\section*{PREFACE.}

TOWARDS the close of the year 1862, the "Arnoldische Buchhandlung" in Leipzig published the First Part of a Greek-Latin Lexicon of the New Testament, prepared, apon the basis of the "Clavis Novi Testamenti Philologica" of C. G. Wilke (second edition, 2 vols. 1851), by Professor C. L. Wilibald Grimm of Jena. In his Prospectus Professor Grimm announced it as his purpose not only (in accordance with the improvements in classical lexicography embodied in the Paris edition of Stephen's Thesaurus and in the fifth edition of Passow's Dictionary edited by Rost and his coadjutors) to exhibit the historical growth of a word's significations and accordingiy in selecting his vouchers for New Testament usage to show at what time and in what class of writers a given word became current, but also duly to notice the usage of the Septuagint and of the Old Testament Apocrypha, and especially to produce a Lexicon which should correspond to the present condition of textual criticism, of exegesis, and of biblical theology. He devoted more than seven years to his task. The successive Parts of his work received, as they appeared, the outspoken commendation of scholars diverging as widely in their views as Hupfeld and Hengstenberg; and since its completion in 1868 it has been generally acknowledged to be by far the best Lexicon of the New Testament extant.

An arrangement was early made with Professor Grimm and his publisher to reproduce the book in English, and an announcement of the same was given in the Bibliotheca, Sacra for October 1864 ( p .886 ). The work of translating was promptly begun; but it was protracted by engrossing professional duties, and in particular by the necessity - as it seemed - of preparing the authorized translation of Lünemann's edition of Winer's New Testament Grammar, which was followed by a translation of the New Testament Grammar of Alexander Buttmann. Meantime a new edition of Professor Grimm's work was called for. To the typographical accuracy of this edition liberal contributions were made from this side the water. It appeared in its completed form in 1879. "Admirable", "unequalled", "invaluable", are some of the epithets it elicited from eminent judges in England; while as representing the estimate of the book by competent critics in Germany a few sentences may be quoted from Professor Schatrer's review of it in the Theologische Literaturzeitung for January 5, 1878: "The use of Protessor Grimm's book for years has convinced me that it is not only unquestionably the best among existing New Testament Lexicons, but that, apart from all comparisons, it is a work of the highest intrinsic merit, and one which is admirably adapted to initiate a learner into an acquaintance with the language of the New Testament. It ought to be regarded by every student as one of the first and most necessary requisites for the study of the New Testament, and consequently for the study of Theology in general."

Both Professor Grimm and his publisher courteously gave me permission to make such changes in his work as might in my judgment the better adapt it to the needs of Englishspeaking students. But the emphatic commendation it called out from all quarters, in a strain similar to the specimens just given, determined me to dismiss the thought of issuing a new book prepared on my predecessor's as a basis, and -alike in justice to him and for the satisfaction of students - to reproduce his second edition in its integrity (with only the silent correction of obvious oversights), and to introduce my additions in such a form as should render them distinguishable at once from Professor Grimm's work. (See [] in the list of "Explanations and Abbreviations" given below.) This decision has occasionally imposed on me some reserve and entailed some embarrassments. But notwithstanding all minor drawbacks the procedure will, I am sure, commend itself in the end, not only on the score of justice to the independent claims and responsibility of both authors, but also on account of the increased assurance (or, at least, the broader outlook) thus afforded the student respecting debatable matters, - whether of philology, of criticism, or of interpretation.

Some of the leading objects with the editor in his work of revision were stated in connection with a few specimen pages privately printed and circulated in 1881, and may here be repeated in substance as follows: to verify all references (biblical, classical, and - so far as practicable - modern) ; to note more generally the extra-biblical usage of words; to give the derivation of words in cases where it is agreed upon by the best etymologists and is of interest to the general student; to render complete the enumeration of (representative) verbal forms actually found in the New Testament (and exclude all others); to append to every verb a list of those of its compounds which occur in the Greek Testament; to supply the New Testament passages accidentally omitted in words marked at the end with an asterisk; to note more fully the variations in the Greek text of current editions; to introduce brief discussions of New Testament synonyms; to give the more noteworthy renderings not only of the "Authorized Version" but also of the Revised New Testament; to multiply cross references; references to grammatical works, both sacred (Winer, Buttmann, Green, etc.) and classical (Kühner, Krüger, Jelf, Donaldson, Goodwin, etc.); also to the best English and American Commentaries (Lightfoot, Ellicott, Westcott, Alford, Morison, Beet, Hackett, Alexander, The Speaker's Commentary, The New Testament Commentary, etc.), as well as to the latest exegetical works that have appeared on the Continent (Weiss, Heinrici, Keil, Godet, Oltramare, etc.) ; and to the recent Bible Dictionaries and Cyclopædias (Smith, Alexander's Kitto, McClintock and Strong, the completed Riehm, the new Herzog, etc.), besides the various Lives of Christ and of the Apostle Paul.

Respecting a few of these specifications an additional remark or two may be in place:
One of the most prominent and persistent embarrassments encountered by the New Testament lexicographer is occasioned by the diversity of readings in the current editions of the Greek text. A slight change in the form or even in the punctuation of a passage may entail a change in its construction, and consequently in its classification in the Lexicon. In the absence of an acknowledged consensus of scholars in favor of any one of the extant printed texts to the exclusion of its rivals, it is incumbent on any Lexicon which aspires after general currency to reckon alike with them all. Professor Grimm originally took account of the text of the 'Receptus', together with that of Griesbach, of Lachmann, and of Tischendorf. In his secoun edition, he made occasional reference also to the readings of Tregelles. In the present work not only have the textual statements of Grimm's second edition undergone thorough revision (see, for example, "Griesbach" in the list of "Explanations and Abbreviations "), but the readings (whether in the text or the margin) of the editions of Tregelles and of Westcott and Hort have also been carefully noted.

Again: the frequent reference, in the discussion of synonymous terms, to the distinctions holding in classic usage (as they are laid down by Schmidt in his voluminous work) must not be regarded as designed to modify the definitions given in the several articles. On the contrary, the exposition of classic usage is often intended merely to serve as a standard of comparison by which the direction and degree of a word's change in meaning can be measured. When so employed, the information given will often start suggestions alike interesting and instructive.

On points of etymology the statements of Professor Grimm have been allowed to stand, although, in form at least, they often fail to accord with modern philological methods. But they have been supplemented by references to the works of Curtius and Fick, or even more frequently, perhaps, to the Etymological Dictionary of Vaniček, as the most compendious digest of the views of specialists. The meaning of radical words and of the component parts of compounds is added, except when it is indubitably suggested by the derivative, or when such words may be found in their proper place in the Lexicon.

The nature and use of the New Testament writings require that the lexicographer should not be hampered by a too rigid adherence to the rules of scientific lexicography. A student often wants to know not so much the inherent meaning of a word as the particular sense it bears in a given context or discussion:-or, to state the same truth from another point of view, the lexicographer often cannot assign a particular New Testament reference to one or another of the acknowledged significations of a word without indicating his exposition of the passage in which the reference occurs. In such a case he is compelled to assume, at least to some extent, the functions of the exegete, although he can and should refrain from rehearsing the general arguments whec support the interpretation adopted, as well as from arraying the objections to opposing interpretations.

Professor Grimm, in his Preface, with reason calls attention to the labor he has expended upon the explanation of doctrinal terms, while yet guarding himself against encroaching upon the province of the dogmatic theologian. In this particular the editor has endeavored to enter into his labors. Any one who consults such articles as aiciv, aímvos, \(\beta a \sigma \iota \lambda \epsilon i ́ a ~ \tau o \imath ̂ ~ \theta \epsilon o v ̂ ~ e t c ., ~\) the materials needed for a complete exposition of the biblical contents of those terms. On the comparatively few points respecting which doctrinal opinions still differ, references have been added to representative discussions on both sides, or to authors whose views may be regarded as supplementing or correcting those of Professor Grimm.

Convenience often prescribes that the archæological or historical facts requisite to the understanding of a passage be given the student on the spot, even though he be referred for fuller information to the works specially devoted to such topics. In this particular, too, the editor has been guided by the example of his predecessor; yet with the constant exercise of self-restraint lest the book be encumbered with unnecessary material, and be robbed of that succinctness which is one of the dastinctive excellences of the original.

In making his supplementary references and remarks the editor has been governed at different times by different considerations, corresponding to the different classes for whose use the Lexicon is designed. Prımarily, indeed, it is intended to satisfy the needs and to guide the researches of the average student; although the specialist will often find it serviceable, and on the other hand the beginner will find that he has not been forgotten. Accordingly, a caveat must be entered aganst the hasty inference that the mention of a different interpretation from that given by Professor Grimm always and of necessity implies dissent from him. It may be intended merely to inform the student that the meaning of the passage is still in debate. And the particular works selected for reference have been chosen now becanse they seem best suited to supplement the statements or references of the original; now because they furnish the most copious references to other discussions of the same topic; now because they are familiar works or those to which a student can readily get access; now, again, because unfamiliar and likely otherwise to escape him altogether.

