
because of all your sins, throughout all your territory.

<sup>14</sup>And I shall enslave you to your enemies
in a land you do not know,
For fire has broken out from my anger,
it is kindled against you.

<sup>15</sup> You know, Lord:
Remember me and take care of me,
avenge me on my persecutors.
Because you are slow to anger, do not banish me;
know that for you I have borne insult.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>16</sup>When I found your words, I devoured
them;
your words were my joy, the happiness
of my heart,
Because I bear your name,
LORD, God of hosts.

17 I did not sit celebrating in the circle of merry-makers;
Under the weight of your hand I sat alone
because you filled me with rage.<sup>h</sup>

18 Why is my pain continuous,
my wound incurable, refusing to be healed?
To me you are like a deceptive brook,
waters that cannot be relied on!<sup>i</sup>

19 Thus the LORD answered me:
If you come back and I take you back,
in my presence you shall stand;
If you utter what is precious and not what is worthless,
you shall be my mouth.
Then they will be the ones who turn to
you,
not you who turn to them.

20 And I will make you toward this people
a fortified wall of bronze.
Though they fight against you,
they shall not prevail,
For I am with you,
to save and rescue you—oracle of the LORD.<sup>j</sup>

21 I will rescue you from the hand of the
wicked,
and ransom you from the power of the violent.

CHAPTER 16

See RG 343–48

Jeremiah's Life a Warning. <sup>1</sup>This word came to me from the LORD: <sup>2</sup>Do not take a wife and do not have sons and daughters in this place, <sup>3</sup>for thus says the LORD concerning the sons and daughters born in this place, the mothers who give them birth, the fathers who beget them in this land: <sup>4</sup>Of deadly disease they shall die. Unlamented and unburied they will lie like dung on the ground. Sword and famine will make an end of them, and their corpses will become food for the birds of the sky and the beasts of the earth.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Thus says the LORD: Do not go into a house of mourning; do not go there to lament or grieve for them. For I have withdrawn my peace from this people—oracle of the LORD—my love and my compassion.<sup>l</sup> <sup>6</sup>They shall die, the great and the lowly, in this land, unburied and unlamented.* No one will gash themselves or shave their heads for them.<sup>m</sup> <sup>7</sup>They will not break bread with the bereaved to offer consolation for the dead; they will not give them the cup of consolation to drink over the death of father or mother.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Do not enter a house of feasting to sit eating and drinking with them. <sup>9</sup>For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Before your eyes and in your lifetime, I will silence in this place the song of joy and the song of gladness, the song of the bridegroom and the song of the bride.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>10</sup>When you proclaim all these words to this people and they ask you: “Why has the LORD pronounced all this great disaster against us? What is our crime? What sin have we committed against the LORD, our God?”—<sup>p</sup> <sup>11q</sup>you shall answer them: It is because your ancestors have forsaken me—oracle of the LORD—and followed other gods that they served and worshiped; but me they have forsaken, and my law they did not keep. <sup>12</sup>And you have done worse than your ancestors. Here you are, every one of you, walking in the stubbornness of your evil heart instead of listening to me.<sup>r</sup> <sup>13</sup>I will throw you out of this land into a land that neither you nor your ancestors have known; there you can serve other gods day and night because I will not show you mercy.

Return from Exile. <sup>14</sup>Therefore, days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when it will no longer be said, “As the LORD lives, who brought the Israelites out of Egypt”;<sup>s</sup> <sup>15</sup>but rather, “As the LORD lives, who brought the Israelites out of the land of the north and out of all the countries to which he had banished them.” I will bring them back to the land I gave their ancestors.<sup>t</sup>

Double Punishment.<sup>16</sup>Look!—oracle of the LORD—I will send many fishermen to catch them. After that, I will send many hunters to hunt them out from every mountain and hill and rocky crevice.<sup>u</sup> <sup>17</sup>For my eyes are upon all their ways; they are not hidden from me, nor does their guilt escape my sight.<sup>v</sup> <sup>18</sup>I will at once repay them double for their crime and their sin because they profaned my land with the corpses of their detestable idols, and filled my heritage with their abominations.<sup>w</sup>

Conversion of the Nations

<sup>19</sup>LORD, my strength, my fortress,
my refuge in the day of distress!
To you nations will come from the ends of the earth, and say, “Our ancestors inherited mere frauds, empty, worthless.”<sup>x</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Can human beings make for themselves gods?
But these are not gods at all!<sup>y</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Therefore, I will indeed give them
knowledge;
this time I will make them acknowledge
My strength and my power:
they shall know that my name is LORD.<sup>z</sup>

CHAPTER 17

See RG 343–48

The Sin of Judah and Its Punishment

<sup>1</sup>The sin of Judah is written with an iron stylus, Engraved with a diamond point
upon the tablets of their hearts,<sup>a</sup>

And the horns of their altars, <sup>2</sup>when their children remember their altars and their asherahs, beside the green trees, on the high hills, <sup>3</sup>the peaks in the country.

Your wealth and all your treasures
I give as plunder,
As payment for all your sins
throughout your territory,

<sup>4</sup>You will relinquish your hold on your heritage
which I have given you.
I will enslave you to your enemies
in a land you do not know:
For a fire has broken out from my anger,
burning forever.<sup>b</sup>

True Wisdom

<sup>5</sup> Thus says the LORD:
Cursed is the man who trusts in human
beings,
who makes flesh his strength,
whose heart turns away from the LORD.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>6</sup>He is like a barren bush in the wasteland
that enjoys no change of season,
But stands in lava beds in the wilderness,
a land, salty and uninhabited.

<sup>7</sup>Blessed are those who trust in the LORD;
the LORD will be their trust.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>8</sup>They are like a tree planted beside the waters

- that stretches out its roots to the stream:
It does not fear heat when it comes,
its leaves stay green;
In the year of drought it shows no
distress,
but still produces fruit.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>More tortuous than anything is the human heart,
beyond remedy; who can understand it?
- <sup>10</sup>I, the LORD, explore the mind
and test the heart,
Giving to all according to their ways,
according to the fruit of their deeds.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>A partridge that broods but does not hatch
are those who acquire wealth unjustly:
In midlife it will desert them;
in the end they are only fools.<sup>g</sup>

The Source of Life

- <sup>12</sup>A throne of glory, exalted from the
beginning,
such is our holy place.<sup>h</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>O Hope of Israel, LORD!
all who forsake you shall be put to
shame;
The rebels shall be enrolled in the netherworld;
they have forsaken the LORD, source of living waters.<sup>i</sup>

Prayer for Vengeance

- <sup>14</sup>Heal me, LORD, that I may be healed;
save me, that I may be saved,
for you are my praise.
- <sup>15</sup>See how they say to me,
“Where is the word of the LORD?
Let it come to pass!”<sup>j</sup>
- <sup>16</sup>Yet I did not press you to send disaster;
the day without remedy I have not desired.

You know what passed my lips;
it is present before you.

<sup>17</sup>Do not become a terror to me,
you are my refuge in the day of disaster.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Let my persecutors be confounded—not me!

let them be terrified—not me!
Bring upon them the day of disaster,
crush them with double destruction.<sup>l</sup>

Observance of the Sabbath. <sup>19</sup>Thus said the LORD to me: Go, stand at the Gate of Benjamin,* where the kings of Judah enter and leave, and at the other gates of Jerusalem.<sup>m</sup> <sup>20</sup>There say to them: Hear the word of the LORD, you kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all you inhabitants of Jerusalem who enter these gates! <sup>21</sup>Thus says the LORD: As you love your lives, take care not to carry burdens on the sabbath, to bring them in through the gates of Jerusalem.<sup>n</sup> <sup>22</sup>Bring no burden from your homes on the sabbath. Do no work whatever, but keep holy the sabbath day, as I commanded your ancestors,<sup>o</sup> <sup>23</sup>though they did not listen or give ear, but stiffened their necks so they could not hear or take correction.<sup>p</sup> <sup>24</sup>If you truly obey me— oracle of the LORD—and carry no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath, keeping the sabbath day holy and abstaining from all work on it,<sup>q</sup> <sup>25</sup>then, through the gates of this city, kings who sit upon the throne of David will continue to enter, riding in their chariots or upon their horses, along with their princes, and the people of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. This city will remain inhabited forever.<sup>r</sup> <sup>26</sup>To it people will come from the cities of Judah and the neighborhood of Jerusalem, from the land of Benjamin and from the Shephelah, from the hill country and the Negeb, to bring burnt offerings and sacrifices, grain offerings, incense, and thank offerings to the house of the LORD.<sup>s</sup> <sup>27</sup>But if you do not obey me and keep holy the sabbath day, if you carry burdens and come through the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath, I will set fire to its gates—a fire never to be extinguished—and it will consume the palaces of Jerusalem.<sup>t</sup>

CHAPTER 18

The Potter's Vessel.* <sup>1</sup>This word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: <sup>2</sup>Arise and go down to the potter's house; there you will hear my word. <sup>3</sup>I went down to the potter's house and there he was, working at the wheel. <sup>4</sup>Whenever the vessel of clay he was making turned out badly in his hand, he tried again, making another vessel of whatever sort he pleased.<sup>u</sup> <sup>5</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>6</sup>Can I not do to you, house of Israel, as this potter has done?—oracle of the LORD. Indeed, like clay in the hand of the potter, so are you in my hand, house of Israel.<sup>v</sup> <sup>7w</sup> At one moment I may decree concerning a nation or kingdom that I will uproot and tear down and destroy it; <sup>8</sup>but if that nation against whom I have decreed turns from its evil, then I will have a change of heart regarding the evil which I have decreed.<sup>x</sup> <sup>9</sup>At another moment, I may decree concerning a nation or kingdom that I will build up and plant it; <sup>10</sup>but if that nation does what is evil in my eyes, refusing to obey my voice, then I will have a change of heart regarding the good with which I planned to bless it.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>11</sup>And now, tell this to the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: Thus says the LORD: Look, I am fashioning evil against you and making a plan. Return, all of you, from your evil way; reform your ways and your deeds.<sup>z</sup> <sup>12</sup>But they will say, “No use! We will follow our own devices; each one of us will behave according to the stubbornness of our evil hearts!”<sup>a</sup>

Unnatural Apostasy

- <sup>13</sup> Therefore thus says the LORD:
Ask among the nations—
who has ever heard the like?
Truly horrible things
virgin Israel has done!<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>14</sup> Does the snow of Lebanon*
desert the rocky heights?
Do the gushing waters dry up that flow fresh down the mountains?
- <sup>15</sup> Yet my people have forgotten me:
they offer incense in vain.

They stumble off their paths,
the ways of old,
Traveling on bypaths,
not the beaten track.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Their land shall be made a waste, an object of endless hissing:*
All passersby will be horrified, shaking their heads.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Like the east wind, I will scatter them
before their enemies;
I will show them my back, not my face,
in their day of disaster.<sup>e</sup>

Another Prayer for Vengeance. <sup>18</sup>“Come,” they said, “let us devise a plot against Jeremiah, for instruction will not perish from the priests, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophets. Come, let us destroy him by his own tongue. Let us pay careful attention to his every word.”<sup>f</sup>

and listen to what my adversaries say.

<sup>20</sup>Must good be repaid with evil that they should dig a pit to take my
life?

Remember that I stood before you
to speak on their behalf,
to turn your wrath away from them.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>21</sup>So now, give their children* to famine,<sup>h</sup> deliver them to the power of the sword.
Let their wives be childless and widows;
let their husbands die of pestilence,
their youths be struck down by the sword in battle.

<sup>22</sup>May cries be heard from their homes,
when suddenly you send plunderers
against them.

For they have dug a pit to capture me,
they have hidden snares for my feet;

<sup>23</sup>But you, LORD, know
all their planning for my death.
Do not forgive their crime,
and their sin do not blot out from your

sight!

Let them stumble before you,
in the time of your anger act against them. i

CHAPTER 19

See RG 343–48

Symbol of the Potter's Flask. <sup>1</sup>Thus said the LORD: Go, buy a potter's earthenware flask. Take along some of the elders of the people and some of the priests, <sup>2</sup>and go out toward the Valley of Ben-hinnom, at the entrance of the Potsherd Gate;* there proclaim the words which I will speak to you: <sup>3</sup>You shall say, Listen to the word of the LORD, kings of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to bring such evil upon this place that the ears of all who hear of it will ring. <sup>4</sup>All because they have forsaken me and profaned this place by burning incense to other gods which neither they nor their ancestors knew; and because the kings of Judah have filled this place with innocent blood,<sup>j</sup> <sup>5</sup>building high places for Baal to burn their children in fire as offerings to Baal—something I never considered or said or commanded.<sup>k 6*</sup> Therefore, days are coming— oracle of the LORD—when this place will no longer be called Topheth, or the Valley of Ben-hinnom, but rather, the Valley of Slaughter.<sup>l</sup> <sup>7</sup>In this place I will foil the plan of Judah and Jerusalem; I will make them fall by the sword before their enemies, at the hand of those who seek their lives. Their corpses I will give as food to the birds of the sky and the beasts of the earth.<sup>m</sup> <sup>8</sup>I will make this city a waste and an object of hissing. Because of all its wounds, every passerby will be horrified and hiss. <sup>9</sup>I will have them eat the flesh of their sons and daughters; they shall eat one another's flesh during the harsh siege under which their enemies and those who seek their lives will confine them.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>10</sup>And you shall break the flask in the sight of the men who went with you, <sup>11</sup>and say to them: Thus says the LORD of hosts: Thus will I smash this people and this city, as one smashes a clay pot so that it cannot be repaired. And Topheth shall be its burial place, for there will be no other place for burial.<sup>o</sup> <sup>12</sup>Thus I will do to this place and to its inhabitants—oracle of the LORD; I will make this city like Topheth.<sup>p</sup> <sup>13</sup>And the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kings of Judah shall be defiled like the place of Topheth, all the houses upon whose roofs they burnt incense to the whole host of heaven and poured out libations to other gods.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>14</sup>When Jeremiah returned from Topheth, where the LORD had sent him to prophesy, he stood in the court of the house of the LORD and said to all the people:<sup>r</sup> <sup>15</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I will bring upon this city all the evil I have spoken against it, because they have become stubborn and have not obeyed my words.<sup>s</sup>

Jeremiah's Interior Crisis

<sup>7</sup>You seduced me,* LORD, and I let myself be seduced;
you were too strong for me, and you prevailed.
All day long I am an object of laughter;
everyone mocks me.

<sup>8</sup>Whenever I speak, I must cry out, violence and outrage I proclaim;
The word of the LORD has brought me
reproach and derision all day long.

<sup>9</sup>I say I will not mention him,
I will no longer speak in his name.
But then it is as if fire is burning in my
heart,
imprisoned in my bones;
I grow weary holding back,
I cannot!<sup>y</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Yes, I hear the whisperings of many:

"Terror on every side!
 Denounce! let us denounce him!"
 All those who were my friends are on the watch for any misstep of mine.
 "Perhaps he can be tricked; then we will prevail,
 and take our revenge on him."<sup>z</sup>

<sup>11</sup> But the LORD is with me, like a mighty champion:
 my persecutors will stumble, they will not prevail.
 In their failure they will be put to utter
 shame,
 to lasting, unforgettable confusion.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>12</sup> LORD of hosts, you test the just,
 you see mind and heart,
 Let me see the vengeance you take on
 them,
 for to you I have entrusted my cause.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>13</sup> Sing to the LORD,
 praise the LORD,
 For he has rescued the life of the poor
 from the power of the evildoers!<sup>c</sup>

<sup>14</sup> Cursed be the day*
 on which I was born!
 May the day my mother gave me birth
 never be blessed!<sup>d</sup>

<sup>15</sup> Cursed be the one who brought the news
 to my father,
 "A child, a son, has been born to you!"
 filling him with great joy.

<sup>16</sup> Let that man be like the cities which the LORD relentlessly
 overthrew;
 Let him hear war cries in the morning,
 battle alarms at noonday,<sup>e</sup>

<sup>17</sup> because he did not kill me in the
 womb!
 Then my mother would have been my
 grave,

her womb confining me forever.<sup>f</sup> <sup>18</sup>Why did I come forth from the womb,
to see sorrow and pain,
to end my days in shame?<sup>g</sup>

III. Oracles in the Last Years of Jerusalem

CHAPTER 21

See RG 343–48

Fate of Zedekiah and Jerusalem.<sup>1</sup>The word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD when King Zedekiah* sent Pashhur, son of Malchiah, and the priest Zephaniah, son of Maaseiah, to him with this request: <sup>2</sup>Inquire for us of the LORD, because Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, is attacking us. Perhaps the LORD will act for us in accord with his wonderful works by making him withdraw from us. <sup>3</sup>But Jeremiah answered them: This is what you shall report to Zedekiah: <sup>4</sup>Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: I will turn against you the weapons with which you are fighting the king of Babylon and the Chaldeans who besiege you outside the walls. These weapons I will pile up in the midst of this city,<sup>h</sup> <sup>5</sup>and I myself will fight against you with outstretched hand and mighty arm, in anger, wrath, and great rage!<sup>i</sup> <sup>6</sup>I will strike down the inhabitants of this city, human being and beast; they shall die in a great pestilence.<sup>j</sup> <sup>7</sup>After that—oracle of the LORD—I will hand over Zedekiah, king of Judah, and his ministers and the people in this city who survive pestilence, sword, and famine, to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, to their enemies and those who seek their lives. He shall strike them down with the edge of the sword, without quarter, without mercy or compassion.<sup>k</sup> <sup>8</sup>And to this people you shall say: Thus says the LORD: See, I am giving you a choice between the way to life and the way to death.<sup>l</sup> <sup>9</sup>Whoever remains in this city shall die by the sword or famine or pestilence. But whoever leaves and surrenders to the Chaldeans who are besieging you shall live and escape with his life. <sup>10</sup>I have set my face against this city, for evil and not for good—oracle of the LORD. It shall be given into the power of the king of Babylon who shall set it on fire.*

Oracles Regarding the Kings*

<sup>11</sup>To the royal house of Judah:
Hear the word of the LORD,

<sup>12</sup> house of David!
Thus says the LORD:
Each morning dispense justice, rescue the oppressed from the hand of the oppressor,
Or my fury will break out like fire

and burn with no one to quench it because of your evil deeds.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Beware! I am against you, Ruler of the Valley,

Rock of the Plain* —oracle of the LORD.
You say, “Who will attack us,
who can storm our defenses?”

<sup>14</sup>I will punish you—oracle of the LORD—
as your deeds deserve!

I will kindle a fire in its forest*
that shall devour all its surroundings.<sup>n</sup>

CHAPTER 22

See RG 343–48

<sup>1</sup>Thus says the LORD: Go down to the palace of the king of Judah and there deliver this word: <sup>2</sup>You shall say: Listen to the word of the LORD, king of Judah, who sit on the throne of David, you, your ministers, and your people who enter by these gates!<sup>o</sup> <sup>3</sup>Thus says the LORD: Do what is right and just. Rescue the victims from the hand of their oppressors. Do not wrong or oppress the resident alien, the orphan, or the widow, and do not shed innocent blood in this place.<sup>p</sup> <sup>4</sup>If you carry out these commands, kings who succeed to the throne of David will continue to enter the gates of this house, riding in chariots or mounted on horses, with their ministers, and their people. <sup>5</sup>But if you do not obey these commands, I swear by myself—oracle of the LORD: this house shall become rubble. <sup>6</sup>For thus says the LORD concerning the house of the king of Judah:

Though you be to me like Gilead,
like the peak of Lebanon,
I swear I shall turn you into a waste,
with cities uninhabited.

<sup>7</sup>Against you I will send destroyers,
each with their tools:
They shall cut down your choice cedars,
and cast them into the fire.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Many nations will pass by this city and ask one another: “Why has the LORD done this to so great a city?”<sup>r</sup> <sup>9</sup>And they will be told: “Because they have deserted their covenant with the LORD, their God, by worshiping and serving other gods.”<sup>s</sup>

Jehoahaz

<sup>10</sup>Do not weep for him who is dead,* nor mourn for him!
Weep rather for him who is going away;
never again to see
the land of his birth.<sup>t</sup>

place where they exiled him, there he shall die; he shall never see this land again.

Jehoiakim

<sup>13</sup>Woe to him who builds his house on wrongdoing,
    his roof-chambers on injustice;

Who works his neighbors without pay,*
    and gives them no wages.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Who says, "I will build myself a spacious
    house,
    with airy rooms,"
Who cuts out windows for it, panels it with cedar,
    and paints it with vermilion.

<sup>15</sup>Must you prove your rank among kings*
    by competing with them in cedar?
Did not your father eat and drink,
    And act justly and righteously?
    Then he prospered.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Because he dispensed justice to the weak and the poor,
    he prospered.
Is this not to know me?—
    oracle of the LORD.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>17</sup>But your eyes and heart are set on
    nothing
    except your own gain,
On shedding innocent blood and practicing oppression
    extortion.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD concerning Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, king of Judah:
They shall not lament him,

    "Alas! my brother"; "Alas! sister."*
They shall not lament him,

    "Alas, Lord! alas, Majesty!"<sup>y</sup>

<sup>19</sup>The burial of a donkey* he shall be given,
    dragged forth and cast out beyond the gates of Jerusalem.<sup>z</sup>

Jeconiah

<sup>20</sup>Climb Lebanon and cry out,*
in Bashan lift up your voice; Cry out from Abarim,
for all your lovers are crushed.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>21</sup>I spoke to you when you were secure,
but you answered, "I will not listen."
This has been your way from your youth,
not to listen to my voice.

<sup>22</sup>The wind shall shepherd all your shepherds,
your lovers shall go into exile.
Surely then you shall be ashamed and confounded
because of all your wickedness.

<sup>23</sup>You who dwell on Lebanon,
who nest in the cedars,
How you shall groan when pains come
upon you,
like the pangs of a woman in childbirth!

<sup>24</sup>As I live—oracle of the LORD—even if you, Coniah,* son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, were a signet ring<sup>b</sup> on my right hand, I would snatch you off. <sup>25</sup>I will hand you over to those who seek your life, to those you dread: Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and the Chaldeans.<sup>c</sup> <sup>26</sup>I will cast you out, you and the mother who bore you,* into a land different from the land of your birth; and there you will die;<sup>d</sup> <sup>27</sup>Neither shall return to the land for which they yearn.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>28</sup>Is this man Coniah a thing despised, to be
broken,
a vessel that no one wants?
Why are he and his offspring cast out?
why thrown into a land they do not
know?

<sup>29</sup>O land, land, land,
hear the word of the LORD—

<sup>f</sup>Write this man down as childless,*
a man who will never prosper in his life!

Nor shall any of his descendants prosper,
to sit upon the throne of David,
to rule again over Judah.

CHAPTER 23

See RG 343–48

A Just Shepherd. <sup>*1g</sup> Woe to the shepherds who destroy and scatter the flock of my pasture—oracle of the LORD. <sup>2</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, against the shepherds who shepherd my people: You have scattered my sheep and driven them away. You have not cared for them, but I will take care to punish your evil deeds.<sup>h</sup> <sup>3</sup>I myself will gather the remnant of my flock from all the lands to which I have banished them and bring them back to their folds; there they shall be fruitful and multiply.<sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>I will raise up shepherds for them who will shepherd them so that they need no longer fear or be terrified; none shall be missing— oracle of the LORD.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>5</sup>See, days are coming—oracle of the Lord—
when I will raise up a righteous branch
for David;
As king he shall reign and govern wisely,
he shall do what is just and right in the land.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>6</sup>In his days Judah shall be saved,
Israel shall dwell in security.
This is the name to be given him:
“The Lord our justice.”<sup>l</sup>

<sup>7m</sup> Therefore, the days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when they shall no longer say, “As the LORD lives, who brought the Israelites out of the land of Egypt”; <sup>8</sup>but rather, “As the LORD lives, who brought the descendants of the house of Israel up from the land of the north”—and from all the lands to which I banished them; they shall again live on their own soil.

The False Prophets *

My heart is broken within me,
all my bones tremble;
I am like a drunk,
like one overcome by wine,

- Because of the LORD,
because of his holy words.
- 10 The land is filled with adulterers;
because of the curse the land mourns,
the pastures of the wilderness are withered.<sup>n</sup> Theirs is an evil course,
theirs is unjust power.
- 11 Both prophet and priest are godless!
In my very house I find their
wickedness—
oracle of the LORD.<sup>o</sup>
- 12 Hence their way shall become for them
slippery ground.
Into the darkness they shall be driven,
and fall headlong;
For I will bring disaster upon them,
the year of their punishment—oracle
of the LORD.<sup>p</sup>
- 13 Among Samaria's prophets
I saw something unseemly:
They prophesied by Baal
and led my people Israel astray.<sup>q</sup>
- 14 But among Jerusalem's prophets
I saw something more shocking:
Adultery, walking in deception,* strengthening the power of the
wicked,
so that no one turns from evil;
To me they are all like Sodom,
its inhabitants like Gomorrah.<sup>r</sup>
- 15 Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts against the prophets:

Look, I will give them wormwood to eat,
and poisoned water to drink;
For from Jerusalem's prophets ungodliness has gone forth into the whole land.<sup>s</sup>
- 16 Thus says the LORD of hosts:
Do not listen to the words of your

- prophets,
who fill you with emptiness;
They speak visions from their own fancy,
not from the mouth of the LORD.<sup>t</sup>
- 17 They say to those who despise the word of the Lord,* “Peace shall be yours”;
And to everyone who walks in hardness
of heart,
“No evil shall overtake you.”<sup>u</sup>
- 18 Now, who has stood in the council of the LORD,
to see him and to hear his word?
Who has heeded his word so as to announce it?<sup>v</sup>
- 19 See, the storm of the LORD!
His wrath breaks forth
In a whirling storm
that bursts upon the heads of the wicked.<sup>w</sup>
- 20 The anger of the LORD shall not abate
until he has carried out completely
the decisions of his heart.
In days to come
you will understand fully.
- 21 I did not send these prophets,
yet they ran;
I did not speak to them,
yet they prophesied.<sup>x</sup>
- 22 Had they stood in my council,
they would have proclaimed my words
to my people,
They would have brought them back from their evil ways
and from their wicked deeds.
- 23 Am I a God near at hand only—oracle of the LORD—<sup>y</sup>
and not a God far off?*
- 24 Can anyone hide in secret without my seeing them?—oracle of

the LORD.
Do I not fill
heaven and earth?—oracle of the LORD.

<sup>25</sup>I have heard the prophets who prophesy lies in my name say, “I had a dream! I had a dream!” <sup>26</sup>How long? Will the hearts of the prophets who prophesy lies and their own deceitful fancies ever turn back? <sup>27</sup>By the dreams they tell each other, they plan to make my people forget my name, just as their ancestors forgot my name for Baal.<sup>z</sup> <sup>28</sup>Let the prophets who have dreams tell their dreams; let those who have my word speak my word truthfully!

What has straw to do with wheat?*
—oracle of the LORD.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>29</sup>Is not my word like fire—oracle of the LORD—
like a hammer shattering rock?

<sup>30</sup>Therefore I am against the prophets—oracle of the LORD—those who steal my words from each other.<sup>b</sup> <sup>31</sup>Yes, I am against the prophets—oracle of the LORD—those who compose their own speeches and call them oracles. <sup>32</sup>Yes, I am against the prophets who tell lying dreams—oracle of the LORD—those who lead my people astray by recounting their reckless lies. It was not I who sent them or commanded them; they do this people no good at all—oracle of the LORD.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>33*</sup> And when this people or a prophet or a priest asks you, “What is the burden of the LORD?” you shall answer, “You are the burden, and I cast you off”—oracle of the LORD. <sup>34</sup>If a prophet or a priest or anyone else mentions “the burden of the LORD,” I will punish that man and his household. <sup>35</sup>Thus you shall ask, when speaking to one another, “What answer did the LORD give?” or “What did the LORD say?” <sup>36</sup>But “the burden of the LORD” you shall mention no more. For each of you, your own word becomes the burden so that you pervert the words of the living God, the LORD of hosts, our God. <sup>37</sup>Thus shall you ask the prophet, “What answer did the LORD give?” or “What did the LORD say?” <sup>38</sup>But if you ask about “the burden of the LORD,” then thus says the LORD: Because you use this phrase, “the burden of the LORD,” though I forbade you to use it, <sup>39</sup>therefore I will lift you on high and cast you from my presence, you and the city which I gave to you and your ancestors. <sup>40</sup>And I will bring upon you eternal reproach, eternal shame, never to be forgotten.<sup>d</sup>

CHAPTER 24

The Two Baskets of Figs. <sup>a</sup> <sup>1</sup>The LORD showed me two baskets of figs placed before the temple of the LORD. <sup>e</sup> This was after Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, had exiled from Jerusalem Jeconiah, <sup>a</sup> son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, the artisans and smiths, and brought them to Babylon. <sup>2</sup>One basket contained excellent figs, those that ripen early. But the other basket contained very bad figs, so bad they could not be eaten. <sup>3</sup>Then the LORD said to me: What do you see, Jeremiah? <sup>f</sup> ”Figs,” I replied; “the good ones are very good, but the bad ones very bad, so bad they cannot be eaten.” <sup>4</sup>Thereupon this word of the LORD came to me: <sup>5</sup>Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Like these good figs, I will also regard with favor Judah’s exiles whom I sent away from this place into the land of the Chaldeans. <sup>g</sup> <sup>6</sup>I will look after them for good and bring them back to this land, to build them up, not tear them down; to plant them, not uproot them. <sup>h</sup> <sup>7</sup>I will give them a heart to know me, that I am the LORD. They shall be my people and I will be their God, for they shall return to me with their whole heart. <sup>i</sup> <sup>8</sup>But like the figs that are bad, so bad they cannot be eaten—yes, thus says the LORD— even so will I treat Zedekiah, king of Judah, and his princes, the remnant of Jerusalem remaining in this land and those who have settled in the land of Egypt. <sup>j</sup> <sup>9</sup>I will make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, a reproach and a byword, a taunt and a curse, in all the places to which I will drive them. <sup>k</sup> <sup>10</sup>I will send upon them sword, famine, and pestilence, until they have disappeared from the land which I gave them and their ancestors. <sup>l</sup>

CHAPTER 25

Seventy Years of Exile. <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, * son of Josiah, king of Judah (the first year of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon). <sup>m</sup> <sup>2</sup>This word the prophet Jeremiah spoke to all the people of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: <sup>3</sup>Since the thirteenth year of Josiah, son of Amon, king of Judah, to this day—that is, twenty-three years—the word of the LORD has come to me and I spoke to you untiringly, but you would not listen. <sup>n</sup> <sup>4</sup>The LORD kept sending you all his servants the prophets, <sup>o</sup> but you refused to listen or pay attention <sup>5</sup>to this message: Turn back, each of you, from your evil way and from your evil deeds; then you shall remain in the land which the LORD gave you and your ancestors, from of old and forever. <sup>6</sup>Do not follow other gods to serve and bow down to them; do not provoke me with the works of your hands, or I will bring evil upon you. <sup>p</sup> <sup>7</sup>But you would not listen to me—oracle of the LORD—and so you provoked me with the works of your hands to your own harm. <sup>q</sup> <sup>8</sup>Hence, thus says the LORD of hosts: Since you would not listen to my words, <sup>9</sup>I am about to send for and fetch all the tribes from the north—oracle of the LORD—and I will send for Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, my servant; I will bring them against this land, its inhabitants, and all these neighboring nations. I will doom them, making them an object of horror, of hissing, of everlasting reproach. <sup>r</sup> <sup>10</sup>Among them I will put to an end the song of joy and the song of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the sound of the millstone and the light of the lamp. <sup>11</sup>This whole land shall be a ruin and a waste. Seventy years these nations shall serve the king of Babylon; <sup>s</sup> <sup>12</sup>but when the seventy years have elapsed, I will punish the king of Babylon and that nation and the land of the Chaldeans for their guilt—oracle of the LORD. Their land I will turn into everlasting waste. <sup>t</sup> <sup>13</sup>Against that land I will fulfill all the words I have spoken against it, all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah prophesied against all the nations. <sup>14</sup>They also shall serve many nations and great kings, and thus I will repay them according to their own deeds and according to the works of their hands. <sup>u</sup>

The Cup of Judgment on the Nations.<sup>15*</sup> For thus said the LORD, the God of Israel, to me: Take this cup of the wine of wrath* from my hand and have all the nations to whom I will send you drink it.<sup>v</sup> <sup>16</sup>They shall drink, and retch, and go mad, because of the sword I will send among them.<sup>w</sup> <sup>17</sup>I took the cup from the hand of the LORD and gave it as drink to all the nations to whom the LORD sent me: <sup>18</sup>to Jerusalem, the cities of Judah, its kings and princes, to make them a ruin and a waste, an object of hissing and cursing, as they are today; <sup>19</sup>to Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and his servants, princes, all his people <sup>20</sup>and those of mixed ancestry; all the kings of the land of Uz;* all the kings of the land of the Philistines: Ashkelon, Gaza, Ekron, and the remnant of Ashdod; <sup>21</sup>Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites; <sup>22</sup>all the kings of Tyre, of Sidon, and of the shores beyond the sea; <sup>23</sup>Dedan and Tema and Buz,* all the desert dwellers who shave their temples; <sup>24</sup>all the kings of Arabia; <sup>25</sup>all the kings of Zimri, of Elam, of the Medes; <sup>26</sup>all the kings of the north, near and far, one after the other; all the kingdoms upon the face of the earth and after them the king of Sheshach* shall drink.

<sup>27</sup>Tell them: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Drink! Get drunk and vomit! Fall, never to rise, before the sword that I will send among you!<sup>x</sup> <sup>28</sup>If they refuse to take the cup from your hand and drink, say to them: Thus says the LORD of hosts: You must drink!<sup>y</sup> <sup>29</sup>Now that I am inflicting evil on this city, called by my name, how can you possibly escape? You shall not escape! I am calling down the sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth—oracle of the LORD of hosts. <sup>30</sup>As for you, prophesy against them all these words and say to them:

The LORD roars from on high,
from his holy dwelling he raises his
voice;
Mightily he roars over his sheepfold,
a shout like that of vintagers echoes<sup>z</sup>
over all the inhabitants of the earth.

<sup>31</sup>The uproar spreads
to the end of the earth;
For the LORD has an indictment against
the nations,
he enters into judgment against all
flesh:

The wicked shall be given to the sword—
oracle of the LORD.

32 Thus says the LORD of hosts:
Look! disaster stalks
nation after nation;
A violent storm surges
from the recesses of the earth.

33 On that day, those whom the LORD has slain will be strewn from one end of the earth to the other. They will not be mourned, they will not be gathered, they will not be buried; they shall lie like dung upon the ground.<sup>a</sup>

34 Howl, you shepherds, and wail!
roll on the ground, leaders of the flock!
The time for your slaughter has come;
like choice rams you shall fall.

35 There is no flight for the shepherds,
no escape for the leaders of the flock.<sup>b</sup>

36 Listen! Wailing from the shepherds, howling from the leaders of the flock!
For the LORD lays waste their grazing
place;

37 desolate are the peaceful pastures,
from the burning wrath of the LORD.

38 Like a lion he leaves his lair,
and their land is made desolate
By the sweeping sword,
and the burning wrath of the LORD.<sup>c</sup>

CHAPTER 26

See RG 348–53

Jeremiah Threatened with Death. <sup>1</sup>In the beginning of the reign* of Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came from the LORD: <sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD: Stand in the court of the house of the LORD and speak to the inhabitants of all the cities of Judah who come to worship in the house of the LORD; whatever I command you, tell them, and hold nothing back.<sup>d</sup> <sup>3</sup>Perhaps they will listen and turn, all of them from their evil way, so that I may repent of the evil I plan to inflict upon them for their evil deeds.<sup>e</sup> <sup>4</sup>Say to them: Thus says the LORD: If you do not obey me, by walking according to the law I set before you <sup>5</sup>and listening to the words of my servants the prophets, whom I kept sending you, even though you do not listen to them,<sup>f</sup> <sup>6</sup>I will treat this house like Shiloh, and make this city a curse for all the nations of the earth.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Now the priests, the prophets, and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD. <sup>8</sup>When Jeremiah finished speaking all that the LORD commanded him to speak to all the people, then the priests, the prophets, and all the people laid hold of him, crying, “You must die! <sup>9</sup>Why do you prophesy in the name of the LORD: ‘This house shall become like Shiloh,’ and ‘This city shall be desolate, without inhabitant’?” And all the people crowded around Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

<sup>10</sup>When the princes of Judah heard about these things, they came up from the house of the king to the house of the LORD and convened at the New Gate of the house of the LORD. <sup>11</sup>The priests and prophets said to the princes and to all the people, “Sentence this man to death! He has prophesied against this city! You heard it with your own ears.”<sup>h</sup> <sup>12</sup>Jeremiah said to the princes and all the people: “It was the LORD who sent me to prophesy against this house and city everything you have heard. <sup>13</sup>Now, therefore, reform your ways and your deeds; listen to the voice of the LORD your God, so that the LORD will have a change of heart regarding the evil he has spoken against you.<sup>i</sup> <sup>14</sup>As for me, I am in your hands; do with me what is good and right in your eyes. <sup>15</sup>But you should certainly know that by putting me to death, you bring innocent blood on yourselves, on this city and its inhabitants. For in truth it was the LORD who sent me to you, to speak all these words for you to hear.”

<sup>16</sup>Then the princes and all the people said to the priests and the prophets, “This man does not deserve a death sentence; it is in the name of the LORD, our God, that he speaks to us.” <sup>17</sup>At this, some of the elders of the land arose and said to the whole assembly of the people, <sup>18</sup>“Micah of Moresheth* used to prophesy in the days of Hezekiah, king of Judah, and he said to all the people of Judah: Thus says the LORD of hosts:

Zion shall be plowed as a field,
Jerusalem, a heap of ruins,
and the temple mount,
a forest ridge.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Did Hezekiah, king of Judah, and all Judah condemn him to death? Did he not fear the LORD and entreat the favor of the LORD, so that the LORD had a change of heart regarding the evil he had spoken against them? We, however, are about to do great evil against ourselves.”<sup>k</sup>

The Fate of Uriah. <sup>20</sup>There was another man who used to prophesy in the name of the LORD, Uriah, son of Shemaiah, from Kiriath-jearim; he prophesied against this city and this land the same message as Jeremiah. <sup>21</sup>When King Jehoiakim and all his officers and princes heard his words, the king sought to have him killed. But Uriah heard of it and fled in fear to Egypt. <sup>22</sup>Then King Jehoiakim sent Elnathan, son of Achbor, and others with him into Egypt, <sup>23</sup>and they brought Uriah out of Egypt and took him to Jehoiakim the king, who struck him down with the sword and threw his corpse into the common burial ground. <sup>24</sup>But the hand of Ahikam, son of Shaphan,* protected Jeremiah, so they did not hand him over to the people to be put to death.

Serve Babylon or Perish. <sup>1</sup>In the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah,* son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: <sup>2</sup>The LORD said to me: Make for yourself thongs and yoke bars and put them on your shoulders. <sup>3</sup>Send them to the kings of Edom, Moab, the Ammonites, Tyre, and Sidon, through the ambassadors who have come to Jerusalem to Zedekiah, king of Judah,* <sup>4</sup>and command them to tell their lords: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Thus shall you say to your lords: <sup>5</sup>It was I who made the earth, human being and beast on the face of the earth, by my great power, with my outstretched arm; and I can give them to whomever I think fit.<sup>l</sup> <sup>6</sup>Now I have given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, my servant; even the wild animals I have given him to serve him.<sup>m</sup> <sup>7</sup>All nations shall serve him and his son and his grandson, until the time comes for him and his land; then many nations and great kings will enslave him.<sup>n</sup> <sup>8</sup>Meanwhile, the nation or the kingdom that will not serve him, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, or bend its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, I will punish that nation with sword, famine, and pestilence—oracle of the LORD—until I finish them by his hand.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>9</sup>You, however, must not listen to your prophets,* to your diviners and dreamers, to your soothsayers and sorcerers, who say to you, “Do not serve the king of Babylon.”<sup>p</sup> <sup>10</sup>For they prophesy lies to you, so as to drive you far from your land, making me banish you so that you perish.<sup>q</sup> <sup>11</sup>The people that bends the neck to the yoke of the king of Babylon to serve him, I will leave in peace on its own land—oracle of the LORD—to cultivate it and dwell on it.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>12</sup>To Zedekiah, king of Judah, I spoke the same words: Bend your necks to the yoke of the king of Babylon; serve him and his people, so that you may live.<sup>s</sup> <sup>13</sup>Why should you and your people die by sword, famine, and pestilence, in accordance with the word the LORD has spoken to the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon?<sup>t</sup> <sup>14</sup>Do not listen to the words of the prophets who say to you, “Do not serve the king of Babylon.” They prophesy lies to you!<sup>u</sup> <sup>15</sup>I did not send them—oracle of the LORD—but they prophecy falsely in my name. As a result I must banish you, and you will perish, you and the prophets who are prophesying to you.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>16w</sup> To the priests and to all the people I said: Thus says the LORD: Do not listen to the words of your prophets who prophesy to you: “The vessels of the house of the LORD will soon be brought back from Babylon,” for they prophesy lies to you. <sup>17</sup>Do not listen to them! Serve the king of Babylon that you may live. Why should this city become rubble? <sup>18</sup>If they were prophets, if the word of the LORD were with them, then they would intercede with the LORD of hosts, that the vessels remaining in the house of the LORD and in the house of the king of Judah and in Jerusalem should not also go to Babylon. <sup>19</sup>For thus says the LORD of hosts concerning the pillars, the sea, the stands, and the rest of the vessels remaining in this city, <sup>20</sup>which Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, did not take when he exiled Jeconiah, son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, from Jerusalem to Babylon, along with all the nobles of Judah and Jerusalem— <sup>21</sup>thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels remaining in the house of the LORD, in the house of the king of Judah, and in Jerusalem:<sup>x</sup> <sup>22</sup>To Babylon they shall go, and there they shall remain, until the day I look for them—oracle of the LORD; then I will bring them back and restore them to this place.

CHAPTER 28

The Two Yokes. <sup>1</sup>That same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah, king of Judah, in the fifth month of the fourth year, Hananiah the prophet, son of Azzur, from Gibeon, said to me in the house of the LORD in the sight of the priests and all the people: <sup>2</sup>“Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. <sup>3</sup>Within two years I will restore to this place all the vessels of the house of the LORD which Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, took from this place and carried away to Babylon. <sup>4</sup>And Jeconiah, son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and all the exiles of Judah who went to Babylon, I will bring back to this place—oracle of the LORD—for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.”

<sup>5</sup>Jeremiah the prophet answered the prophet Hananiah in the sight of the priests and all the people standing in the house of the LORD, <sup>6</sup>and said: Amen! thus may the LORD do! May the LORD fulfill your words that you have prophesied, by bringing back the vessels of the house of the LORD and all the exiles from Babylon to this place! <sup>7</sup>But now, listen to the word I am about to speak in your hearing and the hearing of all the people. <sup>8</sup>In the past, the prophets who came before you and me prophesied war, disaster, and pestilence against many lands and mighty kingdoms. <sup>9</sup>But the prophet who prophesies peace is recognized as the prophet whom the LORD has truly sent only when his word comes to pass.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Thereupon Hananiah the prophet took the yoke bar from the neck of Jeremiah the prophet and broke it. <sup>11</sup>He said in the sight of all the people: “Thus says the LORD: Like this, within two years I will break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, from the neck of all the nations.” At that, the prophet Jeremiah went on his way.

prophet: Listen to this, Hananiah! The LORD has not sent you, and you have led this people to rely on deception. <sup>16</sup>For this, says the LORD, I am sending you from the face of the earth; this very year you shall die, because you have preached rebellion against the LORD. <sup>a</sup> <sup>17</sup>Hananiah the prophet died in that year, in the seventh month.

Letter to the Exiles in Babylon.<sup>1</sup>These are the words of the scroll which Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem to the remaining elders among the exiles, to the priests, the prophets, and all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar exiled from Jerusalem to Babylon. <sup>2</sup>This was after King Jeconiah and the queen mother, the court officials, the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, the artisans and smiths had left Jerusalem.<sup>b</sup> <sup>3</sup>Delivered in Babylon by Elasah,* son of Shaphan, and by Gemariah, son of Hilkiah, whom Zedekiah, king of Judah, sent to the king of Babylon, the letter read:

<sup>4</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, to all the exiles whom I exiled from Jerusalem to Babylon: <sup>5</sup>Build houses and live in them; plant gardens and eat their fruits. <sup>6</sup>Take wives and have sons and daughters; find wives for your sons and give your daughters to husbands, so that they may bear sons and daughters. Increase there; do not decrease. <sup>7</sup>Seek the welfare of the city to which I have exiled you; pray for it to the LORD, for upon its welfare your own depends.<sup>c</sup> <sup>8</sup>For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Do not be deceived by the prophets and diviners who are among you; do not listen to those among you who dream dreams,<sup>d</sup> <sup>9</sup>for they prophesy lies to you in my name; I did not send them—oracle of the LORD.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>10</sup>For thus says the LORD: Only after seventy years have elapsed for Babylon will I deal with you and fulfill for you my promise to bring you back to this place.<sup>f</sup> <sup>11</sup>For I know well the plans I have in mind for you—oracle of the LORD—plans for your welfare and not for woe, so as to give you a future of hope. <sup>12</sup>When you call me, and come and pray to me, I will listen to you.<sup>g</sup> <sup>13</sup>When you look for me, you will find me. Yes, when you seek me with all your heart, <sup>14</sup>I will let you find me—oracle of the LORD—and I will change your lot; I will gather you together from all the nations and all the places to which I have banished you—oracle of the LORD—and bring you back to the place from which I have exiled you.<sup>h</sup> <sup>15</sup>As for your saying, “The LORD has raised up for us prophets here in Babylon”—

famine, and pestilence. I will make them like rotten figs, so spoiled that they cannot be eaten. <sup>18</sup>I will pursue them with sword, famine, and pestilence, and make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, a curse, a desolation, a hissing, and a reproach to all the nations among which I have banished them, <sup>i</sup> <sup>19</sup>because they did not listen to my words—oracle of the LORD— even though I kept sending them my servants the prophets, but they would not listen to them—oracle of the LORD.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>20</sup>As for you, listen to the word of the LORD, all you exiles whom I sent away from Jerusalem to Babylon. <sup>21</sup>This is what the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, says about Ahab, son of Kolaiah, and Zedekiah, son of Maaseiah, who prophesy lies to you in my name: I am handing them over to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, who will kill them before your eyes.<sup>k</sup> <sup>22</sup>And because of them this curse will be used by all the exiles of Judah in Babylon: “May the LORD make you like Zedekiah and Ahab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in fire,” <sup>23</sup>because they have committed an outrage in Israel, committing adultery with their neighbors’ wives, and alleging in my name things I did not command. I know, I am witness—oracle of the LORD.<sup>l</sup>

The False Prophet Shemaiah. <sup>24</sup>To Shemaiah, the Nehelamite, say: <sup>25</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Because you sent documents in your own name to all the people in Jerusalem, to Zephaniah, the priest, son of Maaseiah, and to all the priests saying: <sup>26*</sup> “It is the LORD who has appointed you priest in place of the priest Jehoiada, to provide officers for the house of the LORD, that you may confine in stocks or pillory any madman who poses as a prophet. <sup>27</sup>Why, then, have you not rebuked Jeremiah of Anathoth who poses as a prophet among you? <sup>28</sup>For he sent this message to us in Babylon: It will be a long time; build houses to live in; plant gardens and eat their fruit....”

<sup>29</sup>When the priest Zephaniah read this letter to Jeremiah the prophet, <sup>30</sup>the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: <sup>31</sup>Send to all the exiles: Thus says the LORD concerning Shemaiah, the Nehelamite: Because Shemaiah prophesies to you, although I did not send him, and has led you to rely on a lie, <sup>32</sup>therefore thus says the LORD, I will punish Shemaiah, the Nehelamite, and his descendants. None of them shall dwell among this people to see the good I will do for this people—oracle of the LORD—because he preached rebellion against the LORD.

CHAPTER 30

See RG 348–53

The Restoration. * <sup>1</sup>This word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: <sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Write down on a scroll all the words I have spoken to you.<sup>m</sup> <sup>3</sup>For indeed, the days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when I will restore the fortunes of my people Israel and Judah—oracle of the LORD. I will bring them back to the land which I gave to their ancestors, and they shall take possession of it.<sup>n4</sup>

These are the words the LORD spoke to Israel and to Judah: <sup>5</sup>Thus says the LORD:

We hear a cry of fear:
terror, not peace.

<sup>6</sup>Inquire and see:
does a male give birth?
Why, then, do I see all these men,
their hands on their loins
Like women in labor,
all their faces drained of color?<sup>o</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Ah! How mighty is that day—
there is none like it!
A time of distress for Jacob,
though he shall be saved from it.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>10</sup>But you, my servant Jacob, do not fear!—oracle of the LORD—
do not be dismayed, Israel!
For I will soon deliver you from places far away,
your offspring from the land of their
exile;
Jacob shall again find rest,

- secure, with none to frighten him,<sup>s</sup>
- 11 for I am with you—oracle of the LORD—to save you.
I will bring to an end all the nations
among whom I have scattered you;
but you I will not bring to an end.
I will chastise you as you deserve,
I will not let you go unpunished.<sup>t</sup>
- 12 For thus says the Lord:
Incurable is your wound,
grievous your injury;<sup>u</sup>
- 13 There is none to plead your case,
no remedy for your running sore,
no healing for you.
- 14 All your lovers have forgotten you,
they do not seek you out.
I struck you as an enemy would strike,
punishing you cruelly.<sup>v</sup>
- 15 Why cry out over your wound?
There is no relief for your pain.
Because of your great guilt,
your numerous sins,
I have done this to you.<sup>w</sup>
- 16 Yet all who devour you shall be devoured,
all your enemies shall go into exile.
All who plunder you shall become
plunder,
all who pillage you I will hand over to be pillaged.<sup>x</sup>
- 17 For I will restore your health;
I will heal your injuries—oracle of the
LORD.
“The outcast” they have called you, “whom no one looks for.”<sup>y</sup>
- 18 Thus says the LORD:
See! I will restore the fortunes of Jacob’s tents,
on his dwellings I will have compassion;
A city shall be rebuilt upon its own ruins,

a citadel restored where it should be.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>19</sup>From them will come praise,
the sound of people rejoicing.
I will increase them, they will not decrease,
I will glorify them, they will not be insignificant.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>20</sup>His children shall be as of old,
his assembly shall stand firm in my
presence,
I will punish all his oppressors.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>21</sup>His leader* shall be one of his own,
and his ruler shall emerge from his ranks.
He shall approach me when I summon
him;
Why else would he dare
approach me?—oracle of the LORD.

<sup>22</sup>You shall be my people, and I will be your God.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>23</sup>Look! The storm of the LORD!
His wrath breaks out
In a whirling storm
that bursts upon the heads of the wicked.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>24</sup>The anger of the LORD will not abate
until he has carried out completely
the decisions of his heart.
In days to come
you will fully understand it.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 31

See RG 348–53

Good News of the Return

<sup>1</sup>At that time—oracle of the LORD—
I will be the God of all the families of Israel,
and they shall be my people.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>2</sup> * Thus says the LORD:
The people who escaped the sword find favor in the wilderness.
As Israel comes forward to receive rest,

<sup>3</sup> from afar the LORD appears:
With age-old love I have loved you;
so I have kept my mercy toward you.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Again I will build you, and you shall stay
built,
virgin Israel;
Carrying your festive tambourines,
you shall go forth dancing with merrymakers.

<sup>5</sup> You shall again plant vineyards
on the mountains of Samaria;
those who plant them shall enjoy their fruits.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Yes, a day will come when the watchmen
call out on Mount Ephraim: “Come, let us go up to Zion, to the Lord, our God.”<sup>i</sup>

The Road of Return

<sup>7</sup> For thus says the LORD:
Shout with joy for Jacob,
exult at the head of the nations;
proclaim your praise and say:
The LORD has saved his people,
the remnant of Israel.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Look! I will bring them back from the land of the north;

I will gather them from the ends of the
earth,
the blind and the lame in their midst,
Pregnant women, together with those in labor—
an immense throng—they shall return.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>9</sup>With weeping they shall come,
but with compassion I will guide them;
I will lead them to streams of water,
on a level road, without stumbling.
For I am a father to Israel,
Ephraim is my firstborn.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Hear the word of the LORD, you nations, proclaim it on distant coasts, and say:
The One who scattered Israel, now gathers them;
he guards them as a shepherd his flock.

<sup>11</sup>The LORD shall ransom Jacob,
he shall redeem him from a hand too strong for him.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Shouting, they shall mount the heights of Zion,
they shall come streaming to the LORD's blessings:
The grain, the wine, and the oil,
flocks of sheep and cattle;
They themselves shall be like watered gardens,
never again neglected.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Then young women shall make merry and dance,
young men and old as well.
I will turn their mourning into joy,
I will show them compassion and have them rejoice after their sorrows.

<sup>14</sup>I will lavish choice portions on the
priests,
and my people shall be filled with my
blessings—
oracle of the LORD.

End of Rachel's Mourning

- 15 Thus says the LORD:
In Ramah* is heard the sound of sobbing,
bitter weeping!
Rachel mourns for her children,
she refuses to be consoled
for her children—they are no more!<sup>O</sup>
- 16 Thus says the LORD:
Cease your cries of weeping,
hold back your tears!
There is compensation for your labor—
oracle of the LORD—
they shall return from the enemy's land.
- 17 There is hope for your future—oracle of
the LORD—
your children shall return to their own territory.<sup>P</sup>
- 18 Indeed, I heard Ephraim rocking in grief:
You chastised me, and I was chastised;
I was like an untamed calf.
Bring me back, let me come back,
for you are the LORD, my God.<sup>Q</sup>
- 19 For after I turned away, I repented;
after I came to myself, I struck my thigh;*
I was ashamed, even humiliated, because I bore the disgrace of my youth.<sup>R</sup>
- 20 Is Ephraim not my favored son,
the child in whom I delight?
Even though I threaten him,
I must still remember him!
My heart stirs for him,
I must show him compassion!—oracle
of the LORD.<sup>S</sup>

Summons to Return Home

- 21 Set up road markers,
put up signposts;
Turn your attention to the highway,

the road you walked.
Turn back, virgin Israel,
turn back to these your cities.
<sup>22</sup>How long will you continue to hesitate, rebellious daughter?
The LORD has created a new thing upon
the earth:
woman encompasses man.*

<sup>23</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: When I restore their fortunes in the land of Judah and in its cities, they shall again use this greeting: “May the LORD bless you, Tent of Justice, Holy Mountain!”<sup>t</sup>

<sup>27</sup>See, days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of human beings and the seed of animals. <sup>28</sup>As I once watched over them to uproot and tear down, to demolish, to destroy, and to harm, so I will watch over them to build and to plant—oracle of the LORD.<sup>u</sup> <sup>29</sup>In those days they shall no longer say,

“The parents ate unripe grapes,<sup>v</sup> and the children’s teeth are set on edge,”*

<sup>30</sup>but all shall die because of their own iniquity: the teeth of anyone who eats unripe grapes shall be set on edge.

The New Covenant. <sup>31</sup>See, days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah.<sup>w</sup> <sup>32</sup>It will not be like the covenant I made with their ancestors the day I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt. They broke my covenant, though I was their master—oracle of the LORD.<sup>x</sup> <sup>33</sup>But this is the covenant I will make with the house of Israel after those days—oracle of the LORD. I will place my law within them, and write it upon their hearts; I will be their God, and they shall be my people.<sup>y</sup> <sup>34</sup>They will no longer teach their friends and relatives, “Know the LORD!” Everyone, from least to greatest, shall know me—oracle of the LORD—for I will forgive their iniquity and no longer remember their sin.<sup>z</sup>

Certainty of God's Promise

<sup>35</sup>Thus says the LORD,
Who gives the sun to light the day,
moon and stars to light the night;
Who stirs up the sea so that its waves
roar,

whose name is LORD of hosts:<sup>a</sup>

<sup>36</sup>If ever this fixed order gives way
before me—oracle of the LORD—
Then would the offspring of Israel cease
as a people before me forever.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>37</sup> Thus says the LORD:
If the heavens on high could be measured,
or the foundations below the earth be explored,
Then would I reject all the offspring of Israel
because of all they have done—oracle
of the LORD.

Jerusalem Rebuilt. * <sup>38</sup>See, days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when the city shall be rebuilt as the LORD's,<sup>c</sup> from the Tower of Hananel to the Corner Gate. <sup>39</sup>A measuring line shall be stretched from there straight to the hill Gareb and then turn to Goah. <sup>40</sup>The whole valley of corpses and ashes, all the terraced slopes toward the Wadi Kidron, as far as the corner of the Horse Gate at the east, shall be holy to the LORD. Never again shall the city be uprooted or demolished.

CHAPTER 32

Pledge of Restoration.* <sup>1</sup>The word came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the tenth year of Zedekiah,* king of Judah, the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar. <sup>2</sup>At that time the army of the king of Babylon was besieging Jerusalem, while Jeremiah the prophet was confined to the court of the guard, in the house of the king of Judah.<sup>d</sup> <sup>3</sup>Zedekiah, king of Judah, had confined him there, saying: “How dare you prophesy: Thus says the LORD: I am handing this city over to the king of Babylon that he may capture it.”<sup>e</sup> <sup>4</sup>Zedekiah, king of Judah, shall not escape the hands of the Chaldeans: he shall indeed be handed over to the king of Babylon. He shall speak with him face to face and see him eye to eye.<sup>f</sup> <sup>5</sup>He shall take Zedekiah to Babylon. There he shall remain, until I attend to him— oracle of the LORD. If you fight against the Chaldeans, you cannot win!”<sup>g</sup>

<sup>10</sup>When I had written and sealed the deed, called witnesses and weighed out the silver on the scales, <sup>11</sup>I accepted the deed of purchase, both the sealed copy, containing title and conditions, and the open copy.* <sup>12</sup>I gave this deed of purchase to Baruch, son of Neriah, son of Mahseiah, in the presence of my cousin Hanamel and the witnesses who had signed the deed of purchase and before all the Judahites sitting around in the court of the guard.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>13</sup>In their presence I gave Baruch this charge: <sup>14</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Take these deeds of purchase, both the sealed and the open deeds, and put them in an earthenware jar,* so they can last a long time. <sup>15</sup>For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: They shall again purchase houses and fields and vineyards in this land.

<sup>16</sup>After I had given the deed of purchase to Baruch, son of Neriah, I prayed to the LORD: <sup>17</sup>Ah, my Lord GOD! You made the heavens and the earth with your great power and your outstretched arm; nothing is too difficult for you.<sup>j</sup> <sup>18</sup>You continue your kindness through a thousand generations; but you repay the ancestors' guilt upon their children who follow them. Great and mighty God, whose name is LORD of hosts,<sup>k</sup> <sup>19</sup>great in counsel, mighty in deed, whose eyes are fixed on all the ways of mortals, giving to all according to their ways, according to the fruit of their deeds:<sup>l</sup> <sup>20</sup>you performed signs and wonders in the land of Egypt and to this day, in Israel and among all peoples, you have made a name for yourself as on this day.<sup>m</sup> <sup>21</sup>You brought your people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs and wonders, with a strong hand and an outstretched arm, and great terror. <sup>22</sup>And you gave them this land, as you had sworn to their ancestors to give them, a land flowing with milk and honey.<sup>n</sup> <sup>23</sup>They went in and took possession of it, but they did not listen to your voice. They did not live by your law; they did not do anything you commanded them to do. Then you made all this evil fall upon them.<sup>o</sup> <sup>24</sup>See, the siegeworks have arrived at this city to capture it; the city is handed over to the Chaldeans who are attacking it, with sword, starvation, and disease. What you threatened has happened—you can see it for yourself.<sup>p</sup> <sup>25</sup>Yet you told me, my Lord GOD: Purchase the field with silver and summon witnesses, when the city has already been handed over to the Chaldeans!

<sup>26</sup>Then this word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: <sup>27</sup>I am the LORD, the God of all the living! Is anything too difficult for me? <sup>28</sup>Therefore the LORD says: I am handing over this city to the Chaldeans and to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and he shall capture it. <sup>29</sup>The Chaldeans who are attacking this city shall go in and set the city on fire, burning it and the houses, on whose roofs incense was burned to Baal and libations were poured out to other gods in order to provoke me.<sup>q</sup> <sup>30</sup>From their youth the Israelites and the Judahites have been doing only what is evil in my eyes; the Israelites have been provoking me with the works of their hands—oracle of the LORD.<sup>r</sup> <sup>31</sup>This city has so stirred my anger and wrath, from the day it was built to this day, that I must put it out of my sight, <sup>32</sup>for all the evil the Israelites and

Judahites have done to provoke me—they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.<sup>s</sup> <sup>33</sup>They turned their backs to me, not their faces; though I taught them persistently, they would not listen or accept correction.<sup>t</sup> <sup>34</sup>Instead they set up their abominations in the house which bears my name in order to defile it.<sup>u</sup> <sup>35</sup>They built high places to Baal in the Valley of Ben-hinnom to sacrifice their sons and daughters to Molech;* I never commanded them to do this, nor did it even enter my mind that they would practice this abomination, so as to bring sin upon Judah.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>36</sup>Now, therefore, thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city, which you say is being handed over to the king of Babylon by means of the sword, starvation, and disease: <sup>37</sup>See, I am gathering them from all the lands to which I drove them in my rising fury and great anger; I will bring them back to this place and settle them here in safety.<sup>w</sup> <sup>38</sup>They shall be my people, and I will be their God.<sup>x</sup> <sup>39</sup>I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me always, for their own good and the good of their children after them. <sup>40</sup>With them I will make an everlasting covenant, never to cease doing good to them; I will put fear of me in their hearts so that they never turn away from me.<sup>y</sup> <sup>41</sup>I will take delight in doing good to them: I will plant them firmly in this land, with all my heart and soul.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>42</sup>For thus says the LORD: Just as I have brought upon this people all this great evil, so I will bring upon them all the good I have promised them.<sup>a</sup> <sup>43</sup>Fields shall be purchased in this land, about which you say, “It is a wasteland, without human beings or animals, handed over to the Chaldeans.”<sup>b</sup> <sup>44</sup>They will purchase fields with silver, write up deeds, seal them, and have them witnessed in the land of Benjamin, in the neighborhood of Jerusalem, in the cities of Judah and of the hill country, in the cities of the Shephelah and the Negeb, when I restore their fortunes—oracle of the LORD.<sup>c</sup>

CHAPTER 33

See RG 348–53

Restoration of Jerusalem. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah a second time while he was still confined in the court of the guard: <sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD who made the earth, giving it shape and stability, LORD is his name: <sup>3</sup>Call to me, and I will answer you; I will tell you great things beyond the reach of your knowledge.<sup>d</sup> <sup>4</sup>Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city and the houses of the kings of Judah, which are being torn down because of the siegeworks and the sword:<sup>e</sup> <sup>5</sup>men come to battle the Chaldeans, and to fill these houses with the corpses of those whom I have struck down in my raging anger, when I hid my face from this city because of all their wickedness.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Look! I am bringing the city recovery and healing; I will heal them and reveal to them an abundance of lasting peace.<sup>g</sup> <sup>7</sup>I will restore the fortunes of Judah and Israel, and rebuild them as they were in the beginning.<sup>h</sup> <sup>8</sup>I will purify them of all the guilt they incurred by sinning against me; I will forgive all their offenses by which they sinned and rebelled against me.<sup>i</sup> <sup>9</sup>Then this city shall become joy for me, a name of praise and pride, before all the nations of the earth, as they hear of all the good I am doing for them. They shall fear and tremble because of all the prosperity I give it.

<sup>10</sup>Thus says the LORD: In this place, about which you say: “It is a waste without people or animals!” and in the cities of Judah, in the streets of Jerusalem now deserted, without people, without inhabitant, without animal, there shall yet be heard<sup>j</sup> <sup>11</sup>the song of joy, the song of gladness, the song of the bridegroom, the song of the bride, the song of those bringing thank offerings to the house of the LORD: “Give thanks to the LORD of hosts, for the LORD is good; God’s love endures forever.” For I will restore the fortunes of this land as they were in the beginning, says the LORD.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts: In this place, now a waste, without people or animals, and in all its cities there shall again be sheepfolds for the shepherds to rest their flocks. <sup>13</sup>In the cities of the hill country, of the Shephelah and the Negeb, in the land of Benjamin and the neighborhood of Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, flocks will again pass under the hands of the one who counts them, says the LORD.

<sup>14*</sup> The days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when I will fulfill the promise I made to the house of Israel and the house of Judah. <sup>15</sup>In those days, at that time, I will make a just shoot spring up for David; he shall do what is right and just in the land. <sup>l</sup> <sup>16</sup>In those days Judah shall be saved and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; this is the name they shall call her: “The LORD our justice.” <sup>17</sup>For thus says the LORD: David shall never lack a successor on the throne of the house of Israel, <sup>m</sup> <sup>18</sup>nor shall the priests of Levi ever be lacking before me, to sacrifice burnt offerings, to burn cereal offerings, and to make sacrifices. <sup>n</sup>

<sup>23</sup>This word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: <sup>24</sup>Have you not noticed what these people are saying: “The LORD has rejected the two tribes he had chosen”? They hold my people in contempt as if it were no longer a nation in their eyes. <sup>p</sup> <sup>25q</sup> Thus says the LORD: If I have no covenant with day and night, if I did not establish statutes for heaven and earth, <sup>26</sup>then I will also reject the descendants of Jacob and of David my servant, no longer selecting from his descendants rulers for the offspring of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Yes, I will restore their fortunes and show them mercy.

Fate of Zedekiah. <sup>1</sup>The word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD while Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and all his army and all the earth's kingdoms under his rule, and all the peoples were attacking Jerusalem and all her cities:<sup>r</sup> <sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Go to Zedekiah, king of Judah, and tell him: Thus says the LORD: I am handing this city over to the king of Babylon; he will burn it with fire.<sup>s</sup> <sup>3</sup>You yourself shall not escape his hand; rather you will be captured and fall into his hand. You shall see the king of Babylon eye to eye and speak to him face to face. Then you shall go to Babylon.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Just hear the word of the LORD, Zedekiah, king of Judah! Then, says the LORD concerning you, you shall not die by the sword. <sup>5</sup>You shall die in peace, and they will burn spices for you as they did for your ancestors, the earlier kings who preceded you, and they shall make lament over you, "Alas, Lord." I myself make this promise—oracle of the LORD.

The Pact Broken. *<sup>8</sup>This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD after King Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people in Jerusalem to proclaim freedom: <sup>9</sup>Everyone must free their Hebrew slaves, male and female, so that no one should hold another Judahite in servitude.<sup>u</sup> <sup>10</sup>All the princes and the people who entered this covenant agreed to set free their slaves, their male and female servants, so that they should no longer be in servitude. But even though they agreed and freed them, <sup>11</sup>afterward they took back their male and female servants whom they had set free and again forced them into servitude.

<sup>12</sup>Then this word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: <sup>13</sup>Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: I myself made a covenant with your ancestors the day I brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of slavery: <sup>14</sup>Every seventh year each of you must set free all Hebrews who have sold themselves to you; six years they shall serve you, but then you shall let them go free. Your ancestors, however, did not listen to me or obey me.

