Others, owing to the names Kvpquai \(\omega v\) кai 'A \(\lambda \epsilon-\) \(\xi a \nu \delta \rho \epsilon \in \omega\) that follow, think that a geog raphic al meaning is demanded for \(\lambda_{\iota} \beta \in \rho \tau\)., and suppose that Jews are spoken of, the dwellers in Libertum, a city or region of proconsular Africa. But the existence of a city or region called Libertum is a conjecture which has nothing to rest on but the mention of a bishop with the prefix "libertinensis" at the synod of Carthage A. D. 411. Others with far greater probability appeal to Philo, leg. ad Gaium § 23 , and understand the word as denoting Jews who had been made captives by the Romans under Pompey but were afterwards set free; and who, although they had fixed their abode at Rome, had built at their own expense a synagogue at Jerusalem which they frequented when in that city. The name Libertines adhered to them to distinguish them from the free-b orn Jews who had subsequently taken up their residence at Rome. Cf. Win. RWB. s. v. Auqavias，－ov，\(\dot{\delta}\), Lysanias；1．the son of Ptolemy， who from B．c． 40 on was governor of Chalcis at the foot of Mount Lebanon，and was put to death B．c． 34 at the instance of Cleopatra：Joseph．antt．14，7， 4 and 13，3； 15，4，1；b．j．1，13，1，cf．b．j．1，9， 2 ．2．a tetrarch of Abilene（see＇\(A \beta i \lambda \eta \nu \dot{\prime}\) ），in the days of John the Bap－ tist and Jesus：Lk．iii．1．Among the regions assigned by the emperors Caligula and Claudius to Herod Agrippa I．and Herod Agrippa II．，Josephus mentions \(\dot{\eta}\) Avaaviov тєтрархia（antt．18，6，10，cf．20，7，1），Baбi入єia ì тov̂
 （antt．19， 5,1 ）；accordingly，some have supposed that in these passages Lysanias the son of Ptolemy must be meant，and that the region which he governed continued to bear his name even after his death．Others（as Cred－ ner，Strauss，Gfrörer，Weisse），denying that there ever was a second Lysanias，contend that Luke was led into error by that designation of Abilene（derived from Ly－ sanias and retained for a long time afterwards），so that he imagined that Lysanias was tetrarch in the time of Christ．This opinion，however，is directly opposed by the fact that Josephus，in antt．20，7， 1 and b．j．2，12，8， expressly distinguishes Chalcis from the tetrarchy of Lysanias；nor is it probable that the region which Ly－ sanias the son of Ptolemy governed for only six years took its name from him ever after．Therefore it is more correct to conclude that in the passages of Josephus where the tetrarchy of Lysanias is mentioned a second Ly－ sanias，perhaps the grandson of the former，must be meant；and that he is identical with the one spoken of by Luke．Cf．Winer，RWB．s．v．Abilene；Wieseler in Herzog i．p． 64 sqq．，［esp．in Beiträge zur richtig．Würdi－ gung d．Evang．u．s．w．pp．196－204］；Bleek，Synopt．Ex－ klär．u．s．w．i．p． 154 sq．；Kneucker in Schenkel i．p． 26 sy．； Schürer，Neutest．Zeitgesch．§ 19 Anh． 1 p． 313 ［also in Riehm s．v．；Robinson in Bib．Sacra for 1848，pp． 79 saq． 1 particle of affirmation: truly, certainly, surely, in-deed,-its affirmative force being weakened, yet retained most in Ionic, Epic, and Herodotus, and not wholly lost in Attic and Hellenistic writers ( \(\mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu\) ' 'confirmative'; cf. 4 Macc. xviii. 18). Owing to this its original meaning it adds a certain force to the terms and phrases with which it is connected, and thus contrasts them with or distinguishes ther? from others. Accordingly it takes on the character of a concessive and very often of a merely distinctive particle, which stands related to a following \(\delta \epsilon^{\prime}\) or other adversative conjunction, either expressed or understood, and in a sentence composed of several members is so placed as to point out the first member, to which a second, marked by an adversative particle, is added or opposed. It corresponds to the Lat. quidem, indeed, Germ. zwar (i. e. prop. \(\approx u\) Wahre, i. e. in Wahrheit [in truth]); but often its force cannot be reproduced. Its use in classic Greek is exhibited by Devarius i. p. 122 sqq ., and Klotz on the same ii. 2 p. 656 sqq.; Viger i. p. 531 sqq., and Hermann on the same p. 824 sq. ; al.; Matthiae § 622; Kühner ii. p. 806 sqq. §§ 527 sqq. ; p. 691 sqq-; § 503 ; [Jelf § 729, 1, 2; §$ 764 sqq.\(]\); Passow, and Pape, [and L. and S.] s. v.