It is in deference, also, to the wants of the ordinary student that the references to grammatical works - particularly Winer and Buttmann - have been greatly multiplied. The expert can easily train his eye to run over them; and yet even for him they may have their use, not only as giving him the opinion of eminent philologists on a passage in question, but also as contınally recalling his attention to those philological considerations on which the decision of exegetical questions must mainly rest.

Moreover, in the case of a literature so limited in compass as the New Testament, it seems undesirable that even a beginner should be subjected to the inconvenience, expense, and espectally the loss of facility, incident to a change of text-books. He will accordingly find that not only have his wants been heeded in the body of the Lexicon, but that at the close of the Appendix a list of verbal forms has been added especially for his benefit. The other portions of the Appendix will furnish students interested in the history of the New Testament vocabulary, or investigating questions - whether of criticism, authorship, or biblical theology - whech involve its word-Insts, with fuller and more trustworthy collections than can be found elsewhere.

Should I attempt, in conclusion, to record the names of all thuse who during the many years in which this work has been preparing have encouraged or assisted me by word or pen, by counsel or book, the list would be a long one. Express acknowledgments, however, mast ou made to George B. Jewett, D.D., of Salem and to Professor W. W. Eaton now of Middlebury College, Vermont. The former has verified and re-vertied ali the biblical and classical references, besides noting in the main the various readings of the critical texts, and rendering valuable aid in correcting many of the proofs; the latter has gathered the passages omitted from words marked with a final asterisk, completed and corrected the enumeration of verbal forms, catalogued the compound verbs, had an eye to matters of etymology and accentuation, and in many other particulars given the work the benefit of his conscientious and scholarly labor. To these names one other would be added were it longer written on earth. Had the lamented Dr. Abbor been spared to make good his generous offer to read the final proofs, every user of the book would doubtless have had occasion to thank him. He did, however, go through the manuscript and add with his own hand the variant verse-notation, in accordance with the results of investigation subsequently given to the learned world in his Excursus on the subject published in the First Part of the Prolegomena to Tischendorf's Editio Octava Critica Major.

To Dr. Caspar René Gregory of Leipzig (now Professor-elect at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore) my thanks are due for the privilege of using the sheets of the Prolegomena just named in advance of their publication; and to the Delegates of the Clarendon Press, Oxford, for a similar courtesy in the case of the Seventh Edition of Liddell and Scott's Lexicon.

No one can have a keener sense than the editor has of the shortcomings of the present volume. But he is convinced that whatever supersedes it must be the joint product of several laborers, having at their command larger resources than he has enjoyed, and ampler leisure than falls to the lot of the average teacher. Meantime, may the present work so approve itself to students of the Sacred Volume as to enlist their co-operation with him in ridding it of every remaining blemish

J. H. THAYER.

Cambridge, Massachusetts. Dec. 25, 1885.

In issuing this "Corrected Edition" opportunity has been taken not only to revise the supplementary pages ( 723 sq .), but to add in the body of the work (as circunstances permitted) an occasional reference to special monographs on Biblical topics which have been published during the last three years, as well as to the Fourth Volume of Schmidt's Synouymik (1886), and also to works which (like Meisterhans) have appeared in an improved edition. The Third edition (1888) of Grimm, however, has yielded little new material; and Dr. Hatch's "Essays in Biblical Greek" comes to hand too late to permit references to its valuable discussions of words to be inserted.

To the correspondents, both in England and this country, who have called my attention to errata, I beg to express my thanks; and I would earnestly ask all who use the book to send me similar favors in time to come: - ảteגès oưò̀v ov̉devòs \(\mu\) ध́tpov.

Other titles, it is believed, are so fully given as to be easily verifiable.

\section*{EXPLANATIONS AND ABBREVIATIONS.}

As respects Punctuation - it should be noticed, that since only those verbal forms (or their representatives) are given in the Lexicon which actually occur in the Greek Testament, it becomes necessary to distinguish between a form of the Present Tense which is in use, and one which is given merely to secure for a verb its place in the alphabet. This is done by putting a semi-colon after a Present which actually occurs, and a colon after a Present which is a mere alphabetic locum tenens.

Further: a punctuation-raark inserted before a classic voucher or a reference to the Old Testament (whether such voucher or reference be included in a parenthesis or not) indicates that said voucher or reference applies to other passages, definitions, etc., besides the one which it immediately follows. The same principle governs the insertion or the omission of a comma after such abbreviations as "absol.", " pass.", etc.
A hyphen has been placed between the component parts of Greek compounds only in case each separate part is in actual use ; otherwise the hyphen is omitted.
[] Brackets have been used to mark additions by the American eaitor. To avoid, however, a complexity which might prove to the reader confusing, they have been occasionally dispensed with when the editorial additions serve only to complete a statement already made in part by Professor Grimm (as, in enumerating the forms of verbs, the readings of the critical editors, the verbs compounded with \(\sigma \dot{v} \nu\) which observe assimilation, etc. etc.) ; but in no instance have they been intentionally omitted where the omission might seem to attribute to Professor Grimm an opinion for which he is not responsible.
* An asterisk at the close of an article indicates that all the instances of the word's occurrence in the New Testament are noticed in the article. Of the \(\hat{6} 94\) words composing the vocabulary of the New Testament 530u are marked with an asterisk To this extent, therefore, the present work may serve as a concordance as well as a lexicon

A superior \({ }^{\text {a }}\) or \({ }^{\text {b }}\) or \({ }^{\text {c }}\) etc. appended to a verse-numeral designates the first, second, third, etc., occurrence of a given word or construction in that verse. The same letters appended to a page-numeral designate respectively the first, second, third, columns of that page. A small a.b. c. etc. after a page-numeral designates the subdivision of the page.

The various forms of the Greek Text referred to are represented by the following abbreviations :
R or Rec. \(=\) what is commonly known as the Textus Receptus. Dr. F. H. A. Scrivener's last edition (Cambridge and London 1877) has been taken as the standard. \({ }^{1}\) To designate a particular form of this "Protean text" an abbreviation has been appended in superior type; as, al for Elzevir, \({ }^{\text {at }}\) for Stephen, bes for Beza, eras for Erasmus.
G or Grsb. = the Greek text of Griesbach as given in his manual edition, 2 vols., Leipzig, 1805. Owing to a disregard of the signs by which Griesbach indicated his judgment respecting the various degrees of probability belonging to different readings, he is cited not infrequently, even in critical works, as supporting readings which he expressly questioned, but was not quite ready to expel from the text.
L or Lchm. = Lacmmann's Greek text as given in his larger edition, 2 vols., Berliu, 1842 and 1850. When the text of his smaller or stereotyped edition (Berlin, 1831.) is referred to, the abbreviation " min." or "ster." is added to his initial.
T or Tdf. = the text of Tischendorf's "Editio Octava Critica Major" (Leipzig, 1869-1872).
Tr or 'Treg. ="The Greek New Testament" etc. by S. P. Tregelles (London, 1857-1879).
WH = "The New Testament in the Original Greek. The Text Revised by Brooke Foss Westcott D.D. and Fenton John Anthony Hort D.D. Cambridge and London, Macmillan and Co. 1881."
\(\mathrm{KC}=\) "Novum Testamentum ad Fidem Codicis Vaticani" as edited by Professors Kuenen and Cobet (Leyden, 1860).

The textual variations noticed are of course mainly those which affect the individual word or construction under discussion. Where an extended passage or entire section is textually debatable (as, for example, Mk. xvi. \(9-20\); Jn. v. 3 fin -4 ; vii. 53 fin. - viii. 11), that fact is assumed to be known, or at least it is not stated under every word contained in the passage.

As respects the numbering of the verses - the edition of Robert Stephen, in 2 vols. \(16^{\circ}\), Geneva 1551, has been followed as the standard (as it is in the critical editions of Tregelles, Westcott and Hort, etc.). Variations from this standard are indicated by subjoining the variant verse-numeral within marks of parenthesis. The similar addition in the case of references to the Old Testament indicates the variation between the Hebrew notation and the Greek.

 the meaning of the phrase cf. Rev. xi. 17; Is. xli. 4; xliv. 6 ; xlviii. 12; [esp. B. D. Am. ed. p. 73]. \(A\), when prefixed to words as an inseparable syllable, is 1. privative ( \(\sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \eta \tau \pi \kappa \sigma^{\prime}\) ), like the Lat. in-, the Eng. un-, giving a negative sense to the word to which it is prefixed, as áßapis; or signifying what is contrary to it, as är \(\tau \mu о s\), à \(\tau \iota \mu \dot{\omega} \omega\); before vowels generally \({ }^{\text {à }} v\)-, as àvaituos. 2. copulative ( \(\dot{d} \theta_{\rho}\) ototıкóv), akin to the particle ä \(\mu a\) [cf. Curtius § 598], indicating community and fellow-tensive ( \(\bar{\pi} \iota \iota a \tau \iota \alpha \dot{\gamma}\) ), strengthening the force of terms, like the Lat. con in composition; as \(\dot{a} \tau \epsilon \nu i\langle\omega\) fr. à \(\tau \in v i s\) [yet cf. W. 100 (95)]. This use, however, is doubted or denied now by many [e. g. Lob. Path. Element. i. 34 sq.]. Cf. Kühner i. 741, § 339 Anm. 5; [Jelf § 342 8]; Bttm. Gram. § 120 Anm. 11; [Donaldson, Gram. p. 334; New Crat. §§ 185, 213 ; L. and S. s. v.].