<sup>15</sup>As for you, today you repented and did what is right in my eyes by proclaiming freedom for your neighbor and making a covenant before me in the house which bears my name. <sup>16</sup>But then you again profaned my name by taking back your male and female slaves whom you had just set free for life; you forced them to become your slaves again.<sup>v</sup> <sup>17</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD: You for your part did not obey me by proclaiming freedom for your families and neighbors. So I now proclaim freedom for you—oracle of the LORD—for the sword, starvation, and disease. I will make you an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth. <sup>18*</sup> Those who violated my covenant and did not observe the terms of the covenant they made in my presence—I will make them like the calf which they cut in two so they could pass between its parts—<sup>19</sup>the princes of Judah and of Jerusalem, the court officials, the priests, and all the people of the land, who passed between the parts of the calf. <sup>20</sup>These I will hand over to their enemies, to those who seek their lives: their corpses shall become food for the birds of the air and the beasts of the field.<sup>w</sup>

The Faithful Rechabites. <sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the days of Jehoiakim, * son of Josiah, king of Judah: <sup>2</sup>Go to the house * of the Rechabites, speak to them, and bring them to the house of the LORD, to one of the rooms there, and give them wine to drink. <sup>3</sup>So I took Jaazaniah, son of Jeremiah, son of Habazziniah, his brothers and all his sons—the whole house of the Rechabites—<sup>4</sup>and I brought them to the house of the LORD, to the room of the sons of Hanan, * son of Igdaliah, the man of God, next to the room of the princes above the room of Maaseiah, son of Shallum, the guard at the entrance. <sup>5</sup>I set before the Rechabites bowls full of wine, and cups, and said to them, “Drink some wine.”

<sup>6</sup>“We do not drink wine,” they said to me; “Jonadab, * Rechab’s son, our father, commanded us, ‘Neither you nor your children shall ever drink wine.’” <sup>7</sup>Build no house and sow no seed; do not plant vineyards or own any. You must dwell in tents all your lives, so that you may live long on the land where you live as resident aliens.’ <sup>8</sup>We have obeyed Jonadab, Rechab’s son, our father, in everything that he commanded us: not drinking wine as long as we live—neither we nor our wives nor our sons nor our daughters; <sup>9</sup>not building houses to live in; not owning vineyards or fields or crops. <sup>10</sup>We live in tents, doing everything our father Jonadab commanded us. <sup>11</sup>But when Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, invaded this land, we said, ‘Come, let us go into Jerusalem to escape the army of the Chaldeans and the army of the Arameans.’” * That is why we are now living in Jerusalem.”<sup>a</sup>

gave you and your ancestors. But you did not pay attention. You did not obey me.<sup>d</sup> <sup>16</sup>Yes, the children of Jonadab, Rechab's son, upheld the command which their father laid on them. But this people has not obeyed me! <sup>17</sup>Now, therefore, says the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel: I will soon bring upon Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem every evil with which I threatened them because I spoke but they did not obey, I called but they did not answer.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>18</sup>But to the house of the Rechabites Jeremiah said: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Since you have obeyed the command of Jonadab, your father, kept all his commands and done everything he commanded you, <sup>19</sup>therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Never shall there fail to be a descendant of Jonadab, Rechab's son, standing in my presence.

Baruch, the Scribe of Jeremiah. <sup>1</sup>In the fourth year of Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: <sup>2</sup>Take a scroll and write on it all the words I have spoken to you about Israel, Judah, and all the nations, from the day I first spoke to you, from the days of Josiah, until today. <sup>3</sup>Perhaps, if the house of Judah hears all the evil I have in mind to do to them, so that all of them turn from their evil way, then I can forgive their wickedness and their sin.<sup>f</sup> <sup>4</sup>So Jeremiah called Baruch, son of Neriah, and he wrote down on a scroll what Jeremiah said, all the words which the LORD had spoken to him. <sup>5</sup>Then Jeremiah commanded Baruch: “I cannot enter the house of the LORD; I am barred* from it. <sup>6</sup>So you yourself must go. On a fast day in the hearing of the people in the LORD’s house, read the words of the LORD from the scroll you wrote at my dictation; read them also to all the people of Judah who come up from their cities. <sup>7</sup>Perhaps they will present their supplication before the LORD and will all turn back from their evil way; for great is the anger and wrath with which the LORD has threatened this people.”<sup>g</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Baruch, son of Neriah, did everything Jeremiah the prophet commanded; from the scroll he read the LORD’s words in the LORD’s house. <sup>9</sup>In the ninth month, in the fifth year of Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, king of Judah, all the people of Jerusalem and all those who came from Judah’s cities to Jerusalem proclaimed a fast before the LORD. <sup>10</sup>So Baruch read the words of Jeremiah from the scroll in the room of Gemariah, son of the scribe Shaphan, in the upper court of the LORD’s house, at the entrance of the New Temple Gate, in the hearing of all the people.

the order: “The scroll you read in the hearing of the people—bring it with you and come.” Scroll in hand, Baruch, son of Neriah, went to them. <sup>15</sup>“Sit down,” they said to him, “and read it in our hearing.” Baruch read it in their hearing, <sup>16</sup>and when they had heard all its words, they turned to each other in alarm and said to Baruch, “We have to tell the king all these things.” <sup>17</sup>Then they asked Baruch: “Tell us, please, how did you come to write down all these words? Was it at his dictation?” <sup>18</sup>“Yes, he would dictate all these words to me,” Baruch answered them, “while I wrote them down with ink in the scroll.” <sup>19</sup>The princes said to Baruch, “Go into hiding, you and Jeremiah; do not let anyone know where you are.”

<sup>20</sup>They went in to the king, into the courtyard; they had deposited the scroll in the room of Elishama the scribe. When they told the king everything that had happened, <sup>21</sup>the king sent Jehudi to get the scroll. Jehudi brought it from the room of Elishama the scribe, and read it to the king and to all the princes who were attending the king. <sup>22</sup>Now the king was sitting in his winter house, since it was the ninth month, and a fire was burning in the brazier before him. <sup>23</sup>Each time Jehudi finished reading three or four columns, he would cut off the piece with a scribe’s knife* and throw it into the fire in the brazier, until the entire scroll was consumed in the fire in the brazier. <sup>24</sup>As they were listening to all these words the king and all his officials did not become alarmed, nor did they tear their garments. <sup>25</sup>And though Elnathan, Delaiah, and Gemariah urged the king not to burn the scroll, he would not listen to them. <sup>26</sup>He commanded Jerahmeel, a royal prince, and Seraiah, son of Azriel, and Shelemiah, son of Abdeel, to arrest Baruch, the scribe, and Jeremiah the prophet. But the LORD had hidden them away.

his descendants and his officials for their wickedness; upon them, the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the people of Judah I will bring all the evil threats to which they did not listen.

<sup>32</sup>Then Jeremiah took another scroll and gave it to his scribe, Baruch, son of Neriah, who wrote on it at Jeremiah's dictation all the words contained in the scroll which Jehoiakim, king of Judah, had burned in the fire, adding many words like them.

Jeremiah in the Dungeon. <sup>1</sup>Zedekiah, son of Josiah, became king, succeeding Coniah, son of Jehoiakim; Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, appointed him king over the land of Judah.<sup>i</sup> <sup>2</sup>Neither he, nor his officials, nor the people of the land would listen to the words which the LORD spoke through Jeremiah the prophet. <sup>3</sup>Yet King Zedekiah sent Jehucal, son of Shelemiah, and Zephaniah, son of Maaseiah the priest, to Jeremiah the prophet with this request: “Please appeal to the LORD, our God, for us.”<sup>j</sup> <sup>4</sup>At this time Jeremiah still came and went freely among the people; he had not yet been put into prison.* <sup>5</sup>Meanwhile, Pharaoh’s army* had set out from Egypt, and when the Chaldeans who were besieging Jerusalem heard this report, they withdrew from the city.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah the prophet: <sup>7</sup>Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel: Thus you must say to the king of Judah who sent you to consult me: Listen! Pharaoh’s army, which has set out to help you, will return to Egypt, its own land.<sup>l</sup> <sup>8</sup>The Chaldeans shall return and attack this city; they shall capture it and destroy it by fire.<sup>m</sup> <sup>9</sup>

Thus says the LORD: Do not deceive yourselves, saying: “The Chaldeans are surely leaving us forever.” They are not! <sup>10</sup>Even if you could defeat the whole Chaldean army that is now attacking you, and only the wounded remained, each in his tent, these would rise up and destroy the city with fire.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>15</sup>The princes were enraged at Jeremiah and had Jeremiah beaten and imprisoned in the house of Jonathan the scribe, for they were using it as a jail.<sup>p</sup> <sup>16</sup>And so Jeremiah went into a room in the dungeon, where he remained many days.

<sup>17</sup>Then King Zedekiah had him brought to his palace, and he asked him secretly, “Is there any word from the LORD?” “There is!” Jeremiah answered: “You shall be handed over to the king of Babylon.”<sup>q</sup> <sup>18</sup>Jeremiah then asked King Zedekiah: “How have I wronged you or your officials or this people, that you should put me in prison?”<sup>r</sup> <sup>19</sup>Where are your own prophets who prophesied for you, saying: ‘The King of Babylon will not attack you or this land’? <sup>20</sup>Please hear me, my lord king! Grant my petition: do not send me back into the house of Jonathan the scribe, or I shall die there.”

<sup>21</sup>So King Zedekiah ordered that Jeremiah be confined in the court of the guard and given a ration of bread every day from the bakers’ street until all the bread in the city was eaten up. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.<sup>s</sup>

CHAPTER 38

See RG 348–53

Jeremiah in the Muddy Cistern. <sup>1</sup>Shephatiah, son of Mattan, Gedaliah, son of Pashhur, Jucal, son of Shelemiah, and Pashhur, son of Malchiah, heard the words Jeremiah was speaking to all the people: * <sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD: Those who remain in this city shall die by means of the sword, starvation, and disease; but those who go out to the Chaldeans shall live. Their lives shall be spared them as spoils of war that they may live. <sup>t</sup> <sup>3</sup>Thus says the LORD: This city shall certainly be handed over to the army of the king of Babylon; he shall capture it.

<sup>7</sup>Now Ebed-melech, an Ethiopian, a court official in the king’s house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the cistern. The king happened to be sitting at the Gate of Benjamin, <sup>8</sup>and Ebed-melech went there from the house of the king and said to him, <sup>9</sup>“My lord king, these men have done wrong in all their treatment of Jeremiah the prophet, throwing him into the cistern. He will starve to death on the spot, for there is no more bread in the city.” <sup>w</sup> <sup>10</sup>Then the king ordered Ebed-melech the Ethiopian: “Take three men with you, and get Jeremiah the prophet out of the cistern before he dies.” <sup>11</sup>Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went first to the linen closet in the house of the king. He took some old, tattered rags and lowered them by rope to Jeremiah in the cistern. <sup>12</sup>Then he said to Jeremiah, “Put these old, tattered rags between your armpits and the ropes.” Jeremiah did so, <sup>13</sup>and they pulled him up by rope out of the cistern. But Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.

<sup>14</sup>King Zedekiah summoned Jeremiah the prophet to meet him at the third entrance of the house of the LORD. “I have a question to ask you,” the king said to Jeremiah. “Do not hide anything from me.”<sup>x</sup> <sup>15</sup>Jeremiah answered Zedekiah: “If I tell you anything, will you not have me put to death? If I counsel you, you will not listen to me!”<sup>y</sup> <sup>16</sup>But King Zedekiah swore to Jeremiah secretly: “As the LORD lives who gave us our lives, I will not kill you, nor will I hand you over to those men who seek your life.”

<sup>17</sup>Jeremiah then said to Zedekiah: “Thus says the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel: If you will only surrender to the princes of Babylon’s king, you shall save your life; this city shall not be destroyed by fire, and you and your household shall live.”<sup>z</sup> <sup>18</sup>But if you do not surrender to the princes of Babylon’s king, this city shall fall into the hand of the Chaldeans, who shall destroy it by fire, and you shall not escape their hand.”<sup>a</sup>

<sup>19</sup>King Zedekiah said to Jeremiah, “I am afraid of the Judahites who have deserted to the Chaldeans; I could be handed over to them, and they will mistreat me.”<sup>b</sup> <sup>20</sup>“You will not be handed over to them,” Jeremiah answered. “I beg you! Please listen to the voice of the LORD regarding what I tell you so that it may go well with you and your life be spared.”<sup>c</sup> <sup>21</sup>But if you refuse to surrender, this is what the LORD has shown: <sup>22</sup>I see all the women who remain in the house of Judah’s king being brought out to the princes of Babylon’s king, and they are crying:

‘They betrayed you, outdid you,
your good friends!
Now that your feet are sunk in mud,
they slink away.’<sup>d</sup>

<sup>23</sup>All your wives and children shall be brought out to the Chaldeans, and you shall not escape their hands; you shall be handed over to the king of Babylon, and this city shall be destroyed by fire.”<sup>e</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Then Zedekiah said to Jeremiah, “Let no one know about this conversation, or you shall die. <sup>25</sup>If the princes should hear I spoke with you and if they should come and ask you, ‘Tell us what you said to the king; do not hide it from us, or we will kill you,’ or, ‘What did the king say to you?’”<sup>26</sup>then give them this answer: ‘I petitioned the king not to send me back to Jonathan’s house lest I die there.’ ” <sup>27</sup>When all the princes came to Jeremiah and questioned him, he answered them with the very words the king had commanded. They said no more to him, for nothing had been overheard of the conversation. <sup>28</sup>Thus Jeremiah stayed in the court of the guard until the day Jerusalem was taken.<sup>f</sup>

The Capture of Jerusalem. When Jerusalem was taken, <sup>1</sup>in the ninth year of Zedekiah,<sup>g</sup> king of Judah, in the tenth month,* Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and all his army marched against Jerusalem and placed it under siege. <sup>2</sup>In the eleventh year of Zedekiah, on the ninth day of the fourth month,* the city wall was breached. <sup>3</sup>All the princes of the king of Babylon came and took their seats at the middle gate: Nergalsharezer of Simmagir, a chief officer; Nebushazban, a high dignitary; and all the rest of the princes of the king of Babylon.* <sup>4</sup>When Zedekiah, king of Judah, and all his warriors saw this, they fled, leaving the city at night by way of the king's garden,* through a gate between the two walls. He went in the direction of the Arabah,<sup>h</sup> <sup>5</sup>but the Chaldean army pursued them; they caught up with Zedekiah in the wilderness near Jericho and took him prisoner. They brought him to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, in Riblah,* in the land of Hamath, and he pronounced sentence upon him.<sup>i</sup> <sup>6</sup>The king of Babylon executed the sons of Zedekiah at Riblah before his very eyes; the king of Babylon also executed all the nobles of Judah.<sup>j</sup> <sup>7</sup>He then blinded Zedekiah and bound him in chains to bring him to Babylon.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>8</sup>The Chaldeans set fire to the king's house and the houses of the people and tore down the walls of Jerusalem.<sup>l</sup> <sup>9</sup>Nebuzaradan, captain of the bodyguard, deported to Babylon the rest of the people left in the city, those who had deserted to him, and the rest of the workers.<sup>m</sup> <sup>10</sup>But Nebuzaradan, captain of the bodyguard, left in the land of Judah some of the poor who had nothing and at the same time gave them vineyards and farms.<sup>n</sup>

Jeremiah Released to Gedaliah's Custody.<sup>11</sup>Concerning Jeremiah, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, gave these orders through Nebuzaradan, captain of the bodyguard: <sup>12</sup>"Take him and look after him; do not let anything happen to him. Whatever he may ask, you must do for him."<sup>o</sup> <sup>13</sup>Thereupon Nebuzaradan, captain of the bodyguard, and Nebushazban, a high dignitary, and Nergalsharezer, a chief officer, and all the nobles of the king of Babylon, <sup>14</sup>had Jeremiah taken out of the courtyard of the guard and entrusted to Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, to bring him home. And so he remained among the people.<sup>p</sup>

A Word of Comfort for Ebed-melech.<sup>15</sup>While Jeremiah was still imprisoned in the court of the guard, the word of the LORD came to him:
<sup>16</sup>Go, tell this to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: See, I am now carrying out my words against this city, for evil and not for good; this will happen in your presence on that day.<sup>q</sup> <sup>17</sup>But on that day I will deliver you—oracle of the LORD; you shall not be handed over to the men you dread. <sup>18</sup>I will make certain that you escape and do not fall by the sword. Your life will be your spoils of war because you trusted in me—oracle of the LORD.<sup>r</sup>

CHAPTER 40

See RG 348–53

Jeremiah Still in Judah. <sup>1</sup>The word* which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, after Nebuzaradan, captain of the bodyguard, had released him in Ramah, where he found him a prisoner in chains among the captives of Jerusalem and Judah being exiled to Babylon.<sup>s2</sup> The captain of the bodyguard took charge of Jeremiah and said to him, “The LORD, your God, decreed ruin for this place. <sup>3</sup>Now he has made it happen, accomplishing what he decreed; because you sinned against the LORD and did not listen to his voice, this decree has been realized against you. <sup>4</sup>Now, I release you today from the chains upon your hands; if you want to come with me to Babylon, then come: I will look out for you. But if you do not want to come to Babylon, very well. See, the whole land lies before you; go wherever you think good and proper.<sup>t</sup> <sup>5</sup>Or go to Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon has set over the cities of Judah. Stay with him among the people. Or go wherever you want!” The captain of the bodyguard gave him food and gifts and let him go.<sup>u</sup> <sup>6</sup>So Jeremiah went to Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, in Mizpah,* and dwelt with him among the people left in the land.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>When the military leaders still in the field with their soldiers heard that the king of Babylon had set Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, over the land and had put him in charge of men, women, and children, from the poor of the land who had not been deported to Babylon, <sup>8</sup>they and their soldiers came to Gedaliah in Mizpah: Ishmael, son of Nethaniah; Johanan, son of Kareah; Seraiah, son of Tanhumeth; the sons of Ephai of Netophah; and Jezaniah of Beth-maacah. <sup>9</sup>Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, swore an oath to them and their men: “Do not be afraid to serve the Chaldeans. Stay in the land and serve the king of Babylon, so that everything may go well with you.<sup>w</sup> <sup>10</sup>As for me, I will remain in Mizpah, as your representative before the Chaldeans when they come to us. You, for your part, harvest the wine, the fruit, and the oil, store them in jars, and remain in the cities you occupied.” <sup>11</sup>Then all the Judahites in Moab, in Ammon, in Edom, and those in all other lands heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Judah and had set over them Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan.

<sup>12</sup>They all returned to the land of Judah from the places to which they had scattered. They went to Gedaliah at Mizpah and had a rich harvest of wine and fruit.

Assassination of Gedaliah. <sup>13</sup>Now Johanan, son of Kareah, and all the military leaders in the field came to Gedaliah in Mizpah <sup>14</sup>and said to him, “Surely you are aware that Baalis, the Ammonite king, * has sent Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, to assassinate you?” <sup>x</sup>But Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, would not believe them. <sup>15</sup>Then Johanan, son of Kareah, said secretly to Gedaliah in Mizpah: “Please let me go and kill Ishmael, son of Nethaniah; no one will know it. What if he assassinates you? All the Judahites who have now rallied behind you would scatter and the remnant of Judah would perish.” <sup>16</sup>Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, answered Johanan, son of Kareah, “You must not do that. What you are saying about Ishmael is a lie!”

CHAPTER 41

<sup>4</sup>The day after the murder of Gedaliah, before anyone learned about it, <sup>5</sup>eighty men, in ragged clothes, with beards shaved off and gashes on their bodies, came from Shechem, Shiloh, and Samaria, bringing grain offerings and incense for the house of the LORD. <sup>6</sup>Weeping as he went, Ishmael son of Nethaniah, set out from Mizpah to meet them. "Come to Gedaliah, son of Ahikam," he said as he met them. <sup>7</sup>Once they were inside the city, Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, and his men slaughtered them and threw them into the cistern. <sup>8</sup>Ten of them said to Ishmael: "Do not kill us! We have stores of wheat and barley, oil and honey hidden in the field." So he spared them and did not kill them as he had killed their companions. <sup>9</sup>The cistern into which Ishmael threw all the bodies of the men he had killed was the large one King Asa made to defend himself against Baasha, king of Israel; Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, filled this cistern with the slain.<sup>z</sup>

Flight to Egypt. <sup>11</sup>But when Johanan, son of Kareah, and the other army leaders with him heard about the crimes Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, had committed, <sup>12</sup>they took all their men and set out to attack Ishmael, son of Nethaniah. They overtook him at the great pool in Gibeon.* <sup>13</sup>At the sight of Johanan, son of Kareah, and the other army leaders, the people with Ishmael rejoiced; <sup>14</sup>all of those whom Ishmael had taken captive from Mizpah went back to Johanan, son of Kareah. <sup>15</sup>But Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, escaped from Johanan with eight men and fled to the Ammonites. <sup>16</sup>Then Johanan, son of Kareah, and all the military leaders took charge of all the rest of the people whom Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, had taken away from Mizpah after he killed Gedaliah, son of Ahikam—the soldiers, the women with children, and court officials, whom he brought back from Gibeon. <sup>17</sup>They set out and stopped at Geruth Chimham near Bethlehem, intending to go into Egypt. <sup>18</sup>They were afraid of the Chaldeans, because Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, had slain Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon had set over the land.

CHAPTER 42

See RG 348–53

<sup>1</sup>Then all the military leaders, including Johanan, son of Kareah, Azariah, son of Hoshai, and all the people, from the least to the greatest, <sup>2</sup>approached Jeremiah the prophet and said, “Please grant our petition; pray for us to the LORD, your God, for all this remnant. As you see, only a few of us remain, but once we were many. <sup>3</sup>May the LORD, your God, show us the way we should take and what we should do.” <sup>4</sup>“Very well!” Jeremiah the prophet answered them: “I will pray to the LORD, your God, as you desire; whatever the LORD answers, I will tell you; I will withhold nothing from you.”<sup>a</sup> <sup>5</sup>And they said to Jeremiah, “May the LORD be a true and faithful witness against us if we do not follow all the instructions the LORD, your God, sends us through you.”<sup>b</sup> <sup>6</sup>Whether we like it or not, we will obey the command of the LORD, our God, to whom we are sending you, so that it may go well with us for obeying the command of the LORD, our God.”<sup>c</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Ten days passed before the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah. <sup>8</sup>Then he called Johanan, son of Kareah, his army leaders, and all the people, from the least to the greatest, <sup>9</sup>and said to them: Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, to whom you sent me to offer your petition: <sup>10</sup>If indeed you will remain in this land, I will build you up, and not tear you down; I will plant you, not uproot you; for I repent of the evil I have done you.<sup>d</sup> <sup>11</sup>Do not fear the king of Babylon, as you do now. Do not fear him—oracle of the LORD—for I am with you to save you, to rescue you from his power.<sup>e</sup> <sup>12</sup>I will take pity on you, so that he will have pity on you and let you return to your land.<sup>f</sup> <sup>13</sup>But if you keep saying, “We will not stay in this land,” thus disobeying the voice of the LORD, your God, <sup>14</sup>and saying, “No, we will go to the land of Egypt, where we will not see war, nor hear the trumpet alarm, nor hunger for bread. There we will live!”<sup>g</sup> <sup>15</sup>then listen to the word of the LORD, remnant of Judah: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: If you are set on going to Egypt and settling down there once you arrive, <sup>16</sup>the sword you fear shall overtake you in the land of Egypt; the hunger you dread shall pursue you to Egypt and there you shall die.<sup>h</sup> <sup>17</sup>All those determined to go to Egypt to live shall die by the sword, famine, and disease: not one shall survive or escape the evil that I am bringing upon them.<sup>i</sup> <sup>18</sup>For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: Just as my furious wrath was poured out upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so shall my anger be poured out on you when you reach Egypt. You shall become a malediction and a horror, a curse and a reproach, and you shall never see this place again.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>19</sup>The LORD has spoken to you, remnant of Judah. Do not go to Egypt! Mark well that I am warning you this day. <sup>20</sup>At the cost of your lives you have been deceitful, for you yourselves sent me to the LORD, your God, saying, “Pray for us to the LORD, our God; whatever the LORD, our God, shall say, tell us and we will do it.” <sup>21</sup>Today I have told you, but you have not listened to the voice of the LORD your God, in anything that he has sent me to tell you.<sup>k</sup> <sup>22</sup>Have no doubt about this: you shall die by the sword, famine, and disease in the place where you want to go and live.<sup>l</sup>

CHAPTER 43

See RG 348–53

<sup>1</sup>When Jeremiah finished telling the people all the words the LORD, their God, sent to them, <sup>2</sup>Azariah, son of Hoshai, Johanan, son of Kareah, and all the others had the insolence to say to Jeremiah: “You lie; the LORD, our God, did not send you to tell us, ‘Do not go to Egypt to live there.’ <sup>3</sup>Baruch, son of Neriah, is inciting you against us, to hand us over to the Chaldeans to be killed or exiled to Babylon.”<sup>m</sup>

<sup>4</sup>So Johanan, son of Kareah, and the rest of the leaders and the people did not listen to the voice of the LORD to stay in the land of Judah.<sup>n</sup> <sup>5</sup>Instead, Johanan, son of Kareah, and the military leaders took along all the remnant of Judah who had been dispersed among the nations and then had returned to dwell in the land of Judah: <sup>6</sup>men, women, and children, the princesses and everyone whom Nebuzaradan, captain of the bodyguard, had consigned to Gedaliah, son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan; also Jeremiah, the prophet, and Baruch, son of Neriah.<sup>o</sup> <sup>7</sup>They went to Egypt—they did not listen to the voice of the LORD—and came to Tahpanhes.<sup>p</sup>

Jeremiah in Egypt. <sup>8</sup>The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah in Tahpanhes: <sup>9</sup>Take some large stones in your hand and set them in mortar in the terrace at the entrance to the house of Pharaoh in Tahpanhes, while the Judahites watch. <sup>10</sup>Then say to them: Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I will send for my servant Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon. He will place his throne upon these stones which I, Jeremiah, have set up, and stretch his canopy above them.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>11</sup>He shall come and strike the land of Egypt: with death, those marked for death; with exile, those marked for exile; with the sword, those marked for the sword.<sup>r</sup> <sup>12</sup>He shall set fire to the temples of Egypt’s gods, burn the gods and carry them off. He shall pick the land of Egypt clean, as a shepherd picks lice off his cloak, and then depart victorious.<sup>s</sup> <sup>13</sup>He shall smash the obelisks at the Temple of the Sun in the land of Egypt and destroy with fire the temples of the Egyptian gods.

CHAPTER 44

See RG 348–53

<sup>1</sup>The word that came to Jeremiah for all the Judahites who were living in Egypt, those living in Migdol, Tahpanhes, and Memphis, and in Upper Egypt: <sup>2*</sup> Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: You yourselves have seen all the evil I brought upon Jerusalem and the other cities of Judah. Today they lie in ruins uninhabited, <sup>t</sup> <sup>3</sup>because of the evil they did to provoke me, going after other gods, offering incense and serving other gods they did not know, neither they, nor you, nor your ancestors. <sup>u</sup> <sup>4</sup>Though I repeatedly sent you all my servants the prophets, saying: “You must not commit this abominable deed I hate,” <sup>5</sup>they did not listen or incline their ears in order to turn from their evil, no longer offering incense to other gods. <sup>v</sup> <sup>6</sup>Therefore the fury of my anger poured forth and kindled fire in the cities of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem, to turn them into the ruined wasteland they are today.

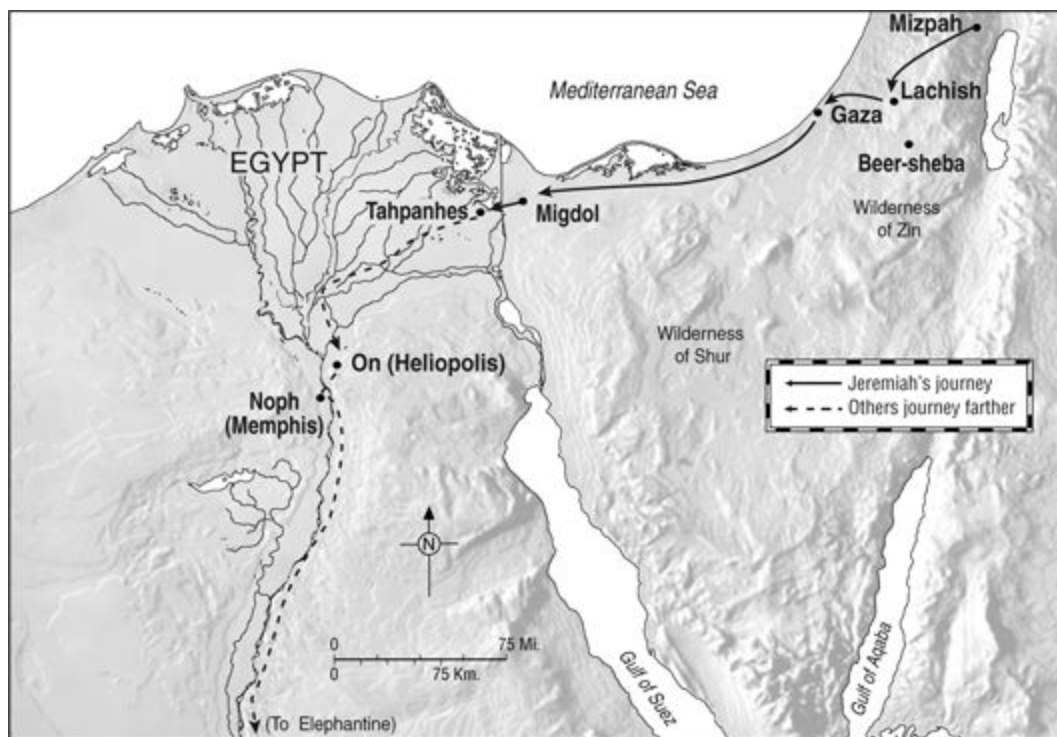

<sup>7</sup>Now thus says the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel: Why inflict so great an evil upon yourselves, cutting off from Judah man and woman, child and infant, not leaving yourselves even a remnant? <sup>8</sup>Why do you provoke me with the works of your hands, offering sacrifice to other gods here in the land of Egypt where you have come to live? Will you cut yourselves off and become a curse, a reproach among all the nations of the earth? <sup>w</sup> <sup>9</sup>Have you forgotten the evil of your ancestors, the evil of the kings of Judah, the evil of their wives, and your own evil and the evil of your wives—all that they did in the land of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? <sup>x</sup> <sup>10</sup>To this day they have not been crushed down, nor have they shown fear. They have not followed my law and my statutes that I set before you and your ancestors. <sup>y</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: I have set my face against you for evil, to cut off all Judah. <sup>12</sup>I will take away the remnant of Judah who insisted on going to the land of Egypt to live there; in the land of Egypt they shall meet their end. They shall fall by the sword or be consumed by hunger. From the least to the greatest, they shall die by sword or hunger; they shall become a malediction, a horror, a curse, a reproach. <sup>z</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Thus I will punish those who live in Egypt, just as I punished Jerusalem, with sword, hunger, and disease, <sup>14</sup>so that none of the remnant of Judah

who came to live in the land of Egypt shall escape or survive.<sup>a</sup> No one shall return to the land of Judah. Even though they long to return and live there, they shall not return except as refugees.

<sup>15</sup>They answered Jeremiah—all the men who knew that their wives were offering sacrifices to other gods, all the women standing there in the immense crowd, and all the people who lived in Lower and Upper Egypt:
<sup>16</sup>“Regarding the word you have spoken to us in the name of the LORD, we are not listening to you.”<sup>b</sup> <sup>17</sup>Rather we will go on doing what we proposed; we will offer incense to the Queen of Heaven and pour out libations to her, just as we have done, along with our ancestors, our kings and princes, in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem. Then we had plenty to eat, we prospered, and we suffered no misfortune.<sup>c</sup> <sup>18</sup>But ever since we stopped offering sacrifices to the Queen of Heaven and pouring out libations to her, we lack everything and are being destroyed by sword and hunger.” <sup>19</sup>And the women said, “When we offered sacrifices to the Queen of Heaven and poured out libations to her, did we bake cakes in her image and pour out libations to her without our husbands’ consent?”<sup>d</sup>

Jeremiah's Journey to Egypt

<sup>20</sup>To all the people, men and women, who gave him this answer, Jeremiah said: <sup>21</sup>As for the sacrifices you offered in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem—you, your ancestors, your kings and princes, and the people of the land—did not the LORD remember them? Did it not enter his mind?<sup>e</sup> <sup>22</sup>The LORD could no longer bear the evil of your deeds, the abominations you were doing; then your land became a waste, a horror, a curse, without even one inhabitant, as it is today.<sup>f</sup> <sup>23</sup>Because you offered sacrifice and sinned against the LORD, not listening to the voice of the LORD, not following his law, his statutes, and his decrees, therefore this evil has overtaken you, as it is today.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Jeremiah said to all the people and to all the women: Hear the word of the LORD, all you Judahites in the land of Egypt: <sup>25</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: You and your wives have carried out with your hands what your mouths have spoken: “We will go on fulfilling the vows we have made to offer sacrifice to the Queen of Heaven and to pour out libations to her.” Very well! keep your vows, fulfill your vows! <sup>26</sup>And then listen to the word of the LORD, all you Judahites living in Egypt; I swear by my own great name, says the LORD: in the whole land of Egypt, my name shall no longer be pronounced by the lips of any Judahite, saying, “As the Lord God lives.” <sup>27</sup>I am watching over them for evil, not for good. All the Judahites in Egypt shall come to an end by sword or famine until they are completely destroyed.<sup>h</sup> <sup>28</sup>Those who escape the sword to return from the land of Egypt to the land of Judah shall be few in number. The whole remnant of Judah who came to Egypt to live shall know whose word stands, mine or theirs.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>29</sup>And this shall be a sign to you—oracle of the LORD—I will punish you in this place so that you will know that my words stand solidly against you for evil. <sup>30</sup>Thus says the LORD: See! I will hand over Pharaoh Hophra,* king of Egypt, to his enemies, to those seeking his life, just as I handed over Zedekiah, king of Judah, to his enemy Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon, to the one seeking his life.<sup>j</sup>

A Message to Baruch.* <sup>1</sup>The word that Jeremiah the prophet spoke to Baruch, son of Neriah, when he wrote on a scroll words from Jeremiah's own mouth in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, king of Judah:<sup>k</sup> <sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD, God of Israel, to you, Baruch. <sup>3</sup>You said, "Woe is me! the LORD has added grief to my pain."<sup>l</sup> I have worn myself out with groaning; rest eludes me." <sup>4</sup>You must say this to him. Thus says the LORD: What I have built, I am tearing down; what I have planted, I am uprooting: all this land.<sup>m</sup> <sup>5</sup>And you, do you seek great things for yourself? Do not seek them! I am bringing evil on all flesh—oracle of the LORD—but I will grant you your life as spoils of war, wherever you may go.<sup>n</sup>

CHAPTER 46

Against Egypt. <sup>2</sup>Concerning Egypt. Against the army of Pharaoh Neco, king of Egypt, defeated at Carchemish on the Euphrates* by Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, king of Judah:

move forward to battle!

<sup>4</sup>Harness the horses,
charioteers, mount up!
Fall in, with helmets on;
polish your spears, put on your armor.

<sup>5</sup>What do I see?
Are they panicking, falling apart?
Their warriors are hammered back,
They flee headlong
never making a stand.
Terror on every side—
oracle of the LORD!<sup>O</sup>

<sup>6</sup>The swift cannot flee,
nor the warrior escape:
There up north, on the banks of the Euphrates
they stumble and fall.

<sup>7</sup>Who is this? Like the Nile, it rears up;
like rivers, its waters surge.

<sup>8</sup>Egypt rears up like the Nile,
like rivers, its waters surge.
“I will rear up,” it says, “and cover the
earth,
destroying the city and its people.”<sup>P</sup>

charge, chariots!
March forth, warriors,
Cush and Put, bearing shields,

Archers of Lud, stretching bows!”

<sup>10</sup>Today belongs to the Lord GOD of hosts, a day of vengeance, vengeance on his
foes!

The sword devours and is sated, drunk
with their blood:
for the Lord GOD of hosts holds a
sacrifice
in the land of the north, on the River
Euphrates.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Go up to Gilead, procure balm, Virgin daughter Egypt!
No use to multiply remedies;
for you there is no healing.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>12</sup>The nations hear your cries,
your screaming fills the earth.
Warrior stumbles against warrior,
both collapse together.<sup>s</sup>

Places Mentioned in the Oracles against the Nations

<sup>13t</sup> The word that the LORD spoke to Jeremiah the prophet when Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon, came to attack the land of Egypt:*

<sup>14</sup>Proclaim in Egypt, announce in Migdol, announce in Memphis and Tahpanhes!
Say: Fall in, get ready,
the sword has devoured your neighbors.<sup>u</sup>

Your champion did not stand,
Because the LORD thrust him down;
<sup>16</sup> he stumbled repeatedly then collapsed.
They said to each other,
“Get up! We must return to our own
people,
To the land of our birth,
away from the destroying sword.”<sup>v</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Give Pharaoh, king of Egypt, the name “Braggart-missed-his-chance.”*

<sup>18</sup>As I live, says the King
whose name is LORD of hosts,
Like Tabor above mountains,
like Carmel* above the sea, he comes.

<sup>19</sup>Pack your bags for exile,
enthroned daughter Egypt;
Memphis shall become a wasteland,
an empty ruin.

<sup>20</sup>Egypt is a beautiful heifer,
a horsefly from the north keeps coming.

<sup>21</sup>Even the mercenaries in her ranks
are like fattened calves;
They too turn and flee together—
they do not stand their ground,
For their day of ruin comes upon them,
their time of punishment.

<sup>22</sup>Her voice is like a snake!
Yes, they come in force;
They attack her with axes,
like those who fell trees.

<sup>23</sup>They cut down her forest—oracle of the LORD—
impenetrable though it be;

More numerous than locusts,
they cannot be counted.

<sup>24</sup>Shamed is daughter Egypt, handed over to a people from the north.

<sup>25</sup>The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, has said: See! I will punish Amon* of Thebes and Egypt, gods, kings, Pharaoh, and those who trust in him.<sup>w</sup> <sup>26</sup>will hand them over to those who seek their lives, to Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon, and to his officers. But later, Egypt shall be inhabited again, as in days of old—oracle of the LORD.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>27</sup>But you, my servant Jacob, do not fear;
do not be dismayed, Israel!
Listen! I will deliver you from far-off
lands;
your offspring, from the land of their
exile.

Jacob shall again find rest,
secure, with none to frighten him.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>28</sup>You, Jacob my servant, must not fear—
oracle of the LORD—
for I am with you;
I will make an end of all the nations
to which I have driven you,
But of you I will not make an end:
I will chastise you as you deserve,
I cannot let you go unpunished.<sup>z</sup>

CHAPTER 47

See RG 348–53

Against the Philistines. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet concerning the Philistines, before Pharaoh attacked Gaza:<sup>a</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Thus says the LORD:

* See: waters are rising from the north,
to become a torrent in flood;
They shall flood the land and all it contains,
the cities and their inhabitants.
People will howl and wail,
every inhabitant of the land.

<sup>3</sup>At the noise of the pounding hooves of his steeds,
the clanking chariots, the rumbling
wheels,
Parents do not turn back for their
children;
their hands hang helpless,

<sup>4</sup>Because of the day that is coming to destroy all the Philistines And cut off from Tyre and Sidon*
the last of their allies.
Yes, the LORD is destroying the Philistines,
the remnant from the coasts of Caphtor.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Baldness is visited upon Gaza,<sup>c</sup>
Ashkelon is reduced to silence;
Ashdod, remnant of their strength,
how long will you gash yourself?*

<sup>6</sup>Ah! Sword of the LORD!
When will you find rest?
Return to your scabbard;
stop, be still!

<sup>7</sup>How can it find rest
when the LORD has commanded it?
Against Ashkelon and the seacoast,

there he has appointed it.<sup>d</sup>

CHAPTER 48

See RG 348–53

Against Moab. * <sup>1</sup>Concerning Moab.

Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel:

Ah, Nebo! it is ravaged;
Kiriathaim is disgraced, captured;
Disgraced and overthrown is the
stronghold:

<sup>2</sup> Moab's glory is no more.
In Heshbon they plot evil against her:
"Come! We will put an end to her as a nation."

You, too, Madmen, * shall be silenced;
you the sword stalks!

<sup>3</sup> Listen! an outcry from Horonaim, <sup>e</sup>
"Ruin and great destruction!"

their outcry is heard in Zoar.

<sup>5</sup> Up the ascent of Luhith
they go weeping;
At the descent to Horonaim
they hear cries of anguish:

<sup>6</sup> "Flee, save your lives!
Be like a wild donkey in the
wilderness!"

<sup>7</sup> Because you trusted in your works and your treasures,
you also shall be captured.

Chemosh * shall go into exile,
his priests and princes with him. <sup>f</sup>

<sup>8</sup> The destroyer comes upon every city,
not a city escapes;
Ruined is the valley,
wasted the plateau—oracle of the
LORD.

<sup>9</sup> Set up a tombstone for Moab;
it will soon become a complete

wasteland,
Its cities turned into ruins
where no one dwells.
<sup>10</sup>Cursed are they who do the LORD's work carelessly,
cursed those who keep their sword
from shedding blood.
<sup>11</sup>* Moab has been resting from its youth,
suspended above its dregs,
Never poured from flask to flask,
never driven into exile.
Thus it retained its flavor,
its bouquet is not lost.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Be assured! The days are coming—oracle of the LORD—when I will send him wine-makers to decant the wine; they shall empty its flasks and smash its jars. <sup>13</sup>Chemosh shall disappoint Moab, just as the house of Israel was disappointed by Bethel, in which they trusted.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>14</sup>How can you say, “We are heroes, mighty warriors”?
<sup>15</sup>The one who ravages Moab and its cities
comes up,
the best of its youth go down to slaughter—
oracle of the King, whose name is LORD of hosts.
<sup>16</sup>Moab's ruin is near at hand,
its disaster approaches swiftly.
<sup>17</sup>Mourn, all you neighbors,
all you who know its name!
Say: How the mighty scepter is broken,
the glorious staff!
<sup>18</sup>Come down from glory, sit on the parched ground,
enthroned daughter Dibon;* Moab's destroyer has fallen upon you,
has shattered your strongholds.<sup>i</sup> <sup>19</sup>Stand along the road, keep watch, enthroned Aroer;

Ask the fleeing man, the escaping woman:

ask them what has happened.<sup>j</sup>

Wail and cry out,

Proclaim it at the Arnon:

“Moab is destroyed!”<sup>k</sup>

its arm is broken—oracle of the LORD.

<sup>26</sup>Make him drunk because he set himself over against the LORD; let Moab swim in his vomit and become a laughingstock. <sup>27</sup>Has Israel not been a laughingstock to you? Was he caught among thieves that you wag your heads whenever you speak of him?<sup>m</sup>

<sup>28</sup>Abandon the cities, take shelter in the
crag,
inhabitants of Moab.

Be like the dove that nests
in the walls of a gorge.

<sup>29</sup>We have heard of the pride of Moab,<sup>n</sup> pride beyond bounds:

His loftiness, his pride, his scorn,
his insolent heart.

<sup>30</sup>I myself know his arrogance—oracle of
the LORD—
liar in word, liar in deed.

<sup>31</sup>And so I wail over Moab,
over all Moab I cry,
over the people of Kir-heres I moan.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>32</sup>More than for Jazer I weep for you, vine of Sibmah.

Your tendrils trailed down to the sea,
as far as Jazer they stretched.

Upon your summer harvest and your vintage,

the destroyer has fallen.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>33</sup>Joy and gladness are taken away from the garden land, the land of Moab.

I dry up the wine from the wine vats,
the treader treads no more,
the vintage shout is stilled.

<sup>34</sup>The cry of Heshbon and Elealeh is heard as far as Jahaz; they call from Zoar to Horonaim and to Eglath-shelishiyah; even the waters of Nimrim turn into a wasteland.<sup>q</sup> <sup>35</sup>I will leave no one in Moab—oracle of the LORD—to offer burnt offerings on the high place or to make sacrifices to their gods.
<sup>36</sup>Hence my heart wails like a flute for Moab; my heart wails like a flute for the people of Kir-heres: the wealth they accumulated has perished.<sup>r</sup> <sup>37</sup>Every head has been shaved bald, every beard cut off; every hand gashed, and all their loins are draped in sackcloth.<sup>s</sup> <sup>38</sup>On all the rooftops of Moab and in all its squares there is mourning. I have shattered Moab like a pot that no one wants—oracle of the Lord. <sup>39</sup>How terrified they are, how they wail! How Moab turns its back in shame! Moab has become a laughingstock and a horror to all its neighbors!

<sup>40</sup>For thus says the LORD:
Look there! Like an eagle he swoops, spreading his wings over Moab.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>41</sup>Cities are captured,
strongholds seized:
On that day the hearts of Moab's warriors become like the heart of a woman in labor.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>42</sup>Moab shall be wiped out, a people no
more,
because it set itself over against the LORD.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>43</sup>Terror, pit, and trap be upon you, enthroned Moab—oracle of the

<sup>44</sup>Those fleeing the terror
    fall into the pit;
Those climbing out of the pit
    are caught in the trap;
Ah, yes! I will bring these things upon Moab
    in the year of their punishment—
    oracle of the LORD.

<sup>45</sup>In Heshbon's shadow the fugitives
    stop short, exhausted;
For fire blazes up from Heshbon,
    and flames up from the house of Sihon:
It consumes the forehead of Moab,
    the scalp of the noisemakers.<sup>x</sup>

    You are finished, people of Chemosh!
Your sons are taken into exile,
    your daughters into captivity.

<sup>47</sup>Yet I will restore the fortunes of Moab in the days to come—oracle of the LORD.<sup>y</sup>

Thus far the judgment on Moab.

Against the Ammonites. <sup>1</sup>Concerning the Ammonites. Thus says the LORD:

Has Israel no sons?
none to inherit?

Why has Milcom* disinherited Gad,
why are his people living in its cities?

<sup>2</sup>Therefore the days are coming—oracle
of the LORD—
when I will sound the battle alarm
against Rabbah of the Ammonites;
It shall become a mound of ruins,
and its villages destroyed by fire.
Israel shall then inherit those who disinherited it—

oracle of the LORD.<sup>z</sup>

shriek, villages of Rabbah!
Put on sackcloth and lament!
Run back and forth in the sheepfolds.
For Milcom is going into exile,
taking priest and prince with him.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Why boast in your strength, your ebbing strength, rebellious
daughter?

Why trust in your treasures, saying,
“Who would dare attack me?”

<sup>5</sup>See, I am bringing terror upon you—oracle of the Lord GOD of hosts—
from all around you;
You shall be scattered, each in headlong flight,
with no one to gather the fugitives.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>6</sup>But afterward I will restore the fortunes of the Ammonites—oracle of the
LORD.

Against Edom. * <sup>7</sup>Concerning Edom. Thus says the LORD of hosts:

Is there no more wisdom in Teman,*
has counsel perished from the prudent, is their wisdom gone?

<sup>8</sup>Flee, retreat, hide deep for lodging, inhabitants of Dedan:

For I bring disaster upon Esau*
when I come to punish them.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>9</sup>If vintagers came upon you,
they would leave no gleanings;
If thieves by night,
they would destroy as they pleased.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>10</sup>So I myself will strip Esau;
I will uncover his lairs so he cannot
hide.

Offspring and family are destroyed,
neighbors, too; he is no more.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Leave your orphans behind, I will keep them alive;
your widows, let them trust in me.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>14</sup>I have heard a report from the LORD,
a herald has been sent among the
nations:

“Gather together, move against it,
get ready for battle!”

<sup>15</sup>I will make you the least among the
nations,
despised by all people!<sup>i</sup>

<sup>16</sup>The terror you spread,
the pride of your heart, beguiled you.

You denizens of rocks and crevices,
occupying towering peaks:
Though you build your nest high as the eagle,
from there I will bring you down—
oracle of the LORD.<sup>j</sup>

hissing at all its wounds. <sup>18</sup>As when Sodom, Gomorrah, and their neighbors were overthrown—oracle of the LORD—no one shall live in it, nor anyone settle there.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>19</sup>As when a lion comes up from a thicket
of the Jordan
to a permanent pasture,
So in an instant, I will chase them off;
I will establish there whomever I
choose.
For who is like me? Who holds me accountable?

What shepherd can stand against me?<sup>l</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Therefore, listen to the strategy
the LORD devised for Edom;
The plans he has drawn up against the inhabitants of Teman:
They shall be dragged away, even the smallest of the flock;
their pasture shall be aghast because of
them.

<sup>21</sup>With the din of their collapse the earth quakes,
to the Red Sea the outcry is heard!

<sup>22</sup>Look! like an eagle he soars aloft,
and spreads his wings over Bozrah;
On that day the hearts of Edom's warriors become like the heart of a woman in labor.<sup>m</sup>

Against Damascus.<sup>23</sup>Concerning Damascus.

Hamath and Arpad* are shamed,
for they have heard bad news;
Anxious, they surge like the sea
which cannot calm down.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Damascus loses heart, turns to flee;
panic has seized it.
Distress and pangs take hold,
like the pain of a woman in labor.

<sup>25</sup>How can the glorious city be abandoned,
the town of joy!

<sup>26</sup>But now its young men shall fall in its
squares,
all the warriors destroyed on that day—
oracle of the LORD of hosts.

<sup>27</sup>I will set fire to the wall of Damascus;
it shall devour the palaces of Benhadad.*

Against Arabia.<sup>28</sup>About Kedar and the kingdoms of Hazor, which Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, defeated.

Thus says the LORD:
Rise up, attack Kedar,
destroy the people from the east.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>29</sup>Their tents and flocks shall be taken away,
their tent curtains and all their goods;
Their camels they carry off, they shout over them, “Terror on every side!”<sup>p</sup>

<sup>30</sup>Flee! wander about, hide deep for lodging, inhabitants of Hazor—oracle of the
LORD;

For Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, has devised a strategy against
you,
drawn up a plan against you,

<sup>31</sup>Get up! set out against a tranquil nation, living in security—oracle of the LORD—Without gates or bars, dwelling alone.

<sup>32</sup>Their camels shall become spoils,
their hordes of cattle, plunder;
I will scatter to the winds those who shave their temples;
from every side I will bring their
ruin—

oracle of the LORD.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>33</sup>Hazor shall become a haunt for jackals,
a wasteland forever,
Where no one lives,
no mortal stays.

Against Elam.<sup>34</sup>The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet concerning Elam* at the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah, king of Judah:

<sup>35</sup>Thus says the LORD of hosts:
Look! I will break the bow of Elam, the mainstay of their might.

<sup>36</sup>I will bring upon Elam the four winds from the four ends of the heavens:
I will scatter them to all these winds,
until there is no nation
to which the outcasts of Elam have not gone.

<sup>37</sup>I will terrify Elam before their foes,
those seeking their life;
I will bring evil upon them,
my burning wrath—oracle of the LORD.
I will send sword after them
until I have finished them off;

<sup>38</sup>I will set up my throne in Elam and destroy from there king and princes—
oracle of the LORD.

<sup>39</sup>But at the end of days I will restore the fortunes of Elam—oracle of the LORD.

CHAPTER 50

See RG 348–53

The First Oracle Against Babylon. <sup>1</sup>The word the LORD spoke against Babylon, * against the land of the Chaldeans, through Jeremiah the prophet:<sup>r</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Proclaim this among the nations,
announce it!

Announce it, do not hide it, but say:

Babylon is captured, Bel * put to shame,
Marduk terrified;
its images are put to shame, its idols
shattered.

<sup>3</sup>A nation from the north advances
against it,
making the land desolate
So that no one can live there;
human beings and animals have fled.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>4</sup>In those days and at that time—oracle of
the LORD—
Israelite and Judahite shall come
together,
Weeping as they come, to seek the LORD,
their God;<sup>t</sup>

<sup>5</sup>They shall ask for Zion, seeking out the way.
“Come, let us join ourselves to the LORD in an everlasting covenant, never to be forgotten.”<sup>u</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Lost sheep were my people,
their shepherds misled them,
leading them astray on the mountains;
From mountain to hill they wandered,
forgetting their fold.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Whoever happened upon them devoured
them;
their enemies said, “We are not guilty,
Because they sinned against the LORD,
the abode of justice, the hope of their ancestors.”<sup>w</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Flee from the midst of Babylon, leave the land of the Chaldeans,
be like rams at the head of the flock.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>9</sup>See, I am stirring up against Babylon
a band of great nations from the land of the north;

They are arrayed against her,
from there she shall be taken.

Their arrows are like the arrows of a skilled warrior

who never returns empty-handed.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Chaldea shall become plunder;
all its plunderers shall be enriched—
oracle of the LORD.

<sup>11</sup>Yes, rejoice and exult,
you that plunder my heritage;
Frisk like calves on the grass,
neigh like stallions!

<sup>12</sup>Your mother will indeed be put to shame,
she that bore you shall be abashed;
See, the last of the nations,
a wilderness, a dry wasteland.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Because of the LORD’s wrath it shall be uninhabited,
become an utter wasteland;
Everyone who passes by Babylon will be appalled
and hiss at all its wounds.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Take your posts encircling Babylon,
you who bend the bow;

Shoot at it, do not spare your arrows,<sup>b</sup>

<sup>15</sup>raise the war cry against it on every side.

It surrenders, its bastions fall,
its walls are torn down:*

This is retribution from the LORD! Take retribution on her,
as she has done, do to her;
for she sinned against the LORD.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>16</sup>Cut off the sower from Babylon
and those who wield sickles at harvest
time!

Before the destroying sword,
all of them turn back to their own
people,
all flee to their own land.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Israel was a stray sheep
that lions pursued;
The king of Assyria once devoured him;
now Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon
gnaws his bones.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Therefore, thus says the LORD of hosts,
the God of Israel:
I will punish the king of Babylon and his
land,

as I once punished the king of Assyria;<sup>f</sup>

<sup>19</sup>But I will bring Israel back to its pasture, to feed on Carmel and Bashan,
And on Mount Ephraim and Gilead, until they have their fill.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>20</sup>In those days, at that time—oracle of the LORD:

The guilt of Israel may be sought, but it
no longer exists,
the sin of Judah, but it can no longer
be found;
for I will forgive the remnant I preserve.<sup>h</sup>

and those who live in Pekod;* Slaughter and put them under the ban—
oracle of the LORD—
do all I have commanded you.

<sup>22</sup>Battle alarm in the land,
great destruction!

<sup>23</sup>How the hammer of the whole earth
has been cut off and broken!
What an object of horror

Babylon has become among the nations!<sup>i</sup>

<sup>24</sup>You ensnared yourself and were caught,
Babylon, before you knew it!
You were discovered and seized,
because you challenged the LORD.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>25</sup>The Lord opens his armory,
brings out the weapons of his wrath;
The Lord GOD of hosts has work to do in the land of the Chaldeans.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>26</sup>Come upon them from every side,
open their granaries, Pile them up in heaps and put them under the ban;
do not leave a remnant.

<sup>27</sup>Slay all the oxen,
take them down to slaughter;
Woe to them! their day has come,
the time of their punishment.

<sup>28</sup>Listen! the fugitives, the refugees
from the land of Babylon:
They announce in Zion
the retribution of the LORD, our God.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>29</sup>Call archers out against Babylon,
all who bend the bow;
Encamp around them;
let no one escape.
Repay them for their deeds;
what they have done, do to them,
For they insulted the LORD,
the Holy One of Israel.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>30</sup>Therefore their young men shall fall in the squares,
all their warriors shall be stilled on
that day—
oracle of the LORD.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>31</sup>I am against you, O Insolence—
oracle of the LORD GOD of hosts;
For your day has come,
the time for me to punish you.

<sup>32</sup>Insolence stumbles and falls;
    there is no one to raise him up.
I will kindle a fire in his cities
    to devour everything around him.

<sup>33</sup> Thus says the LORD of hosts:
Oppressed are the people of Israel,
    together with the people of Judah;
All their captors hold them fast
    and refuse to let them go.

<sup>34</sup>Strong is their Redeemer,
    whose name is LORD of hosts,
The sure defender of their cause,
    who gives rest to their land,
but unrest to those who live in Babylon.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>35</sup>A sword upon the Chaldeans—oracle of
    the LORD—
    upon the inhabitants of Babylon, her princes and sages!

<sup>36</sup>A sword upon the soothsayers,
    and they become fools!
A sword upon the warriors,
    and they tremble;

<sup>37</sup>A sword upon their motley throng,
    and they become women!
A sword upon their treasures,
    and they are plundered;<sup>p</sup>

<sup>38</sup>A drought upon the waters,
    and they dry up!
For it is a land of idols,
    soon made frantic by phantoms.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>39</sup>Hence, wildcats shall dwell there with hyenas,
    and ostriches occupy it;
Never again shall it be inhabited or settled,
    from age to age.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>40</sup>As happened when God overturned Sodom
    and Gomorrah and their neighbors—
    oracle of the LORD—

No one shall dwell there,

no mortal shall settle there.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>41</sup>See, a people comes from the north,
a great nation, and mighty kings
rising from the ends of the earth.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>42</sup>Bow and javelin they wield,
cruel and pitiless are they;
They sound like the roaring sea,
as they ride forth on horses,
Each in place for battle against you, daughter Babylon.

<sup>43</sup>The king of Babylon hears news of them,
and his hands hang helpless;
Anguish takes hold of him,
like the pangs of a woman giving birth.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>44</sup>As happens when a lion comes up from a thicket of the Jordan
to permanent pasture,
So I, in an instant, will chase them off,
and establish there whomever I
choose!

For who is like me? Who can call me to account?

What shepherd can stand against me?<sup>v</sup>

<sup>45</sup>Therefore, hear the strategy of the LORD, which he has devised against Babylon;
Hear the plans drawn up against the land of the Chaldeans:
They shall be dragged away, even the smallest sheep;
their own pasture aghast because of them.<sup>w</sup>

earth quakes;
the outcry is heard among the nations.<sup>x</sup>

CHAPTER 51

See RG 348–53

The Second Oracle Against Babylon

- <sup>1</sup> Thus says the LORD:
See! I rouse against Babylon, and the inhabitants of Chaldea,
a destroyer wind.*
- <sup>2</sup> To Babylon I will send winnowers
to winnow and lay waste the land;
They shall besiege it on every side
on the day of affliction.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> How can the archers draw back their bows,
lift their armor?
Do not spare her young men,
put the entire army under the ban.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>4</sup> The slain shall fall in the land of Chaldea,
the wounded, in its streets;<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>5</sup> For Israel and Judah are not left widowed by their God, the LORD of hosts, Even though the land is full of guilt against the Holy One of Israel.
- <sup>6</sup> Flee from Babylon;
each of you save your own life,
do not perish because of her guilt;
This is a time of retribution from the
LORD,
- <sup>7</sup> who pays out her due.<sup>b</sup>
Babylon was a golden cup in the hand of
the LORD
making the whole earth drunk;
The nations drank its wine,
thus they have gone mad.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>8</sup> Babylon suddenly falls and is broken:
wail over her!
Bring balm for her wounds,
in case she can be healed.<sup>d</sup>

9“We have tried to heal Babylon,
but she cannot be healed.
Leave her, each of us must go to our own land.”

The judgment against her reaches the
heavens,
it touches the clouds.<sup>e</sup>

10The LORD has brought forth our vindication;
come, let us tell in Zion
what the LORD, our God, has done.<sup>f</sup>

11Sharpen the arrows,
fill the quivers;
The LORD has stirred up the spirit of the kings of the Medes,*
for his resolve is Babylon’s destruction.
Yes, it is retribution from the LORD, retribution for his temple.<sup>g</sup>

12Over the walls of Babylon raise a signal,
reinforce the watch;
Post sentries,
arrange ambushes!
For the LORD has both planned and carried out
what he spoke against the inhabitants of Babylon.

13You who dwell by mighty waters,
rich in treasure,
Your end has come,
the time at which you shall be cut off!<sup>h</sup>

14The LORD of hosts has sworn by himself:
I will fill you with people as numerous as locusts,
who shall raise over you a joyous shout!

15He made the earth by his power,
established the world by wisdom,
and by his skill stretched out the heavens.<sup>i</sup>

16When he thunders, the waters in the
heavens roar,

he summons clouds from the ends of
the earth,
Makes lightning flash in the rain,
and brings out winds from their
storehouses.

<sup>17</sup>Every man is stupid, ignorant;
every artisan is put to shame by his
idol:

He molds a fraud,
without life-breath.

<sup>18</sup>They are nothing, a ridiculous work, that will perish at the time of
punishment.

he is the creator of all things.

Israel is his very own tribe;
LORD of hosts is his name.

<sup>20</sup>You are my hammer,
a weapon for war;
With you I shatter nations,
with you I destroy kingdoms.

<sup>21</sup>With you I shatter horse and rider,
with you I shatter chariot and driver.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>22</sup>With you I shatter man and woman, with you I shatter old and young,
with you I shatter the young man and young woman.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>23</sup>With you I shatter shepherd and flock, with you I shatter farmer and team,
with you I shatter governors and officers.

<sup>24</sup>Thus I will repay Babylon,
all the inhabitants of Chaldea,
For all the evil they committed against Zion,
before your very eyes—oracle of the LORD.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Beware! I am against you, destroying mountain—oracle of the LORD—
destroyer of the entire earth,

I will stretch forth my hand against you,
roll you down over the cliffs,
and make you a burnt mountain.<sup>m</sup>

26 They will not take from you a cornerstone,
or a foundation stone;

You shall remain ruins forever—
oracle of the LORD.<sup>n</sup>

27 Raise a signal in the land,
sound the trumpet among the nations;
Dedicate nations for war against her,
summon against her the kingdoms:

Ararat, Minni, and Ashkenaz;*
Appoint a recruiting officer against her,
dispatch horses like bristling locusts.<sup>o</sup>

28 Dedicate nations for war against her:
the king of the Medes,
Its governors and all its officers,
every land in its domain.

29 The earth quakes and writhes, the LORD's plan against Babylon is
carried out,
Turning the land of Babylon
into a wasteland without inhabitants.

30 Babylon's warriors have ceased to fight,
they remain in their strongholds;
Dried up is their strength,
they have become women.
Burned down are their homes,
broken their gates.

31 One runner meets another,
herald meets herald,
Telling the king of Babylon
that his entire city has been taken.<sup>p</sup>

32 The fords have been seized, marshes set on fire,
warriors panic.

33 For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel:

Daughter Babylon is like a threshing floor

at the time of treading;
Yet a little while,
and the harvest time will come for her.<sup>q</sup>

34“He consumed me, defeated me, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon;
he left me like an empty vessel,
Swallowed me like a sea monster, filled his belly with my delicacies and cast me out.

35Let my torn flesh be visited upon Babylon,”
says enthroned Zion;
“My blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea,”
says Jerusalem.

36But now, thus says the LORD:
I will certainly defend your cause,
I will certainly avenge you;
I will dry up her sea,
and drain her fountain.

37Babylon shall become a heap of ruins,
a haunt of jackals;
A place of horror and hissing,
without inhabitants.<sup>r</sup>

38They roar like lions, growl like lion cubs.<sup>s</sup>

39When they are parched, I will set drink
before them
to make them drunk, that they may be overcome
with everlasting sleep, never to awaken—
oracle of the LORD.

40I will bring them down like lambs to slaughter,
like rams and goats.

41How she has been seized, taken captive,
the glory of the whole world!
What a horror Babylon has become

among the nations:<sup>t</sup>

<sup>42</sup> against Babylon the sea rises,
she is overwhelmed by roaring waves!

<sup>43</sup> Her cities have become wasteland,
a parched and arid land
Where no one lives,
no one passes through.

<sup>44</sup> I will punish Bel in Babylon, and make him vomit up what he swallowed;
nations shall no longer stream to him.
Even the wall of Babylon falls!

<sup>45</sup> Leave her, my people; each of you save your own life
from the burning wrath of the LORD.

<sup>46</sup> Do not be discouraged when rumors spread through the land; this year one rumor comes, next year another: “Violence in the land!” or “Ruler against ruler!”<sup>u</sup> <sup>47</sup> Realize that the days are coming when I will punish the idols of Babylon; the whole land shall be put to shame, all her slain shall fall in her midst. <sup>48</sup> Then heaven and earth and everything in them shall shout over Babylon with joy, when the destroyers come against her from the north—oracle of the LORD.<sup>v</sup> <sup>49</sup> Babylon, too, must fall, you slain of Israel, because by the hand of Babylon the slain of all the earth have fallen.

<sup>50</sup> You who have escaped the sword,
go, do not stand idle;
Remember the LORD from far away,
let Jerusalem come to mind.

<sup>51</sup> We are ashamed because we have heard taunts,
disgrace covers our faces;
strangers have entered sanctuaries in the LORD’s house.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>52</sup> Therefore see, the days are coming—
oracle of the LORD—
when I will punish her idols,
and throughout the land the wounded
will groan.

<sup>53</sup> Though Babylon scale the heavens,

and make her strong heights inaccessible,
my destroyers shall reach her—oracle
of the LORD.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>54</sup>A sound of crying from Babylon, great destruction from the land of the Chaldeans;

<sup>55</sup>For the LORD lays Babylon waste, silences her loud cry,
Waves roaring like mighty waters,
a clamor resounding.

<sup>56</sup>For the destroyer comes upon her, upon Babylon;
warriors are captured, their bows
broken;
The LORD is a God of recompense,
he will surely repay.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>57</sup>I will make her princes and sages drunk, with her governors, officers, and warriors, so that they sleep an everlasting sleep, never to awaken—oracle of the King, whose name is LORD of hosts.

<sup>58</sup> Thus says the LORD of hosts:
The walls of spacious Babylon shall be leveled to the ground,
its lofty gates destroyed by fire.
The toil of the peoples is for nothing;
the nations weary themselves for what the flames consume.<sup>z</sup>

The Prophecy Sent to Babylon.<sup>59</sup>The mission Jeremiah the prophet gave to Seraiah,* son of Neriah, son of Mahseiah, when he went to Babylon with King Zedekiah, king of Judah, in the fourth year of his reign; Seraiah was chief quartermaster. <sup>60</sup>Jeremiah wrote down on one scroll the disaster that would befall Babylon;* all these words were written against Babylon.
<sup>61</sup>And Jeremiah said to Seraiah: “When you reach Babylon, see that you read all these words aloud,<sup>a</sup> <sup>62</sup>and then say: LORD, you yourself spoke against this place in order to cut it down so that nothing, human being or beast, could live in it, because it is to remain a wasteland forever. <sup>63</sup>When you have finished reading this scroll, tie a stone to it and throw it into the Euphrates,<sup>b 64</sup> and say: Thus Babylon shall sink. It will never rise, because of the disaster I am bringing upon it.” Thus far the words of Jeremiah.

CHAPTER 52

See RG 348–53

Capture of Jerusalem.<sup>1</sup>Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he became king; he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.<sup>c</sup> His mother's name was Hamutal, daughter of Jeremiah from Libnah. <sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, just as Jehoiakim had done. <sup>3</sup>Indeed, the things done in Jerusalem and in Judah so angered the LORD that he cast them out from his presence. Thus Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon. <sup>4d</sup> In the tenth month of the ninth year of his reign, on the tenth day of the month,* Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and his entire army advanced against Jerusalem, encamped around it, and built siege walls on every side. <sup>5</sup>The siege of the city continued until the eleventh year of King Zedekiah.

<sup>6</sup>On the ninth day of the fourth month, when famine had gripped the city and the people had no more bread, <sup>7</sup>the city walls were breached. All the soldiers fled and left the city by night through the gate between the two walls which was near the king's garden. With the Chaldeans surrounding the city, they went in the direction of the Arabah. <sup>8</sup>But the Chaldean army pursued the king and overtook Zedekiah in the wilderness near Jericho; his whole army fled from him.