I. Examples in which the particle \(\mu^{\prime} \boldsymbol{\nu}\) is followed in another member by an adversative particle expressed. Of these examples there are two kinds: 1. those in which \(\mu^{\prime} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\nu}\) has a concessive force, and \(\delta \delta^{\prime}(\) or \(\dot{\alpha} \lambda \lambda \alpha ́)\) introduces a restriction, correction, or amplification of what has been said in the former member, indeed. . . but, yet, on the other hand. Persons or things, or predications about either, are thus correlated: Mt. iii. 11, cf. Mk. i. 8 (where T Tr WHom. Lbr. \(\mu^{\prime} \mathcal{L} \nu\) ) ; Lk. iii. 16 (where the meaning is, 'I indeed baptize as well as he who is to come after me, but his baptism is of greater efficacy'; cf. Acts i. 5) ; Mt. ix. 37 and Lk. x. 2 (although the harvest is great, yet the laborers are few):

He is so spoken of by John not because ó \(\lambda\) óyos which was époapk 0 єír in him was eternally generated by God
the Father（the orthodox interpretation），or came forth from the being of God just before the beginning of the world（Subordinationism），but because by the incarna－ tion（＇́voápкcats）of the 入óyos in him he is of nature or essentially Son of God，and so in a very different sense from that in which men are made by him réкva тoû \(\theta\) eov（Jn．i．13）．For since in the writings of John the title of viós rov̀ \(\theta\) gov̀ is given only to the historic Christ so called，neither the Logos alone，nor Jesus alone， but \(\delta\) 入óyos \(\dot{o} \epsilon \in \nu \sigma a \rho \kappa \omega \theta \epsilon i\) s or Jesus through the dóyos united with God，is \(\delta \mu\) ovoy．viòs roù \(\theta \in o \hat{v}\) ．The reading \(\mu_{0 \nu o \gamma \epsilon \nu \eta s} \theta_{\text {és }}\)（without the article before \(\mu o \nu o \gamma\) ．）in Jn． i． 1 n, －which is supported by no inconsiderable weight of ancient testimony，received into the text by Tregelles， and Westcott and Hort，defended with much learning by Dr．Hort（＂On \(\mu o \nu o y \in \nu \eta\)＇s \(\theta_{\text {eós }}\) in Scripture and Tra－ dition＂in his＂Two Dissertations＂Camb．and Lond． 1876 ），and seems not improbable to Harnack（in the Theol．Lit．－Zeit．for 1876，p． 541 sqq．）［and Weiss（in Meyer 6te Auf．ad loc．）］，but is foreign to John＇s mode of thought and speech（iii．16，18； 1 Jn．iv．9），dissonant and harsh，－appears to owe its origin to a dogmatic zeal which broke out soon after the early days of the church； ［see articles on the reading by Prof．Abbot in the Bib． Sacr．for Oct． 1861 and in the Unitarian Rev．for June 1875，（in the latter copious reff．to other discussions of the same passage are given）；see also Prof．Drummond in the Theol．Rev．for Oct．1871］．Further，see Grimm， Exgt．Hdbch．on Sap．p． \(152 \mathrm{sq} . ;\)［Westcott u．s．］．＊