 prayer. Whenever it occurs in the N. T. (Mk. xiv. 36; Ro. viii. 15; Gal. iv. 6) it has the Greek interpretation subjoined to it; this is apparently to be explained by the fact that the Chaldee \(\mathbb{N}\) prayer, gradually acquired the nature of a most sacred proper name, to which the Greek-speaking Jews added the appellative from their own tongue.*
"A \(\beta \in \lambda\) [WH "Aß. (see their Intr. §408)], indecl. prop. name (in Joseph. It would seem that double names were esp. common in the case of priests (cf. 1 Macc. ii. 1-5; Joseph. vit. §§ 1, 2) and that father and son often bore the same name (cf Lk. i. 5, 59 ; Joseph. l. c. and antt. 20, 9, 1). [The constractions of this word in the Greek Bible, the Apost. Fathers, etc., are exhibited in detail by Prof. Ezra Abbot in the No. Am. Rev. for Jan. 1872, p. 182 sq. He there shows also (in opposition to Trench, § xl., and others) that it is not " the constant word for the seeking of the inferior from the superior," and so differing frum \(\epsilon^{\epsilon} \rho \omega \tau \alpha \dot{\alpha} \omega\), which has been assumed to imply ' a certain equality or familiarity between the parties'; that the distinction between the words does not turn apon the relative dignity of the person asking and the person asked; but that airé \(\omega\) signifies to ask for something to be given not done, giving prominence to the thing asked for rather than the person, and hence is rarely used in exhortation. 'E \(\rho \omega \tau\) d' \(\omega\), on the other hand, is to request a person to do (rarely to give) something; referring more directly to the person, it is naturally used in exhortation, etc. The views of Trench are also rejected by Cremer, 4te Aufl.s. v. The latter distinguishes aicté \(\omega\) from similar words as follows: "airéw denotes the request of the will, \(\dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \theta \nu \mu \epsilon \in \omega\) that of the sensibilities, \(\delta \dot{\epsilon} \circ \boldsymbol{\mu} a \iota\) the asking of need, while \({ }^{2} \rho \omega \tau \alpha \alpha^{\prime} \omega\) marks the form of the request, as does \(\epsilon 0 \mathrm{Z} \in \sigma \theta a \iota\) also, which in classic Greek is the proper expression for a request directed to the gods and embodying itself in prayer." "E \(\rho \omega \tau \boldsymbol{\tau} \alpha\), , airt́ \(\omega\) and \(\delta \epsilon \in \rho \alpha, \iota\) are also compared briefly by Green, Critical Notes, etc. (on Jn. xiv. 13, 16). who concludes of \(\epsilon \rho \omega \tau \tau^{\prime} \omega\) " it cannot serve to indicate directly any peculiar position, absolute or relative, of the agent. The use of the word may, therefore, be viewed as having relation to the manner and cast of the request, namely, when carrying a certain freedom of aim and bearing; a thing inseparable from the act of direct interrogation"; cf. further Weltschöpfung, p. 168 (Berl. 1864). Schmidt (ch. 44) gives the distinction, for substance, as follows : both words denote the abstract idea of time and with special reference to its extent or duration; \(\chi\) pobos is the general designation for time, which can be divided up into portions, each of which is in its turn a \(x p 6 \nu o s\); on the other hand, aicuy, which in the concrete and simple language of Homer (Pindar and the Tragedians) denotes the allotted lifetime, even the life, of the individual (L. 4, \(478 \mu \iota \nu v \nu \theta \dot{d} \delta\) os \(\delta \epsilon\) oi aióv etc.), in Attic prose differs from \(\chi\) póvos by denoting time unlimited and boundless, which is not conceived of as divisible into aîves (contrast here biblical usage and see below), but rather into \(\chi p 600\). In philosophical speech it is without beginning also. Cf. Tim. Locr. 97 c. d. \(\chi \rho \delta \nu \omega \omega\) §̀ \(\tau \grave{\alpha}\) who professed the name of Christ were first called Christians : Acts xi. 19 sqq.; xiii. 1 ; xiv. 26 ; xv. 22 sqq.; Gal. ii. 11; cf. Reuss in Schenkel i. 141 sq.; [BB. DD. s.v.; Conyb. and Howson, St. Paul, i. 121-126; also the latter in the Dict. of Geogr. s. v.; Renan, Les Apôtres, ch. xii.]. 2. A city of Phrygia, but called in Acts xiii. 14 Intioch of Pisidia [or acc. to the crit. texts the Pisidian Antioch (see Пto'iotos)] because it was on the

 posite to, [A. V. to pass by on the other side]: Lk. x. 31 sq. (where the meaning is, 'he passed by on the side opposite to the wounded man, showing no compassion for him'). (Anthol. Pal. 12, 8 ; to come to one's assistance against a thing, Sap. xvi.10. Found besides in eccl. and Byzant. writ.)*
 [B. 20 (18)]), o, Antipas (contr. fr. 'Avtímatpos W. 103 (97)), a Christian of Pergamum who suffered martyrdom, otherwise unknown : Rev. ii. 13. On the absurd interpretations of this name, cf. Dïsterd. [Alf., Lee, al.] ad loc. Fr. Görres in the Zeitschr. f. wissensch. Theol. for 1878, p. 257 sqq., endeavors to discredit the opinion that he was martyred, but by insufficient arguments.*
'Avтımarpis, -iסos, \(\dot{\eta}\), Antipatris, a city situated between Joppa and Cæsarea, in a very fertile region, not far from the coast ; formerly called Xaßap \(\zeta \alpha \beta \hat{a}\) [al. Kaфa \(\sigma \sigma a-\) \(\beta a \bar{a}\) (or \(-\sigma \dot{\alpha} \beta a\) )] (Joseph. antt. 13, 15, 1), and afterwards rebuilt by Herod the Great and named Antipatris in honor of his father Antipater (Joseph. b. j. 1, 21, 9) : Acts xxiii. 31. àvt- \(\pi i \pi \tau \omega\); a. to fall upon, run against, [fr. Aristot. down]; b. to be adverse, oppose, strive against: \(\tau \iota v i\), Acts vii. 51. (Ex. xxvi. 5 ; xxxvi. 12 ed. Compl. ; Num. xxvii. 14 ; often in Polyb., Plut.)*
àvtı-бтратєv่opaı; 1. to make a military expedition, or take the field, against any one: Xen. Cyr. 8, 8, 26. 2. to oppose, war against : \(\tau \iota{ }^{\prime}\), Ro. vii. 23. (Aristaenet. 2, 1, 13.)*

in battle against; mid. to oppose one's self, resist : \(\tau \omega \boldsymbol{i}\), Ro. xiii. 2; Jas. iv. 6; v. 6; 1 Pet. v. 5 ; cf. Prov. iii. 34. absol., Acts xviii. 6. (Used by Grk. writ. fr. Aeschyl. down.) *
duvi-tutos, - оу, (rv́ \(\pi \tau \omega\) ), in Grk. writ. 1, prop. a. actively, repelling a blow, striking back, echoing, reflecting light; resisting, rough, hard. b. passively, struck back, repelled. 2. metaph. rough, harsh, obstinate, hostile. In the N. T. language \(\dot{\alpha} \nu \tau i \tau v \pi \sigma \nu\) as a subst. means 1. a thing formed after some pattern (тúmos [q. v. 4 u.]), (Germ. Abbild) : Heb. ix. 24 [R. V. like in pattern]. 2. a thing resembling another, its counterpart; something in the Messianic times which answers to the type (see тілтоs, \(4 \gamma\).) prefiguring it in the O.T. (Germ. Gegenbild, Eng. antitype), as baptism corresponds to the deluge: 1 Pet. iii. 21 [R. V. txt. after a true likeness].*
d̀vti-xpıotos, -ov, ó, (ảvti against and Xpıatós, like àti \({ }^{\text {Otos }}\) opposing God, in Philo de somn. l. ii. § 27, etc., Justin, quaest. et resp. p. 463 c. and other Fathers; [see Soph. Lex. s.v., cf. Trench §xxx.]), the adversary of the Messiah, a most pestilent being, to appear just before the Messiah's advent, concerning whom the Jews had conceived diverse opinions, derived partly fr. Dan. xi. 36 sqq. ; vii. 25 ; viii. 25, partly fr. Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix. Cf. Eisenmenger, Entdecktes Judenthum, ii. 704 sqq.; Gesenius in Ersch and Gruber's Encycl. iv. 292 sqq. s. v. Antichrist; Böhmer, Die Lehre v. Antichrist nach Schneckenburger, in the Jahrbb. f. deutsche Theol. vol. iv. p. 405 sqq. The name \(\delta\) ávrixplotos was formed perhaps by John, the only writer in the N. T. who uses it, [five times]; he employs it of the corrupt power and influence hostile to Christian interests, especially that which is at work in false teachers who have come from the bosom of the church and are engaged in disseminating error: 1 Jn . ii. 18 (where the meaning is, 'what ye have heard concerning Antichrist, as about to make his appearance just before the return of Christ, is now fulfilled in the many false teachers, most worthy to be called antichrists,' [on the om. of the art. cf. B. 89 (78)]); 1 Jn . iv. 3 ; and of the false teachers themselves, 1 Jn . ii. 22 ; 2 Jn. 7. In Paul and the Rev. the idea but not the name of Antichrist is found; yet the conception differs from that of John. For Paul teaches that Antichrist will be an individual man [cf. B. D. as below], of the very worst character ( \(\tau \grave{\nu} \nu{ }^{2} \nu \nu \rho\). \(\tau \hat{\eta} s\) á \(\mu a \rho \tau i a s ;\) see á \(\mu a \rho \tau i a, 1\) ), instigated by the devil to try to palm himself off as God: 2 Th. ii. 3-10. The author of the Apocalypse discovers the power of Antichrist in the sway of imperial Rome, and his person in the Emperor Nero, soon to return from the dead: Rev. xiii. and xvii. (Often in eccl. writ.) [See B. D. s.v. (Am. ed. for additional reff.), also B. D. s. v. Thess. 2d Ep. to the; Kähler in Herzog ed. 2, i. 446 sq.: Westcott, Epp. of St. John, pp 68, 89.]*