<sup>9</sup>The king, therefore, was arrested and brought to Riblah, in the land of Hamath, to the king of Babylon, who pronounced judgment on him. <sup>10</sup>As Zedekiah looked on, the king of Babylon slaughtered his sons before his eyes! All the nobles of Judah were slaughtered at Riblah. <sup>11</sup>And the eyes of Zedekiah he then blinded, bound him with chains, and the king of Babylon brought him to Babylon and kept him in prison until the day he died.

Destruction of Jerusalem.<sup>12</sup>On the tenth day of the fifth month, this was in the nineteenth year* of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, Nebuzaradan, captain of the bodyguard, came to Jerusalem as the representative of the king of Babylon. <sup>13</sup>He burned the house of the LORD, the palace of the king, and all the houses of Jerusalem; every large building he destroyed with fire. <sup>14</sup>Then the Chaldean troops with the captain of the guard tore down all the walls that surrounded Jerusalem.

of the artisans. <sup>16</sup>But Nebuzaradan, captain of the guard, left behind some of the country's poor as vinedressers and farmers.

<sup>17</sup>The bronze pillars that belonged to the house of the LORD, and the wheeled carts and the bronze sea in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans broke into pieces; they carried away all the bronze to Babylon. <sup>18</sup>They also took the pots, shovels, snuffers, bowls, pans, and all the bronze vessels used for service; <sup>19</sup>the basins, fire holders, bowls, pots, lampstands, pans, the sacrificial bowls made of gold or silver. Along with these furnishings the captain of the guard carried off <sup>20</sup>the two pillars, the one sea and its base of twelve oxen cast in bronze, and the wheeled carts King Solomon had commissioned for the house of the LORD. The bronze from all these furnishings was impossible to weigh.

<sup>21</sup>As for the pillars, each of them was eighteen cubits high and twelve cubits in diameter; each was four fingers thick and hollow inside. <sup>22</sup>A bronze capital five cubits high crowned the one pillar, and a network with pomegranates encircled the capital, all of bronze; and so for the other pillar, with pomegranates. <sup>23</sup>There were ninety-six pomegranates on the sides, a hundred pomegranates surrounding the network.

<sup>24</sup>The captain of the guard also took Seraiah the high priest, Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the entrance. <sup>25</sup>From the city he took one courtier, a commander of soldiers, and seven men in the personal service of the king still in the city, the scribe of the army commander who mustered the people of the land, and sixty of the common people remaining in the city. <sup>26</sup>The captain of the guard, Nebuzaradan, arrested them and brought them to the king of Babylon at Riblah, <sup>27</sup>who had them struck down and executed in Riblah, in the land of Hamath.

Thus Judah was exiled from the land. <sup>28*</sup> This is the number of people Nebuchadnezzar led away captive: in his seventh year, three thousand twenty-three people of Judah; <sup>29</sup>in the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, eight hundred thirty-two persons from Jerusalem; <sup>30</sup>in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan, captain of the guard, deported seven hundred forty-five Judahites: four thousand six hundred persons in all.

Favor Shown to Jehoiachin. <sup>* 31e</sup> In the thirty-seventh year of the exile of Jehoiachin, king of Judah, on the twenty-fifth day of the twelfth month, Evil-merodach, king of Babylon, in the inaugural year of his reign, raised up Jehoiachin, king of Judah, and released him from prison. <sup>32</sup>He spoke kindly to him and gave him a throne higher than the thrones of the other kings* who were with him in Babylon. <sup>33</sup>Jehoiachin took off his prison garb and ate at the king's table as long as he lived. <sup>34</sup>The allowance given him by the king of Babylon was a perpetual allowance, in fixed daily amounts, all the days of his life until the day of his death.

1:1 Anathoth: a village about three miles northeast of Jerusalem, to which Solomon had exiled Abiathar the priest (1 Kgs 2:26–27); it is likely that Jeremiah belonged to that priestly family.

1:5 Jeremiah was destined to become a prophet before his birth; cf. Is 49:1, 5; Lk 1:15; Gal 1:15–16. I knew you: I loved you and chose you. I dedicated you: I set you apart to be a prophet. The nations: the neighbors of Judah, along with Assyria, Babylonia, and Egypt.

1:6 I am too young: like Moses (Ex 3:11, 13; 4:10), Jeremiah at first resists God's call. This narrative is perhaps patterned after the story of Moses' call in order to identify Jeremiah as the prophet "like me" in Dt 18:15.

1:11 There is wordplay between the Hebrew noun shaqed, "almond tree," and the Hebrew verb shoqed, "watcher/watching." Because the almond tree begins to bloom in late winter in Palestine, it is called "the watcher" for the coming of spring. God is also "watcher," observing the fulfillment of the prophetic word.

1:13 Kettle . . . the north: symbol of an invasion from the north; cf. vv. 14–15.

2:1–3:5 These chapters may contain some of Jeremiah's early preaching. He portrays Israel as the wife of the Lord, faithful only in the beginning, when she walked behind him (2:2–3, 5; 3:1). Consistent with the marriage metaphor, he describes her present unfaithfulness as adultery (2:20; 3:2–3); now she walks behind the Baals.

2:2 Devotion: Heb. hesed; Israel's gratitude, fidelity, and love for God.

2:3 First fruits: the first yield of a harvest offered as a sign of dependence on and gratitude toward the Lord of the land, thus divine property. Israel, then, is a gift made to God, set apart for his use; cf. Ex 23:19.

2:8 Experts in the law: the priests. The shepherds: the kings and nobles.

2:10 Kedar: a nomadic tribe in north Arabia. Cyprus and Kedar represent west and east.

2:14 House-born servant: one born in the master's house, in contrast to a slave acquired by purchase or as a captive; cf. Lv 22:11.

2:16 Memphis: the capital of Lower Egypt. Tahpanhes: a frontier city of Egypt, east of the Delta. Shave the crown of your head: an image for Egypt plundering Judah; perhaps a reference to the capture of King Jehoahaz in 609 B.C. (2 Kgs 23:34).

2:18 Egypt and Assyria were the competing foreign powers favored by rival parties within Judah. The desire for such foreign alliances is a further desertion of the Lord, the source of living waters (v. 13), in favor of the above-named powers, symbolized by the waters of the Nile and the Euphrates rivers.

2:20 Served as a prostitute: idolatry (because Israel is the "bride" of God); cf. vv. 2–3.

2:23 The Valley: probably Ben-hinnom, south of Jerusalem, site of the sanctuary of Topheth, where children were sacrificed to Molech; cf. 7:31.

3:1 Can she return to the first?: i.e., her first husband. Here the Hebrew is emended in light of the Septuagint and Dt 24:1–4, which forbids a man to take back a woman once he has divorced her.

The prophet uses this analogy to illustrate the presumption of Judah, the unfaithful wife, who assumes she can easily return to the Lord after worshiping other gods.

3:2 An Arabian: here depicted as a marauder lying in wait for caravans.

3:14–18 A remnant of Israel (v. 14) will reunite with Judah (v. 18). The former Israelite community, represented by the ark of the covenant, will be replaced by a universal alliance, symbolized by Jerusalem, the Lord's throne, to which all nations will be gathered (v. 17).

3:24 The shameful thing: Heb. bosheth ("shame"), a term often substituted for the name of Baal, a Canaanite god worshiped at local shrines.

4:2 As the LORD lives: this oath, made sincerely, implies Israel's return and loyal adherence to God. Thus the ancient promises are fulfilled; cf. Gn 12:3; 18:18; 22:18; 26:4; Ps 72:17.

4:4 The external rite of circumcision accomplishes nothing unless it is accompanied by the removal of blindness and obstinacy of heart. Jeremiah's view is reflected in Rom 2:25, 29; 1 Cor 7:19; Gal 5:6; 6:13, 15.

4:10 You really did deceive: Jeremiah complains that the Lord misled the people by fostering their complacency, leaving them unprepared and unrepentant as judgment approaches.

4:11 My daughter, the people: the covenant people personified as a young woman. Ezekiel 16 presents Israel and Judah as female infants whom the Lord adopts and then abandons and punishes because they desire other lords.

4:19–21 Probably the prophet's own anguish at the coming destruction of Judah.

5:12 They denied the LORD: the people act as though God does not matter and will not interfere.

5:24 Rain early and late: autumn and spring rains respectively. Appointed weeks of harvest: the seven weeks between the Passover (Dt 16:9–10) and the feast of Weeks (Pentecost), when it did not ordinarily rain.

6:3 Shepherds come with their flocks: foreign invaders with their armies.

6:16 Pathways of old: history and the lessons to be learned from it.

6:17 Watchmen: the prophets who, like Jeremiah, had upheld God's moral law.

6:27–30 God appoints Jeremiah to be a "tester" of his people. The passage uses the metaphor of the refining of silver: the silver was extracted from lead ore, but the process in ancient times was inexact, so that sometimes all that was left was a scummy mess, to be thrown out.

7:1–15 The Temple of the Lord will not guarantee safety against enemy invasion or any other misfortune.

7:6 The alien: specially protected within Israelite society; cf. Ex 22:20; Nm 9:14; 15:14; Dt 5:14; 28:43.

7:12 Shiloh: an important sanctuary where the ark of the covenant was kept, according to the Books of Joshua, Judges, and 1 Samuel. In response to the corrupt behavior of the priests serving there, God allows the Philistines to destroy Shiloh and take the ark of the covenant. Cf. 1 Sm 1:9; 4:3–4; Ps 78:60, 68–69.

7:18 Queen of Heaven: probably Astarte, goddess of fertility (cf. 1 Sm 31:10; 1 Kgs 11:5), worshiped particularly by women (cf. Jer 44:15–19). Such worship was evidently reinforced during the reign of King Manasseh (2 Kgs 21:3–7) and was revived after Josiah's death.

7:22 I gave them no command: right conduct rather than formal ritual was God's will concerning his people (v. 23).

7:29 Hair: the unshorn hair of the nazirite, regarded as sacred because of a vow, temporary or permanent, to abstain from cutting or shaving the hair; nazirites also avoided contact with a corpse and with all products of the vine; cf. Nm 6:4–8. The cutting of this hair was a sign of extreme mourning.

7:31 Valley of Ben-hinnom: this valley was probably south of Jerusalem. Topheth: perhaps, "fire pit."

8:2 Host of heaven: the stars, worshiped by other nations and even by the inhabitants of Jerusalem, particularly during the reigns of Manasseh and Amon.

8:8 Lying pen of the scribes: because the teachings and interpretations of the scribes ran counter to the word of the Lord.

8:11 Daughter of my people: see note on 4:11.

8:22 Gilead: a region southeast of the Sea of Galilee noted for its healing balm.

9:3 Jacob, the supplanter: in Hebrew, a play on words. In the popular etymology given in Gn 25:26, the name Jacob means “he supplants,” for he deprived his brother Esau of his birthright (cf. Gn 25:33).

9:25 Shave their temples: some Arabian tribes practiced this custom. None of the nations who practice circumcision understand the meaning of their action, not even Israel; no one conforms to life under the covenant.

10:2 Signs in the heavens: phenomena in the sky, such as eclipses or comets, used to predict disasters.

10:11 This verse is in Aramaic.

12:3 Jeremiah calls the Lord to account for allowing the wicked to flourish while he himself is persecuted for his fidelity to the Lord’s mission; cf. 20:12. See Jesus’ judgment, Mk 9:42. The metaphors indicate that Jeremiah has even greater trials ahead of him.

12:14 My evil neighbors: nations surrounding Israel, the land belonging to the Lord; cf. Is 8:8.

13:1–11 In this symbolic action, Jeremiah probably went to the village and spring of Parah, two and a half miles northeast of Anathoth, whose name closely resembled the Hebrew name of the river Euphrates (Perath), in order to dramatize the religious corruption of Judah at the hands of the Babylonians.

13:25 Heb. sheqer: lit., “deception,” often used to designate an idol.

15:13–14 Though the wording of these verses is close to that in 17:3–4, the present passage is evidently God’s word to Jeremiah, whereas 17:3–4 is evidently a word of judgment on Judah. It is noteworthy that the references to “you” in the present passage are singular, until a shift to plural in “against you” in the last line; this “you” is then doubtless a reference to both the prophet and his enemies.

16:6–7 These verses refer to popular mourning practices in the land; cf. Dt 14:1–2.

17:19 The Gate of Benjamin: this gate, probably part of the Temple area, is otherwise unknown.

18:1–12 The lesson of the potter is that God has the power to destroy or restore, changing his plans accordingly as these nations disobey him or fulfill his will. Cf. Jon 3:10.

18:14 Lebanon: here apparently including Mount Hermon, whose snow-capped peak can be seen from parts of Palestine all year round. The prophet contrasts the certainties of nature with Israel’s unnatural desertion of the Lord for idols (v. 15).

18:16 Hissing: in some ancient Near Eastern cultures hissing was not only a sign of derision but a magical means of keeping demons away; people hissed in order to ward off danger, like whistling in a cemetery.

18:21 Give their children: often an extended family is meant, to be rewarded or punished as a unit.

19:2 Potsherd Gate: perhaps in the south wall of Jerusalem, through which potsherds and other refuse were thrown into the Valley of Ben-hinnom.

19:6 Cf. note on 7:31.

20:1 Chief officer in the house of the LORD: head of the Temple police; cf. 29:26. By entering the Temple court (19:14), Jeremiah had put himself under Pashhur’s jurisdiction.

20:3 Terror on every side: the name indicates the siege that will beset Jerusalem.

20:4 Babylon: mentioned here for the first time in Jeremiah as the land of exile. The prophecy dates from after 605 B.C., when Nebuchadnezzar defeated Egypt and made the Babylonian (Chaldean) empire dominant in Syria and Palestine.

20:7 You seduced me: Jeremiah accuses the Lord of having deceived him; cf. 15:18.

20:14–18 Deception, sorrow and terror have brought the prophet to the point of despair; nevertheless he maintains confidence in God (vv. 11–13); cf. Jb 3:3–12.

21:1 Zedekiah: brother of Jehoiakim, appointed king by Nebuchadnezzar after he had carried Jehoiachin away to captivity (2 Kgs 24:17). Pashhur: different from the one in 20:1–3 but also one of Jeremiah's enemies; cf. 38:1, 4.

21:10 Jeremiah consistently pointed out the uselessness of resistance to Babylon, since the Lord had delivered Judah to Nebuchadnezzar (27:6). Because of this the prophet was denounced and imprisoned as a traitor (37:13–14).

21:11–23:8 This section contains an editor's collection of Jeremiah's oracles against the kings of Judah. They are placed in the chronological order of the kings, and are prefaced by oracles against the kings of Judah in general (21:11–22:9).

21:13 Ruler of the Valley, Rock of the Plain: Mount Zion, surrounded by valleys, was regarded by the royal house as impregnable. Despite this natural fortification, God derides it as no more than a rock rising from the plain, useless against the attack of his fury.

21:14 Its forest: probably the royal palace, built of cedar wood; cf. 22:14; in 1 Kgs 7:2 the palace is called "the house of the forest of Lebanon."

22:10 Him who is dead: Josiah. His successor, Jehoahaz, was deported by Pharaoh Neco to Egypt, where he died (2 Kgs 23:33–34).

22:11 Shallum: i.e., Jehoahaz; cf. 1 Chr 3:15. This may have been his name at birth, in which case Jehoahaz would have been his throne name.

22:13 Without pay: either by forced labor in public works, or by defrauding the workers. Despite the impoverishment caused in Judah by the payment of foreign tribute, Jehoiakim embarked on a building program in Jerusalem (v. 14); cedar was an expensive building material which had to be imported. Social injustice is the cause of much of the prophetic condemnation of the kings (v. 17).

22:15–16 The rule of Josiah, Jehoiakim's father, shows that authentic kingship is rooted in knowledge of the Lord and creates a society in which the most disadvantaged can expect and receive justice.

22:18 "Alas! my brother"; "Alas! sister": customary cries of mourning.

22:19 The burial of a donkey: no burial at all, except to be cast outside the city as refuse. This prophecy describes the popular feeling toward Jehoiakim rather than the actual circumstances of his burial. According to 2 Kgs 24:5 he was buried with his ancestors in Jerusalem.

22:20–23 The prophet first bids Jerusalem to scale Lebanon, Bashan, and Abarim, i.e., the highest surrounding mountains to the north, northeast, and southeast, and gaze on the ruin of its lovers, i.e., the false leaders of Judah, called its shepherds (v. 22); cf. 2:8. Jerusalem still stands (v. 23), apparently as secure as the heights of Lebanon, but destruction is to follow (cf. v. 6).

22:24 Coniah: a shortened form of Jeconiah, the name Jeremiah gives King Jehoiachin (cf. 24:1). A signet ring: the seal used by kings and other powerful figures—a symbol of their power and status—mounted in a ring worn constantly on the hand. The Lord says that even were Jehoiachin such a precious possession, he would reject him. Hg 2:23 uses the same imagery to signal the restoration of Zerubbabel. The words in Jer 22:24–30 date from the short three-month reign of Jehoiachin, before he was deported by Nebuchadnezzar.

22:26 You and the mother who bore you: the queen mother held a special position in the monarchy of Judah, and in the Books of Kings she is invariably mentioned by name along with the king (1 Kgs 15:2; 2 Kgs 18:2). Jehoiachin did indeed die in Babylon.

22:30 Childless: Jehoiachin is considered childless because none of his seven sons became king. His grandson Zerubbabel presided for a time over the Judahite community after the return from exile, but not as king. According to Ezekiel, whose oracles are dated by Jehoiachin's fictitious regnal years, the people expected Jehoiachin to return. Jeremiah's prophecy dispels this hope, despite the words of Hananiah (28:4).

23:1–8 With the false rulers (shepherds) who have governed his people the Lord contrasts himself, the true shepherd, who will in the times of restoration appoint worthy rulers (vv. 1–4). He will provide a new king from David's line who will rule justly, fulfilling royal ideals (vv. 5, 6). "The Lord our justice" is an ironic wordplay on the name of the weak King Zedekiah ("The Lord is justice"). Unlike Zedekiah, the future king will be true to the name he bears. Verses 7–8 may have been added during the exile.

23:9–40 After the collection of oracles against the kings, the editor of the book placed this collection of oracles against the false prophets. With them are associated the priests, for both have betrayed their trust as instructors in the ways of the Lord; cf. 2:8; 4:9; 6:13–14.

23:14 Cf. note on 13:25.

23:17–20 Not only are the false prophets personally immoral, but they encourage immorality by prophesying good for evildoers. The true prophet, on the other hand, sees the inevitable consequences of evil behavior.

23:23–24 Near at hand only . . . far off: a divine claim that no one can hide from God and that God is aware of all that happens.

23:28–29 Straw . . . wheat: a contrast between false and true prophecy. True prophecy is also like fire (cf. 5:14; 20:9), producing violent results (v. 29); Jeremiah's own life is a testimony of this.

23:33–40 A wordplay on massa', which means both "oracle" (usually of woe) and "burden." In vv. 34–40 the word massa' itself is forbidden to the people under the meaning of a divine oracle.

24:1–10 For Jeremiah, as for Ezekiel, no good could be expected from the people who had been left in Judah under Zedekiah or who had fled into Egypt; a future might be expected only for those who would pass through the purifying experience of the exile to form the new Israel.

24:1 Jeconiah: alternative form of Jehoiachin (cf. note on 22:24).

25:1–14 The fourth year of Jehoiakim: 605 B.C. Officially, the first year of Nebuchadnezzar began the following year; but as early as his victory over Egypt at Carchemish in 605, Nebuchadnezzar wielded dominant power in the Near East. Jeremiah saw in him the fulfillment of his prophecy of the enemy to come from the north (cf. 1:13; 6:22–24). In vv. 11–12 the prophecy of the seventy years' exile occurs for the first time; cf. 29:10. This number signifies that the present generation must die out; cf. forty in the exodus tradition (Nm 14:20–23).

25:15–17 Jeremiah is a prophet to the nations (cf. 1:5) as well as to his own people. All the nations mentioned here appear again in the more extensive collection of Jeremiah's oracles against the nations in chaps. 46–51.

25:15 Cup . . . wrath: a metaphor for destruction that occurs often in the Old Testament (cf. Ps 11:6; 75:9; Hb 2:15–16; Ez 23:31–33, etc.).

25:20 Uz: the homeland of legendary Job, in Edomite or Arabian territory.

25:22 The shores beyond the sea: Phoenician commercial colonies located throughout the Mediterranean world.

25:23 Dedan and Tema and Buz: North Arabian tribes.

25:26 Sheshach: a contrived word from the Hebrew letters of Babylon.

26:1 The beginning of the reign: a technical expression for the time between a king's accession to the throne and the beginning of his first official (calendar) year as king. Jehoiakim's first regnal year was 608 B.C.

26:18 Micah of Moresheth: the prophet Micah, who appears among the canonical minor prophets (cf. Mi 1:1).

26:24 Ahikam, son of Shaphan: one of Josiah's officials (Kgs 22:12) and Jeremiah's friend. He was the father of Gedaliah, who was governor of Judah after Zedekiah's deportation (cf. Jer 39:14; 40:5–7).

27:1–29:32 A special collection of Jeremiah's prophecies dealing with false prophets. Stylistic peculiarities evident in the Hebrew suggest that these three chapters once existed as independent work.

27:1 Zedekiah: The Hebrew text actually has "Jehoiakim," but the content of the chapter indicates that Zedekiah is intended.

27:3 The time is the fourth year of Zedekiah, 594 B.C., the occasion of a delegation from the neighboring states, doubtless for the purpose of laying plans against Nebuchadnezzar.

27:9 Your prophets: seers and diviners served non-Israelite kings just as the professional prophets served the kings of Judah.

29:3 Elasah: probably the brother of Ahikam (cf. 26:24). Gemariah: probably the son of the high priest Hilkiah; cf. 2 Kgs 22:4. Zedekiah had dispatched these men to Nebuchadnezzar for some other purpose, possibly the payment of tribute, but Jeremiah took advantage of their mission to send his letter with them.

29:26–29 Jeremiah's message to Shemaiah is not completely preserved in the current Hebrew text, hence the incomplete sentence in vv. 25–28.

30:1–31:40 These two chapters contain salvation oracles that originally expressed the double expectation that the Lord would return the exiled survivors of the Northern Kingdom of Israel and reunite Israel and Judah as one kingdom under a just Davidic king. They were probably composed early in Josiah's reign (the reference of v. 9), when he took advantage of Assyria's internal disintegration and asserted control over northern Israel (cf. 2 Kgs 23:15–17). With the destruction of Jerusalem, the oracles were re-worked to include Judah and their fulfillment along with the renewal of the Davidic dynasty became associated with the eschatological "day of the Lord."

30:9 David, their king: a descendant of David ("his leader" in v. 21) who, like his ancestor, would rule a unified kingdom and "walk in the ways of the Lord," as the Deuteronomistic historians claimed David did. Other prophets also refer to this idealized ruler as "David"; cf. Ez 34:23–24; 37:24–25; Hos 3:5.

30:21 His leader: cf. v. 9. Approach me: i.e., in the sanctuary of the Temple for worship. This new David is given a priestly function to perform on behalf of the assembly. To approach God on one's own brings death; cf. Lv 16:1–2.

31:2–3 Jeremiah describes the exiles of the Northern Kingdom on their way home from the nations where the Assyrians had resettled them (722/721 B.C.). The favor they discover in the wilderness is the appearance of the Lord (v. 3) coming to guide them to Jerusalem. Implicit in these verses is the presentation of the people's return from captivity as a second exodus, a unifying theme in Second Isaiah (chaps. 40–55).

31:15 Ramah: a village about five miles north of Jerusalem, where one tradition locates Rachel's tomb (1 Sm 10:2). The wife of Jacob/Israel, Rachel is the matriarchal ancestor of Ephraim, chief among the northern tribes. She personified Israel as a mother whose grief for her lost children is especially poignant because she had to wait a long time to bear them. Mt 2:18 applies this verse to Herod's slaughter of the innocents.

31:19 Struck my thigh: a gesture signifying grief and dread (cf. Ez 21:17).

31:22 No satisfactory explanation has been given for this text. Jerome, for example, saw the image as a reference to the infant Jesus enclosed in Mary's womb. Since Jeremiah often uses marital imagery in his description of a restored Israel, the phrase may refer to a wedding custom, perhaps women circling the groom in a dance. It may also be a metaphor describing the security of a new

Israel, a security so complete that it defies the imagination and must be expressed as hyperbolic role reversal: any danger will be so insignificant that women can protect their men.

31:26 I awoke . . . satisfying: an intrusive comment.

31:29 “The parents . . . on edge”: Jeremiah’s opponents use this proverb to complain that they are being punished for sins of their ancestors. Jeremiah, however, insists that the Lord knows the depth of their wickedness and holds them accountable for their actions.

31:31–34 The new covenant is an occasional prophetic theme, beginning with Hosea. According to Jeremiah, (a) it lasts forever; (b) its law (torah) is written in human hearts; (c) it gives everyone true knowledge of God, making additional instruction (torah) unnecessary. The Dead Sea Scroll community claimed they were partners in a “new covenant.” The New Testament presents the death and resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth as inaugurating a new covenant open to anyone who professes faith in Jesus the Christ. Cf. Lk 22:20; 1 Cor 11:25; Heb 8:8–12. Know the LORD: cf. note on 22:15–16.

31:38–40 The landmarks in these verses outline the borders of Jerusalem during the time of Nehemiah: the Tower of Hananel (Neh 3:1; 12:39) in the northeast and the Corner Gate (2 Kgs 14:13) in the northwest; Goah in the southeast and Gareb Hill in the southwest; the Valley of Ben-hinnom (“the Valley of corpses and ashes”), which met the Wadi Kidron in the southeast, and the Horse Gate in the eastern wall at the southeast corner of the Temple area.

32:1–44 This chapter recounts a prophecy “in action.” At the Lord’s command, Jeremiah fulfills his family duty to purchase the land of his cousin, carrying out all the legal details, even putting the deed away for safekeeping against the day he will have to produce it to verify his ownership of the land. The Lord defines the meaning of this symbolic action: In the future, Judah will be restored and daily life will return to normal.

32:1 The tenth year of Zedekiah: 588 B.C. The eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar: dating his reign from his victory at Carchemish; see note on 25:1–14.

32:6–9 Jeremiah’s imprisonment by the weak-willed Zedekiah was a technical custody that did not deprive him of all freedom of action.

32:7 The first right of purchase: the obligation of the closest relative to redeem the property of a family member in economic distress so that the ancestral land remains within the family (Lv 25:25–28); see note on Ru 2:20.

32:11 The sealed copy . . . and the open copy: the legal deed of sale was written on a scroll, which was then rolled up and sealed; a second scroll containing a copy of the legal deed was then rolled around it and left unsealed so the contents of the legal deed would be accessible without destroying the original seal.

32:14 In an earthenware jar: to protect the scroll from drying out and disintegrating. Some of the Dead Sea Scrolls were found in such jars.

32:35 Molech: a god to whom human sacrifice was offered in the Valley of Ben-hinnom. Here, as in 19:5, he is called “Baal”; see note on Lv 18:21.

33:14–26 This is the longest continuous passage in the Hebrew text of Jeremiah that is missing from the Greek text of Jeremiah. It is probably the work of a postexilic writer who applied parts of Jeremiah’s prophecies to new situations. The hope for an eternal Davidic dynasty (vv. 14–17; cf. 2 Sm 7:11–16) and for a perpetual priesthood and sacrificial system (v. 18) was not realized after the exile. On the canonical authority of the Septuagint, see note on Dn 13:1–14:42.

34:7 Lachish, and Azekah: fortress towns southwest of Jerusalem which Nebuchadnezzar besieged to prevent any help coming to Jerusalem from Egypt. At Lachish, archaeologists found several letters written on ostraca (pottery fragments) dated to 598 or 588 B.C., which mention both Lachish and Azekah.

34:8–22 During the siege of Jerusalem, its citizens made a covenant at Zedekiah’s instigation to free Judahites they held in servitude, thus providing additional defenders for the city, leaving slave owners with fewer mouths to feed, and making reparation for past violations of the law, which dictated that Hebrew slaves should serve no longer than six years (Dt 15:12–15). But when the siege was temporarily lifted, when the assistance promised by Pharaoh Hophra arrived (cf. Jer 37:5), the inhabitants of Jerusalem broke the covenant and once more pressed their fellow citizens into slavery (v. 11).

34:18–19 Both the Old Testament (Gn 15:10–17) and the eighth century B.C. Sefire inscription indicate that sometimes contracting parties ratified an agreement by walking between dismembered animals, invoking upon themselves the animals' fate if they failed to keep their word. The covenant: that mentioned in vv. 10, 15.

35:1 In the days of Jehoiakim: probably in 599 or 598 B.C. (cf. 2 Kgs 24:1–2).

35:2 House: both members of the family of Rechab (cf. v. 3) and the place where they live; cf. note on v. 11. The Rechabites: traditionalists who rejected the settled agricultural and urban cultures to which other Israelites had assimilated, maintaining their loyalty to the Lord by perpetuating the semi-nomadic life of their distant ancestors (cf. 2 Kgs 10:15–17). Jeremiah contrasts their adherence to their vows with the Judahites' disregard for divine commands.

35:4 The sons of Hanan: probably disciples of Hanan. Man of God: occurring only here in Jeremiah, the title frequently is applied to prophets: e.g., Samuel (1 Sm 9:6–10), Elijah (2 Kgs 1:9–13), Elisha (2 Kgs 4–13). Whatever the function of the sons of Hanan, they encourage Jeremiah by lending him their room. Maaseiah: perhaps the father of the priest Zephaniah (29:25; 37:3). Guard at the entrance: an important priestly responsibility (cf. 52:24).

35:6 Jonadab: another spelling of Jehonadab, a contemporary of King Jehu; cf. 2 Kgs 10:15–17.

35:11 The army of the Arameans: Nebuchadnezzar enlisted the help of Judah's neighbors in his assault on Jerusalem. Living in Jerusalem: the current military threat and the prospect of being killed or captured as plunder drove the Rechabites into the city and away from their tents.

36:5 I am barred: Jeremiah could have been forbidden to enter the Temple for any number of reasons: e.g., his inflammatory preaching (the Temple sermon, 7:1–15; the broken pot); the hostility of Temple guards; the restrictions of arrest.

36:10 Gemariah: member of a family friendly to Jeremiah with rights to a room in the gateway fortress overlooking the court of the Temple. His father Shaphan had been Josiah's secretary of state (2 Kgs 22:3). From a window in this room Baruch read Jeremiah's scroll to the people.

36:12 The scribe's chamber: the office of the royal secretary.

36:23 A scribe's knife: used to sharpen reed pens.

36:30 Jehoiakim's son Jehoiachin was named king, but reigned only three months; he was better known for his long exile in Babylon. His corpse shall be thrown out: just as Jehoiakim had thrown pieces of the scroll into the fire (cf. 22:19).

37:4 Put into prison: as described in 32:1–3. Chronologically, the present episode follows 34:1–7.

37:5 Pharaoh's army: the force sent by Pharaoh Hophra; when they arrived, the Chaldeans temporarily lifted the siege against Jerusalem (cf. 34:21).

38:1 Jeremiah enjoyed sufficient liberty in the court of the guard (37:21) to speak to the people; cf. 32:6–9. Gedaliah, son of Pashhur: the latter is possibly the Pashhur of 20:1. Pashhur, son of Malchiah: mentioned in 21:1.

38:4 He is weakening the resolve: lit., "he weakens the hands." One of the Lachish ostraca (cf. note on 34:7) makes the same claim against the princes in Jerusalem.

39:1 In the ninth year . . . in the tenth month: the month Tebet (mid-December to mid-January) of the year 589/588 B.C., according to the Babylonian calendar, whose New Year began in March/April.

39:2 In the eleventh year . . . the ninth day of the fourth month: in July, 587 B.C.

39:3 The Babylonian officers act as a military tribunal or government, headed by Nergal-sharezer, Nebuchadnezzar's son and successor.

39:4 By way of the king's garden: along the southeast side of the city; the royal garden was in the Kidron Valley. A gate between the two walls: the southernmost city gate, at the end of the Tyropoeon Valley. The Arabah: the southern Jordan Valley. Zedekiah was perhaps trying to escape across the Jordan when he was captured near Jericho.

39:5 Riblah: Nebuchadnezzar's headquarters north of Damascus; Pharaoh Neco had once used the town as a military post (2 Kgs 23:33).

40:1 The word: this "word" does not actually appear until 42:7.

40:6 While Jerusalem had suffered a great deal of damage, the Babylonian leaders' selection of Mizpah as their local headquarters was probably as much a symbolic statement as it was a utilitarian move: Jerusalem and its political and religious worldview had given way to disorder and no longer existed as a symbol of order.

40:14 In an attempt, perhaps, to weaken Babylon's hold on the area and to add Judah to the Ammonite kingdom, Baalis supported Ishmael's claim to the throne of David (cf. 41:1 for Ishmael's genealogy).

41:10 The princesses: the women of Judah's royal house.

41:12 Gibeon: modern El-Jib; northwest of Jerusalem. A huge pit carved into limestone provided water in time of siege, here called the great pool, lit., "many waters"; cf. 2 Sm 2:12–14.

44:2–30 Chronologically, these are the last of Jeremiah's words to his people. As the narrative ends, Jeremiah meets with rejection. According to tradition, recorded in a much later work, he was murdered in Egypt by fellow Judahites.

44:30 Hophra: killed by his own people. Hophra's successor, Amasis, ruled Egypt when Nebuchadnezzar took control of the country.

45:1–5 At the conclusion of his narrative, Baruch appends a message Jeremiah had given him when he first wrote down Jeremiah's words (cf. 36:4). The future revealed by the prophet overwhelmed Baruch; now he learns his own safety is assured, even though the Lord will destroy Judah.

46:1–51:64 A collection of oracles against foreign nations constitutes the final section of the Hebrew text of Jeremiah; in the Greek text they follow 25:13. The oracles here appear to be arranged in loose chronological order: 46:2 mentions the fourth year of Jehoiakim; the oracles in 50:1–51:64 are evidently from the end of Jeremiah's life.

46:2 Carchemish on the Euphrates: the western terminus of the Mesopotamian trade route, where Nebuchadnezzar defeated Pharaoh Neco in 605 B.C., thus gaining undisputed control of Syria and Palestine.

46:13 In 601 B.C. Nebuchadnezzar advanced into Egypt itself, but finally had to withdraw to Syria.

46:15 Apis: the chief god of Memphis; the black bull honored as an incarnation of the god Ptah and, later, of the god Osiris.

46:17 "Braggart-missed-his-chance": the Hebrew phrase may contain a pun on the Pharaoh's name or royal title.

46:18 Tabor . . . Carmel: mountains in Palestine that seem to tower over their surroundings as Nebuchadnezzar towers over the nations in his path as he makes his way toward Egypt.

46:25 Amon: the sun-god worshiped at Thebes in Upper Egypt.

47:2–7 Nebuchadnezzar's military campaign against Ashkelon in 604 B.C. may provide some historical background for this poem.

47:4 Tyre and Sidon: Phoenician seaports allied commercially with the Philistines and often rebelling against Nebuchadnezzar; cf. 27:1–4. After the capture of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar carried out a partially successful thirteen-year siege of Tyre. Caphtor: Crete and other Aegean islands, points of origin for the Philistines and other sea peoples; cf. Am 9:7.

47:5 Baldness . . . gash yourself: close-cropped hair, silence, and ritual slashing of the body express mourning and grief and here represent the mourner's awareness that chaos has overcome order (cf. 41:5).

48:1–47 Moab, located east of the Dead Sea, was one of Israel's bitter enemies (cf., e.g., Is 15–16; Am 2:1–3). According to Flavius Josephus, Nebuchadnezzar conquered Moab and Ammon in his twenty-third year (582 B.C.), five years after the destruction of Jerusalem. This chapter is full of local place names in Moab.

48:2 Madmen: a place name, not mentioned elsewhere in the Old Testament.

48:7 Chemosh: chief god of Moab (cf. Nm 21:29).

48:11–12 Moabite wine was known for its high quality. Here the wine is a metaphor for Moab's complacency.

48:18 Dibon, the capital of Moab at that time, is situated on a height. The prophet here offers a personification of the city, pictured as a confident ruler.

49:1 Milcom: chief god of the Ammonites (cf. 1 Kgs 11:5). The Ammonites shared a border with Gad, an Israelite tribe in Transjordan (Jos 13:8–10); the Ammonites occupied its territory after the collapse of the Northern Kingdom.

49:7–22 Edom: southeast of the Dead Sea, a traditional enemy who profited from Judah's downfall; cf. Ps 137:7; Lam 4:21–22; Ob 11–12.

49:7 Teman, a district of Edom (cf. Jb 2:11), represents the whole country, which was famous for the wisdom of its sages.

49:8 Esau: Jacob's brother, the traditional ancestor of the Edomites; cf. Gn 36:1.

49:13 Bozrah: capital of Edom.

49:23 Hamath and Arpad: independent Aramean states north of Damascus, the direction from which the invasion is coming. Cf. Is 10:9–10.

49:27 Ben-hadad: a dynastic name for some of the kings who ruled in Damascus; cf. 1 Kgs 15:18, 20.

49:34 Elam: an ancient kingdom east of Babylonia.

50:1–51:58 A collection of miscellaneous oracles against Babylon introducing the story in 51:59–64.

50:2 Bel: originally the title of the god of Nippur in Mesopotamia, later associated with Merodach (Marduk), chief god of Babylon (cf. Is 46:1).

50:15 Its walls are torn down: the prophet describes the downfall of Babylon in conventional language. Babylon surrendered peacefully to the Persians in 539 B.C.

50:21 Merathaim Pekod: "twice bitter," "punishment," symbolic terms for Babylon that recall the names of regions in the country.

51:1 The destroyer wind is the fierce dry wind from the east (cf. 4:11).

51:11 Kings of the Medes: the Medes and the Persians lived in the area known today as Iran.

51:27 Ararat, Minni, and Ashkenaz: regions in eastern Asia Minor under the control of the Medes.

51:59 Seraiah: the brother of Baruch; cf. 32:12. He may have gone to Babylon to explain away the presence of foreign ambassadors in Jerusalem that same year; cf. 27:3.

51:60 Jeremiah prophesied against Babylon, even as he foretold Judah's release from Babylon's power (3:14–18; 32:15; 33:6–9, 12–13); but his scroll against Babylon was thrown in the Euphrates (v. 63). Some of the preceding oracles may have been composed by later writers; see note on 50:1–51:58.

52:1–34 One of the editors of the Book of Jeremiah took most of this supplement from 2 Kgs 24:18–25:30 and placed it here to show the fulfillment of Jeremiah's prophecies. The supplement repeats part of the history given in Jeremiah 39–41, but omits the history of Gedaliah in 2 Kgs 25:22–26.

52:4 In the tenth month of the ninth year of his reign, on the tenth day of the month: January 15, 588 B.C. Cf. 39:1.

52:12 On the tenth day of the fifth month . . . nineteenth year: the tenth of Ab—July/August in 587/586 B.C.

52:28–30 These verses, missing in the Greek text, do not come from 2 Kgs 25 but from a source using a different chronology. Besides the deportations of 598 and 587 B.C., this passage mentions a final deportation in 582/581, possibly a response to the murder of Gedaliah; cf. Jer 41:2.

52:31–34 In the year 561/560 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar's successor Awel-Marduk (Evil-merodach), who reigned only two years, released Jehoiachin. Babylonian records confirm that Jehoiachin and his family were supported at public expense.

52:32 The other kings: heads of state brought as captives to Babylon.

The Book of Lamentations

1 2 3 4 5

See RG 354–58

The Book of Lamentations is a collection of five poems that serve as an anguished response to the destruction of Jerusalem in 587B.C., after a long siege by the invading Babylonian army. (See 2Kgs 25 for a prose account of the fall of Jerusalem.) Although the poems are traditionally ascribed to the prophet Jeremiah, this is unlikely. The Hebrew text of the book does not mention Jeremiah at all, and it is difficult to square some of the content of the poetry with what one finds in the Book of Jeremiah itself (cf. Lam 1:10; 2:9;; 4:17, 20). While there are connections in theme and vocabulary among all five chapters (and especially between chaps. 1 and 2), the poems may have been composed separately and grouped together later. In any case, they are anonymous compositions probably used by survivors of the catastrophe of 587B.C. in a communal expression of grief and mourning.

Jewish liturgical tradition considers the book one of the “scrolls” (megillot); it is read once a year on the ninth of Av (August–September), a fast day commemorating the destruction of both the first Temple in 587B.C. and the second Temple in A.D. 70. While passages from chap. 3 are often incorporated into Christian services for Holy Thursday or Good Friday, the Church has otherwise tended to neglect the book. It is not hard to see why; a more anguished piece of writing is scarcely imaginable: from its portrayal of Jerusalem in chaps. 1 and 2 as an abandoned widow exposed to endless dangers, to the broken man of chap. 3, to the bleak description in chap. 4 of the inhabitants of the devastated city, to the final unanswered communal lament of chap. 5, the reader is not so much engaged by the Book of Lamentations as assaulted by it. But with its unsparing focus on destruction, pain, and suffering the book serves an invaluable function as part of Scripture, witnessing to a biblical faith determined to express honestly the harsh realities of a violent world and providing contemporary readers the language to do the same.

As a literary work, the Book of Lamentations combines elements of communal and individual laments (in which the speakers attempt to persuade God to intervene in the face of an acute crisis), funeral dirges (in which a death is mourned), and ancient Near Eastern city-laments (in which the destruction of a city is mourned). The meter is called Qinah (lament), that is, each verse normally has three beats followed by two. The poems are acrostics: in chaps. 1–4, the separate stanzas begin with successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet from the first to the last. The last chapter, while not strictly an acrostic, nevertheless partially conforms to the pattern in its use of 22 lines, the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet. Far from destroying the spontaneous pathos of the songs, this feature conveys the expression of a profound grief that might otherwise seem to be without limit (cf. 2:13).

The book may be divided as follows:

- I. The Desolation of Jerusalem (1:1–22).
  - II. The Lord's Wrath and Zion's Ruin (2:1–22).
  - III. The Voice of a Suffering Individual (3:1–66).
  - IV. Miseries of the Besieged City (4:1–22).
  - V. The Community's Lament to the Lord (5:1–22).

See RG 356

The Desolation of Jerusalem *

<sup>1</sup>How solitary sits the city,
    once filled with people.
She who was great among the nations
    is now like a widow.
Once a princess among the provinces,
    now a toiling slave.

<sup>2</sup>She weeps incessantly in the night,
    her cheeks damp with tears.
She has no one to comfort her from all her lovers; *
Her friends have all betrayed her,
    and become her enemies.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Judah has gone into exile,
    after oppression and harsh labor;
She dwells among the nations,
    yet finds no rest.<sup>b</sup>
All her pursuers overtake her in the narrow straits.

<sup>4</sup>The roads to Zion mourn,
    empty of pilgrims to her feasts.
All her gateways are desolate,
    her priests groan,
Her young women grieve;
    her lot is bitter.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Her foes have come out on top,
    her enemies are secure;
Because the LORD has afflicted her for her many rebellions.
Her children have gone away,
    captive before the foe.

<sup>6</sup>From daughter Zion has gone
    all her glory:

Her princes have become like rams that find no pasture.
They have gone off exhausted
before their pursuers.

<sup>7</sup>Jerusalem remembers
in days of wretched homelessness,
All the precious things she once had in days gone by.
But when her people fell into the hands
of the foe,
and she had no help,
Her foes looked on and laughed
at her collapse.

<sup>8</sup>Jerusalem has sinned grievously,
therefore she has become a mockery;
Those who honored her now demean
her,
for they saw her nakedness;
She herself groans out loud,
and turns away.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Her uncleanness is on her skirt;
she has no thought of her future.
Her downfall is astonishing,
with no one to comfort her.
“Look, O LORD, at my misery;
how the enemy triumphs!”*

<sup>10</sup>The foe stretched out his hands
to all her precious things;
She has seen the nations
enter her sanctuary,
Those you forbade to come into your assembly.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>11</sup>All her people groan,
searching for bread;
They give their precious things for food,
to retain the breath of life.
“Look, O LORD, and pay attention to how I have been demeaned!

<sup>12</sup>Come, all who pass by the way,
pay attention and see:
Is there any pain like my pain,
which has been ruthlessly inflicted
upon me,
With which the LORD has tormented me
on the day of his blazing wrath?

<sup>13</sup>From on high he hurled fire down into my very bones;
He spread out a net for my feet,
and turned me back.
He has left me desolate,
in misery all day long.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>14</sup>The yoke of my rebellions is bound
together,
fastened by his hand.
His yoke is upon my neck;
he has made my strength fail.
The Lord has delivered me into the grip
of those I cannot resist.

<sup>15</sup>All my valiant warriors
my Lord has cast away;
He proclaimed a feast against me
to crush my young men;
My Lord has trodden in the wine press
virgin daughter Judah.

<sup>16</sup>For these things I weep—My eyes! My
eyes!
They stream with tears!
How far from me is anyone to comfort,
anyone to restore my life.
My children are desolate;
the enemy has prevailed.”<sup>g</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Zion stretches out her hands,
with no one to comfort her;
The LORD has ordered against Jacob
his foes all around;
Jerusalem has become in their midst
a thing unclean.

18“The LORD is in the right;
I had defied his command.
Listen, all you peoples,
and see my pain:
My young women and young men have gone into captivity.”<sup>h</sup>

19I cried out to my lovers, but they failed me.”<sup>i</sup>
My priests and my elders
perished in the city;
How desperately they searched for food,
to save their lives!

20Look, O LORD, at the anguish I suffer!
My stomach churns,
And my heart recoils within me:
How bitter I am!
Outside the sword bereaves—
indoors, there is death.”<sup>j</sup>

21Hear how I am groaning;
there is no one to comfort me.
All my enemies hear of my misery and
rejoice
over what you have done.
Bring on the day you proclaimed,
and let them become like me!

22Let all their evil come before you and deal with them
As you have so ruthlessly dealt with me
for all my rebellions.
My groans are many,
my heart is sick.”<sup>k</sup>

CHAPTER 2

See RG 356–57

The Lord's Wrath and Zion's Ruin *

<sup>1</sup>How the Lord in his wrath
    has abhorred daughter Zion, Casting down from heaven to earth
    the glory of Israel, *
Not remembering his footstool
    on the day of his wrath!

<sup>2</sup>The Lord has devoured without pity
    all of Jacob's dwellings;
In his fury he has razed
    daughter Judah's defenses,
Has brought to the ground in dishonor
    a kingdom and its princes.

<sup>3</sup>In blazing wrath, he cut down entirely
    the horn * of Israel;
He withdrew the support of his right
    hand
    when the enemy approached;
He burned against Jacob like a blazing
    fire
    that consumes everything in its path.

<sup>4</sup>He bent his bow like an enemy;
    the arrow in his right hand
Like a foe, he killed
    all those held precious;
On the tent of daughter Zion
    he poured out his wrath like fire.

<sup>5</sup>The Lord has become the enemy,
    he has devoured Israel:
Devoured all its strongholds,
    destroyed its defenses,
Multiplied moaning and groaning throughout daughter Judah.

<sup>6</sup>He laid waste his booth like a garden, destroyed his shrine;*

The LORD has blotted out in Zion
feast day and sabbath,
Has scorned in fierce wrath
king and priest.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>7</sup>The Lord has rejected his altar,
spurned his sanctuary;
He has handed over to the enemy
the walls of its strongholds.
They shout in the house of the LORD
as on a feast day.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>8</sup>The LORD was bent on destroying the wall of daughter Zion:
He stretched out the measuring line;*
did not hesitate to devour, Brought grief on rampart and wall till both succumbed.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Her gates sank into the ground;
he smashed her bars to bits.
Her king and her princes are among the
nations;
instruction is wanting,
Even her prophets do not obtain any vision from the LORD.<sup>o</sup>

Acrostic Poems in Hebrew

AN ACROSTIC POEM is one in which the initial letters of each line of poetry follow some sort of pattern. In the Hebrew Bible, all of the acrostic poems are alphabetical acrostics: that is, the first letters of each line (or each group of lines) form the Hebrew alphabet of twenty-two letters.

The following passages in the Bible are acrostics: Psalms 9–10, 25, 34, 37, 111, 112, 119, 145; Proverbs 31:10–31; each chapter in Lamentations except chapter 5, which nevertheless has twenty-two lines; Nahum 1:2–8 (or perhaps 2–10; the acrostic is incomplete). The Hebrew text of Sirach 51:13–30 is also an acrostic. Psalms 34, 37, 112, 119, Proverbs 31, and Sirach 51 are all examples of wisdom literature, and if these texts were used in schools, the acrostic feature may have been an aid to memorization.

Although this kind of pattern in a poem may seem strange to us, we can compare it to the use of rhyme in English poetry. Rhyme is a pattern involving similar sounds at the ends of lines; it is therefore like an acrostic in combining a pattern of sound and meaning. We can admire the artistry involved in such a combination, and perhaps that will give us insight into the enjoyment that acrostic poems may have provided to their original audiences.

In the case of Lamentations, where chapters 1–4 are acrostics, and chapter 5 continues the pattern with its twenty-two lines, there may be a deeper meaning. By expressing grief in a pattern that completes the alphabet, the poet may be expressing two things: the completeness of grief—covering it “from A to Z,” as we might say—and also its end. The poetical form helps the poet to channel and contain grief, as mourning rituals can do in other social settings.

sit silently on the ground;
They cast dust* on their heads
and dress in sackcloth;
The young women of Jerusalem
bow their heads to the ground.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>11</sup>My eyes are spent with tears, my stomach churns;*
My bile is poured out on the ground
at the brokenness of the daughter of my people,
As children and infants collapse
in the streets of the town.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>12</sup>They cry out to their mothers,
“Where is bread and wine?”
As they faint away like the wounded
in the streets of the city,
As their life is poured out
in their mothers’ arms.

13 To what can I compare you *—to what can I liken you—
O daughter Jerusalem?
What example can I give in order to comfort you,
virgin daughter Zion?
For your breach is vast as the sea;
who could heal you? <sup>r</sup>

14 Your prophets provided you visions of whitewashed illusion;
They did not lay bare your guilt,
in order to restore your fortunes;
They saw for you only oracles
of empty deceit. <sup>s</sup>

15 All who pass by on the road,
clap their hands at you;
They hiss and wag their heads
over daughter Jerusalem:
“Is this the city they used to call perfect in beauty and joy of all the earth?” <sup>t</sup>

16 They open their mouths against you,
all your enemies;
They hiss and gnash their teeth,
saying, “We have devoured her!
How we have waited for this day—
we have lived to see it!” <sup>u</sup>

17 The LORD has done what he planned.
He has fulfilled the threat Decreed from days of old,
destroying without pity!
He let the enemy gloat over you and exalted the horn of your foes. <sup>v</sup>

18 Cry out to the Lord from your heart, wall of daughter Zion!
Let your tears flow like a torrent
day and night;

Give yourself no rest,
no relief for your eyes.

<sup>19</sup>Rise up! Wail in the night, at the start of every watch;
Pour out your heart like water
before the Lord;
Lift up your hands to him
for the lives of your children,
Who collapse from hunger
at the corner of every street.*

<sup>20</sup>“Look, O LORD, and pay attention:
to whom have you been so ruthless?
Must women eat their own offspring,*
the very children they have borne?
Are priest and prophet to be slain
in the sanctuary of the LORD?”<sup>w</sup>

<sup>21</sup>They lie on the ground in the streets,
young and old alike;
Both my young women and young men
are cut down by the sword;
You killed them on the day of your
wrath,
slaughtered without pity.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>22</sup>You summoned as to a feast day
terrors on every side;
On the day of the LORD’s wrath,
none survived or escaped.
Those I have borne and nurtured,
my enemy has utterly destroyed.”<sup>y</sup>

*The Voice of a Suffering Individual**

- <sup>1</sup>I am one who has known affliction
under the rod of God's anger,<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>One whom he has driven and forced to walk
in darkness, not in light;
- <sup>3</sup>Against me alone he turns his hand—
again and again all day long.
- <sup>4</sup>He has worn away my flesh and my skin,
he has broken my bones;<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>He has besieged me all around with poverty and hardship;
- <sup>6</sup>He has left me to dwell in dark places like those long dead.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>He has hemmed me in with no escape, weighed me down with chains;
- <sup>8</sup>Even when I cry for help,
he stops my prayer;<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>9</sup>He has hemmed in my ways with fitted
stones,
and made my paths crooked.
- <sup>10</sup>He has been a bear lying in wait for me,
a lion in hiding!<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>He turned me aside and tore me apart,
leaving me ravaged.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>He bent his bow, and set me up as a target for his arrow.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>He pierced my kidneys
with shafts from his quiver.<sup>g</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>I have become a laughingstock to all my

people,
their taunt all day long,<sup>h</sup> 15 He has sated me with bitterness, filled me with wormwood.<sup>i</sup> 16 He has made me eat gravel,
trampled me into the dust;
17 My life is deprived of peace,
I have forgotten what happiness is;
18 My enduring hope, I said,
has perished before the LORD.
19 The thought of my wretched homelessness
is wormwood and poison;
20 Remembering it over and over,
my soul is downcast.
21 But this I will call to mind;*
therefore I will hope:
22 The LORD's acts of mercy are not
exhausted,
his compassion is not spent;<sup>j</sup> 23 They are renewed each morning—
great is your faithfulness!
24 The LORD is my portion, I tell myself, therefore I will hope in him.<sup>k</sup> 25 The LORD is good to those who trust in
him,
to the one that seeks him;<sup>l</sup> 26 It is good to hope in silence
for the LORD's deliverance.
27 It is good for a person, when young,
to bear the yoke,
28 To sit alone and in silence,
when its weight lies heavy,
29 To put one's mouth in the dust—*
there may yet be hope—30 To offer one's cheek to be struck, to be filled with disgrace.<sup>m</sup>

- 31 For the Lord does not reject forever;<sup>n</sup>
- 32 Though he brings grief, he takes pity,
according to the abundance of his mercy;<sup>o</sup>
- 33 He does not willingly afflict
or bring grief to human beings.<sup>p</sup>
- 34 That someone tramples underfoot
all the prisoners in the land,
- 35 Or denies justice to anyone in the very sight of the Most High,
- 36 Or subverts a person's lawsuit—
does the Lord not see?
- 37 Who speaks so that it comes to pass,
unless the Lord commands it?
- 38 Is it not at the word of the Most High that both good and bad take place?<sup>q</sup>
- 39 What should the living complain about?
about their sins!
- 40* Let us search and examine our ways,
and return to the LORD!<sup>r</sup>
- 41 Let us lift up our hearts as well as our
hands
toward God in heaven!
- 42 We have rebelled and been obstinate;
you have not forgiven us.
- 43 You wrapped yourself in wrath and pursued us,
killing without pity;<sup>s</sup>
- 44 You wrapped yourself in a cloud,
which no prayer could pierce.
- 45 You have made us filth and rubbish
among the peoples.<sup>t</sup>
- 46 They have opened their mouths against us,
all our enemies;

47Panic and the pit have been our lot, desolation and destruction;<sup>u</sup>

48* My eyes stream with tears over the destruction
of the daughter of my people.<sup>v</sup>

49My eyes will flow without ceasing,
without rest,

50Until the LORD from heaven
looks down and sees.

51I am tormented by the sight of all the daughters of my city.

52Without cause, my enemies snared me
as though I were a bird;

53They tried to end my life in the pit,
pelting me with stones.

54The waters flowed over my head:
and I said, "I am lost!"<sup>w</sup>

55I have called upon your name, O LORD,<sup>x</sup>
from the bottom of the pit;

56You heard me call, "Do not let your ear be deaf
to my cry for help."

57You drew near on the day I called you;
you said, "Do not fear!"

58You pleaded my case, Lord,
you redeemed my life.

59You see, LORD, how I am wronged;
do me justice!<sup>y</sup>

60You see all their vindictiveness,
all their plots against me.

61You hear their reproach, LORD,
all their plots against me,

62The whispered murmurings of my adversaries,
against me all day long;

63Look! Whether they sit or stand,

I am the butt of their taunt.

<sup>64</sup>Give them what they deserve, LORD,
according to their deeds;

<sup>65</sup>Give them hardness of heart;
your curse be upon them;<sup>z</sup>

<sup>66</sup>Pursue them in wrath and destroy them from under the LORD's heaven!

Miseries of the Besieged City *

- <sup>1</sup>How the gold has lost its luster,
the noble metal changed;
Jewels * lie scattered
at the corner of every street.
- <sup>2</sup>And Zion's precious children,
worth their weight in gold—
How they are treated like clay jugs,
the work of any potter!<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>Even jackals offer their breasts
to nurse their young;
But the daughter of my people is as cruel
as the ostrich * in the wilderness.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>4</sup>The tongue of the infant cleaves
to the roof of its mouth in thirst;
Children beg for bread,
but no one gives them a piece.
- <sup>5</sup>Those who feasted on delicacies
are abandoned in the streets;
Those who reclined on crimson * now embrace dung heaps.<sup>c</sup>
- <sup>6</sup>The punishment of the daughter of my
people
surpassed the penalty of Sodom,
Which was overthrown in an instant with no hand laid on it.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>Her princes were brighter than snow,
whiter than milk,
Their bodies more ruddy than coral,
their beauty like the sapphire.
- <sup>8</sup>Now their appearance is blacker than soot,

they go unrecognized in the streets;
Their skin has shrunk on their bones,
and become dry as wood.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Better for those pierced by the sword
than for those pierced by hunger, Better for those who bleed from wounds
than for those who lack food.

<sup>10</sup>The hands of compassionate women have boiled their own children!
They became their food
when the daughter of my people was shattered.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>11</sup>The Lord has exhausted his anger,
poured out his blazing wrath;
He has kindled a fire in Zion
that has consumed her foundations.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>12</sup>The kings of the earth did not believe,
nor any of the world's inhabitants,
That foe or enemy could enter
the gates of Jerusalem.

<sup>13</sup>Except for the sins of her prophets and the crimes of her priests,
Who poured out in her midst
the blood of the just.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>14</sup>They staggered blindly in the streets,
defiled with blood,
So that people could not touch
even their garments.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>15</sup>“Go away! Unclean!” they cried to them, “Away, away, do not touch!”
If they went away and wandered,
it would be said among the nations,
“They can no longer live here!”

<sup>16</sup>The presence of the LORD was their portion,
but he no longer looks upon them.
The priests are shown no regard,

the elders, no mercy.

<sup>17</sup>Even now our eyes are worn out,
searching in vain for help;
From our watchtower we have watched for a nation* unable to save.

<sup>18</sup>They dogged our every step,
we could not walk in our squares;
Our end drew near, our time was up;
yes, our end had come.

<sup>19</sup>Our pursuers were swifter
than eagles in the sky,
In the mountains they were hot on our trail,
they ambushed us in the wilderness.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>20</sup>The LORD's anointed—our very lifebreath!—*
was caught in their snares,
He in whose shade we thought to live among the nations.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Rejoice and gloat, daughter Edom, dwelling in the land of Uz,*
The cup will pass to you as well;
you shall become drunk and strip yourself naked!<sup>l</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Your punishment is completed, daughter
Zion,
the Lord will not prolong your exile;
The Lord will punish your iniquity,
daughter Edom,
will lay bare your sins.<sup>m</sup>

The Community's Lament to the Lord

- <sup>1</sup>Remember, LORD, what has happened to us,
pay attention, and see our disgrace:
- <sup>2</sup>Our heritage is turned over to strangers,
our homes, to foreigners.<sup>n</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>We have become orphans, without fathers;
our mothers are like widows.
- <sup>4</sup>We pay money to drink our own water,
our own wood comes at a price.
- <sup>5</sup>With a yoke on our necks, we are driven;
we are worn out, but allowed no rest.
- <sup>6</sup>We extended a hand to Egypt and Assyria, to satisfy our need of bread.*
- <sup>7</sup>Our ancestors, who sinned, are no more;
but now we bear their guilt.
- <sup>8</sup>Servants* rule over us,
with no one to tear us from their
hands.
- <sup>9</sup>We risk our lives just to get bread,
exposed to the desert heat;<sup>o</sup>
- <sup>10</sup>Our skin heats up like an oven,
from the searing blasts of famine.<sup>p</sup>
- <sup>11</sup>Women are raped in Zion,
young women in the cities of Judah;<sup>q</sup>
- <sup>12</sup>Princes have been hanged by them,
elders shown no respect.<sup>r</sup>
- <sup>13</sup>Young men carry millstones,
boys stagger under loads of wood;
- <sup>14</sup>The elders have abandoned the gate,*
the young men their music.

<sup>15</sup>The joy of our hearts has ceased, dancing has turned into mourning;<sup>s</sup> <sup>16</sup>The crown has fallen from our head:
     woe to us that we sinned!
<sup>17</sup>Because of this our hearts grow sick,
     at this our eyes grow dim:

<sup>18</sup>Because of Mount Zion, lying desolate,
     and the jackals roaming there!
<sup>19</sup>But you, LORD, are enthroned forever;
     your throne stands from age to age.<sup>t</sup> <sup>20*</sup>Why have you utterly forgotten us, forsaken us for so long?<sup>u</sup> <sup>21</sup>Bring us back to you, LORD, that we may
     return:
     renew our days as of old.<sup>v</sup> <sup>22</sup>For now you have indeed rejected us and utterly turned your wrath against us.<sup>w</sup>

1:1–22 In this poem the poet first takes on the persona of an observer describing Jerusalem’s abject state after the destruction wrought by the Babylonian army (vv. 1–11a); but the detached tone gives way to a more impassioned appeal when the city itself—personified as the grieving widow and mother Zion—abruptly intrudes upon this description (vv. 9c, 11c–16, 18–22) to demand that God look squarely at her misery.

1:2 Lovers: language of love was typically used to describe the relationship between treaty partners, thus here it connotes Judah’s allies (see v. 19).

1:9 Zion breaks in on the poet’s description in v. 9c, albeit briefly, to demand that the Lord face squarely her misery. She takes up the lament in a more sustained fashion in v. 11c.

2:1–22 This chapter continues to move between the voice of the poet (vv. 1–20) and that of personified Zion (vv. 20–22). The persona of the poet, first portrayed in chap. 1 as a detached observer recounting both the desolation as well as the sins of the city, becomes in this chapter an advocate for Zion in her appeal to the Lord and never once mentions her sins.

2:1 The glory of Israel: the Temple. His footstool: the ark of the covenant (1 Chr 28:2; Ps 99:5; 132:7); or again, the Temple (Ez 43:7).

2:3 Horn: a symbol of power and strength; cf. v. 17; 1 Sm 2:1, 10; Ps 89:18, 25; 92:11; 112:9.

2:6 Booth . . . shrine: synonyms for the Temple; cf. Ps 27:5; 74:4, 8. The term for “shrine” in Hebrew (mo‘ed) figures prominently in the pentateuchal expression “tent of meeting” (’ohel mo‘ed).

2:8 The measuring line: normally used for building, here employed ironically as an instrument of destruction; cf. Is 34:11; 2 Kgs 21:13.

2:10 They cast dust: as a sign of mourning; cf. Jos 7:6; Jb 2:12; Ez 27:30.

2:11 My eyes are spent with tears, my stomach churns: the poet appropriates the emotional language used by Zion in 1:16 and 1:20 to express a progressively stronger commitment to her cause. After describing the systematic dismantling of the city in vv. 5–9, the poet turns to the plight of the inhabitants in vv. 10–12. It is the description of children dying in the streets that finally brings about the poet’s emotional breakdown, even as it did for Zion in 1:16.

2:13 To what can I compare you . . . ?: the author calls attention to the poetic task: to find language that speaks adequately of the atrocities and incomparable suffering experienced by Zion, and thus to attempt to offer comfort.

2:19 The poet urges Zion to appeal to the Lord once more on behalf of her dying children. The image of Zion’s children effectively condenses the metaphorical sense of all residents of the city (young and old alike) into the more poignant picture of actual children at the point of death. It was precisely this image, no doubt well known to survivors of besieged cities, that led to the emotional breakdown of both Zion (1:16) and the poet (2:11). The hope is that the Lord will be similarly affected by such a poignant image and respond with mercy.

2:20 Must women eat their own offspring: extreme famine in a besieged city sometimes led to cannibalism; this becomes a stereotypical way of expressing the nearly unthinkable horrors of war; cf. Lam 4:10; Dt 28:53; 2 Kgs 6:28–29; Bar 2:3; Ez 5:10.

3:1–66 This chapter is focused less on the destruction of Jerusalem than are chaps. 1 and 2 and more on the suffering of an individual. The identity of the individual is never given, and one probably should not search for a specific identification of the speaker. The figure of the representative sufferer makes concrete the pain of the people in a way similar to the personification of Zion as a woman in chaps. 1 and 2. Indeed, in vv. 40–48 the individual voice gives way to a communal voice, returning in vv. 49–66 to the individual sufferer.

3:21–24 In the midst of a description of suffering, the speaker offers this brief but compelling statement of hope in God’s ultimate mercy. It is a hard-won and precarious hope, nearly submerged by the volume and intensity of the surrounding lament, but it is hope nonetheless.

3:29 To put one’s mouth in the dust: a sign of humiliation and submission; cf. v. 16; Ps 72:9.

3:40–66 The plural voice in this lament suggests that a communal lament begins here; it then continues in the singular voice in vv. 55–66.

3:48–51 These verses are more appropriate on the lips of the poet, who speaks of “my city” (v. 51). Daughters of my city: here as elsewhere “daughter” may refer to villages dependent on a larger city.

4:1–22 This chapter returns to the focus of chaps. 1 and 2, namely the horrors of a siege. Unlike chaps. 1 and 2, however, the character of personified Zion never interrupts the voice of the poet to protest her abject state. As a result, the emotion of the poem is less intense, while at the same time seeming more grim on account of its lack of petition to the Lord.

4:1–2 Jewels: lit., “holy stones.” These precious things designate the children who are abandoned, starving, and killed in the siege of Jerusalem (cf. Zec 9:16). Another explanation is that these are the stones of the destroyed Temple.

4:3 Cruel as the ostrich: see note on Jb 39:14–16. Jerusalem, in her distress, has abandoned her children.

4:5 Crimson: a sign of luxury. Tyrian purple, a red-purple or blue-purple dye produced from shellfish, was very expensive and the only colorfast dye in the ancient Near East. Thus purple or crimson cloth was available only to the wealthy.

4:17 A nation: probably Egypt, which failed to give effective aid against Babylon.

4:20 Our very lifebreath: lit., “the breath of our nostrils,” that is, the king. This expression occurs in Egyptian texts of the late second millennium B.C., and may have survived as a royal epithet in the Jerusalem court. After the disaster of 598 B.C. (2 Kgs 24:1–17), Jerusalem could have hoped to live in peace amidst her neighbors; but they (vv. 21–22) as well as Babylon turned against her to ensure her total devastation in 587 B.C.

4:21 Rejoice: the address is sarcastic, since Edom (where Uz may have been located) ravaged the land after the fall of Jerusalem (cf. Ps 137).

5:6 Extended a hand: that is, made an alliance. In its state of abjection, Judah was forced to depend on the major powers to the west and the east for subsistence.

5:8 Servants: the Hebrew word for “servant” is also the word used for an official of relatively high status (servant of the ruler; cf. 2 Kgs 25:24, where the term is used to refer to Babylonian rulers over occupied Jerusalem); the author doubtless intends the double meaning here.