\(\dot{\delta}, \mathbf{r}, \tau \boldsymbol{\sigma}\), originally \(\tau \dot{\prime} s, \tau \dot{\eta}, \tau \dot{\prime}\), (as is evident from the forms roi, rai for oi, ai in Hom. and the Ionic writ.), corresponds to our definite article the (Germ. der, die, das), which is properly a demonstrative pronoun, which we see in its full force in Homer, and of which we find certain indubitable traces also in all kinds of Greek prose, and hence also in the N. Element. i. 72], on the authority of all the uncial and many cursive Mss., for Rec. \(i \mu \epsilon є \rho \dot{\rho} \mu \varepsilon \nu=\). The word is unknown to the Grk. writ., but the commentators ad loc. recognize it, as do Ilesychius, Phavorinus, and Photius, and interpret it by èmt \(\theta v \mu \varepsilon \hat{i}\). It is found in Ps. Ixii. 2 Symm., and acc. to some Mss. in Job iii. 21. Acc. to the conjecture of Fritzsche, Com. on Mk. p. 792, it is composed of \(\dot{o} \mu o \hat{\nu}\) and \(\epsilon i \not \rho \epsilon \iota \nu\), just as Photius [p. 331,8 ed. Porson] explains it ómov̀ \(\dot{\eta \rho \mu o ́ \sigma \theta a t ~[s o ~ T h e o-~}\) phylact (cf. Tdf.'s note)]. But there is this objection, that all the verbs compounded with ofovi govern the dative, not the genitive. Since Nicander, ther. vs. 402, uses \(\mu\) кipouat for \(i \mu \epsilon i \rho \circ \mu a l\), some suppose that the original form is \(\mu \epsilon i \rho \rho \mu a c\), to which, after the analogy of \(\kappa \in \lambda \lambda \omega\) and \(\dot{o} \kappa \bar{\epsilon} \lambda \lambda \omega\), either \(\boldsymbol{i}\) or \(\dot{o}\) is for euphony prefixed in iцкip. and \(\boldsymbol{\delta} \mu \varepsilon i \rho\). But as \(i \mu \varepsilon i \rho \rho \mu a t\) is derived from \({ }_{i} \mu \kappa \rho a s\), we must suppose that Nicander dropped the syliable \(i\) to suit the metre. Accordingly \(\delta \mu \epsilon i \rho \in \sigma \theta a t\) seems not to differ at all from i \(\mu\) eipectal, and its form must be attributed to a vulgar pronunciation. Cf. [WH. Sergius Paulus], converted to Christ by the agency of the apostle Paul: Acts xiii. 7. 2. the apostle Paul, whose Hebrew name was Saul (see Eaoù, £aû̀os). He was born at Tarsus in Cilicia (Acts ix. 11; xxi. 39; xxii. 3) of Jewish parents (Phil. iii. 5). His father was a Pharisee (Acts xxiii. 6) and a Roman citizen; hence he himself was a Roman citizen by birth (Acts xxii. 28; xvi. 37). He was endowed with remarkable gifts, both moral and intellectual. He learned the trade of a \(\sigma \kappa \eta \nu 0 \pi o \not o o^{\prime}\) (q. v .) Brought to Jerusalem in early youth, he was thoroughly indoctrinated in the Jewish theology by the Pharisee Gamaliel (Acts xxii. 3; v. 34). It first he attacked and persecuted the Christians most fiercely; at length, on his way to Damascus, he was suddenly converted to Christ by a miracle, and became an indefatigable and undaunted preacher of (hrist and the founder of many Christian churches. And not only by his unwearied labors did he establish a claim to the undying esteem of the friends of Christianity, but also by the fact, which appears from his immortal Epistles, that he caught perfectly the mind of his heavenly Master and taught most unequivocally that salvation was designed by God for all men who repose aliving faith in Jesus Christ, and that bondage to the Mosaic law is wholly incompatible with the spiritual liberty of which Christ is the author. By his zeal and doctrine he drew upon himself the deadly hatred of the Jews, who at Jerusalem in the year 57 [or \(5 \%\) ace. to the more common opinion; yet see the chronological table in Meyer (or Lange) on Acts; Farrar, St. Paul, ii. excurs. x.] brought about his imprisonment; and as a captive he was carried first to Cæsarea in Palestine, and two years later to Rome, where he suffered martyrdom (in the year 64). For the number of thoss daily grows smaller who venture to defend the ecclesi: astical tradition for which Eusebius is responsible (h. e. \(2,22,2\) ) [but of which traces seem to be found in Clem. Rom. 1 Cor. 5, 7; can. Murator. (cf. Westcott, Canon, 5th ed. p. 521 sq .)], according to which Paul, released from this imprisonment, is said to have preached in Spain and Asia Minor; and subsequently, imprisoned a second time, to have been at length put to death at Rome in the year 67 or 68 , while Nero was still emperor. [On this point cf. Meyer on Ro., Introd. § 1; Harnack on Clem. Rom. I. c.; Lghtft. ibid. p. 49 sq.; Holizmann, Die Pastoralbriefe, Einl. cl. iv. p. 37 sqq•; reff. in Heinichen's note on Euseb. h. e. as above; v. Hofmann, Die heilige Schrift Neuen Testaments. 5ter Theil p. 4 sqq.; Farrar, St. Paul, vol. ii. excurs. viii.; Schaff, Hist. of Apostolic Christ. (1882) p. 331 sq.] Paul is mentioned in the N. T. not only in the Acts and in the Epp. from his pen, but also in 2 Pet. iii. 15. [For bibliog. reff. respecting his life and its debatable points see the art. Both were received by Jesus as his companions, Mt. iv. 19; Mk. i. 17 ; Lk. v. 10; Jn. i. 40-42 (41-43); and Simon, whose pre-eminent courage and firmness he discerned and especially relied on for the future establishment of the kingdom of God, he honored with the name of Peter, Jn. i. 42 (43); Mt. xvi. 18; Mik. iii. 16. Excelling in vigor of mind, eagerness to learn. and love for Jesus, he enjoyed, together with James and John the sons of Zebedee, the special favor and intimacy of his divine Master. After having for some time presided, in connection with John and James the brother of our Lord [see 'láк \(\omega \beta\) os, 3], over the affairs of the Christians at Jerusalem, he seems to have gone abroad to preach the gospel especially to Jews (Gal. ii. 9; 1 Co . ix. 5 ; 1 Pet. v. 13 ; Papias in Euseb. 3, 39, 15; for Papias states that Peter employed Mark as 'interpreter' ( \(\dot{\rho} \rho \mu \eta\) \(\nu \in U \tau \dot{\prime}(\) s), an aid of which he had no need except beyond the borders of Palestine, especially among those who spoke Latin [but on the disputed meaning of the word