ápa, an illative particle (akin, as it seems, to the verbal root APS to join, to be fitted, [cf. Curtius §488; Vanicek p. 47]), whose use among native Greeks is illustrated fully by Kuihner ii. §§509, 545; [Jelf §§ 787-789], and Klotz ad Devar. ii. pp. 160-180, among others; [for a statement of diverse views see Bäumleir, Griech. Partikeln, p. 19 sq.]. It intimates that, "under these circumstances something either is so or becomes so " (Klotz l. c. p. 167) : Lat. igitur, consequently, [differing from ov̉y in 'denoting a subjective impression rather than a positive conclusion.' L. and S. (see 5 below)]. In the N. T. it is used frequently by Paul, but in the writings of John and in the so-called Catholic Epistles it does not occur. On its use in the N. T. cf. W. \(\S \S 53,8\) a. and 61,6. It is found 1. subjoined to another word : Ro. vii. 21 ; viii. 1 ; Gal. iii. 7 ; ধ̇ \(\pi \epsilon \grave{l}\) ảpa since, if it were otherwise, 1 Co. vii. 14 ; [v. 10, cf. B. § 149, 5].  Megiddo was a city of the Manassites, situated in the great plain of the tribe of Issachar, and famous for a double slaughter, first of the Canaanites (Judg. v. 19), and again of the Israelites ( \(2 \mathrm{~K} . x x i i i .29 \mathrm{sq}\); 2 Chr. xxxv. 2.2 , cf. deX-七єреv์s, -є́ \(\omega s, \delta\), chief priest, high-priest. 1. He who above all others was honored with the title of priest, the chief of the priests, פּהַן הַנָרול (Lev. xxi. 10; Num. xxxv. 25, [later לֹלהן הָראש, 2 K. xxv. 18; 2 Chr. xix. 11, etc.]): Mt. xxvi. 3, and often in the Gospels, the Acts, and the Ep. to the Heb. It was lawful for him to perform the common duties of the priesthood; but his chief duty was, once a year on the day of atonement, to enter the Holy of holies (from which the other priests were excluded) and offer sacrifice for his own sins and the sins of the people (Lev. xvi.; Heb. ix. 7, 25), and to preside over the Sanhedrin, or supreme Council, when convened for judicial deliberations (Mt. xxvi. 3; Acts xxii. b; xxiii. 2). According to the Mosaic law no one could aspire to the high-priesthood unless he were of the tribe of Aaron, and descended moreover from a high-priestly family; and he on whom the office was conferred held it till death. But from the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, when the kings of the Seleucidæ and afterwards the Herodian princes and the Romans arrogated to themselves the power of appointing the high-priests, the office neither remained vested in the pontifical family nor was conferred on any one for life; but it became venal, and could be transferred from one to another according to the will of civil or military rulers. Hence it came to pass, that during the one hundred and seven years intervening between Herod the Great and the destruction of the holy city, twenty-eight persons held the pontifical dignity (Joseph. antt. 20, 10; see "Avvas). Cf. Win. R W B. s. v. Hoherpriester; Oehler in Herzog vi. p. 198 sqq.; [BB.DD. s. ov. Highpriest, Priest, etc. The names of the 28 ( 27 ?) above alluded to are given, together with a brief notice of each, in an art. by Schürer in the Stud. u. Krit. for 1872, pp. 597-607]. 2. 'AgıápX \(\eta \mathrm{s}\), -ov, \(\dot{\text { of }}\), an Asiarch, President of \(A\) sia : Acts xix. 31. Each of the cities of proconsular Asia, at the autumnal equinox, assembled its most honorable and opulent citizens, in order to select one to preside over the games to be exhibited that year, at his expense, in honor of the gods and the Roman emperor. Thereupon each city reported the name of the person selected to a general assembly held in some leading city, as Ephesus, Smyrna, Sardis. This general council, called tò кoıvóv, selected ten out of the number of candidates, and sent them to the proconsul; and the proconsul, apparently, chose one of these ten to preside over the rest. This explains how it is that in Acts I.c. several Asiarchs are spoken of, while Eusebius h. e. 4, 15, 27 mentions only one; [perhaps also the title outlasted the service]. Cf. Relying principally on the prophecies of Daniel who had declared it to be the purpose of God that, after four vast and mighty kingdoms had succeeded one another and the last of them shown itself hostile to the people of God, at length its despotism should be broken, and the empire of the world pass over for ever to the holy people of God (Dan. ii. 44 ; vii. 14, 18, 27) - the Jews were expecting a kingdom of the greatest felicity, which God through the Messiah would set up, raising the dead to life again and renovating earth and heaven; and that in this kingdom they would bear sway for ever over all the nations of the world. This kingdom was called the kingdom of God or the kingdom of the Messiah; and in this sense must these terms be understood in the utterances of the Jews and of the disciples of Jesus when conversing with him, as Mt. xviii. 1 ; xx. 21 ; Mk. xi. 10; Lk. xvii. 20 ; xix. 11. But Jesus employed the phrase kingdom of God or of heaven to indicate that perfect order of things which he was about to establish, in which all those of every nation who should believe in him were to be gathered together into one society, dedicated and intimately united to God, and made partakers of eternal salvation. This kingdom is spoken of as now begun and actually present, inasmuch as its foundations have already been laid by Christ and its benefits realized among men that believe in him: Mt. xi. 12; xii. 28 ; xiui. 41 (in this pass. its earthly condition is spoken of, in which it includes bad subjects as well as good) ; Lk. xvii. 21; 1 Co. iv. 20 ; Ro. xiv. 17 (where the meaning is, 'the essence of the kingdom of God is not to be found in questions about eating and drinking'); Col. i. 13. But far more frequently the kingdom of heaven is spoken of as a future blessing, since its consummate establishment is to be looked for on Christ's solemn return from the skies, the dead being called to life again, the ills and wrongs which burden the present state of things being done away, the powers hostile to God being vanquished: Mt. vi, 10 ; viii. 11 ; xxvi. 29 ; Mk. ix. 1 ; xv. 43 ; Lk. ix.