5:14 The gate: a place of assembly, where city decisions were made and judgment given by the elders and other community leaders; see note on Ru 4:1.

5:20–22 Unlike most of the laments found in the Book of Psalms, the Book of Lamentations never moves from lament to thanksgiving. It ends with this question still unanswered by God: “Why have you utterly forgotten us?”

The Book of Baruch

1 2 3 4 5 6

See RG 358–63

The opening verses ascribe the book to the wellknown assistant to Jeremiah (Jer 32:12; 36:4, 32; 45:1). It is a collection of four very different compositions, ending with a work entitled “The Letter of Jeremiah,” which circulated separately in major manuscripts of the Greek tradition. The original language may have been Hebrew, but only the Greek and other versions have been preserved. The fictional setting is Babylon, where Baruch reads his scroll to King Jechoniah (Jehoiachin) and the exiles; they react by sending gifts and the scroll to Jerusalem (1:1–14), presumably by the hand of Baruch (1:7). No certain date can be given for the book, but it may have been edited in final form during the last two centuries B.C. The work attempts to explain the trauma of the exile in terms of a Deuteronomic cycle: sin (of Israel), punishment, repentance, and return (cf. Jgs 2; also Dt 28–33).

The prayer of the exiles (2:11–3:8) is a confession of sin and a request for mercy, and has remarkable similarities to Dn 9 and to parts of Jeremiah. The poem on personified Wisdom is concerned with three themes: the importance of Wisdom, the elusive character of Wisdom (cf. Jb 28), and the identification of Wisdom with Torah (cf. Sir 24:23). Baruch’s Poem of Consolation resembles parts of Is 40–66, and it offers encouragement to the exiles in view of their eventual return; there are two addresses by personified Zion. The Letter of Jeremiah, unlike the letter in Jer 29, is a polemic against idolatry, a well-known theme (cf. Jer 10:2–11; Ps 115:4–8; 135:15–18; Is 44:9–20; Wis 13:10–15:17). It contains ten warnings that end in a kind of refrain that the idols are not gods and are not to be feared (vv. 14, 22, 28, 39, 44, 51, 56, 64, 68).

The book can be divided thus:

- I. Letter to Jerusalem (1:1–3:8)
    - A. Historical Setting (1:1–9)
    - B. Confession of Guilt (1:10–2:10)
    - C. Prayer for Deliverance (2:11–3:8)
  - II. Praise of Wisdom (3:9–4:4)
    - A. Importance of Wisdom (3:9–23)
    - B. Inaccessibility of Wisdom (3:24–36)
    - C. Wisdom Contained in the Law (3:37–4:4)
  - III. Baruch's Poem of Consolation (4:5–5:9)
    - A. Baruch Addresses Diaspora (4:5–9a)
    - B. Jerusalem Addresses Neighbors (4:9b–16)
    - C. Jerusalem Addresses Diaspora (4:17–29)
    - D. Baruch Addresses Jerusalem (4:30–5:9)
  - IV. Letter of Jeremiah (6:1–72)

I. Letter to Jerusalem

CHAPTER 1

See RG 361–62

A. Historical Setting

B. Confession of Guilt

<sup>10</sup>The message was: “We send you funds, with which you are to procure burnt offerings, sin offerings, and frankincense, and to prepare grain offerings; offer these* on the altar of the LORD our God,<sup>g</sup> <sup>11</sup>and pray for the life of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and of Belshazzar, his son,* that their lifetimes may be as the days of the heavens above the earth.<sup>h</sup> <sup>12</sup>Pray that the LORD may give us strength, and light to our eyes, that we may live under the protective shadow of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and of Belshazzar, his son, to serve them many days, and find favor in their sight. <sup>13</sup>Pray for us to the LORD, our God, for we have sinned against the LORD, our God. Even to this day the wrath of the LORD and his anger have not turned away from us. <sup>14</sup>On the feast day and during the days of assembly, read aloud in the house of the LORD this scroll that we send you:<sup>i</sup>

<sup>15*</sup> “To the Lord our God belongs justice; to us, people of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem, to be shamefaced, as on this day—<sup>j</sup> <sup>16</sup>to us, our kings, rulers, priests, and prophets, and our ancestors. <sup>17</sup>We have sinned in the LORD’s sight <sup>18</sup>and disobeyed him. We have not listened to the voice of the LORD, our God, so as to follow the precepts the LORD set before us. <sup>19</sup>From the day the LORD led our ancestors out of the land of Egypt until the present day, we have been disobedient to the LORD, our God, and neglected to listen to his voice. <sup>20</sup>Even today evils cling to us, the curse the LORD pronounced to Moses, his servant, at the time he led our ancestors out of the land of Egypt to give us a land flowing with milk and honey.<sup>k</sup> <sup>21</sup>For we did not listen to the voice of the LORD, our God, in all the words of the prophets he sent us, <sup>22</sup>but each of us has followed the inclinations of our wicked hearts, served other gods, and done evil in the sight of the LORD, our God.

CHAPTER 2

See RG 361–62

<sup>1</sup>“So the Lord carried out the warning he had uttered against us: against our judges, who governed Israel, against our kings and princes, and against the people of Israel and Judah. <sup>2</sup>Nowhere under heaven has anything been done like what he did in Jerusalem, as was written in the law of Moses: * <sup>l</sup> <sup>3</sup>that we would each eat * the flesh of our sons, each the flesh of our daughters. <sup>4</sup>He has made us subject to all the kingdoms around us, an object of reproach and horror among all the peoples around us, where the LORD has scattered us. <sup>m</sup> <sup>5</sup>We are brought low, not raised high, <sup>n</sup> because we sinned against the Lord, our God, not listening to his voice.

<sup>6</sup>“To the LORD, our God, belongs justice; to us and to our ancestors, to be shamefaced, as on this day. <sup>o</sup> <sup>7</sup>All the evils of which the LORD had warned us have come upon us. <sup>8</sup>We did not entreat the favor of the LORD by turning, each one, from the designs of our evil hearts. <sup>9</sup>The LORD kept watch over the evils, and brought them home to us; for the LORD is just in all the works he commanded us to do, <sup>p</sup> <sup>10</sup>but we did not listen to his voice, or follow the precepts of the LORD which he had set before us.

C. Prayer for Deliverance

<sup>11</sup>* “And now, LORD, God of Israel, who led your people out of the land of Egypt with a strong hand, with signs and wonders and great might, and with an upraised arm, so that you have made for yourself a name to the present day: <sup>q</sup> <sup>12</sup>we have sinned, we have committed sacrilege, we have violated all your statutes, LORD, our God. <sup>r</sup> <sup>13</sup>Withdraw your anger from us, for we are left few in number among the nations where you have scattered us. <sup>14</sup>Hear, LORD, our prayer of supplication, and deliver us for your own sake: grant us favor in the sight of those who brought us into exile, <sup>15</sup>that the whole earth may know that you are the LORD, our God, and that Israel * and his descendants bear your name. <sup>s</sup> <sup>16</sup>LORD, look down from your holy dwelling and take thought of us; LORD, incline your ear to hear us. <sup>t</sup> <sup>17</sup>Open your eyes and see: it is not the dead in Hades, * whose breath has been taken from within them, who will declare the glory and vindication to the LORD. <sup>u</sup> <sup>18</sup>The person who is deeply grieved, who walks bowed and feeble, with failing eyes and famished soul, will declare your glory and justice, LORD!<sup>v</sup>

<sup>19</sup>“Not on the just deeds of our ancestors and our kings do we base our plea for mercy in your sight, LORD, our God. <sup>20</sup>You have sent your wrath and anger upon us, as you had warned us through your servants the prophets: <sup>21</sup>Thus says the LORD: Bend your necks and serve the king of Babylon, that you may continue in the land I gave your ancestors; <sup>w</sup> <sup>22*</sup> for if you do not listen to the LORD’s voice so as to serve the king of Babylon, <sup>23</sup>I will silence from the cities of Judah and from the streets of Jerusalem the cry of joy and the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; and all the land shall be deserted, without inhabitants. <sup>x</sup> <sup>24</sup>But we did not listen to your voice, or serve the king of Babylon, and you carried out the threats you had made through your servants the prophets, that the bones of our kings and the bones of our ancestors would be brought out from their burial places.<sup>y</sup> <sup>25</sup>And indeed, they lie exposed* to the heat of day and the frost of night. They died in great suffering, by famine and sword and plague.<sup>z</sup> <sup>26</sup>And you reduced the house which bears your name* to what it is today, because of the wickedness of the house of Israel and the house of Judah.<sup>a</sup>

God’s Promises Recalled. <sup>27</sup>“But with us, Lord, our God, you have dealt in all your clemency and in all your great mercy. <sup>28*</sup> Thus you spoke through your servant Moses, the day you ordered him to write down your law in the presence of the Israelites: <sup>29</sup>‘If you do not listen to my voice, surely this great and numerous throng will dwindle away among the nations to which I will scatter them.<sup>b</sup> <sup>30</sup>For I know they will not listen to me, because they are a stiff-necked people. But in the land of their exile they shall have a change of heart;<sup>c</sup> <sup>31</sup>they shall know that I, the LORD, am their God. I will give them a heart and ears that listen;<sup>d</sup> <sup>32</sup>and they shall praise me in the land of their exile, and shall remember my name.<sup>e</sup> <sup>33</sup>Then they shall turn back from their stiff-necked stubbornness, and from their evil deeds, because they shall remember the ways of their ancestors, who sinned against the LORD.<sup>f</sup> <sup>34</sup>And I will bring them back to the land I promised on oath to their ancestors, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and they shall rule it. I will make them increase; they shall not be few. <sup>35</sup>And I will establish for them an eternal covenant: I will be their God, and they shall be my people; and I will never again remove my people Israel from the land I gave them.’<sup>9</sup>

CHAPTER 3

See RG 361–62

II. Praise of Wisdom*

A. Importance of Wisdom

<sup>9</sup>Hear, Israel, the commandments of life:

listen, and know prudence!<sup>k</sup>

<sup>10</sup>How is it, Israel,
that you are in the land of your foes,
grown old in a foreign land,

<sup>11</sup>Defiled with the dead, counted among those destined for Hades?<sup>l</sup>

<sup>12</sup>You have forsaken the fountain of wisdom!<sup>m</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Had you walked in the way of God,
you would have dwelt in enduring peace.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Learn where prudence is,
     where strength, where understanding;
 That you may know also
     where are length of days, and life,
     where light of the eyes, and peace.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Who has found the place of wisdom?<sup>p</sup>
     Who has entered into her treasures?

<sup>16</sup>Where are the rulers of the nations, who lorded it over the wild beasts of the earth,<sup>q</sup>

<sup>17</sup>made sport of the birds in the heavens,
 Who heaped up the silver,
     the gold in which people trust,
     whose possessions were unlimited,

<sup>18</sup>Who schemed anxiously for money,
     their doings beyond discovery?

<sup>19</sup>They have vanished, gone down to Hades,
     and others have risen up in their stead.

<sup>20</sup>Later generations have seen the light of
     day,
     have dwelt on the earth,
 But the way to understanding they have not known,

<sup>21</sup>they have not perceived her paths or reached her;
     their children remain far from the way
     to her.

<sup>22</sup>She has not been heard of in Canaan,* nor seen in Teman.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>23</sup>The descendants of Hagar who seek knowledge on earth,
     the merchants of Medan and Tema,<sup>s</sup>
     the storytellers and those seeking
     knowledge—
 These have not known the way to
     wisdom,
     nor have they kept her paths in mind.

B. Inaccessibility of Wisdom

24 O Israel, how vast is the dwelling of God,*
     how broad the scope of his dominion:
 25 Vast and endless,
     high and immeasurable!
 26 In it were born the giants,* renowned at the first,
     huge in stature, skilled in war.<sup>t</sup> 27 These God did not choose, nor did he give them the way of understanding;<sup>u</sup> 28 They perished for lack of prudence, perished through their own folly.<sup>v</sup>

 29 Who has gone up to the heavens and taken her,
 bringing her down from the clouds?<sup>w</sup> 30 Who has crossed the sea and found her, bearing her away rather than choice
     gold?
 31 None knows the way to her,
     nor has at heart her path.
 32 But the one who knows all things knows
     her;
     he has probed her by his knowledge—
 The one who established the earth for all
     time,
     and filled it with four-footed animals, 33 Who sends out the lightning, and it goes,
     calls it, and trembling it obeys him; 34 Before whom the stars at their posts shine and rejoice.
 35 When he calls them, they answer, “Here
     we are!”
     shining with joy for their Maker.<sup>x</sup> 36 Such is our God;
     no other is to be compared to him:

C. Wisdom Contained in the Law

37* He has uncovered the whole way of
understanding,
and has given her to Jacob, his
servant,
to Israel, his beloved.<sup>y</sup>

38 Thus she has appeared on earth, is at home with mortals.<sup>z</sup>

CHAPTER 4

See RG 361–62

- <sup>1*</sup> She is the book of the precepts of God,
    the law that endures forever;
All who cling to her will live,
    but those will die who forsake her.<sup>a</sup>
- <sup>2</sup> Turn, O Jacob, and receive her:
    walk by her light toward splendor.<sup>b</sup>
- <sup>3</sup> Do not give your glory to another,
    your privileges to an alien nation.
- <sup>4</sup> Blessed are we, O Israel;
    for what pleases God is known to us!<sup>c</sup>

III. Baruch's Poem of Consolation*

A. Baruch Addresses Diaspora

- <sup>5</sup> Take courage, my people!
    Remember, O Israel,
- <sup>6</sup> You were sold to the nations
    not for destruction;
It was because you angered God that you were handed over to your foes.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>7</sup> For you provoked your Maker<sup>e</sup>
    with sacrifices to demons and not to
    God;
- <sup>8</sup> You forgot the eternal God who nourished you,
    and you grieved Jerusalem who nurtured you.
- <sup>9</sup> She indeed saw coming upon you
    the wrath of God; and she said:

B. Jerusalem Addresses Neighbors

“Hear, you neighbors of Zion!
 God has brought great mourning
 upon me,
<sup>10</sup>For I have seen the captivity that the Eternal One has brought upon my sons and daughters.
<sup>11</sup>With joy I nurtured them;
 but with mourning and lament I sent
 them away.
<sup>12</sup>Let no one gloat over me,
 a widow, bereft of many;
 For the sins of my children I am left
 desolate,
 because they turned from the law of God,<sup>f</sup>
<sup>13</sup>and did not acknowledge his statutes;
 In the ways of God’s commandments
 they did not walk,
 nor did they tread the disciplined paths
 of his justice.
<sup>14</sup>“Let Zion’s neighbors come—Remember the captivity of my sons and daughters,
 brought upon them by the Eternal One.
<sup>15</sup>He has brought against them a nation
 from afar,
 a nation ruthless and of alien speech,
 That has neither reverence for old age
 nor pity for the child;<sup>g</sup> <sup>16</sup>They have led away this widow’s beloved sons,
 have left me solitary, without daughters.

C. Jerusalem Addresses Diaspora

<sup>17</sup>What can I do to help you?
<sup>18</sup>The one who has brought this evil
 upon you
 must himself deliver you from your enemies’ hands.<sup>h</sup> <sup>19</sup>Farewell, my children, farewell;

I am left desolate.

<sup>20</sup>I have taken off the garment of peace, have put on sackcloth for my prayer of supplication;
while I live I will cry out to the Eternal
One.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>21</sup>“Take courage, my children; call upon
God;
he will deliver you from oppression,
from enemy hands.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>22</sup>I have put my hope for your deliverance
in the Eternal One,
and joy has come to me from the Holy
One

Because of the mercy that will swiftly reach you from your eternal Savior.

<sup>23</sup>With mourning and lament I sent you
away,
but God will give you back to me
with gladness and joy forever.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>24</sup>As Zion’s neighbors lately saw you taken captive,
so shall they soon see God’s salvation
come to you,
with great glory and the splendor of the Eternal One.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>25</sup>“My children, bear patiently the wrath<sup>m</sup>
that has come upon you from God;
Your enemies have persecuted you,
but you will soon see their destruction and trample upon their necks.*

<sup>26</sup>My pampered children have trodden rough roads,
carried off by their enemies like sheep
in a raid.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>27</sup>Take courage, my children; call out to God!
The one who brought this upon you will remember you.<sup>o</sup>

- 28 As your hearts have been disposed to stray from God,
so turn now ten times the more to seek
him;
- 29 For the one who has brought disaster
upon you
will, in saving you, bring you eternal joy.”<sup>p</sup>

D. Baruch Addresses Jerusalem

- 30 Take courage, Jerusalem!
The one who gave you your name will console you.”<sup>q</sup>
- 31 Wretched shall be those who harmed
you,
who rejoiced at your downfall;
- 32 Wretched shall be the cities where your children were enslaved,
wretched the city that received your children.”<sup>r</sup>
- 33 As that city rejoiced at your collapse,<sup>s</sup>
and made merry at your downfall,
so shall she grieve over her own
desolation.
- 34 I will take from her the rejoicing crowds,
and her exultation shall be turned to
mourning:
- 35 For fire shall come upon her”<sup>t</sup>
from the Eternal One, for many a day, to be inhabited by demons for a long time.”*
- 36 Look to the east, Jerusalem;
see the joy that comes to you from God!”<sup>u</sup>
- 37 Here come your children whom you sent
away,
gathered in from east to west
By the word of the Holy One, rejoicing in the glory of God.

CHAPTER 5

See RG 361–62

- <sup>1</sup>Jerusalem, take off your robe of mourning and misery;
put on forever the splendor of glory
from God:<sup>v</sup>
- <sup>2</sup>Wrapped in the mantle of justice from
God,
place on your head the diadem
of the glory of the Eternal One.<sup>w</sup>
- <sup>3</sup>For God will show your splendor to all
under the heavens;
- <sup>4</sup>you will be named by God forever:
the peace of justice, the glory of God's worship.<sup>x</sup>
- <sup>5</sup>Rise up, Jerusalem! stand upon the
heights;
look to the east and see your children Gathered from east to west
at the word of the Holy One, rejoicing that they are remembered by
God.
- <sup>6</sup>Led away on foot by their enemies they left you:
but God will bring them back to you carried high in glory as on royal thrones.<sup>y</sup>
- <sup>7</sup>For God has commanded that every lofty mountain
and the age-old hills be made low,
That the valleys be filled to make level
ground,
that Israel may advance securely in the glory of God.<sup>z</sup>
- <sup>8</sup>The forests and every kind of fragrant
tree
have overshadowed Israel at God's command;<sup>a</sup>

<sup>9</sup>For God is leading Israel in joy
by the light of his glory,
with the mercy and justice that are his.

IV. Letter of Jeremiah

CHAPTER 6

See RG 363

<sup>1</sup>A copy of the letter which Jeremiah sent to those led captive to Babylon by the king of the Babylonians, to tell them what God had commanded him:<sup>b</sup>

For the sins you committed before God, you are being led captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Babylonians. <sup>2</sup>When you reach Babylon you will be there many years, a long time—seven generations;* after that I will bring you back from there in peace. <sup>3</sup>And now in Babylon you will see gods of silver and gold and wood, carried shoulder high, to cast fear upon the nations.<sup>c</sup> <sup>4*</sup> Take care that you yourselves do not become like these foreigners and let not such fear possess you. <sup>5</sup>When you see the crowd before them and behind worshiping them, say in your hearts, “You, Lord, are the one to be worshiped!”<sup>d</sup> <sup>6</sup>For my angel* is with you, and he will keep watch on you.<sup>e</sup>

crawling creatures from the ground consume them and their garments, they do not feel it. <sup>20</sup>Their faces become sooty from the smoke in the temple. <sup>21</sup>Bats and swallows alight on their bodies and heads—any bird, and cats as well. <sup>22</sup>Know, therefore, that they are not gods; do not fear them.

<sup>23</sup>Gold adorns them, but unless someone wipes away the corrosion, they do not shine; they felt nothing when they were molded. <sup>24</sup>They are bought at whatever price, but there is no spirit in them. <sup>25</sup>Since they have no feet, they are carried shoulder high, displaying to all how worthless they are; even those who worship them are put to shame<sup>h</sup> <sup>26</sup>because, if they fall to the ground, the worshipers must pick them up. They neither move of themselves if one sets them upright, nor come upright if they are tipped over; offerings are set out for them as for the dead.<sup>i</sup> <sup>27*</sup>Their priests sell their sacrifices for their own advantage. Likewise their wives cure some of the meat, but they do not share it with the poor and the weak;<sup>j</sup> <sup>28</sup>women ritually unclean or at childbirth handle their sacrifices. From such things, know that they are not gods; do not fear them.

<sup>40</sup>Even the Chaldeans themselves have no respect for them; for when they see a deaf mute, unable to speak, they bring forward Bel* and expect him to make a sound, as though he could hear. <sup>41</sup>They themselves are unable to reflect and abandon these gods, for they have no sense. <sup>42*</sup> And the women, with cords around them, sit by the roads, burning chaff for incense;<sup>n 43</sup> and whenever one of them is taken aside by some passerby who lies with her, she mocks her neighbor who has not been thought thus worthy, and has not had her cord broken. <sup>44</sup>All that is done for these gods is a fraud; how then can it be thought or claimed that they are gods?

<sup>52*</sup> They set no king over the land, nor do they give rain. <sup>53</sup>They neither vindicate their own rights, nor do they rescue anyone wronged, for they are powerless. <sup>54</sup>They are like crows in midair. For when fire breaks out in the temple of these wooden or gilded or silvered gods, though the priests flee and are safe, they themselves are burned up in the fire like timbers. <sup>55</sup>They cannot resist a king or enemy forces. <sup>56</sup>How then can it be admitted or thought that they are gods?

They are safe from neither thieves nor bandits, these wooden and silvered and gilded gods. <sup>57</sup>Anyone who can will strip off the gold and the silver, and go away with the clothing that was on them; they cannot help themselves. <sup>58</sup>How much better to be a king displaying his valor, or a handy tool in a house, the joy of its owner, than these false gods; better the door of a house, protecting whatever is within, than these false gods; better a wooden post in a palace, than these false gods!<sup>o 59*</sup> The sun and moon and stars are bright, obedient in the task for which they are sent. <sup>60</sup>Likewise the lightning, when it flashes, is a great sight; and the one wind blows over every land. <sup>61</sup>The clouds, too, when commanded by God to proceed across the whole world, fulfill the command; <sup>62</sup>and fire, sent from on high to burn up the mountains and the forests, carries out its command. But these false gods are not their equal, whether in appearance or in power. <sup>63</sup>So it is unthinkable, and cannot be claimed that they are gods. They can neither execute judgment, nor benefit anyone. <sup>64</sup>Know, therefore, that they are not gods; do not fear them.

1:2 In the fifth year, on the seventh day of the month: Jerusalem fell on the seventh day of the fifth month in 587 B.C.; cf. 2 Kgs 25:8; Jer 52:12. Either the text read originally “the fifth month,” or it refers to the observance of an anniversary of the fall of Jerusalem.

1:4 The river Sud: probably one of the Babylonian canals, not otherwise identified; or possibly a misreading of Ahava; cf. Ezr 8:21, 31.

1:8–9 He: apparently Baruch; less likely Jehoiakim the priest (v. 7). The silver vessels here described are distinct from the vessels referred to in 2 Kgs 25:14 and Ezr 1:7–9. The author of this note may have thought of the fifth year (v. 1) of Zedekiah, in view of Jer 28:1; 29:1–3. A “fifth year,” again with no month mentioned, is given in Ez 1:2 for the inaugural vision of Ezekiel’s prophetic career.

1:10 Offer these: since 2:26 suggests that the Temple is destroyed, the mention of sacrifices here may be an anachronism. Nevertheless, Jer 41:5 indicates that some people continued to worship at the Temple site after Nebuchadnezzar’s destruction of the Temple.

1:11 Nebuchadnezzar . . . Belshazzar, his son: Belshazzar was the son of Nabonidus, the last king of Babylon, not of Nebuchadnezzar, the destroyer of Jerusalem. Belshazzar was co-regent for a few years while his father was away in Arabia. Later Jewish tradition seems to have simplified the end of the Babylonian empire (cf. Dn 5:1–2), for three kings came between Nebuchadnezzar and Nabonidus.

1:15–2:10 This confession of sin is similar to Dn 9:7–14, and echoes ideas from Deuteronomy and Jeremiah; cf. also Neh 9.

2:2 Law of Moses: cf. Dt 28:53–57.

2:3 We would each eat: such dreadful events were the result of the prolonged siege of Jerusalem; cf. Lam 2:20.

2:11–35 An earnest appeal for divine mercy, along with confession of sin; cf. Dn 9:15–19.

2:15 Israel: the Israelites claimed descent from the patriarch Jacob, who had received the name Israel in a mysterious encounter with God (Gn 32:29). Thus the Deity was sometimes referred to as “the God of Israel” (Gn 33:20; Ex 5:1).

2:17 Hades: this is the Greek translation of Hebrew sheol, the nether world.

2:22–24 These words are very similar to Jer 7:34; 27:9, 12.

2:25 They lie exposed: Jeremiah’s words threatened Jehoiakim with being left unburied (Jer 22:19; 36:30).

2:26 The house which bears your name: the Temple of Jerusalem; cf. Dt 12:11; Jer 7:11. What it is today: during the exile it lay in ruins.

2:28–35 These words do not actually quote anything Moses is recorded as having said, but they present the substance of a passage such as Dt 30:1–10, which envisions exile, repentance, and restoration.

3:9–4:4 This poem in praise of personified Wisdom utilizes the theme of Jb 28 (where is wisdom to be found?) and it identifies wisdom and law, as in Sir 24:22–23.

3:22–23 Despite the renown for wisdom of the peoples of Canaan and Phoenicia (Ez 28:3–4), of Teman (Jer 49:7), of the descendants of Hagar or the Arabians of Medan and Tema, they did not possess true wisdom, which is found only in the law of God (Bar 4:1).

3:24 The dwelling of God: here, the whole universe; cf. Is 66:1.

3:26 The giants: Gn 6:1–4 reflects a tradition about giants who existed before the flood; this was developed in the non-canonical Book of Enoch.

3:37–38 As in Sir 24:8, Wisdom is given to Israel but also is said to live with all human beings (Prv 8:31).

4:1–4 The poem ends with the identification of Wisdom and Torah, as in Sir 24:22–23; cf. also Dt 4:5–8.

4:5–5:9 The poet addresses the exiles (vv. 5–9a), and then Zion personified is introduced, speaking to the nations and mourning the loss of her children (vv. 9b–16). She then addresses the exiles (vv. 17–29). Finally (4:30–5:9) the poet issues three calls to Jerusalem (4:30, 36; 5:5): she will see her children returning (4:22, 36–37; 5:5).

4:25 Trample upon their necks: a sign of victory over the enemy (cf. Ps 44:6; Is 14:25). The Israelites considered their enemies to be God’s enemies as well.

4:35 Deserts and desolate places were looked upon as the habitation of demons; cf. Tb 8:3; Lk 11:24.

6:2 Seven generations: this number may be symbolic. If it is not, it may indicate the date of this composition by an author writing for his contemporaries for whom the conditions of the exile were still realities. He has multiplied the seventy years of Jer 29:10 by three or four.

6:4–72 This whole chapter is a sustained argument against the temptation to worship Babylonian gods. A pattern is repeated throughout the chapter: various reasons are set forth to prove that the idols in the Babylonian temples are not gods (e.g., they are weak, helpless, attended by unworthy ministers); each section is followed by an exhortation not to be deceived, not to worship them. Note the refrain at vv. 14, 22, 28, 39, 44, 51, 56, 64. Israelite religion was aniconic, i.e., it prohibited images; as elsewhere in the Old Testament (e.g., Is 42:17; 44:9–20), the polemic against idols here oversimplifies by identifying the god worshiped with the image that represents it.

6:6 My angel: the prophet assures the people that God’s watchful care is with them, just as he was with their ancestors during their journey to the promised land (Ex 23:20).

6:10 Harlots: cult prostitutes, common in some religions of the ancient Near East.

6:27–31 From the viewpoint of Jewish ritual law, the practices named here were grotesque and depraved; cf. Lv 12:2–8; 15:19–23.

6:33–39 All that the Babylonian gods cannot do, the true God does; they have neither power nor inclination to save those in need, unlike the God of Israel, who champions the cause of the weak over the strong, and who defends the widow and the orphan. Cf. 1 Sm 2:7; Ps 68:6; 146:7–9; Is 35:4–5.

6:40 Bel: cf. note on Jer 50:2.

6:42–43 Perhaps a reference to the Babylonian practice of cultic prostitution mentioned by Herodotus, the fifth-century Greek historian. The unbroken cord was a sign that this service had not yet been rendered.

6:52–53 Unlike the God of Israel, the Babylonian gods are unable to set up and depose kings, or to provide life-giving rain.

6:59–62 The elements of nature, obedient to God's orders and accomplishing the divine purpose, are better than the Babylonian gods.

In response to the rebellion of Jehoiakim of Judah in 601 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar, the Babylonian ruler, besieged Jerusalem. When Jehoiakim's successor, Jehoiachin, surrendered in 597, Nebuchadnezzar appointed Zedekiah king and deported to Babylon Jehoiachin and the royal family, along with members of the upper class, including Ezekiel the priest. Five years later, as Zedekiah planned his own revolt against Babylon, Ezekiel became the first prophet to be commissioned outside Judah or Israel (chaps. 1–3). Before Jerusalem is destroyed (587 B.C.), Ezekiel is concerned to convince his audience that they are responsible for the punishment of exile and to justify the Lord's decision to destroy their city and Temple. Later, Ezekiel argues that the Judahites who embrace his preaching are the people whom the Lord has chosen as a new Israel, enlivened by a new heart, imbued with new breath (chaps. 36–37), and restored to a re-created land, Temple, and covenant relationship (chaps. 40–48). Ezekiel is clear on one point: the Lord punishes and restores for one reason—for the sake of his name, in order to demonstrate once and for all that he is Lord.

Ezekiel's symbolic actions or performances foreshadow the inevitable destruction of Jerusalem (4:1–5:4; 12:1–20; 24:15–24). The closely related judgment oracles are directed against increasingly larger groups: the inhabitants of Jerusalem (5:5–17); refugees who have fled into the mountains (6:1–14); Judah's total population, "the four corners of the land" (7:1–27). Particularly chilling is Ez 8–11, the prophet's vision of the violent injustice and idolatrous worship that fills Jerusalem. When Ezekiel protests

the Lord's order to slaughter Jerusalem's wicked inhabitants, the Lord refuses to relent; the Lord's glory leaves the Temple, affirming his judgment on Jerusalem (11:22–25), whom Ezekiel portrays as a promiscuous woman, rebel from the beginning, more violent and sinful than Sodom (chap. 16). Appeals for a speedy end to the exile on the basis of a past relationship with the Lord or of Jerusalem's privileged status are futile gestures.

Ezekiel uses stereotypic oracles against the nations (chaps. 25–32) to claim universal sovereignty for Israel's God, to exemplify the consequences of arrogant national pride, and to set the stage for Israel's restoration. In order to demonstrate to all the nations that "I am the Lord," God becomes Israel's just shepherd (34:15) under whose rule a restored people (37:1–14) enjoy prosperity in a restored land. God again acts "for the sake of my name" when the mysterious forces of Gog attack Israel (chaps. 38–39). Their defeat is prelude to Ezekiel's vision of a new Israel whose source of life and prosperity is a well-ordered cult in a new Temple, where the divine glory again dwells (chaps. 40–48).

The Book of Ezekiel has the following divisions:

- I. Call of the Prophet (1:1–3:27)
- II. Before the Siege of Jerusalem (4:1–24:27)
- III. Prophecies Against Foreign Nations (25:1–32:32)
- IV. Hope for the Future (33:1–39:29)
- V. The New Israel (40:1–48:35)

I. Call of the Prophet

CHAPTER 1

See RG 368–71

The Vision: God on the Cherubim. <sup>1</sup>In the thirtieth year,* on the fifth day of the fourth month, while I was among the exiles by the river Chebar, the heavens opened, and I saw divine visions.<sup>a</sup>— <sup>2</sup>On the fifth day of the month—this was the fifth year* of King Jehoiachin's exile<sup>b</sup>— <sup>3</sup>the word of the LORD came to the priest Ezekiel, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar. There the hand of the LORD came upon him.<sup>c</sup>

filled the four rims all around. <sup>19</sup>When the living creatures moved, the wheels moved with them; and when the living creatures were raised from the ground, the wheels also were raised. <sup>20</sup>Wherever the spirit would go, they went. And they were raised up together with the living creatures, for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels. <sup>21</sup>Wherever the living creatures moved, the wheels moved; when they stood still, the wheels stood still. When they were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up with them.<sup>o</sup> For the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels.

<sup>26</sup>Above the firmament over their heads was the likeness of a throne that looked like sapphire; and upon this likeness of a throne was seated, up above, a figure that looked like a human being.<sup>* r</sup> <sup>27</sup>And I saw something like polished metal, like the appearance of fire enclosed on all sides, from what looked like the waist up; and from what looked like the waist down, I saw something like the appearance of fire and brilliant light surrounding him.<sup>s</sup> <sup>28</sup>Just like the appearance of the rainbow in the clouds on a rainy day so was the appearance of brilliance that surrounded him. Such was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, I fell on my face and heard a voice speak.<sup>t</sup>

CHAPTER 2

See RG 368–71

Eating of the Scroll. <sup>1</sup>The voice said to me: Son of man,* stand up! I wish to speak to you. <sup>2</sup>As he spoke to me, the spirit* entered into me and set me on my feet, and I heard the one who was speaking<sup>u</sup> <sup>3</sup>say to me: Son of man, I am sending you to the Israelites, a nation of rebels who have rebelled against me; they and their ancestors have been in revolt against me to this very day.<sup>v</sup> <sup>4</sup>Their children are bold of face and stubborn of heart—to them I am sending you. You shall say to them: Thus says the Lord God.<sup>w</sup> <sup>5</sup>And whether they hear or resist—they are a rebellious house—they shall know that a prophet has been among them.<sup>x</sup> <sup>6</sup>But as for you, son of man, do not fear them or their words. Do not fear, even though there are briers or thorns and you sit among scorpions.* Do not be afraid of their words or be terrified by their looks for they are a rebellious house.<sup>y</sup> <sup>7</sup>You must speak my words to them, whether they hear or resist, because they are rebellious.<sup>z</sup> <sup>8</sup>But you, son of man, hear me when I speak to you and do not rebel like this rebellious house. Open your mouth and eat what I am giving you.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>9b</sup> It was then I saw a hand stretched out to me; in it was a written scroll. <sup>10</sup>He unrolled it before me; it was covered with writing front and back. Written on it was: Lamentation, wailing, woe!<sup>c</sup>

CHAPTER 3

See RG 368–71

<sup>1</sup>He said to me: Son of man, eat what you find here: eat this scroll, then go, speak to the house of Israel. <sup>2</sup>So I opened my mouth, and he gave me the scroll to eat. <sup>3d</sup> Son of man, he said to me, feed your stomach and fill your belly with this scroll I am giving you. I ate it, and it was as sweet as honey* in my mouth. <sup>4</sup>Then he said to me, Son of man, go now to the house of Israel, and speak my words to them.

<sup>5</sup>Not to a people with obscure speech and difficult language am I sending you, but to the house of Israel.<sup>e</sup> <sup>6</sup>Nor to many nations of obscure speech and difficult language whose words you cannot understand. For if I were to send you to these, they would listen to you.<sup>f</sup> <sup>7</sup>But the house of Israel will refuse to listen to you, since they refuse to listen to me. For the whole house of Israel is stubborn of brow and hard of heart.<sup>g</sup> <sup>8*</sup> Look! I make your face as hard as theirs, and your brow as stubborn as theirs.<sup>h</sup> <sup>9</sup>Like diamond, harder than flint, I make your brow. Do not be afraid of them, or be terrified by their looks, for they are a rebellious house.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Then he said to me, Son of man, take into your heart all my words that I speak to you; hear them well. <sup>11</sup>Now go to the exiles, to your own people, and speak to them. Say to them, whether they hear or refuse to hear: Thus says the LORD God!

<sup>12</sup>Then the spirit lifted me up, and I heard behind me a loud rumbling noise as the glory of the LORD* rose from its place.<sup>j</sup> <sup>13</sup>the noise of the wings of the living creatures beating against one another, and the noise of the wheels alongside them, a loud rumbling.<sup>k</sup> <sup>14</sup>And the spirit lifted me up and took me away, and I went off, my spirit angry and bitter, for the hand of the LORD pressed hard on me. <sup>15</sup>Thus I came to the exiles who lived at Tel-abib* by the river Chebar; and there where they dwelt, I stayed among them distraught for seven days. <sup>16l</sup> At the end of the seven days, the word of the LORD came to me:

The Prophet as Sentinel.* <sup>17</sup>Son of man, I have appointed you a sentinel for the house of Israel.<sup>m</sup> When you hear a word from my mouth, you shall warn them for me.

<sup>18</sup>If I say to the wicked, You shall surely die—and you do not warn them or speak out to dissuade the wicked from their evil conduct in order to save their lives—then they shall die for their sin, but I will hold you responsible for their blood. <sup>19</sup>If, however, you warn the wicked and they still do not turn from their wickedness and evil conduct, they shall die for their sin, but you shall save your life.

<sup>20</sup>But if the just turn away from their right conduct and do evil when I place a stumbling block before them, then they shall die. Even if you warned them about their sin, they shall still die, and the just deeds that they performed will not be remembered on their behalf. I will, however, hold you responsible for their blood.<sup>n</sup> <sup>21</sup>If, on the other hand, you warn the just to avoid sin, and they do not sin, they will surely live because of the warning, and you in turn shall save your own life.

Ezekiel Mute. <sup>22</sup>The hand of the LORD came upon me there and he said to me: Get up and go out into the plain, where I will speak with you.<sup>o</sup> <sup>23p</sup> So I got up and went out into the plain. There it was! The glory of the LORD was standing there like the glory I had seen by the river Chebar. Then I fell on my face, <sup>24</sup>but the spirit entered into me, set me on my feet; he spoke to me, and said: Go, shut yourself in your house. <sup>25</sup>As for you, son of man, know that they will put ropes on you and bind you with them, so that you cannot go out among them.<sup>q</sup> <sup>26</sup>And I will make your tongue stick to the roof of your mouth so that you will be mute,* no longer one who rebukes them for being a rebellious house.<sup>r</sup> <sup>27</sup>Only when I speak to you and open your mouth, shall you say to them: Thus says the LORD God: Let those who hear, hear! Let those who resist, resist! They are truly a rebellious house.

II. Before the Siege of Jerusalem

CHAPTER 4

See RG 368–71

Acts Symbolic of Siege and Exile.<sup>1*</sup> You, son of man, take a clay tablet; place it in front of you, and draw on it a city, Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>Lay siege to it: build up siege works, raise a ramp against it, pitch camps and set up battering rams all around it. <sup>3</sup>Then take an iron pan and set it up as an iron wall between you and the city. Set your face toward it and put it under siege. So you must lay siege to it as a sign for the house of Israel.<sup>s</sup> <sup>4</sup>Then lie down on your left side, while I place the guilt of the house of Israel upon you. As many days as you lie like this, you shall bear their guilt. <sup>5</sup>I allot you three hundred and ninety days* during which you must bear the guilt of the house of Israel, the same number of years they sinned. <sup>6</sup>When you have completed this, you shall lie down a second time, on your right side to bear the guilt of the house of Judah forty days; I allot you one day for each year.<sup>t</sup> <sup>7</sup>Turning your face toward the siege of Jerusalem, with bared arm* you shall prophesy against it. <sup>8</sup>See, I bind you with ropes so that you cannot turn from one side to the other until you have completed the days of your siege.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>9*</sup> Then take wheat and barley, beans and lentils, millet and spelt; put them into a single pot and make them into bread. Eat it for as many days as you lie upon your side, three hundred and ninety days. <sup>10</sup>The food you eat shall be twenty shekels a day by weight; each day you shall eat it. <sup>11</sup>And the water you drink shall be the sixth of a hin* by measure; each day you shall drink it. <sup>12</sup>And the barley cake you eat you must bake on human excrement in the sight of all. <sup>13</sup>The LORD said: Thus the Israelites shall eat their food, unclean, among the nations where I drive them.<sup>v</sup> <sup>14</sup>“Oh no, Lord GOD,” I protested. “Never have I defiled myself nor have I eaten carrion flesh or flesh torn by wild beasts, nor from my youth till now has any unclean meat entered my mouth.”<sup>w</sup> <sup>15</sup>Very well, he replied, I will let you use cow manure in place of human dung. You can bake your bread on that. <sup>16</sup>Then he said to me: Son of man, I am about to break the staff of bread* in Jerusalem so they shall eat bread which they have weighed out anxiously and drink water which they have measured out fearfully.<sup>x</sup> <sup>17</sup>Because they lack bread and water they shall be devastated; each and every one will waste away because of their guilt.<sup>y</sup>

CHAPTER 5

See RG 368–71

<sup>1</sup>Now you, son of man, take a sharp sword and use it like a barber's razor, to shave your head and your beard. Then take a balance scale for weighing and divide the hair.<sup>z</sup> <sup>2</sup>Set a third on fire within the city,* when the days of your siege are completed; place another third around the city and strike it with the sword; the final third scatter to the wind and then unsheathe the sword after it.<sup>a</sup> <sup>3</sup>But take a few of the hairs and tie them in the hem of your garment. <sup>4</sup>Take some of these and throw them into the fire and burn them in the fire. Because of this, fire will flash out against the whole house of Israel.

<sup>5</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: This is Jerusalem! I placed it in the midst of the nations, surrounded by foreign lands. <sup>6</sup>But it rebelled against my ordinances more wickedly than the nations, and against my statutes more than the foreign lands around it; they rejected my ordinances and did not walk in my statutes.<sup>b</sup> <sup>7</sup>Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD: Because you have caused more uproar than the nations surrounding you, not living by my statutes nor carrying out my judgments, nor even living by the ordinances of the surrounding nations; <sup>8</sup>therefore, thus says the Lord GOD: See, I am coming against you!* I will carry out judgments among you while the nations look on.<sup>c</sup> <sup>9</sup>Because of all your abominations I will do to you what I have never done before, the like of which I will never do again. <sup>10</sup>Therefore, parents will eat their children in your midst, and children will eat their parents.* I will inflict punishments upon you and scatter all who remain to the winds.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Therefore, as I live, says the Lord GOD, because you have defiled my sanctuary with all your atrocities and all your abominations, I will surely withdraw and not look upon you with pity nor spare you.<sup>e</sup> <sup>12</sup>A third of your people shall die of disease or starve to death within you; another third shall fall by the sword all around you; a third I will scatter to the winds and pursue them with the sword.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Thus my anger will spend itself; I will vent my wrath against them until I am satisfied. Then they will know that I the LORD spoke in my passion when I spend my wrath upon them.<sup>g</sup> <sup>14</sup>I will make you a desolation and a reproach among the nations around you, in the sight of every passerby.<sup>h 15</sup>And you will be a reproach and a taunt, a warning and a horror to the nations around you when I execute judgments against you in angry wrath, with furious chastisements. I, the LORD, have spoken! <sup>16</sup>When I loose against you the deadly arrows of starvation that I am sending to destroy you, I will increase starvation and will break your staff of bread.<sup>i 17</sup>I will send against you starvation and wild beasts who will leave you childless, while disease and bloodshed sweep through you. I will bring the sword against you. I, the LORD, have spoken.<sup>j</sup>

Against the Mountains of Israel.<sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me:
<sup>2</sup>Son of man, set your face toward the mountains of Israel and prophesy against them.<sup>k</sup> <sup>3</sup>You shall say: Mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord GOD. Thus says the Lord GOD to the mountains and hills, to the ravines and valleys:<sup>l</sup> Pay attention! I am bringing a sword against you, and I will destroy your high places.* <sup>4</sup>Your altars shall be laid waste, your incense stands smashed, and I will throw your slain down in front of your idols.
<sup>5</sup>Yes, I will lay the corpses of the Israelites in front of their idols, and scatter your bones around your altars.<sup>* m</sup> <sup>6</sup>Wherever you live, cities shall be ruined and high places laid waste, in order that your altars be laid waste and devastated, your idols broken and smashed, your incense altars hacked to pieces, and whatever you have made wiped out.<sup>n</sup> <sup>7</sup>The slain shall fall in your midst, and you shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>* o</sup> <sup>8</sup>But I will spare some of you from the sword to live as refugees among the nations when you are scattered to foreign lands. <sup>9</sup>Then your refugees will remember me among the nations to which they have been exiled, after I have broken their lusting hearts that turned away from me and their eyes that lusted after idols. They will loathe themselves for all the evil they have done, for all their abominations.<sup>p</sup> <sup>10</sup>Then they shall know that I the LORD did not threaten in vain to inflict this evil on them.

The End Has Come. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, now say: Thus says the Lord GOD to the land of Israel: An end! The end comes upon the four corners of the land!<sup>t</sup> <sup>3</sup>Now the end is upon you; I will unleash my anger against you, judge you according to your ways, and hold against you all your abominations. <sup>4</sup>My eye will not spare you, nor will I have pity; but I will hold your conduct against you, since your abominations remain within you; then shall you know that I am the LORD.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: Evil upon evil! See it coming! <sup>6</sup>An end is coming, the end is coming; it is ripe for you! See it coming! <sup>7</sup>The crisis has come for you who dwell in the land! The time has come, near is the day: panic, no rejoicing on the mountains.<sup>v</sup> <sup>8</sup>Soon now I will pour out my fury upon you and spend my anger against you; I will judge you according to your ways and hold against you all your abominations.<sup>w</sup> <sup>9</sup>My eye will not spare, nor will I take pity; I will hold your conduct against you since your abominations remain within you, then you shall know that it is I, the LORD, who strikes.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>10</sup>The day is here! Look! it is coming! The crisis has come! Lawlessness is blooming, insolence budding; <sup>11</sup>the violent have risen up to wield a scepter of wickedness. But none of them shall remain; none of their crowd, none of their wealth, for none of them are innocent. <sup>12*</sup>The time has come, the day dawns. The buyer must not rejoice, nor the seller mourn, for wrath is coming upon all the throng.<sup>y</sup> <sup>13</sup>Assuredly, the seller shall not regain what was sold, as long as they all live; for the vision is for the whole crowd: it shall not be revoked! Yes, because of their guilt, they shall not hold on to life. <sup>14</sup>They will sound the trumpet and get everything ready, but no one will go out to battle, for my wrath weighs upon all the crowd.

<sup>15</sup>The sword is outside; disease and hunger are within. Whoever is in the fields will die by the sword; whoever is in the city disease and hunger will devour.<sup>z</sup> <sup>16</sup>If their survivors flee, they will die on the mountains, moaning like doves of the valley on account of their guilt. <sup>17</sup>All their hands will hang limp, and all their knees* turn to water.<sup>a</sup> <sup>18b</sup> They put on sackcloth, horror clothes them; shame is on all their faces, all their heads are shaved bald.*

<sup>19</sup>They fling their silver into the streets, and their gold is considered unclean.<sup>c</sup> Their silver and gold cannot save them on the day of the LORD's wrath. They cannot satisfy their hunger or fill their bellies, for it has been the occasion of their sin. <sup>20*</sup> In their beautiful ornaments they took pride; out of them they made their abominable images, their detestable things. For this reason I will make them unclean.<sup>d</sup> <sup>21</sup>I will hand them over as spoils to foreigners, as plunder to the wicked of the earth, so that they may defile them. <sup>22</sup>I will turn my face away from them. My treasure will be defiled; the violent will enter and defile it.<sup>e</sup> <sup>23</sup>They will wreak slaughter, for the land is filled with bloodshed and the city with violence.<sup>f</sup> <sup>24</sup>I will bring in the worst of the nations to take possession of their houses. I will put an end to their proud strength,* and their sanctuaries will be defiled.<sup>g</sup> <sup>25</sup>When anguish comes, they will seek peace, but there is none.<sup>h</sup> <sup>26</sup>Disaster after disaster, rumor upon rumor. They keep seeking a vision from the prophet; instruction from the priest is missing, and counsel from the elders.<sup>i</sup> <sup>27</sup>The king mourns, the prince is terror-stricken, the hands of the common people tremble. I will deal with them according to their ways, and according to their judgments I will judge them. They shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER 8

See RG 368–71

<sup>1</sup>In the sixth year, on the fifth day of the sixth month, * as I was sitting in my house, with the elders of Judah sitting before me, the hand of the Lord GOD fell upon me there.<sup>j</sup> <sup>2</sup>I looked up and there was a figure that looked like a man. * Downward from what looked like his waist, there was fire; from his waist upward, like the brilliance of polished bronze.<sup>k</sup>

Vision of Abominations in the Temple.<sup>3</sup>He stretched out the form of a hand and seized me by the hair of my head. The spirit lifted me up * between earth and heaven and brought me in divine vision to Jerusalem<sup>l</sup> to the entrance of the inner gate facing north where the statue of jealousy that provokes jealousy stood. <sup>4</sup>There I saw the glory of the God of Israel, like the vision I had seen in the plain.<sup>m</sup> <sup>5</sup>He said to me: Son of man, lift your eyes to the north! I looked to the north and there in the entry north of the altar gate was this statue of jealousy.<sup>n</sup> <sup>6</sup>He asked, Son of man, do you see what they are doing? Do you see the great abominations that the house of Israel is practicing here, so that I must depart from my sanctuary? You shall see even greater abominations!<sup>o</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Then he brought me to the entrance of the courtyard, and there I saw a hole in the wall. <sup>8</sup>Son of man, he ordered, dig through the wall. I dug through the wall—there was a doorway. <sup>9</sup>Go in, he said to me, and see the evil abominations they are doing here. <sup>10</sup>I went in and looked—figures of all kinds of creeping things and loathsome beasts, * all the idols of the house of Israel,<sup>p</sup> pictured around the wall. <sup>11</sup>Before them stood seventy of the elders of the house of Israel. Among them stood Jaazaniah, son of Shaphan, each with censer in hand; a cloud of incense drifted upward.<sup>q</sup> <sup>12</sup>Then he said to me: Do you see, son of man, what the elders of the house of Israel are doing in the dark, each in his idol chamber? They think: “The LORD cannot see us; the LORD has forsaken the land.”<sup>r</sup> <sup>13</sup>He said: You will see them practicing even greater abominations.

<sup>14</sup>Then he brought me to the entrance of the north gate of the house of the LORD. There women sat and wept for Tammuz.<sup>* s</sup> <sup>15</sup>He said to me: Do you see this, son of man? You will see other abominations, greater than these!

<sup>16</sup>Then he brought me into the inner court of the house of the LORD. There at the door of the LORD's temple, between the porch and the altar, were about twenty-five men with their backs to the LORD's temple and their faces toward the east; they were bowing eastward* to the sun.<sup>t</sup> <sup>17</sup>He said: Do you see, son of man? Are the abominable things the house of Judah has done here so slight that they should also fill the land with violence, provoking me again and again? Now they are putting the branch to my nose! * <sup>18</sup>Therefore I in turn will act furiously: my eye will not spare, nor will I take pity. Even if they cry out in a loud voice for me to hear, I shall not listen to them.

CHAPTER 9

See RG 368–71

Slaughter of the Idolaters. <sup>1</sup>Then he cried aloud for me to hear: Come, you scourges of the city! <sup>2</sup>And there were six men coming from the direction of the upper gate which faces north, each with a weapon of destruction in his hand. In their midst was a man dressed in linen, with a scribe's case at his waist. They entered and stood beside the bronze altar.<sup>u</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then the glory of the God of Israel moved off the cherub and went up to the threshold of the temple. He called to the man dressed in linen with the scribe's case at his waist,<sup>v</sup> <sup>4w</sup> and the LORD said to him:* Pass through the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and mark an X on the foreheads of those who grieve and lament over all the abominations practiced within it. <sup>5</sup>To the others he said in my hearing: Pass through the city after him and strike! Do not let your eyes spare; do not take pity. <sup>6</sup>Old and young, male and female, women and children—wipe them out! But do not touch anyone marked with the X. Begin at my sanctuary. So they began with the elders who were in front of the temple.<sup>x</sup> <sup>7</sup>Defile the temple, he said to them, fill its courts with the slain. Then go out and strike in the city.

<sup>8</sup>As they were striking, I was left alone. I fell on my face, crying out, “Alas, Lord GOD! Will you destroy all that is left of Israel when you pour out your fury on Jerusalem?” <sup>9</sup>He answered me: The guilt of the house of Israel and the house of Judah is too great to measure; the land is filled with bloodshed, the city with lawlessness. They think that the LORD has abandoned the land, that he does not see them. <sup>10</sup>My eye, however, will not spare, nor shall I take pity, but I will bring their conduct down upon their heads.

<sup>11</sup>Just then the man dressed in linen with the scribe's case at his waist made his report: “I have done as you commanded!”

CHAPTER 10

See RG 368–71

<sup>1</sup>Then I looked and there above the firmament over the heads of the cherubim was something like a sapphire, something that looked like a throne.<sup>y</sup> <sup>2*</sup> And he said to the man dressed in linen: Go within the wheelwork under the cherubim; fill both your hands with burning coals from the place among the cherubim, then scatter them over the city. As I watched, he entered.<sup>z</sup> <sup>3</sup>Now the cherubim were standing to the south of the temple when the man went in and a cloud filled the inner court. <sup>4</sup>The glory of the LORD had moved off the cherubim to the threshold of the temple; the temple was filled with the cloud, the whole court brilliant with the glory of the LORD. <sup>5</sup>The sound of the wings of the cherubim could be heard as far as the outer court; it was like the voice of God Almighty speaking.<sup>a</sup> <sup>6</sup>He commanded the man dressed in linen: Take fire from within the wheelwork among the cherubim. The man entered and stood by one of the wheels. <sup>7</sup>Thereupon a cherub stretched out a hand from among the cherubim toward the fire in the midst of the cherubim, took some, and put it in the hands of the one dressed in linen. He took it and came out. <sup>8</sup>Something like a human hand was visible under the wings of the cherubim. <sup>9</sup>I also saw four wheels beside the cherubim, one wheel beside each cherub, and the wheels appeared to have the sparkle of yellow topaz. <sup>10</sup>And the appearance of the four all seemed alike, as though one wheel were inside the other. <sup>11</sup>When they moved, they went in any of the four directions without veering as they moved; in whatever direction the first cherub faced, the others followed without veering as they went. <sup>12</sup>Their entire bodies—backs, hands, and wings—and wheels were covered with eyes all around like the four wheels.<sup>b</sup> <sup>13</sup>I heard the wheels called “wheelwork.” <sup>14</sup>Each living creature had four faces: the first a cherub, the second a human being, the third a lion, the fourth an eagle.<sup>c</sup> <sup>15*</sup> When the cherubim rose up, they were indeed the living creatures I had seen by the river Chebar.<sup>d</sup> <sup>16</sup>When the cherubim moved, the wheels went beside them; when the cherubim lifted up their wings to rise from the earth, even then the wheels did not leave their sides. <sup>17</sup>When they stood still, the wheels stood still; when they rose up, the wheels rose up with them, for the spirit of the living creatures was in them.

<sup>18</sup>Then the glory of the LORD left the threshold of the temple and took its place upon the cherubim. <sup>19</sup>The cherubim lifted their wings and rose up from the earth before my eyes as they departed with the wheels beside them. They stopped at the entrance of the eastern gate of the LORD's house, and the glory of the God of Israel was up above them.<sup>e</sup> <sup>20*</sup> These were the living creatures I had seen beneath the God of Israel by the river Chebar. Now I knew they were cherubim.<sup>f</sup> <sup>21</sup>Each of them had four faces and four wings, and something like human hands under their wings. <sup>22</sup>Their faces looked just like the faces I had seen by the river Chebar; and each one went straight ahead.

CHAPTER 11

See RG 368–71

Death for the Remnant in Jerusalem.<sup>1</sup>The spirit lifted me up and brought me to the east gate of the house of the LORD facing east. There at the entrance of the gate were twenty-five men; among them I saw the public officials Jaazaniah, son of Azzur, and Pelatiah, son of Benaiah. <sup>2</sup>The LORD said to me: Son of man, these are the men who are planning evil and giving wicked counsel in this city. <sup>3</sup>They are saying, “No need to build houses! The city is the pot, and we are the meat.”<sup>*g</sup> <sup>4</sup>Therefore prophesy against them, son of man, prophesy! <sup>5</sup>Then the spirit of the LORD fell upon me and told me to say: Thus says the LORD: This is how you talk, house of Israel. I know the things that come into your mind! <sup>6</sup>You have slain many in this city, filled its streets with the slain. <sup>7</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: The slain whom you piled up in it, that is the meat, the pot is the city. But you I will bring out of it.<sup>h</sup> <sup>8</sup>You fear the sword—that sword I will bring upon you—oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>i</sup> <sup>9</sup>I will bring you out of the city, hand you over to foreigners, and execute judgments against you. <sup>10</sup>By the sword you shall fall. At the borders of Israel I will judge you so that you will know that I am the LORD. <sup>11</sup>The city shall not be a pot for you, nor shall you be meat within it. At the borders of Israel I will judge you,<sup>j</sup> <sup>12</sup>so you shall know that I am the LORD, whose statutes you did not follow, whose ordinances you did not keep. Instead, you acted according to the ordinances of the nations around you.

<sup>13</sup>While I was prophesying, Pelatiah, the son of Benaiah, dropped dead. I fell down on my face and cried out in a loud voice: “Alas, Lord GOD! You are finishing off what remains of Israel!”<sup>*k</sup>

Restoration for the Exiles. <sup>14</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>15*</sup> Son of man, the inhabitants of Jerusalem are saying about all your relatives, the other exiles, and all the house of Israel, “They are far away from the LORD. The land is given to us as a possession.”<sup>l</sup> <sup>16</sup>Therefore say: Thus says the Lord GOD: I have indeed sent them far away among the nations, scattered them over the lands, and have been but little sanctuary for them in the lands to which they have gone. <sup>17</sup>Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD, I will gather you from the nations and collect you from the lands through which you were scattered, so I can give you the land of Israel.<sup>m 18</sup> They will enter it and remove all its atrocities and abominations.<sup>19n</sup> And I will give them another heart and a new spirit I will put within them. From their bodies I will remove the hearts of stone, and give them hearts of flesh,<sup>20</sup> so that they walk according to my statutes, taking care to keep my ordinances. Thus they will be my people, and I will be their God.<sup>o 21</sup> But as for those whose hearts are devoted to their atrocities and abominations, I will bring their conduct down upon their heads—oracle of the Lord God.

<sup>22</sup> Then the cherubim lifted their wings and the wheels alongside them, with the glory of the God of Israel above them.<sup>p 23*</sup> The glory of the LORD rose up from the middle of the city and came to rest on the mountain east of the city.<sup>q 24</sup> In a vision, the spirit lifted me up and brought me back to the exiles in Chaldea, by the spirit of God. The vision I had seen left me,<sup>r 25</sup> and I told the exiles everything the LORD had shown me.<sup>s</sup>

See RG 368–71

Acts Symbolic of the Exile. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, you live in the midst of a rebellious house; they have eyes to see, but do not see, and ears to hear but do not hear. They are such a rebellious house!<sup>t</sup> <sup>3</sup>Now, son of man, during the day while they watch, pack a bag for exile,* and again while they watch, go into exile from your place to another place; perhaps they will see that they are a rebellious house. <sup>4</sup>During the day, while they watch, bring out your bag, an exile's bag. In the evening, again while they watch, go out as if into exile.<sup>u</sup> <sup>5</sup>While they watch, dig a hole through the wall* and go out through it. <sup>6</sup>While they watch, shoulder your load and go out in darkness. Cover your face so you cannot see the land, for I am making you a sign for the house of Israel!<sup>v</sup>

<sup>7</sup>I did just as I was commanded. During the day I brought out my bag, an exile's bag. In the evening while they watched, I dug a hole through the wall with my hands and set out in darkness, shouldering my load.

<sup>8</sup>In the morning, the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>9</sup>Son of man, did not the house of Israel, that house of rebels, say, "What are you doing?"<sup>w</sup> <sup>10</sup>Tell them: Thus says the Lord GOD: This load is the prince in Jerusalem and the whole house of Israel within it. <sup>11</sup>Say, I am a sign for you: just as I have done, so it shall be done to them; into exile, as captives they shall go.<sup>x</sup> <sup>12</sup>The prince among them shall shoulder his load in darkness and go out through the hole they dug in the wall to bring him out. His face shall be covered so that he cannot even see the ground.<sup>y</sup> <sup>13</sup><sup>z</sup>I will spread my net over him and he shall be caught in my snare. I will bring him into Babylon, to the land of the Chaldeans, though he shall not see it,* and there he shall die. <sup>14</sup>All his retinue, his aides and all his troops, I will scatter to the winds and pursue them with the sword.<sup>a</sup> <sup>15</sup>Then they shall know that I am the LORD, when I disperse them among the nations and scatter them throughout the lands.<sup>b</sup> <sup>16</sup>But I will let a few of them escape the sword, starvation, and plague, so that they may recount all their abominations among the nations to which they go. Thus they may know that I am the LORD.*

of the land: * Thus says the Lord GOD about the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the land of Israel: they shall eat their bread in fear and drink their water in horror, because the land will be emptied of what fills it—the lawlessness of all its inhabitants. <sup>20</sup>Inhabited cities shall be in ruins, the land a desolate place. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

Prophecy Ridiculed. <sup>21</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>22</sup>Son of man, what is this proverb you have in the land of Israel: “The days drag on, and every vision fails”? <sup>*d</sup> <sup>23</sup>Say to them therefore: Thus says the Lord GOD: I will put an end to that proverb; they shall never use it again in Israel. Say to them instead: “The days are at hand and every vision fulfilled.” <sup>e</sup> <sup>24</sup>No longer shall there be any false visions or deceitful divinations within the house of Israel, <sup>f</sup> <sup>25</sup>for whatever word I speak shall happen without delay. In your days, rebellious house, whatever I speak I will bring about—oracle of the Lord GOD. <sup>g</sup>

<sup>26</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>27</sup>Son of man, listen! The house of Israel is saying, “The vision he sees is a long time off; he prophesies for distant times!” <sup>h</sup> <sup>28</sup>Say to them therefore: Thus says the Lord GOD: None of my words shall be delayed any longer. Whatever I say is final; it shall be done—oracle of the Lord GOD.

CHAPTER 13

See RG 368–71

Against the Prophets of Peace. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me:
<sup>2</sup>Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel, prophesy! Say to those who prophesy their own thoughts: Hear the word of the LORD!<sup>i</sup> <sup>3</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: Woe to those prophets, the fools who follow their own spirit and see nothing.<sup>j</sup> <sup>4</sup>Like foxes among ruins are your prophets, Israel! <sup>5</sup>You did not step into the breach, nor repair the wall around the house of Israel so it would stand firm against attack on the day of the LORD. <sup>6</sup>False visions! Lying divinations! They say, “The oracle of the LORD,” even though the LORD did not send them. Then they expect their word to be confirmed!<sup>k</sup> <sup>7</sup>Was not the vision you saw false? Did you not report a lying divination when you said, “Oracle of the LORD,” even though I never spoke? <sup>8</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: Because you have spoken falsehood and seen lying visions, therefore, for certain I am coming at you—oracle of the Lord GOD. <sup>9</sup>My hand is against the prophets who see false visions and who make lying divinations. They shall not belong to the community of my people. They shall not be written in the register of the house of Israel, nor shall they enter the land of Israel. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: In my fury I will let loose stormwinds; because of my anger there will be flooding rain, and hailstones will fall with destructive wrath.<sup>n</sup> <sup>14</sup>I will tear down the wall you whitewashed and level it to the ground, laying bare its foundations. When it falls, you shall be crushed beneath it. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD. <sup>15</sup>When I have poured out my fury on the wall and its whitewashers, it will fall. Then I will say to you: No wall! No whitewashers—<sup>16</sup>the prophets of Israel who prophesy to Jerusalem and see visions of peace for it when there is no peace—oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>o</sup>

Against Witches. <sup>17</sup>As for you, son of man, now set your face against the daughters of your people who play the prophet from their own thoughts, and prophesy against them.<sup>p</sup> <sup>18</sup>You shall say, Thus says the Lord GOD: Woe to those who sew amulets for the wrists of every arm and make veils* for every head size to snare lives! You ensnare the lives of my people, even as you preserve your own lives! <sup>19</sup>You have profaned me among my people for handfuls of barley and crumbs of bread,* slaying those who should not be slain, and keeping alive those who should not live, lying to my people, who listen to lies. <sup>20</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: See! I am coming after your amulets by which you ensnare lives like prey. I will tear them from your arms and set free the lives of those you have ensnared like prey.<sup>q</sup> <sup>21</sup>I will tear off your veils and deliver my people from your power, so that they shall never again be ensnared by your hands. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD. <sup>22</sup>Because you discourage the righteous with lies when I did not want them to be distressed, and encourage the wicked so they do not turn from their evil ways and save their lives,<sup>r</sup> <sup>23</sup>therefore you shall no longer see false visions or practice divination again. I will deliver my people from your hand. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER 14

See RG 368–71

Idolatry and Unfaithfulness. <sup>1</sup>Some elders of Israel came and sat down before me.<sup>s</sup> <sup>2</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>3</sup>Son of man, these men keep the memory of their idols alive in their hearts, setting the stumbling block of their sin before them. Should I allow myself to be consulted by them? <sup>4</sup>Therefore say to them: Thus says the Lord GOD: If any of the house of Israel who keep the memory of their idols in their hearts, setting the stumbling block of their sin before them, come to a prophet, I the LORD will answer in person because of their many idols, <sup>5</sup>in order to catch the hearts of the house of Israel, estranged from me because of all their idols.

<sup>6</sup>Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord GOD: Return, turn away from your idols; from all your abominations, turn your faces.<sup>t</sup> <sup>7</sup>For if anyone of the house of Israel or any alien residing in Israel who are estranged from me and who keep their idols in their hearts, setting the stumbling block of their sin before them, come to ask a prophet to consult me on their behalf, I the LORD will answer them in person. <sup>8</sup>I will set my face against them and make them a sign and a byword, and cut them off from the midst of my people. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD.

<sup>9u</sup> As for the prophet, if he speaks a deceiving word, I the LORD am the one who deceives that prophet.* I will stretch out my hand against him and destroy him from the midst of my people Israel. <sup>10</sup>They will be punished for their own sins, the inquirer and the prophet alike, <sup>11</sup>so that the house of Israel may no longer stray from me, no longer defile themselves by all their sins. Then they shall be my people, and I shall be their God—oracle of the Lord GOD.

Just Cause. * <sup>12</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>13v</sup> Son of man, if a land sins against me by breaking faith, and I stretch out my hand against it, breaking its staff of bread and setting famine loose upon it, cutting off from it human being and beast alike— <sup>14</sup>even if these three were in it, Noah, Daniel, and Job,* they could only save themselves by their righteousness—oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>w</sup> <sup>15</sup>If I summoned wild beasts to prowl the land, depopulating it so that it became a wasteland which no one would cross because of the wild beasts,<sup>x 16</sup> and these three were in it, as I live—oracle of the Lord GOD—I swear they could save neither sons nor daughters; they alone would be saved, but the land would become a wasteland.<sup>y 17</sup> Or if I bring the sword upon this land, commanding the sword to pass through the land cutting off from it human being and beast alike,<sup>z 18</sup> and these three were in it, as I live—oracle of the Lord GOD—they could save neither sons nor daughters; they alone would be saved.<sup>19</sup> Or if I send plague into this land, pouring out upon it my bloody wrath, cutting off from it human being and beast alike,<sup>20</sup> even if Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, as I live—oracle of the Lord GOD—they could save neither son nor daughter; they would save only themselves by their righteousness.