As to its Form, \(\sigma \dot{v} \nu\) in composition before \(\beta, \mu, \pi, \phi\), \(\psi\), passes into \(\sigma \nu \mu-\), before \(\lambda\) into \(\sigma \nu \lambda\)-, before \(\gamma, \kappa, \chi\) into \(\boldsymbol{\sigma} v \gamma\)-; before \(\zeta\) [and \(\sigma\) foll. by a consonant] it is elided, hence \(\sigma \cup \zeta \eta \nu, \sigma v \zeta ŋ \eta \tau \epsilon \in, \sigma v \sigma \tau a v \rho o ́ \omega, \sigma v \sigma \tau^{\prime} \lambda \lambda \omega\). Thus Strabo, 12 p. 567, states that Galatia was formerly divided into three parts, each one of which was distributed into four smaller subdivisions each of which was governed by 'a tetrarch'; again, in lib. 9 p. 430 , he relates that Thessaly, before the time of Philip of Macedon, had been divided into four 'tetrarchies' each of which had its own 'tetrarch'. 2. the word lost its strict etymological force, and came to denote the governor of a third part or half of a country, or even the ruler of an entire country or district provided it were of comparatively narrow limits; a petty prince [cf. e. g. Plut. Anton. 56, 3, i. p. 942 a.]. Thus Antony made Herod (afterwards king) and Phasael, sons of Antipater, tetrarchs of Palestine, Joseph. antt. 14, 13, 1. After the death of Herod the Great, his sons, Archelaus styled an ethnarch but Antipas and Philip with the title of 'tetrarchs', divided and governed the kingdom left by their father; Joseph. antt. 17, 11, 4. Cf. Fischer, De vitiis etc. p. 428 ; Win. RWB. s. v. Tetrarch, and esp. Keim in Schenkel v. p. 487 sqq. The tetrarch Herod Antipas is mentioned in Mt. xiv. 1 ; Lk. iii. 19 ; ix. 7; Acts xiii. 1.*