Suet. Jul. Caes. 46 and Casaubon ad loc.). This opinion is opposed by the circumstance that John is not accustomed to add a Greek interpretation except to the Hebr. names of fixed Jewish localities, cf. v. 2; ix. 7; xix. 17; and that this is so in the present case is evident from the fact that he has said \(\epsilon\) is rótov, i. e. in a definite locality which had that name. Besides, it cannot be proved that that custom of the military commanders was followed also by the governors of provinces residing in cities. Doubtless the Chaldaic name was given to the spot from its shape, the Greek name from the nature of its pavement. Afterwards, in the year b. c. 96, Alexander Jannæus, king of the Jews, took it after a year's siege and destroyed it (Joseph. antt. 13, 13, 3). Gabinius rebuilt it B. c. 58 (Joseph. l. c. 14, 5, 3). Finally the emperor Augustus gave it [b. c. 30] to Herod the Great (Joseph. I. c. 15, 7, 3), after whose death it was annexed to Syria (Joseph. 1. c. 17, 11, 4). \(\gamma^{\text {áp, a }}\) a çonjunction, which acc. to its composition, \(\boldsymbol{\gamma}^{\prime}\) and äpa (i. q. ap), is properly a particle of affirmation and conclusion, denoting truly therefore, verily as the case stands, " the thing is first affirmed by the particle \(\boldsymbol{\gamma}^{\prime}\), and then is referred to what precedes by the force of the particle " \(\rho a\) " (Klotz ad Devar. ii. 1, p. 232 ; cf. Kühner ii. p. 724 ; [Jelf § 786 ; W. 445 (415) sq.]). Now since by a new affirmation not infrequently the reason and nature of something previously mentioned are set forth, it comes to pass that, by the use of this particle, either the reason and cause of a foregoing statement is added, whence arises the causal or argumentative force of the particle, for (Lat. nam, enim; Germ. denn); or some previous declaration is explained, whence \(\gamma\) áf takes on an explicative force:
for, the fact is, namely (Lat. videlicet, Germ. namlich). Thus the force of the particle is either conclusive, or demonstrative, or explicative and declara tory ; cf. Rost in Passow's Lex. i. p. 535 sqq.; Kuihner ii. pp. 724 sqq. 852 sqq.; [cf. L. and S. s. v.]. The use of the particle in the N. T. does not differ from that in the classics.
I. Its primary and original Conclusive force is seen in questions (in Grk. writ. also in exclamations) and answers expressed with emotion; where, acc. to the connexion, it may be freely represented by assuredly, verily, forsooth, why, then, etc. : ‘ं \(\nu \boldsymbol{\gamma}\) ј̀̀ \(\rho\) тои́тф etc. ye profess not to know whence he is; herein then is assuredly a marvellous thing, why, herein etc. Jn. ix. 30 ; oủ \(\gamma \dot{\rho} \rho\), ả \(\lambda \lambda d\) etc. by no means in this state of things, nay verily, but etc. Acts xvi. 37 ; certainly, if that is the case, 1 Co. viii. 11 LT Tr WH. It is joined to interrogative particles and pronouns: \(\mu \dot{\eta}\) jà \(\rho\) etc. Jn. vii. 41 (do ye then suppose that the Christ comes out of Galilee? What, doth the Christ, etc.?); \(\mu \dot{\eta} \gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho\). . o oúk, 1 Co. xi. 22 (what! since ye are so eager to eat and drink, have ye not, etc.?); demand that he be crucified like a malefactor, Why, what evil hath he done?) ; Mt. ix. 5 (your thoughts are evil; which then do ye suppose to be the easier, etc. ?) ; Mt. xvi. 26 ; xxiii. 17,19 ; Lk. ix. 25 ; Acts xix. 35 ; тi yáp; for \(\tau i\) ráp è ext, what then? i. e. what, under these circumstances, ought to be the conclusion? Phil. i. 18 [cf. Ellic. ad loc.]; \(\pi \omega \bar{s} \gamma \dot{\rho} \rho\), Acts viii. 31 ; cf. Klotz l.c. p. 245 sqq.; Kühner ii. p. 726 ; [Jelf ii. p. 608]; W. 447 (416). Here belongs also the vexed passage Lk. xviii. \(14 \hat{\eta}\) خ̀àj ékêvos (so G T Tr mrg., but L WH Tr txt. \(\pi a \rho^{\prime}\) éкévol ) or do ve suppose then that that man went down approved of God? cf. W. 241 (226).
II. It adduces the Cause or gives the Reason of a preceding statement or opinion; 1. univ.: Mt. ii. 5 ; vi. 24 ; Mk. i. 22 ; ix. 6 ; Lk.i. 15,18 ; xxi. 4 ; Jn. ii. 25 ; Acts ii. 25 ; Ro. i. 9,11 ; 1 Co. xi. 5 ; Heb. ii. \(8 ; 1\) Jn. ii. 19 ; Rev. i. 3, and very often. In Jn. iv. 44 үáp assigns the reason why now at length Jesus betook himself into Galilee; for the authority denied to a prophet in his own country (Galilee), he had previously to seek and obtain among strangers; cf. 45 ; Meyer [yet see ed. 6 (Weiss)] ad loc.; Strauss, Leben Jesu, i. 725 ed. 3; Neander, Leben Jesu, p. 385 sq. ed. 1 [Am. trans. pp. 100, 168]; Evald, Jahrbb. d. bibl. Wissensch. x. p. 108 sqq. 2. Often the sentences are connected in such a way that either some particular statement is established by a general proposition (' the particular by the universal '), as in Mt. vii. 8 ; xiii. 12 ; xxii. 14 ; Mk. iv. 22, 25 ; Jn. iii. 20 ; 1 Co. xii. 12; Heb. v. 13, etc.; or what has been stated generally, is proved to be correctly stated by a particular instance ('the universal by the particular'): Mk. vii. 10 ; Lk. xii. 52, 58; Ro. vii. 2; 1 Co. i. 26 ; xii. 8. 3. To sentences in which something is commanded or forbidden, \(\gamma a ́ \rho\) annexes the reason why the thing must either be done or avoided: Mt. i. 20 sq. ; ii. 20 ; iii. 9 ; vii. 2 ; Ro. xiii. 11 ; Col. iii. 3 ;

1 Th. iv. 3 ; Heb. ii. 2, and very often. In Phil. ii. 13 yáp connects the verse with vs. 12 thus: work out your salvation with most intense earnestness, for nothing short of this accords with God's saving efficiency within your souls, to whom you owe both the good desire and the power to execute that desire. 4. To questions, yáp annexes the reason why the question is asked: Mt. ii. 2 (we ask this with good reason, for we have seen the star which announces his birth); Mt. xxii. 28; Ro. xiv. \(10 ; 1\) Co. xiv. 9 ; Gal. i. 10 . 5. Frequently the statement which contains the cause is interrogative; ris, Fritzsche ad loc.; [Ellic. on Phil. i. 18]) ; iva ri ráp, 1 Co. x. 29 ; поía \(\boldsymbol{\gamma}\) á \(\rho\), Jas. iv. 14 [WH txt. om. Tr br. үáp]. 6. Sometimes in answers it is so used to make good the substance of a preceding question that it can be rendered yea, assuredly: 1 Co. ix. 10; 1 Th. ii. 20 ; cf. Kuhner ii. p. 724. 7. Sometimes it confirms, not a single statement, but the point of an entire discussion : Ro. ii. \(2 \overline{5}\) (it is no advantage to a wicked Jew, for etc.). On the other hand, it may so confirm but a single thought as to involve the force of asseveration and be rendered yáp, Phil. ii. 27. 8. It is often said that the sentence of which yá introduces the cause, or renders the reason, is notexpressed, but must be gathered from the context and supplied in thought. But that this ellipsis is wholly imaginary is clearly shown by Klotz ad Devar. ii. 1 p. 236 sq., ef. W. 446 (415) sq. The particle is everywhere used in reference to something expressly stated. Suffice it to append a very few examples; the true nature of many others is shown under the remaining heads of this article: In Mt. v. 12 before \(\gamma\) á \(\rho\) some supply 'nor does this happen to yo ' 'llone'; but the reason is added why a great reward is neaven is reserved for those who suffer persecution, which reason consists in this, that the prophets also suffered persecution, and that their reward is great no one can doubt. In Ro. viii. 18 some have supplied 'do not shrink from this suffering with Christ'; but on the use of \(\gamma\) '́p here, see III. a. below. On Mk. vii. 28 [ \(\mathrm{T} \operatorname{Tr} \mathrm{WH}\) om. L br. yáp], where before кai \(\gamma\) д́p some supply 'but help me,' or ' yet we do not suffer even the dogs to perish with hunger,' see 10 b . below. In Acts ix. 11 before \(\gamma\) á \(\rho\) many supply 'he will listen to thee'; but it introduces the reason for the preceding command. 9. When in successive statements \(\gamma\) áp is repeated twice or thrice, or even four or five times, either a. one and the same thought is confirmed by as many arguments, each having its own force, as there are repetitions of the particle [Mey. denies the coördinate use of \(\gamma{ }^{\prime} \rho\) in the N.T., asserting that the first is argumentative, the second explicative, see his Comm. on the pass. to follow, also on Ro. viii. 6]: Mt. vi. 32; Ro. xvi. 18 sq .; or b. every succeeding statement contains the reason for its immediate predecessor, so that the statements are subordinate one to another: Mk. vi. 52 ; Mt. xvi. \(25-27\); Jn. iii. 19 sq. ; v. 21 sq. ; Acts ii. 15 ; Ro. iv.