<sup>21</sup> Thus says the Lord GOD: Even though I send against Jerusalem my four evil punishments—sword, famine, wild beasts, and plague—to cut off from it human being and beast alike,<sup>a 22</sup> there will still be some survivors in it who will bring out sons and daughters. When they come out to you and you see their ways and their deeds, you shall be consoled regarding the evil I brought on Jerusalem, everything I brought upon it.<sup>23</sup> They shall console you when you see their ways and their deeds, and you shall know that not without reason did I do to it everything I did—oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Son of man,
what makes the wood of the vine
Better than the wood of branches found on the trees in the forest?<sup>c</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Can wood be taken from it to make something useful?
Can someone make even a peg out of it
on which to hang a vessel?

<sup>4</sup>Of course not! If it is fed to the fire for fuel,
and the fire devours both ends of it,
Leaving the middle charred,
is it useful for anything then?

<sup>5</sup>Even when it is whole
it cannot be used for anything;
So when fire has devoured and charred it,
how useful can it be?

<sup>6</sup>Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD:
Like vine wood among forest trees,
which I have given as fuel for fire,
So I will give the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

<sup>7</sup>I will set my face against them:
Although they have escaped the fire,
the fire will still devour them;
You shall know that I am the LORD,
when I set my face against them.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Yes, I will make the land desolate, because they are so unfaithful—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

A Parable of Infidelity. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, make known to Jerusalem her abominations.<sup>e</sup> <sup>3</sup>You shall say, Thus says the Lord GOD to Jerusalem: By origin and birth you belong to the land of the Canaanites; your father was an Amorite, your mother a Hittite.<sup>* f 4*</sup> As for your birth, on the day you were born your navel cord was not cut; you were not washed with water or anointed; you were not rubbed with salt or wrapped in swaddling clothes.<sup>g</sup> <sup>5</sup>No eye looked on you with pity or compassion to do any of these things for you. Rather, on the day you were born you were left out in the field, rejected.

<sup>6</sup>Then I passed by and saw you struggling in your blood, and I said to you in your blood, “Live!” <sup>7</sup>I helped you grow up like a field plant, so that you grew, maturing into a woman with breasts developed and hair grown; but still you were stark naked. <sup>8</sup>I passed by you again and saw that you were now old enough for love. So I spread the corner of my cloak* over you to cover your nakedness; I swore an oath to you and entered into covenant with you—oracle of the Lord GOD—and you became mine.<sup>h</sup> <sup>9</sup>Then I bathed you with water, washed away your blood, and anointed you with oil.<sup>i</sup> <sup>10</sup>I clothed you with an embroidered gown, put leather sandals on your feet; I gave you a fine linen sash and silk robes to wear.<sup>j</sup> <sup>11</sup>I adorned you with jewelry, putting bracelets on your arms, a necklace about your neck,<sup>k</sup> <sup>12</sup>a ring in your nose, earrings in your ears, and a beautiful crown on your head. <sup>13</sup>Thus you were adorned with gold and silver; your garments made of fine linen, silk, and embroidered cloth. Fine flour, honey, and olive oil were your food. You were very, very beautiful, fit for royalty.<sup>l</sup> <sup>14</sup>You were renowned among the nations for your beauty, perfected by the splendor I showered on you—oracle of the Lord GOD.

<sup>15</sup>But you trusted in your own beauty and used your renown to serve as a prostitute. You poured out your prostitution on every passerby—let it be his.<sup>m</sup> <sup>16*</sup> You took some of your garments and made for yourself gaudy high places, where you served as a prostitute. It has never happened before, nor will it happen again!<sup>n</sup> <sup>17</sup>You took the splendid gold and silver ornaments that I had given you and made for yourself male images and served as a prostitute with them. <sup>18</sup>You took your embroidered garments to cover them; my oil and my incense you set before them; <sup>19</sup>the food I had given you, the fine flour, the oil, and the honey with which I fed you, you set before them as a pleasant odor, says the Lord GOD. <sup>o</sup> <sup>20*</sup> <sup>p</sup> The sons and daughters you bore for me you took and offered as sacrifices for them to devour! Was it not enough that you had become a prostitute? <sup>21q</sup> You slaughtered and immolated my children to them, making them pass through fire. <sup>22</sup>In all your abominations and prostitutions you did not remember the days of your youth when you were stark naked, struggling in your blood. <sup>r</sup>

<sup>23</sup>Then after all your evildoing—woe, woe to you! oracle of the Lord GOD—<sup>24</sup>you built yourself a platform and raised up a dais* in every public place. <sup>s</sup> <sup>25t</sup> At every intersection you built yourself a dais so that you could degrade your beauty by spreading your legs for every passerby, multiplying your prostitutions. <sup>26</sup>You served as a prostitute with the Egyptians, your big-membered neighbors, and multiplied your prostitutions to provoke me. <sup>27</sup>Therefore I stretched out my hand against you and reduced your allotment, and delivered you over to the whim of your enemies, the Philistines,* who were revolted by your depraved conduct. <sup>u</sup> <sup>28</sup>You also served as a prostitute for the Assyrians, because you were not satisfied. Even after serving as a prostitute for them, you were still not satisfied. <sup>v</sup> <sup>29</sup>You increased your prostitutions again, now going to Chaldea, the land of traders; but despite this, you were still not satisfied. <sup>w</sup>

<sup>30</sup>How wild your lust!—oracle of the Lord GOD—that you did all these works of a shameless prostitute, <sup>31</sup>when you built your platform at every intersection and set up your high place in every public square. But unlike a prostitute, you disdained payment. <sup>32</sup>Adulterous wife, taking strangers in place of her husband! <sup>33</sup>Prostitutes usually receive gifts. But you bestowed gifts on all your lovers, bribing them to come to you for prostitution from every side. <sup>x</sup> <sup>34</sup>Thus in your prostitution you were different from any other woman. No one solicited you for prostitution. Instead, you yourself offered payment; what a reversal!

together all your lovers with whom you found pleasure, both those you loved and those you hated; I will gather them against you from all sides and expose you naked for them to see. <sup>38*</sup> I will inflict on you the sentence of adultery and murder; I will bring on you bloody wrath and jealous anger.<sup>z</sup> <sup>39</sup>I will hand you over to them to tear down your platform and demolish your high place, to strip you of your garments and take away your splendid ornaments, leaving you stark naked.<sup>a</sup> <sup>40</sup>They shall lead an assembly against you to stone you and hack you to pieces with their swords.<sup>b</sup> <sup>41c</sup> They shall set fire to your homes and inflict punishments on you while many women watch. Thus I will put an end to your prostitution, and you shall never again offer payment. <sup>42</sup>When I have spent my fury upon you I will stop being jealous about you, and calm down, no longer angry. <sup>43</sup>Because you did not remember the days of your youth but enraged me with all these things, see, I am bringing down your ways upon your head—oracle of the Lord God. Have you not added depravity to your other abominations?

<sup>44</sup>See, everyone who makes proverbs will make this proverb about you, “Like mother, like daughter.” <sup>45</sup>Yes, you are truly the daughter of your mother* who rejected her husband and children: you are truly a sister to your sisters who rejected their husbands and children—your mother was a Hittite and your father an Amorite.<sup>d</sup> <sup>46*</sup> Your elder sister was Samaria with her daughters to the north of you; and your younger sister was Sodom and her daughters, south of you.<sup>e</sup> <sup>47</sup>Not only did you walk in their ways and act as abominably as they did, but in a very short time you became more corrupt in all your ways than they were.<sup>f</sup> <sup>48</sup>As I live—oracle of the Lord God—I swear that your sister Sodom with her daughters have not done the things you and your daughters have done!<sup>g</sup> <sup>49h</sup> Now look at the guilt of your sister Sodom: she and her daughters were proud, sated with food, complacent in prosperity. They did not give any help to the poor and needy. <sup>50</sup>Instead, they became arrogant and committed abominations before me; then, as you have seen, I removed them.<sup>i</sup> <sup>51</sup>Samaria did not commit half the sins you did. You have done more abominable things than they did. You even made your sisters look righteous, with all the abominations you have done. <sup>52</sup>You, then, must bear your disgrace, for you have made a case for your sisters! Because your sins are more abominable than theirs, they seem righteous compared to you. Blush for shame, and bear the disgrace of having made your sisters appear righteous.

<sup>53</sup>I will restore their fortunes, the fortunes of Sodom and her daughters, the fortunes of Samaria and her daughters—and your fortunes along with them. <sup>54</sup>Thus you must bear your disgrace and be ashamed of all you have done to bring them comfort. <sup>55</sup>Yes, your sisters, Sodom and her daughters, Samaria and her daughters, shall return to the way they were,<sup>j</sup> and you and your daughters shall return to the way you were. <sup>56</sup>Did you not hold your sister Sodom in bad repute while you felt proud of yourself, <sup>57</sup>before your evil was exposed? Now you are like her, reproached by the Arameans and all their neighbors, despised on all sides by the Philistines.<sup>k</sup> <sup>58</sup>The penalty of your depravity and your abominations—you must bear it all—oracle of the LORD.

<sup>59</sup>For thus says the Lord GOD: I will deal with you for what you did; you despised an oath by breaking a covenant.<sup>l</sup> <sup>60</sup>But I will remember the covenant I made with you when you were young; I will set up an everlasting covenant* with you.<sup>m</sup> <sup>61</sup>Then you shall remember your ways and be ashamed when you receive your sisters, those older and younger than you; I give them to you as daughters, but not by reason of your covenant. <sup>62</sup>For I will reestablish my covenant with you, that you may know that I am the LORD,<sup>n</sup> <sup>63</sup>that you may remember and be ashamed, and never again open your mouth because of your disgrace, when I pardon you for all you have done—oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>o</sup>

See RG 368–71

The Eagles and the Vine. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, propose a riddle, and tell this proverb to the house of Israel: <sup>3</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD:

The great eagle, with wide wingspan
and long feathers, with thick plumage,
many-hued, came to Lebanon.

He plucked the crest of the cedar,<sup>p</sup>

<sup>4</sup>broke off its topmost branch,
And brought it to a land of merchants,
set it in a city of traders.

<sup>5</sup>Then he took some native seed
and planted it in fertile soil;
A shoot beside plentiful waters,

like a willow he planted it,<sup>q</sup>

<sup>6</sup>That it might sprout and become a vine, dense and low-lying,
With its branches turned toward him,
its roots beneath it.

Thus it became a vine, produced branches,
and put forth shoots.

<sup>7</sup>Then another great eagle appeared,
with wide wingspan, rich in plumage,
And see! This vine bent its roots to him,
sent out branches for him to water.

From the bed where it was planted,<sup>r</sup>

<sup>8</sup>it was transplanted to a fertile field
By abundant waters, to produce
branches,
to bear fruit, to become a majestic
vine.

<sup>9</sup>Say: Thus says the Lord GOD: Can it thrive?

Will he not tear up its roots
and strip its fruit?

Then all its green leaves will wither—
neither strong arm nor mighty nation

is needed to uproot it.

<sup>10</sup>True, it is planted; but will it thrive?

Will it not wither up

When the east wind strikes it, wither in the very bed where it

sprouted?<sup>s</sup>

<sup>11</sup>* The word of the LORD came to me:

<sup>12</sup>Now say to the rebellious house:

Do you not understand this? Tell them!

The king of Babylon came to Jerusalem and took away its king and officials and brought them to him in Babylon.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>13</sup>After removing the nobles from the land,

he then took one of the royal line

And made a covenant with him,

binding him under oath,<sup>u</sup>

<sup>14</sup>To be a humble kingdom,

without high aspirations,

to keep his covenant and so survive.

<sup>15</sup>But this one rebelled against him

by sending envoys to Egypt

To obtain horses and a mighty army.

Can he thrive?

Can he escape if he does this?

Can he break a covenant and go free?<sup>v</sup>

<sup>16</sup>As I live—oracle of the Lord GOD—

in the house of the king who set him

up to rule,

Whose oath he ignored and whose covenant he broke,

there in Babylon I swear he shall die!<sup>w</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Pharaoh shall not help him on the day of battle,

with a great force and mighty horde,

When ramps are thrown up and siege works built

for the cutting down of many lives.

<sup>18</sup>He ignored his oath, breaking his

covenant;

even though he gave his hand, he did

all these things—

he shall not escape!<sup>x</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD:

As I live, my oath which he spurned,
And my covenant which he broke,
I will bring down on his head.

<sup>20</sup>I will spread my net over him,
and he will be caught in my snare.
I will bring him to Babylon to judge him there

because he broke faith with me.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Any among his forces who escape
will fall by the sword,
And whoever might survive

will be scattered to the winds.<sup>z</sup>

Thus you will know that I the LORD have spoken.

<sup>22</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD:

I, too, will pluck from the crest of the cedar
the highest branch.

From the top a tender shoot

I will break off and transplant*
on a high, lofty mountain.

<sup>23</sup>On the mountain height of Israel
I will plant it.

It shall put forth branches and bear fruit,
and become a majestic cedar.

Every small bird will nest under it,
all kinds of winged birds will dwell
in the shade of its branches.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>24</sup>Every tree of the field will know that I am the LORD.

I bring low the high tree,
lift high the lowly tree,
Wither up the green tree,

and make the dry tree bloom.<sup>b</sup>

As I, the LORD, have spoken, so will I do!

CHAPTER 18

Personal Responsibility. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: Son of man, <sup>2</sup>what is the meaning of this proverb you recite in the land of Israel:

“Parents eat sour grapes,<sup>c</sup> but the children’s teeth are set on edge”?*

<sup>3</sup>As I live—oracle of the Lord God: I swear that none of you will ever repeat this proverb in Israel. <sup>4</sup>For all life is mine: the life of the parent is like the life of the child, both are mine. Only the one who sins shall die!

<sup>10</sup>But if he begets a son who is violent and commits murder, or does any of these things,<sup>h</sup> <sup>11</sup>even though the father does none of them—a son who eats on the mountains, defiles the wife of his neighbor, <sup>12</sup>oppresses the poor and needy, commits robbery, does not give back a pledge, raises his eyes to idols, does abominable things, <sup>13</sup>lends at interest and exacts usury—this son certainly shall not live. Because he practiced all these abominations, he shall surely be put to death; his own blood shall be on him.<sup>i</sup>

ordinances and walks in my statutes—this one shall not die for the sins of his father. He shall surely live! <sup>18</sup>Only the father, since he committed extortion and robbed his brother, and did what was not good among his people—he will die because of his sin! <sup>19</sup>You ask: “Why is not the son charged with the guilt of his father?” Because the son has done what is just and right and has been careful to observe all my statutes—he shall surely live! <sup>20k</sup> Only the one who sins shall die. The son shall not be charged with the guilt of his father, nor shall the father be charged with the guilt of his son. Justice belongs to the just, and wickedness to the wicked.

<sup>21</sup>But if the wicked man turns away from all the sins he has committed, if he keeps all my statutes and does what is just and right, he shall surely live. He shall not die! <sup>22</sup>None of the crimes he has committed shall be remembered against him; he shall live because of the justice he has shown. <sup>23l</sup> Do I find pleasure in the death of the wicked—oracle of the Lord GOD? Do I not rejoice when they turn from their evil way and live?

<sup>24</sup>And if the just turn from justice and do evil, like all the abominations the wicked do, can they do this evil and still live? None of the justice they did shall be remembered, because they acted treacherously and committed these sins; because of this, they shall die. <sup>m 25n</sup> You say, “The LORD’s way is not fair!”* Hear now, house of Israel: Is it my way that is unfair? Are not your ways unfair? <sup>26</sup>When the just turn away from justice to do evil and die, on account of the evil they did they must die. <sup>27</sup>But if the wicked turn from the wickedness they did and do what is right and just, they save their lives; <sup>28</sup>since they turned away from all the sins they committed, they shall live; they shall not die. <sup>29</sup>But the house of Israel says, “The Lord’s way is not fair!” Is it my way that is not fair, house of Israel? Is it not your ways that are not fair?

<sup>30o</sup> Therefore I will judge you, house of Israel, all of you according to your ways—oracle of the Lord GOD. Turn, turn back from all your crimes, that they may not be a cause of sin for you ever again. <sup>31</sup>Cast away from you all the crimes you have committed, and make for yourselves a new heart and a new spirit. Why should you die, house of Israel?<sup>p 32q</sup> For I find no pleasure in the death of anyone who dies—oracle of the Lord GOD. Turn back and live!

Allegory of the Lions*

<sup>1</sup>As for you, raise a lamentation over the princes of Israel, <sup>2</sup>and say:

What a lioness was your mother,
a lion among lions!
She made her lair among young lions,
to raise her cubs;

<sup>3</sup>One cub she raised up,
a young lion he became;
He learned to tear apart prey,
he devoured people.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Nations heard about him;
in their pit he was caught;
They took him away with hooks to the land of Egypt.*<sup>s</sup>

<sup>5</sup>When she realized she had waited in vain,
she lost hope.
She took another of her cubs,
and made him a young lion.

<sup>6</sup>He prowled among the lions,
became a young lion;
He learned to tear apart prey,
he devoured people.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>7</sup>He ravaged their strongholds, laid waste their cities.
The earth and everything in it were terrified
at the sound of his roar.

<sup>8</sup>Nations laid out against him
snares all around;
They spread their net for him,
in their pit he was caught.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>9</sup>They put him in fetters and took him away
to the king of Babylon,
So his roar would no longer be heard on the mountains of Israel.

Allegory of the Vine Branch

<sup>10</sup>Your mother was like a leafy vine* planted by water, Fruitful and full of branches
because of abundant water.

<sup>11</sup>One strong branch grew into a royal scepter.
So tall it towered among the clouds, conspicuous in height,
with dense foliage.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>12</sup>But she was torn out in fury
and flung to the ground;
The east wind withered her up,
her fruit was plucked away;
Her strongest branch dried up,
fire devoured it.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>13</sup>Now she is planted in a wilderness, in a dry, parched land.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Fire flashed from her branch,
and devoured her shoots;
Now she does not have a strong branch,
a royal scepter!<sup>y</sup>

This is a lamentation and serves as a lamentation.

Israel's History of Infidelity. <sup>1</sup>In the seventh year, on the tenth day of the fifth month, * some of the elders of Israel came to consult the LORD and sat down before me. <sup>z</sup> <sup>2</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>3</sup>Son of man, speak to the elders of Israel and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: Have you come to consult me? As I live, I will not allow myself to be consulted by you!—oracle of the Lord God.

<sup>4</sup>Will you judge them? Will you judge, son of man? Tell them about the abominations of their ancestors, <sup>a</sup> <sup>5</sup>and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: The day I chose Israel, I swore to the descendants of the house of Jacob; I revealed myself to them in the land of Egypt and swore to them, saying: I am the LORD, your God. <sup>6</sup>That day I swore to bring them out of the land of Egypt to the land I had searched out for them, a land flowing with milk and honey, a jewel among all lands. <sup>b</sup> <sup>7</sup>Then I said to them: Throw away, each of you, the detestable things * that held your eyes; do not defile yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the LORD, your God. <sup>c</sup>

<sup>8</sup>But they rebelled and refused to listen to me; none of them threw away the detestable things that held their eyes, nor did they abandon the idols of Egypt. Then I considered pouring out my fury and spending my anger against them there in the land of Egypt. <sup>d</sup> <sup>9</sup>I acted for the sake of my name, that it should not be desecrated in the eyes of the nations among whom they were: in the eyes of the nations I had made myself known to them, to bring them out of the land of Egypt. <sup>e</sup> <sup>10</sup>Therefore I led them out of the land of Egypt and brought them into the wilderness. <sup>11f</sup> Then I gave them my statutes and made known to them my ordinances, so that everyone who keeps them has life through them. <sup>12g</sup> I also gave them my sabbaths to be a sign between me and them, to show that it is I, the LORD, who makes them holy.

<sup>13</sup>But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness. They did not observe my statutes, and they rejected my ordinances that bring life to those who keep them. My sabbaths, too, they desecrated grievously. Then I considered pouring out my fury on them in the wilderness to put an end to them, <sup>h</sup> <sup>14</sup>but I acted for the sake of my name, so it would not be desecrated in the eyes of the nations in whose sight I had brought them out.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Nevertheless in the wilderness I swore to them that I would not bring them into the land I had given them—a land flowing with milk and honey, a jewel among all the lands. <sup>16</sup>Their hearts followed after their idols so closely that they did not live by my statutes, but rejected my ordinances and desecrated my sabbaths. <sup>17</sup>But I looked on them with pity, not wanting to destroy them, so I did not put an end to them in the wilderness.

<sup>18</sup>Then I said to their children in the wilderness: Do not follow the statutes of your parents. Do not keep their ordinances. Do not defile yourselves with their idols. <sup>19</sup>I am the LORD, your God: follow my statutes and be careful to observe my ordinances; <sup>20</sup>keep holy my sabbaths as a sign between me and you so that you may know that I am the LORD, your God.<sup>j</sup>
<sup>21</sup>But their children rebelled against me: they did not follow my statutes or keep my ordinances that bring life to those who observe them; my sabbaths they desecrated. Then I considered pouring out my fury on them, spending my anger against them in the wilderness; <sup>22</sup>but I stayed my hand, acting for the sake of my name, lest it be desecrated in the eyes of the nations, in whose sight I had brought them out. <sup>23</sup>Nevertheless I swore to them in the wilderness that I would disperse them among the nations and scatter them in other lands, <sup>24</sup>because they did not carry out my ordinances, but rejected my statutes and desecrated my sabbaths, having eyes only for the idols of their ancestors. <sup>25</sup>Therefore I gave them statutes that were not good,* and ordinances through which they could not have life.<sup>k</sup> <sup>26</sup>I let them become defiled by their offerings, by having them make a fiery offering of every womb's firstborn, in order to ruin them so they might know that I am the LORD.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>27</sup>Therefore speak to the house of Israel, son of man, and tell them: Thus says the Lord GOD: In this way also your ancestors blasphemed me, breaking faith with me. <sup>28</sup>When I brought them to the land I had sworn to give them, and they saw all its high hills and leafy trees, there they offered sacrifices, there they made offerings to provoke me, there they sent up sweet-smelling oblations, there they poured out their libations.<sup>m</sup> <sup>29</sup>So I said to them, "What is this high place* to which you go?" Thus its name became "high place" even to this day.<sup>n</sup> <sup>30</sup>Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord GOD: Will you defile yourselves in the way your ancestors did? Will you lust after their detestable idols? <sup>31</sup>By offering your gifts, by making your children pass through the fire, you defile yourselves with all your idols even to this day. Shall I let myself be consulted by you, house of Israel? As I live—oracle of the Lord GOD—I swear I will not let myself be consulted by you!<sup>o</sup>

<sup>32</sup>What has entered your mind shall never happen: You are thinking, “We shall be like the nations, like the peoples of foreign lands, serving wood and stone.” <sup>33</sup>As I live—oracle of the Lord GOD—with mighty hand and outstretched arm, with wrath poured out, I swear I will be king over you!<sup>p</sup> <sup>34</sup>With mighty hand and outstretched arm, with wrath poured out, I will bring you out from the nations and gather you from the countries over which you are scattered;<sup>q</sup> <sup>35*</sup> I will lead you to the wilderness of the peoples and enter into judgment with you face to face. <sup>36</sup>Just as I entered into judgment with your ancestors in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I enter into judgment with you—oracle of the Lord GOD. <sup>37</sup>Thus I will make you pass under the staff* and will impose on you the terms of the covenant.<sup>r</sup> <sup>38</sup>I will sort out from you those who defied me and rebelled against me; from the land where they resided as aliens I will bring them out, but they shall not return to the land of Israel. Thus you shall know that I am the LORD.

<sup>39</sup>As for you, house of Israel, thus says the Lord GOD: Go! each of you, and worship your idols. Listen to me! You shall never again desecrate my holy name with your offerings and your idols!<sup>s</sup> <sup>40</sup>For on my holy mountain,* on the highest mountain in Israel—oracle of the Lord GOD—there the whole house of Israel shall worship me; there in the land I will accept them all, there I will claim your tributes, the best of your offerings, from all your holy things.<sup>t</sup> <sup>41</sup>As a sweet-smelling oblation I will accept you, when I bring you from among the nations and gather you out of the lands over which you were scattered; and through you I will manifest my holiness in the sight of the nations.<sup>u</sup> <sup>42</sup>Thus you shall know that I am the LORD, when I bring you back to the soil of Israel, the land I swore to give your ancestors. <sup>43</sup>There you shall remember your ways, all the deeds by which you defiled yourselves; and you shall loathe yourselves because of all the evil you did.<sup>v</sup> <sup>44</sup>And you shall know that I am the LORD when I deal with you thus, for the sake of my name, not according to your evil ways and wanton deeds, house of Israel—oracle of the Lord God.<sup>w</sup>

The Sword of the Lord. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2*</sup> Son of man, turn your face to the south: preach against the south, prophesy against the forest land in the south. <sup>3</sup>Say to the forest in the south: Hear the word of the LORD! Thus says the Lord GOD: See! I am kindling a fire in you that shall devour every green tree as well as every dry tree. The blazing flame shall not be quenched so that from south to north every face shall be scorched by it. <sup>4</sup>All flesh shall see that I, the LORD, have kindled it; it shall not be quenched.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>5</sup>But I said, “Ah! Lord GOD, they are saying about me, ‘Is not this the one who is forever spinning parables?’ ” <sup>6</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>7</sup>Son of man, turn your face toward Jerusalem: preach against its sanctuary, prophesy against the land of Israel.<sup>y</sup> <sup>8</sup>Say to the land of Israel: Thus says the LORD: See! I am coming against you; I will draw my sword from its scabbard and cut off from you the righteous and the wicked.* <sup>9</sup>Thus my sword shall come out from its scabbard against all flesh from south to north <sup>10</sup>and all flesh shall know that I, the LORD, have drawn my sword from its scabbard. It cannot return again.<sup>z</sup>

Act Symbolic of the City’s Fall. <sup>11</sup>As for you, son of man, groan! with shattered loins and bitter grief, groan in their sight. <sup>12</sup>When they ask you, “Why are you groaning?” you shall say: Because of what I heard!* When it comes every heart shall melt, every hand fall helpless; every spirit will grow faint, and every knee run with water. See, it is coming, it is here!—oracle of the Lord GOD.

Song of the Sword. <sup>13</sup>The word of the LORD came to me:<sup>a</sup> <sup>14</sup>Son of man, prophesy! say: Thus says the LORD:

A sword, a sword has been sharpened,
a sword, a sword has been burnished:<sup>b</sup> <sup>15</sup>Sharpened to make a slaughter, burnished to flash lightning!
Why should I stop now?
You have rejected the rod and every
judgment!

<sup>16</sup>I have given it over to the burnisher
that he might hold it in his hand,
A sword sharpened and burnished
to be put in the hands of an executioner.

<sup>17</sup>Cry out and howl, son of man,
for it is destined for my people,
For all the princes of Israel,
victims of the sword with my people.

Therefore, slap your thigh,*

<sup>18</sup>for it is tested, and why not?
Since you rejected my staff,
should it not happen?—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

<sup>19</sup>As for you, son of man, prophesy,
and clap your hands!
Let the sword strike twice, a third time.
It is a sword of slaughter,
A sword for slaughtering,
whirling around them all,

<sup>20</sup>That every heart may tremble;
for many will be made to stumble.
At all their gates
I have stationed the sword for slaughter,
Made it flash lightning,
drawn for slaughter.

<sup>21</sup>Slash to the right!
turn to the left,
Wherever your edge is directed!<sup>C</sup>

<sup>22</sup>Then I, too, shall clap my hands,* and spend my fury.
I, the LORD, have spoken.

Nebuchadnezzar at the Crossroads. <sup>23</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>24</sup>Son of man, make for yourself two roads over which the sword of the king of Babylon can come. Both roads shall start out from the same land. Then put a signpost at the head of each road <sup>25</sup>so the sword can come to Rabbah of the Ammonites or to Judah and its fortress, Jerusalem. <sup>26</sup>For the king of Babylon is standing at the fork of the two roads to read the omens:* he shakes out the arrows, inquires of the teraphim, inspects the liver.<sup>d</sup> <sup>27</sup>Into his right hand has fallen the lot marked “Jerusalem”:* to order the slaughter, to raise the battle cry, to set the battering rams against the gates, to throw up a ramp, to build siege works. <sup>28</sup>In the eyes of those bound by oath this seems like a false omen; yet the lot taken in hand exposes the wickedness for which they, still bound by oath, will be taken in hand.

<sup>29</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: Because your guilt has been exposed, your crimes laid bare, your sinfulness revealed in all your deeds—because you have been exposed, you shall be taken in hand.<sup>e</sup> <sup>30</sup>And as for you, depraved and wicked prince of Israel, a day is coming to end your life of crime.<sup>f</sup> <sup>31</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: Off with the turban and away with the crown! Nothing shall be as it was! Exalt the lowly and bring the exalted low! <sup>32</sup>A ruin, a ruin, a ruin, I shall make it! Nothing will be the same until the one comes to whom I have given it for judgment.<sup>g</sup>

To the Ammonites. * <sup>33</sup>As for you, son of man, prophesy: Thus says the Lord GOD to the Ammonites and their insults:

O sword, sword drawn for slaughter, burnished to consume, to flash
lightning!

<sup>34</sup>Your false visions and lying omens, Set you over the necks of the slain,
the wicked whose day had come—
an end to their life of crime.

<sup>35</sup>Return to your scabbard!
In the place you were created,
In the land of your origin,
I will judge you.

<sup>36</sup>I will pour out my anger upon you,
breathing my fiery wrath against you;
I will hand you over to ravagers,
artisans of destruction!

<sup>37</sup>You shall be fuel for the fire, your blood shall flow throughout the
land;
You shall not be remembered,
for I, the LORD, have spoken.

Crimes of Jerusalem. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>You, * son of man, will you judge? will you judge the city of bloodshed? Then make known all its abominations, <sup>3</sup>and say: Thus says the Lord GOD: O city that sheds blood within itself so that its time has come, that has made idols for its own defilement: <sup>4</sup>By the blood you shed you have become guilty, and by the idols you made you have become defiled. You have brought on your day, you have come to the end of your years. Therefore I make you an object of scorn for the nations and a laughingstock for all lands. <sup>h</sup> <sup>5</sup>Those near and those far off will mock you: “Defiled of Name! Queen of Tumult!” <sup>6</sup>See! the princes of Israel within you use their power to shed blood. * <sup>7</sup>Within you, father and mother are dishonored; they extort the resident alien in your midst; within you, they oppress orphans and widows. <sup>i</sup> <sup>8</sup>What I consider holy you have rejected, and my sabbaths you have desecrated. <sup>9</sup>* In you are those who slander to cause bloodshed; within you are those who feast on the mountains; in your midst are those whose actions are depraved. <sup>j</sup> <sup>10</sup>In you are those who uncover the nakedness of their fathers; in you those who coerce women to intercourse during their period. <sup>k</sup> <sup>11</sup> There are those in you who do abominable things with their neighbors’ wives, men who defile their daughters-in-law by incest, men who coerce their sisters to intercourse, the daughters of their own fathers. <sup>12</sup>There are those in you who take bribes to shed blood. You exact interest and usury; you extort profit from your neighbor by violence. But me you have forgotten—oracle of the Lord GOD. <sup>m</sup>

<sup>13</sup>See, I am clapping my hands because of the profits you extorted and the blood shed in your midst. <sup>14</sup>Will your heart remain firm, will your hands be strong, in the days when I deal with you? I am the LORD; I have spoken, and I will act! <sup>15</sup>I will disperse you among the nations and scatter you over other lands, so that I may purge your filth. <sup>16</sup>In you I will allow myself to be desecrated in the eyes of the nations; thus you shall know that I am the LORD.

<sup>17</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>18</sup>* Son of man, the house of Israel has become dross to me. All of them are copper, tin, iron, and lead within a furnace; they have become the dross from silver.<sup>n 19</sup> Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because all of you have become dross, See! I am gathering you within Jerusalem. <sup>20</sup>Just as silver, copper, iron, lead, and tin are gathered within a furnace to be blasted with fire to smelt it, so I will gather you together in my furious wrath, put you in, and smelt you.<sup>o 21</sup> When I have assembled you, I will blast you with the fire of my anger and smelt you with it. <sup>22</sup>Just as silver is smelted in a furnace, so you shall be smelted in it. Thus you shall know that I, the LORD, have poured out my fury on you.

CHAPTER 23

See RG 368–71

The Two Sisters.<sup>1t</sup> The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, there were two women, daughters of the same mother.<sup>u</sup> <sup>3</sup>Even as young girls, they were prostitutes, serving as prostitutes in Egypt. There the Egyptians fondled their breasts and caressed their virgin nipples.<sup>v</sup> <sup>4</sup>Oholah was the name of the elder, and the name of her sister was Oholibah.* They became mine and gave birth to sons and daughters.<sup>w</sup> As for their names: Samaria was Oholah and Jerusalem, Oholibah. <sup>5x</sup> Oholah became a prostitute while married to me and lusted after her lovers, the Assyrians: warriors <sup>6</sup>dressed in purple, governors and officers, all of them handsome young soldiers, mounted on horses. <sup>7</sup>She gave herself as a prostitute to them, to all the Assyrian elite; with all those for whom she lusted, she also defiled herself with their idols. <sup>8</sup>She did not abandon the prostitution she had begun with the Egyptians, who had lain with her when she was young, fondling her virgin breasts and pouring out their lust upon her.<sup>y</sup> <sup>9</sup>Therefore I handed her over to her lovers, to the Assyrians for whom she lusted. <sup>10z</sup> They exposed her nakedness; her sons and daughters they took away, and her they killed with the sword. She became a byword for women because of the sentence carried out against her.

prostitution, recalling the days of her youth when she had served as a prostitute in the land of Egypt. <sup>20</sup>She lusted for the lechers of Egypt, whose members are like those of donkeys, whose thrusts are like those of stallions.

<sup>21</sup>You reverted to the depravity of your youth, when Egyptians fondled your breasts, caressing your young nipples. <sup>22</sup>Therefore, Oholibah, thus says the Lord GOD: I will now stir up your lovers against you, those from whom you recoiled, and I will bring them against you from every side: <sup>23</sup>the men of Babylon and all of Chaldea, Pekod, Shoa and Koa, * along with all the Assyrians, handsome young soldiers, all of them governors and officers, charioteers and warriors, all of them horsemen. <sup>24</sup>They shall invade you with armor, chariots and wagons, a horde of peoples; they will array against you on every side bucklers and shields and helmets. I will give them the right of judgment, and they will judge you according to their standards. <sup>d</sup> <sup>25</sup>I will direct my jealousy against you, so that they deal with you in fury, cutting off your nose and ears; what is left of you shall fall by the sword. They shall take away your sons and daughters, and what is left of you shall be devoured by fire. <sup>26</sup>They shall strip off your clothes and seize your splendid jewelry. <sup>27</sup>I will put an end to your depravity and to your prostitution from the land of Egypt; you shall no longer look to them, nor even remember Egypt again.

<sup>28</sup>For thus says the Lord GOD: I am now handing you over to those whom you hate, to those from whom you recoil. <sup>29</sup>They shall treat you with hatred, seizing all that you worked for and leaving you stark naked, so that your indecent nakedness is exposed. <sup>e</sup> Your depravity and prostitution <sup>30</sup>brought these things upon you because you served as a prostitute for the nations, defiling yourself with their idols. <sup>f</sup>

<sup>32</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: <sup>h</sup>

The cup of your sister you shall drink,
deep and wide;
It brings ridicule and mockery,
it holds so much;

<sup>33</sup>You will be filled with drunkenness and
grief—

A cup of horror and devastation,
the cup of your sister Samaria;
<sup>34</sup>You shall drink it dry,
its very sherds you will gnaw;
And you shall tear out your breasts;
for I have spoken—oracle of the Lord
GOD.

<sup>35</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: You have forgotten me and cast me behind your back; now suffer for your depravity and prostitution.

<sup>36*</sup> Then the LORD said to me: Son of man, would you judge Oholah and Oholibah? Then make known to them their abominations.<sup>i</sup> <sup>37</sup>For they committed adultery, and blood covers their hands. They committed adultery with their idols; even the children they bore for me they burnt as food for them. <sup>38</sup>And they also did this to me: on that day, they defiled my sanctuary and desecrated my sabbaths. <sup>39</sup>On the very day they slaughtered their children for their idols, they entered my sanctuary to desecrate it. Thus they acted within my house!<sup>j</sup> <sup>40</sup>Moreover, they sent for men who had to come from afar; when a messenger was sent to them, they came. On their account you bathed, painted your eyes, and put on jewelry.<sup>k</sup> <sup>41</sup>You sat on a magnificent couch, set before it a table, on which to lay my incense and oil. <sup>42</sup>The cries of a mob! The shouts of men coming in from the wilderness! They put bracelets on the women's arms and splendid crowns on their heads. <sup>43</sup>I said: "That worn-out one still has adulteries in her! Now they engage her as a prostitute and she ... <sup>44</sup>And indeed they did come in to her as men come in to a prostitute. Thus they came to Oholah and Oholibah, the depraved women. <sup>45</sup>The righteous shall certainly punish them with sentences given to adulterers and murderers, for they committed adultery, and blood is on their hands."<sup>l</sup>

<sup>46</sup>Indeed, thus says the Lord GOD: Raise up an army against them and hand them over to terror and plunder. <sup>47</sup>The army will stone them and hack them to pieces with their swords. They will kill their sons and daughters and set fire to their houses. <sup>48</sup>Thus I will put an end to depravity in the land, and all women will be warned not to imitate your depravity. <sup>49</sup>They shall inflict on you the penalty of your depravity, and you shall pay for your sins of idolatry. Then you shall know that I am the Lord GOD.<sup>m</sup>

CHAPTER 24

Allegory of the Pot. * <sup>1</sup>On the tenth day of the tenth month, in the ninth year, * the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>n</sup> <sup>2</sup>Son of man, write down today's date this very day, for on this very day the king of Babylon lays siege to Jerusalem. <sup>3o</sup> Propose this parable to the rebellious house and say to them: Thus says the Lord GOD:

Put the pot on, put it on!

Pour in some water;

<sup>4</sup>Add to it pieces of meat,

all choice pieces;

With thigh and shoulder,

with choice cuts fill it.

<sup>5</sup>Choose the pick of the flock,

then pile logs beneath it;

Bring it to a boil,

cook all the pieces in it. <sup>p</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD:

Woe to the city full of blood! <sup>q</sup>

A pot containing filth,

whose filth cannot be removed!

Take out its pieces one by one,

for no lot has fallen on their behalf.

<sup>7</sup>For her blood is still in her midst;

on a bare rock she left it;

She did not pour it on the ground to be covered with dirt. *

<sup>8</sup>To arouse wrath, to exact vengeance,

I have left her blood on bare rock

not to be covered.

<sup>9</sup>Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD:

Woe to the city full of blood!

I will make the pyre great!

<sup>10</sup>Pile on the wood, kindle the fire.

Cook the meat, stir the spicy mixture,

char the bones!

<sup>11</sup>Then set it empty on the coals,

to heat up until its copper glows,
So its impurities melt,
its filth disappears.

<sup>12*</sup>The toil is exhausting,
but the great filth will not come
out—
Filth, even with fire.

<sup>13</sup>Even in defiling yourself with depravity
I would still have cleansed you,
but you would not have your impurity cleansed.
You will not be cleansed now until I wreak my fury on you.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>14</sup>I, the LORD, have spoken;
it will happen!
I will do it and not hold back!
I will not have pity or relent.
By your conduct and deeds you shall be judged—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

Ezekiel as a Sign for the Exiles.<sup>15</sup>The word of the LORD came to me:
<sup>16</sup>Son of man, with a sudden blow I am taking away from you the delight of your eyes, but do not mourn or weep or shed any tears.<sup>s</sup> <sup>17</sup>Groan, moan for the dead, but make no public lament; bind on your turban, put your sandals on your feet, but do not cover your beard or eat the bread of mourners.* <sup>18</sup>I spoke to the people in the morning. In the evening my wife died. The next morning I did as I had been commanded.<sup>t</sup> <sup>19</sup>Then the people asked me, “Will you not tell us what all these things you are doing mean for us?” <sup>20</sup>I said to them, The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>21</sup>Say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord GOD: I will now desecrate my sanctuary, the pride of your strength, the delight of your eyes, the concern of your soul.
The sons and daughters you left behind shall fall by the sword.<sup>u</sup> <sup>22*</sup> Then you shall do as I have done, not covering your beards nor eating the bread of mourning. <sup>23v</sup> Your turbans shall remain on your heads, your sandals on your feet. You shall not mourn or weep, but you shall waste away because of your sins and groan to one another. <sup>24</sup>Ezekiel shall be a sign for you:

everything he did, you shall do. When it happens, you shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

End of Ezekiel's Muteness.<sup>25w</sup> As for you, son of man, truly, on the very day I take away from them their strength, their glorious joy, the delight of their eyes, the desire of their soul, the pride of their hearts, their sons and daughters,<sup>26</sup> on that day a survivor will come to you so that you may hear it with your own ears.<sup>x</sup> <sup>27</sup> On that day, with the survivor, your mouth shall be opened; you shall speak and be mute* no longer. You shall be a sign to them, and they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER 25*

See RG 371

Against Ammon. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, turn toward the Ammonites and prophesy against them.<sup>y</sup> <sup>3</sup>Say to the Ammonites: Hear the word of the LORD! Thus says the Lord GOD: Because you jeered at my sanctuary when it was desecrated, at the land of Israel when it was destroyed, and at the house of Judah when they went into exile, <sup>4</sup>therefore I am giving you to people from the east* as a possession. They shall set up their encampments among you and pitch their tents in your midst; they shall eat your produce and drink your milk.<sup>z</sup> <sup>5</sup>And I will turn Rabbah into a pasture for camels and all of Ammon into a grazing place for flocks. Then you shall know that I am the LORD.

<sup>6</sup>For thus says the Lord GOD: Because you rejoiced over the land of Israel with scorn in your heart, clapping your hands and stamping your feet, <sup>7</sup>therefore, see, I am stretching out my hand against you and giving you up as plunder to the nations. I will cut you off from the peoples and wipe you out of the lands. I will destroy you, and you shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>a</sup>

Against Moab.<sup>8b</sup> Thus says the Lord GOD: Because Moab said, “See! the house of Judah is like all the other nations,” <sup>9</sup>therefore, I am exposing the whole flank of Moab* with its cities, the jewels of its land: Beth-jesimoth, Baalmeon, and Kiriathaim. <sup>10</sup>I will hand it over, along with the Ammonites, to the people from the east that it may not be remembered among the nations. <sup>11</sup>I will execute judgment upon Moab that they may know that I am the LORD.<sup>c</sup>

Against Edom.<sup>12d</sup> Thus says the Lord GOD: Because Edom took vengeance on the house of Judah and incurred terrible guilt by taking vengeance on them, <sup>13</sup>therefore thus says the Lord GOD: I will stretch out my hand against Edom and cut off from it human being and beast alike. I will turn it into ruins from Teman to Dedan; they shall fall by the sword.<sup>e</sup> <sup>14</sup>I will put my vengeance against Edom into the hands of my people Israel; they will deal with Edom in accord with my furious anger. Thus they shall know my vengeance!—oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>f</sup>

Against the Philistines. <sup>15</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: Because the Philistines acted vengefully and exacted vengeance with intentional malice, destroying with undying hostility,<sup>9</sup> <sup>16</sup>therefore thus says the Lord GOD: See! I am stretching out my hand against the Philistines, and I will cut off the Cherethites* and wipe out the remnant on the seacoast. <sup>17</sup>Thus I will execute great acts of vengeance on them, punishing them furiously. Then they shall know that I am the LORD, when I wreak my vengeance on them.

CHAPTER 26

See RG 371

Against the City of Tyre.<sup>1*</sup> On the first day of the eleventh month of the eleventh year, the word of the LORD came to me:

<sup>2*</sup> Son of man, because Tyre said of Jerusalem:
“Aha! The gateway of the peoples is smashed!
It has been turned over to me;
I will be enriched by its ruin!”<sup>h</sup>

<sup>3</sup> therefore thus says the Lord GOD:
See! I am coming against you, Tyre;
I will churn up against you many
nations,
just as the sea churns up its waves.

<sup>4</sup> They will destroy the walls of Tyre
and tear down its towers;
I will scrape off its debris and leave it a bare rock.*

<sup>5</sup> It will become a place for drying nets
in the midst of the sea.
For I have spoken—oracle of the Lord
GOD:
she will become plunder for the
nations.

<sup>6</sup> Her daughter cities* on the mainland will be slaughtered by the sword;
then they shall know that I am the
LORD.

<sup>7</sup> Indeed thus says the Lord GOD:
I am bringing up against Tyre
from the north, Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, king of kings,
with horses and chariots, with cavalry,
and a mighty horde of troops.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Your daughter cities on the mainland he shall slay with the sword.
He shall build a siege wall around you,

throw up a ramp against you,
and raise his shields about you.

<sup>9</sup>He shall pound your walls with batteringrams and break down your towers with his axes.

<sup>10</sup>From the surging of his horses
he will cover you with dust;
from the noise of warhorses,
wheels and chariots.

Your walls will shake
when he enters your gates,
even as one enters a city that is breached.

<sup>11</sup>With the hooves of his horses
he will trample all your streets;
Your people he will slay by the sword;
your mighty pillars will collapse.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>12</sup>They shall plunder your wealth
and pillage your goods;
They will tear down your walls
and demolish your splendid houses.
Your stones, timbers, and debris
they will cast into the sea.

<sup>13</sup>I will bring an end to the noise of your
songs;
the music of your lyres will be heard
no more.

<sup>14</sup>I will turn you into bare rock,
you will become a place for drying nets.

You shall never be rebuilt,
for I the LORD have spoken—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

<sup>15</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD to Tyre:
At the sound of your downfall,
at the groaning of the wounded,
When victims are slain within you,
will the islands not quake?

<sup>16</sup>All the princes of the sea*
will step down from their thrones, Lay aside their robes,
and strip off their embroidered

garments.
Clothed in mourning,
they will sit on the ground
And tremble, horror-struck and appalled at you.<sup>k</sup> 17They will raise lament* over you
and say to you:
How you have perished,
gone from the seas,
Renowned City!
Once she was mighty on the sea,
she and her inhabitants,
Those who spread their terror
to all who dwelt nearby.<sup>l</sup> 18On this, the day of your fall,
the islands quake!
The islands in the sea
are terrified at your passing.
19Indeed thus says the Lord GOD:
When I make you a ruined city
like cities no longer inhabited,
When I churn up the deep
and its mighty waters cover you, 20Then I will thrust you down with those who go down to the pit,*
to those of the bygone age;
I will make you dwell in the netherworld,
in the everlasting ruins,
with those who have gone down to the
pit,
So you will never return or have a place in the land of the living.<sup>m</sup> 21I will make you a horror,
and you shall be no more;
You shall be sought for,
but never found again—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

The Ship Tyre. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>You, son of man, raise a lament over Tyre, <sup>3</sup>and say to Tyre, who sits at the entrance to the sea, trader to peoples on many coastlands, Thus says the Lord God:

Tyre, you said, "I am a ship, perfect in beauty";<sup>n</sup>

<sup>4</sup>In the heart of the sea was your territory;
your builders perfected your beauty.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>5</sup>With juniper wood from Senir*
they built all your decks;
A cedar from Lebanon they took
to make you a mast.

<sup>6</sup>With oaks of Bashan*
they fashioned your oars,
Your bridge, of ivory-inlaid cypress wood
from the coasts of Kittim.

<sup>7</sup>Fine embroidered linen from Egypt became your sail;
Your awnings were made of purple and scarlet
from the coasts of Elishah.<sup>*p</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Inhabitants of Sidon* and Arvad
were your oarsmen;
Your own sages, Tyre, were on board,
serving as your sailors.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>9</sup>The elders and sages of Gebal were with you to caulk your seams.
Every ship and sailor on the sea
came to you to carry on trade.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Persia and Lud and Put were warriors in your army; Shield and helmet they hung on you to enhance your splendor.

<sup>11</sup>The men of Arvad and Helech* were on your walls all around
And Gamadites on your towers;

they hung their shields around your
walls,
they made your beauty perfect.

<sup>12</sup>Tarshish traded with you,
so great was your wealth,
Exchanging for your wares
silver, iron, tin, and lead.

<sup>13</sup>Javan, Tubal, and Meshech
also traded with you,
Exchanging slaves and bronze vessels
for your merchandise.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Horses, steeds, and mules from Beth-togarmah
were exchanged for your wares.

<sup>15</sup>Men of Rhodes trafficked with you;
many coastlands were your agents;
Ivory tusks and ebony wood
they brought back as your payment.

<sup>16</sup>Edom traded with you for your many wares:
garnets, purple dye, embroidered cloth,
Fine linen, coral, and rubies
they gave you as merchandise.

<sup>17</sup>Judah and the land of Israel trafficked with you:
Minnith wheat, grain,* honey, oil, and balm<sup>t</sup>
they gave you as merchandise.

<sup>18</sup>Damascus traded with you for your many
wares,
so great was your wealth,
exchanging Helbon wine and Zahar wool.

<sup>19</sup>Javan exchanged wrought iron, cassia, and aromatic cane
from Uzal for your wares.

<sup>20</sup>Dedan traded with you for riding gear.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Arabia and the sheikhs of Kedar were your agents,
dealing in lambs, rams, and goats.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>22</sup>The merchants of Sheba and Raamah
also traded with you,
exchanging for your wares the very best spices,
all kinds of precious stones, and gold.

<sup>23</sup>Haran, Canneh, and Eden, the merchants of Sheba, Asshur, and Chilmad,

<sup>24</sup>Traded with you, marketing rich garments,
purple cloth, embroidered fabric,
varicolored carpets, and braided cords.

<sup>25</sup>The ships of Tarshish sailed for you with your goods;
You were full and heavily laden
in the heart of the sea.

<sup>26</sup>Out into deep waters
your oarsmen brought you;
The east wind shattered you in the heart of the sea.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>27</sup>Your wealth, your goods, your wares,
your sailors, your crew,
The caulkers of your seams,
those who traded for your goods,
All the warriors with you,
the whole crowd with you Sank into the heart of the sea
on the day of your downfall.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>28</sup>At the sound of your sailors' shouts
the waves shudder,<sup>y</sup>

<sup>29</sup>Down from their ships
come all who ply the oars;
Sailors, all the seafaring crew,
stand on the shore.

<sup>30</sup>They raise their voices over you and shout their bitter cries;
They pour dust on their heads and cover themselves with ashes.

<sup>31</sup>For you they shave their heads bald
and put on sackcloth;
For you they weep bitterly,
in anguished lament.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>32</sup>They raise a lament for you;
they wail over you:
“Who was ever destroyed like Tyre in the midst of the sea?”<sup>a</sup>

<sup>33</sup>By exporting your goods by sea
you satisfied many peoples,
With your great wealth and merchandise
you enriched the kings of the earth.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>34</sup>Now you are wrecked in the sea,
in the watery depths;
Your wares and all your crew
have fallen down with you.

<sup>35</sup>All who dwell on the coastlands are aghast over you;
Their kings are terrified,
their faces distorted.

<sup>36</sup>The traders among the peoples
now hiss at you;
You have become a horror,
you shall be no more.

The Prince of Tyre. <sup>1*</sup> The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, say to the prince of Tyre: Thus says the Lord GOD:

Because you are haughty of heart,
you say, “I am a god!

I sit on a god’s throne
in the heart of the sea!”

But you are a man, not a god;
yet you pretend
you are a god at heart!

<sup>3</sup>Oh yes, you are wiser than Daniel,* nothing secret is too obscure for you!<sup>c</sup>

<sup>4</sup>By your wisdom and intelligence
you made yourself rich, filling your treasuries with gold and silver.

<sup>5</sup>Through your great wisdom in trading you heaped up riches for yourself—your heart is haughty because of your riches.

<sup>6</sup> Therefore thus says the Lord GOD:
Because you pretend you are a god at
heart,

<sup>7</sup>Therefore, I will bring against you strangers, the most bloodthirsty of
nations.

They shall draw their swords
against your splendid wisdom,
and violate your radiance.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>8</sup>They shall thrust you down into the pit:
you shall die a violent death
in the heart of the sea.

<sup>9</sup>Then, face to face with your killers,
will you still say, “I am a god”?
No, you are a man, not a god,
handed over to those who slay you.

<sup>10</sup>You shall die the death of the uncircumcised

handed over to strangers,
for I have spoken—oracle of the Lord
GOD.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>11</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>12</sup>Son of man, raise a lament over the king of Tyre, and say to him: Thus says the Lord GOD:

* You were a seal of perfection, full of wisdom, perfect in beauty.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>13</sup>In Eden, the garden of God, you lived; precious stones of every kind were your covering:

Carnelian, topaz, and beryl, chrysolite, onyx, and jasper,
sapphire, garnet, and emerald.

Their mounts and settings
were wrought in gold, fashioned for you the day you were created.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>14</sup>With a cherub I placed you;
I put you on the holy mountain of God,*
where you walked among fiery stones.

<sup>15</sup>Blameless were you in your ways
from the day you were created,
Until evil was found in you.

<sup>16</sup>Your commerce was full of lawlessness, and you sinned.

Therefore I banished you from the mountain of God;
the cherub drove you out
from among the fiery stones.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Your heart had grown haughty
because of your beauty;
You corrupted your wisdom
because of your splendor.

I cast you to the ground,
I made you a spectacle
in the sight of kings.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Because of the enormity of your guilt,

and the perversity of your trade,
you defiled your sanctuary.
I brought fire out of you;
it devoured you;
I made you ashes on the ground
in the eyes of all who see you.<sup>j</sup> <sup>19</sup>All the nations who knew you are appalled on account of you;
You have become a horror,
never to be again.<sup>k</sup>

Against Sidon. <sup>20</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>21</sup>Son of man, turn your face toward Sidon and prophesy against it. <sup>22</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD:

Watch out! I am against you, Sidon;
I will win glory for myself in your
midst.
They shall know that I am the LORD,
when I deliver judgment upon it and manifest my holiness in it.
<sup>23</sup>I will send disease into it;
blood will fill its streets,
Within it shall fall
those slain by the sword
raised against it on every side.
Then they shall know that I am the LORD.
<sup>24</sup>No longer will there be a thorn that tears or a brier that scratches for the house
of Israel
From the surrounding neighbors
who despise them;
thus they shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: When I gather the house of Israel from the peoples among whom they are scattered, and I manifest my holiness through them in the sight of the nations, then they shall live on the land I gave my servant Jacob.<sup>m</sup><sup>26</sup>They shall dwell on it securely, building houses and planting vineyards. They shall dwell securely while I execute judgment on all their neighbors who treated them with contempt; then they shall know that I, the LORD, am their God.<sup>n</sup>

Egypt the Crocodile. <sup>1</sup>In the tenth year, on the twelfth day of the tenth month, * the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, turn your face toward Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and prophesy against him and against all Egypt. * <sup>o</sup> <sup>3</sup>Say to him: Thus says the Lord GOD:

Pay attention! I am against you,
Pharaoh, king of Egypt,
Great dragon * crouching
in the midst of the Nile,
Who says, "The Nile belongs to me;
I made it myself!" <sup>P</sup> <sup>4</sup>* I will put hooks in your jaws and make all the fish of your Nile
Cling to your scales;
I will drag you up from your Nile,
With all the fish of your Nile clinging to your scales. <sup>q</sup> <sup>5</sup>I will hurl you into the wilderness,
you and all the fish of your Nile.
You will fall into an open field,
you will not be picked up or gathered
together.
To the beasts of the earth
and the birds of the sky
I give you as food. <sup>r</sup> <sup>6</sup><sup>s</sup> Then all the inhabitants of Egypt will know that I am the LORD.
Because you were a staff of reeds *
for the house of Israel:
<sup>7</sup>When they took hold of you, you would splinter,
throwing shoulders out of joint.
When they leaned on you, you would break,
pitching them down headlong.
<sup>8</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD:
Look! I am bringing the sword against

you
 to cut off from you people and animals.
<sup>9</sup>The land of Egypt shall become a desolate waste;
 then they shall know that I am the
 LORD.
 Because you said, "The Nile belongs
 to me;
 I made it!"
<sup>10</sup>Beware! I am against you and against your Nile.
 I will turn the land of Egypt into ruins,
 into a dry, desolate waste,
 From Migdol to Syene,*
 up to the border of Ethiopia.<sup>t</sup> <sup>11</sup>No foot shall pass through it,
 no human being or beast cross it;
 it will remain uninhabited for forty years.
<sup>12</sup>I will make the land of Egypt the most desolate
 among desolate lands;
 Its cities, the most deserted
 among deserted cities for forty years;
 I will scatter the Egyptians among the
 nations
 and disperse them throughout other lands.<sup>u</sup>
<sup>13</sup>But thus says the Lord GOD:
 At the end of forty years
 I will gather the Egyptians from among the peoples
 where they are scattered;
<sup>14</sup>I will restore Egypt's fortunes, bringing them back to the land of Pathros,*
 the land of their origin.
 But there it will be a lowly kingdom, <sup>15</sup>lower than any other kingdom, no longer able to set itself above the
 nations.
 I will make them few in number,

so they cannot rule other nations.

<sup>16</sup>No longer shall they be security
for the house of Israel,
But a reminder of its iniquity
in turning away to follow them.
Then they shall know that I am the Lord
GOD.<sup>v</sup>

Wages for Nebuchadnezzar. <sup>17</sup>In the twenty-seventh year on the first day of the first month,* the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>18</sup>Son of man, Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, has made his army wage a hard campaign against Tyre;* their heads grew bald, their shoulders rubbed raw, yet neither he nor his army received compensation from Tyre for all the effort they expended against it.<sup>w</sup> <sup>19</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD:<sup>x</sup> See! I am giving to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, the land of Egypt! He will carry off its wealth, plundering and pillaging whatever he can find to provide pay for his army. <sup>20</sup>As payment for his toil I give him the land of Egypt—oracle of the Lord GOD.

<sup>21</sup>On that day I will make a horn* sprout for the house of Israel, and I will let you again open your mouth in their midst; then they shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>y</sup>

The Day of the Lord Against Egypt. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me:
<sup>2</sup>Son of man, prophesy and say: Thus says the Lord GOD:

Wail: “Alas the day!”

<sup>3</sup>Yes, a day approaches,
a day of the Lord approaches:

A day of dark cloud,
a time appointed for the nations.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>4</sup>A sword will come against Egypt,
there will be anguish in Ethiopia,
When the slain fall in Egypt
when its hordes are seized,
its foundations razed.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Ethiopia, Put, and Lud,
all the mixed rabble* and Kub,
and the people of allied lands shall fall by the sword with them.

<sup>6</sup>Thus says the LORD:
The pillars of Egypt shall fall,
and its proud strength sink;
From Migdol to Syene,
its people will fall by the sword—
oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>7</sup>It shall be the most desolate
among desolate lands,
Its cities the most ruined
among ruined cities.

<sup>8</sup>They shall know that I am the LORD,
when I set fire to Egypt,
and all its allies are shattered.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>9</sup>On that day, messengers from me will go forth in ships
to terrorize confident Ethiopia.
Anguish will be among them on Egypt’s day—it is certainly coming!*

- <sup>10</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD:
I will put an end to Egypt's hordes
by the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, king
of Babylon:
- <sup>11</sup>He and his army with him,
the most ruthless of nations,
will be brought in to devastate the land.
They will draw their swords against Egypt
and fill the land with the slain.
- <sup>12</sup>Then I will dry up the streams of the Nile,
and sell the land into evil hands;
By the hand of foreigners I will devastate
the land and everything in it.
I, the LORD, have spoken.<sup>d</sup>
- <sup>13*</sup> Thus says the Lord GOD:
I will destroy idols,
and put an end to images in Memphis.
There will never again be a prince
over the land of Egypt.
Instead, I will spread fear
throughout the land of Egypt.<sup>e</sup>
- <sup>14</sup>I will devastate Pathros,
set fire to Zoan,
and execute judgment against Thebes.<sup>f</sup>
- <sup>15</sup>I will pour out my wrath on Pelusium,
the fortress of Egypt,
and cut off the troops of Thebes.
- <sup>16</sup>I will set fire to Egypt;
Pelusium will writhe in anguish,
Thebes will be breached,
and Memphis besieged in daylight.
- <sup>17</sup>The warriors of On and Pi-beseth
will fall by the sword,
the cities taken captive.
- <sup>18</sup>In Tahpanhes, the day will turn dark when I break the scepter of Egypt
there
and put an end to its proud strength.
Dark clouds will cover it,
and its women will go into captivity.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>19</sup>I will execute judgment against Egypt
that they may know that I am the LORD.

Pharaoh's Broken Arm. <sup>20</sup>On the seventh day of the first month in the eleventh year,* the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>21</sup>* Son of man, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh, king of Egypt. See! It has not been immobilized for healing, nor set with a splint to make it strong enough to grasp a sword.<sup>h</sup> <sup>22</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: See! I am coming against Pharaoh, king of Egypt. I will break both his arms, the strong one and the broken one, making the sword fall from his hand. <sup>23</sup>I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and disperse them throughout other lands. <sup>24</sup>I will, however, strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon and put my sword in his hand so he can bring it against Egypt for plunder and pillage.<sup>i</sup> <sup>25</sup>When I strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh collapse, they shall know that I am the LORD, because I put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon to wield against the land of Egypt. <sup>26</sup>When I scatter the Egyptians among the nations and disperse them throughout other lands, they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER 31

See RG 371

Allegory of the Cedar. <sup>1</sup>On the first day of the third month in the eleventh year,* the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, say to Pharaoh, the king of Egypt, and to his hordes: In your greatness, whom do you resemble?

<sup>3</sup>Assyria! It is Assyria!*

A cedar of Lebanon—

Beautiful branches,

thick shade,

Towering heights,

its crown in the clouds!<sup>j</sup>

<sup>4</sup>The waters made it grow,

the deep made it tall,

Letting its currents flow

around the place it was planted,

Then sending its channels

to all the other trees of the field.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Thereupon it towered in height

above all the trees in the field;

Its branches were numerous and its boughs long,

Because of the many waters

sent to its shoots.

<sup>6</sup>In its branches nested

all the birds of the sky;

Under its boughs all the wild animals

gave birth,

And in its shade* dwelt

all the mighty nations.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>7</sup>It was magnificent in size

and in the length of its branches,

For its roots reached down to the many waters.

<sup>8</sup>In the garden of God,

no cedars could rival it,

No juniper could equal its branches,

no plane tree match its boughs.

No tree in the garden of God
could match its beauty.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>9</sup>I made it beautiful with abundant foliage,
So that all the trees in Eden were envious of it.*

<sup>10</sup>Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD:
Because it was arrogant about its height,
lifting its crown among the clouds
and exalting itself because of its size,<sup>n</sup>

<sup>11</sup>I handed it over to a ruler of nations
to deal with it according to its evil.
I have cast it off,

<sup>12</sup> and foreigners have cut it down,
The most ruthless nations,
have hurled it on the mountains.

Its boughs fell into every valley and its branches lay broken
in every ravine in the land.

All the peoples of the earth departed from its shade
when it was hurled down.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>13</sup>On its fallen trunk sit all the birds of the sky;
Beside its fallen branches,
are found all the beasts of the field.

<sup>14</sup>This has happened so no well-watered
tree
will gain such lofty height,
or lift its crown to the clouds.

Not one of those fed by water will tower in height over the rest.
For all of them are destined for death,
for the underworld, among mere
mortals,
with those who go down to the pit.

<sup>15</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD:
On the day it went down to Sheol,
I made the deep close up
in mourning for it.
I restrained the currents of the deep,
and held back the many waters.

I darkened Lebanon because of it,
and all the trees of the field
languished because of it.

<sup>16</sup>At the sound of its fall,
I made nations shudder,
When I cast it down to Sheol
with those who go down to the pit.

In the underworld
all the trees of Eden took comfort:
Lebanon's choicest and best,
all that were fed by the waters.<sup>p</sup>

<sup>17</sup>They too will go down to Sheol,
to those slain by the sword,

Its allies* who dwelt
in its shade among the nations.

<sup>18</sup>To whom among the trees of Eden
do you compare in glory and greatness?

You will be brought down with the trees of Eden to the underworld,

And lie among the uncircumcised,
with those slain by the sword.

Such is Pharaoh and all his hordes—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

Lament over Pharaoh. <sup>1</sup>On the first day of the twelfth month in the twelfth year, * the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, utter a lament over Pharaoh, the king of Egypt, and say to him:

You liken yourself to a lion among
nations,
but you are like the monster in the sea!
Thrashing about in your streams,
churning the water with your feet,
polluting the streams. <sup>q</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD:
I will cast my net over you
by assembling many armies,
and I will hoist you up in my mesh.

<sup>4</sup>I will hurl you onto the land,
cast you into an open field.
I will make all the birds of the sky
roost upon you,
The beasts of the whole earth
gorge themselves on you.

<sup>5</sup>I will strew your flesh on the mountains, and fill the valleys with your corpse. <sup>r</sup>

<sup>6</sup>I will drench the land, pouring out your blood on the
mountain;
filling up the ravines with you.

<sup>7</sup>When I extinguish you,
I will cover the heavens
and darken all its stars.
The sun I will cover with clouds;
the moon will not give light. <sup>s</sup>

<sup>8</sup>All the shining lights in the heavens
I will darken over you;
I will spread darkness over your land—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

<sup>9</sup>I will trouble the hearts of many peoples,

When I bring you captive among the nations,
to lands you do not know.

<sup>10</sup>I will fill many nations with horror;
their kings will shudder at you,
when I brandish my sword in their faces.

They will tremble violently fearing for their lives on the day of your fall.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For thus says the Lord GOD:
The sword of the king of Babylon
will come against you.

<sup>12</sup>I will cut down your hordes
with the swords of warriors,
all of them, ruthless nations;
They will lay waste the glory of Egypt,
and all its hordes will be destroyed.<sup>u</sup>

<sup>13</sup>I will wipe out all the livestock from the banks of its many waters;
No human foot will disturb them again,
no animal hoof stir them up.

<sup>14</sup>Then I will make their waters clear and their streams flow like oil—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

<sup>15</sup>When I make Egypt a wasteland
and the land destitute of everything,
When I strike down all its inhabitants
they shall know that I am the LORD.

<sup>16</sup>This is the lamentation
women of all nations will chant;
They will raise it over Egypt;
over all its hordes they will chant it—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

Another Lament over Egypt. <sup>17*</sup> On the fifteenth day of that month in the twelfth year, the word of the LORD came to me:

<sup>18</sup>Son of man, wail over the hordes of Egypt—
you and the women of mighty

nations—

Send them down to the underworld,
with those who go down into the pit.

<sup>19</sup>Whom do you excel in beauty? Go down!
Be laid to rest with the uncircumcised!

<sup>20</sup>Among those slain by the sword they will fall,
for the sword has been appointed!

Seize Egypt and all its hordes.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Out of Sheol the mighty warriors will speak to him and his allies:
Let them descend and lie down among
the uncircumcised,
those slain by the sword!<sup>w</sup>

<sup>22</sup>There is Assyria and all its company, around it are its graves,
all of them slain, fallen by the sword.