In Dan. vii. 13 sq., cf. 18, 22, 27 , the appellation son of man ()בַּר אנִּ ) symbolically denotes the fifth kingdom, universal and Messianic ; and by this term its humanity is indicated in contrast with the barbarity and ferocity of the four preceding kingdoms (the Babylonian, the Median, the Persian, the Macedonian) typified under the form of beasts (vs. 2 sqq .). But in the book of Enoch (written towards the close of the 2 d cent. before Christ [but cf. B. D. (e.p. Am. ed.); Lipsius in Dict. of Chris. Biog. s. v.; Dillmum in Herzog (ed. 2, vol. xii. p. 350 sq .) ; Schodde, Book of Enoch, p. \(20 \mathrm{sqq} \cdot]\) ) the name 'son of man' is employed to designate the person of the Messiah: 46, \(2 \mathrm{sq} . ; 48,2 ; 62,7\). \(9.14 ; 63,11 ; 69,26 \mathrm{sq} \cdot ; 70,1 ; 71,17\). (The clapters in which the name occurs are the work, if not of the first author of the book (as Ewald and Dillmann think [but see B. D. Am. ed. p. 740 ; and Herzog as above p. 351]), at least of a Jewish writer (cf. Schuirer, Neutest. Zeitgesch. § 32 V. 2 p. 626), certainly not (as Hilgenfeld, Volkmar, Keim, and others imagine) of a Christian interpolator.) In the language of the Jews in Jn. xii. 34 the titles Xpıarós and viòs rov̂ àv \(\theta \rho \omega \dot{m}\) ov are used as synonyms. \(\quad\) 3. The title \(\dot{o}\) viòs \(\tau o \hat{v} \alpha \nu \theta \rho \omega^{\prime} \pi o v\), the Son of Man, is used by Jesus of himself (speaking in the third person) in MIt. viii. 20; ix. 6; x. 23 ; xi. 19; xii. 8,3 , 40 ; xiii. 37,41 ; xvi. 13,27 sq. ; xvii. \(9,19,22\); xviii. 11 Rec.; xix. 28 ; xx. 18, 28 ; xxiv. 27, 30, 37, 39, 44; xxiv. 30 (twice) ; xxv. 13 Rec., 31 ; xxvi. 2, 24, 45, 64 ; Mk. ii. 10 , 2ू́; viii. 31,38 ; ix. \(9,12,31\); x. 33,45 ; xiii. 26 ; xiv. \(21,41,62\); Lk. v. 24 ; vi. 5,22 ; vii. 34 ; ix. \(22,26,44,56\) Rec., 58 ; xi. 30 ; xii. \(8,10,40\); xvii. 22 , \(24,26,30\); xviii. 8,31 ; xix. 10 ; xxi. 27,36 ; xxii. 22 , 48, 69; xxiv. 7 ; Jn. i. 51 (52) ; iii. 13 sq.; vi. 27, 53,62 ; viii. 28 ; xii. 23,34 ; xiii. 31 , (once without the article, Jn. v. 27), doubtless in order that (by recalling Dan. vii. 13 sq.-not, as some suppose, Ps. viii. 5) he might thus intimate his Messiahship (as is plain from such pass. as Christ seems to have preferred this to the other Messianic tifles, because by its lowliness it was least suited to foster the expectation of an earthly Messiah in royal splendor. There are no traces of the application of the name to Jesus in the apostolic age except in the speech of Stephen, Acts vii. 56, and that of James, the brother of Jesins, in a frag. ment from Hegesippus given in Eus. h. e. 2, 23 (25), 13.