13-15 ; viii. 2 sq. 5 sq.; 1 Co. iii. 3 sq.; ix. 15-17 (where five times in \(\mathrm{GLT} \operatorname{Tr} \mathrm{WH}\) ) ; 1 Co. xvi. 7; Jas. ii. 10, etc.; or c. it is repeated in a different sense: Mk. ix. 39-41; Ro. v. 6 sq. (where ef. W. 453 (422)); x. 2-5 (four times) ; Jas. iv. 14 [WH txt. om. Tr br. the first yáp, L WH mrg. om. the second]. 10. кai \(\gamma\) á \(\rho\) (on which cf. Kühner ii. p. 854 sq ; ; W. 448 (417); [Ellic. on 2 Thess. iii. 10]) is a. for, and truly, (etenim, namque, [the simple rendering for is regarded as inexact by many; cf. Mey. on 2 Co. xiii. 4 and see Hartung, Partikeln, i. 137 sq.; Krüger § 69, 32, 21]) : Mk. xiv. 70; Lk. xxii. 37 [L Tr br. \(\gamma\) áp]; 1 Co. v. 7 ; xi. 9 ; xii. 13. b. for also, for even, \(\cdot(\) nam etiam \()\) : Mt. viii. 9 ; Mk. x. 45 ; Lk. vi. 32 ; Jn. iv. 45; 1 Co. xii. 14, etc. In Mk. vii. 28 кai yà [ R G L br.] fà kuvápıa etc. the woman, by adducing an example, confirms what Christ had said, but the example is of such a sort as also to prove that her request ought to be granted. rè yáp for indeed (Germ. denn ja) : Ro. vii. 7; cf. Fritzsche ad loc.; W. 448 (417). i¿où yáp, see under iסov́.
III. It serves to explain, make clear, illustrate, a preceding thought or word: for i. q. that is, namely; a. so that it begins an exposition of the thing just announced [cf. W. 454 (423) sq.]: Mt. i. 18 [R G]; xix. 12; Lk. xi. 30 ; xviii. 32 . In Ro. viii. 18 yá \(\rho\) introduces a statement setting forth the nature of the \(\sigma v \nu \delta o \xi a \sigma \theta \hat{\eta} \nu a u\) just mentioned. b. so that the explanation is intercalated into the discourse, or even added by way of appendix : Mt. iv. 18; Mk. i. 16; ii. 15; v. 42 ; Ro. vii. 1; 1 Co. xvi. 5. In Mk. xvi. 4 the information \({ }_{\eta}^{\eta} \nu\) дà \(\rho \mu \epsilon ́ \gamma a s \sigma \phi o ́ \delta \rho a\) is added to throw light on all that has been previously said (in vs. 3 sq.) about the stone.
IV. As respects Position: yá \(\rho\) never occupies the first place in a sentence, but the second, or third, or even the fourth ( \(\dot{\delta}\) тov̀ \(\theta_{\text {coù }}\) qà \(\rho\) viós, 2 Co . i. \(19-\mathrm{acc}\). to true text). \(\boldsymbol{y}^{\epsilon}\), an enclitic particle, answering exactly to no one word in Lat. or Eng.; used by the bibl. writ. much more rarely than by Grk. writ. How the Greeks use it, is shown by (among others) Hermann ad Vig. p. 822 sqq.: Klotz ad Devar. ii. 1 p. 272 sqq.; Rost in Passow's Lex. i. p. \(538 \mathrm{sqq}\). ; [L. and S. s. v. ; T. S. cates that the meaning of the word to which it belongs has especial prominence, and therefore that that word is to be distinguished from the rest of the sentence and attered with greater emphasis. This distinction "can be made in two ways, by mentioning either the least important or the most; thus it happens that \(\gamma \boldsymbol{f}\) seems to have contrary significations: at least and even" (Hermann l.c. p. 822). 1. where what is least is indicated; indeed, truly, at least : \(\delta\) tá \(y \in ~ \tau \grave{\eta} \nu\) d̀vaî̀́t tav, Lk. xi. 8 (where, since the force of the statement lies in the substantive not in the preposition, the Greek should have

John unites \(\pi \iota \sigma \tau \epsilon \mathfrak{i} \epsilon \downarrow\) and \(\gamma \iota \nu \omega ́ \sigma \kappa \epsilon \iota\), at one time putting \(\pi t \sigma \tau \epsilon \dot{\varepsilon} \epsilon \iota\) first: vi. 69 [cf.  In classic usage (cf. Schmidt ch. 13), \(\gamma \iota \nu \omega \sigma \kappa \in \iota \nu\), distinguished from the rest by its original incho ative force, denotes a discriminating apprehension of external impressions, a knowledge grounded in personal experience. eidévat, lit. 'to have seen with the mind's eye,' signifies a clear and purely mental perception, in contrast both to conjecture and to knowledge derived from others. \(\quad\) enlorafoai primarily expresses the knowledge obtained by proximity to the thing known (cf. our understand, Germ. verstehen) ; then knowledge viewed as the result of prolonged practice, in oppowition to the process of learniug on the one hand, and to the uncertain knowledge of a dilettante on the other. avylévac implies native insight, the soul's capacity of itself not only to lay hold of the phenomena of the outer world through the senses, but by combination ( \(\sigma \dot{v} \nu\) and íf́vai \(^{\prime}\) ) to arrive at their underlying laws. Hence cuvit́val may mark an antithesis to sense-perception; whereas \(\gamma \iota \nu \omega \dot{\sigma} \kappa \epsilon \iota \nu\) marks an advance upon it. As applied e. g. to a work of literature, \(\gamma^{\iota} \nu \omega \sigma \sigma \epsilon \iota \nu\) expresses an acquaintance with it; \(\bar{\epsilon} \pi i \sigma \tau \alpha \sigma \theta a s\) the knowledge of its contents; \(\sigma \nu \nu \ell^{\prime} v a \iota\) the understanding of \(i t\), a comprehension of its meaning. \(\gamma \iota \nu \omega \sigma \kappa \epsilon t \nu\) and \(\epsilon i \delta \epsilon ́ v a l\) most reallily come into contrast with each other; if eiס'́vaı and \(\ell \pi i \sigma \tau a \sigma \theta a \iota\) are contrasted, the former refers more to uatural, the latter to acquired knowledge. In the N. T., as might be expected, these distinctions are somewhat less sharply marked. Such passages as John i. \(26,31,48\) (49) ; vii. 27 sq. ; xxi. 17 ; 2 Co. v. 16 ; 1 Jn. v. 20 may seem to indicate that, sometimes at least, \(\gamma \Delta \nu \omega\) órкw and old \(\alpha\) are nearly interchangeable; yet see Jn. iii. 10, 11 ; viii. 55 (yet cf. xvii. 25) ; 1 Jn. ii. 29 (know . . . perceive), and the characteristic use of eiסéval by John to describe our Lord's direct insight into divine things: iii. 11 ; v. 32 (contrast 42); vii. 29 ; viii. 55 ; xii. 50 , etc ; cf. Bp. Lghtft.'s note on Gal. iv. 9 ; Green, 'Critical Notes' etc. p. 75 (on Jn. viii. 55); Westcott on John ii. 24. \(\quad \gamma \iota \nu \omega \sigma \kappa \omega\) and éniova \(\mu a\) are associated in Acts xix. 15 (cf. Green, as above, p. 97) ; ot8a and

By a poetical and rhetorical usage, esp. Hebraistic, that member of the body which is chiefly engaged in some act has ascribed to it what belongs to the man; the tongue is so used in Acts ii. 26 ( \(\boldsymbol{\eta} \gamma \boldsymbol{\lambda} \lambda \lambda\) เá \(\sigma a r o ~ \dot{\eta} \gamma \lambda \hat{\omega} \sigma \sigma a ́ \mu o v)\); Ro. iii. 13 ; xiv. 11 ; Phil.ii. 11 (the tongue of every man) ; of the little tongue-like flames symbolizing the gift of foreign tongues, in Acts ii. 3. 2. a tongue, i. e. the language used by a particular people in distinction from that of other nations: Acts ii. 11 ; hence in later Jewish usage (Is. lxvi. 18 ; Dan. iii. 4 ; v. 19 Theod.; vi. 25; vii. 14 Theod.; Jud. iii. 8) joined with \(\phi \nu \lambda \dot{\eta}, \lambda a o ́ s, \epsilon \notin \theta \nu o s\), it serves to designate people of various languages [cf. From both these expressions must be carefully distinguished the simple phrases \(\lambda a \lambda \epsilon i \nu \gamma \lambda \dot{\omega} \sigma \sigma a u s, \gamma \lambda \omega \dot{\sigma} \sigma a \iota s \lambda a \lambda \epsilon i \nu, \lambda a \lambda \epsilon i \nu \gamma \lambda \omega \sigma \sigma \eta\), \(\gamma \lambda \dot{\omega} \sigma \sigma \eta \quad \lambda a \lambda \epsilon i ̂ \nu\) (and \(\pi \rho \sigma \sigma \epsilon \dot{\chi}_{\chi \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota} \gamma \lambda \dot{\omega} \sigma \sigma \eta, 1\) Co. xiv. 14), to speak with (in) a tongue (the organ of speech), to speak with tongues; this, as appears from 1 Co. xiv. 7 sqq ., is the gift of men who, rapt in an ecstasy and no longer quite masters of their own reason and consciousness, pour forth their glowing spiritual emotions in strange utterances, rugged, dark, disconnected, quite unfitted to instruct or to influence the minds of others: Acts x. 46 ; xix. \(6 ; 1\) Co. xii. 30 ; xiii. 1 ; xiv. \(2,4-6,13,18,23,2 \overline{7}, 39\). The origin of the expression is apparently to be found in the fact, that in Hebrew the tongue is spoken of as the leading instrument by which the praises of God are proclaimed ( \(\dot{\eta} \tau \hat{\omega} \nu\) 28 ; lxv. (lxvi.) 17 ; lxx. (lxxi.) 24 ; exxv.  ment, of any sort, which one wishes to be valid, (Germ. Verordnung, Willensverfügung): Gal. iii. 15, where under the name of a man's disposition is meant specifically \(a\) testament, so far forth as it is a specimen and example of that disposition [cf. Mey. or Bp. L. mltft . ad loc.]; esp. the last disposal which one makes of his earthly possessions after his death, a testament or will (so in Grk. writ. fr. [Arstph.], Plat. legg. 11 p. 922 c. sqq. down) : Heb. ix. 16 sq . 2. a compact, covenant (Arstph. av. 440), very often in the Scriptures for \(\begin{aligned} & \text { ּרִי (Vulg. testamen- }\end{aligned}\) tum). For the word covenant is used to denote the close relationship which God entered into, first with Noah (Gen. vi. 18; ix. 9 sqq. [cf. Sir. xliv. 18]), then with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and their posterity (Lev. xxvi. 42 [cf. 2 Macc. i. 2]), but esp. with Abraham (Gen. xv. and xvii.), and afterwards through Moses with the people of Israel (Ex. xxiv. ; Deut. v. 2; xxviii. 69 (xxix. 1)). By this last covenant the Israelites are bound to obey God's will as expressed and solemnly promulged in the Mosaic law; and he promises them his almighty protection and blessings of every kind in this world, but threatens transgressors with the severest punishments. Hence in the N. T. we find mention of ai \(\pi \lambda\) ákes