<sup>23</sup>The graves are set in the recesses of the pit;
Its company is assembled
around its grave,
All of them slain, fallen by the sword,
those who spread terror in the land of the living.<sup>x</sup>

<sup>24</sup>There is Elam and all its horde
around its grave,
All of them slain, fallen by the sword;
they descended uncircumcised
into the underworld,
Those who spread their terror
in the land of the living.
They bear their disgrace
with those who go down into the pit.

<sup>25</sup>Among the slain is set its bed,
with all its horde around its grave;
All of them uncircumcised,
slain by the sword
Because of the terror they spread
in the land of the living.
They bear their disgrace
with those who go down into the pit.
Among the slain it is set!

26 There is Meshech and Tubal* and all the hordes
surrounding it with their graves.
All of them uncircumcised,
slain by the sword
Because they spread their terror
in the land of the living.<sup>y</sup>

27 They do not rest with the warriors who fell in ancient times,
who went down to Sheol fully armed.
Their swords were placed under their heads
and their shields laid over their bones;
For there was terror of these warriors
in the land of the living.

28 But as for you, among the uncircumcised
you will be broken and laid to rest
with those slain by the sword.

29 There is Edom, all its kings and princes, who, despite their might,
are put with those slain by the sword.
They lie among the uncircumcised,
with those who go down into the pit.<sup>z</sup>

30 There are the generals of the north and all the Sidonians
Who have gone down with the slain, because of the terror their might inspired.
They lie uncircumcised
with those slain by the sword,
And bear their shame with those who have gone down into the pit.<sup>a</sup>

31 When Pharaoh sees them,
he will be consoled on behalf of all his
hordes,
slain by the sword—
Pharaoh and all his army—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

32 I spread terror of him
in the land of the living;
Now he is laid among the uncircumcised,
with those slain by the sword—

Pharaoh and all his horde—
oracle of the Lord GOD.

The Prophet as Sentinel. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, speak to your people and tell them: When I bring the sword against a land, if the people of that land select one of their number as a sentinel* for them,<sup>b</sup> <sup>3</sup>and the sentinel sees the sword coming against the land, he should blow the trumpet to warn the people.<sup>c</sup> <sup>4</sup>If they hear the trumpet but do not take the warning and a sword attacks and kills them, their blood will be on their own heads.<sup>d</sup> <sup>5</sup>They heard the trumpet blast but ignored the warning; their blood is on them. If they had heeded the warning, they could have escaped with their lives. <sup>6</sup>If, however, the sentinel sees the sword coming and does not blow the trumpet, so that the sword attacks and takes someone's life, his life will be taken for his own sin, but I will hold the sentinel responsible for his blood.

<sup>7e</sup> You, son of man—I have appointed you as a sentinel for the house of Israel; when you hear a word from my mouth, you must warn them for me. <sup>8</sup>When I say to the wicked, “You wicked, you must die,” and you do not speak up to warn the wicked about their ways, they shall die in their sins, but I will hold you responsible for their blood. <sup>9</sup>If, however, you warn the wicked to turn from their ways, but they do not, then they shall die in their sins, but you shall save your life.

Individual Retribution. <sup>10</sup>As for you, son of man, speak to the house of Israel: You people say, “Our crimes and our sins weigh us down; we are rotting away because of them. How can we survive?”<sup>f</sup> <sup>11g</sup> Answer them: As I live—oracle of the Lord GOD—I swear I take no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but rather that they turn from their ways and live. Turn, turn from your evil ways! Why should you die, house of Israel?

<sup>12</sup>As for you, son of man, say to your people: The justice of the just will not save them on the day they sin; the wickedness of the wicked will not bring about their downfall on the day they turn from their wickedness. No, the just cannot save their lives on the day they sin.<sup>h</sup> <sup>13</sup>Even though I say to the just that they shall surely live, if they, relying on their justice, do wrong, none of their just deeds shall be remembered; because of the wrong they have done, they shall die.<sup>i</sup> <sup>14</sup>And though I say to the wicked that they shall die, if they turn away from sin and do what is just and right—<sup>15</sup>returning pledges, restoring stolen goods, walking by statutes that bring life, doing nothing wrong—they shall surely live; they shall not die.<sup>j</sup> <sup>16</sup>None of the sins they committed shall be remembered against them. If they do what is right and just, they shall surely live.

The Survivor from Jerusalem. <sup>21</sup>On the fifth day of the tenth month, * in the twelfth year of our exile, the survivor came to me from Jerusalem and said, “The city is taken!”<sup>l</sup> <sup>22</sup>The hand of the LORD had come upon me the evening before the survivor arrived and opened my mouth when he reached me in the morning. My mouth was opened, and I was mute no longer.<sup>m</sup>

Those Left in Judah. * <sup>23</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>24</sup>Son of man, these who live among the ruins in the land of Israel are saying: “Abraham was only one person, yet he was given possession of the land. Since we are many, the land must be given to us as our possession.”<sup>n</sup> <sup>25</sup>Therefore say to them: Thus says the Lord GOD: You eat on the mountains, you raise your eyes to your idols, you shed blood—yet you would keep possession of the land?<sup>o</sup> <sup>26</sup>You rely on your swords, you commit abominations, each defiles his neighbor’s wife—yet you would keep possession of the land? <sup>27</sup>Say this to them: Thus says the Lord GOD: As I live, those among the ruins shall fall by the sword; those in the open field I have made food for the wild beasts; and those in rocky hideouts and caves shall die by the plague. <sup>28</sup>I will make the land a desolate waste, so that its proud strength will come to an end, and the mountains of Israel shall be so desolate that no one will cross them. <sup>29</sup>Thus they shall know that I am the LORD, when I make the land a desolate waste because of all the abominations they committed.

Popular Misunderstanding. <sup>30</sup>As for you, son of man, your people are talking about you beside the walls and in the doorways of houses. They say to one another, “Let’s go hear the latest word that comes from the LORD.”

<sup>31</sup>My people come to you, gathering as a crowd and sitting in front of you to hear your words, but they will not act on them. Love songs are on their lips, but in their hearts they pursue dishonest gain.<sup>p</sup> <sup>32</sup>For them you are only a singer* of love songs, with a pleasant voice and a clever touch. They listen to your words, but they do not obey them. <sup>33</sup>But when it comes—and it is surely coming!—they shall know that there was a prophet among them.

CHAPTER 34

See RG 371–74

Parable of the Shepherds. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds* of Israel. Prophesy and say to them: To the shepherds, thus says the Lord GOD: Woe to the shepherds of Israel who have been pasturing themselves!<sup>q</sup> Should not shepherds pasture the flock? <sup>3</sup>You consumed milk, wore wool, and slaughtered fatlings, but the flock you did not pasture.<sup>r</sup> <sup>4</sup>You did not strengthen the weak nor heal the sick nor bind up the injured. You did not bring back the stray or seek the lost but ruled them harshly and brutally.<sup>s</sup> <sup>5</sup>So they were scattered for lack of a shepherd, and became food for all the wild beasts. They were scattered<sup>t</sup> <sup>6</sup>and wandered over all the mountains and high hills; over the entire surface of the earth my sheep were scattered. No one looked after them or searched for them.

<sup>7</sup>Therefore, shepherds, hear the word of the LORD: <sup>8</sup>As I live—oracle of the Lord GOD—because my sheep became plunder, because my sheep became food for wild beasts, for lack of a shepherd, because my shepherds did not look after my sheep, but pastured themselves and did not pasture my sheep,<sup>u</sup> <sup>9</sup>therefore, shepherds, hear the word of the LORD: <sup>10</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: Look! I am coming against these shepherds. I will take my sheep out of their hand and put a stop to their shepherding my flock, so that these shepherds will no longer pasture them. I will deliver my flock from their mouths so it will not become their food.<sup>v</sup>

<sup>11</sup>For thus says the Lord GOD: Look! I myself will search for my sheep and examine them. <sup>12</sup>As a shepherd examines his flock while he himself is among his scattered sheep, so will I examine my sheep. I will deliver them from every place where they were scattered on the day of dark clouds.<sup>w</sup> <sup>13</sup>I will lead them out from among the peoples and gather them from the lands; I will bring them back to their own country and pasture them upon the mountains of Israel, in the ravines and every inhabited place in the land.<sup>x</sup> <sup>14</sup>In good pastures I will pasture them; on the mountain heights of Israel will be their grazing land. There they will lie down on good grazing ground; in rich pastures they will be pastured on the mountains of Israel.<sup>y</sup> <sup>15</sup>I myself will pasture my sheep; I myself will give them rest—oracle of the Lord

GOD. <sup>16</sup>The lost I will search out, the strays I will bring back, the injured I will bind up, and the sick I will heal; but the sleek and the strong I will destroy. I will shepherd them in judgment.

Separation of the Sheep. <sup>17</sup>As for you, my flock, thus says the Lord GOD: I will judge between one sheep and another, between rams and goats.<sup>z</sup> <sup>18</sup>Was it not enough for you to graze on the best pasture, that you had to trample the rest of your pastures with your hooves? Or to drink the clearest water, that you had to pollute the rest with your hooves? <sup>19</sup>Thus my flock had to graze on what your hooves had trampled and drink what your hooves had polluted. <sup>20</sup>Therefore thus says the Lord GOD: Now I will judge between the fat and the lean. <sup>21</sup>Because you push with flank and shoulder, and butt all the weak sheep with your horns until you drive them off, <sup>22</sup>I will save my flock so they can no longer be plundered; I will judge between one sheep and another. <sup>23a</sup> I will appoint one shepherd* over them to pasture them, my servant David; he shall pasture them and be their shepherd. <sup>24</sup>I, the LORD, will be their God, and my servant David will be prince in their midst. I, the LORD, have spoken.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>25</sup>I will make a covenant of peace with them and rid the country of wild beasts so they will dwell securely in the wilderness and sleep in the forests.<sup>c</sup> <sup>26</sup>I will settle them around my hill and send rain in its season, the blessing of abundant rain. <sup>27</sup>The trees of the field shall bear their fruits, and the land its crops, and they shall dwell securely on their own soil. They shall know that I am the LORD when I break the bars of their yoke and deliver them from the power of those who enslaved them.<sup>d</sup> <sup>28</sup>They shall no longer be plundered by the nations nor will wild beasts devour them, but they shall dwell securely, with no one to frighten them.<sup>e</sup> <sup>29</sup>I will prepare for them peaceful fields for planting so they are never again swept away by famine in the land or bear taunts from the nations. <sup>30</sup>Thus they shall know that I, the LORD, their God, am with them, and that they are my people, the house of Israel—oracle of the Lord GoD.<sup>f</sup> <sup>31</sup>Yes, you are my flock: you people are the flock of my pasture, and I am your God—oracle of the Lord GoD.<sup>g</sup>

CHAPTER 35

See RG 371–74

Against Edom.* <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>2</sup>Son of man, set your face against Mount Seir and prophesy against it. <sup>3</sup>Say to it: Thus says the Lord God: Watch out! I am against you, Mount Seir. I will stretch out my hand against you and turn you into a desolate waste.<sup>h</sup> <sup>4</sup>Your cities I will turn into ruins, and you shall be a desolation; then you shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>9</sup>I will make you a desolation forever,
your cities will not be inhabited,
and you shall know that I am the

<sup>10</sup>Because you said: The two nations and the two lands* belong to me; let us take possession of them—although the LORD was there—<sup>11</sup>therefore, as I live—oracle of the Lord God—I will deal with you according to the anger and envy you dealt out to them in your hatred, and I will make myself known to them when I execute judgment on you,<sup>m</sup> <sup>12</sup>then you shall know that I am the LORD.

I have heard all the insults you spoke against the mountains of Israel, saying: They are desolate; they have been given to us to devour. <sup>13</sup>You boasted against me with your mouths and used insolent words against me. I heard everything! <sup>14</sup>Thus says the Lord God: Because you rejoiced that the whole land was desolate, so I will do to you. <sup>15</sup>As you rejoiced over the devastation of the heritage of the house of Israel, the same I will do to you: you will become a ruin, Mount Seir, and the whole of Edom, all of it! Then they shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>n</sup>

CHAPTER 36

See RG 371–74

Regeneration of the Land. <sup>1</sup>As for you, son of man, prophesy to the mountains of Israel and say: Mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD! <sup>2</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: Because the enemy said about you, “Ha! the ancient heights have become our possession,” <sup>3</sup>therefore prophesy and say: Thus says the Lord GOD: because you have been ridiculed and hounded on all sides for becoming a possession for the remaining nations and have become a byword and a popular jeer,<sup>o</sup> <sup>4</sup>therefore, mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord GOD: Thus says the Lord GOD to the mountains and hills, to the ravines and valleys, to the desolate ruins and abandoned cities, plundered and mocked by the nations remaining around you:<sup>p</sup> <sup>5</sup>therefore thus says the Lord GOD: Truly, with burning jealousy I speak against the remaining nations and against Edom; they all took possession of my land for plunder with wholehearted joy and utter contempt. <sup>6</sup>Therefore, prophesy concerning the land of Israel and say to the mountains and hills, to the ravines and valleys: Thus says the Lord GOD: See! in my jealous fury I speak, because you endured the reproach of the nations. <sup>7</sup>Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD: I raise my hand and swear: the nations around you shall bear their own reproach.

<sup>8</sup>But you, mountains of Israel, you will sprout branches and bear fruit for my people Israel, for they are coming soon.<sup>q</sup> <sup>9</sup>Look! I am for you! I will turn my face toward you; you will be plowed and planted.<sup>r</sup> <sup>10</sup>Upon you I will multiply the whole house of Israel; cities shall be resettled and ruins rebuilt.<sup>s</sup> <sup>11</sup>Upon you I will multiply people and animals so they can multiply and be fruitful. I will resettle you as in the past, and make you more prosperous than at your beginning; then you shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Upon you I will have them walk, my people Israel. They shall possess you, and you shall be their heritage. Never again shall you rob them of their children.

<sup>13</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: Because they say of you, “You devour your own people,* you rob your nation of its children,”<sup>u</sup> <sup>14</sup>therefore, you shall never again devour your people or rob your nation of its children—oracle of the Lord GOD. <sup>15</sup>I will no longer make you listen to the reproach of nations.

You will never again endure insults from the peoples. Never again shall you rob your nation of its children—oracle of the Lord GOD.

Regeneration of the People. <sup>16</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: <sup>17</sup>Son of man, when the house of Israel lived in its land, they defiled it with their behavior and their deeds. In my sight their behavior was like the impurity of a woman in menstruation.<sup>v</sup> <sup>18</sup>So I poured out my fury upon them for the blood they poured out on the ground and for the idols with which they defiled it. <sup>19</sup>I scattered them among the nations, and they were dispersed through other lands; according to their behavior and their deeds I carried out judgment against them.<sup>w</sup> <sup>20*</sup>But when they came to the nations, where they went, they desecrated my holy name, for people said of them: “These are the people of the LORD, yet they had to leave their land.” <sup>21</sup>So I relented because of my holy name which the house of Israel desecrated among the nations to which they came. <sup>22</sup>Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord GOD: Not for your sake do I act, house of Israel, but for the sake of my holy name, which you desecrated among the nations to which you came.<sup>x</sup> <sup>23</sup>But I will show the holiness of my great name, desecrated among the nations, in whose midst you desecrated it. Then the nations shall know that I am the LORD—oracle of the Lord GOD—when through you I show my holiness before their very eyes.<sup>y</sup> <sup>24</sup>I will take you away from among the nations, gather you from all the lands, and bring you back to your own soil. <sup>25*</sup> <sup>z</sup>I will sprinkle clean water over you to make you clean; from all your impurities and from all your idols I will cleanse you. <sup>26a</sup> I will give you a new heart, and a new spirit I will put within you. I will remove the heart of stone from your flesh and give you a heart of flesh.<sup>b</sup> <sup>27</sup>I will put my spirit within you so that you walk in my statutes, observe my ordinances, and keep them.<sup>c</sup> <sup>28</sup>You will live in the land I gave to your ancestors; you will be my people, and I will be your God.<sup>d</sup> <sup>29</sup>I will deliver you from all your impurities. I will summon the grain and make it plentiful; I will not send famine against you. <sup>30</sup>I will increase the fruit on your trees and the crops in your fields so that you no longer endure reproach from the nations because of famine.<sup>e</sup> <sup>31</sup>Then you will remember your evil behavior and your deeds that were not good; you will loathe yourselves for your sins and your abominations. <sup>32</sup>Not for your sake do I act—oracle of the Lord GOD. Let this be known to you! Be ashamed and humbled because of your behavior, house of Israel.

<sup>33</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: When I cleanse you of all your guilt, I will resettle the cities and the ruins will be rebuilt.<sup>f</sup> <sup>34</sup>The desolate land will be tilled—once a wasteland in the eyes of every passerby. <sup>35</sup>They will say, “This once-desolate land has become like the garden of Eden. The cities once ruined, laid waste and destroyed, are now resettled and fortified.”<sup>g</sup> <sup>36</sup>Then the surrounding nations that remain shall know that I, the LORD, have rebuilt what was destroyed and replanted what was desolate. I, the LORD, have spoken: I will do it. <sup>37</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: This also I will be persuaded to do for the house of Israel: to multiply them like sheep. <sup>38</sup>Like sheep for sacrifice, like the sheep of Jerusalem on its feast days, the ruined cities shall be filled with flocks of people; then they shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>h</sup>

CHAPTER 37

See RG 371–74

Vision of the Dry Bones. * <sup>1</sup>The hand of the LORD came upon me, and he led me out in the spirit of the LORD and set me in the center of the broad valley. It was filled with bones. <sup>2</sup>He made me walk among them in every direction. So many lay on the surface of the valley! How dry they were! <sup>3</sup>He asked me: Son of man, can these bones come back to life? “Lord GOD,” I answered, “you alone know that.” <sup>i</sup> <sup>4</sup>Then he said to me: Prophecy over these bones, and say to them: Dry bones, hear the word of the LORD! <sup>5</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD to these bones: Listen! I will make breath enter you so you may come to life. <sup>6</sup>I will put sinews on you, make flesh grow over you, cover you with skin, and put breath into you so you may come to life. Then you shall know that I am the LORD. <sup>7</sup>I prophesied as I had been commanded. A sound started up, as I was prophesying, rattling like thunder. The bones came together, bone joining to bone. <sup>8</sup>As I watched, sinews appeared on them, flesh grew over them, skin covered them on top, but there was no breath in them. <sup>9</sup>Then he said to me: Prophecy to the breath, prophecy, son of man! Say to the breath: Thus says the Lord GOD: From the four winds come, O breath, and breathe into these slain that they may come to life. * <sup>j</sup> <sup>10</sup>I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath entered them; they came to life and stood on their feet, a vast army. <sup>k</sup> <sup>11</sup>He said to me: Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel! They are saying, “Our bones are dried up, our hope is lost, and we are cut off.” <sup>12</sup>Therefore, prophecy and say to them: Thus says the Lord GOD: Look! I am going to open your graves; I will make you come up out of your graves, my people, and bring you back to the land of Israel. <sup>l</sup> <sup>13</sup>You shall know that I am the LORD, when I open your graves and make you come up out of them, my people! <sup>14</sup>I will put my spirit in you that you may come to life, and I will settle you in your land. Then you shall know that I am the LORD. I have spoken; I will do it—oracle of the LORD. <sup>m</sup>

The Two Sticks. <sup>15*</sup> Thus the word of the LORD came to me: <sup>16</sup>As for you, son of man, take one stick and write on it, “Judah and those Israelites associated with it.” Then take another stick and write on it: “Joseph, Ephraim’s stick, and the whole house of Israel associated with it.” <sup>17</sup>Join the two sticks together so they become one stick in your hand. <sup>18</sup>When your people ask you, “Will you not tell us what you mean by all this?” <sup>19</sup>answer them: Thus says the Lord God: I will take the stick of Joseph, now in Ephraim’s hand, and the tribes of Israel associated with it, and join to it the stick of Judah, making them one stick; they shall become one in my hand.<sup>n</sup> <sup>20</sup>The sticks on which you write, you must hold in your hand in their sight. <sup>21</sup>Say to them: Thus says the Lord God: I will soon take the Israelites from among the nations to which they have gone and gather them from all around to bring them back to their land. <sup>22</sup>I will make them one nation in the land, upon the mountains of Israel, and there shall be one king for them all. They shall never again be two nations, never again be divided into two kingdoms.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>23</sup>No longer shall they defile themselves with their idols, their abominations, and all their transgressions. I will deliver them from all their apostasy through which they sinned. I will cleanse them so that they will be my people, and I will be their God.<sup>p</sup> <sup>24q</sup>David my servant shall be king over them; they shall all have one shepherd. They shall walk in my ordinances, observe my statutes, and keep them. <sup>25</sup>They shall live on the land I gave to Jacob my servant, the land where their ancestors lived; they shall live on it always, they, their children, and their children’s children, with David my servant as their prince forever. <sup>26r</sup> I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them. I will multiply them and put my sanctuary among them forever. <sup>27</sup>My dwelling shall be with them; I will be their God, and they will be my people.<sup>s</sup> <sup>28</sup>Then the nations shall know that I, the LORD, make Israel holy, by putting my sanctuary among them forever.

CHAPTER 38

First Prophecy Against Gog. <sup>1</sup>The word of the LORD came to me: * <sup>2</sup>Son of man, turn your face against Gog * of the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him. <sup>t</sup> <sup>3</sup>Say: Thus says the Lord GOD: See! I am coming against you, Gog, chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. <sup>4</sup>I will turn you around and put hooks in your jaws to lead you out with all your army, horses and riders, all well armed, a great company, all of them with bucklers and shields, carrying swords: <sup>5u</sup> Persia, Cush, and Put with them, all with shields and helmets; <sup>6</sup>Gomer and all its troops, Beth-togarmah from the recesses of Zaphon and all its troops—many nations will accompany you. <sup>7</sup>Prepare and get ready, you and the company mobilized for you, but in my service. <sup>8</sup>After many days you will be called to battle; in the last years you will invade a land that has survived the sword—a people gathered from many nations back to the long-deserted mountains of Israel, brought forth from the nations to dwell securely. <sup>v</sup> <sup>9</sup>You shall come up like a sudden storm, covering the land like a cloud, you and all your troops and the many nations with you. <sup>w</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: On that day thoughts shall cross your mind, and you shall devise an evil plan. <sup>11</sup>You will say, “I will invade a land of open villages and attack a peaceful people who live in security—all of them living without city walls, bars, or gates”—<sup>x</sup> <sup>12</sup>in order to plunder and pillage, turning your hand against resettled ruins, against a people gathered from the nations, a people whose concern is cattle and goods, dwelling at the center * of the earth. <sup>13</sup>Sheba and Dedan, the merchants of Tarshish and all its “young lions” shall ask you: “Have you come here to plunder? Have you summoned your army for pillage, to carry off silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to seize much plunder?” <sup>y</sup>

Second Prophecy Against Gog. <sup>14</sup>Therefore, prophesy, son of man, and say to Gog: Thus says the Lord GOD: On that day, when my people Israel dwell securely, will you not take action, <sup>15</sup>leaving your base in the recesses of Zaphon, * you and many nations with you, all mounted on horses, a great company, a mighty army? <sup>z</sup> <sup>16</sup>You shall rise up over my people Israel like a cloud covering the land. In those last days, I will let you invade my land so that the nations acknowledge me, when in their sight I show my holiness through you, Gog.

<sup>17</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: About you I spoke in earlier times through my servants, the prophets of Israel, who prophesied at that time that I would let you invade them. <sup>18</sup>But on that day, the day Gog invades the land of Israel—oracle of the Lord GOD—my fury will flare up in my anger, <sup>19</sup>and in my jealousy, with fiery wrath, I swear on that day there will be a great earthquake in the land of Israel.<sup>a</sup> <sup>20</sup>Before me will tremble the fish of the sea and the birds of the air, the beasts of the field and everything that crawls on the ground, and everyone on the face of the earth. Mountains will be overturned, terraces will collapse, and every wall will fall to the ground.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Against him I will summon every terror—oracle of the Lord GOD; every man's sword will be raised against his brother.<sup>c</sup> <sup>22</sup>I will execute judgment on him: disease and bloodshed; flooding rain and hailstones, fire and brimstone, I will rain down on him, on his troops and on the many nations with him.<sup>d</sup> <sup>23</sup>And so I will show my greatness and holiness and make myself known in the sight of many nations. Then they shall know that I am the LORD.<sup>e</sup>

CHAPTER 39

See RG 371–74

Third Prophecy Against Gog. <sup>1</sup>You, son of man, prophesy against Gog, saying: Thus says the Lord God: Here I am, Gog, coming at you, chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. <sup>2</sup>I will turn you around, even though I urged you on and brought you up from the recesses of Zaphon and let you attack the mountains of Israel.<sup>f</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then I will strike the bow from your left hand and make the arrows drop from your right. <sup>4</sup>Upon the mountains of Israel you shall fall, you and all your troops and the peoples with you. I will give you as food to birds of prey of every kind and to wild beasts to be eaten. <sup>5</sup>In the open field you shall fall, for I have spoken—oracle of the Lord God.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>6</sup>I will send fire against Magog and against those who live securely on the seacoast, and they will know that I am the LORD.<sup>h</sup> <sup>7</sup>I will reveal my holy name among my people Israel, and I will never again allow my holy name to be defiled. Then the nations shall know that I am the LORD, the Holy One of Israel.<sup>i</sup> <sup>8</sup>Yes, it is coming! It shall happen—oracle of the Lord God. This is the day I decreed.

<sup>9</sup>Everyone living in the cities of Israel shall go out and set fire to the weapons, buckler and shield, bows and arrows, clubs and spears; for seven years they shall make fires with them.<sup>j</sup> <sup>10</sup>They will not need to bring in wood from the fields or cut down trees in the forests, for they will make fires with the weapons, plundering those who plundered them, pillaging those who pillaged them—oracle of the Lord God.

<sup>11</sup>On that day I will give Gog a place for his tomb in Israel, the Valley of Abarim,* east of the sea. It will block the way of travelers. There Gog shall be buried with all his horde; it shall be called “Valley of Hamon-Gog.”<sup>k</sup>

<sup>12</sup>For seven months the house of Israel shall bury them in order to cleanse the land. <sup>13</sup>All the people of the land shall take part in the burials, making a name for themselves on the day I am glorified—oracle of the Lord God.

<sup>14</sup>Men shall be permanently assigned to pass through the land, burying those who lie unburied in order to cleanse the land. For seven months they shall keep searching. <sup>15</sup>When these pass through the land and see a human bone, they must set up a marker beside it, until the gravediggers bury it in the Valley of Hamon-Gog. <sup>16</sup>Also the name of the city is Hamonah. Thus the land will be cleansed.

<sup>17</sup>As for you, son of man, thus says the Lord GOD: Say to birds of every kind and to every wild beast: “Assemble! Come from all sides for the sacrifice I am making for you, a great slaughter on the mountains of Israel. You shall eat flesh and drink blood! <sup>18</sup>You shall eat the flesh of warriors and drink the blood of the princes of the earth: rams, lambs, and goats, bulls and fatlings from Bashan, all of them.<sup>l</sup> <sup>19</sup>From the sacrifice I slaughtered for you, you shall eat fat until you are sated and drink blood until you are drunk. <sup>20</sup>At my table you shall be sated with horse and rider, with warrior and soldier of every kind—oracle of the Lord GOD.

Israel’s Return. <sup>21</sup>Then I will display my glory among the nations, and all the nations will see the judgment I executed, the hand I laid upon them. <sup>22</sup>From that day forward the house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD, their God. <sup>23</sup>The nations shall know that the house of Israel went into exile because of its sins. Because they betrayed me, I hid my face from them, handing them over to their foes, so they all fell by the sword.<sup>m</sup> <sup>24</sup>According to their defilement and their crimes I dealt with them, hiding my face from them.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Therefore, thus says the Lord GOD: Now I will restore the fortunes of Jacob and take pity on the whole house of Israel; I am zealous for my holy name.<sup>o</sup> <sup>26</sup>They will forget their shame and all the infidelities they committed against me when they live securely on their own land with no one to frighten them. <sup>27</sup>When I bring them back from the nations and gather them from the lands of their enemies, I will show my holiness through them in the sight of many nations.<sup>p</sup> <sup>28</sup>Thus they shall know that I, the LORD, am their God, since I who exiled them among the nations will gather them back to their land, not leaving any of them behind. <sup>29</sup>I will no longer hide my face from them once I pour out my spirit upon the house of Israel—oracle of the Lord GOD.<sup>q</sup>

V. The New Israel *

The New Temple

CHAPTER 40

See RG 371–74

The Man with a Measure. <sup>1</sup>In the twenty-fifth year of our exile, at the beginning of the year, on the tenth day of the month, fourteen years after the city had been captured, on that very day the hand of the LORD came upon me and brought me back there.<sup>r</sup> <sup>2</sup>In a divine vision he brought me to the land of Israel, where he set me down on a very high mountain. In front of me, there was something like a city built on it.<sup>s</sup> <sup>3</sup>He brought me there, and there standing in the gateway was a man whose appearance was like bronze! He held in his hand a linen cord and a measuring rod.<sup>t</sup> <sup>4</sup>The man said to me, “Son of man, look carefully and listen intently. Pay strict attention to everything I show you, for you have been brought here so that I might show it to you. Then you must tell the house of Israel everything you see.” <sup>5</sup>There an outer wall completely surrounded the temple. The measuring rod in the man’s hand was six cubits long, each cubit being a cubit plus a handbreadth;* he measured the width of the structure, one rod, and its height, one rod.

The East Gate. * <sup>6</sup>Going to the gate facing east, he climbed its steps and measured the threshold of the outer gateway as one rod wide.<sup>u</sup> <sup>7</sup>Each cell was one rod long and one rod wide, and there were five cubits between the cells; the threshold of the inner gateway adjoining the vestibule of the gate facing the temple was one rod wide. <sup>8</sup>He also measured the vestibule of the inner gate, <sup>9</sup>eight cubits, and its posts, two cubits each. The vestibule faced the inside. <sup>10</sup>On each side of the east gatehouse were three cells, all the same size; their posts were all the same size. <sup>11</sup>He measured the width of the gate’s entryway, ten cubits, and the length of the gate itself, thirteen cubits. <sup>12</sup>The borders in front of the cells on both sides were one cubit, while the cells themselves measured six cubits by six cubits from one opening to the next. <sup>13</sup>Next he measured the gatehouse from the back wall of one cell to the back wall of the cell on the opposite side through the openings facing each other, a width of twenty-five cubits. <sup>14</sup>All around the courtyard of the gatehouse were posts six cubits high. <sup>15</sup>From the front of the gatehouse at its outer entry to the gateway of the porch facing inward, the length was fifty cubits. <sup>16</sup>There were recessed windows in the cells on all sides and in the posts on the inner side of the gate. Posts and windows were all around the inside, with palm trees decorating the posts.<sup>v</sup>

The Outer Court. <sup>17</sup>Then he brought me to the outer court,* where there were chambers and pavement laid all around the courtyard: thirty chambers facing the pavement.<sup>w</sup> <sup>18</sup>The pavement lay alongside the gatehouses, the same length as the gates; this was the lower pavement. <sup>19</sup>He measured the length of the pavement from the front of the lower gate to the outside of the inner gate, one hundred cubits. He then moved from the east to the north side.

The North Gate. <sup>20</sup>He measured the length and width of the north gate of the outer courtyard. <sup>21</sup>Its cells, three on each side, its posts, and its vestibule had the same measurements as those of the first gate, fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. <sup>22</sup>Its windows, its vestibule, and its palm decorations had the same proportions as those of the gate facing east. Seven steps led up to it, and its vestibule faced the inside. <sup>23</sup>The inner court had a gate opposite the north gate, just as at the east gate; he measured one hundred cubits from one gate to the other.

The South Gate. <sup>24</sup>Then he led me to the south. There, too, facing south, was a gate! He measured its posts and vestibule; they were the same size as the others. <sup>25</sup>The gate and its vestibule had windows on both sides, like the other windows, fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. <sup>26</sup>Seven steps led up to it, its vestibule faced inside; and palms decorated each of the posts opposite one another. <sup>27</sup>The inner court also had a gate facing south. He measured it from gate to gate, facing south, one hundred cubits.

Gates of the Inner Court. * <sup>28</sup>Then he brought me to the inner courtyard by the south gate, where he measured the south gateway; its measurements were the same as the others. <sup>29</sup>Its cells, posts, and vestibule were the same size as the others, fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. <sup>30*</sup> The vestibules all around were twenty-five cubits long and five cubits wide. <sup>31</sup>Its vestibule faced the outer court; palms decorated its posts, and its stairway had eight steps. <sup>32</sup>Then he brought me to the inner courtyard on the east and measured the gate there; its dimensions were the same as the others. <sup>33</sup>Its cells, posts, and vestibule were the same size as the others. The gate and its vestibule had windows on both sides, fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. <sup>34</sup>Its vestibule faced the outer court, palms decorated the posts opposite each other, and it had a stairway of eight steps.<sup>35</sup> Then he brought me to the north gate,<sup>x</sup> where he measured the dimensions<sup>36</sup> of its cells, posts, and vestibule; they were the same. The gate and its vestibule had windows on both sides, fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide.<sup>37</sup> Its vestibule faced the outer court; palm trees decorated its posts opposite each other, and it had a stairway of eight steps.

Side Rooms. <sup>38</sup>There was a chamber opening off the vestibule of the gate where burnt offerings were washed.<sup>y</sup> <sup>39</sup>In the vestibule of the gate there were two tables on either side for slaughtering the burnt offerings, purification offerings, and reparation offerings.<sup>z</sup> <sup>40</sup>Two more tables stood along the wall of the vestibule by the entrance of the north gate, and two tables on the other side of the vestibule of the gate. <sup>41</sup>There were thus four tables on one side of the gate and four tables on the other side, eight tables in all, for slaughtering. <sup>42</sup>The four tables for burnt offerings were made of cut stone, one and a half cubits long, one and a half cubits wide, and one cubit high; the instruments used for slaughtering burnt offerings and other sacrifices were kept <sup>43</sup>on shelves the width of one hand, fixed all around the room; but on the tables themselves was the meat for the sacrifices. <sup>44</sup>Outside the inner gatehouse there were two rooms on the inner courtyard, one beside the north gate, facing south, and the other beside the south gate, facing north. <sup>45</sup>He said to me, "This chamber facing south is reserved for the priests who have charge of the temple area, <sup>46</sup>while this chamber facing north is reserved for the priests who have charge of the altar; they are the sons of Zadok,* the only Levites who may come near to minister to the LORD." <sup>47</sup>He measured the courtyard, a square one hundred cubits long and a hundred cubits wide, with the altar standing in front of the temple.<sup>a</sup>

The Temple Building. * <sup>48b</sup> Then he brought me into the vestibule of the temple and measured the posts, five cubits on each side. The gateway was fourteen cubits wide, its side walls three cubits. <sup>49</sup>The vestibule was twenty cubits long and twelve cubits wide; ten steps led up to it, and there were columns by the posts, one on each side.

CHAPTER 41

<sup>1</sup>Then he brought me to the nave and measured the posts; each was six cubits wide.<sup>c</sup> <sup>2</sup>The width of the entrance was ten cubits, and the walls on either side measured five cubits. He measured the nave, forty cubits long and twenty cubits wide.

<sup>3</sup>Then he went inside and measured the posts at the other entrance, two cubits wide. The entrance was six cubits wide, with walls seven cubits long on each side. <sup>4</sup>Next he measured the length and width of the room beyond the nave, twenty cubits long and twenty cubits wide. He said to me, “This is the holy of holies.”<sup>* d</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Then he measured the wall of the temple, six cubits wide, and the width of the side chambers stretching all around the temple, four cubits each. <sup>6*</sup> There were thirty side chambers, chamber upon chamber in three stories; terraces on the outside wall of the temple enclosing the side chambers provided support, but there were no supports for the temple wall itself. <sup>7</sup>A broad passageway led up the side chambers, for the house was enclosed all the way up and all the way around. Thus the temple was widened by the ascent that went from the lowest story through the middle one to the highest story.<sup>e</sup> <sup>8</sup>I saw a raised platform all around the temple, the foundation for the side chambers; the width of this terrace was a full rod, six cubits. <sup>9</sup>The width of the outside wall enclosing the side chambers was five cubits. There was an open space between the side chambers of the temple <sup>10</sup>and the other chambers that measured twenty cubits around the temple on all sides. <sup>11</sup>The side chambers had entrances to the open space, one entrance on the north and the other on the south. The width of the wall surrounding the open space was five cubits. <sup>12</sup>The building* opposite the restricted area on the west side was seventy cubits long and ninety cubits wide, with walls five cubits thick all around it. <sup>13</sup>Thus he measured the temple, one hundred cubits long. The restricted area, its building and walls, measured a hundred cubits in length. <sup>14</sup>The temple facade, along with the restricted area to the east, was also one hundred cubits wide. <sup>15</sup>He then measured the building opposite the restricted area which was behind it, together with its terraces on both sides, one hundred cubits.

Interior of the Temple. The inner nave and the outer vestibule <sup>16</sup>were paneled; the windows had recesses and precious wood trim around all three sides except the sill. Paneling covered the walls from the floor up to the windows and even the window sections.<sup>f</sup> <sup>17</sup>Even above the doorway and in the inner part of the temple and outside as well, around all the walls inside and out, <sup>18</sup>were figures of cherubim and palm trees: a palm tree between each pair of cherubim. Each cherub had two faces:<sup>g</sup> <sup>19</sup>the face of a human being looked toward one palm tree and the face of a lion looked toward the other palm tree. Thus the figures covered all the walls around the temple. <sup>20</sup>From the floor to the lintel of the door, cherubim and palm trees decorated the walls. <sup>21</sup>The nave had a square door frame, and inside facing the holy place was something that looked like <sup>22</sup>a wooden altar, * three cubits high, two cubits long, and two cubits wide. It had corners and a wooden base and sides. He said to me, “This is the table that stands before the LORD.”<sup>h</sup> <sup>23</sup>The nave had a double door,<sup>i</sup> and the holy place <sup>24</sup>also had a double door; each door had two sections that could move; two sections on one door, and two on the other.<sup>j</sup> <sup>25</sup>Cherubim and palm trees decorated the doors of the nave like the decoration on the walls. Outside a wooden lattice faced the vestibule. <sup>26</sup>There were recessed windows and palm trees on the side walls of the vestibule. The side chambers of the temple also had latticework.

CHAPTER 42

Other Structures. <sup>1</sup>Then he led me north to the outer court, bringing me to some chambers on the north side opposite the restricted area and the north building.<sup>k</sup> <sup>2</sup>They were a hundred cubits long on the north side and fifty cubits wide. <sup>3</sup>Built in rows at three different levels, they stood between the twenty cubits of the inner court and the pavement of the outer court. <sup>4</sup>In front of the chambers was a walkway ten cubits wide on the inside of a wall one cubit wide. The doorways faced north. <sup>5*</sup> The upper chambers were shorter because they lost space to the lower and middle tiers of the building. <sup>6</sup>Because they were in three tiers, they did not have foundations like the court, but were set back from the lower and middle levels from the ground up. <sup>7</sup>The outside walls ran parallel to the chambers along the outer court, a length of fifty cubits. <sup>8</sup>The chambers facing the outer court were fifty cubits long; thus the wall along the nave was a hundred cubits. <sup>9</sup>At the base of these chambers, there was an entryway from the east so that one could enter from the outer court <sup>10</sup>where the wall of the court began.

To the south along the side of the restricted area and the building there were also chambers <sup>11</sup>with a walkway in front of them. They looked like the chambers on the north side in length and width, in their exits, their design, and their doorways. <sup>12</sup>At the base of the chambers on the south side there was an entry at the end of a walkway in front of the protective wall by which one could enter from the east. <sup>13</sup>He said to me, “The north and south chambers facing the restricted area are the chambers of the holy place where the priests who approach the LORD shall eat the most holy meals. Here they shall place the most holy offerings: the grain offerings, the purification offerings, and the reparation offerings; for the place is holy.”<sup>* l</sup> <sup>14</sup>When the priests have entered, they must not go out again from the holy place into the outer court without leaving the garments in which they ministered because they are holy. They shall put on other garments before approaching the area for the people.”<sup>m</sup>

Measuring the Outer Court. <sup>15</sup>When he finished measuring the interior of the temple area, he brought me out by way of the gate facing east and measured all around it. <sup>16</sup>He measured the east side, five hundred cubits by his measuring rod. Then he turned <sup>17</sup>and measured the north side: five hundred cubits by his measuring rod. He turned <sup>18</sup>and measured the south side, five hundred cubits by his measuring rod. <sup>19</sup>He turned and measured the west side, also five hundred cubits by his measuring rod. <sup>20</sup>Thus he measured it on the four sides. It was surrounded by a wall five hundred cubits long and five hundred cubits wide, to separate the sacred from the profane.

Restoration of the Temple

CHAPTER 43

See RG 371–74

The Glory of the Lord Returns. <sup>1</sup>Then he led me to the gate facing east,<sup>n</sup> <sup>2</sup>and there was the glory of the God of Israel coming from the east! His voice was like the roar of many waters, and the earth shone with his glory. <sup>3</sup>The vision I saw was like the vision I had seen when he came to destroy the city and like the vision I had seen by the river Chebar—I fell on my face. <sup>4</sup>The glory of the LORD entered the temple by way of the gate facing east.<sup>o</sup> <sup>5</sup>Then the spirit lifted me up and brought me to the inner court. And there the glory of the LORD filled the temple!<sup>p</sup> <sup>6</sup>I heard someone speaking to me from the temple, but the man was standing beside me. <sup>7</sup>The voice said to me: Son of man, do you see the place for my throne, and the place for the soles of my feet? Here I will dwell among the Israelites forever. The house of Israel, neither they nor their kings, will never again defile my holy name, with their prostitutions and the corpses of their kings at their death.<sup>q</sup> <sup>8</sup>When they placed their threshold against my threshold* and their doorpost next to mine, with only a wall between me and them, they defiled my holy name by the abominations they committed, and I devoured them in my wrath.<sup>r</sup> <sup>9</sup>From now on, let them put their prostitution and the corpses of their kings far from me, and I will dwell in their midst forever.<sup>s</sup>

The Law of the Temple. <sup>10</sup>As for you, son of man, describe the temple to the house of Israel so they are ashamed for their sins. Let them measure its layout. <sup>11</sup>If they are ashamed for all they have done, tell them about the layout and design of the temple, its exits and entrances, with all its regulations and instructions; write it down for them to see, that they may carefully observe all its laws and statutes. <sup>12</sup>This is the law for the temple: the entire area on top of the mountain all around will be a most holy place. This is the law for the temple.

The Altar. <sup>13</sup>These were the dimensions of the altar* in cubits, a cubit being one cubit plus a handbreadth. The channel was one cubit deep by one cubit wide, and its rim had a lip one span wide all around it.<sup>t</sup> The height of the altar itself was as follows: <sup>14</sup>from the channel at floor level up to the lower ledge was two cubits, with the ledge one cubit wide; from the lower ledge to the upper ledge, four cubits, with the ledge one cubit wide. <sup>15</sup>The altar hearth was four cubits high, and extending up from the top of the hearth were four horns. <sup>16</sup>The hearth was twelve cubits long and twelve cubits wide, a square with four equal sides. <sup>17</sup>The upper ledge was fourteen cubits long and fourteen cubits wide on all four sides. The rim around it was half a cubit, with a channel one cubit all around. The steps faced east. <sup>u</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Then he said to me: Son of man, thus says the Lord GOD: These are the statutes for the altar when it is set up for sacrificing burnt offerings and splashing blood on it. <sup>v</sup> <sup>19</sup>A young bull must be brought as a purification offering to the priests, the Levites descended from Zadok, who come near to serve me—oracle of the Lord GOD. <sup>w</sup> <sup>20</sup>You shall take some of its blood and smear it on the four horns of the altar, and on the four corners of the ledge, and all around its rim. Thus you shall purify and purge it. <sup>x</sup> <sup>21</sup>Then take the bull as purification offering and burn it in the appointed place outside the sanctuary. <sup>y</sup> <sup>22</sup>On the second day present an unblemished male goat as a purification offering, to purify the altar as you did with the bull. <sup>23</sup>When you have completed the purification, <sup>z</sup> you must bring an unblemished young bull and an unblemished ram from the flock <sup>24</sup>and present them before the LORD. The priests shall throw salt on them and sacrifice them as burnt offerings to the LORD. <sup>25</sup>Daily for seven days you shall give a male goat as a purification offering; and a young bull and a ram from the flock, all unblemished, <sup>a</sup> shall be offered <sup>26</sup>for seven days. Thus they shall purge the altar, in order to cleanse and dedicate it. <sup>27</sup>And when these days are over, from the eighth day on, the priests shall sacrifice your burnt offerings and communion offerings on the altar. Then I will be pleased with you—oracle of the Lord GOD.

CHAPTER 44

See RG 371–74

The Closed Gate. <sup>1</sup>Then he brought me back to the outer gate of the sanctuary facing east, but it was closed. <sup>2</sup>The LORD said to me: This gate must remain closed; it must not be opened, and no one should come through it. Because the LORD, the God of Israel, came through it, it must remain closed. <sup>3</sup>Only the prince may sit in it to eat a meal in the presence of the LORD; he must enter through the vestibule of the gate and leave the same way.* <sup>b</sup>

The New Law

Admission to the Temple. <sup>4</sup>Then he brought me by way of the north gate to the facade of the temple. I looked—and the glory of the LORD filled the LORD’s house! I fell on my face.<sup>c</sup> <sup>5</sup>The LORD said to me: Son of man, pay close attention, look carefully, and listen intently to everything I tell you about all the statutes and laws of the LORD’s house. Pay close attention to the entrance into the temple and all the exits of the sanctuary. <sup>6</sup>Say to that rebellious house, the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord GOD: Enough of all your abominations, house of Israel! <sup>7</sup>You have admitted foreigners, uncircumcised in heart and flesh, into my sanctuary to profane it when you offered me food, the fat and blood.* Thus you have broken my covenant by all your abominations.<sup>d</sup> <sup>8</sup>Instead of caring for the service of my sanctuary, you appointed these foreigners to care for the service of my sanctuary. <sup>9</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: No foreigners, uncircumcised in heart and flesh, shall ever enter my sanctuary: not even any of the foreigners who live among the Israelites.<sup>e</sup>

Levites. <sup>10</sup>As for the Levites who went far away from me when Israel strayed from me after their idols, they will bear the consequences of their sin. <sup>11</sup>They will serve in my sanctuary only as gatekeepers and temple servants; they will slaughter burnt offerings and sacrifices for the people. They will stand before the people to serve them.<sup>f</sup> <sup>12</sup>Because they used to serve them before their idols, thus becoming a stumbling block to the house of Israel, therefore I have sworn an oath against them, says the Lord GOD, and they will bear the consequences of their sin. <sup>13</sup>They shall no longer

come near to serve as my priests, nor shall they touch any of my sacred things or my most sacred offerings, for they must bear their shame, the abominations they committed. <sup>14</sup>Instead I will make them responsible for the service of the temple and all its work, for everything that must be done in it.<sup>g</sup>

Priests. <sup>15</sup>As for the levitical priests, sons of Zadok, who took charge of my sanctuary when the Israelites strayed from me, they may approach me to serve me and stand before me to offer the fat and the blood—oracle of the Lord God.<sup>h</sup> <sup>16</sup>They may enter my sanctuary; they may approach my table to serve me and carry out my service.<sup>i</sup> <sup>17</sup>Whenever they enter the gates of the inner court, they shall wear linen garments; they shall not put on anything woolen when they serve at the gates of the inner court or within the temple. <sup>18j</sup> They shall have linen turbans on their heads and linen undergarments on their loins; they shall not gird themselves with anything that causes sweat. <sup>19k</sup> And when they go out to the people in the outer court, they shall take off the garments in which they served and leave them in the rooms of the sanctuary, and put on other garments so they do not transmit holiness to the people* by their garments.

<sup>25p</sup> They shall not make themselves unclean by going near a dead body; only for their father, mother, son, daughter, brother, or unmarried sister may they make themselves unclean. <sup>26</sup>After he is again clean, he must wait an additional seven days; <sup>27</sup>on the day he enters the inner court to serve in the sanctuary, he shall present a purification offering for himself—oracle of the Lord God. <sup>28q</sup> I will be their heritage: I am their heritage! You shall not give them any property in Israel, for I am their property! <sup>29r</sup> They shall eat grain offerings, purification offerings, and reparation offerings; anything under the ban* in Israel belongs to them; <sup>30s</sup> all the choicest first fruits of every kind and all the best of your offerings of every kind shall belong to the priests; the best of your dough you shall also give to the priests to bring a blessing upon your house. <sup>31t</sup> The priests shall not eat anything, whether bird or animal, that died naturally or was killed by wild beasts.

CHAPTER 45

See RG 371–74

The Holy Portion. <sup>1</sup>When you apportion the land heritage by heritage, you shall set apart a holy portion for the LORD, holier than the rest of the land—twenty-five thousand cubits long and twenty thousand cubits wide; the entire area shall be holy. <sup>2</sup>Of this land a square plot, five hundred by five hundred cubits, shall be assigned to the sanctuary, with fifty cubits of free space around it. <sup>3</sup>From this tract also measure off a length of twenty-five thousand cubits and a width of ten thousand cubits; on it the sanctuary, the holy of holies, shall stand. <sup>4</sup>This shall be the sacred part of the land belonging to the priests, the ministers of the sanctuary, who draw near to minister to the LORD; it shall be a place for their homes and an area set apart for the sanctuary. <sup>5</sup>There shall also be a strip twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand wide for the Levites, the ministers of the temple, so they have cities to live in. <sup>6</sup>You shall assign a strip five thousand cubits wide and twenty-five thousand long as the property of the city parallel to the sacred tract; this shall belong to the whole house of Israel. <sup>7</sup>A section shall belong to the prince, bordering both sides of the sacred tract and city combined, extending westward on the west side and eastward on the east side, corresponding in length to one of the tribal portions from the west boundary to the east boundary <sup>8</sup>of the land. This shall be his property in Israel so that my princes will no longer oppress my people, but will leave the land to the house of Israel according to its tribes. <sup>9</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: Enough, you princes of Israel! Put away violence and oppression, and do what is just and right! Stop evicting my people!—oracle of the Lord GOD.

Weights and Measures. * <sup>10u</sup> You shall have honest scales, an honest ephah, and an honest bath. <sup>11</sup>The ephah and the bath shall be the same size: the bath equal to one tenth of a homer, and the ephah equal to one tenth of a homer; their capacity is based on the homer. <sup>12</sup>The shekel shall be twenty gerahs. Twenty shekels plus twenty-five shekels plus fifteen shekels make up a mina* for you.

Offerings. <sup>13</sup>This is the offering you must make: one sixth of an ephah from each homer of wheat and one sixth of an ephah from each homer of barley. <sup>14</sup>This is the regulation for oil: for every bath of oil, one tenth of a bath, computed by the kor, * made up of ten baths, that is, a homer, for ten baths make a homer. <sup>15</sup>Also, one sheep from the flock for every two hundred from the pasture land of Israel, for the grain offering, the burnt offering, and communion offerings, to make atonement on their behalf—oracle of the Lord GOD. <sup>v</sup> <sup>16</sup>All the people of the land shall be responsible for these offerings to the prince in Israel. <sup>17</sup>It shall be the duty of the prince to provide burnt offerings, grain offerings, and libations on feast days, new moons, and sabbaths, on all the festivals of the house of Israel. He shall provide the purification offering, grain offering, burnt offering, and communion offerings, to make atonement on behalf of the house of Israel. <sup>w</sup>

The Passover. <sup>18</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: On the first day of the first month you shall take an unblemished young bull to purify the sanctuary. <sup>x</sup> <sup>19</sup>The priest shall take some of the blood from the purification offering and smear it on the doorposts of the house, on the four corners of the ledge of the altar, and on the doorposts of the gates of the inner courtyard. <sup>y</sup> <sup>20</sup>You shall repeat this on the seventh day of the month for those who have sinned inadvertently or out of ignorance; thus you shall purge the temple. <sup>z</sup> <sup>21</sup>On the fourteenth day of the first month you shall observe the feast of Passover; for seven days unleavened bread must be eaten. <sup>22</sup>On that day the prince shall sacrifice, on his own behalf and on behalf of all the people of the land, a bull as a purification offering. <sup>23</sup>On each of the seven days of the feast he shall sacrifice, as a burnt offering to the LORD, seven bulls and seven rams without blemish, and as a purification offering he shall sacrifice one male goat each day. <sup>a</sup> <sup>24</sup>As a grain offering he shall offer one ephah for each bull and one ephah for each ram and one hin * of oil for each ephah. <sup>b</sup>

The Feast of Booths. <sup>25</sup>In the seventh month, on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, on the feast day and for the next seven days, he shall make the same offerings: the same purification offerings, burnt offerings, grain offerings, and offerings of oil. <sup>c</sup>

CHAPTER 46

Sabbaths. <sup>1</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: The gate of the inner court facing east shall remain closed throughout the six working days, but on the sabbath and on the day of the new moon it shall be open. <sup>2*</sup> Then the prince shall enter from outside by way of the vestibule of the gate and remain standing at the doorpost of the gateway while the priests sacrifice his burnt offerings and communion offerings; then he shall bow down in worship at the opening of the gate and leave. But the gate shall not be closed until evening. <sup>3</sup>The people of the land also shall bow down in worship before the LORD at the opening of this gate on the sabbaths and new moons. <sup>4</sup>The burnt offerings which the prince sacrifices to the LORD on the sabbath shall consist of six unblemished lambs and an unblemished ram, <sup>5</sup>together with a grain offering of one ephah for the ram and whatever he pleases for the lambs, and a hin of oil for each ephah. <sup>6d</sup> On the day of the new moon, he shall provide an unblemished young bull, six lambs, and a ram without blemish, <sup>7</sup>with a grain offering of one ephah for the bull and an ephah for the ram, and for the lambs whatever he can, and for each ephah a hin of oil.<sup>e</sup>

Ritual Laws. <sup>8</sup>When the prince enters, he shall always enter and depart by the vestibule of the gate. <sup>9</sup>When the people of the land come before the LORD to bow down on the festivals, if they enter by the north gate they shall leave by the south gate, and if they enter by the south gate they shall leave by the north gate. They shall not go back by the gate through which they entered; everyone shall leave by the opposite gate. <sup>10</sup>When they come in, the prince shall be with them; he shall also leave with them. <sup>11</sup>On feasts and festivals, the grain offering shall be an ephah for a bull, an ephah for a ram, but for the lambs whatever they please, and a hin of oil with each ephah. <sup>12</sup>When the prince makes a freewill offering to the LORD, whether a burnt offering or communion offering, the gate facing east shall be opened for him, and he shall bring his burnt offering or peace offering as he does on the sabbath. Then he shall leave, and the gate shall be closed after his departure. <sup>13f</sup> Every day you shall bring as a burnt offering to the LORD an unblemished year-old lamb; you shall offer it every morning, <sup>14</sup>and with it every morning a grain offering of one sixth of an ephah, with a third of a hin of oil to moisten the fine flour. This grain offering for the LORD is a perpetual statute. <sup>15g</sup> The lamb, the grain offering, and the oil you must bring every morning as a perpetual burnt offering.

The Prince and the Land. <sup>16</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: If the prince makes a gift of part of his heritage to any of his sons, it belongs to his sons; that property is their heritage. <sup>17</sup>But if he makes a gift of part of his heritage to one of his servants, it belongs to him until the year of release; * then it reverts to the prince. Only the heritage given to his sons belongs to him. <sup>h</sup> <sup>18</sup>The prince shall not seize any part of the heritage of the people by forcing them off their property. From his own property he shall provide heritage for his sons, so that none of my people will be driven off their property.

The Temple Kitchens. <sup>19</sup>Then he brought me through the entrance at the side of the gateway to the chambers reserved for the priests, which faced north. There I saw a place at the far west end, <sup>20</sup>about which he said to me, “This is the place where the priests cook the reparation offerings and the purification offerings and bake the grain offerings, so they do not have to bring them into the outer court and so transmit holiness to the people.” <sup>*i</sup>
<sup>21</sup>Then he led me into the outer court and had me cross to the four corners of the court, and there, in each corner, was another court! <sup>22</sup>In all four corners of the courtyard there were courts set off, each forty cubits long by thirty cubits wide, all four of them the same size. <sup>23</sup>A stone wall surrounded them on four sides, and ovens were built along the bottom of the walls all the way around. <sup>24</sup>He said to me, “These are the kitchens where the temple ministers cook the sacrifices of the people.”

CHAPTER 47

See RG 371–74

The Wonderful Stream.* <sup>1</sup>Then he brought me back to the entrance of the temple, and there! I saw water flowing out from under the threshold of the temple toward the east, for the front of the temple faced east. The water flowed out toward the right side of the temple to the south of the altar.<sup>j</sup> <sup>2</sup>He brought me by way of the north gate and around the outside to the outer gate facing east; there I saw water trickling from the southern side. <sup>3</sup>When he continued eastward with a measuring cord in his hand, he measured off a thousand cubits and had me wade through the water; it was ankle-deep. <sup>4</sup>He measured off another thousand cubits and once more had me wade through the water; it was up to the knees. He measured another thousand cubits and had me wade through the water; it was up to my waist. <sup>5</sup>Once more he measured off a thousand cubits. Now it was a river I could not wade across. The water had risen so high, I would have to swim—a river that was impassable. <sup>6</sup>Then he asked me, “Do you see this, son of man?” He brought me to the bank of the river and had me sit down. <sup>7</sup>As I was returning, I saw along the bank of the river a great many trees on each side.<sup>k</sup> <sup>8</sup>He said to me, “This water flows out into the eastern district, runs down into the Arabah and empties into the polluted waters of the sea* to freshen them.<sup>l</sup> <sup>9</sup>Wherever it flows, the river teems with every kind of living creature; fish will abound. Where these waters flow they refresh; everything lives where the river goes. <sup>10</sup>Fishermen will stand along its shore from En-gedi to En-eglaim;* it will become a place for drying nets, and it will abound with as many kinds of fish as the Great Sea.<sup>m</sup> <sup>11</sup>Its marshes and swamps shall not be made fresh, but will be left for salt. <sup>12</sup>Along each bank of the river every kind of fruit tree will grow; their leaves will not wither, nor will their fruit fail. Every month they will bear fresh fruit because the waters of the river flow out from the sanctuary. Their fruit is used for food, and their leaves for healing.”<sup>n</sup>

Tribal Territories in the Restored Israel

The New Israel

Boundaries of the Land.* <sup>13</sup>Thus says the Lord GOD: These are the boundaries of the land which you shall apportion among the twelve tribes of Israel, with Joseph having two portions.<sup>o</sup> <sup>14</sup>You shall apportion it equally because I swore to give it to your ancestors as a heritage; this land, then, is your heritage.<sup>p</sup> <sup>15q</sup> These are the borders of the land: on the northern side, from the Great Sea in the direction of Hethlon, Lebo-hamath to Zedad,<sup>16</sup> Berothah, and Sibram, along the frontiers of Damascus and Hamath, to Hazar-enon, on the border of Hauran.<sup>r</sup> <sup>17</sup>Thus the border extends from the sea to Hazar-enon, north of the border of Damascus, the frontier of Hamath to the north. This is the northern boundary. <sup>18</sup>The eastern border shall be between Damascus and Hauran, while the Jordan will form the border between Gilead and the land of Israel down to the eastern sea as far as Tamar. This is the eastern boundary. <sup>19</sup>The southern border shall go southward from Tamar to the waters of Meribath-kadesh, on to the Wadi of Egypt, and into the Great Sea. This is the southern boundary.<sup>s</sup> <sup>20</sup>The western border shall have the Great Sea as a boundary as far as a point opposite Lebo-hamath. This is the western boundary.

The Northern Portions.<sup>21</sup>You shall divide this land according to the tribes of Israel. <sup>22t</sup> You shall allot it as heritage for yourselves and for the resident aliens in your midst who have fathered children among you. You shall treat them like native Israelites; along with you they shall receive a heritage among the tribes of Israel. <sup>23</sup>In whatever tribe the resident alien lives, there you shall assign his heritage—oracle of the Lord God.

CHAPTER 48

At the northern end, along the side of the way to Hethlon, Lebo-hamath, and Hazar-enon, the border of Damascus, and northward up to the frontier with Hamath, from the eastern border to the western: Dan, one portion.

Asher, one portion.<sup>u</sup> <sup>3</sup>Along the territory of Asher from the eastern border to the western border: Naphtali, one portion.<sup>v</sup> <sup>4</sup>Along the territory of Naphtali

from the eastern border to the western border: Manasseh, one portion.<sup>w</sup>

border: Ephraim, one portion.<sup>x</sup> <sup>6</sup>Along the territory of Ephraim from the eastern border to the western border: Reuben, one portion.<sup>y</sup> <sup>7</sup>Along the territory of Reuben from the eastern border to the western border: Judah,

one portion.<sup>z</sup>

The Sacred Tract. <sup>8</sup>Along the territory of Judah from the eastern border to the western border is the tract you shall set apart, twenty-five thousand cubits wide and as long as one of the portions from the eastern border to the western border. The sanctuary shall stand in the center of the tract. <sup>9</sup>The tract you set apart for the LORD shall be twenty-five thousand cubits long by twenty thousand wide. <sup>10</sup>The sacred tract will be given to the following: the priests shall have twenty-five thousand cubits on the north, ten thousand on the west, ten thousand on the east, and twenty-five thousand on the south.

The sanctuary of the LORD shall be in its center. <sup>11</sup>The consecrated priests, the Zadokites, who fulfilled my service and did not stray with the Israelites

as the Levites did, <sup>12</sup>shall have their own tract set apart, next to the territory of the Levites, separate from the most holy tract. <sup>13</sup>The Levites shall have territory corresponding to that of the priests, twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand cubits wide. The whole tract shall be twenty-five thousand cubits long and twenty thousand wide. <sup>14</sup>They may not sell or exchange or transfer any of it, the best part of the land, for it is sacred to the LORD. <sup>15</sup>The remaining section, five thousand cubits long and twenty-five thousand cubits wide, is profane land, assigned to the city for dwellings and pasture. The city is at its center. <sup>16</sup>These are the dimensions of the city: the north side, forty-five hundred cubits; the south side, forty-five hundred cubits; the east side, forty-five hundred cubits; and the west side, forty-five hundred cubits.<sup>a</sup> <sup>17</sup>The pasture land for the city extends north two hundred fifty cubits, south two hundred fifty cubits, east two hundred fifty cubits, and west two hundred fifty cubits. <sup>18</sup>The remaining section runs eastward along the sacred tract for ten thousand cubits and westward ten thousand cubits. Its produce shall provide food for the workers of the city. <sup>19</sup>The workers of the city, from all the tribes of Israel, shall cultivate it. <sup>20</sup>The entire sacred tract measures twenty-five thousand by twenty-five thousand cubits; as a square you shall set apart the sacred tract together with the city property.

<sup>21</sup>The remaining land on both sides of the sacred tract and the property of the city shall belong to the prince, extending eastward twenty-five thousand cubits up to the eastern boundary, and westward twenty-five thousand cubits to the western boundary. This portion belongs to the prince and corresponds to the tribal portions. The sacred tract and the sanctuary of the temple shall be in the middle. <sup>22</sup>Except for the Levites' property and the city's property, which are in the middle of the prince's property, the territory between the portion of Judah and the portion of Benjamin shall belong to the prince.

From the eastern border to the western border: Benjamin, one portion.<sup>b</sup> <sup>24</sup>Along the territory of Benjamin from the eastern border to the western border: Simeon, one portion.<sup>c</sup> <sup>25</sup>Along the territory of Simeon from the eastern border to the western border: Issachar, one portion.<sup>d</sup> <sup>26</sup>Along the territory of Issachar from the eastern border to the western border: Zebulun, one portion.<sup>e</sup> <sup>27</sup>Along the territory of Zebulun from the eastern border to the western border: Gad, one portion.<sup>f</sup> <sup>28</sup>Along the territory of Gad shall be the southern border. This boundary shall extend from Tamar to the waters of Meribath-kadesh, and along the Wadi of Egypt to the Great Sea. <sup>29</sup>This is the land you shall apportion as a heritage among the tribes of Israel, and these are their portions—oracle of the Lord God.

The Gates of the City. <sup>30</sup>These are the exits from the city: On the north side, measuring forty-five hundred cubits—<sup>31</sup>the gates are named after the tribes of Israel—on the north, three gates: the gate of Reuben, one; the gate of Judah, one; and the gate of Levi, one. <sup>32</sup>On the east side, measuring forty-five hundred cubits, three gates: the gate of Joseph, one; the gate of Benjamin, one; and the gate of Dan, one. <sup>33</sup>On the south side, measuring forty-five hundred cubits, three gates: the gate of Simeon, one; the gate of Issachar, one; and the gate of Zebulun, one. <sup>34</sup>On the west side, measuring forty-five hundred cubits, three gates: the gate of Gad, one; the gate of Asher, one; and the gate of Naphtali, one.<sup>9</sup> <sup>35</sup>The circuit of the city shall be eighteen thousand cubits. From now on the name of the city is “The LORD is there.”<sup>h</sup>

1:1 The thirtieth year, which corresponds to the fifth year of exile (v. 2), has never been satisfactorily explained; possibly it refers to the prophet’s age, or the anniversary of the finding of the book of the law in the Temple during Josiah’s reform of 622 (2 Kgs 22:1–13). The river Chebar: probably a canal near Nippur, southeast of Babylon, one of the sites on which the Jewish exiles were settled.

1:2 The fifth day . . . the fifth year: the end of July, 593 B.C.; cf. v. 1.

1:4 The North: Zaphon, the traditional abode of the gods; see notes on Jb 37:22; Ps 48:3; Is 14:13–15.

1:5 Four living creatures: identified as cherubim in 10:1–2, 20. Known from Assyrian religion as minor guardian deities of palaces and temples, the cherubim were usually portrayed in gigantic sculpture with the bodies of bulls or lions, wings like an eagle and a human head. In the Jerusalem Temple, the Lord was enthroned above in the holy of holies (Is 6:1–2).

1:10 The four faces together represent animate creation: wild animals, domesticated livestock, birds, and human beings. Christian tradition associates them with the four evangelists: the lion with Mark, the ox with Luke, the eagle with John, and the man with Matthew.

1:13–14 The coals and flashing lightning moving among the four creatures and yet coming from them identify this vision as a theophany. See note on 10:2–13.

1:15–21 The repetitions and inconsistencies in the description of the wheels and the direction of their movements evoke the vision’s mysterious quality and emphasize the difficulty of describing the divine world in human language.

1:22–23, 26 This symbolic description of God’s throne is similar to that in Ex 24:9–10.

1:26 Looked like a human being: the God who transcends the powers of the human imagination is pictured here in the likeness of an enthroned human king.

2:1 Son of man: in Hebrew, “son/daughter of . . .” is a common idiom expressing affiliation in a group; in this case, a human being.” The title is God’s habitual way of addressing the prophet throughout this book, probably used to emphasize the separation of the divine and the human.

2:2 The spirit: lit., wind, breath; a vital power, coming from God, which enables the prophet to hear the divine word; cf. 8:3; 11:1, 24.

2:6 And you sit among scorpions: the prophet must be prepared for bitter opposition.

3:3 As sweet as honey: though the prophet must foretell terrible things, the word of God is sweet to the one who receives it.