èvrà \({ }^{2}\) ara）．The first and feeble beginnings of this sect seem to be traceable to the age immediately succeeding the return from exile．In addition to the books of the O．T．the Pharisees recognized in oral tradition（see тарá8oots，2）a standard of belief and life（Joseph．antt． 13，10， 6 ；Mt．xv．1；Mk．vii．3）．They sought for dis－ tinction and praise by the observance of external rites and by the outward forms of piety，such as ablutions， fastings，prayers，and alms－giving；and，comparatively negligent of genuine piety，they prided themselves on their fancied good works．They held strenuously to a belief in the existence of good and evil angels，and to the expectation of a Messiah；and they cherished the hope that the dead，after a preliminary experience either of reward or of penalty in Hades，would be re－ called to life by him and be requited each according to his individual deeds．In opposition to the usurped do－ minion of the Herods and the rule of the Romans，they stoutly upheld the theocracy and their country＇s cause， and possessed great influence with the common people． According to Josephus（antt．17，2，4）they numbered more than 6000．They were bitter enemies of Jesus and his cause；and were in turn severely rebuked by him for their avarice，ambition，hollow reliance on out－ ward works，and affectation of piety in order to gain notoriety：Mt．iii．7；v． 20 ；vii． 29 Lchm．；ix．11，14， 34；xii．2，14，24， 38 Lchm．om．；xv．1，12；xvi．1，6，11sq．； xix． 3 ；xxi． 45 ；［xxii．15，34，41］；xxiii．2，13－15，23，25－ 27， 29 ；xxvii． 62 ；Mk．ii．16，18， 24 ；iii． 6 ；vii．1，3， 5 ； viii．11， 15 ；［ix． 11 Lin br．T］；x．2；xii． 13 ；Lk．v．17， \(21,30,33\) ；vi． 2,7 ；vii． 30,36 sq． 39 ；xi． \(37-39,42-44\) ［but in \(44 \mathrm{GT} \operatorname{Tr} \mathrm{WH}\) om．Lbr．the cl．］， 53 ；xii．1； xiii． 31 ；xiv． 1,3 ；xv． 2 ；xvi． 14 ；xvii． 20 ；xviii． 10 sq．； xix． 39 ；Jn．i． 24 ；iii． 1 ；iv．1；vii．32， 45 ， 47 sq．；viii． 3,13 ；ix．［13］， 15 sq． 40 ；xi． 46 sq． 57 ；xii． 19,42 ；xviii． 3 ；Acts v． 34 ；xv． 5 ；xxiii．6－9；xxvi． 5 ；Phil．iii． 5.  a city of Macedonia Prima [see B. D s. v. Macedonia], situated on [near] the northern coast of the Egean Sea, between the rivers Strymon and Nestus, and the cities Neapolis and Amphipolis. It took its name from Philip I. of Macedon, who built it up from a village called Kрquiठes, and adorned and fortified it: Acts xvi. 12 (on this pass. see кодө́vıa) ; xx. 6 ; Phil. i. \(1 ; 1\) Th. ii. 2. [See Bp. Lghtfi. Com. on Philip., Intr. iii.]*
\(\Phi\) Aımтos, -ov, \(\delta\), Philip; \(\quad\) 1. a son of Herod the Great by his fifth wife, Cleopatra of Jerusalem (Joseph. antt. 17, 1, 3), and by far the best of his sons. He was tetrarch of Gaulanitis, Trachonitis, Auranitic. Batanæa, and (acc. to the disputed statement of Lk. iii. 1) of Iturea also [cf. Schürer as below; but see B. D. Am. ed. s. v. Ituræa]; and the founder of the cities of Cæsarea Philippi (in the Decapolis) and Tulias. After having lived long in celibacy, he married Salome, the daughter of Herod [Philip, the disinherited; see below] his halfbrother (Joseph. antt. 18, 5, 4). IIe ruled mildly, justly and wisely thirty-seven years, and in A. D. 34 died without issue, leaving a grateful memory of his reign in the minds of his subjects (Joseph. antt. 18, 2, 1 and 4,6; b. j. 2, 9, 1) : Mt. xvi. 13; Mk. viii. \(2 \overline{7} ;\) Lk. iii. 1; cf. Keim in Schenkel iii. p. 40 sqq. ; Schitrer, Neutest. Zeitgesch. § 17, a. ; [BB. DD.]. In Mt. xiv. 3; Mk. vi. 17, and Lk. iii. 19 Rec. it is said that his wife was Herodias (see 'Howdrás) ; thus Herod, the son of Herod the Great by Mariamne the daughter of the high-priest Simon (Joseph. antt. 18, 5, 1; b. j. 1, 28, 4), who lived as a private citizen in comparative obscurity and was the first husband of Herodias (Joseph. antt. 18, 5, 4), seems to have been confounded with Philip, who as a ruler was better known (ef. Volkmar, Ueber ein. histor. Irrthum in den Evangg., in Zeller's Theol. Jahrbb. for 1846, p. 363 sqq.). Many interpreters (see esp. Krebs, Observv. etc. p. 37 sq.; [Deyling, Observv. sacr. vol. ii. (ed. 2) p. 342 \(\mathrm{sqq}-]\) ), in vindication of the Evangelists, make the somewhat improbable conjecture that the first husband of Herodias had two names, one a family name Herod, the other a proper name Philip; [yet so Winer, RWB. s. v. \section*{PREFATORY REMARKS.}

\section*{HE lists of words herewith subjoined, as an aid to researches involving the language of the New Testament, require a few preliminary remarks by way of explanation.}

In the attempt to classify the vocabulary of the New Testament, words which occor in secular authors down to and including Aristotle (who died b.c. 322) are regarded as belonging to the classical period of the language, and find no place in the lists.

Words first met with between b.c. 322 and b.c. 150 are regarded as "Later Greek" and registered in the list which bears that heading; but between b.c. 280 and b.c. 150 they have "Sept." appended to them in case they also occur in that version.

Words whinh irst appear in the secular authors between b.c. 150 and b.c. 100 and are also found in the Septuagint are credited to "Biblical Greek" (list 1 p. 693), but with the name of the secular author added.

Words which first appear between b.c. 100 and A.D. 1 are registered solely as "Later Greek"
Words which first occur between A.D. 1 and a.d. 50 are enrolled as "Later Greek," but with the name of the author appended.

Words which appear first in the secular authors of the last half of the first century of our era have an asterisk prefixed to them, and are enrolled both in the list of "Later Greek" and in the list of "Biblical Greek."

A New Testament word credited to Biblical Greek, if not found in the Septuagint but occurring in the Apocryphal books of the Old Testament, is so designated by an appended "Apocr." "

Whenever a word given in either the Biblical or the Later Greek list is also found in the Anthologies or the Inscriptions, that fact has been noted (as an intimation that such word may possibly be older than it appears to be); and if the word belong to "Later Greek," the name of the oldest determinate author in which it occurs is also given.