As the new and far more excellent bond of friendship which God in the Messiah's time would enter into with the people of Israel is called (Jer. xxxviii. (xxxi.) 31), -which divine promise Christ has made good (Heb. viii. \(8-10\); x. 16), -we find in the N. T. two distinct covenants spoken of, \(\delta\) ío \(\delta \iota a \theta \hat{\eta}<a<\) (Gal. iv. 24), viz. the Mosaic and the Christian, with the former of which ( \(\tau \hat{\eta} \pi \rho \dot{\not} \tau \eta\) ) \(\delta a \theta_{\eta} \kappa \eta\), Heb. ix. 15,18 , cf. viii. 9) the latter is contrasted, as каш \(\boldsymbol{\eta}_{\dot{\prime}} \delta \iota a \theta_{\eta} \kappa \eta\), Mt. xxvi. 28 ; Mk. xiv. 24 (in both pass. in RGL [in Mt. in Tr also]) ; Lk. xxii. 20 [WH reject the pass.] ; 1 Co. xi. 25 ;

Sir. xliv. 16; Joseph. antt. 1, 3, 4]) ; in the opinion of later Jews the most renowned antediluvian prophet; to whom, towards the end of the second century before Christ, was falsely attributed an apocalyptical book which was afterwards combined with fragments of other apocryphal books, and preserved by the Fathers in Greek fragments and entire in an Ethiopic translation. This translation, having been found among the Abyssinian Christians towards the close of the last century, has been edited by Richard Laurence, archbishop of Cashel ("Libri Henoch versio aethiopica." Oxon. 1838), and by A. Dillmann ("Liber Henoch, aethiopice." Lips. 14.51) ; it was translated into English by R. Laurence (1st ed. 1821 ; 3d ed. 1838 [reprinted (Scribners, N. Y.) 1883; also (with notes) by G. H. Schodde (Andover, 1882)], into German by A. G. Hoffman (Jen. 1833-38, 2 vols.) and by A. Dillmann (Lips. 1853) ; each of the last two translators added a commentary. From this book is taken the 'prophecy' in Jude 14 sq.; [cf. B.D. (Am. ed.), also Dict. of Chris. Biog., s. v. If this use of the word is conceded, it affords us the easiest and most congruous explanation of that vexed passage 1 Pet. iii. 21: "which (baptism) now saves us [you] not because in receiving it we [ye] have put away the filth of the flesh, but because we [ye] have earnestly sought a conscience reconciled to God " ( \(\sigma v \nu \epsilon i \delta \dot{\eta} \sigma \epsilon \omega s\) à \(\gamma \mathrm{a} \theta \hat{\eta} s\) gen. of the obj., as opp. to бapkòs \(\dot{\rho} \dot{u} \pi \sigma o v\) ). émtov́rios, -ov, a word found only in Mt. vi. 11 and Lk. xi.

 \(u s\) [but the Curetonian (earlier) Syriac reads |no continual ; cf. Bp. Lghtft. as below, I. 3 p. 214 sqq.; Taylor, Sayings of the Jewish Fathers, p. 139 sq.]; Itala [Old Lat.] panis quotidianus). Origen testifies [de orat. \(27]\) that the word was not in use in ordinary speech, and accordingly seems to have been coined by the Evangelists themselves. Many commentators, as Beza, Kuinoel, Tholuck, Ewald, Bleek, Keim, Cremer, following Origen, Jerome (who in Mt. only translates by the barbarous phrase panis supersubstantialis), Theophylact, Euthymius Zigabenus, explain the word by bread for sustenance, which serves to sustain life, deriving the word from ov̉ंia, after the analogy of ésoviotos, évov́oıos. But oúaía very rarely, and only in philosophic language, is equiv. to vi \(\pi a \rho \xi\) ss, as in Plato, Theaet. p. 185 c. (opp. to for other exx. see Bonitz's Index to Aristot. p. 544), and generally denotes either essence, real nature, or substance, property, resources. On this account Leo Meyer (in Kuhn, Zeitschr. f. vergleich. Sprachkunde, vii. pp. 401-430), Kamphausen (Gebet des Herrn, pp. 86-102), with whom Keim (ii. 278 sq. [Eng. trans. iii. 340]), Weiss (Mt. l. c.), Delitzsch (Zeitschr. f. d. luth. Theol. 1876 p. 402), agree, prefer to derive the word from èmeival (and below) to be present, and to understand it bread which is ready at hand or suffices, so that Christ is conjectured to have said in Chald. לַחְכָא רְחָקָנָא (cf. my allowance of bread, Prov. xxx. 8) or something of the sort. But this opinion, like the preceding, encounters the great objection (to mention no other) that, although the c in \(\in \pi i\) is retained before a vowel in certain words (as è \(\pi\) toopкos, § 1]), yet in є́meîvaı and words derived from it, émovaia, rectly do Grotius, Scaliger, Wetstein, Fischer (De vitiis lexx. etc. p. 306 sqq.), Valckenaer, Fritzsche (on Mt. p. 267 sqq.), Winer (97 (92)), Bretschneider, Wahl, Meyer, [Bp. Lghtft. (Revision etc., App.)] and others, comparfood for (i. e. necessary or sufflient for) the morrow. Thus ह̇тьov́oov and oípspov admirably answer to each other, and that state of mind is portrayed which, piously contented with food sufficing from one day to the next, in praying to God for sustenance does not go beyond the absolute necessity of the nearest future. This explanation is also recommended by the fact that in the Gospel according to the Hebrews, as Jerome testifies, the word є̇ \(\pi \iota o u ́ \sigma \iota o s ~ w a s ~ r e p r e s e n t e d ~ b y ~ t h e ~ A r a m a i c ~ p r a n, ~ " q u o d ~\) dicitur crastinus"; hence it would seem that Christ himself used the Chaldaic expression הִחָכָא רִי לִמְחַר Nor is the prayer, so understood, at variance with the mind of Christ as expressed in Mt. vi. 34, but on the contrary harmonizes with it finely; for his hearers are bidden to ask of God, in order that they may themselves be relieved of anxiety for the morrow. [See Bp. Lghtft., as above, pp. 195-234; McClellan, The New Test. etc. pp. 632-647; Tholuck, Bergpredigt, Mt. l. c., for earlier reff.]*

 with the N．T．use of these verbs and their compounds it may be interesting to compare the distinctions ordinarily recognized in classic Grk．，where \({ }_{\epsilon}^{\epsilon} \rho \chi \in \sigma \theta a \iota\) denotes motion or progress generally，and of any sort，hence to come and（esp．è \(\begin{gathered}\text { eiv }) ~\end{gathered}\) arrive at，as well as to go（Baiveiv）．Baiveiv primarily signi－ fies to walk，take steps，picturing the mode of motion；to go away．mopev́ectat expresses motion in general，－often con－ fined within certain limits，or giving prominence to the bearing；hence the regular word for the march of an army．\(x^{c o p e i v}\) always emphasizes the idea of separation， change of place，and does not，like e．g．aopeúe \(\sigma \theta a\), ，note the external and perceptible motion，－（a man may be recog－ nized by his zopeía）．Cf．Schmidt ch．xxvii．］