3:8 Cf. Jer 1:18. The prophet must face fierce opposition with the determination and resistance shown by his opponents.

3:12 The glory of the LORD: the divine presence, manifested here in audible form. Cf. Ex 40:34; Lk 2:9.

3:15 Tel-abib: one of the sites where the exiles were settled, probably near Nippur.

3:17–21 This passage refers to the prophet's role as sentinel, placed here and in chap. 33 as introductions to sections containing judgment oracles and salvation oracles respectively; cf. Hb 2:1.

3:26–27 Mute: here the prophet's inability to speak to the people in exile while Jerusalem was being besieged is seen as a consequence of God's direct intervention (cf. 24:27).

4:1–5:4 The symbolic actions in this section prepare for the series of oracles that follow in 5:5–7:27.

4:5–6 Three hundred and ninety days . . . forty days: a symbol to represent the respective lengths of exile for the Northern Kingdom of Israel and the Southern Kingdom of Judah. Israel had already fallen to Assyria in 722/721 B.C. The numerical value of the Hebrew consonants in the phrase translated "the days of your siege" (v. 8) is three hundred and ninety. Forty years conventionally represents one generation.

4:7 Bared arm: a symbol of unrestrained power.

4:9–13 This action represents the scarcity of food during the siege of Jerusalem, and the consequent need to eat whatever is at hand. Twenty shekels: about nine ounces. The sixth of a hin: about one quart.

4:11 Hin: see note on 45:24.

4:16 Break the staff of bread: reducing the supply of bread that supports life as the walking staff supports a traveler; cf. 5:16; 14:13; Lv 26:26; Ps 105:16; Is 3:1.

5:2 The city: the one drawn on the tablet (4:1).

5:8 I am coming against you: an expression borrowed from the language of warfare in which an enemy attacked another with the sword. "You" in vv. 8–17 is Jerusalem.

5:10 Parents will eat their children . . . parents: the prophet describes the consequences of the prolonged Babylonian siege of Jerusalem in 587/586 B.C. See note on Lam 2:20.

6:3 High places: raised platforms usually built on hills outside towns for making sacrifices to the Lord or to Canaanite deities. They became synonymous with places of idolatry after the centralization of worship in the Jerusalem Temple.

6:5 Scatter your bones . . . altars: the bones of the dead defiled a place; cf. 2 Kgs 23:14.

6:7 You shall know that I am the LORD: this formula is repeated after most of Ezekiel's oracles from this point on. Whatever happens to Israel happens at the Lord's command; because the Lord uses the nations to punish or reward Israel for its behavior, Israel will learn that its God has sole rule over the nations and the universe, and will acknowledge that rule in obedience.

6:11 Clap your hands, stamp your feet: these gestures may express grief, even horror, at Israel's infidelities; in 25:6, they are signs of gloating.

6:13 Every green tree and leafy oak: trees often identified with fertility deities and the "tree of life"; sacred groves had a long history in Palestine and throughout the Mediterranean basin as places of worship; cf. Dt 12:2.

6:14 From the wilderness to Riblah: the whole land, from the far south to the far north.

7:12–13 Normal affairs will cease to have any meaning in view of the disaster that is to come.

7:17 Hands . . . knees: image of profound terror; loss of control of body movement and functions.

7:18 Shaved bald: shaving the head was a sign of mourning.

7:20 Assyrian wall paintings show that statues of deities were often cast in precious metals and then decorated with jewelry. Cf. Is 40:19–20; 41:6–7; 44:9–20.

7:24 Proud strength: misplaced trust in the might and power of their kings and army. Cf. v. 22; 33:28 and related ideas in Is 2:12; 10:12; 13:11; Jer 48:29; Ez 24:21; 30:18.

8:1 In the sixth year, on the fifth day of the sixth month: September, 592 B.C.

8:2 Looked like a man: the divine presence which accompanies Ezekiel in these visions. Cf. 40:3–4.

8:3 The spirit lifted me up: the prophet is transported in vision from Babylon to Jerusalem. Ezekiel may be drawing on his memory of the Temple from before his exile in 598 B.C. The statue of jealousy: the statue which provokes the Lord's outrage against the insults of his own people; perhaps the statue of the goddess Asherah set up by Manasseh, king of Judah (cf. 2 Kgs 21:7; 2 Chr 33:7, 15). Although his successor, Josiah, had removed it (2 Kgs 23:6), the statue may have been set up again after his death.

8:10 Creeping things and loathsome beasts: perhaps images of Egyptian deities, often represented in animal form. During the last days of Jerusalem Zedekiah, king of Judah, was allied with Egypt, hoping for protection against the Babylonians.

8:14 Wept for Tammuz: the withering of trees and plants that began in late spring was attributed to the descent of Tammuz, the Mesopotamian god of fertility, to the world of the dead beneath the earth. During the fourth month of the year, female worshippers of Tammuz would wail and mourn the god's disappearance.

8:16 Bowing eastward: sun worship was perhaps introduced as a condition of alliance with other nations. While Josiah removed some elements of this worship (2 Kgs 23:11), Manasseh, for example, built altars to all the "hosts of heaven" in two Temple courtyards (2 Kgs 21:5).

8:17 Putting the branch to my nose: the meaning is uncertain. It may be connected with the social injustice mentioned in v. 17b and in 9:9, e.g., "with their violence they tweak my nose," i.e., "goad my fury." The Masoretic text reads "their noses" as a euphemism for "my nose," thus avoiding the impropriety of these idolaters coming into contact with God even figuratively.

9:4 Ezekiel emphasizes personal accountability; the innocent inhabitants of Jerusalem are spared while the idolatrous are punished. An X: lit., the Hebrew letter taw.

10:2–13 The burning coals, a sign of the divine presence (cf. 28:14; Ps 18:9), represent the judgment of destruction that God is visiting upon the city; they may also represent the judgment of purification that prepares the land to become the Lord's sanctuary (cf. Is 6:6–7).

10:15–19 The throne represents God's presence as ruler and protector of the land. In chap. 1, God is revealed as the lord of the world who can appear even in a far-off land; here God is about to abandon the Temple, that is, hand the city over to its enemies. God and the throne return again in 43:1–3.

10:20–22 The repetition of description from the preceding verses is a device intended to suggest the rapid, constantly changing motion of the vision and the difficulty of describing the divine in human language.

11:3 No need to build houses . . . meat: this advice is based on the conviction that invincible Jerusalem will protect its citizens from further danger just as a pot shields the meat inside from the fire. The poorer citizens of Jerusalem and the refugees from nearby villages can now appropriate the property abandoned by the city's wealthier upper class when they were deported (v. 15). The metaphor of the pot and its contents reappears in chap. 24.

11:13 In Ezekiel's vision Pelatiah represents the people left in Jerusalem, "the remnant of Israel." His sudden death in the vision, but not in reality, is a figure for the judgment described in vv. 8–10 and prompts Ezekiel's anguished question about the survival of the people left in the land after the deportations in 597.

11:15–21 Ezekiel insists that those who remained in Judah are doomed; the exiles, under a new covenant, will constitute a new Israel. Cf. chap. 36; Jer 24:7; 29.

11:23 The glory of the Lord departs toward the east, to the exiles in Babylon; it will return once the Temple is rebuilt 43:1–3).

12:3–10 An exile's bag contains bare necessities, probably no more than a bowl, a mat, and a waterskin. The prophet's action foreshadows the fate of ruler and people (vv. 11–14).

12:5 Through the wall: mud-brick outer wall of a private home. In this symbolic action, Ezekiel represents the enemy forces, and the house wall, the city wall of Jerusalem breached by the Babylonian army.

12:13 Though he shall not see it: according to a Targum, an allusion to Nebuchadnezzar having Zedekiah blinded before deporting him to Babylonia (cf. 2 Kgs 25:7); according to the Septuagint, the king is ashamed of his flight from the city and disguises himself so others will not recognize him.

12:16 Both exiles and nations shall know that the exile is divine punishment for Israel's betrayal of the Lord and the covenant, not evidence that the Lord is too weak to fight off the Babylonian deity.

12:19 The people of the land: the exiles in Babylon who, ironically, are now outside the land.

12:22–28 This proverb conveys the skepticism the people of Jerusalem have; cf. Jer 20:7–9.

13:10 The false prophets contributed to popular illusions of security by predictions of peace, like those who whitewash a wall to conceal its defects.

13:18 Sew amulets . . . make veils: used by sorcerers to mark individuals for life or for death. For a small price (v. 19), these women promised protection for the wicked, who, in the Lord's estimation, "should not live" (v. 19), and death for the righteous, "who should not be slain" (v. 19). Both decisions belong to the Lord.

13:19 Handfuls of barley and crumbs of bread: payment for the amulets and scarves.

14:9 The ancient Israelites thought that God could use deception as a means of promoting divine justice; cf. 2 Sm 24:1–3; 1 Kgs 22:19–23.

14:12–23 According to Ezekiel, the people in Jerusalem deserve destruction because they are corrupt. Yet he admits an exception to the principle of individual responsibility when he affirms that some of those deserving death will survive and be reunited with family in exile. The depravity of Jerusalem testifies that the punishment of Jerusalem was just and necessary.

14:14 Noah, Daniel, and Job: righteous folk heroes whom Israel shared with other ancient Near Eastern cultures. Daniel was the just judge celebrated in Ugaritic literature, perhaps the model for the hero of Dn 13.

15:1–8 Verses 2–5 point out that the wood of the vinestock may be burned for fuel, fit only for destruction. In vv. 6–8 Ezekiel asserts that Jerusalem has the same destiny.

16:3–4 By origin and birth . . . Hittite: Jerusalem's pre-Israelite origins are the breeding ground for its inability to respond faithfully to the Lord's generosity.

16:4–5 In this chapter, Ezekiel represents Jerusalem and Samaria as unwanted, abandoned sisters whom the Lord rescues and cares for. Here the prophet depicts Jerusalem as a newborn female, abandoned and left to die, an accepted practice in antiquity for females, who were considered financial liabilities by their families. That the infant has no one, not even her mother, to tie off her umbilical cord, wash her clean, and wrap her in swaddling clothes emphasizes Jerusalem's death-like isolation and accentuates the Lord's gracious action in her behalf. The practice of rubbing the skin of new-borns with salt is an attested Palestinian custom that survived into the twentieth century.

16:8 I spread the corner of my cloak: one way to acquire a woman for marriage; cf. Ru 3:9. In Dt 23:1 a son's illicit sexual relations with his father's wife is described as "uncovering the edge of the father's garment."

16:16 In the allegory of this chapter the viewpoint often shifts from the figure (prostitution) to the reality (idolatry). A symbol of the woman's depravity supersedes her parents' cruel abandonment when she was an infant. It overrides the loyalty she owes her covenant partner and the care she owes their children.

16:20–21 Also a reference to the practice of child sacrifice introduced under Judah's impious kings; cf. 2 Kgs 16:3; 17:17; Jer 7:31; 19:5; 32:35.

16:24 A platform . . . a dais: associated with rituals borrowed from the Canaanites.

16:27 Philistines: lit., “daughters of the Philistines,” a common expression when referring to the various towns that make up a territory.

16:38 As a jealous husband, Yhwh severely punishes Jerusalem for her adultery: i.e., her worship of idols. Adultery was considered a capital crime in ancient Israel; cf. Lv 20:10–14; Nm 5:11–28; Dt 22:22.

16:45 Truly the daughter of your mother: Jerusalem’s depraved behavior follows from the bad behavior of its non-Israelite forebears; cf. v. 3.

16:46–47 Jerusalem is so much more corrupt than Samaria, the elder sister in size, and the smaller Sodom that both now appear just and righteous. Ezekiel’s reference to Sodom indicates that the city’s identification with wickedness and evil was already an established tradition in fifth century B.C. Judah.

16:60 Everlasting covenant: Ezekiel foresees God renewing the covenant of Sinai in a new and spirit-empowered way that will not be fatally broken as in the present exile or force God to abandon Israel again; cf. 11:19–21; 36:25–27; 37:26–28.

17:11–21 These verses explain the allegory in vv. 3–10. In 597 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar removed Jehoiachin from the throne and took him into exile; in his place he set Zedekiah, Jehoiachin’s uncle, on the throne and received from him the oath of loyalty. But Zedekiah was persuaded to rebel by Pharaoh Hophra of Egypt and thus deserved punishment; cf. 2 Kgs 24:10–25:7.

17:22–23 The Lord will undo the actions of the Babylonian king by rebuilding the Davidic dynasty so the nations realize that only Israel’s God can restore a people’s destiny.

18:2 Parents . . . on edge: a proverb the people quoted to complain that they were being punished for their ancestors’ sins; cf. Jer 31:29.

18:6 Eat on the mountains: take part in meals after sacrifice at the high places.

18:25 The LORD’s way is not fair: this chapter rejects the idea that punishment is transferred from one generation to the next and emphasizes individual responsibility and accountability.

19:1–9 Some commentators identify Jehoahaz and Zedekiah, sons of the same mother, as the “two young lions”; they were deported to Egypt and Babylon respectively. Cf. 2 Kgs 23:31–34; 24:18–20.

19:4 A common fate for royal prisoners: e.g., Assurbanipal claims he put a ring in the jaw of a captive king and a dog collar around his neck (cf. v. 9). A wall relief shows Esarhaddon holding two royal captives with ropes tied to rings in their lips.

19:10–14 Vine: Judah. One strong branch: the Davidic king. This allegory describes the deportation of the Davidic dynasty to Babylon and laments the destruction of the house of David. From Ezekiel’s perspective, the arrogance of Judah’s kings leads to this tragedy (vv. 12–14).

20:1 The seventh year . . . the fifth month: August 14, 591 B.C.

20:7 Detestable things: in the Book of Ezekiel, Israel’s continued worship of idols in Egypt and in the wilderness, despite the Lord’s powerful deeds on their behalf, is the reason God punishes them so severely; they must learn and acknowledge that he is their only Lord. Cf., e.g., Exodus (5:1–6:9; 14:10–30; 16:1–36) and Numbers (11:1–15; 14:1–12; 20:1–9), where the people’s failure to trust Moses and the Lord brings punishment.

20:25–26 I gave them statutes that were not good: because Israel rejected the Lord’s life-giving laws, he “gave” laws (e.g., the sacrifice of every firstborn) that would lead only to death and destruction. Dt 12:29–31; Jer 7:31; 19:4–5 may address a popular assumption that the Lord accepted and perhaps required child sacrifice, especially as evidence of great trust during national emergencies (2 Kgs 3:27; Mi 6:7). By combining language from Ex 22:28 with the vocabulary of child sacrifice, Ezekiel suggests that firstborn sons were regularly sacrificed in Israel.

20:29 High place: a cultic site, originally a hilltop, but often a raised platform in a sacred area. Until Deuteronomy’s insistence that official and legitimate worship of the Lord take place only in Jerusalem, these local shrines were popular places for worship (e.g., 1 Sm 9–10) or for consulting the Lord (1 Kgs 3:4–5). In order to unite the Kingdom of Judah politically and religiously, Dt 12:2 demands destruction of the high places. Ezekiel, like other prophets, condemns Israelite worship at these places and identifies this illegitimate worship as one reason for the punishment of exile.

20:35–38 Exile among other lands occasions a new exodus and a new wilderness journey back to Israel. The Lord will eliminate the rebellious, as he did on the first journey, and use the surviving remnant to reveal his power to the nations.

20:37 Pass under the staff: in Lv 27:32–33, a method of counting off animals to select those to be dedicated for the tithe. In Ezekiel, on the other hand, those who survive the selection process are marked for destruction for violating the covenant.

20:40 Holy mountain: the Temple mount and Jerusalem in contrast to “every high hill” in v. 28 (cf. the royal Zion theology in Ps 48:2). Acceptable worship takes place here among a restored people, a theme taken up in chaps. 40–48 (cf. 40:2).

21:2–4 In Babylon Ezekiel looks toward Judah, pictured as a forest about to be destroyed by fire.

21:8 Cut off from you the righteous and the wicked: a more complete devastation of Jerusalem than that described in 9:6.

21:12 What I heard: the news of the fall of Jerusalem; cf. 33:21–22.

21:17 Slap your thigh: a gesture signifying grief and dread; cf. Jer 31:19.

21:22 Clap my hands: the Lord declares himself no longer responsible for Judah; cf. 22:13; Nm 24:10; Jb 27:23; Lam 2:15.

21:26 Three forms of divination are mentioned: arrow divination, consisting in the use of differently marked arrows extracted or shaken from a case at random; the consultation of the teraphim or household idols; and liver divination, scrutiny of the configurations of the livers of newly slaughtered animals, a common form of divination in Mesopotamia.

21:27–28 A lot marked “Jerusalem” falls out, which marks the guilt of the city’s inhabitants.

21:33–37 In vv. 23–32 Ezekiel imagines Nebuchadnezzar deciding whether to attack Jerusalem or Rabbath-Ammon. As it happened, the Babylonians decided to attack Jerusalem first. Here (vv. 33–37) Ezekiel prophesies to the Ammonites that a nation which serves as an instrument of the Lord’s judgment will itself be judged.

22:2–16 This first oracle focuses on Jerusalem as a “city of bloodshed” (cf. Na 3:1). Here transgressions involving blood, the oppression of the poor, and improper cultic practices are seen as interrelated, for blood as the carrier of life is fundamental to both the cultic and social spheres of life.

22:6 To shed blood: a very serious charge in light of the solemn command of God to Noah in Gn 9:6 against human bloodshed.

22:9–11 The charges against Jerusalem echo the commandments of Lv 20:10–18.

22:18–22 The image of smelting metals for purifying the people by the attacks of their enemies is common among the prophets; cf. Is 1:22, 25; Jer 6:27–30.

22:24–31 For a similar oracle, cf. Zep 3:1–8.

23:4 Oholah . . . Oholibah: symbolic names for Samaria, “her own tent,” and Jerusalem, “my tent is in her.” Cf. Ps 15:1 where “tent” is a synonym for “holy mountain.” The names refer to the temple set up in the Northern Kingdom of Samaria (1 Kgs 12:28–29) and the Jerusalem Temple.

23:23 Pekod, Shoa and Koa: nations along the Tigris River, part of “greater Babylonia.”

23:31 The cup is a metaphor for divine punishment, the lot of all who rebel against the Lord (cf. Ps 75:9; Jer 25:15–16; 51:7; Is 51:21–23; Lam 4:21; Hb 2:15–16).

23:36–49 Unlike vv. 1–35, this short poem juxtaposes the careers of the two sisters and looks to a future punishment. The male lovers of the first poem become the sisters’ executioners, and the guests at the love feast a lynch mob. So corrupt and depraved are the two sisters that their executioners win the esteemed title “righteous,” for they have acted appropriately as agents of the Lord’s judgment.

24:1–14 As the Babylonian siege of Jerusalem begins (588 B.C.), Ezekiel uses allegory to depict Jerusalem and its overconfident inhabitants as a pot of meat set on the fire for boiling (vv. 3–5; cf. 11:3) and left there until only burnt bones remain (v. 10). In vv. 6–8, the innocent blood shed by Jerusalem’s inhabitants is the rust that, despite efforts to remove it, coats the interior of the pot filled with meat. Once emptied (v. 8), the rust-encrusted pot is set on hot coals (v. 11), but the rust remains (v. 12). Only the brunt of the Lord’s fury can cleanse Jerusalem of its guilt (vv. 13–14).

24:1 The tenth day . . . the ninth year: January 15, 588 B.C. The same wording appears in 2 Kgs 25:1 (Jer 52:4).

24:7 Blood . . . to be covered with dirt: since blood was sacred to God, it had to be covered with earth (Gn 37:26; Lv 17:13); the blood of innocent victims left uncovered cried out for vengeance; cf. Gn 4:10; Jb 16:18; Is 26:21.

24:12 A cryptic line in Hebrew.

24:17 The bread of mourners: a post-burial meal that mourners shared to comfort one another; cf. 2 Sm 3:35; Jer 16:7. The other gestures mentioned here were also popular mourning customs. Because Ezekiel does not observe any of the mourning customs mentioned, the people are puzzled and ask him to explain.

24:22–24 The fall of the city will be so sudden and final that the exiles will have no time to go into mourning.

24:27 Mute: unable to preach anything but the Lord’s judgment against Judah and Jerusalem; cf. 3:27 and note on 33:21–22.

25:1–32:32 These chapters form a body of oracles directed against foreign nations. They follow the prophet’s condemnation of Judah and oracles announcing its destruction. The unit precedes the announcement of Judah’s salvation in chaps. 33–48.

25:1–17 Ezekiel condemns four nations for their reactions to Judah’s destruction and exile: Ammon to the east (vv. 2–7); Moab to the southeast (vv. 8–11); Edom to the south (vv. 12–14); Philistia to the west (vv. 15–17). Their hostility was not unprovoked; at one time or another, each one either lost territory to Israel or had been under Israelite control.

25:4 People from the east: nomadic tribes from the desert east of Ammon and Moab (cf. Is 11:14; Jer 49:28), often a threat to outlying towns and villages.

25:9 The whole flank of Moab: the eastern edge of the Moabite plateau, perhaps lightly fortified because the vast desert to the east provided a natural barrier to invasion.

25:16 Cherethites: people from the island of Crete in the Aegean, the Philistines’ point of origin. In Zep 2:5, the terms “Philistines,” “Cherethites,” and “seacoast people” describe the same group of people.

26:1 The Hebrew text does not give a number with the month. This translation assumes a scribal error, the omission of the second occurrence of the number eleven.

26:2 Tyre is pictured rejoicing over Jerusalem’s fall to Babylon because now the wealth from caravans and other trade will go to Tyrian merchants.

26:4–5 A bare rock: the Tyre of Ezekiel’s time was situated on a rocky island just off the Phoenician coast. During the time of Alexander the Great a causeway was built to connect it to the mainland.

26:6 Daughter cities: tributary towns and villages on the mainland.

26:16 The princes of the sea: the rulers of the islands and coastal cities leagued commercially with Tyre.

26:17 Lament: the princes sing a funeral dirge at the burial of the personified Tyre; cf. the similar lamentation over Egypt in 32:3–8.

26:20 Those who go down to the pit: the dead, pictured as dwelling in Sheol, a place or cave of darkness. Cf. 32:17–32; Is 14:4–21 for other examples.

27:5 Senir: another name for Mount Hermon; cf. Dt 3:9

27:6 Bashan: an area in northern Transjordan, noted for its lush growth and great forests (cf. Is 2:13). Kittim: here, probably Cyprus.

27:7 Elishah: perhaps another term for Cyprus.

27:8–9 Sidon . . . Gebal: Phoenician cities in Tyre's orbit of influence; Gebal is classical Byblos.

27:11 Helech: perhaps in Asia Minor; otherwise unknown.

27:17 Grain: most commentators have read "figs," but Hebrew panag more properly describes milled grains or prepared meal.

28:1–10 Ezekiel mocks the arrogance of Tyre's leader, who mistakes the city's commercial success for evidence of his divinity. At the hands of a foreign army, commissioned by the only God worthy of the name, this leader dies a humiliating, unceremonious death.

28:3 Wiser than Daniel: see note on 14:14.

28:12–19 Ezekiel describes the leader of Tyre in language that recalls the imagery of Gn 2–3.

28:14 The holy mountain of God: the residence of gods in Israelite and non-Israelite myth; cf. Is 14:13. Fiery stones: associated with the divine presence; cf. Ez 1:13; Ps 18:13.

29:1 The date is calculated to be January 7, 587 B.C. The siege of Jerusalem had begun a year earlier; cf. 24:1.

29:2 Egypt was allied with Judah against the Babylonians.

29:3 Dragon: Hebrew reads tannim, usually translated "jackals," here a byform of tannin, the mythical dragon, or sea monster, representing chaos (cf. Is 27:1; 51:9; Jer 51:34; Ps 91:13; Jb 7:12), and the crocodile native to the Nile. Nile: the many rivulets of the Nile that branch out into the Delta.

29:4–5 Ezekiel's repetition of detail creates a vivid picture of Egypt's destruction: God hauls the crocodile (Pharaoh) and the fish clinging to it for protection (the Egyptian populace) out of the Nile and lands them in an open field, where their corpses are torn apart by wildlife rather than being properly buried (cf. Dt 28:26; 2 Kgs 9:36–37; Jer 34:20; Ez 39:17–20).

29:6 Staff of reeds: Pharaoh is like a reed that looks sturdy but breaks under pressure. For a similar image, cf. 2 Kgs 18:21 (Is 36:6).

29:10 From Migdol to Syene: from the northeastern to the southern limits of Egypt. Syene is the modern Aswan, at the first cataract of the Nile; Ethiopia (Heb. kush) is the territory south of Aswan.

29:14 Pathros: an Egyptian word for upper, i.e., southern, Egypt, above Memphis/Thebes. As silt filled the Delta region and richer land became available there, the population spread north, creating the tradition of a migration from the south (Is 11:11; Jer 44:1, 15).

29:17 In the twenty-seventh year on the first day of the first month: April 26, 571 B.C. This is the latest date attached to any of Ezekiel's prophecies.

29:18–19 Nebuchadnezzar's thirteen-year siege (587–574 B.C.) ended with Tyre's surrender on the condition that the Babylonian army would not loot and pillage (pace 26:3–14). According to Ezekiel, Nebuchadnezzar and his army should collect their wages for serving as God's instrument in Tyre's punishment, by plundering and controlling Egypt.

29:21 A horn: God will give Israel renewed strength. For horn as a symbol of strength, cf. Dt 33:17; Ps 92:11; 132:17. Ezekiel suggests that the Babylonian conquest of Egypt precedes Israel's restoration, an event he expects to witness and acknowledge when God removes his muteness.

30:5 Mixed rabble: mercenaries.

30:9 God spreads panic throughout Ethiopia, ancient Cush, by sending messengers with news of Egypt's fall. Rivers at its borders insulated Ethiopia and made it inaccessible except by boat.

30:13–19 The prophet enumerates a list of major Egyptian cities that shall each bear the judgment proclaimed in the previous oracle, vv. 1–12.

30:20 The seventh day of the first month in the eleventh year: April 29, 587 B.C.

30:21–26 This oracle was delivered more than a year into the siege of Jerusalem (24:1). When Pharaoh Hophra came to help Jerusalem, the Babylonians temporarily lifted the siege; cf. Jer 34:21; 37:6–7. In Ezekiel’s eyes, Hophra was interfering with the punishment God intended the Babylonians to inflict on Judah. The Babylonians routed the Egyptians, who could not offer Jerusalem any more help; cf. chap. 31.

31:1 The first day of the third month in the eleventh year: June 21, 587 B.C.

31:3 Assyria: this translates te’ashshur, which some interpret as “cypress tree.” The oracle, however, compares the fate of Pharaoh to the terrible demise of Assyria because of its arrogant pride (cf. Na 1–3). Ezekiel may have drawn on an ancient myth of a cosmic tree of life to emphasize the greatness of Egypt’s fall.

31:6 Shade: a metaphor for protection (cf. Lam 4:20).

31:9 Here Israel’s God is responsible for Assyria’s splendor, whereas in Is 10:13 Assyria claims to have created its own might.

31:17 Allies: lit., “arm.”

32:1 The first day of the twelfth month in the twelfth year: March 3, 585 B.C.

32:17–32 The description of Pharaoh in Sheol shifts rapidly between the single individual and the collective body, between corpses speaking and corpses lying inert, between singular (his, hers, its) and plural (them, theirs) pronouns to emphasize that all the enemies of Israel come to the same end.

32:26 Meshech and Tubal: see note on 38:2.

33:2 Sentinel: the theme of the sentinel’s duty initiates a new commission to announce salvation (chaps. 33–48), just as the same command (3:17–21) opened Ezekiel’s ministry to announce judgment (chaps. 3–24).

33:21–22 The fifth day of the tenth month: January 8, 585 B.C. According to Jeremiah (39:2), Jerusalem was taken in July, 587. Some manuscripts read “eleventh” for “twelfth” year (January, 586); even so, there was ample time between the fall of Jerusalem and the arrival of the survivor from that city to journey to Babylon. However, this is the survivor sent to fulfill the promise of Ez 24:25–27, the eyewitness whose arrival would release Ezekiel from his muteness; cf. 3:26–27.

33:23–29 News brought by the survivor furnished the occasion for this prophecy. Like Jeremiah, Ezekiel rejects the idea that those left in Judah have any claim to the land. The new Israel is to be formed from the exiles.

33:32 Singer: perhaps the term indicates an entertainer whom one enjoys and then forgets.

34:2 Shepherds: the leaders of the people. A frequent title for kings and deities in the ancient Near East; the ideal ruler took care of his subjects and anticipated their needs. Ezekiel’s oracle broadens the reference to include the whole class of Jerusalem’s leaders (v. 17). The prophet assures his audience, the exiles in Babylon, that God holds these leaders responsible for what has happened to Jerusalem and will give Israel a new shepherd worthy of the title.

34:23 One shepherd: a future king to rule over a unified, restored Israel, in the image of the idealized David present in the Book of Kings (cf., e.g., 1 Kgs 3:3; 11:38; 2 Kgs 14:3; 22:2). My servant David: a common characterization of David; e.g., 1 Kgs 11:34, 36, 38; 2 Kgs 8:19; Ps 36:1; 78:70. See Ez 37:25.

35:1–15 After the fall of Jerusalem, Edom assisted the Babylonians in devastating the land and subduing the population in order to occupy part of Judah’s former territory. For this reason these oracles against Edom are found in the context of the city’s fall.

35:5 Final punishment: throughout this oracle the prophet echoes the threat against the mountains of Israel found in chaps. 6–7.

35:10 The two nations and the two lands: by presenting Edom’s excursion into the southern territory of Judah as its claim to both kingdoms, Ezekiel exaggerates Edom’s greed and arrogance. LORD was there: Edom’s betrayal of Judah becomes an attack on Judah’s God, the land’s sovereign.

In 11:15 and 33:24, Ezekiel condemns Judahites who annex land that does not belong to them. Now the exiles in Babylon learn that even though God had left Jerusalem (chap. 11), he witnesses Edom's insolence and pronounces judgment against it. Cf. 48:35, "The LORD is there!"

36:13 You devour your own people: i.e., the land destroys its own population; this phrase also occurs in Nm 13:32, where Israelite spies describe Canaan as "a land that devours its inhabitants."

36:20–24 These verses make clear that Israel's restoration is God's initiative, independent of the people's shame and repentance (v. 31). By their wickedness, Israel provoked the exile; its presence among the nations gave the impression that God could not protect his people. God's gracious return of Israel to its land will restore his honor among these same nations.

36:25–26 God's initiative to cleanse Israel (cf. 24:13–14) is the first act in the creation of a new people, no longer disposed to repeating Israel's wicked past (chap. 20). To make this restoration permanent, God replaces Israel's rebellious and obdurate interiority ("heart of stone") with an interiority ("heart of flesh") susceptible to and animated by God's intentions ("my spirit," v. 27).

37:1–14 This account is a figurative description of God's creation of a new Israel. Even though that creation begins with the remains of the old Israel, the exiles under the image of dry bones, depicting a totally hopeless situation, the new Israel is radically different: it is an ideal people, shaped by God's spirit to live the covenant faithfully, something the old Israel, exiles included, were unable to do. While this passage in its present context is not about the doctrine of individual or communal resurrection, many Jewish and Christian commentators suggest that the doctrine is foreshadowed here.

37:9 The Hebrew word rûah has multiple related meanings expressed by different English words: wind, spirit, breath. In this translation, rûah is rendered "spirit," a powerful force that creates vision and insight (v. 1); "breath," physical energy that quickens and enlivens (vv. 5–6); "wind," invisible physical energy, sometimes destructive, sometimes invigorating (e.g., the rain-bearing winter winds), also a metaphor for restoration and new life (vv. 9–10); "my spirit," a share in God's power so the people observe the law that assures them life in the land (v. 14).

37:15–22 The symbolic action of joining two sticks into one continues Ezekiel's description of God's future saving action: the unification of Judah and Israel under an ideal ruler.

38:1–39:20 These three oracles against Gog (38:2–13; 14–23; 39:1–20) describe a mythic attack of God against a final enemy of his people sometime in the future. Like the oracles against the nations, their purpose is to strengthen Israel's hope in God, since they end with God's triumph on behalf of the people.

38:2 Gog: the name is symbolic, probably derived from Gyges, king of Lydia. The gloss Magog may be an Akkadian expression, mat-Gog, "the land of Gog." Meshech and Tubal, as well as Gomer and Beth-togarmah (v. 6), were countries around the Black Sea, the northernmost countries known to the Israelites. The north was the traditional direction from which invasion was expected; cf. Jer 1:13–15.

38:12 Center: lit., "navel." Many ancient peoples spoke of their own homelands as "the navel," that is, the center of the earth.

38:15 Zaphon: cf. note on Jb 37:22.

39:11 The Valley of Abarim: in the Abarim mountains, east of the Jordan. "Abarim" plays on the word 'oberim, "travelers." Hamon-Gog: "the horde of Gog."

40:1–48:35 This lengthy vision of a new Temple and a restored Israel is dated in v. 1 to April 28, 573 B.C. The literary form of the vision is sometimes compared to a mandala, a sacred model through which one can move symbolically to reach the world of the divine. Ezekiel describes the Temple through its boundaries, entrances, and exits in chaps. 40–43; by its sacred and profane use and space in 44–46; and by its central place within the land itself in 47–48. The prophet could not have expected a literal fulfillment of much of what he described. The passage doubtless went through several editorial stages, both from the prophet and from later writers.

40:5 A cubit plus a handbreadth: a great cubit. The ordinary cubit consisted of six handbreadths; the great cubit, of seven. In measuring the Temple, a rod six great cubits long was used. The ordinary cubit was about one and a half feet, or, more exactly, 17.5 inches; the large cubit, 20.4 inches.

40:6–16 The gate facing east, leading into the outer court of the Temple, is described more fully than the north and south gates, which, however, have the same dimensions.

On the west side of the outer court there is a large building instead of a gate (cf. 41:12).

40:17 The outer court: the court outside the Temple area proper, which had its own inner court (vv. 28–37).

40:28–37 The gates leading into the inner court of the Temple area correspond to the gates leading into the outer court, with the exception that their vestibules are on the outer rather than the inner side.

40:30 The reference to vestibules all around is uncertain, and the verse may have arisen as a partial repetition of v. 29.

40:46 Sons of Zadok: descendants of the priestly line of Zadok; cf. 2 Sm 15:24–29; 1 Kgs 1:32–34; 2:35.

40:48–41:15 The description of Ezekiel's visionary Temple closely follows the description of the Temple of Solomon (1 Kgs 6), along with some crucial differences.

40:49–41:4 Vestibule . . . nave . . . holy of holies: the three divisions of the Temple building in progressing order of sanctity. The last is called "the inner sanctuary" in 1 Kgs 6.

41:6 The description of the three stories of rooms surrounding the Temple building can be compared with Solomon's Temple in 1 Kgs 6:6; there a step-like or terraced retaining wall supported the Temple building so no beams or nails from these chambers would enter the Temple wall itself.

41:12 The building: the function of this structure behind the Temple is never specified.

41:22 A wooden altar: the altar of incense, standing in the nave at the entrance to the holy of holies.

42:5–6 The three rows of identical chambers, on different ground levels, necessarily had roofs on correspondingly different levels.

42:13 The function of these chambers is explained again in 46:19–20.

43:8 They placed their threshold against my threshold: in preexilic Jerusalem, the Temple and the palace belonged to the same complex of buildings; kings like Ahaz and Manasseh treated it as their private chapel for the religious practices Ezekiel condemns. In the new Israel the Temple is free, even spatially, from civil jurisdiction; cf. 45:7–8. This is an instance of Ezekiel's broader program to separate the sacred from the secular.

43:13–17 The altar: like altars from Assyria and other parts of the ancient Near East, this altar has three parts: a base, a pedestal, and an upper block with a channel cut into the surface on all sides. The rim around the upper block (v. 17) stopped blood and other sacrificial material from falling to the ground.

44:3 Ezekiel imagines a scene like this: The prince stands at the eastern gate of the inner court while his sacrifice is being offered (46:2); he then goes to the vestibule of the outer court to eat the sacrificial meal. The closed outer gate on the eastern side signifies that the Lord has entered the Temple permanently, not to depart again.

44:7–14 According to Ezekiel, the Levites' priestly role is reduced to the performance of menial tasks as punishment for their misdeeds (cf. vv. 10–14). This demotion was enforced during the restoration of Temple worship under Ezra and Nehemiah; this may explain the small number of Levites willing to return to Jerusalem after the exile.

44:19 Transmit holiness to the people: holiness was considered to have a physical quality that could be communicated from person to person. It is a danger to those who have not prepared themselves to be in God's presence. The priests remove their ceremonial garments out of concern for the people.

44:29 Under the ban: dedicated to the Lord.

45:10–12 Besides the land monopoly fostered by royal greed and collusion with the wealthy (Mi 2:2; Is 3:12–15; 5:8–10), one grave social evil of preexilic Israel was dishonesty in business; cf. Hos 12:8; Am 8:5. Ephah, bath: see note on Is 5:10.

45:12 Mina: before the exile, a mina was worth fifty shekels; later, in imitation of Babylonian practice, its value increased to sixty shekels. A shekel weighed slightly less than half an ounce. A shekel's monetary value depended on whether it was gold or silver.

45:14 Kor: a liquid and a dry measure, equal to a homer.

45:24 Hin: one sixth of the liquid measure known as a bath.

46:2–12 The prophet describes the inner eastern gateway opening on the inner court of the priests in front of the Temple itself where the altar of sacrifice stands. The people may watch the priests making offerings on sabbaths and feast days only by looking through the open gate; the prince, however, may stand inside the gate, in the vestibule on the edge of the inner court, to observe the offerings. Only priests could stand in the court itself.

46:17 The year of release: the jubilee year; cf. Lv 25:23–55.

46:20 Cf. note on 44:19.

47:1–12 The life and refreshment produced wherever the Temple stream flows evoke the order and abundance of paradise (cf. Gn 1:20–22; 2:10–14; Ps 46:5) and represent the coming transformation Ezekiel envisions for the exiles and their land. Water signifies great blessings and evidence of the Lord's presence (cf. Jl 2:14).

47:8 The sea: the Dead Sea, in which nothing can live. This vision of the Temple stream which transforms places of death into places of life is similar in purpose to the oracle of dry bones in 37:1–14: it offers the exiles hope for the future.

47:10 From En-gedi to En-eglaim: En-gedi is about halfway down the western shore of the Dead Sea; En-eglaim may have been at its northern end.

47:13–20 These boundaries for a restored Israel correspond to the boundaries of the Davidic kingdom at its fullest extent; they are the "ideal boundaries" of the promised land; cf. Nm 34:3–12.

48:1–29 This distribution of the land among the tribes does not correspond to the geographical realities of Palestine. It is another idealizing element in Ezekiel's representation of a restored and transformed Israel.

The Book of Daniel

This book takes its name not from the author, who is actually unknown, but from its hero, who was allegedly among the first Jews deported to Babylon, where he lived at least until 538 B.C. Strictly speaking, the book does not belong to the prophetic writings but rather to a distinctive type of literature known as “apocalyptic,” of which it is an early specimen. Apocalyptic writing first appears about 200 B.C. and flourished among Jews and Christians down to the Middle Ages, especially in times of persecution. Apocalyptic literature has its roots in the older teaching of the prophets, who often pointed ahead to the day of the Lord, the consummation of history. For both prophet and apocalypticist there was one Lord of history, who would ultimately vindicate the chosen people. Apocalyptic also has roots in the wisdom tradition. Daniel has the gift of discernment from God. Greek wisdom (represented by the Babylonian “magicians and enchanters”) is ridiculed (see especially chaps. 2 and 5), whereas God reveals hidden things to faithful servants.

This work was composed during the bitter persecution carried on by Antiochus IV Epiphanes (167–164 B.C.) and was written to strengthen and comfort the Jewish people in their ordeal. The persecution was occasioned by Antiochus’s efforts to unify his kingdom, in face of the rising power of Rome, by continuing the hellenization begun by Alexander the Great; Antiochus tried to force Jews to adopt Greek ways, including religious practices. Severe penalties, including death, were exacted against those who refused (cf., e.g., 1Mc 1:41–63).

The book contains traditional stories (chaps. 1–6), which tell of the trials and triumphs of the wise Daniel and his three companions. The moral is that people of faith can resist temptation and conquer adversity. The stories bristle with historical problems and have the character of historical novels rather than factual records. What is more important than the question of historicity, and closer to the intention of the author, is the fact that persecuted Jews of the second century B.C. would quickly see the application of these stories to their own plight.

There follows in chaps. 7–12a series of visions promising deliverance and glory to the Jews in the days to come. The great nations of the ancient world have risen in vain against the Lord; his kingdom shall overthrow existing powers and last forever; in the end the dead will be raised for reward or punishment. Under this apocalyptic imagery some of the best elements of prophetic and sapiential teaching are synthesized: the insistence on right conduct, the divine control over events, the certainty that the kingdom of God will ultimately triumph and humanity attain the goal intended for it at the beginning of creation. The arrival of the kingdom is a central theme of the gospels, where Jesus is identified as the human figure (or “Son of Man”) who appears in Daniel’s vision in chap. 7. The message in both parts of the first twelve chapters (i.e., chaps. 1–6 and chaps. 7–12) is that history unrolls under the watchful eye of God, who does not abandon those who trust in him and will finally deliver and re-establish them. Moreover, it can be pointed out that chaps. 2 and 7 present the same teaching in different symbolism; 2:31 even describes the king’s dream as a “vision.”

The added episodes of Susanna, Bel, and the Dragon, found only in the Greek version, are edifying short stories with a didactic purpose (chaps. 13–14). The Greek version also adds a long prayer, numbered in the NAB and the Greek, 3:24–90, between 3:23–24 in the Hebrew text.

These three sections constitute the divisions of the Book of Daniel:

- I. Daniel and the Kings of Babylon (1:1–6:29)
- II. Daniel’s Visions (7:1–12:13)
- III. Appendix: Susanna, Bel, and the Dragon (13:1–14:42)

I. Daniel and the Kings of Babylon

CHAPTER 1

See RG 375–82

The Food Test. <sup>1</sup>In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim,* king of Judah, King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon came and laid siege to Jerusalem.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>2b</sup> The Lord handed over to him Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and some of the vessels of the temple of God, which he carried off to the land of Shinar* and placed in the temple treasury of his god.

<sup>8</sup>But Daniel was resolved not to defile himself with the king's food or wine; so he begged the chief chamberlain to spare him this defilement.*

<sup>9</sup>Though God had given Daniel the favor and sympathy of the chief chamberlain, <sup>10</sup>he said to Daniel, "I am afraid of my lord the king, who allotted your food and drink. If he sees that you look thinner in comparison to the other young men of your age, you will endanger my life with the king." <sup>11</sup>Then Daniel said to the guardian whom the chief chamberlain had put in charge of Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, <sup>12</sup>"Please test your servants for ten days. Let us be given vegetables to eat and water to drink. <sup>13</sup>Then see how we look in comparison with the other young men who eat from the royal table, and treat your servants according to what you see."

<sup>14</sup>He agreed to this request, and tested them for ten days; <sup>15</sup>after ten days they looked healthier and better fed than any of the young men who ate from the royal table. <sup>16</sup>So the steward continued to take away the food and wine they were to receive, and gave them vegetables.

<sup>17</sup>To these four young men God gave knowledge and proficiency in all literature and wisdom, and to Daniel the understanding of all visions and dreams. <sup>18</sup>At the end of the time the king had specified for their preparation, the chief chamberlain brought them before Nebuchadnezzar. <sup>19</sup>When the king had spoken with all of them, none was found equal to Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; and so they entered the king's service. <sup>20</sup>In any question of wisdom or understanding which the king put to them, he found them ten times better than any of the magicians and enchanters in his kingdom. <sup>21c</sup> Daniel remained there until the first year of King Cyrus. *

CHAPTER 2

Nebuchadnezzar's Dream.* <sup>1</sup>In the second year of his reign, King Nebuchadnezzar had a dream which left his spirit no rest and robbed him of his sleep. <sup>2</sup>So he ordered that the magicians, enchanters, sorcerers, and Chaldeans* be summoned to interpret the dream for him. When they came and presented themselves to the king, <sup>3</sup>he said to them, "I had a dream which will allow my spirit no rest until I know what it means." <sup>4</sup>The Chaldeans answered the king in Aramaic:* "O king, live forever! Tell your servants the dream and we will give its meaning." <sup>5</sup>The king answered the Chaldeans, "This is what I have decided: unless you tell me the dream and its meaning, you shall be cut to pieces and your houses made into a refuse heap. <sup>6</sup>But if you tell me the dream and its meaning, you shall receive from me gifts and presents and great honors. Therefore tell me the dream and its meaning."

<sup>7</sup>Again they answered, "Let the king tell his servants the dream and we will give its meaning." <sup>8</sup>But the king replied: "I know for certain that you are bargaining for time, since you know what I have decided. <sup>9</sup>If you do not tell me the dream, there can be but one decree for you. You have conspired to present a false and deceitful interpretation to me until the crisis is past. Tell me the dream, therefore, that I may be sure that you can also give its correct interpretation."

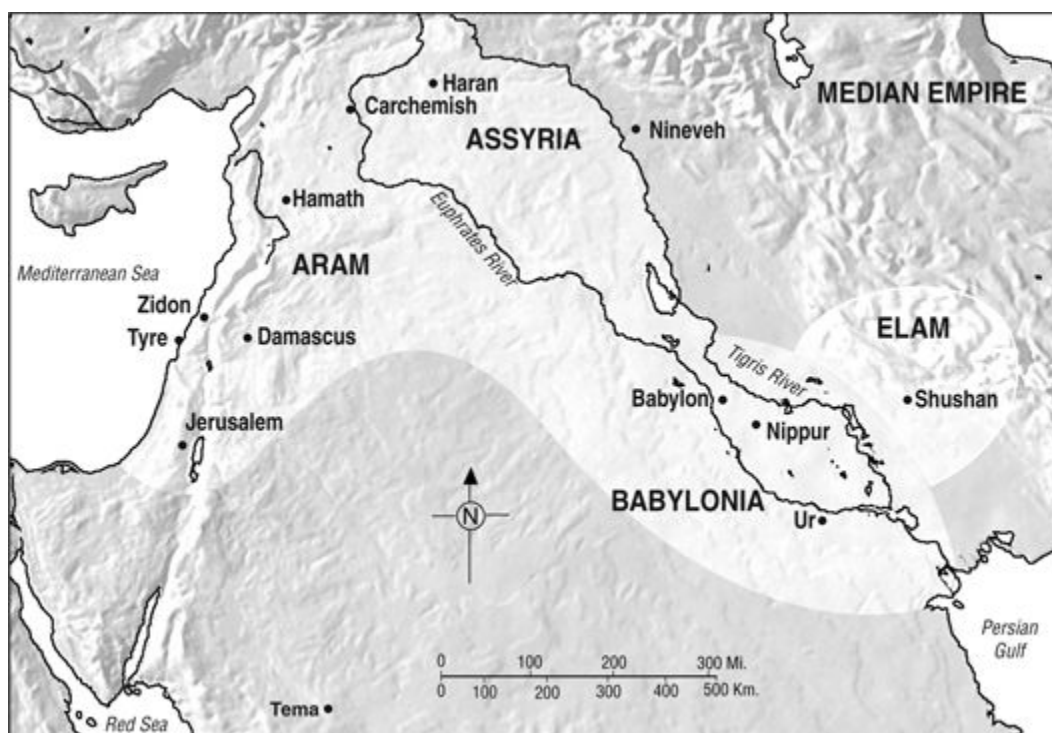

<sup>10</sup>The Chaldeans answered the king: "There is not a man on earth who can do what you ask, O king; never has any king, however great and mighty, asked such a thing of any magician, enchanter, or Chaldean. <sup>11</sup>What you demand, O king, is too difficult; there is no one who can tell it to the king except the gods, who do not dwell among people of flesh." <sup>12</sup>At this the king became violently angry and ordered all the wise men* of Babylon to be put to death. <sup>13</sup>When the decree was issued that the wise men should be slain, Daniel and his companions were also sought out.

<sup>14</sup>Then Daniel prudently took counsel with Arioch, the chief of the king's guard, who had set out to kill the wise men of Babylon. <sup>15</sup>He asked Arioch, the officer of the king, "What is the reason for this harsh order from the king?” When Arioch told him, <sup>16</sup>Daniel went and asked for time from the king, that he might give him the interpretation.

<sup>17</sup>Daniel went home and informed his companions Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, <sup>18</sup>that they might implore the mercy of the God of heaven in regard to this mystery, so that Daniel and his companions might not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon. <sup>19</sup>During the night the mystery was revealed to Daniel in a vision, and he blessed the God of heaven:

The Neo-Babylonian Empire

<sup>20</sup>“Blessed be the name of God forever and
ever,

for wisdom and power are his.

<sup>21</sup>He causes the changes of the times and
seasons,

establishes kings and deposes them.

He gives wisdom to the wise
and knowledge to those who understand.

<sup>22</sup>He reveals deep and hidden things and knows what is in the darkness,

for the light dwells with him.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>23</sup>To you, God of my ancestors,
I give thanks and praise,
because you have given me wisdom
and power.
Now you have shown me what we asked
of you,
you have made known to us the king's dream."

<sup>24</sup>So Daniel went to Arioch, whom the king had appointed to destroy the wise men of Babylon, and said to him, "Do not put the wise men of Babylon to death. Bring me before the king, and I will tell him the interpretation of the dream." Arioch quickly brought Daniel to the king and said, <sup>25</sup>"I have found a man among the Judean exiles who can give the interpretation to the king." <sup>26</sup>The king asked Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, "Can you tell me the dream that I had and its meaning?" <sup>27</sup>In the king's presence Daniel made this reply:

"The mystery about which the king has inquired, the wise men, enchanters, magicians, and diviners could not explain to the king. <sup>28</sup>But there is a God in heaven who reveals mysteries, and he has shown King Nebuchadnezzar what is to happen in the last days; this was your dream, the visions* you saw as you lay in bed. <sup>29</sup>To you in your bed there came thoughts about what should happen in the future, and he who reveals mysteries showed you what is to be. <sup>30</sup>To me also this mystery has been revealed; not that I am wiser than any other living person, but in order that its meaning may be made known to the king, that you may understand the thoughts of your own mind.

<sup>31</sup>"In your vision, O king, you saw a statue, very large and exceedingly bright, terrifying in appearance as it stood before you. <sup>32</sup>Its head was pure gold, its chest and arms were silver, its belly and thighs bronze, <sup>33</sup>its legs iron, its feet partly iron and partly clay.* <sup>34</sup>While you watched, a stone was hewn from a mountain without a hand being put to it, and it struck its iron and clay feet, breaking them in pieces. <sup>35</sup>The iron, clay, bronze, silver, and gold all crumbled at once, fine as the chaff on the threshing floor in summer, and the wind blew them away without leaving a trace. But the stone that struck the statue became a great mountain and filled the whole earth.

<sup>36*</sup> “This was the dream; the interpretation we shall also give in the king’s presence. <sup>37</sup>You, O king, are the king of kings; to you the God of heaven has given dominion and strength, power and glory; <sup>38</sup>human beings, wild beasts, and birds of the air, wherever they may dwell, he has handed over to you, making you ruler over them all; you are the head of gold. <sup>39</sup>Another kingdom shall take your place, inferior to yours, then a third kingdom, of bronze, which shall rule over the whole earth. <sup>40</sup>There shall be a fourth kingdom, strong as iron; it shall break in pieces and subdue all these others, just as iron breaks in pieces and crushes everything else. <sup>41</sup>The feet and toes you saw, partly of clay and partly of iron, mean that it shall be a divided kingdom, but yet have some of the hardness of iron. As you saw the iron mixed with clay tile, <sup>42</sup>and the toes partly iron and partly clay, the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly fragile. <sup>43</sup>The iron mixed with clay means that they shall seal their alliances by intermarriage, but they shall not stay united, any more than iron mixes with clay. <sup>44</sup>In the lifetime of those kings the God of heaven will set up a kingdom that shall never be destroyed or delivered up to another people; rather, it shall break in pieces all these kingdoms and put an end to them, and it shall stand forever. <sup>45e</sup> That is the meaning of the stone you saw hewn from the mountain without a hand being put to it, which broke in pieces the iron, bronze, clay, silver, and gold. The great God has revealed to the king what shall be in the future; this is exactly what you dreamed, and its meaning is sure.”

<sup>46</sup>Then King Nebuchadnezzar fell down and worshiped Daniel and ordered sacrifice and incense offered to him. <sup>47</sup>To Daniel the king said, “Truly your God is the God of gods and Lord of kings and a revealer of mysteries; that is why you were able to reveal this mystery.” <sup>48</sup>He advanced Daniel to a high post, gave him many generous presents, made him ruler of the whole province of Babylon and chief prefect over all the wise men of Babylon. <sup>49</sup>At Daniel’s request the king made Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego administrators of the province of Babylon, while Daniel himself remained at the king’s court.

The Fiery Furnace. <sup>1</sup>King Nebuchadnezzar had a golden statue made, sixty cubits high and six cubits wide, which he set up in the plain of Dura* in the province of Babylon. <sup>2</sup>He then ordered the satraps,* prefects, and governors, the counselors, treasurers, judges, magistrates and all the officials of the provinces to be summoned to the dedication of the statue which he had set up. <sup>3</sup>The satraps, prefects, and governors, the counselors, treasurers, judges, magistrates and all the officials of the provinces came together for the dedication and stood before the statue which King Nebuchadnezzar had set up. <sup>4</sup>A herald cried out: “Nations and peoples of every language, <sup>5*</sup> when you hear the sound of the horn, pipe, zither, dulcimer, harp, double-flute, and all the other musical instruments, you must fall down and worship the golden statue which King Nebuchadnezzar has set up. <sup>6</sup>Whoever does not fall down and worship shall be instantly cast into a white-hot furnace.” <sup>7</sup>Therefore, as soon as they heard the sound of the horn, pipe, zither, dulcimer, harp, double-flute, and all the other musical instruments, the nations and peoples of every language all fell down and worshiped the golden statue which King Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

<sup>8</sup>At that point, some of the Chaldeans came and accused the Jews <sup>9</sup>to King Nebuchadnezzar: “O king, live forever! <sup>10</sup>O king, you issued a decree that everyone who heard the sound of the horn, pipe, zither, dulcimer, harp, and double-flute, and all the other musical instruments should fall down and worship the golden statue; <sup>11</sup>whoever did not was to be cast into a white-hot furnace. <sup>12</sup>There are certain Jews whom you have made administrators of the province of Babylon: Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego; these men, O king, have paid no attention to you; they will not serve your god or worship the golden statue which you set up.”

<sup>13</sup>Nebuchadnezzar flew into a rage and sent for Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, who were promptly brought before the king. <sup>14</sup>King Nebuchadnezzar questioned them: “Is it true, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, that you will not serve my god, or worship the golden statue that I set up? <sup>15</sup>Now, if you are ready to fall down and worship the statue I made, whenever you hear the sound of the horn, pipe, zither, dulcimer, harp, double-flute, and all the other musical instruments, then all will be well; * if not, you shall be instantly cast into the white-hot furnace; and who is the God who can deliver you out of my hands?" <sup>16</sup>Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego answered King Nebuchadnezzar, "There is no need for us to defend ourselves before you in this matter. <sup>17</sup>If our God, whom we serve, can save us * from the white-hot furnace and from your hands, O king, may he save us! <sup>18</sup>But even if he will not, you should know, O king, that we will not serve your god or worship the golden statue which you set up."

<sup>19</sup>Nebuchadnezzar's face became livid with utter rage against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. He ordered the furnace to be heated seven times more than usual <sup>20</sup>and had some of the strongest men in his army bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego and cast them into the white-hot furnace. <sup>21</sup>They were bound and cast into the white-hot furnace with their trousers, shirts, hats and other garments, <sup>22</sup>for the king's order was urgent. So huge a fire was kindled in the furnace that the flames devoured the men who threw Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego into it. <sup>23</sup>But these three fell, bound, into the midst of the white-hot furnace.

<sup>26</sup>"Blessed are you, and praiseworthy,
O Lord, the God of our ancestors,
and glorious forever is your name.

<sup>27</sup>For you are just in all you have done;
all your deeds are faultless, all your ways right,
and all your judgments proper.

<sup>28</sup>You have executed proper judgments
in all that you have brought upon us and upon Jerusalem, the holy city of our ancestors.

By a proper judgment you have done all
this
because of our sins;

<sup>29</sup>For we have sinned and transgressed
by departing from you,
and we have done every kind of evil.

- 30 Your commandments we have not heeded or observed,
    nor have we done as you ordered us
    for our good.
- 31 Therefore all you have brought upon us,
    all you have done to us,
    you have done by a proper judgment.
- 32 You have handed us over to our enemies,
    lawless and hateful rebels;
    to an unjust king, the worst in all the world.
- 33 Now we cannot open our mouths;
    shame and reproach have come upon us,
    your servants, who revere you.
- 34 For your name's sake, do not deliver us
    up forever,
    or make void your covenant.
- 35 Do not take away your mercy from us,
    for the sake of Abraham, your beloved, Isaac your servant, and Israel your holy one,
- 36 To whom you promised to multiply their offspring
    like the stars of heaven,
    or the sand on the shore of the sea.
- 37 For we are reduced, O Lord, beyond any other nation,
    brought low everywhere in the world
    this day
    because of our sins.
- 38 We have in our day no prince, prophet, or leader,
    no burnt offering, sacrifice, oblation,
    or incense,
    no place to offer first fruits, to find favor with you.
- 39 But with contrite heart and humble spirit
    let us be received;
As though it were burnt offerings of rams
    and bulls,
    or tens of thousands of fat lambs,
- 40 So let our sacrifice be in your presence

today
and find favor before you;
for those who trust in you cannot be put to shame.

<sup>41</sup>And now we follow you with our whole
heart,
we fear you and we seek your face.

Do not put us to shame,

<sup>42</sup>but deal with us in your kindness and great mercy.

<sup>43</sup>Deliver us in accord with your wonders,
and bring glory to your name, O Lord:

<sup>44</sup>Let all those be put to shame
who inflict evils on your servants;
Let them be shamed and powerless,
and their strength broken;

<sup>45</sup>Let them know that you alone are the Lord God,
glorious over the whole world.”

<sup>46</sup>Now the king’s servants who had thrown them in continued to stoke the furnace with naptha, pitch, tow, and brush. <sup>47</sup>The flames rose forty-nine cubits above the furnace, <sup>48</sup>and spread out, burning the Chaldeans that it caught around the furnace. <sup>49</sup>But the angel of the Lord went down into the furnace with Azariah and his companions, drove the fiery flames out of the furnace, <sup>50</sup>and made the inside of the furnace as though a dew-laden breeze were blowing through it. The fire in no way touched them or caused them pain or harm. <sup>51</sup>Then these three in the furnace with one voice sang, glorifying and blessing God:

<sup>52</sup>“Blessed are you, O Lord, the God of our ancestors,
praiseworthy and exalted above all
forever;

And blessed is your holy and glorious
name,
praiseworthy and exalted above all for all ages.

<sup>53</sup>Blessed are you in the temple of your holy glory,

praiseworthy and glorious above all
forever.

<sup>54</sup>Blessed are you on the throne of your
kingdom,
praiseworthy and exalted above all
forever.

<sup>55</sup>Blessed are you who look into the depths
from your throne upon the cherubim,
praiseworthy and exalted above all
forever.

<sup>56</sup>Blessed are you in the firmament of
heaven,
praiseworthy and glorious forever.

<sup>57</sup>Bless the Lord, all you works of the Lord,
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>58</sup>Angels of the Lord, bless the Lord,
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>59</sup>You heavens, bless the Lord, praise and exalt him above all forever.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>60</sup>All you waters above the heavens, bless
the Lord,
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>61</sup>All you powers, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>62</sup>Sun and moon, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>63</sup>Stars of heaven, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>64</sup>Every shower and dew, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>65</sup>All you winds, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>66</sup>Fire and heat, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>67</sup>Cold and chill, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>68</sup>Dew and rain, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>69</sup>Frost and chill, bless the Lord;

praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>70</sup>Hoarfrost and snow, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>71</sup>Nights and days, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>72</sup>Light and darkness, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>73</sup>Lightnings and clouds, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>74</sup>Let the earth bless the Lord,
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>75</sup>Mountains and hills, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>76</sup>Everything growing on earth, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>77</sup>You springs, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>78</sup>Seas and rivers, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>79</sup>You sea monsters and all water creatures, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>80</sup>All you birds of the air, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>81</sup>All you beasts, wild and tame, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>82</sup>All you mortals, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>83</sup>O Israel, bless the Lord;

<sup>84</sup>Priests of the Lord, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>85</sup>Servants of the Lord, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>86</sup>Spirits and souls of the just, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>87</sup>Holy and humble of heart, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.

<sup>88</sup>Hananiah, Azariah, Mishael, bless the Lord;
praise and exalt him above all forever.
For he has delivered us from Sheol,
and saved us from the power of death;
He has freed us from the raging flame
and delivered us from the fire.

<sup>89</sup>Give thanks to the Lord, who is good,
whose mercy endures forever.

<sup>90</sup>Bless the God of gods, all you who fear
the Lord;
praise and give thanks,
for his mercy endures forever.”

Deliverance from the Furnace.<sup>91</sup>Then King Nebuchadnezzar was startled and rose in haste, asking his counselors, “Did we not cast three men bound into the fire?” “Certainly, O king,” they answered. <sup>92</sup>“But,” he replied, “I see four men unbound and unhurt, walking in the fire, and the fourth looks like a son of God.” <sup>93</sup>Then Nebuchadnezzar came to the opening of the white-hot furnace and called: “Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, servants of the Most High God, come out.” Thereupon Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego came out of the fire. <sup>94</sup>When the satraps, prefects, governors, and counselors of the king came together, they saw that the fire had had no power over the bodies of these men; not a hair of their heads had been singed, nor were their garments altered; there was not even a smell of fire about them. <sup>95</sup>Nebuchadnezzar exclaimed, “Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, who sent his angel to deliver the servants that trusted in him; they disobeyed the royal command and yielded their bodies rather than serve or worship any god except their own God. <sup>96</sup>Therefore I decree for nations and peoples of every language that whoever blasphemes the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego shall be cut to pieces and his house made into a refuse heap. For there is no other God who can rescue like this.” <sup>97</sup>Then the king promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the province of Babylon.

<sup>98</sup>*King Nebuchadnezzar to the nations and peoples of every language, wherever they dwell on earth: May your peace abound! <sup>99</sup>It has seemed good to me to publish the signs and wonders which the Most High God has accomplished in my regard.

<sup>100</sup>How great are his signs, how mighty his wonders;
his kingship is an everlasting kingship,
and his dominion endures through all generations.<sup>9</sup>

Nebuchadnezzar's Madness. <sup>1</sup>I, Nebuchadnezzar, was at home in my palace, content and prosperous. <sup>2</sup>I had a terrifying dream as I lay in bed, and the images and my visions frightened me. <sup>3</sup>So I issued a decree that all the wise men of Babylon should be brought before me to give the interpretation of the dream. <sup>4</sup>When the magicians, enchanters, Chaldeans, and diviners had come in, I related the dream before them; but none of them could tell me its meaning. <sup>5</sup>Finally there came before me Daniel, whose name is Belteshazzar after the name of my god,* and in whom is a spirit of the holy gods.<sup>h</sup> I repeated the dream to him: <sup>6</sup>“Belteshazzar, chief of the magicians, I know that a spirit of the holy gods is in you and no mystery is too difficult for you; this is the dream that I saw, tell me its meaning.

<sup>7</sup>“These were the visions I saw while in bed: I saw a tree of great height at the center of the earth. <sup>8</sup>It was large and strong, with its top touching the heavens, and it could be seen to the ends of the earth. <sup>9</sup>Its leaves were beautiful, its fruit abundant, providing food for all. Under it the wild beasts found shade, in its branches the birds of the air nested; all flesh ate of it. <sup>10</sup>In the vision I saw while in bed, a holy watcher* came down from heaven <sup>11</sup>and cried aloud in these words:

‘Cut down the tree and lop off its branches,
strip off its leaves and scatter its fruit;
Let the beasts flee from beneath it, and the birds from its branches,

<sup>12</sup>but leave its stump in the earth.

Bound with iron and bronze,
let him be fed with the grass of the field
and bathed with the dew of heaven;
let his lot be with the beasts in the grass of the earth.

<sup>13</sup>Let his mind be changed from a human
one;

let the mind of a beast be given him,
till seven years pass over him.

<sup>14</sup>By decree of the watchers is this proclamation,

by order of the holy ones, this sentence;
That all who live may know that the Most High is sovereign over human kingship,
Giving it to whom he wills,
and setting it over the lowliest of mortals.’<sup>i</sup>

<sup>15</sup>“This is the dream that I, King Nebuchadnezzar, had. Now, Belteshazzar, tell me its meaning. None of the wise men in my kingdom can tell me the meaning, but you can, because the spirit of the holy gods is in you.”

<sup>16</sup>Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was appalled for a time, dismayed by his thoughts. “Belteshazzar,” the king said to him, “do not let the dream or its meaning dismay you.” “My lord,” Belteshazzar replied, “may this dream be for your enemies, and its meaning for your foes. <sup>17</sup>The tree that you saw, large and strong, its top touching the heavens, that could be seen by the whole earth, <sup>18</sup>its leaves beautiful, its fruit abundant, providing food for all, under which the wild beasts lived, and in whose branches the birds of the air dwelt— <sup>19</sup>you are that tree, O king, large and strong! Your majesty has become so great as to touch the heavens, and your rule reaches to the ends of the earth. <sup>20</sup>As for the king’s vision of a holy watcher, who came down from heaven and proclaimed: ‘Cut down the tree and destroy it, but leave its stump in the earth. Bound with iron and bronze, let him be fed with the grass of the field, and bathed with the dew of heaven; let his lot be with wild beasts till seven years pass over him’— <sup>21</sup>here is its meaning, O king, here is the sentence that the Most High has passed upon my lord king: <sup>22j</sup> You shall be cast out from human society and dwell with wild beasts; you shall be given grass to eat like an ox and be bathed with the dew of heaven; seven years shall pass over you, until you know that the Most High is sovereign over human kingship and gives it to whom he will. <sup>23</sup>The command that the stump of the tree is to be left means that your kingdom shall be preserved for you, once you have learned that heaven is sovereign. <sup>24</sup>Therefore, O king, may my advice be acceptable to you; atone for your sins by good deeds, * and for your misdeeds by kindness to the poor; then your contentment will be long lasting.”

<sup>25</sup>All this happened to King Nebuchadnezzar. <sup>26</sup>Twelve months later, as he was walking on the roof of the royal palace in Babylon, <sup>27</sup>the king said, “Babylon the great! Was it not I, with my great strength, who built it as a royal residence for my splendor and majesty?” <sup>28</sup>While these words were still on the king’s lips, a voice spoke from heaven, “It has been decreed for you, King Nebuchadnezzar, that your kingship is taken from you! <sup>29</sup>You shall be cast out from human society, and shall dwell with wild beasts; you shall be given grass to eat like an ox, and seven years shall pass over you, until you learn that the Most High is sovereign over human kingship and gives it to whom he will.” <sup>30*</sup> At once this was fulfilled. Nebuchadnezzar was cast out from human society, he ate grass like an ox, and his body was bathed with the dew of heaven, until his hair grew like the feathers of an eagle, and his nails like the claws of a bird.