The New Testament vocabulary has thus been classified according to hard and fast chronological lines. But to obviate in some measure the incorrect impression which the rigor of such a method might give, it will be noticed that a twofold recognition has been accorded to words belonging to the periods in which the secular usage and the sacred may be supposed to overlap: viz., for the period covered by the preparation of the Septuagint, for the fifty years which followed its completion, and for the last half of the first Christian century. Nevertheless, the uncertainty inseparable from the results no scholar will overlook. Indeed, the surprises

\({ }^{1}\) It should be noted that in the following lists the term "Sept." is used in its restricted sense to designate merely the canonical books of the Greek Old Testament; but in the body of the lexicon "Sept." often includes all the books of the Greek version, - as well the apocryphal as the canonical. In the lists of words peculiar to individual writers an appended "fr. Sept." signifies that the word occurs only in a quotation from the Septuagint.
almost every one has experienced in investigating the age of some word in his vernacular which has dropped out of use for whole stretches of time and then reappeared, may admonish him of the precarious character of conclusions respecting the usage of an ancient language, of which only fragmentary relics survive, and those often but imperfectly examined. The rough and problematical results here given are not without interest; but they should not be taken for more than they are worth.

The scheme of distribution adopted will be rendered more distinct by the subjoined

\section*{CIIRONOLOGICAL CON゙ - PECTUS.}

Words in use before b.c. 322 . . . . . . . . . . . . . are ranked as classical, and remain unregistered.
Words first used between b.c. 322 and b.c. 280 . . . . . . . . . . . . . . are enrolled as Later Greek. Words first used between s.c. 280 and b.c. 150 . . . . \(\left\{\begin{array}{r}\text { receive a siugle enrolment but double notation, viz. } \\ \text { as Later Greek with Sept. usage noted. }\end{array}\right.\) Words first used between b.c. 150 and b.c. \(100 \ldots\) receive a single enrolment but double notation, viz. . . . . \(\{\) as Biblical Greek with secular usage noted.
Words first used between b.c. 100 and A.D. 1 . . . . . . . . . . . are enrolled simply as Later Greek.
Words first used between A.d. 1 and A.D. \(50 \quad . \quad . \quad\left\{\begin{array}{c}\text { are enrolled as Later Greek but with the name of the } \\ \text { author appended. }\end{array}\right.\) Words first used between a.D. 50 and A.D. \(100 \quad \cdot\left\{\begin{array}{l}\text { as Later Greek (with asterisk prefixed and name }\end{array}\right.\) of secular author appended).

The selection of the distinctive New Testament significations has not been so simple a matter as might be anticipated:-

It is obvious that the employment of a word in a figure of speech cannot be regarded as giving it a new and distinct signification. Accordingly, such examples as ávakiivw in the description of future blessedness (Mt. viii. 11), \({ }^{2} \nu \epsilon \mu \circ s\) to designate the ever-changing doctrinal currents (Eph. iv. 14), \(\dot{\alpha} \pi a \rho \chi^{\prime}\) of first converts (Ro. xvi. 5), \(\pi \dot{d} \lambda \iota s\) of the consummated kingdom power (Lk. i. 66 etc.), and similar uses, are omittech.

Again, the mere application of a word to spiritual or religious relations does not in general the like, have been excluded. Yet this restriction has not been so rigorously enforced as to confessed on all hands to be characteristic or technical New Testament senses.

In general, however, the list is a restricted rather than an inclusive one.

An appended mark of interrogation indicates uncertainty owing to diversity of text. In the lists of words peculiar to individual New Testament writers -
a. When the use of a word by an author (or book) is unquestioned in any single passage such word is crelited to him without an interrogration-mark, even though its use be disputed by some edition of the text in every other passage of that author.
b. When a word is found in one author (or book) according to all editions, but though occurring in others is questioned there by some form of the text in every instance, it is creditec? to the first, and the name of the others is appended in parenthesis with a question-mark.
c. When a word is found in two authors (or books), but in one of them stands in a quotation from the Septuagint, it is credited to the one using it at first hand, and its use by the other is noted with "Sept." or "fr. Sept." appended.
d. A word which is found in but a single author (or book) is credited to the same with a question-mark, even though its use be disputed by one or another form of the text in every instance of its occurrence.
e. A word which is found in two or more authors (or books) yet is disputed by one or another form of the text in every instance, is excluded from the lists altogether.