"E$єros, -ov,, \(\boldsymbol{\eta}\), Ephesus, a maritime city of Asia Minor, capital of Ionia and, under the Romans, of proconsular Asia [see 'A \(\sigma\) ia], situated on the Icarian Sea between Smyrna and Miletus. Its chief splendor and renown came from the temple of Artemis, which was reckoned one of the wonders of the world. It was burned down B. c. 356 by Herostratus, rebuilt at the common expense of Greece under the supervision of Deinocrates (Pausan. 7, 2, 6 sq. ; Liv. 1, 45 ; Plin. h. n. 5, 29 (31); 36, 14 ( 21 )), and in the middle of the third century after Christ utterly destroyed by the Goths. At Ephesus the apostle Paul founded a very flourishing church, to which great praise is awarded in Rev. ii. 1 sqq. The name of the city occurs in Acts xviii. 19, 21, 24 ; xix. 1, 17, 26 ; xx. 16 sq.; 1 Co. xv. 32 ; xvi. 8; Eph. i. 1 (where \(\epsilon^{\prime} \nu^{\prime} E \phi^{\prime} ' \sigma \omega\) is omitted by cod. Unters. p. 9 ; WHI. Intr. § 410; Tdf. Proleg. 109; Pape, Eigennamen, s. v.]), Herod, the name of a royal family that flourished among the Jews in the time of Jesus and the apostles. In the N. T. are mentioned, 1. the one who gave the family its name, Herod surnamed the Great, a son of Antipater of Idumæa. Appointed king of Judæa в. с. 40 by the Roman senate at the suggestion of Antony and with the : consent of Octavian, he at length overcame the great opposition which the country made to him and took possession of the kingdom B. c. 37 ; and, after the battle of Actium, he was confirmed in it by Octavian, whose favor he ever after enjoyed. He was brave and skilled in war, learned and sagacious ; but also extremely suspicious and cruel. IIence he destroyed the entire royal family of the Hasmonrans, put to death many of the Jews that opposed his government, and proceeded to kill even his dearly beloved wife Mariamne of the Hasmonæan line and the two sons she had borne him. By these acts of bloodshed, and especially by his love and imitation of Roman customs and institutions and by the burdensome tases imposed upon his subjects, he so alienated the. Tews that he was unable to regain their favor by his splendid restoration of the temple and other acts of munificence. He died in the 70th year of his age, the 37 th of his reign, the 4 th before the Dionysian era. Cf. Joseph. antt. 14, 14, 4; 15, 6, 7; 7, 4; 8, 1; 16, 5, 4 ; 11, 6 , etc. In his closing years John the Baptist and Christ were born, Mt.. ii. 1; L.k. i. 5; Matthew narrates in ch. ii. (cf. Macrob. sat. 2, 4) that he commanded the male children in Bethlehem from two years old and under to be slain. Cf. especially \(K e i m\) in Schenkel iii. 27 sqq.; Schürer, Neutest. Zeitgesch. § 15, and the books there mentioned. 2. Herod surnamed Antipas, son of Herod the Great and Malthace, a Samaritan woman. After the death of his father he was appointed by the Komans tetrach of Galilee and Peræa. His first wife was a daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia; but he subsequently repudiated her and took to himself Herodias, the wife of his brother Herod (see \(\Phi i \lambda \iota \pi \pi o s, 1\) ) ; and in consequence Aretas, his father-in-law, made war against him and conquered him. He cast John the Baptist into prison because John had rebuked him for this unlawful connection; and afterwards, at the instigation of Herodias, he ordered him to be behrasled. Induced by her, too, he went to Rome to obtain from the emperor the title of king. But in consequence of accusations brought against him by Herod Agrippa I., Caligula banished him (A.D. 39) to Lugdunum in Gaul, where he seems to have died. [On the statement of Joseph. (b. j. 2, 9, 6) that he died in Spain see the conjecture in B. D.s. v. Herodias.] He was light-minded, sensual, vicious, (Joseph. antt. 17, 1, 3; 8, 1; 11, 4; 18, 5, 1; 7, \(1 \mathrm{sq} . ;\) b.j. 2, 9,6 ). In the N. T. he is mentioned by the simple name of Herod in Mt. xiv. 1, 3, 6 ; Mk. vi. \(16-18,20-22\); viii. 15 ; Lk. iii. 1,19 ; viii. 3 ; ix. 7,9 ; xiii. 31 ; xxiii. 7 sq. 11 sq. 15 ; Acts iv. 27 ; xiii. 1 ; once, Mk. vi. 14, he is called \(\beta a \sigma c \lambda \epsilon u\) s, either improperly, or in the sense of royal lineage (see Baci入cús). Cf. Keim l. c. p. 42 sqq.; Schürer l. c. p. 232 sqq. 3. Herod Agrippa 1 . (who is called by Luke simply Herod, by Josephus everywhere Agrippa), son of Aristobulus and Berenice, and grandson of Herod the Great. After various changes of fortune, he gained the favor of the emperors Caligula and Claudius to such a degree that he gradually obtained the government of all Palestine, with the title of king. He died at Cæsarea, A.D. 44, at the age of 54 , in the seventh [or 4th, reckoning from the extension of his dominions by Claudius] year of his reign (Joseph. antt. 17, 1, 2; 18, 6; 19, 4,5; 6, 1; 7, \(3 ;\) b. j. \(2,11,6\) ), just after having ordered James the apostle, son of Zebedee, to be slain, and Peter to be cast into prison: Acts xii. 1, 6, 11, 19-21. Cf. Keim l. c. p. 49 sqq.; Schürer l. c. p. 290 sqq.; [Farrar, St. Paul, vol. ii. Excurs. vi.]. 4. (Herod) Agrippa II., son of the preceding. When his father died he was a youth of seventeen. In A.rb. 48 he received from Claudius Cæsar the government if Chalcis, with the right of appointing the Jewish high-priests, together with the care and oversight of the temple at Jerusalem. Four years later Claudius took from him Chalcis and gave him instead a larger dominion, viz. Batanæa, Trachonitis, and Gaulanitis, with the title of king. To these regions Nero, in A.D. 53, added Tiberias and Tarichaeae and the Peræan Julias, with fourteen neighboring villages. Cf. Joseph. antt. \(19,9,1 \mathrm{sq}. ;{ }^{2} 20,1,3 ; 5,2 ; 7,1 ; s, 4 ;\) b. j. 2, 12 , 1 and 8. In the N. T. he is mentioned in Acts xxv. 13, \(2-26\); xxvi. 1 sq. (7), \(19,27 \mathrm{sq} .32\). In the Jewish war, although he strove in vain to restrain the fury of the seditious and bellicose populace, he did not desert the Roman side. After the fall of Jerusalem, he was vested with praetorian rank and kept the kingdom entire until his death, which took place in the third year of the emperor Trajan, [the 73d of his life, and 52 nd of his reign]. He was the last representative of the Herodian dynasty. Cf. Keim l. c. p. 56 sqq.; Schürer l. c. p. 315 sqq . [Less complete accounts of the family may be found in BB.DD.; Sieffert in Herzog ed. 2 s. v.; an extended narrative in Hausrath, Neutest. Zeitgesch. vol. i. Abschn. v. This title is given to John in the inscription of the Apocalypse, acc. to the Rec. text, apparently as the publisher and interpreter of divine oracles, just as Lucian styles the same person \(\theta_{\text {go }}\) óyos in Alex. 19 that he calls \(\pi \rho \rho \phi \eta_{t} \neq s\) in c. 22. The common opinion is that John was called \(\theta\) eodóyos in the same sense in which the term was used of Gregory of Nazianzus, viz. because he taught the \(\theta\) eor \(\lambda\) óros. But then the wonder is, why the copyists did not prefer to apply the epithet to him in the title of the Gospel.*

©єббa入ovkๆ, - \(\eta s, \dot{\eta}\), Thessalonica (now Saloniki), a celebrated and populous city, situated on the Thermaic Gulf, the capital of the second [(there were four ; cf. Liv. xlv. 29)] division of Macedoaia and the residence of a Roman governor and quaestor. It was anciently called Therme, but was rebuilt by Cassander, the son of Antipater, and called by its new name [which first appears in Polyb. 23, 11, 2] in honor of his wife Thessalonica, the sister of Alexander the Great; cf. Strabo 7, 330. Here Paul the apostle founded a Christian church: Acts xvii. 1, 11, 13 ; Phil. iv. 16; 2 Tim. iv. 10. [BB. DD. s. v.; Lewin, St. Paul, i. 225 sqq.]*

Josephus (antt. 20, 5, 1) makes mention of one Theudas, a magician, who came into notice by pretending that he was a prophet and was destroyed when Cuspius Fadus governed Judæa in the time of Claudins. Accordingly many interpreters hold that there were two insurgents by the name of Theudas; while others, with far greater probability, suppose that the mention of Theudas is ascribed to Gamaliel by an anachronism on the part of Luke. On the different opinions of others cf. Meyer on Acts 1.c.; Win. RWB. s. v.; Keim in Schenkel v. 510 sq. ; [esp. Hackett in B. D. s. v.].*

3. According to a very ancient tenet of the grammarians, accepted by Kühner, § 553, 2 Anm. 3; [T. S. Green, N. T. Gram. p. 172 sq.], and not utterly rejected by Alex. Bttm. N. T. Gr. p. 238 sq. But C. F. A. Fritzsche on Mt. p. 836 sqq. and Win. 338 (317) and 457 (426) sqq. have clearly shown, that in all the passages adduced from the N. T. to prove this usage the telic (or final) force prevails: thus in