<sup>31</sup>When this period was over, I, Nebuchadnezzar, raised my eyes to heaven; my reason was restored to me, and I blessed the Most High, I praised and glorified the One who lives forever,

Whose dominion is an everlasting dominion,
and whose kingdom endures through all generations.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>32</sup>All who live on the earth are counted as
nothing;
he does as he wills with the powers of
heaven
and with those who live on the earth.
There is no one who can stay his hand or say to him, “What have you done?”

<sup>33</sup>At the same time my reason returned to me, and for the glory of my kingdom, my majesty and my splendor returned to me. My counselors and nobles sought me out; I was restored to my kingdom and became much greater than before. <sup>34</sup>Now, I, Nebuchadnezzar, praise and exalt and glorify the King of heaven, all of whose works are right and ways just; and who is able to humble those who walk in pride.

The Writing on the Wall. <sup>1</sup>King Belshazzar gave a great banquet for a thousand of his nobles, with whom he drank. <sup>2</sup>Under the influence of the wine, he ordered the gold and silver vessels which Nebuchadnezzar, his father,* had taken from the temple in Jerusalem, to be brought in so that the king, his nobles, his consorts, and his concubines might drink from them. <sup>3</sup>When the gold vessels taken from the temple, the house of God in Jerusalem, had been brought in, and while the king, his nobles, his consorts, and his concubines were drinking <sup>4</sup>wine from them, they praised their gods of gold and silver, bronze and iron, wood and stone.

<sup>10</sup>When the queen heard of the discussion between the king and his nobles, she entered the banquet hall and said, "O king, live forever! Do not let your thoughts terrify you, or your face become so pale!" <sup>11</sup>There is a man in your kingdom in whom is a spirit of the holy gods; during the lifetime of your father he showed brilliant insight and god-like wisdom. King Nebuchadnezzar, your father, made him chief of the magicians, enchanters, Chaldeans, and diviners. <sup>12</sup>Because this Daniel, whom the king named Belteshazzar, has shown an extraordinary spirit, knowledge, and insight in interpreting dreams, explaining riddles and solving problems, let him now be summoned to tell you what this means."

<sup>13</sup>Then Daniel was brought into the presence of the king. The king asked him, "Are you the Daniel, one of the Jewish exiles, whom my father, the king, brought from Judah? <sup>14</sup>I have heard that the spirit of the gods is in you, that you have shown brilliant insight and extraordinary wisdom. <sup>15</sup>The wise men and enchanters were brought in to me to read this writing and tell me its meaning, but they could not say what the words meant. <sup>16</sup>But I have heard that you can give interpretations and solve problems; now, if you are able to read the writing and tell me what it means, you shall be clothed in purple, wear a chain of gold around your neck, and be third in governing the kingdom.”

<sup>17</sup>Daniel answered the king: “You may keep your gifts, or give your presents to someone else; but the writing I will read for the king, and tell what it means. <sup>18</sup>The Most High God gave your father Nebuchadnezzar kingship, greatness, splendor, and majesty. <sup>19</sup>Because he made him so great, the nations and peoples of every language dreaded and feared him. Whomever he willed, he would kill or let live; whomever he willed, he would exalt or humble. <sup>20</sup>But when his heart became proud and his spirit hardened by insolence, he was put down from his royal throne and deprived of his glory; <sup>21</sup> he was cast out from human society and his heart was made like that of a beast; he lived with wild asses, and ate grass like an ox; his body was bathed with the dew of heaven, until he learned that the Most High God is sovereign over human kingship and sets over it whom he will. <sup>22</sup>You, his son, Belshazzar, have not humbled your heart, though you knew all this; <sup>23</sup>you have rebelled against the Lord of heaven. You had the vessels of his temple brought before you, so that you and your nobles, your consorts and your concubines, might drink wine from them; and you praised the gods of silver and gold, bronze and iron, wood and stone, that neither see nor hear nor have intelligence. But the God in whose hand is your very breath and the whole course of your life, you did not glorify. <sup>24</sup>By him was the hand sent, and the writing set down.

<sup>25</sup>“This is the writing that was inscribed: MENE, TEKEL, and PERES.* These words mean: <sup>26*</sup> Mene, God has numbered your kingdom and put an end to it; <sup>27</sup>TEKEL, you have been weighed on the scales and found wanting; <sup>28</sup>PERES, your kingdom has been divided and given to the Medes and Persians.”

<sup>29</sup>Then by order of Belshazzar they clothed Daniel in purple, with a chain of gold around his neck, and proclaimed him third in governing the kingdom. <sup>30</sup>That very night Belshazzar, the Chaldean king, was slain:

The Lions' Den. <sup>2</sup>Darius decided to appoint over his entire kingdom one hundred and twenty satraps. <sup>3</sup>These were accountable to three ministers, one of whom was Daniel; the satraps reported to them, so that the king should suffer no loss. <sup>4</sup>Daniel outshone all the ministers and satraps because an extraordinary spirit was in him, and the king considered setting him over the entire kingdom. <sup>5</sup>Then the ministers and satraps tried to find grounds for accusation against Daniel regarding the kingdom. But they could not accuse him of any corruption. Because he was trustworthy, no fault or corruption was to be found in him. <sup>6</sup>Then these men said to themselves, “We shall find no grounds for accusation against this Daniel except in connection with the law of his God.” <sup>7</sup>So these ministers and satraps stormed in to the king and said to him, “King Darius, live forever! <sup>8*</sup> m All the ministers of the kingdom, the prefects, satraps, counselors, and governors agree that the following prohibition ought to be put in force by royal decree: for thirty days, whoever makes a petition to anyone, divine or human, except to you, O king, shall be thrown into a den of lions. <sup>9</sup>Now, O king, let the prohibition be issued over your signature, immutable and irrevocable* according to the law of the Medes and Persians.” <sup>10</sup>So King Darius signed the prohibition into law.

<sup>11</sup>Even after Daniel heard that this law had been signed, he continued his custom of going home to kneel in prayer and give thanks to his God in the upper chamber three times a day, with the windows open toward Jerusalem. <sup>12</sup>So these men stormed in and found Daniel praying and pleading before his God. <sup>13</sup>Then they went to remind the king about the prohibition: “Did you not sign a decree, O king, that for thirty days, whoever makes a petition to anyone, divine or human, except to you, O king, shall be cast into a den of lions?” The king answered them, “The decree is absolute, irrevocable under the law of the Medes and Persians.” <sup>14</sup>To this they replied, “Daniel, one of the Jewish exiles, has paid no attention to you, O king, or to the prohibition you signed; three times a day he offers his prayer.” <sup>15</sup>The king was deeply grieved at this news and he made up his mind to save Daniel; he worked till sunset to rescue him. <sup>16</sup>But these men pressed the king. “Keep in mind, O king,” they said, “that under the law of the Medes and Persians every royal prohibition or decree is irrevocable.” <sup>17</sup>So the king ordered Daniel to be brought and cast into the lions’ den. * To Daniel he said, “Your God, whom you serve so constantly, must save you.” <sup>18</sup>To forestall any tampering, the king sealed with his own ring and the rings of the lords the stone that had been brought to block the opening of the den.

<sup>19</sup>Then the king returned to his palace for the night; he refused to eat and he dismissed the entertainers. Since sleep was impossible for him, <sup>20</sup>the king rose very early the next morning and hastened to the lions’ den. <sup>21</sup>As he drew near, he cried out to Daniel sorrowfully, “Daniel, servant of the living God, has your God whom you serve so constantly been able to save you from the lions?” <sup>22</sup>Daniel answered the king: “O king, live forever! <sup>23</sup>My God sent his angel and closed the lions’ mouths so that they have not hurt me.” <sup>n</sup> For I have been found innocent before him; neither have I done you any harm, O king!” <sup>24</sup>This gave the king great joy. At his order Daniel was brought up from the den; he was found to be unharmed because he trusted in his God. <sup>25</sup>The king then ordered the men who had accused Daniel, along with their children and their wives, to be cast into the lions’ den. Before they reached the bottom of the den, the lions overpowered them and crushed all their bones.

<sup>26</sup>Then King Darius wrote to the nations and peoples of every language, wherever they dwell on the earth: “May your peace abound! <sup>27</sup>I decree that throughout my royal domain the God of Daniel is to be revered and feared:

“For he is the living God, enduring
forever,
whose kingdom shall not be destroyed,
whose dominion shall be without end, <sup>28</sup>A savior and deliverer, working signs and wonders in heaven
and on earth,
who saved Daniel from the lions’

The Beasts and the Judgment. <sup>*1</sup>In the first year of King Belshazzar of Babylon, as Daniel lay in bed he had a dream, visions in his head. Then he wrote down the dream; the account began: <sup>2</sup>In the vision I saw during the night, suddenly the four winds of heaven stirred up the great sea, * <sup>3</sup>from which emerged four immense beasts, <sup>p</sup> each different from the others. <sup>4</sup>The first was like a lion, but with eagle's wings. * While I watched, the wings were plucked; it was raised from the ground to stand on two feet like a human being, and given a human mind. <sup>5</sup>The second beast was like a bear; * it was raised up on one side, and among the teeth in its mouth were three tusks. It was given the order, "Arise, devour much flesh." <sup>6</sup>After this I looked and saw another beast, like a leopard; * on its back were four wings like those of a bird, and it had four heads. To this beast dominion was given. <sup>7*</sup> After this, in the visions of the night I saw a fourth beast, terrifying, horrible, and of extraordinary strength; it had great iron teeth with which it devoured and crushed, and it trampled with its feet what was left. It differed from the beasts that preceded it. It had ten horns. <sup>8</sup>I was considering the ten horns it had, when suddenly another, a little horn, sprang out of their midst, and three of the previous horns were torn away to make room for it. This horn had eyes like human eyes, and a mouth that spoke arrogantly. <sup>9*</sup> As I watched,

Thrones were set up and the Ancient of Days took his
throne.
His clothing was white as snow,
the hair on his head like pure wool;
His throne was flames of fire,
with wheels of burning fire.
<sup>10</sup>A river of fire surged forth, flowing from where he sat;
Thousands upon thousands were ministering to him,
and myriads upon myriads stood before him.<sup>q</sup>

The court was convened, and the books were opened. <sup>11</sup>I watched, then, from the first of the arrogant words which the horn spoke, until the beast was slain and its body destroyed and thrown into the burning fire. <sup>12</sup>As for the other beasts, their dominion was taken away, but they were granted a prolongation of life for a time and a season. <sup>13</sup>As the visions during the night continued, I saw coming with the clouds of heaven<sup>r</sup>

One like a son of man.*
When he reached the Ancient of Days
and was presented before him, <sup>14</sup>He received dominion, splendor, and kingship;
all nations, peoples and tongues will serve him.
His dominion is an everlasting dominion
that shall not pass away,
his kingship, one that shall not be destroyed.<sup>s</sup>

<sup>15</sup>Because of this, my spirit was anguished and I, Daniel, was terrified by my visions. <sup>16</sup>I approached one of those present and asked him the truth of all this; in answer, he made known to me its meaning: <sup>17</sup>“These four great beasts stand for four kings which shall arise on the earth. <sup>18</sup>But the holy ones* of the Most High shall receive the kingship, to possess it forever and ever.”

<sup>19</sup>Then I wished to make certain about the fourth beast, so very terrible and different from the others, devouring and crushing with its iron teeth and bronze claws, and trampling with its feet what was left; <sup>20</sup>and about the ten horns on its head, and the other one that sprang up, before which three horns fell; and about the horn with the eyes and the mouth that spoke arrogantly, which appeared greater than its fellows. <sup>21</sup>For, as I watched, that horn made war against the holy ones and was victorious <sup>22</sup>until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was pronounced in favor of the holy ones of the Most High, and the time arrived for the holy ones to possess the kingship. <sup>23</sup>He answered me thus:

“The fourth beast shall be a fourth kingdom on earth,

different from all the others;
The whole earth it shall devour, trample down and crush.

<sup>24</sup>The ten horns shall be ten kings rising out of that kingdom;
another shall rise up after them,
Different from those before him,
who shall lay low three kings.

<sup>25</sup>He shall speak against the Most High and wear down the holy ones of the Most High,
intending to change the feast days and the law.*

They shall be handed over to him
for a time, two times, and half a time.

<sup>26</sup>But when the court is convened,
and his dominion is taken away
to be abolished and completely
destroyed,

<sup>27</sup>Then the kingship and dominion and majesty
of all the kingdoms under the heavens shall be given to the people of the holy ones of the Most High,

Whose kingship shall be an everlasting
kingship,
whom all dominions shall serve and obey.”

<sup>28</sup>This is the end of the report. I, Daniel, was greatly terrified by my thoughts, and my face became pale, but I kept the matter to myself.*

The Ram and the He-goat.* <sup>1</sup>After this first vision, I, Daniel, had another, in the third year of the reign of King Belshazzar. <sup>2</sup>In my vision I saw myself in the fortress of Susa* in the province of Elam; I was beside the river Ulai. <sup>3</sup>I looked up and saw standing by the river a ram with two great horns, the one larger and newer than the other. <sup>4</sup>I saw the ram butting toward the west, north, and south. No beast could withstand it or be rescued from its power; it did what it pleased and grew powerful.

<sup>5</sup>As I was reflecting, a he-goat with a prominent horn on its forehead suddenly came from the west across the whole earth without touching the ground. <sup>6</sup>It came to the two-horned ram I had seen standing by the river, and rushed toward it with savage force. <sup>7</sup>I saw it reach the ram; enraged, the he-goat attacked and shattered both its horns. The ram did not have the strength to withstand it; the he-goat threw the ram to the ground and trampled upon it. No one could rescue the ram from its power.

<sup>8</sup>The he-goat grew very powerful, but at the height of its strength the great horn was shattered, and in its place came up four others, facing the four winds of heaven. <sup>9</sup>Out of one of them came a little horn* which grew and grew toward the south, the east, and the glorious land. <sup>10</sup>It grew even to the host of heaven,* so that it cast down to earth some of the host and some of the stars and trampled on them. <sup>11</sup>It grew even to the Prince of the host, from whom the daily sacrifice was removed, and whose sanctuary was cast down. <sup>12</sup>The host was given over together with the daily sacrifice in the course of transgression. It cast truth to the ground, and was succeeding in its undertaking

Alexander's Empire

<sup>13</sup>I heard a holy one speaking, and another said to whichever one it was that spoke, “How long shall the events of this vision last concerning the daily sacrifice, the desolating sin,* the giving over of the sanctuary and the host for trampling?” <sup>14</sup>He answered him, “For two thousand three hundred evenings and mornings; then the sanctuary shall be set right.”

<sup>15</sup>While I, Daniel, sought the meaning of the vision I had seen, one who looked like a man stood before me, <sup>16</sup>and on the Ulai I heard a human voice that cried out, “Gabriel,* explain the vision to this man.” <sup>17</sup>When he came near where I was standing, I fell prostrate in terror. But he said to me, “Understand, O son of man, that the vision refers to the end time.”* <sup>18</sup>As he spoke to me, I fell forward unconscious; he touched me and made me stand up. <sup>19</sup>“I will show you,” he said, “what is to happen in the last days of wrath; for it is for the appointed time of the end.

<sup>20</sup>“The two-horned ram you saw represents the kings of the Medes and Persians.* <sup>21</sup>The he-goat is the king of the Greeks, and the great horn on its forehead is the first king. <sup>22</sup>The four that rose in its place when it was shattered are four kingdoms that will issue from his nation, but without his strength.

<sup>23</sup>“At the end of their reign, when sinners have reached their measure,
There shall arise a king,
impudent, and skilled in intrigue.

<sup>24</sup>He shall be strong and powerful,
bring about fearful ruin,
and succeed in his undertaking.
He shall destroy powerful peoples;

<sup>25</sup>his cunning shall be against the holy
ones,
his treacherous conduct shall succeed.
He shall be proud of heart
and destroy many by stealth.
But when he rises against the Prince of
princes,
he shall be broken without a hand
being raised.

<sup>26</sup>As for the vision of the evenings and the mornings,
what was spoken is true.
But you, keep this vision secret:
it is for the distant future.”

<sup>27</sup>I, Daniel, was weak and ill for some days; then I arose and took care of the king’s affairs. But the vision left me desolate, without understanding.

The Seventy Weeks of Years. <sup>1</sup>It was the first year that Darius,* son of Ahasuerus, of the race of the Medes, reigned over the kingdom of the Chaldeans; <sup>2</sup><sup>t</sup> in the first year of his reign, I, Daniel, perceived in the books the number of years the LORD had decreed to the prophet Jeremiah: Jerusalem was to lie in ruins for seventy years.*

<sup>3</sup>I turned to the Lord God, to seek help, in prayer and petition, with fasting, sackcloth, and ashes. <sup>4</sup><sup>u</sup>I prayed to the LORD, my God, and confessed, “Ah, Lord, great and awesome God, you who keep your covenant and show mercy toward those who love you and keep your commandments and your precepts! <sup>5</sup>We have sinned, been wicked and done evil; we have rebelled and turned from your commandments and your laws. <sup>6</sup>We have not obeyed your servants the prophets, who spoke in your name to our kings, our princes, our ancestors, and all the people of the land. <sup>7</sup>Justice, O Lord, is on your side; we are shamefaced even to this day: the men of Judah, the residents of Jerusalem, and all Israel, near and far, in all the lands to which you have scattered them because of their treachery toward you. <sup>8</sup>O LORD, we are ashamed, like our kings, our princes, and our ancestors, for having sinned against you. <sup>9</sup>But to the Lord, our God, belong compassion and forgiveness, though we rebelled against him <sup>10</sup>and did not hear the voice of the LORD, our God, by walking in his laws given through his servants the prophets. <sup>11</sup><sup>v</sup>The curse and the oath written in the law of Moses, the servant of God, were poured out over us for our sins, because all Israel transgressed your law and turned aside, refusing to hear your voice. <sup>12</sup>He fulfilled the words he spoke against us and against those who ruled us, by bringing upon us an evil— no evil so great has happened under heaven as happened in Jerusalem. <sup>13</sup>As it is written* in the law of Moses, this evil has come upon us. We did not appease the LORD, our God, by turning back from our wickedness and acting according to your truth, <sup>14</sup>so the LORD kept watch over the evil and brought it upon us. The LORD, our God, is just in all that he has done: we did not listen to his voice.

<sup>15</sup>“Now, Lord, our God, who led your people out of the land of Egypt with a strong hand, and made a name for yourself even to this day, we have sinned, we are guilty. <sup>16</sup>Lord, in keeping with all your just deeds, let your anger and your wrath be turned away from your city Jerusalem, your holy mountain. On account of our sins and the crimes of our ancestors, Jerusalem and your people have become the reproach of all our neighbors. <sup>17</sup>Now, our God, hear the prayer and petition of your servant; and for your own sake, Lord, let your face shine upon your desolate sanctuary. <sup>18</sup>Give ear, my God, and listen; open your eyes and look upon our desolate city upon which your name is invoked. When we present our petition before you, we rely not on our just deeds, but on your great mercy. <sup>19</sup>Lord, hear! Lord, pardon! Lord, be attentive and act without delay, for your own sake, my God, because your name is invoked upon your city and your people!”

<sup>20</sup>I was still praying to the LORD, my God, confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, presenting my petition concerning the holy mountain of my God— <sup>21</sup>I was still praying, when the man, Gabriel, whom I had seen in vision before, came to me in flight at the time of the evening offering.* <sup>22</sup>He instructed me in these words: “Daniel, I have now come to give you understanding. <sup>23</sup>When you began your petition, an answer was given which I have come to announce, because you are beloved. Therefore, mark the answer and understand the vision.

<sup>24</sup>“Seventy weeks* are decreed for your people and for your holy city:
Then transgression will stop and sin will
end,
guilt will be expiated,
Everlasting justice will be introduced,
vision and prophecy ratified,
and a holy of holies will be anointed.

<sup>25</sup> Know and understand:
From the utterance of the word that Jerusalem was to be rebuilt* Until there is an anointed ruler,
there shall be seven weeks.
In the course of sixty-two weeks
it shall be rebuilt,
With squares and trenches,
in time of affliction.

<sup>26</sup>After the sixty-two weeks

an anointed one* shall be cut down
with no one to help him.
And the people of a leader who will
come
shall destroy the city and the
sanctuary.
His end shall come in a flood;
until the end of the war, which is decreed,
there will be desolation.
27 For one week* he shall make a firm covenant with the many;
Half the week
he shall abolish sacrifice and offering;
In their place shall be the desolating
abomination
until the ruin that is decreed is poured out upon the desolator.”<sup>w</sup>

An Angelic Vision.* <sup>1</sup>In the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia, a revelation was given to Daniel, who had been named Belteshazzar. The revelation was certain: a great war;* he understood this from the vision. <sup>2</sup>In those days, I, Daniel, mourned three full weeks. <sup>3</sup>I ate no savory food, took no meat or wine, and did not anoint myself at all until the end of the three weeks.

<sup>4</sup>On the twenty-fourth day of the first month* I was on the bank of the great river, the Tigris. <sup>5</sup>As I looked up, I saw a man* dressed in linen with a belt of fine gold around his waist.<sup>x</sup> <sup>6</sup>His body was like chrysolite, his face shone like lightning, his eyes were like fiery torches, his arms and feet looked like burnished bronze, and the sound of his voice was like the roar of a multitude. <sup>7</sup>I alone, Daniel, saw the vision; but great fear seized those who were with me; they fled and hid themselves, although they did not see the vision. <sup>8</sup>So I was left alone to see this great vision. No strength remained in me; I turned the color of death and was powerless. <sup>9</sup>When I heard the sound of his voice, I fell face forward unconscious.

<sup>10</sup>But then a hand touched me, raising me to my hands and knees. <sup>11</sup>“Daniel, beloved,” he said to me, “understand the words which I am speaking to you; stand up, for my mission now is to you.” When he said this to me, I stood up trembling. <sup>12</sup>“Do not fear, Daniel,” he continued; “from the first day you made up your mind to acquire understanding and humble yourself before God, your prayer was heard. Because of it I started out, <sup>13</sup>but the prince of the kingdom of Persia* stood in my way for twenty-one days, until finally Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me. I left him there with the prince of the kingdom of Persia, <sup>14</sup>and came to make you understand what shall happen to your people in the last days; for there is yet a vision concerning those days.”

<sup>15</sup>While he was speaking thus to me, I fell forward and kept silent. <sup>16</sup>Then something like a hand touched my lips; I opened my mouth and said to the one standing before me, “My lord, I was seized with pangs at the vision and I was powerless. <sup>17</sup>How can my lord’s servant speak with you, my lord? For now no strength or even breath is left in me.” <sup>18</sup>The one who looked like a man touched me again and strengthened me, saying, <sup>19</sup>“Do not fear, beloved. Peace! Take courage and be strong.” When he spoke to me, I grew strong and said, “Speak, my lord, for you have strengthened me.” <sup>20</sup>“Do you know,” he asked, “why I have come to you? Soon I must fight the prince of Persia again. When I leave, the prince of Greece will come; <sup>21</sup>but I shall tell you what is written in the book of truth.* No one supports me against these except Michael,<sup>y</sup> your prince, <sup>11:1</sup>and in the first year of Darius the Mede I stood to strengthen him and be his refuge.

“Three kings of Persia* are yet to appear; and a fourth shall acquire the greatest riches of all. Strengthened by his riches, he shall stir up all kingdoms, even that of Greece. <sup>3</sup>But a powerful king* shall appear and rule with great might, doing as he wills. <sup>4</sup>No sooner shall he appear than his kingdom shall be broken and divided in four directions under heaven; but not among his descendants or in keeping with his mighty rule, for his kingdom shall be torn to pieces and belong to others.

<sup>5*</sup> “The king of the south shall grow strong, but one of his princes shall grow stronger still and govern a domain greater than his. <sup>6*</sup> After some years they shall become allies: the daughter of the king of the south shall come to the king of the north to carry out the alliance. But she shall not retain power: and his offspring shall not survive, and she shall be given up, together with those who brought her, her son, and her supporter in due time. <sup>7</sup>A descendant of her line shall succeed to his place, and shall come against the army, enter the stronghold of the king of the north, attack and conquer them. <sup>8</sup>Even their gods, with their molten images and their precious vessels of silver and gold, he shall carry away as spoils of war into Egypt. For years he shall have nothing to do with the king of the north. <sup>9</sup>Then the latter shall invade the land of the king of the south, and return to his own country.

<sup>10</sup>“But his sons shall be aroused and assemble a great armed host, which shall pass through like a flood and again surge around the stronghold. <sup>11*</sup>The king of the south, enraged, shall go out to fight against the king of the north, who shall field a great host, but the host shall be given into his hand. <sup>12</sup>When the host is carried off, in the pride of his heart he shall bring down tens of thousands, but he shall not triumph. <sup>13*</sup> For the king of the north shall raise another army, greater than before; after some years he shall attack with this large army and great resources. <sup>14</sup>In those times many shall resist the king of the south, and violent ones among your people shall rise up in fulfillment of vision, but they shall stumble. <sup>15*</sup>When the king of the north comes, he shall set up siegeworks and take the fortified city by storm. The forces of the south shall not withstand him, and not even his picked troops shall have the strength to withstand. <sup>16</sup>The invader shall do as he wills, with no one to withstand him. He shall stop in the glorious land, and it shall all be in his power. <sup>17*</sup> He shall resolve to come with the entire strength of his kingdom. He shall make an alliance with him and give him a daughter in marriage in order to destroy him, but this shall not stand. <sup>18*</sup> He shall turn to the coastland and take many prisoners, but a commander shall put an end to his shameful conduct, so that he cannot retaliate. <sup>19</sup>He shall turn to the strongholds of his own land, but shall stumble and fall, to be found no more. <sup>20 *</sup>In his stead one shall arise who will send a collector of tribute through the glorious kingdom, but he shall soon be destroyed, though not in conflict or in battle.

<sup>21*</sup> “There shall arise in his place a despicable person, to whom the royal insignia shall not be given. He shall enter by stealth and seize the kingdom by fraud. <sup>22</sup>Armed forces shall be completely overwhelmed by him and crushed, even the prince of the covenant. *<sup>23</sup>After making alliances, he shall treacherously rise to power with only a few supporters. <sup>24</sup>By stealth he shall enter prosperous provinces and do that which his fathers or grandfathers never did; he shall distribute spoil, plunder, and riches among them and devise plots against their strongholds. <sup>25</sup>He shall rouse his strength and courage to meet the king of the south with a great army; the king of the south shall go into battle with a very large and strong army, but he shall not stand because of the plots devised against him. <sup>26</sup>Even his table companions shall seek to destroy him, his army shall be overwhelmed, and many shall be struck down. <sup>27</sup>The two kings, resolved on evil, shall sit at table together and exchange lies, but they shall have no success, because the appointed end is not yet.

The Ptolemaic and Seleucid Kingdoms

<sup>28</sup>“He* shall turn back toward his land with great riches, his mind set against the holy covenant; he shall take action and return to his land. <sup>29</sup>At the time appointed he shall come again to the south, but this time it shall not be as before. <sup>30</sup>When ships of the Kittim* confront him, he shall lose heart and retreat. Then he shall rage against the holy covenant and take action; he shall again favor those who forsake the holy covenant. <sup>31</sup>Armed forces shall rise at his command and defile the sanctuary stronghold, abolishing the daily sacrifice and setting up the desolating abomination. <sup>32</sup>By his deceit he shall make some who were disloyal forsake the covenant; but those who remain loyal to their God shall take strong action. <sup>33</sup>Those with insight among the people shall instruct the many; though for a time the sword, flames, exile, and plunder will cause them to stumble. <sup>34</sup>When they stumble, they will be helped,* but only a little; many shall join them, but out of treachery. <sup>35</sup>Some of those with insight shall stumble so that they may be tested, refined, and purified, until the end time which is still appointed to come.

<sup>36</sup>“The king shall do as he wills, exalting himself and making himself greater than any god; he shall utter dreadful blasphemies against the God of gods. He shall prosper only till the wrath is finished, for what is determined must take place. <sup>37</sup>He shall have no regard for the gods of his ancestors or for the one in whom women delight; * for no god shall he have regard, because he shall make himself greater than all. <sup>38</sup>Instead, he shall give glory to the god of strongholds; * a god unknown to his ancestors he shall glorify with gold, silver, precious stones, and other treasures. <sup>39</sup>He shall act for those who fortify strongholds, a people of a foreign god, whom he has recognized. He shall greatly honor them; he shall make them rule over the many and distribute the land as a reward.

<sup>40</sup>* “At the end time the king of the south shall engage him in battle but the king of the north shall overwhelm him with chariots and horsemen and a great fleet, passing through the lands like a flood. <sup>41</sup>He shall enter the glorious land and many shall fall, except Edom, Moab, and the chief part of Ammon, which shall escape his power. <sup>42</sup>He shall extend his power over the land, and not even Egypt shall escape. <sup>43</sup>He shall control the riches of gold and silver and all the treasures of Egypt; Libya and Ethiopia shall be in his entourage. <sup>44</sup>When reports from the east and the north disturb him, he shall set out with great fury to destroy many, putting them under the ban. <sup>45</sup>He shall pitch the tents of his royal pavilion between the sea and the glorious holy mountain, but he shall come to his end with none to help him.

The Resurrection

<sup>1</sup>“At that time there shall arise Michael,<sup>z</sup>
the great prince,
guardian of your people;
It shall be a time unsurpassed in distress
since the nation began until that time.
At that time your people shall escape, everyone who is found written in the book.*

<sup>2</sup>Many of those who sleep*
in the dust of the earth shall awake;
Some to everlasting life,
others to reproach and everlasting disgrace.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>3</sup>But those with insight shall shine brightly
like the splendor of the firmament,
And those who lead the many to justice
shall be like the stars* forever.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>4</sup>“As for you, Daniel, keep secret the message and seal the book until the end time; many shall wander aimlessly and evil shall increase.”

<sup>5</sup>I, Daniel, looked and saw two others, one standing on either bank of the river. <sup>6</sup>One of them said to the man clothed in linen, who was upstream, “How long shall it be to the end of these appalling things?” <sup>7</sup>The man clothed in linen,<sup>c</sup> who was upstream, lifted his hands to heaven; and I heard him swear by him who lives forever that it should be for a time, two times, and half a time;* and that, when the power of the destroyer of the holy people was brought to an end, all these things should end. <sup>8</sup>I heard, but I did not understand; so I asked, “My lord, what follows this?” <sup>9</sup>“Go, Daniel,” he said, “because the words are to be kept secret and sealed until the end time. <sup>10</sup>Many shall be refined, purified, and tested, but the wicked shall prove wicked; the wicked shall have no understanding, but those with insight shall. <sup>11</sup>*From the time that the daily sacrifice is abolished and the desolating abomination is set up, there shall be one thousand two hundred and ninety days. <sup>12</sup>Blessed are they who have patience and persevere for the one thousand three hundred and thirty-five days. <sup>13</sup>Go, take your rest, you shall rise for your reward at the end of days.”

III. Appendix: Susanna, Bel, and the Dragon*

CHAPTER 13

See RG 375–82

Susanna. <sup>1</sup>In Babylon there lived a man named Joakim, <sup>2</sup>who married a very beautiful and God-fearing woman, Susanna, the daughter of Hilkiah; <sup>3</sup>her parents were righteous and had trained their daughter according to the law of Moses. <sup>4</sup>Joakim was very rich and he had a garden near his house. The Jews had recourse to him often because he was the most respected of them all.

<sup>5</sup>That year, two elders of the people were appointed judges, of whom the Lord said, “Lawlessness has come out of Babylon, that is, from the elders who were to govern the people as judges.” <sup>6</sup>These men, to whom all brought their cases, frequented the house of Joakim. <sup>7</sup>When the people left at noon, Susanna used to enter her husband’s garden for a walk. <sup>8</sup>When the elders saw her enter every day for her walk, they began to lust for her. <sup>9</sup>They perverted their thinking; they would not allow their eyes to look to heaven, and did not keep in mind just judgments. <sup>10</sup>Though both were enamored of her, they did not tell each other their trouble, <sup>11</sup>for they were ashamed to reveal their lustful desire to have her. <sup>12</sup>Day by day they watched eagerly for her. <sup>13</sup>One day they said to each other, “Let us be off for home, it is time for the noon meal.” So they went their separate ways. <sup>14</sup>But both turned back and arrived at the same spot. When they asked each other the reason, they admitted their lust, and then they agreed to look for an occasion when they could find her alone.

<sup>15</sup>One day, while they were waiting for the right moment, she entered as usual, with two maids only, wanting to bathe in the garden, for the weather was warm. <sup>16</sup>Nobody else was there except the two elders, who had hidden themselves and were watching her. <sup>17</sup>“Bring me oil and soap,” she said to the maids, “and shut the garden gates while I bathe.” <sup>18</sup>They did as she said; they shut the garden gates and left by the side gate to fetch what she had ordered, unaware that the elders were hidden inside.

<sup>19</sup>As soon as the maids had left, the two old men got up and ran to her. <sup>20</sup>“Look,” they said, “the garden doors are shut, no one can see us, and we want you. So give in to our desire, and lie with us. <sup>21</sup>If you refuse, we will testify against you that a young man was here with you and that is why you sent your maids away.”

<sup>22</sup>“I am completely trapped,” Susanna groaned. “If I yield, it will be my death; if I refuse, I cannot escape your power. <sup>23</sup>Yet it is better for me not to do it and to fall into your power than to sin before the Lord.” <sup>24</sup>Then Susanna screamed, and the two old men also shouted at her, <sup>25</sup>as one of them ran to open the garden gates. <sup>26</sup>When the people in the house heard the cries from the garden, they rushed in by the side gate to see what had happened to her. <sup>27</sup>At the accusations of the old men, the servants felt very much ashamed, for never had any such thing been said about Susanna.

<sup>28</sup>When the people came to her husband Joakim the next day, the two wicked old men also came, full of lawless intent to put Susanna to death. <sup>29</sup>Before the people they ordered: “Send for Susanna, the daughter of Hilkiah, the wife of Joakim.” When she was sent for, <sup>30</sup>she came with her parents, children and all her relatives. <sup>31</sup>Susanna, very delicate and beautiful, <sup>32</sup>was veiled; but those transgressors of the law ordered that she be exposed so as to sate themselves with her beauty. <sup>33</sup>All her companions and the onlookers were weeping.

<sup>34</sup>In the midst of the people the two old men rose up and laid their hands on her head. <sup>35</sup>As she wept she looked up to heaven, for she trusted in the Lord wholeheartedly. <sup>36</sup>The old men said, “As we were walking in the garden alone, this woman entered with two servant girls, shut the garden gates and sent the servant girls away. <sup>37</sup>A young man, who was hidden there, came and lay with her. <sup>38</sup>When we, in a corner of the garden, saw this lawlessness, we ran toward them. <sup>39</sup>We saw them lying together, but the man we could not hold, because he was stronger than we; he opened the gates and ran off. <sup>40</sup>Then we seized this one and asked who the young man was, <sup>41</sup>but she refused to tell us. We testify to this.” The assembly believed them, since they were elders and judges of the people, and they condemned her to death.

<sup>42</sup>But Susanna cried aloud: “Eternal God, you know what is hidden and are aware of all things before they come to be: <sup>43</sup>you know that they have testified falsely against me. Here I am about to die, though I have done none of the things for which these men have condemned me.”

<sup>44</sup>The Lord heard her prayer. <sup>45</sup>As she was being led to execution, God stirred up the holy spirit of a young boy named Daniel, <sup>46</sup>and he cried aloud: "I am innocent of this woman's blood." <sup>47</sup>All the people turned and asked him, "What are you saying?" <sup>48</sup>He stood in their midst and said, "Are you such fools, you Israelites, to condemn a daughter of Israel without investigation and without clear evidence? <sup>49</sup>Return to court, for they have testified falsely against her."

<sup>50</sup>Then all the people returned in haste. To Daniel the elders said, "Come, sit with us and inform us, since God has given you the prestige of old age." <sup>51</sup>But he replied, "Separate these two far from one another, and I will examine them."

<sup>52</sup>After they were separated from each other, he called one of them and said: "How you have grown evil with age! Now have your past sins come to term: <sup>53</sup>passing unjust sentences, condemning the innocent, and freeing the guilty,<sup>d</sup> although the Lord says, 'The innocent and the just you shall not put to death.' <sup>54</sup>Now, then, if you were a witness, tell me under what tree you saw them together." <sup>55</sup>"Under a mastic tree,"* he answered. "Your fine lie has cost you your head," said Daniel; "for the angel of God has already received the sentence from God and shall split you in two." <sup>56</sup>Putting him to one side, he ordered the other one to be brought. "Offspring of Canaan, not of Judah," Daniel said to him, "beauty has seduced you, lust has perverted your heart. <sup>57</sup>This is how you acted with the daughters of Israel, and in their fear they yielded to you; but a daughter of Judah did not tolerate your lawlessness. <sup>58</sup>Now, then, tell me under what tree you surprised them together." <sup>59</sup>"Under an oak," he said. "Your fine lie has cost you also your head," said Daniel; "for the angel of God waits with a sword to cut you in two so as to destroy you both."

<sup>63</sup>Hilkiah and his wife praised God for their daughter Susanna, with Joakim her husband and all her relatives, because she was found innocent of any shameful deed. <sup>64</sup>And from that day onward Daniel was greatly esteemed by the people.

CHAPTER 14

See RG 375–82

There were seventy priests of Bel, besides their wives and children. <sup>10*</sup> When the king went with Daniel into the temple of Bel, <sup>11</sup>the priests of Bel said, “See, we are going to leave. You, O king, set out the food and prepare the wine; then shut the door and seal it with your ring. <sup>12*</sup> If you do not find that Bel has eaten it all when you return in the morning, we are to die; otherwise Daniel shall die for his lies against us.” <sup>13</sup>They were not perturbed, because under the table they had made a secret entrance through which they always came in to consume the food. <sup>14</sup>After they departed the king set the food before Bel, while Daniel ordered his servants to bring some ashes, which they scattered through the whole temple; the king alone was present. Then they went outside, sealed the closed door with the king’s ring, and departed. <sup>15*</sup> The priests entered that night as usual, with their wives and children, and they ate and drank everything.

king.” <sup>18</sup>As soon as he had opened the door, the king looked at the table and cried aloud, “You are great, O Bel; there is no deceit in you.” <sup>19*</sup> But Daniel laughed and kept the king from entering. He said, “Look at the floor and consider whose footprints these are.” <sup>20</sup>“I see the footprints of men, women, and children!” said the king. <sup>21*</sup> In his wrath the king arrested the priests, their wives, and their children. They showed him the secret door by which they used to enter to consume what was on the table. <sup>22</sup>The king put them to death, and handed Bel over to Daniel, who destroyed it and its temple.

<sup>23</sup>There was a great dragon * which the Babylonians revered. <sup>24</sup>The king said to Daniel, “You cannot deny that this is a living god, so worship it.” <sup>25</sup>But Daniel answered, “I worship the Lord, my God, for he is the living God. <sup>26</sup>Give me permission, O king, and I will kill this dragon without sword or club.” “I give you permission,” the king said. <sup>27</sup>Then Daniel took some pitch, fat, and hair; these he boiled together and made into cakes. He put them into the mouth of the dragon, and when the dragon ate them, he burst. “This,” he said, “is what you revered.”

<sup>28</sup>When the Babylonians heard this, they were angry and turned against the king. “The king has become a Jew,” they said; “he has destroyed Bel, killed the dragon, and put the priests to death.” <sup>29</sup>They went to the king and demanded: “Hand Daniel over to us, or we will kill you and your family.” <sup>30</sup>When he saw himself threatened with violence, the king was forced to hand Daniel over to them. <sup>31</sup>They threw Daniel into a lions’ den, * where he remained six days. <sup>32</sup>In the den were seven lions. Two carcasses and two sheep had been given to them daily, but now they were given nothing, so that they would devour Daniel.

<sup>33</sup>The prophet Habakkuk was in Judea. He mixed some bread in a bowl with the stew he had boiled, and was going to bring it to the reapers in the field, <sup>34</sup>when an angel of the Lord told him, “Take the meal you have to Daniel in the lions’ den at Babylon.” <sup>35</sup>But Habakkuk answered, “Sir, I have never seen Babylon, and I do not know the den!” <sup>36</sup>The angel of the Lord seized him by the crown of his head and carried him by the hair; <sup>f</sup> with the speed of the wind, he set him down in Babylon above the den. <sup>37</sup>“Daniel, Daniel,” cried Habakkuk, “take the meal God has sent you.” <sup>38</sup>“You have remembered me, O God,” said Daniel; “you have not forsaken those who love you.” <sup>39</sup>So Daniel ate, but the angel of God at once brought Habakkuk back to his own place.

<sup>40</sup>On the seventh day the king came to mourn for Daniel. As he came to the den and looked in, there was Daniel, sitting there. <sup>41</sup>The king cried aloud, “You are great, O Lord, the God of Daniel, and there is no other besides you!” <sup>42</sup>He brought Daniel out, but those who had tried to destroy him he threw into the den, and they were devoured in a moment before his eyes.

1:1 According to 2 Kgs 24, the siege of Jerusalem took place after the death of Jehoiakim, but 2 Chr 36:5–8 says that Jehoiakim was taken to Babylon.

1:2 Shinar: ancient name for Babylonia, a deliberate archaism in this text; cf. Gn 10:10; 11:2.

1:3 The proper name Ashpenaz is sometimes taken as a title, major-domo.

1:7 Other prominent Jews with Babylonian names include Sheshbazzar and Zerubbabel, who were leaders of the postexilic community.

1:8 This defilement: the bread, meat, and wine of the Gentiles were unclean (Hos 9:3; Tb 1:12; Jdt 10:5; 12:1–2) because they might have been offered to idols; and the meat may not have been drained of blood, as Jewish dietary law requires. This text relates to the attempt of Antiochus to force Jews to eat forbidden foods in contempt of their religion (1 Mc 1:62–63; 2 Mc 6:18; 7:1).

1:21 The first year of King Cyrus: the year of this Persian king’s conquest of Babylon, 539/538 B.C.

2:1–49 The chronology of v. 1 is in conflict with that of 1:5, 18, and in 2:25 Daniel appears to be introduced to the king for the first time. It seems that the story of this chapter was originally entirely independent of chap. 1 and later retouched slightly to fit its present setting. The Septuagint (Papyrus 967) reads the twelfth year instead of the second.

2:2 Chaldeans: because the Babylonians gave serious study to the stars and planets, “Chaldeans” were identified with astrologers throughout the Hellenistic world.

2:4 Aramaic: a gloss to indicate that at this point the text switches from Hebrew to Aramaic, which continues through the end of chap. 7; at 8:1, the text switches back to Hebrew.

2:12 Wise men: the satire, although directed against the Babylonian diviners in the text, refers to the Hellenistic Greeks, who made special claims to wisdom; the assertion here is that true wisdom comes from God and resides with the Jews. Cf. also chap. 5.

2:28 The visions: lit., “the visions of your head,” a phrasing which distinguishes visionary experiences that are personal from those that are observable by others (see 4:2, 7, 10). That Daniel, unlike the Chaldeans, has access to these visions testifies to his God-given wisdom. Actually, this “dream” is more properly an apocalyptic vision; cf. the very similar message in Daniel’s vision of chap. 7.

2:33 Clay: it has been suggested that the motif of iron mixed with clay implies a hollow metal statue packed with clay to stabilize it. In the interpretation of the dream, however, the mixture is taken as a sign of weakness.

2:36–45 The four successive kingdoms in this apocalyptic perspective are the Babylonian (gold), the Median (silver), the Persian (bronze), and the Hellenistic (iron). The last, after Alexander’s death, was divided among his generals (vv. 41–42). Of the kingdoms which emerged from this partitioning, the two that most affected the Jews were the dynasties of the Ptolemies in Egypt and the Seleucids in Syria. They tried in vain, by war and through intermarriage, to restore the unity of Alexander's empire (v. 43). The stone hewn from the mountain is the kingdom of God awaited by the Jews (vv. 44–45). Compare the image of the stone applied to Jesus in Luke 20:17–18.

3:1 Dura: several places in Babylonia bore this name. Probably the present reference is to one located close to Babylon. Giant statues of the type mentioned here were not uncommon in antiquity; a cubit was about a foot and a half. The unrealistic proportions of this statue suggest a comic effect.

3:2 Satraps: Persian provincial governors.

3:5 The precise identification of the instruments is disputed. Several of the names are Greek.

3:15 Then all will be well: lacking in Aramaic; this phrase is supplied from the context.

3:17 If our God . . . can save us: the youths do not question the efficacy of the divine power, but whether it will be exercised (v. 18).

3:24–90 These verses are additions to the Aramaic text of Daniel, translated from the Greek form of the book. They were probably first composed in Hebrew or Aramaic, but are no longer extant in the original language. The Roman Catholic Church has always regarded them as part of the canonical Scriptures.

3:25 Azariah: i.e., Abednego; cf. Dn 1:7.

3:98–4:34 This section has the form of a letter written by Nebuchadnezzar to his subjects.

4:5 After the name of my god: Belteshazzar, the Babylonian name given to Daniel at the king's orders (1:7), is Balāt-šu-usur, "protect his life." This passage implies a name connected with Bel, a Babylonian god. A spirit of the holy gods: or a holy divine spirit; or spirit of a holy God. See also vv. 6, 15; 5:11–12, 14; 6:4.

4:10 A holy watcher: lit., "a watcher and a holy one." Two terms for angels. The term watcher is found in the Bible only in this chapter of Daniel, but it is common in extra-canonical Jewish literature. In 1 Enoch, the fallen angels are called watchers.

4:24 Good deeds: the Aramaic word sidqâ has the root meaning of "righteousness," but in a late text such as this could mean "almsgiving."

4:30–32 There is no historical record that these events happened to Nebuchadnezzar. Scholars have long suspected that the story originally involved Nabonidus, the father of Belshazzar, who was absent from Babylon and lived at Teima in the Arabian desert for a number of years. This suggestion is now strengthened by the Prayer of Nabonidus, found at Qumran, which is closely related to chap. 4. The biblical author's chief interest was not in the historicity of this popular tale, but in the object lesson it contained for the proud "divine" kings of the Seleucid dynasty.

5:2 Nebuchadnezzar, his father: between Nebuchadnezzar and Belshazzar several kings ruled in Babylon. Belshazzar was the son of Nabonidus, and he acted as regent in Babylon during his father's absence.

5:25 Mene, Tekel, and Peres: these seem to be the Aramaic names of weights and monetary values: the mina, the shekel (the sixtieth part of a mina), and the parsu (a half-mina).

5:26–28 Daniel interprets these three terms by a play on the words: MENE, connected with the verb meaning to number; TEKEL, with the verb meaning to weigh; PERES, with the verb meaning to divide. There is also a play on the last term with the word for Persians.

6:1 Darius the Mede: unknown outside of the Book of Daniel. The Median kingdom did not exist at this time because it had already been conquered by Cyrus the Persian. Apparently the author of Daniel is following an apocalyptic view of history, linked to prophecy (cf. Is 13:17–19; Jer 51:11, 28–30), according to which the Medes formed the second of four world kingdoms preceding the messianic times; see note on Dn 2:36–45. The character of Darius the Mede has probably been modeled on that of the Persian king Darius the Great (522–486 B.C.), the second successor of Cyrus. The Persian Darius did appoint satraps over his empire.

6:8–11 The Jews of the second century B.C. could relate the king's attempt to force upon them, under pain of death, the worship of a foreign deity to the decrees of Antiochus IV; cf. 1 Mc 1:41–50.

6:9 Immutable and irrevocable: Est 1:19 and 8:8 also refer to the immutability of Medo-Persian laws. The same idea is found in the historian Diodorus Siculus with reference to the time of Darius III (335–331 B.C.), the last of the Persian kings. Cf. Dn 6:13, 16.

6:17 The lions' den: a pit too deep to be easily scaled; its opening was blocked with a stone (v. 18).

7:1–27 This vision continues the motif of the four kingdoms from chap. 2; see note on 2:36–45. To the four succeeding world kingdoms, Babylonian, Median, Persian, and Greek, is opposed the heavenly kingdom of God and the kingdom of God's people on earth. The beast imagery of this chapter has been used extensively in the Book of Revelation, where it is applied to the Roman empire, the persecutor of the Church.

7:2 The great sea: the primordial ocean beneath the earth, according to ancient Near Eastern cosmology (Gn 7:11; 49:25). It was thought to contain various monsters (Is 27:1; Jb 7:12), and in particular mythological monsters symbolizing the chaos which God had vanquished in primordial times (Jb 9:13; 26:12; Is 51:9–10; etc.).

7:4 In ancient times the Babylonian empire was commonly represented as a winged lion, in the rampant position (raised up on one side). The two wings that were plucked may represent Nebuchadnezzar and Belshazzar. On two feet like a human being . . . a human mind: contrasts with what is said in 4:13, 30.

7:5 A bear: represents the Median empire, its three tusks symbolizing its destructive nature; hence, the command: "Arise, devour much flesh."

7:6 A leopard: used to symbolize the swiftness with which Cyrus the Persian established his kingdom. Four heads: corresponding to the four Persian kings of 11:2.

7:7–8 Alexander's empire was different from all the others in that it was Western rather than Eastern in inspiration, and far exceeded the others in power. The ten horns represent the kings of the Seleucid dynasty, the only part of the Hellenistic empire that concerned the author. The little horn is Antiochus IV Epiphanes (175–164 B.C.), who usurped the throne and persecuted the Jews.

7:9–10 A vision of the heavenly throne of God (the Ancient of Days), who sits in judgment over the nations. Some of the details of the vision, depicting the divine majesty and omnipotence, are to be found in Ezekiel 1. Others are paralleled in 1 Enoch, a contemporary Jewish apocalypse.

7:13–14 One like a son of man: In contrast to the worldly kingdoms opposed to God, which are represented as grotesque beasts, the coming Kingdom of God is represented by a human figure. Scholars disagree as to whether this figure should be taken as a collective symbol for the people of God (cf. 7:27) or identified as a particular individual, e.g., the archangel Michael (cf. 12:1) or the messiah. The phrase "Son of Man" becomes a title for Jesus in the gospels, especially in passages dealing with the Second Coming (Mk 13 and parallels).

7:18 "Holy ones" in Hebrew and Aramaic literature are nearly always members of the heavenly court or angels (cf. 4:10, 14, 20; 8:13), though here the term is commonly taken to refer to Israel.

7:25 The reference is to the persecution of Antiochus IV and specifically to the disruption of the Temple cult (1 Mc 1:41–64). A time, two times, and half a time: an indefinite, evil period of time. Probably here, three and a half years, which becomes the standard period of tribulation in apocalyptic literature (Rev 11:2; 13:5 [in months]; 11:3 [in days]; and cf. 12:14). As seven is the Jewish "perfect" number, half of it signifies great imperfection. Actually, the Temple was desecrated for three years (1 Mc 4:52–54). The duration of the persecution was a little longer, since it was already under way before the Temple was desecrated.

7:28 This verse ends the Aramaic part of the Book of Daniel.

8:1–27 This vision continues images of the preceding one, and develops it in more detail. As explained in vv. 20–22 the two-horned ram represents the combined kingdom of the Medes and Persians, destroyed by Alexander's Hellenistic empire originating in the west. Once again the author is interested only in the Seleucid dynasty, which emerged from the dissolution of Alexander's empire after his death in 323 B.C.

8:2 The fortress of Susa: the royal palace of the Persian kings in the ancient territory of Elam, east of Babylonia. The river Ulai: a canal along the northern side of Susa. Some scholars argue that the Hebrew word understood as "river" here should instead be translated "gate."

8:9 A little horn: as in chap. 7, Antiochus IV. The glorious land: Israel.

8:10–12 The host of heaven: the angelic host, symbolized by the stars. The Prince of the host: the Most High God, whose worship Antiochus suppressed (1 Mc 1:45).

8:13 The desolating sin: the Hebrew contains a wordplay (shomem) on the name Baal Shamem ("lord of the heavens," identified by some as the Greek Zeus Olympios). The reference is to some object with which Antiochus profaned the Temple of Jerusalem (2 Mc 6:2), most probably a pagan altar.

8:16 The angel Gabriel is mentioned here for the first time in the Bible. There is wordplay in the preceding verse on geber, "manlike figure."

8:17 The end time: the time when God sits in judgment on the wicked (v. 19).

8:20 The Medes and Persians: the Medes had been allies of the Babylonians in destroying the Assyrian empire (late seventh century B.C.), and Cyrus the Persian defeated the Medes en route to conquering the Babylonians. The Book of Daniel, however, treats the Medes and Persians as a dual kingdom; cf. also 5:28; 6:9; and note on 6:1.

9:1 Darius: see note on 6:1.

9:2 Seventy years: Jeremiah was understood to prophesy a Babylonian captivity of seventy years, a round number signifying the complete passing away of the existing generation (Jer 25:11; 29:10). On this view Jeremiah's prophecy was seen to be fulfilled in the capture of Babylon by Cyrus and the subsequent return of the Jews to Palestine. However, the author of Daniel, living during the persecution of Antiochus, extends Jeremiah's number to seventy weeks of years (Dn 9:24), i.e., seven times seventy years, to encompass the period of Seleucid persecution.

9:13 As it is written: the first time that this formula of Scriptural citation is used in the Bible. The reference (v. 11) is to the sanctions of Lv 26:14–16; Dt 28:15–17.

9:21 At the time of the evening offering: between three and four in the afternoon.

9:24 Seventy weeks: i.e., of years. Just as Jeremiah's seventy years was an approximation (see note on v. 2), the four hundred and ninety years here is not to be taken literally. Similarly, the distribution of the "weeks" in the following verses indicates only relative proportions of the total figure. A holy of holies: or "most holy"; could be understood as a place (e.g., the Jerusalem Temple) or a person (cf. 1 Chr 23:13).

9:25 From the utterance . . . to be rebuilt: from the time of Jeremiah's prophecy. Anointed ruler: either Cyrus, who was called the anointed of the Lord to end the exile (Is 45:1), or the high priest Jeshua who presided over the rebuilding of the altar of sacrifice after the exile (Ezr 3:2). Seven weeks: forty-nine years, an approximation of the time of the exile. In the course of sixty-two weeks . . . rebuilt: a period of four hundred thirty-four years, roughly approximating the interval between the rebuilding of Jerusalem after the exile and the beginning of the Seleucid persecution.

9:26 An anointed one: the high priest Onias III, murdered in 171 B.C., from which the author dates the beginning of the persecution. Onias was in exile when he was killed. A leader: Antiochus IV.

9:27 One week: the final phase of the period in view, the time of Antiochus' persecution. He: Antiochus himself. The many: the faithless Jews who allied themselves with the Seleucids; cf. 1 Mc 1:11–13. Half the week: three and a half years; the Temple was desecrated by Antiochus from 167 to 164 B.C. The desolating abomination: see note on 8:13; probably a pagan altar. Jesus refers to this passage in his prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem in Mt 24:15.

10:1–12:13 This final vision is concerned with history from the time of Cyrus to the death of Antiochus Epiphanes.

10:1 Agreat war: or “the service was great,” or “a mighty host.” The Hebrew is ambiguous.

10:4 The first month: the month Nisan (mid-March to mid-April).

10:5–6 The heavenly person of the vision is probably the angel Gabriel, as in 9:21. Chrysolite: or topaz, a yellowish precious stone. Cf. the visions in Ez 1 and 8.

10:13 The prince of the kingdom of Persia: the angelic guardian of Persia. Where older texts speak of the gods of various countries (Dt 32:8), Daniel speaks of “princes.” Michael: the patron angel of Israel (v. 21).

10:21 The book of truth: a heavenly book in which future events are already recorded; cf. 7:10; 12:1.

11:2 Three kings of Persia: it is unclear which kings are intended because there were more than three Persian kings between Cyrus and the dissolution of the kingdom. The fourth is Xerxes I (486–465 B.C.), the great campaigner against Greece.

11:3 A powerful king: Alexander the Great, who broke Persian dominance by his victory at Issus in 333 B.C.

11:5–45 These verses describe the dynastic histories of the Ptolemies in Egypt (the king of the south) and the Seleucids in Syria (the king of the north), the two divisions of the Hellenistic empire that were of interest to the author (v. 6). Verses 10–20 describe the struggle between the two kingdoms for the control of Palestine; the Seleucids were eventually victorious.

11:6 The marriage of Antiochus II Theos and Berenice of Egypt about 250 B.C., which ended in tragedy.

11:11 The battle of Raphia (217 B.C.), in which Egypt defeated Syria.

11:13 Syria defeated Egypt at the battle of Paneas in 200 B.C. Judea then passed under Syrian rule.

11:15 The siege of Sidon after the battle of Paneas.

11:17 Antiochus III, the Great, betrothed his daughter to Ptolemy Epiphanes in 197 B.C.

11:18 The Roman general Scipio defeated Antiochus at Magnesia in 190 B.C.

11:20 Seleucus IV, who sent Heliodorus to Jerusalem (cf. 2 Mc 3).

11:21 Here begins the career of Antiochus IV Epiphanes.

11:22 The prince of the covenant: the high priest Onias III, who was murdered.

11:28 He: the king of the north, probably Antiochus IV.

11:30 Kittim: originally this word meant Cypriots or other westerners. It is sometimes used for the Greeks (1 Mc 1:1). Here it refers to the Romans, who forced Antiochus to withdraw from Egypt during his second campaign there.

11:34 Helped: this may be a reference to the Maccabean revolt. The apocalyptic author expects deliverance from God and has little regard for human efforts. In fact, the Maccabees routed the Syrian troops, recaptured Jerusalem, purified and rededicated the Temple, and brought to an end the Syrian persecution.

11:37 The one in whom women delight: Tammuz. Antiochus favored the cult of Zeus. Daniel takes this to imply the neglect of all other gods, although this does not appear to have been the case.

11:38 The god of strongholds: the god worshiped in the fortress Akra, which Antiochus established in Jerusalem.

11:40–45 In these concluding verses, the events described no longer correspond to the history of the Maccabean period. Daniel imagines the death of Antiochus on the model of Gog in Ez 38–39. Antiochus actually died in Persia.

12:1 Written in the book: cf. 10:21.

12:2 Many of those who sleep: Daniel does not envisage the universal resurrection as later developed. Two groups are distinguished, one that rises to eternal life, the other to reproach and disgrace. Then “those with insight” (11:33–35) are singled out for special honor.

12:3 Like the stars: like the heavenly host, or angels. Cf. Mt 22:30.

12:7 A time, two times, and half a time: see note on 7:25.

12:11 The specific numbers of days given in vv. 11–12 represent attempts to calculate the precise duration of the three and a half years. Most probably, when the first date (1,290 days) passed, the author attempted another calculation. Another, earlier calculation is preserved in 8:14. It is noteworthy, however, that the contradictory numbers were allowed to stand in the text; this is a reminder that it is not possible to calculate a precise date for God’s judgment; cf. Mk 13:32.

13:1–14:42 The short stories in these two chapters exist now only in Greek and other translations, but probably were first composed in Hebrew or Aramaic. They were never part of the Hebrew-Aramaic Book of Daniel, or of the Hebrew Bible. They are excluded from the Protestant canon of Scripture, but the Catholic Church has always included them among the inspired writings; they existed in the Septuagint, which was used as its Bible by the early church.

13:55–59 The contrast between the mastic tree, which is small, and the majestic oak emphasizes the contradiction between the statements of the two elders. In the Greek text there is a play on words between the names of these two trees and the mortal punishment decreed by Daniel for the elders. The mastic tree (schinon) sounds like the verb “to split” (schisai). The oak tree (prinon) suggests a play on poisai (to saw).

14:1–22 In chap. 14, readings in the Septuagint differ markedly from those in Theodotion, which is followed here. See individual notes on 1–3a, 10–11, 12–14, 15–17 and 21–22; the translation is that of Collins, Daniel, pp. 405ff, with brackets indicating additions to the Septuagint according to Collins.

14:1–3a These verses in the Septuagint Greek text read: “From the prophecy of Habakkuk, son of Joshua, of the tribe of Levi. <sup>2</sup> There was a certain man, a priest, whose name was Daniel, son of Abal, a companion of the king of Babylon. <sup>3</sup> There was an idol, Bel, which the Babylonians revered, . . . “ This may represent an earlier form of the story, before it was attached to the Book of Daniel. King Astyages: the last of the Median kings, defeated by Cyrus in 550 B.C. This story preserves the fiction of a successive Median and Persian rule of Babylon.

14:3 Bel: see note on 4:5.

14:10–11 These verses in the Septuagint Greek text read: “(Now, there were seventy priests of Bel, apart from women and children.) They led the king to the idol shrine. <sup>11</sup> The food was set out in the presence of the king and of Daniel, and mixed wine was brought in and set before Bel. Daniel said, ‘You yourself see that these things are laid out, O king. You, therefore, seal the door of temple when it is closed.’ [The word pleased the king.]”

14:12–14 Theodotion’s vv. 12–13 and 14’s “After they departed the king set the food before Bel” are lacking in the Septuagint Greek text, which continues vv. 15–17 from v. 11 as follows: “Then Daniel commanded his attendants to make everyone go out from the temple and sprinkle the whole temple with ashes, unknown to anyone outside. Then he ordered them to apply the seal with the king’s ring [and the seals of certain illustrious priests, and so it was done].”

14:15–17 These verses in the Septuagint Greek text read: “<sup>15</sup> On the next day they came to the place. But the priests of Bel had entered through false doors and had eaten all that was set forth for Bel and drunk the wine. Daniel said, ‘See whether your seals remain, O priests, and you, O king, see that nothing has happened that seems improper to you.’ They found the seal as it had been, and they removed the seal.”

14:19 Note that here the king seems unaware of Daniel’s ruse.

14:21–22 These verses in the Septuagint Greek text read: “<sup>21</sup> And he went to the house where the priests had come, and he found Bel’s food and the wine, and Daniel showed the king the false doors through which the priests entered and consumed what had been set before Bel. <sup>22</sup> The king led them out of the temple of Bel and gave them over to Daniel. He gave Daniel what was expended on him and destroyed Bel.”

14:23 Dragon: or “serpent,” and see v. 27. Sacred snakes are well attested in the ancient world (e.g., in the temple of the god of healing Asclepius at Epidaurus), though evidence for their veneration in Babylon is doubtful.

14:31 A lions’ den: this story provides a different account from chap. 6 as to why Daniel was associated with the lions’ den.

The Book of Hosea

See RG 385–88

Hosea, a prophet from the Northern Kingdom, preached in his homeland, which he addresses as Israel, Jacob or, frequently, Ephraim. Hosea began his mission in a period of prosperity, the last years of Jeroboam II (783–743 B.C.). This was followed by a period of internal instability, with intrigues at the royal court leading to the assassination of several kings. Hosea witnessed the revival of Assyria, the Syro-Ephraimite war, and the numerous treaties the Israelite kings made with Egypt and Assyria to survive. Hosea's long ministry (ca. 750–725) seems to have ended before the capture of Samaria in 722/721.

The only information the text provides us about the life of Hosea concerns his marriage. Even if we cannot reconstruct what happened exactly, the text as it now stands speaks of three moments in the relationship: first love, separation, reunion. This marriage is a symbol of the covenant between the Lord and Israel. Hosea speaks about the first love, the short period of Israel's loyalty in the desert, which was then followed by a long history of unfaithfulness lasting until his day. Hosea accuses Israel of three crimes in particular. Instead of putting their trust in the Lord alone, the people break the covenant: (1) by counting on their own military strength, (2) by making treaties with foreign powers (Assyria and Egypt), and (3) by running after the Baals, the gods of fertility. Israel thus forgets that the Lord is its strength, its covenant partner, and giver of fertility. This unfaithful behavior will lead to Israel's destruction by Assyria, but God's love will have the last word. The back and forth movement from doom to salvation is typical of the Book of Hosea.

Hosea began the Old Testament tradition of describing the relation between the Lord and Israel in terms of marriage (e.g., Jer 3:1; Ez 16:23; Is 50:1). The New Testament uses the marriage imagery to describe the union between Christ and the Church (e.g., Mk 2:19–20; Eph 5:25).

The Hebrew of the Book of Hosea is challenging to translate, possibly because the text is corrupt or because it is written in a nonstandard dialect of Hebrew. As a result, the English translations of the book sometimes offer very different readings of the same passage.

The book, which opens with a superscription (1:1) and ends with a final challenge (14:10), is divided into two major parts:

- I. The Prophet's Marriage and Its Symbolism (1:2–3:5)
  - II. Israel's Guilt, Punishment, and Restoration (4:1–14:9)

CHAPTER 1

See RG 385–88

<sup>1*</sup> The word of the LORD that came to Hosea son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam, son of Joash, king of Israel.*

I. The Prophet's Marriage and Its Symbolism

Marriage of Hosea and Gomer. <sup>2</sup>When the LORD began to speak with Hosea, the LORD said to Hosea: Go, get for yourself a woman of prostitution* and children of prostitution, for the land prostitutes itself,<sup>a</sup> turning away from the LORD.

<sup>3</sup>So he went and took Gomer, daughter of Diblaim; and she conceived and bore him a son. <sup>4</sup>Then the LORD said to him: Give him the name “Jezreel,”* for in a little while I will punish the house of Jehu for the bloodshed at Jezreel and bring to an end the kingdom of the house of Israel; <sup>5</sup>on that day I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.

<sup>6</sup>She conceived again and bore a daughter. The LORD said to him: Give her the name “Not-Pitied,”* for I will no longer feel pity for the house of Israel: rather, I will utterly abhor them. <sup>7*</sup> Yet for the house of Judah I will feel pity; I will save them by the LORD, their God; but I will not save them by bow or sword, by warfare, by horses or horsemen.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>8</sup>After she weaned Not-Pitied, she conceived and bore a son. <sup>9</sup>Then the LORD said: Give him the name “Not-My-People,”* for you are not my people, and I am not “I am” for you.

CHAPTER 2

See RG 385–88

<sup>1*</sup> The number of the Israelites will be like the sand of the sea, which can be neither measured nor counted.<sup>c</sup>

Instead of being told,
“You are Not-My-People,”
They will be called,
“Children of the living God.”<sup>d</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Then the people of Judah and of Israel
will gather together;
They will appoint for themselves one
head
and rise up from the land;
great indeed shall be the day of Jezreel!

<sup>3</sup> Say to your brothers, “My People,”
and to your sisters, “Pitied.”

The Lord and Israel His Spouse*

<sup>4</sup> Accuse your mother, accuse!
for she is not my wife,
and I am not her husband.* Let her remove her prostitution from her face.
her adultery from between her breasts,

<sup>5</sup> Or I will strip her naked,*
leaving her as on the day of her birth;
I will make her like the wilderness,
make her like an arid land,
and let her die of thirst.

<sup>6</sup> I will have no pity on her children,
for they are children of prostitution.

<sup>7</sup> Yes, their mother has prostituted herself;
she who conceived them has acted shamefully.

For she said, “I will go after my lovers,*
who give me my bread and my water,

my wool and my flax, my oil and my drink.”<sup>e</sup>

8* Therefore, I will hedge in her way with thorns
and erect a wall against her,
so that she cannot find her paths.

9 If she runs after her lovers, she will not overtake them;
if she seeks them she will not find
them.

Then she will say,
“I will go back to my first husband,
for I was better off then than now.”<sup>f</sup>

10 She did not know that it was I who gave her
the grain, the wine, and the oil,

I who lavished upon her silver,
and gold, which they used for Baal,*

11 Therefore I will take back my grain in its
time,
and my wine in its season;