The monumental misjudgments committed by some who have made questions of authorship trurn on vocabulary alone will deter students, it is to be hoped, from misusing the lists exhibiting the peculiarities of the several books.

Explanations which apply only to particular lists are given at the beginning of those lists. Proper names of persons, countries, rivers, places, have been omitted.

In drawing up the lists free use has been made of the collections to be found in Winer's Grammar, the various Introductions and Encyclopædias, the articles by Professor Potwin in the Bibliotheca Sacra for \(1875,1876,1880\), such works as those of Holtzmann on the Synoptical Gospels and the Pastoral Epistles, and especially the copious catalogues given by Zeller in his Theologische Jahrbücher for 1843, pp. 445-525.

In conclusion, a public expression of my thanks is due to W. W. Fenn, A. B., a student in the Theological department of the University, for very efficient and painstaking assistance.

WORDS PECULIAR TO INDIVIDUAL NEW TESTAMENT WRITERS．

N．B．A word which occurs only in a quotation by the N．T．writer from the Septuagint is so marked．In the Apocalypse，which contains no express quotations，a word is so designated only when the context plainly indicates a（conscious or unconscious） reminiscence on the part of the writer．For other explanations see the Prefatory Remarks，p． 688 sq ．

FORMS OF VERBS．

\begin{abstract}
The List which follows is not Intended to be a mere museum of grammatical curiosities on the one hand，or a catalogue of all the verbal forms occurring in the Greek Testament on the other；but it is a collection of those forms（or their representatives）which mas yossibly occasion a beginner some perplexity．The practical end，accordingly，for which the list has been prepared has prescribed o generous liberty as respects admission to it．Yet the following classes of forms bave been fur the most part excluded：forms which ard traceable by means of the cross references given in the body of the Lexicon，or which hold so isolated a position in its alphabet that even a tyro can hardly miss them；forms easily recognizable as compounded，in case the simple form has been noted；forms readily explain． able by the analogy of some form which is given．

Ordinarily it has been deemed sufficient to give the representative form of a tense，viz．，the First Person（or in the case of the Imperan tive the Second Person）Singular，the Nominative Singular Masculine of a Participle，etc．；but when some other form seemed likely to prove more embarrassing，or was the only one found in the New Testament，it has often been the form selected．

The word＂of＂in the descriptions introduces not necessarily the stem from which a given form comes，but the entry in the Lexicon ander which the form will be found．The epithet＂Alex．＂it is hardly necessary to add，has been employed only for convenience and in its technical sense．

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

THE printing of the Lexicon was nearly finished before the plan of the Appendix, as respects its details, had been decided on. Consequently facts respecting a word's use are occasionally assumed there which are not expressly stated under the word itself. Professor Grimm held it to be unnecessary to refer to profane usage in the case of familiar and current words. And although the number of classic vouchers for the age of a word has been greatly multiplied, they have not been given with that invariable completeness which the chronological distribution of the vocabulary in the Appendix renders desirable. Consistency would require that it be expressly noted that the following words are in use as early as Homer or Hesiod : ä \(\gamma \kappa \iota \sigma \tau \rho o \nu, \dot{\alpha} \gamma \nu \omega \bar{s}\), (Theophr.), \(\pi \rho \omega \dot{\tau} \omega \mathrm{s}\); that the following may be found in the 3 d century before Christ: \(\beta a \theta \in \in \omega s, e^{\prime} \pi a ́ \nu\) (inscr.

Other words without vouchers either first make their appearance in the New Testament writings, or are so treated in the Lexicon as to furnish a student with the means of tracing their history.

Many interesting facts relative to noteworthy New Testament forms, and even constructions, will be found in Meisterhans, Grammatik der Attischen Inschriften, Berlin, 1885 (2d much " enlarged and improved" edition 1888). See, for example, on the various forms of \(\delta i \delta \omega \mu, \bar{i} \eta \mu \nu, ~ i \sigma \tau \eta \mu \nu, \tau i \theta \eta \mu \nu, \S 74\); on the intrusion into the augment, \(\S 62\); on \(€ \lambda \pi i s, \kappa a \theta^{\prime} i \not \subset i a \nu, \S 32,2.4\); on \(\epsilon \nu \in \kappa \in \nu, \epsilon i \nu \in \kappa \in \nu, \S 83,26\); on the use of the cases and prepositions, \(\S \S 82,83\); of the art. with \(\pi a \hat{s}, \S 84,41\); ctc.. etc. References to it (of necessity restricted to the first odition, 1885) have been introduced into the body of the Lexicon where the plates easily permitted.
